Home Coming At Stetson University

A record crowd is expected this week end in DeLand for Homecoming at John B. Stetson University.

A barbeque is being prepared for 5,000. The event will draw many non-Stetson alumni, such as Governor Fuller Warren and Attorney Richard W. Ervin and their wives, who have reservations.

Reservations received early in the week in the alumni office were from a dozen states, including Penn. and New York. The long weekend, with Armistice Day falling on Friday, gives an opportunity for graduates and former students in distant places to attend.

The Homecoming events formally get under way on Friday with registration in charge of Mrs. Phillip Buck and a committee of alumni and students. Personally conducted tours of the campus and an open house at the College of Law will attract guests during Friday afternoon.

Alumni will have a business meeting and dinner Friday night, but are expected to conclude this in time for some "Guest in the House" at the Stover Little Theatre or attend a pep rally and fireworks at the stadium. J. E. Rodgers of Orlando will succeed Ralph Odum, Lakeland, as president, and a new president-elect will be chosen.

Saturday will find graduates of Stetson College of Law attending the annual law breakfast where E. Harris Drew will be toastmaster. No speeches are scheduled although all prominent guests will be introduced. At the same time, every Baptist pastor in Florida who is a graduate of Stetson has been invited to a Ministerial Association breakfast. The Rev. Marshall Mines of Live Oak will speak.

Alumni will have an opportunity to hear the famous Stetson Glee Clubs in an assembly program Saturday morning and then be guests of the University at a barbeque in the Forest of Arden.

The Homecoming parade, led by Stetson's 44-piece marching band, will wind its way through the business district to the football field in time for the kickoff at 2:30 P. M. Stetson will play Presbyterian College of Clinton, S. C.

A round of social events, including a "Starlight Serenade" at 8 P. M. with Dean Hudson and his orchestra providing music, will follow the game.

DeLand churches will observe Homecoming on Sunday with special services.

Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Waldin of Miami visited over the weekend in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Bussard.

• • • •

Mrs. B. F. Martin returned Tuesday from Atlanta, Ga., where she visited with Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Blake for the past two weeks

• • • •

Mrs. Irma Crosby, Mrs. Christine Lowe and Miss Pauline Rovinsky visited with friends in Arcadia on Monday.

• • • •

Mrs. Gladys Smith visited with her parents, in Clewiston, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Hood, over the week end.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Shackleford attended the Wauchula-Ft. Myers football game played at Ft. Myers on Tuesday night.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Bigbie and daughter, Barbara Jean, were week end visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Nolen at Fort Myers.

3,000 Baptists Expected At Daytona For State Convention November 14-17

Host City Expects Largest Convention In Baptist History

Over 3,000 messengers and visitors are expected to fill the spacious Daytona Beach City Auditorium Nov. 14 through 17, when the Florida Baptist Convention convenes there in its eighty-eighth annual session.

Presiding over the sessions of the Convention will be Dr. C. Roy Angell, pastor of the Central Baptist Church of Miami, and President of the Convention, which convenes Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 15th at 1:30 P. M., preceded by Monday night and Tuesday morning sessions of the Baptist Brotherhood of Florida, over which Don Walden of Plant City, State Brotherhood President, will preside. Messengers of Baptist laymen from all over Florida are expected to converge on Daytona Beach Monday afternoon, swelling the attendance by at least 1,000.

Dr. John Maguire of Jacksonville, Executive Secretary of the Florida Baptist Convention, will report the best year's record in the Convention's history, with 668 out of 894 Florida Baptist Churches participating in some phase of mission work.

High School Book Week Program

This week, November 13-19, is BOOK WEEK. As usual, special recognition will be given to books throughout the many school and libraries in our country. This year the theme is "Make Friends with Books."

Among countries planning an observance of one kind or another are Canada, England, South Africa, Turkey, India, Australia, and New Zealand. Others planning future celebrations include Scandinavian countries, France, Switzerland, Syria, Egypt, China, the Philippines, Japan and parts of South America. BOOK WEEK is rapidly taking on an international character.

