ation. Do what may, it is not probable that a cut will be made in the standards in Florida, stated Mr. Wolfolk, therefore the only thing possible is to increase the taxes. There are three sources from which an added tax may come. Severance tax, legalized gambling and the third most likely is a sales tax. People of Florida do not realize, stated Walter that in the past ten or fifteen years the state has increased in population more than any other state in the union. This must be met with schools to accommodate the children, facilities for the mentally sick and other things that come with an influx of population. This cost money and must be taken care of by taxation.

Mr. Wolfolk urged every member of the Rotary to go home and think this situation over. Then notify his representative in the coming legislative session their views on this matter. In this way only said Walter will your representative know your feelings and be able to act your wishes.

Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

by Drew Pearson

Benzedrine Banned

THE HALT of America's new dope craze when manufacturers withdrew benzedrine inhalers from the market was the culmination of a long publicity campaign by Drew Pearson.

Working with Congressman George Grant of Montgomery, Ala., Pearson published a series of columns and broadcasts beginning last February, which pointed to the manner in which prison inmates, dope addicts and even high-school children were tearing the benzedrine-treated paper from the inhalers and using it as a cheap dope. Simultaneously, Rep. Grant introduced a bill banning the inhalers.

Final result came when manufacturers stopped the sale of benzedrine inhalers. Instead they will sell benzedrex, a new inhaler containing a non-stimulating compound.

Diplomats Worried

One thing the Senate investigating subcommittee is likely to avoid in its probe of Messrs. Vaughan and Maragon is the part they may have played in influencing the Truman doctrine for Greece.

It seems inconceivable that an ex-Greek federal narcotics agent from Kansas City should have had anything to do with U.S. foreign relations. Yet it happens that members of the Greek embassy in Washington are now as jittery as sunflowers in a Kansas cyclone for fear their relations with John Maragon will be probed by the [illegible].

[illegible] administration has its [illegible], who love to bask in the [illegible] of the White House. But [illegible] since Warren [illegible] day has had the benefit [illegible] a [illegible] and apparently [illegible] character as General [illegible] so-called "Greek ad[illegible] John Maragon."

[illegible] Record

[illegible] Columbia's police rec[illegible] that Maragon once pled [illegible] of transporting liquor [illegible] three times arrested [illegible] but never [illegible] get into a [illegible] barber room of the [illegible] where some [illegible] threatened to [illegible].

[illegible] got into a fist fight [illegible] chief of the state [illegible] transportation section [illegible] convention at [illegible] was fired by the [illegible] and Ohio railroad; got [illegible] with Brig. [illegible] in Rome, Italy; [illegible] to be distributing anti-[illegible] at the Demo[illegible] in Philadelphia [illegible] and was questioned in [illegible] death of police detective Ar[illegible] in 1935, one of Washington's most mysterious homocide [illegible]. Maragon established an [illegible] and later married the girl [illegible] was scheduled to marry one day after his death.

Yet, on top of all this, the amazing Maragon turned up at the White House 30 minutes after President Roosevelt died to console President Truman, accompanied the Roosevelt funeral train to Hyde Park; showed up at the Stalin-Churchill conference in Potsdam, was the proud possessor of a White House pass, flabbergasted the admirals by accompanying Truman on the presidential destroyer during the Navy Day fleet review in New York, sat next to the President's box with General Vaughan during the Army-Navy game, and even had a private compartment on the special train that carried the President to the game.

Maragon's influence with his old friend, Harry Truman, has been on the wane since first exposed in this column two years ago. But his influence with Harry Vaughan appears just as strong as ever. When Maragon wants to see the president's military aide, he goes to the east wing of the White House.

Truman Doctrine

Maragon's influence was near its zenith in the winter of 1947 when the famous Truman doctrine for aid to Greece was formulated.

That the amazing Maragon directly inspired Greek policy is doubtful. That he and Vaughan influenced it indirectly is more than probable.

The Truman doctrine for Greece, it will be recalled, was announced in March, 1947, shortly after Jimmie Byrnes retired as secretary of state. One of the things Gen. Vaughan constantly needled Truman about was that Byrnes was too much his own boss, that people talked on the "Byrnes policy," not the "Truman policy," and that Truman should get more credit for directing foreign affairs.

That doctrine, which has now cost us a billion dollars, was precipitated when the British notified us they were pulling out of Greece.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Deep Freeze Gifts 'Chill' Demos; Senate Kills Welfare Setup Plan; Taft Is Target of AFL Vote Drive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

DEEP FREEZE:

Capitol 'Chilled'

To paraphrase an old tune, it was "January in June" in Washington as the story of the gifts of the home freezer units unfolded and expanded. Finally, the sordid angles of the "5 per centers" operations reached to the White House.

WITNESSES before a group probing the extent and results of "influence" obtainable by the "5 per centers" testified that of several deep freeze units given away by the manufacturers, one went to Mrs. Harry Truman, wife of the President of the United States. Others who apparently received a similar gift were Chief Justice Vinson of the U.S. supreme court, James K. Vardaman, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Mr. Truman's military aide. In fact, General Vaughan got two, so the witness said.

In connection with that development, there was a question which it seemed should have been answered long ago by the man most concerned. The man was President Truman. The question was: Why hasn't the President declared that White House influence and prestige are not for sale, cannot be wheedled by favorite hangers-on, and cannot be swayed by anything except the best interests of the people of the United States?

ANY FAIR-MINDED citizen will concede that there is no reason to think the acceptance of the gifts mentioned involved any law violation. Even though the company which paid the bills for the home freezers is linked with the ubiquitous John Maragon and the inquiry into the activities of "5 per centers" the mere fact of receiving personal gifts does not constitute legal offense.

In any sense of the word, it seems to be an offense against propriety. It is further evidence of a downward trend in political morals, a not too new development in these changing times. On the evidence at hand thus far, the deep freeze affair is not important—it is merely symptomatic.

ELECTIONS:

Taft Is Target

The American Federation of Labor, looking to the 1950 congressional elections, set plans for raising a million dollar war chest with which to knock off candidates obnoxious to the organization.

THE MILLION DOLLAR figure was the "minimum" officials said, with a voluntary contribution of $2 a head to be asked of the federation's members for work in the 1950 campaign.

It was no secret that Ohio's Senator Taft was the main target of AFL efforts, with the second target being Senator Donnell (R., Mo.) who was described by AFL's William Green as "more like Taft than anyone in the senate."

The per capita contribution, double that of the organization for the 1948 elections, will be split evenly with the state federations whose share is to be used in working at the precinct level.

AFL's election activity will have an important bearing on the future of the Republican party in the nation. For instance, if Taft should be knocked off in his race for re-election to the senate, it would mean that Dewey would remain as a top figure in the GOP hierarchy. On the other hand, if Taft should win and Dewey were defeated in a bid for his third term as New York's governor, the party would be all Taft's.

SYRIA:

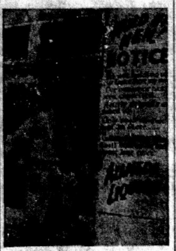
New Cabinet

The fighting, the blood-letting were over. Peace of a sort reigned in Syria after a lightning like army coup that overthrew and executed President Hossni Zayim. The army committee which took things into its own hands was replaced by a new coalition cabinet which was organized by Col. Sami Hennaui who headed the revolution.

IT APPEARED that civilian rule would predominate, inasmuch as the new cabinet was composed mostly of civilians. The new government represented three political parties and various independent groups that opposed both Zayim and the constitutional regime which fell last March.

The premier is Hashim El Atassy, head of the national bloc and a former president of Syria.

Slim Pickings



It will be slim pickings for holdup men who go after Frank B. Tippins' store in Miami. Twice within one month holdup men came and got a total of $813. Smartened up now, Tippins will no longer be a lure for robbers.

WELFARE:

No Cabinet Status

The senate was having none of President Truman's proposal for creation of a federal department of welfare with cabinet status. A coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats dealt the project a pulverizing blow by a vote of 60 to 32.

WITH a constitutional majority in either house able to veto any such plan, the senate action meant complete and final defeat of the plan to transform the federal security agency, which handles the nation's education, health, and social security functions, into a department of welfare.

This proposal stemmed from the recommendations of the Hoover commission which spent two years seeking ways and means to make government more efficient and economical.

OHIO'S Republican Senator Taft, denying the Republicans were repudiating Hoover in opposing a plan they believed ran counter to the Hoover commission recommendations, declared:

"I believe very strongly that Mr. Hoover was misled."

This led Senator Lucas, Illinois, Democratic floor leader, to state that he was both "shocked and surprised that the good Republican from Ohio would deal with Mr. Hoover in this manner."

'THOUGHT' LAW:

Held too Broad

The fallacy of attempting to deal with ideologies through laws has been highlighted by a Maryland circuit judge. The judge, Joseph Sherbow of Baltimore, ruled that the state cannot punish a person for what that person thinks.

The opinion was given in a case involving a state law against people who join or work with subversive organizations. It was the first courts test of the new law that required loyalty oaths by public employees and candidates for office.

"The supreme court," Judge Sherbow said in his opinion, "has made it clear that laws may punish acts and conduct which clearly, seriously and imminently threaten substantive evils.

"They (the laws) may not intrude into the realm of ideas, religious and political beliefs, and opinions. The law deals with overt acts, not thoughts. It may punish for acting, but not for thinking."

The law which Judge Sherbow tossed out did not specifically ban the Communist party. Its preamble said communism is a dangerous, world-wide conspiracy that fits the definition of subversive activity. Anything that aims at the overthrow of this government by force was deemed subversive.

Justice Sherbow said the law was too general. Declaring it violated the first, fifth and 14th amendments to the constitution, and Maryland's declaration of rights, he added:

"As stated by Justice Jackson (in a West Virginia case before the supreme court):

"If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation, it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion or other matters of opinion, or force citizens to confess by word or act their faith therein."

TOO MUCH WHEAT?

Problem of Farm Price Support Mounting

It might be an unpleasant task, but an inescapable one—the demand for wheat was falling off. That was the conclusion of the National Industrial Conference Board.

This organization reported that total domestic consumption for the year beginning July was expected to be lower than at any time since 1941.

At the same time, wheat stocks in all storage positions on April 1 were greater than in any other April with the exception of 1942 and 1943. In addition, the 1948-49 wheat harvest may be the third largest in history. With the U.S. already holding more than a quarter of last year's wheat crop, farm price support was becoming a major national problem.

BARKLEY:

"Much Ado . . ."

Although he had declared it was "much ado about nothing," the nation wasn't dismissing Vice-President Barkley's seeming romance with a pretty 37-year old widow so lightly.

RECEIVING almost as much publicity as the Rita Hayworth—Aly Khan love story, Barkley's attentions to Mrs. Carlton S. Hadley, St. Louis, was second only to the "5 per center" probe as a topic of national speculation.

The "Veep"—as Barkley likes to be called—didn't seem too distressed by all the furore. He was smilingly posing with the widow for pictures; he had taken her to "meet the folks" in his home town of Paducah, Ky., and he had squired her to some baseball games and social affairs.

WOULD HE and the widow get married? Most folks seemed to think so. And, if that were current opinion, it was touched off by the "Veep" himself. Newspaper readers would remember that, crowning a beauty queen at Culpepper, Virginia, Barkley had declared that one day he would crown a "queen" of his own. The fact that later, at Puducah, he referred to his granddaughter as being the "queen" to whom he referred, few people believed him.

MacARTHUR:

Problem for Truman

No matter how the Truman administration plays it, Gen. Douglas MacArthur is a tremendous public relations problem.

THE GENERAL has twice declined the invitation to appear before senate committees, the second refusal being in connection with a bid to come home and tell a probe group what he thinks about the Chinese situation. The general replied that he thought he could do better staying in Japan.

Of course, President Truman could order the general home, but if he did so, and MacArthur accepted the order, both the White House and the state department would be in a constant case of jitters over what the 69-year-old prima donna might say in speeches throughout the country.

If the President chooses not to order the general home, then his critics will have fuel for added clamor that MacArthur is being isolated and persecuted.

APPARENTLY, no one seems to know the procedure in the event MacArthur refused to come home if ordered. There seems to be a prevalent conviction that MacArthur can stay in Japan forever, if he so chooses.

There are those who say for the general to make that decision would be a typical MacArthur gesture and that it would fit in superbly with his fine sense of the dramatic.

STALIN:

Very "Courteous"

The delayed report on how U. S. Ambassador Alan Kirk made out with Russia's Joe Stalin in a talk in Moscow held nothing more important than Kirk's report that the Soviet ruler was very "courteous and pleasant." However, anyone who might have expected anything else was indulging in wishful thinking.

SOME EXCITEMENT was stimulated by Kirk's refusal to comment immediately upon his interview with Stalin. He told reporters following the conference that he'd have something to say later.

The ambassador, a retired admiral and former envoy to Belgium, held the first meeting with Stalin that any American official has had in nearly a year. He described his visit to Stalin as a "courtesy call."

Seeking to win a bet of $1,000 against $25,000, Don Haynes, Ashland, Ore., is to spend a year in this deluxe car. He made the bet with rancher D. M. Mauldin, a neighbor. The year will be up next February. Haynes holds a girl's picture he found in the road and she was to be given a new car if she identifies herself.

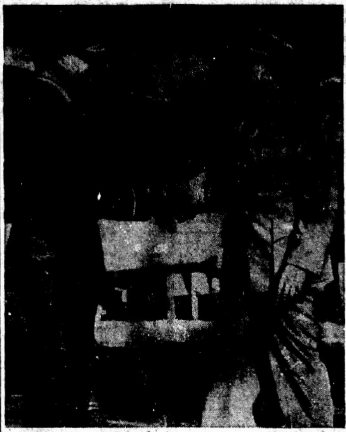
SAILORS:

Pockets, Mac!

The navy has relented at last. Harkening to a complaint stemming from 1797, the seagoing branch of Uncle Sam's forces has promised sailors they'll have pockets in their pants—but not until June, 1952. But, having waited this long, sailors could wait two more years. And that wasn't all. Promised, too, was elimination of the 13-button front on sailors' trousers, to be replaced with a zipper.

ONE THAT GOT A "WEIGH" . . . This blue marlin weighs 370 pounds and is believed to be the largest fish ever landed in Bermuda on rod and reel. It was caught by Durham Stephens (left) of Bermuda who, with his guide, Roy Taylor, displays it. The huge fish measures 11 feet and four inches and was brought to gaff after a fierce two-hour battle. It was caught off St. David's Deep, Bermuda.

DOWNCAST . . . Gun-shy Mickey Cohen, Los Angeles gambler (right), emerges from self exile at his barricaded command post to take stand at the inquest into the "rubout" of "Neddie" Herbert, his chief lieutenant. Cohen was one of the victims of the ambuscade from which Herbert was felled by gunfire, but the gambler's wounds were not serious. With Cohen is his henchman, Johnny Stompanato. Passersby did not recognize Cohen. Several Los Angeles policemen were arrested in connection with the Cohen shooting.



GREETINGS . . . Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of U. S. naval operations and spokesman for three U. S. chiefs of staff who visited Europe to discuss Atlantic pact military organization, is greeted at Northolt airport, England, by RAF Marshal Lord Tedder (left), chief of the air staff after the London conferences. Denfeld told newsmen all that was sought at the conferences was an exchange of views, and he said the talks were highly satisfactory.

LOOKING FOR PASSES . . . Many girls are indignant at "passes" from soldiers, but these two girls ask most every GI they meet for his pass, or permission to be away from post. Happily wearing their M. P. brassards, Sgt. Beulah Jackie Coates (left) and Pvt. Marjorie Shepherd are among the first seven members of the WAC to become military police. Pvt. Shepherd of Seattle is stationed in New York with Sgt. Coates of New York.

AT HOME ABROAD . . . Contented and secure are these two stubbed-tail monkeys and a black gibbon in the jungle of seaman Ietzen Elsinga's hair and beard. They are arriving in New York from Java.

SHE WAS ROBBED . . . The Begum Aga Khan, wife of the Moslem prince, smiles a few days before armed bandits forced the royal couple's car to the roadside near Cannes, France and robbed them of $680,000 in jewels. Police officers suspected American criminals.