The public is cordially invited to attend the high school Book Week program which will be given in the auditorium beginning at 10 o'clock, Friday morning, November 18. The program consists of the following numbers:

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

How Church Chimes Rang For the Benefit of Brooklyn

by BILLY ROSE

This week I'd like to spin a little story—a very, very little story. It's of no great importance, and I won't get mad if the editor decides to file it in the wastebasket, and in its place print some big story about Marshal Tito or Rita Hayworth's baby.

To begin with, this story concerns itself with a church, and a lot of bright people still tell you a church is no longer of any importance in this up-to-date and human-interest age. To make matters worse, the church is in Brooklyn, and—well, I guess you've heard plenty of jokes about how unimportant Brooklyn is . . .

One day last summer while driving past a church on St. Felix street in Brooklyn, I heard a set of chimes that did nice things to my ears. They were unusually good chimes, and figured to have cost a lot of money. Naturally, I wondered how they happened to be in the belfry of a modest church in a modest neighborhood.

Billy Rose

"What's the church with the chimes?" I asked a newsstand proprietor.

"Ramson Place Central Church," he said. "It's Methodist."

"Were they had those chimes long?"

"No," said the newsie. "I think they put them in about a year ago."

The next day I did some telephoning, and I liked what I found out.

WHEN REV. John Emerson Zeiler, pastor of the church, heard about a new type of electrically controlled chimes called Carillonic bells, he told his congregation about them and said it would be a nice thing for the neighborhood if people got used to hearing them. He said that evening hours at night can't hear those beautiful chimes. He told him that the bells cost a lot of money, and suggested they contribute a cents resulting from time to time. Maybe in a year or so, the church could afford the bells.

Next day a member of his parish phoned. "I've been discussing the bells with my business partner," said the parishioner, "and we'd each like to donate a third of the cost. But there's a hitch."

"What is it?" asked the Reverend.

"Well, my partner is Jewish," said the businessman, "and we were wondering if that would make any difference."

Reverend Zeiler said he didn't think it would make any difference at all.

"We think," continued the businessman, "that it would be a good idea to find a Catholic to put up the other third. After all, people of all faiths are going to enjoy these bells."

THE NEXT DAY a Catholic in the neighborhood offered to put up the remaining third, and the Carillonic bells were ordered. At the dedication ceremony a couple of months later, a plaque was put up on the wall of this Methodist church, and inscribed on it were the names of the Catholic, the Protestant and the Jew. . . .

And that's all there is to this story—this very, very little story. Do I think this one act of electrically-controlled bells is going to eliminate religious bigotry in Brooklyn? Of course not. Do I think the people in Flatbush who hear the chimes are going to be kinder and more tolerant? Again, of course not.

Why, then, am I writing this piece? Well, I guess it's because I'm fool enough to think that even one drop of clean water falling on a dusty street is important. Who knows? It may clean up an inch of ground and give somebody else an idea.

One of these days—and I don't expect to be around to see it—a lot of drops of clean water may fall and a lot of dust may be washed away.

DAWN

QUT of the dark, the light! O Hearts, remember
The eternal truth God gives us as a sign
That after the dark, as glowing as an ember,
Deep ... the core of life, a light will shine:
The light of hope, after the bitter weeping;
The light of peace, after the lengthened pain.
The Christian heart held close within God's keeping
Will find the dark skies brightening again.

The risen Christ is proof of light's returning;
The risen Christ is symbol of the dawn.
O you who have been striving, longing, yearning
To catch the light ahead, move out, move on.
You will find him there among the springtime flowers,
Among the clean winds of a new-born day.
He is the lamp for all our future hours;
He is the light to guide us on our way.

The Fiction Corner ★ FORTUNE SMILES ★

by Richard H. Wilkinson

CALEB WARE was a young man of whom mention will be made. was raised away from his boyhood home. Caleb always said little was in west away of his own accord.