ATOMIC COCKTAIL . . . I. S. Randall drinks radioactive mixture at Bronx, N. Y., hospital. He said one cocktail of the radioactive iodine per month changed him from a stretcher case (cancer) to a useful member of society.

GOOD DEBTOR . . . World bank president Eugene R. Black announces at Washington, D. C., press conference that the bank has approved loan to Finland.

CONCEDES REDS' VICTORY . . . U. S. ambassador-at-large Phillip Jessup says "U. S. Relations with China," state department white paper, concedes that China is lost to the Communists. Chinese nationalist officials denied this.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: Our housekeeping rooms are sandwiched between an unheated, uninsulated attic and an unheated, poorly ventilated, very damp basement. Consequently my rooms are damp and wallpaper won't adhere to the plaster walls. Painting them poses this problem: After the warm, dry summer season is over, the painted ceilings and walls flake profusely. Because I must paint every year, I have gone down the paint scale—from semi-gloss finish to the water types of paint. But I find the expense of doing four rooms exorbitant these past two years. Can you suggest an even cheaper wall covering?

ANSWER: Instead of putting all the money into paint, why not do something to dry up the damp basement and insulate the attic roof? This would cost more money than paint, but it would definitely make a big improvement and you would have healthier living conditions than what you have now in those damp rooms.

WOMAN'S WORLD

Collar Fashions Rule New Fall Clothes

By Ertta Haley

THERE ARE MANY changes but few upsets in the fall and winter fashion picture, advance previews indicate. Your last year's wardrobe will not look outlandish, but you may find yourself wishing for the new basic slimness that new clothes show, as well as some of the new neckline interest.

Skirt lengths, too, are something women always ask about first when talk gets around to new clothes. Hems for fall are going up an inch or two, but it should always be remembered that smart designers and wise women insist that the woman wear the length best suited to each individual. Favored length is fourteen inches from ground.

As you see the new clothes, you'll be impressed with the lack of trimming used on them for the very simple reason that so much interest is centered on fabrics. Decor is provided mostly by buttons or interesting pockets.

Fabric dominates every costume because so many lovely new materials are now available, and so much can be done with each one as well as a combination of two of them.

Youth, Movement Are Reflected in New Silhouette

Slenderness and movement, youth and grace might all be used to describe the currently popular silhouette. This does not mean that only youth has been considered in its planning. Even when the mature woman wears new clothes, grace, youth and a feeling of fluidity can be created.

Choose soft suits . . . .

Even though basic slimness is evident in the designing of most clothing, fullness is used here and there. However, tucking and pleats are cleverly manipulated so that they give the effect of slimness.

Movement is achieved through the use of flying godets, fantail panels or giant, inverted folds. Many suits are belted and have a wind-swept effect because of billowing front or side drapery.

Slimness is more evident in daytime clothes while evening clothes reflect a flower-like type of fullness. The all-American shirtwaist look is being revived.

You'll notice, too, that the new silhouette swings to the side, rather than to front or back as seen in the past year or two. Neck lines pull dresses to one side with a side plunge or sling, while panels, godets, and buttons swing it to the other side and big clouds of drapery heap themselves on one hip. Little period influence is seen in the silhouette but Italian influence is seen in many of the popular colors.

Feminine dresses for fall.

Neck, Shoulder Lines Reveal Changes

Most striking changes noted in the new clothes come in the neck and shoulder lines. You'll be seeing large collars of arresting shapes everywhere on suits, dresses, coats and evening gowns. Forward flying collars and big, pointed cuffs give the clothes the movement for which the silhouette is distinguished.

Normal shoulders are still fashion-wise, but that doesn't mean they look poor or droopy. The secret of the new and exciting line is the "rising" shoulder line, an optical illusion made by flanges and points shooting up from the bodice. Bias-cut shoulder folds and draped halter necklines will be popular.

Other bodice interests include high-laced, out-curving pockets, bows, points and twists of fabric.

Tuxedo treatments are coming to the fore in the new clothes, as well as the shorter length jackets and young-looking, short, boxy coats.

One of the more popular neckline treatments seen thus far is called the two-way closing neckline which may be buttoned high or left unbuttoned to form a collar. This is seen on both coats and dresses.

Design Simplicity

A junior fashion which will be ideal for the girl who goes back to school this fall is this dress designed with classic simplicity. The slanting bodice and skirt buttons on this kelly green New York designed dress are fashion highlights for the season. A high neckline, three-quarter sleeves and slim belt complete the dress.

THE READER'S COURTROOM

Drawback to Idling

By Will Bernard, LL.B.

May You Get into Trouble By Doing Nothing At All?

Two coeds went swimming at a lake resort, but soon lost sight of each other in the water. When one of the girls was unable to locate her companion, she became alarmed and reported her fears to the proprietor of the beach. He replied: "She is probably on the shore — look around for her!" The man made no effort to help find the missing girl. That evening, her body was recovered from the bottom of the lake. The victim's family later filed a damage suit against the proprietor. In his defense, he argued that a person can't be held liable just for "doing nothing at all." However, the court disagreed and made him pay damages to the bereaved family. The judge said there are times when a person has no right to stand by and do nothing — and this was one of those times!

A woman was speeding past an amber signal when a taxi hit the side of her car. Her auto swung out of control and crashed into the porch of a house. Miraculously, no one was hurt — but the owner of the house sued both the woman and the taxi driver for damages. The cabbie admitted his guilt, but the woman plead innocent. However, the court decided she was just as responsible as the cab driver and had to pay part of the cost. If she hadn't been speeding, her car wouldn't have rolled so far.

A woman was driving along a narrow side street when she came to a main thoroughfare. She noticed a car coming, but — since it was still some distance away — she started across. Just then, the oncoming car suddenly speeded up! There was a crash, and the man driving the other car was hurt. Later he sued the woman for damages, insisting that he had the right-of-way. However, the court exonerated the woman from all blame. The judge said the man should have proceeded with caution.

May a Convicted Killer Get a New Trial— On a Mere Technicality?

A young man was arrested on a charge of murdering his sweetheart. The trial lasted for several days, finally drawing to an end late Saturday afternoon. Anxious to wind up the case, the judge immediately began giving his instructions to the jury. He talked, and talked, and talked — until 10 minutes after midnight! Now it so happened that the local law prohibited any court sessions on Sunday. When the jury brought in a "guilty" verdict, the convicted youth filed an appeal on the basis of this 10-minute overlap into Sunday morning. And the court — very reluctantly — granted him a brand new trial. The judge said it was just as wrong to break the rules by 10 minutes as by 10 hours!

Be Smart!

If you're buying a bag now, you'll want to choose one which will serve you in the fall, too. A revival which will serve you just as well now as later is the beaded bag or the metal mesh bag that gives a beaded effect. There's newness in their soft, crushed look that looks equally well with summery print dresses or the semi-dark dresses which you'll be choosing for fall. Another trick which you'll appreciate for two-season use is the black bag which is touched with white in place of all-white bags of the earlier summer.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Leopard Doesn't Change Spots

WHY DO HUSBANDS, so often, after marriage, want to change the women they found so completely perfect in pre-marriage days? And why do so many engaged girls speak with assurance of the alterations they expect to make in their mates, once they are sure of them?

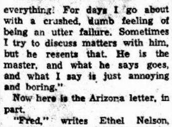
Early married life consists, for such couples, in an unending war between Dick's preconceived ideas of what a wife should be, and Betty-Lou's iron determination that he shall abandon all his old ways, friends, amusements, interests.

Whatever threatens successful marriage is of vital national importance in these domestically-shaken days, and this is one of the most serious threats. It seems to me that any mother or father who wants the future of a daughter or son to be somewhat secure, could do worse than warn that daughter or son of this particular danger.

Here are some quotations from the letters of two June brides of 1947; one written from Montreal, one from Tuscon, Arizona, and both with the same complaint.

Two Letters

"Harry," writes Joan, the Canadian wife, "used to come down to Buffalo on business, and our courtship was there. He liked everything I did then, he likes nothing that I do now. My manner with his friends, my occasional loyal mention of my own country, my resentment of his mother's interference, the words I use, my handwriting, my liking to sing now and then, though my voice isn't anything remarkable, my planning of meals—everything! For days I go about with a crushed, dumb feeling of being an utter failure. Sometimes I try to discuss matters with him, but he resents that. He is the master, and what he says goes, and what I say is just annoying and boring."



". . . crushed, dumb feeling . . ."

Now here is the Arizona letter, in part.

"Fred," writes Ethel Nelson, "knew when I married him that he had faults, serious faults. He promised to amend them. He was, and is, a successful businessman, but without any background. He never finished grammar school, rarely reads a worth-while book, knows nothing of music or art, has abrupt gruff manners at times, pooh-poohs me when I talk of college for the baby, goes with his old crowd of poker-playing noisy associates, and in no way has shown any inclination to improve, or to take my constant suggestions seriously.

"I hate nagging wives," the letter goes on, "and I try not to nag. But I want Fred to be a gentleman. I want to be proud of him, and have him a man who will never shame or embarrass little Peter. But I make no headway and, on the contrary, Fred is getting into a chronic state of ugliness and resentment, slams doors, eats meals in silence, talks or gulps coffee with a mouth full of food, slings his clothes about, and last week made a real scene when I spoke of the baby's daily bath and said, before several of my friends, that he never had seen the necessity for it himself.

Wants Perfect Marriage

"We love each other," Ethel concludes. "If I didn't love him I wouldn't bother with all this. I keep a spotless house and am a good cook; financially we have always been solvent. But I want my marriage to be perfect, and want your advice about mine."

Well, my advice to Ethel and to Canadian Joan is the same. In the early years of married life, it is salutory to remember that you two girls picked these men to be your mates, and the fathers of your children. You picked them as they were, and they chose you the same way.

To all of us character changes are distasteful, to say nothing of their being extremely difficult. The impluse to improve must come from within, never directly from without.

If his wife is gentle, good natured, appreciative and companionable, Fred can be brought to a condition so improved as to astonish even the rather smug and faultless Ethel. She has only to tell him that he was wonderfully nice with her friends tonight, she has only to say that considering what Fred has made of himself without much schooling, it is not surprising he doesn't feel that Peter—aged less than two years at this writing!—may not need college. If Ethel has any sense at all, she will let the far future take care of itself.

As for Joan. Well, she must remember that between the two great English-speaking races there is a jealous cousinship. Harry is anxious to be proud of his American-born wife. Her Americanisms in pronunciation, in customs, her expectation of finding all the freedom in her girlhood in this marriage, cause him constant wincing, constant sensitiveness. If she'll keep that constantly in mind for a year or two, there is nothing in her problem that cannot be solved for the happiness of them both.

Don't Be Sorry For Tall Girls

'Stratoliners' Say They Like Height

NEW YORK—Don't be too sorry for poor Cousin Lucy because she happens to be 6 feet tall. Maybe she likes it that way.

Take 6 foot 2 Catherine Bedell, New York telephone operator and member of the Stratoliner club, who says:

"You're all by yourself up there—and it's nice. When I'm with our crowd I'm really annoyed because I can't see over their heads. A tall girl looks better in her clothes, too—when she can get them. A lot of us make our own."

It isn't any harder for a tall gal to get a job, she asserts, and a lot of medium sized men like to go out with a tall girl.

"How do we like it? Oh, we think it's fine. Still, we do like tall men."

Question 6 foot women and nine out of any 10 probably will tell you they like it that way. And you will note, too, that most of them wear high heels.

And where do you find ten 6 foot women?

There were 200 men and women as tall, or taller, at a convention just held here.

There were delegates from 24 clubs the country over, such as the Kansas City Skyliners, Pittsburgh Star Dusters and a lot of others banded in the American affiliation of tall clubs. Men members must be 6 feet 2; women can get by at 5 feet 10.

All of the elongated fraternity were much concerned with the problems as well as the advantages of their height.

"Being tall is all right, but it has a lot of complications," says Chester Aronson, 6 foot 4 president of the New York Stratoliners and chairman of the convention.

Farm Topics

Health Unaffected By Soil Fertility

Status Of Land Not Disease Cause

Any statement that cancer, arthritis or heart disease are increasing because the foods we eat are raised on mineral-starved land is hokum according to specialists on the subject.

An article in Successful Farming magazine contends there is more oratory than knowledge about the effects of soil fertility on human health. The experts talked to doctors of the soil, doctors of plants, doctors of humans, nutrition experts and evangelists who say we are facing "race suicide."

It was pointed out that heart disease is often linked to diet, but not because food is of poor quality. Rather stoutness and heart disease show a correlation.

As to arthritis and cancer, millions will call you blessed if you can show definitely how to stop them through diet. Meanwhile, it is dishonest to give the false hope that soil treatment can cure these diseases.

Other myths blasted in the article are (1) that the baby won't have good bones if its formula is made of milk from a cow whose feed was deficient in phosphorus and calcium; (2) that the adult won't build muscle and blood from beefsteak devoid of protein-building minerals and iron; (3) that all chemical fertilizers are poison and that compost and earthworms are the only means of soil enrichment we should use, and (4) that we are being starved to death because the grains, fruits and vegetables we eat come from soils which lack needed minerals.

Discussing starvation from a mineral deficiency in foods, it is asked why we have a generation-by-generation increase in the size of the bony structure of our young people if we are mineral-starved.

So far as scientists know, man needs some 12 mineral elements for growth. Ruminant animals need cobalt, to make 13. Plants also need 13 mineral elements, 11 of them the same as needed for man and animals. Except for cobalt and iodine, plants won't grow unless all the man-needed minerals are present, according to the article.

As to statements that some milk is low in phosphorus and calcium, it is said a cow will take calcium from her own bones and put it in her milk if her diet is low in calcium. As that supply runs low, she will give less and less milk. But it will contain honest weight in minerals. When her mineral supply is gone, she quits giving milk and often dies from the effects of robbing her body.

A fertilized farm will produce more milk than one unfertilized — but not better milk. That's because it produces more grass. There is no evidence to prove the grass is any better, blade for blade.

Champ Milker

Evelyn Frazer, 19, of Watertown, N. Y., displays her technique in winning the 1949 grand championship milking title at the dairyland festival by milking 11.8 pounds in two minutes. The contest climaxed a week of parades and pageants at Watertown in the heart of New York's great milkshed.

Contour Crop Plantings Saves Soil, Boosts Yield

Topsoil can be saved and crop yields boosted by planting crops on the contour instead of up and down the slope. Each furrow makes a tiny dam that prevents the swift runoff of water. By holding back the water, these dams allow time for the soil to soak up moisture. When contouring is teamed with cover crops and adequate fertilization, top soil conservation benefits result.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Wishing Won't Make It So

By Lawrence Gould

"Is it morbid to feel you are useless"?

Answer: It is certainly not morbid to wish you could be of more use to your family and to society, provided you don't just "take it out in wishing," for you cannot enjoy normal self-esteem unless you feel that you are of value to somebody besides yourself. But there is a morbid or neurotic sense of uselessness which is mainly an expression of self-pity, since it grows out of a feeling that you've never been appreciated or given a chance to show your real worth. You may also ignore minor ways of being useful because your pride demands big ones.

Can delinquency be foreseen?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Kate Frienlander, British child psychiatrist. Children whose essential attitude is "anti-social" all have one characteristic: inability to wait for gratification of their desires, which in turn springs from the fact that they have never felt sure anyone would love them and take care that their needs were supplied. The life histories of these potential delinquents show that there has generally been some serious disturbance of their home lives during their first five years which prevented normal character development.

Is psychosomatic medicine misunderstood?

Answer: Sometimes rather dangerously. Because disease is an unpleasant fact and most people try to find an excuse for ignoring such facts, the idea that much disease starts in the mind is twisted into the belief that a "psychosomatic illness" is imaginary and can safely be neglected. But as a friend writes: "A person may develop tuberculosis because he is unhappy, but he may also be dead if he does not seek medical treatment for it." Even solving an emotional problem will not always undo the harm it has done. That needs separate treatment.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Teeth May Cause Heart Disease

By Dr. James W. Barton

SOME YEARS AGO an old boyhood friend called me up and asked me if there was anything that could be done for his 12-year-old boy who had heart disease. He told me that his family doctor had called in a heart specialist who said nothing could be done.