Persons skilled at Caleb. Five years later he found himself prominent in the affairs of the small city in which he had chosen to live. Moreover, he was rich.

3-Minute Fiction

It was then that Caleb decided to go home. As the train began to climb into the fresh, clean air of the mountains of his city, the dried look about his eyes vanished. Color appeared in his cheeks.

It thrilled him now to know that he was in a position to provide his father with all the comforts of old age.

He swung from the train at the city depot. Everything was the same; the cracker-box station, the general store, the postoffice and the few small dwelling houses.

A man with side whiskers and spectacles peered at him from the doorway of the depot.

"Hello, Banty. Where's your rig?"

The man stepped through the door. "Caleb Ware! Know yuh anywhere! How be yuh, Caleb?"

"Fine, Banty. And you?"

"To'able, Caleb. Just to'able. Figure on goin' out to the farm? Drive you out if you say so."

"Figured you would." He climbed into Banty's ancient rig, glad of this opportunity to ride with the station master and learn the news.

"Looks like you done quite well in the city," Banty suggested cautiously.

"Not bad," Caleb agreed. And he knew that feeling of triumph and victory at his success. He thought

"Caleb Ware! Know yuh anywhere! How be yuh, Caleb?"

of his father's surprise and disappointment. It would be a bitter pill for old man Ware to swallow.

"How are things at the farm, Banty? How's dad?"

"Your dad's ailin'," said Banty. "It's ain't been right since you left five years ago."

"He left him? Why he turned me out!"

"Don't make no difference. You shouldn't a done it. He needed you at the farm. The place is plumb run down, and your dad ain't well."

Caleb felt suddenly that Banty was condemning him, that everyone in the village had condemned him.

"Dad isn't really bad, is he, too sick to work?" he asked.

"He is now. A month ago he was took ill. Ain't worked since." Banty spat and glanced at him sideways. "He won't be glad to see you, son, not like that. He's got too much pride."

CALEB UNDERSTOOD. He knew that his father would never take succor from a son who had deserted him, would never admit he needed the help of a traitor. He'd rather die starving than that.

Banty might have said more, but Caleb suddenly leaped from the slow moving buggy.

"You just keep on going, Banty, and forget you ever saw me. Dad need never know but what I come home because I had to."

Caleb plunged into the woods beside the road and discarded his coat and undid his necktie. He walked for some distance through the heavy growth beside the highway. Branches tore at his fine linen and ripped great gashes. Briars clutched at his trousers and tore holes in them.

Then Caleb came home. Sight of the farm gave him a pang. The house and grounds were run down and in need of repair. A cot had been placed on the rear porch and on this cot Caleb saw the thin, gaunt figure of his father. He came and stood over the figure and looked down at it and smiled.

"Hello, Father," he said. "It's Caleb. I've come home to ask your forgiveness and to be taken in." His voice was humble.

Old man Ware opened his eyes and looked up at his son, and there was a quick happiness in his expression. His dimming vision saw the tousled, ragged farm boy who had stalked so proudly away five years before.

"I knew you'd come back, Caleb. I knew you'd come to your old father for help sooner or later. And —and I'm glad."

IT IS QUITE POSSIBLE that "The Heiress" will bring Paramount another Academy Award; if it does, most of the credit should go to William Wyler, who directed and produced it. Olivia de Havilland and Ralph Richardson, seen as an awkward, shy, unattractive daughter and her bully of a father, give superb performance. As a suitor anxious to marry the girl for her money, Montgomery Clift is less satisfactory. Mirim Hopkins is excellent as the girl's aunt; in fact, the entire supporting cast deserves praise. "The Heiress" is even better as a picture than it was as a successful play—and William Wyler is largely responsible.