However, since I was an old friend he thought I might know of something. I had to admit that in this type of heart disease, inflammation of the lining of the heart, endocarditis, once the inflammation was under way, rest was the only known treatment. The boy died a few days later.

Today physicians are not helpless in the treatment of endocarditis, now that we have penicillin and streptomycin which render these dangerous organisms harmless. These organisms, as do many other dangerous organisms, the streptococci, start in infected teeth and tonsils. Thus, instead of all these cases of endocarditis dying, the majority of them are saved. Unless they allow infected teeth, tonsils or other parts to remain in the body they will live many years.

Because an inflammation in the lining of the heart can do a lot of damage to the valves of the heart in a short time, heart specialists advise proper dosage of penicillin into a vein at once. While streptomycin is also effective, reactions to streptomycin occur in some patients so penicillin is the treatment of choice.

In "Modern Medicine of Canada," Dr. Leo Loewe, assistant professor of clinical medicine, Long Island college of medicine, warns patients and families of the danger of further attacks of endocarditis despite the fact that an eight weeks' course of penicillin cures the great majority of cases. He reports a series of 33 dangerous cases in which 81 per cent were cured by penicillin.

To prevent further attacks Dr. Loewe and his asociates state that they early recognized the danger of infection as a cause of new attacks and following attacks. Dental infections are particularly notorious as planting the seed of infection in the blood stream. It is dangerous to try to continue to keep infected teeth; heart disease and rheumatic fever may result.

New Full Time Representative For Blue Cross

The Florida Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans today announced the appointment of James R. Ogburn, Sarasota, as full time representative serving Sarasota and surrounding area, including the counties of Manatee, Hardee, Highlands, Glades, DeSoto, Sarasota, Charlotte, Lee Hendry and Collier. This section of the State was formerly included in the area served by the Blue Cross-Blue Shield representative in Lakeland. H. A. Schroder, Executive Director of the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans stated that Mr. Ogburn's appointment was brought about by the need for wider Blue Cross-Blue Shield representation in the Southwestern section of the State.

Anyone desiring Blue Cross-Blue Shield information should contact Mr. Ogburn at 146 Fourth Street, Sarasota.

The Florida Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans were organized by the hospitals and doctors of the State of Florida as a means of enabling working people and their families to budget in advance for the cost of hospital and surgical care. There are 99 hospitals and over 1750 doctors in the State participating in these non-profit plans. At the present time in Florida over 200,000 members are protected by the Blue Cross Plan and 123,000 by the Blue Shield Plan. On a national basis over 34 million people are members of Blue Cross and over 12 million are members of Blue Shield.

Report Of Florida Industrial Commission

Industrial fatalities claim the life of one person every 17 hours, according to the latest report from the Florida Industrial Commission. This rate, however, is below that of last year when one person was killed every fifteen hours.

Nine fatalities were reported to the Workmen's Compensation Division of the Commission in July, which was one above the previous month but four less than the same period a year ago.

Construction continues to be Florida's most dangerous industry, responsible for almost half of the July fatalities. Others occurred in wholesale trade, communications, transportation, citrus industry and government.

Falls and motor vehicles were responsible for two each of the fatalities, and electrocution fire, drowning, fire arms and lightning accounted for one each.

Air Force Announces 30 Day Reenlistment Policy

The new regulations require that the reenlistee be processed and administered the Oath of Enlistment prior to the 31st day after date of discharge, according to the announcement. Air Force personnel discharged prior to September will have 90 days to reenlist in grade.

NATIONAL GUARD UNIT NOW IN FULL SWING HERE

Just Lookin' 'Round

By Lee Lloyd

The ladies' of the Junior Woman's Club, or at least we know of 19 who have volunteered their services to work for the Polio Emergency Drive [illegible] ladies' [illegible] agreed to make a house to [illegible] canvass in Avon Park in [illegible] to get funds to suppliment [illegible]ver dwindling monies now [illegible]able. Due to the ever in[illegible] number of Polio cases it [illegible] necessary to swing this emer[illegible] drive so that the chapter [illegible] continue their humanitarian work to those unfortunates who are stricken. Polio as you all know can be cured by early treatment, but this is expensive and the chapter offer their services to all who may need them. People are asked to have their contributions ready and either give it to one of these ladies who call on you, or accept the envelope they will have and mail your contribution yourself at your earliest convenience. Anyone wishing to give their services are asked to contact Mr. Longbottom at the bank, or [illegible] at Stephenson's Funeral Home.

On our way to work each morning we notice a number of children standing on the corner of Lake street and the Mall waiting for a chance to cross this busy street on their way to school. Perhaps it would be a good idea to have one of the School Patrol Boys stationed at this intersection each morning. Some of the children are very small and perhaps going to school for the first time. It is important that they be given [illegible]

"Get in the Guard" is a slogan that you will hear continuously for two months beginning September 19, 1949. On that day, the new National Guard will launch a nation-wide recruiting campaign to enlist 45,000 new men to fill up its ranks. Young men who heed the slogan will associate themselves with a proud heritage—older than the nation itself, yet as modern as jet aircraft the National Guard flies.

Here in Avon Park young men will find the opportunity to get in the Guard in Battery C, 712th AAA Gun Battalion.

The Guard's tradition of service to its country in times of emergency goes back to 1636 in Massachusetts when the Old North Regiment was formed from trained bands already in existence. In Puerto Rico, the present Guard units trace their ancestry back to 1510 when Ponce de Leon commanded a citizen company for the Island's defense.

Five Presidents have been members of the Guard. George Washington was a lieutenant colonel in the Virginia Regiment at the time of Braddock's Defeat. Andrew Jackson led 2,000 militiamen against the British in the War of 1812. Abraham Lincoln commanded a militia company in the Black Hawk War. Chester Arthur was Quartermaster General of the New York Militia in the Civil War. President Truman was a National Guard artillery Captain in France during World War 1.

The history of each of the 48 States is dotted with the names of its men who have served as citizen-soldiers both at home and abroad. [illegible] [illegible] to thousands in time of disaster.

Ultimate strength of the new National Guard is set at 604,000 men in 27 divisions 1,2 air wings, 21 regimental combat teams, and supporting combat troops. They will be an M-Day force, trained and equipped immediate action in any national emergency.

In only three years of reorganization, the National Guard has already grown to a strength of more than 356,000, a strength greater than that which the Guard took into World War II. Objective of the "Get in the Guard" campaign is an additional 45,000, the limit to which it can expand under current appropriations.

The young man who gets in the Guard today will be serving himself as well as his country. He will train with modern Air Force and Army equipment. He can participate in a generous retirement plan. He will augment his civilian income at Regular Army and Air Force rates of pay. There is opportunity for advancement, too, as he increases his skill.

The new National Guard has earned the support of the community and the nation it serves. Moreover, it offers to the individual, advantages he cannot find elsewhere. Without reservation we subscribe wholeheartedly to this recruiting campaign and urge all eligible men to follow the advice of its slogan: GET IN THE GUARD.

New members of the Guard unit in Avon Park are Fred Brown, Joseph Camara, Carl Johnson, Ronnie Langford, Melvin Mann, Collis Ray, and Billy Walker.

J C'S SPONSOR "GET OUT AND VOTE"

The Avon Park Junior Chamber of Commerce are sponsoring a "Get Out And Vote" campaign for the coming election, September 13th. Through the courtesy of the local merchants they have solicited a full page ad for this paper and plan to have signs painted on the sidewalks at all corners urging people to go to the polls and vote.

Plans are being formulated to have a sound truck patrol all of the city streets all day Tuesday, asking people to go vote. The speakers rally that was planned has been cancelled. The Junior Chamber of Commerce signs that you will see painted around will be, "Get out and vote or don't gripe". Although plans for this rally have been stewing for the past two weeks at a special committee meeting on Wednesday the final plans were made.

The Junior Chamber will have a booth set up on the band stand on the Mall and will through a loud speaker announce the election returns as soon as they are tabulated. For the sake of good government and the sake of the persons of your choice the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Avon Park urge every American to exercise your privilege and VOTE.