The Farfa concentration camp sequences of "Stromboli," which Producer-Director Rossellini had been holding personally, have finally been turned over to the Technostampa Laboratory in Rome. This makes the entire footage of the film available to RKO—so it won't be too long now till we see Ingrid Bergman in what she says will be her last picture.

After playing golf left-handed for 10 years and reaching a two handicap, Ken Carson, of the Garry Moore show, has turned right-handed, on the advice of Pro Harry Cooper. Cooper says Ben Hogan did it—why not Carson?

Wearing a black wig, Bette Davis sneers and snarls her way through "Beyond the Forest," the rather tiresome story of a small-town girl who was willing to commit murder to get to Chicago. Miss Davis likes to play wicked women, but she should not have chosen this one. Joseph Cotten and David Brian do what they can to improve matters, but the picture is not good.

Rudd Weatherwax, owner and trainer of Lassie, has had to hire a new secretary just to handle the fan mail sent to the collie by fans of her NBC Saturday radio series. Much of it comes from children, and it comes by the bushel.

Ed "Archie" Gardner is a disappointment to his son, Ed. Jr. The five-year-old, who has the handsomest cowboy outfit in New York's Central Park, wishes his father had become somebody dashing, like the Lone Ranger.

Both Mike Romanoff and his famous Beverly Hills restaurant have been signed for top roles in "A Lovely Place," which Humphrey Bogart will make for Columbia. This is the first time the well known tavern has been shown in a picture in great detail. Since much of the film's action takes place there it was decided to use the restaurant itself rather than build a replica.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

by Jim RHODY

Better 'Duck Trap'

When Joe Newhardt, a Danville, Ill., barber, invented the Duraduck, a rubber duck decoy that you can roll up and put in your pocket, he wasn't thinking about a new toy for children.

The idea of a realistic decoration for garden pools never crossed his mind. Newhardt—who loved duck hunting — was a concerned simply with the fact that his back had gone lame because of a wound he got in France in 1918, and he no longer could carry his load of wooden decoys when he was hunting.

Never a quitter, Joe Newhardt was one of those who believed there was always more than one way to skin a duck. He figured that if he could devise a feather-light, collapsible decoy as durable as wooden ones he'd be able to enjoy many more years of his favorite sport. That's when he dreamed up the Duraduck.

Together with his old friend, C. H. Angell, an engineer, he moulded the first Duraducks out of natural rubber. The decoys were self-inflating—automatically popped into shape after unrolling—and unsinkable, since any shot holes sealed themselves. Newhardt also gave the decoys a concave, instead of a round, bottom which acts as a suction cup and keeps the decoys riding like real ducks instead of bobbling around like balloons.

That's when all the things Newhardt didn't dream of started to happen. His hunting friends saw and wanted some Duraducks, then their friends wanted some, and so on. Finally, Newhardt had to have the decoys manufactured. That was last spring, when a Cambridge, Mass., manufacturer began to turn out mallard, black and pintail Duraducks not only to satisfy the mushrooming demand from hunters, but for children who think Duraducks are fine at the beach or in the tub; and even for naturalists who want to attract real ducks to quiet ponds.

As for Newhardt—who's happily getting ready for his annual trampthrough the frosty, pre-dawn fogs to duck blinds—he's now a firm believer in the new adage that if you build a better mouse-trap— or "duck trap"—you don't know what you'll catch in it.

Weeds Cause Odor

Fish coming from weedy water often smell very "fishy," not due to any fault of their own, for this odor is imparted to them by the vegetation in the water. Water smells "fishy" for the same cause.

This odor will remain in the fish even after they have been cooked, unless care is taken beforehand. It can be removed by scrubbing the fish after scaling with a small brush and plain soap, or by soaking the fish, after they are cut up, in a strong salt solution for a few hours.

All small fish, except the spiny-finned ones such as sunfishes and catfishes, should be cut in halves lengthwise, with the backbones removed and cut crisscross.

A book-agent rang the front door bell, and smiled when the middle-aged lady of the house appeared. "Can I see the lady of the house?"