County Attorney Battle Still Rages

The Highlands County Commission, under a court order, paid off the $2,475 claim of former County Attorney-Prosecutor M. R. McDonald yesterday.

However, payment in no way relieves the county of paying Jamie W. Moore and S. C. Pardee, board-appointed successors to McDonald, if they can, according to an opinion by the new county attorney, Ruth E. Collyer.

Further, Collyer believes, Moore and Pardee have a "strong probability of recovering (pay) [illegible] although they would probably have to go to the courts [illegible] to do so.

[illegible] share with the county [illegible] paid him by the commissioners but McDonald refused to bargain.

Moore and Pardee were appointed by the board [illegible] held that McDonald was serving under invalid laws.

Pardee submitted a bill for about $1000 a few months ago for services as prosecutor. But he hasn't pressed his claim—yet.

Moore has never sought payment for advising the board. When he resigned his permanent appointment as county attorney, as the result of the board's failure to give Pardee the prosecutorship, Moore said he was donating his services to the county.

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis has just announced that it must ask for more money. It wants you to know why. For the second time in two years polio has struck the nation with unusual violence. Last year was the blackest polio year since 1916—and this year the toll will be even greater. At this moment, in hundreds of hard-hit communities from coast to coast, local funds raised in the 1949 March of Dimes are wiped out in caring for stricken children and adults.

The last national figures bring total incidence to date to 17,306, as compared with 9,743 for the same period in 1948, with no evidence as yet in sight that this years' epidemic peak has been reached.

The National Foundation has made cash advances for the week ending August 22, to all Chapters in Florida, $36,875.00. The total advanced to all Chapters in the State of Florida from January 3, 1949, to August 27, 1949, is $114,000. Shah Takes Hint

EDITOR'S NOTE — While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is [illegible].

A HIGH U.S. OFFICIAL just returned from a tour of the Middle East reports [illegible].

It is this:

That, amid the welter of assassination, intrigue and autocratic rule in this ancient cockpit, the prestige and power of the United States stands out like a gleaming beacon.

The official related this episode to prove his point:

Following the attempted slaying some months ago of the Shah of Iran, he imposed iron-handed martial rule. The Iranian press particularly felt the weight of the Shah's fury. Seventeen liberal, non-Communist newspapers were suppressed and their editors thrown into jail. He also ordered them tried on charges of subversive activities.

To support these charges, articles dating back as far as 20 years were brought into court against the editors.

Despite these extreme measures, only six were convicted.

U.S. ambassador in Iran is John Wiley. An able, tough-minded career man, he has been an outstanding success in his delicate and difficult post. A firm believer in democracy and freedom of the press, Wiley, privately, was [illegible] by the autocratic persecution [illegible], but because [illegible]

No Loan

A British correspondent telephoned Sen. Kenneth Wherry, Nebr., Republican floor leader, for an interview on the forthcoming international monetary conference.

"All I can say," remarked Wherry, "is that Sir Stafford Cripps is obviously coming here to promote a new loan. He wouldn't be interrupting his rest cure in Switzerland for any other reason."

The British newsman protested this view.

"Well," observed Wherry, "if he's coming over to lend us some money, I'll be glad to see him."

"Can I quote you on that?"

"Certainly," replied Wherry. Then, turning to a friend, he added, "I was safe in letting him quote me. After all I can't lose any voter in England."

Deadlock

Illustrative of the snafued state of congressional business is an unpublicized but long-standing deadlock between the house and senate over the army civil functions bill.

This stalemate has been going on since June 1, with no sign of a break in sight.

Cause of the deadlock is a 590 million dollar rivers and harbors rider that the senate wrote into the measure. This huge local gravy grab was not included in the President's budget. The fund would be spent by the army engineers, which have one of the most potent undercover lobbies in Washington.

Militant backers of the rider are Sens. John McClelland (D., Ark.), [illegible] McCarran (D., Nev.) and Chan [illegible] (R., S.D.). McClelland is head of the Rivers & Harbors congress, an army engineers lobby, and all three are economical.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Russia Threatens Yugoslav Regime; Truman Takes Arms Row to People; Excise Tax Cut Stymied This Year

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

YUGOSLAVIA:

War Clouds

Was the United States ready to go to war on behalf of Yugoslavia?

That was a paramount question as the hard-boiled struggle between Yugoslavia and Russia reached a [illegible] stage. Diplomats pondered the question: What would the United States do if Stalin sent the Soviet army to overthrow Marshal Tito's regime in Yugoslavia?

BRITISH and American diplomats, however, ruled out the likelihood of a shooting war. They regarded Moscow's threat to "take more effective measures" in Yugoslavia as only a part of the war of nerves. British newspapers took a different view. They regarded the Soviet note as the "worst threat of war since 1939."

No one outside the Kremlin could know for sure what was coming next. But the threat that began 14 months ago to upset Tito when the Cominform read him out of the Communist party developed long ago into frequent shootings along the satellite borders.

Diplomats in Belgrade frankly were worried. As an example of the jittery situation, one embassy thought it had an inside tip on an "invasion" date.

THE QUESTION of American involvement was not quite as academic as it might appear. With the issue squarely joined between Communism and the west, and with the U.S. serving as the arsenal of the west, involvement as a result of any warlike Kremlin move was an ever-present possibility.

EXCISE TAX:

Not This Year

All hope for any reduction this year of federal excise taxes appeared doomed as congress shut the door on the issue. Excise taxes are collected on such items as furs, jewelry, luggage, cosmetics, transportation and telephone bills.

CHAIRMAN DOUGHTON (D., N.C.) of the tax-writing house ways and means committee issued a statement saying that he has no prospect for a reduction in these taxes now. He gave as a reason the federal deficit threat of more than five billion dollars in the current fiscal year.

To clarify the subject for consumers, he added:

"I believe it is important to make this clear so that consumers will not postpone the purchase of goods subject to tax in the hope of an immediate reduction."

BUT HE HELD out hope of tax relief in the future. He said he had requested the congressional staff of tax experts to begin now a study of possible tax revisions and reductions for the consideration of congress next year. There was a hint, however, that if present excises are lowered, some other taxes may be increased—unless federal expenditures are reduced.

There remained a middle course, Doughton went on, which might provide a reasonable reduction in government expenditures, to require some increase in taxes where the increase can be borne without disturbing the economy, and to provide for a reduction in those taxes which are crippling enterprise and interfering with business expansion.

ACID TEST:

Fails For Granny

The gambling grandmother of Gardena, Calif., had a relapse.

MRS. SULA BELL STIMSON, 49, had been stricken with a compelling urge to gamble. She reached the stage where she forged checks with which to obtain funds for poker playing. She just couldn't resist the yen to see what that next card would be.

Last November she was brought into court for her weakness and was placed on probation for three years. Last April she was arrested again and a physician testified she had undergone a personality change from a normal housewife to a person afflicted with a craving for gambling.

HE SAID doses of glutamic acid had been used with some success in similar cases, recommended such treatment for Mrs. Stimson. The court agreed, and she was released to the custody of her family with court orders to continue the treatment.

It didn't work. The gambling grandmother had succumbed again to the fascination of the poker deck.

The acid test had failed.

TRUMAN:

To The People

President Truman submitted his arms-for-Europe proposal to the people through the medium of the golden jubilee convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Miami.

DECLARING the armament proposal was the "price of peace," he termed it this nation's guarantee against war and urged approval.

The President, contending that peace with freedom and justice cannot be "bought cheaply," urged that congress immediately approve the 1.5 billion-dollar arms outlay.

He conceded the cost was "considerable," but added that it "represents an investment in security that will be worth many times its cost."

There were those in congress, however, who were in noticeable disagreement with President Truman. These included several congressmen who have been stalwart supporters of administration policy.

THE DISSENTERS argued that it was "pouring money down a rat-hole" to attempt to prevent war or adequately arm the north Atlantic pact signatories as the Truman proposal planned. Others declared the program was simply "putting small arms in the hands of constabulary of little nations." U. S. military experts agreed that even with the program operative as envisioned by the President, Russia could overrun the continent in 60 days.

Claiming this, they added that since the U.S. would have to pay for World War III anyway if and when it came, the wiser course would be to build up national defense and striking power to the point where no surprise attack on this nation could be successful.

ELECTRONICS:

Machine Has 'Brain'

The parade of "mechanical brain" devices appeared never-ending. The newest group—an automatic computer called Binac—is smaller, cheaper, brighter than the others.

It can calculate 12,000 times faster than a human being and does problems 25 times faster than more complicated machines. The inventors predicted it would usher in another industrial revolution in which machines can take over many jobs now done by man.

BINAC, built to order for Northrop aircraft company, was designed especially for complicated engineering problems such as in designing new military aircraft and guided missiles.

But Binac was not the last word in the field of mechanical "brains." A larger, general-purpose type of "magic brain" called Univac was under construction. Its first customer will be the U.S. census bureau.

UNIVAC, it was said, could even play chess, but only about as good as an average player, not an expert. It is expected that the machine also would be able to write simple melodies and lyrics because musical harmonics follow simple rules.

With Univac, according to reports, the American people will find out a lot of things they didn't know about themselves—that is, statistically speaking.

U.S. AGENCIES

Six Departments Undergo 'Streamlining'

As a result of congressional action several government agencies went under the streamline plan and some mild reshuffling came about. Some 3,300 federal employes were affected as six of President Truman's reorganization plans went into effect under terms of the reorganization act of 1949.

Summing up, here is the gist of what occurred: The U.S. employment service went back into the labor department; the post office department and the maritime and civil service commissions were revamped with greater efficiency as the aim; the bureau of public roads became part of the commerce department; the national security resources board and the national security council became parts of the executive office.

CHINA REDS:

Trading Is Out

It had a familiar ring: "You can't do business with the Chinese Communists." Remember? "You can't do business with Hitler." That certainly was true, and according to officials best informed on the Chinese situation, it was equally true of the Chinese Reds.

SLOWLY BUT SURELY, American businessmen and officials are finding out the truth of the statement. In ever-increasing numbers they are pulling out of the great centers in China. And with them goes inevitably the prospect for any important trade agreements between the United States and Communist China.

Yet there was an annoying paradox in the situation for the Chinese friends of the Kremlin. For the fact was that the Reds would have to turn to the United States if they were to obtain many things they need to fill the gaping holes in China's distraught economy.

THE American state department and other U.S. officials are incensed at the way American officials and private citizens have been treated by the Communists in China. They apparently have come to the conclusion that nothing can be accomplished by maintaining large consulate staffs in cities where the Reds have taken over. Weeks of trying to come to some terms with the Communists show nothing but failure.

To the initiate, this came as a surprise to U.S. policy makers. They had expected that as the Chinese Communists poured into Shanghai and other coastal points they would take a live-and-let-live attitude toward the Americans. They also figured that the Communists would have to do business with the U.S., inasmuch as they would have to look to the West rather than Russia for imports to meet China's economic needs.

But somehow or other it didn't work out that way.

POLIO:

Isolation Cut

Sufficient beds for polio patients in the nation's hospitals—a major problem in fighting the malady—appeared to be in sight as a result of a new approach to treatment and diagnosis in the early stages of the disease.

THIS may be brought about almost overnight and it can be done without adding a single bed in hospitals for acute cases, or training another nurse. Too, it will save millions of dollars in the cost of treatment.

All this is declared possible because of a decision by public health and medical authorities cutting the isolation period for early polio to one week—longer only if the fever lasts longer. Some states have been isolating polio patients for two weeks, some even for three or four, but the average has been two weeks.

The one-week recommendation, made by 20 medical authorities, is part of a new guide for health officers of all the states. The guide is being sent to local health authorities, hospitals and doctors by the various state health officers.

POLIO patients are kept isolated when they are first ill to prevent spread of the disease, but medical studies have concluded that the disease is communicable only during the first three or four days before symptoms appear, and for two or three days afterward.

So for safety, isolation, the experts said, is necessary for only a week, or as long as there is a fever.

The distance to market was 13 miles overland. Joe had a truck but he decided he and the bull would hoof it. "It was kind of cool," he said, "and it seemed like a good idea. Five hours and 15 minutes later, Joe and the bull arrived. The bull lost 190 pounds.

WOMAN'S WORLD

Housewife Needs Workroom of Her Own

By Ertta Haley

THE MEN of the house have their libraries, dens or workshops, the youngsters their playrooms or dens, but what does the lady of the house have? Frequently, nothing!

Homemakers need a room of their own, a sort of private retreat where they can follow their hobbies, home management or entertain a guest or two just as much as anyone else in the family. In many houses this is a very real possibility, too, if space is utilized properly.

So many houses have small rooms which may be used as a spare guest room, or as a sort of a den, or as a catch-all for things that really could go into the attic or basement. Since these rooms are so small, few have thought of putting them into real, busy use.

The room I have in mind can be as small as 8'x8'. When all the space is carefully and fully used, this can be converted into a "room of her own" for the lady of the house who not only so much deserves it but also needs it.

Here she can do her marketing if there's a telephone at hand; here she can catch up on letter-writing; here she'll sew either alone or with her friends; or here she can retreat to listen to her favorite program or read a book while the youngsters entertain their friends in the living room or while Dad has his evening fun fest with the youngsters before they go to bed.

Use small room for sewing . . . .

In reality, the room can be to the homemaker an office such as many have from which they direct their activities.

Select Room With Closet

One feature which the room absolutely needs is a closet, especially if it is to serve a variety of uses. This need not be large, for one which is 21 inches deep will hold all that it needs in the way of sewing aids.

The closet will serve its purpose first of all if it has double mirrors, one mounted on front of the center door and one on the back of the closet door. These will be invaluable in helping you to fit clothing properly when you're sewing.

Also in the closet you'll have space for a dress form which is so helpful in sewing, an ironing board, an iron and cord, a large box for mending, etc.

Another aid which will be extremely helpful is to have six or eight shelves running from top to bottom on one side of the closet. These may be made into drawers, if desired, but at any rate have the sections which can be used for spools of thread, needles and pins, fasteners, trimmings, tape measure, scissors, pinking shears, patterns, sewing books, remnants to use in mending or quilting as well as sewing machine attachments.

If you do not feel that you have room for an ironing board in the closet, perhaps you'll want to place a card-table in the closet. Another possibility is a board that can be used for pressing and cutting. For the latter purpose you should have a board that is at least 27" wide and 60" long.

Now available are card tables which all fold into a small suit-case which would also be handy for the room. This will serve for pressing and sewing, and some cutting operations. It can double as a table for refreshments or bridge when you entertain.

And entertaining guests.

The closet might also be used to store one or two folding chairs that you want handy in case of entertaining.

Use Decorations To Reflect Personality

In a room of her own, each homemaker has a real opportunity to reflect her own personality effectively. The room can be gay, smart, subdued but charming, with bright or brilliant colors.

If the room is small, take it easy on pattern since too much decoration will make it seem too full and crowded looking. With a little more space, you can use some pattern, if this is wisely done.

A picture or two, your favorites, of course, may be used on the walls, but too many of these will only add clutter. Much of what is used depends upon the proportions of the room.

With lots of natural light, you need but few lamps. If the room is on the shady side of the house, and you lack space for lamps, use the pin-up types on the walls as they will be space-savers.

Have at least one comfortable chair in the room, as you will do much of your work in it. Other chairs may be added as space and necessity dictate, but when space is lacking, store folding chairs in the closet.

Table Topic

The beauty of the fragile desert rose, that all too briefly blooms in the Mojave desert, has been captured for permanent enjoyment in all its lovely colors under the durable glaze of this California earthenware. The dinnerware is shown on brown tablecloth with a pink napkin reflecting the pink of the decorative floral design.

Be Smart!

A high fashion theme that will add smartness and versatility to ever so many dresses, come Autumn, is the dress and jacket combination. This may be chosen in sheer wool, jersey, tweeds, checks and plaids with a plain fabric for contrast. There will be bare-top dresses with matching jackets and sleeveless dresses with jackets. The trend is toward hipbone length and simple design. In itself this fashion is a wonderful double-duty idea, giving the same outfit a range from daytime casual to dress-up! Another new jacket idea for evening includes separate jackets of taffeta, often lace-trimmed.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Aid Yourself by Aiding Others

ONE OF THE CRUELEST problems life could bring to any woman came some years ago to Lily Drake. When her husband came home in 1946 Lily had a girl of 3, and a year later a boy was born.

The boy was still an infant when his father was killed in a motor crash. They were driving along quietly enough in a summer dusk, but the man in the convertible behind them wasn't; Ward Drake was crowded against a bank, the car tipped over, little Ned was hurt, and the man of the family killed.

Lily faced it, and was going along well enough when the real trouble developed. Her little son is an imbecile. No one knows whether the jarring crash of the accident brought it on, or whether it was rooted further back. For a little while Lily felt as if she couldn't face this blow. She had an office job at that time, received a pension, and whatever her mother's slender income added, for they all lived together.

She investigated the situation for defective children and found the right place for Ned—but at $300 a month. You, who don't know anything about it, may ask why small babies' care need cost so much. This is very special care. Children of this type never can be left alone. Day and night they must be watched. Almost every child needs a nurse; nurses are well paid. Little beds need daily changing and airing; small garments are replaced as often as four times a day.

As any mother of an imbecile child knows, he cannot be kept at home. Neither child nor mother can stand it. So Lily tried everything, she borrowed money, she tried to find some kind old woman who would take him to the country.

". . . she borrowed money . . ."

Then heart-broken, she put him into a state institution, and rented one of the cottages on the grounds, to be near him. She commuted to the city, 40 miles away. She got up at 5:30, caught a 7:15 bus, then a street car, then office hours and a counter lunch. And then the whole story backward, in burning summer heat and winter blackness. Then she broke down.

Convalescent, deep in debt but undaunted, Lily began to make herself useful in the institution. She had been a war nurse; that training was invaluable.

She studied the children; Ned she could not help, but he loved to be near her in a quiet, wistful little way, and many another child was brought to more normal work and play through Lily's interest. She is now one of the managers, at $400 a month, her cottage rent free, and little Jane, although aware that one of the children in the big tree-shaded hospital is her brother, seems not at all disturbed by the situation.

But best of all, in this most heroic and satisfactory solution, is the fact that Lily has found herself. She loves her work; her fresh striped uniforms, her swarms of small adorers, her serious talks with the mothers and guardians who so much need her advice, and the cheer she brings them. For an attractive woman, obviously loved by her charges, not finding them repulsive or even puzzling, is an immense asset in a place like this.

Many a heartbroken mother goes away comforted, after a sight of the long dining room with its bowls and bibs and highchairs, the big playroom with its rings of fat little cushioned chairs, the lawns and playground. And older children, the six and eight and 10 group, have been known in countless cases to cry to come back, after a very brief contact with the big world outside.

"Mrs. Drake has introduced changes here that have been copied all over the union," said the old head doctor to me. "Just simple things, but things that never were done before. We first noticed the change in the noises they made when they were all together. Now that is over."

"The old rule," he said, "was that they marched two and two for 20 minutes after breakfast, then climbed into the circle of chairs and stayed there. Any foot that came down was rapped. That was necessary, for they would have torn each other's eyes out, then. Now little sets come down in turn, and her nurses watch and grade them. These are little changes, but any change is sensational here."

"She solved her problem," I said, in deep admiration.

"Yes, and no one can do that and not solve a lot of others."

'Hearing Ear' Dog Helps Mistress 'Hear' Phone

NEVADA, MO.—A "hearing ear" dog is "Ted," a terrier owned by Mrs. C. S. Townsend.

Mrs. Townsend's hearing is impaired. She cannot tell when the telephone rings without using a hearing aid, and the device bothers her.

But "Ted" hears the teyephone, finds Mrs. Townsend, and nudges her toward the instrument. Then she puts on the hearing aid.

Britons Told To Economize

Industrial Group Urges Lower Taxes

LONDON. — The federation of British industries asserted the only way for Britain to pull out of its economic nosedive is to lower its standard of living.

The federation said the Labor government's spending on social welfare schemes must be curtailed. One of these schemes is the costly national health service.

In a statement the federation also called for lower taxes, fewer government controls, and harder work to produce more without rising prices.

It added that Labor party plans for nationalizing more basic industries, such as iron and steel, are "distracting" the nation's producers at a time when business problems demand their closest attention.

The federation represents 6,000 owners of British industries. It corresponds roughly to America's National Association of Manufacturers.

Its statement said: "There can be no escape from the hard logic that our standards of living, including social services, must be cut according to the cloth we can from now on make.

"The vast and menacing increase in state expenditure constitutes the basic inflationary influence in our whole economy.

"It is this which bears most heavily upon production costs and is one of the most serious handicaps to the future of British trade and to the living standards of our people."

Shooting Blanks No Defense

By Will Bernard, LL.B.

Is it a Crime to Shoot Blank Cartridges at Somebody?

A playful youth got very drunk one Christmas Eve, and decided to "have a little fun." Taking an old-fashioned shotgun from the attic, he loaded it with powder and went down to the railroad station. As the next train rolled into the depot, the youth gleefully fired away at the engineer! Arrested for assault, he protested that he wasn't guilty — since there weren't any bullets in the gun. However, the court found him guilty anyhow, pointing out that the frightened engineer couldn't tell the gun wasn't loaded! The judge commented: "Fun is too energetic, even for Christmas Eve, when it looks like a little free-and-easy homicide! Shooting blank cartridges at a man is among the outdoor sports that are forbidden!"

A woman adopted a little boy, but soon decided that she didn't like the youngster after all. Late one night she deposited him on somebody's doorstep, rang the bell, and fled. However, the woman was soon picked up by police and charged with violating the state's child-abandonment law. At the trial, she insisted that the law applied only to natural children, not to adopted ones. But the court found her guilty anyhow. The judge said that, when a person adopts a child, she is responsible for him.

It was a title bout, and the champion was taking a terrible beating. Sensing a knockout, the excited crowd stood up on the benches — shouting and screaming. Suddenly one of the ringside benches caved in. One fan was seriously injured, and later sued the promoter for not providing sturdier seats. The promoter argued that the spectators should not have stood up, but the court disagreed and held him liable. The judge said it was only natural for boxing fans to jump up onto the benches.

Is an Engaged Man Presumed To Know His Own Mind?

A young man and his fiancee each owned a vacant lot. However, his property was worth seven times as much as hers. One day, the girl coyly suggested that they trade lots with each other — "even Stephen." When the youth hesitated, she threatened to break the engagement at once. In a panic, he agreed to the deal — and the exchange was carried out. But soon afterward, the girl broke the engagement anyhow. Disillusioned at last, the young man went to court to get his property back. And the court cancelled the whole deal on grounds of "undue influence."

Said His Honor: "This young man was not well matched against this accomplished woman. She requests, he demurs, she urges, he yields. The contest was unequal. A woman can always exercise an undue influence over the man she professes to love!"

Jesus and the Psalms

Lesson for September 11, 1949

SOME parts of the Old Testament Jesus never once mentioned. Others he quoted again and again. Could this be because some parts were more helpful to him than others? At any rate, the Psalms were one section of his Bible which he often quoted.

Worship

ONE USE Jesus made of the Psalms was in public worship. Whenever he went up to the Temple he would join in singing or in listening to the great choirs singing these ancient hymns. Many of our own best-loved hymns, while not direct translations, are based on Psalms. For example, "Still, Still With Thee" is from Psalm 16; "God Is My Strong Salvation" from Psalm 27; "The King of Love" from Psalm 23; "O Worship the King" from Psalm 104.

Dr. Foreman

In private worship also we know Jesus used the Psalms. One of the Hebrew names for them was "The Book of Prayers," and Jesus, like many another who has loved these Psalms, found in them the natural expression of what was deepest in his heart when he turned toward his Father in heaven.

A striking proof of this comes from the story of Calvary. The cry, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me?" is a quotation from Psalm 22:1, and "Into thy hands I commend my spirit" is from Psalm 31:5.

Thus, two out of three prayers he uttered in his last moments were from the