"Well, yes, you can, unless your eyesight's bad," she snapped belligerently.

"Oh, beg pardon, madam! Are you the lady of the house?"

"Yes, I am. Who did you take me for? Did you think I was the gentleman of the house, or the next door neighbor, or the cat, or the dumb-waiter?"

"I didn't know, madam, but you might be the youngest daughter."

"Oh, did you? Well, that was natural, too," she replied with a smile. "What can I do for you, sir?"

Betty showed up with a new engagement ring. All the girls admired it and three of the girls recognized it.

It's a Tough Life

A girl has gotten divorced so many times she doesn't know where her next beel is coming from.

Business Discussion

"You can't sit on Daddy's knee tonight—he's had a busy day at the office."

Helping Father

"I prevented a serious automobile accident to-day."

"Really?"

"Your chauffeur said that if I didn't kiss him he'd run the car off the road, so I must have saved Father at least a thousand dollars."

Take Your Choice

Patient: "What! Three dollars for pulling a tooth? You certainly earn your money quickly."

Dentist: "Oh, if you prefer, I can do it very slowly."

REMINDER

Robinson: "Who was that man you just raised your hat to?"

Green: "That? Oh, that was my barber. He sold me a bottle of hair-restorer a month ago, and whenever I meet him I let him see what a fraud he is."

NICE TIMING

"I'm through with that girl. I'll never take her out again."

"Why, what's the trouble?"

"She asked me if I could dance."

"And what's wrong with that?"

"We were dancing when she asked."

Mixup

The two doctors found their new patient in a strong perspiration, and both put their hands under the bed covers in order to feel his pulse, but, by accident, got hold of each other's hand.

"Nothing serious," said one doctor.

"He's probably drunk," said the other doctor.

The Joker

They laughed when I sat down to play—the cards were marked

Accidents Among Leading Causes of Death in U. S.

CHICAGO.—Are accidents now the leading cause of death in America?

In a sense—yes. Accidents take a greater toll of productive years than any one natural cause of death, according to a study by the American Medical Association.

More actual deaths still are caused by heart disease, cancer and cerebral hemorrhage. But the report points out that such deaths usually befall older persons after their working lifetimes are ended.

In the usual working age span of 20 to 65, accidents claimed 1.75 million work years; heart disease, 1.5 millions; pneumonia, one million; and cancer, one million, forty thousand.

What to give? What to give? If that question has you running around in circles this Christmas, here's a smart suggestion. Make a list of your friends who enjoy smoking. Then take the list into your neighborhood dealer. He has a well-stocked array of gay gift cartons of Camel cigarettes—yes, mild flavorful Camels that bring pleasure with every puff. And for the pipe smoker or the man who likes to roll his own, your dealer will show you pound tins of Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco—the National Joy Smoke. Both these popular gifts come all dressed up in special, colorful Christmas wrappings. You don't even have to fuss with a personal greeting card—it's built right into the package for your easy-writing convenience. You'll be good to your friends and kind to your budget if you send them Camels and Prince Albert!

MYSTERY MALLOW CAKE
Quick-method recipe

It's amazing! It's unbelievable! Mixing time 3 minutes!

Sift together into a large bowl:

2 cups sifted cake flour | 1 tsp. salt
1½ tsps. soda | 1½ cups sugar

Add:

½ cup Snowdrift (Emulsorized—quick-blending)
¾ cup milk

Mix enough to dampen flour. Beat 1 minute. If by hand, count beating time only. With electric mixer, low speed; scrape bowl often; scrape beaters after 2 minutes.

Add:

½ cup milk | 2 eggs, unseparated
1 tsp. vanilla | (if by hand, beaten and melted)
2 cups

Beat 1 minute for Snowdrift-smooth batter. Turn into 2 greased 9" layer pans, lined with plain paper. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) about 25 minutes. Cool and frost with—
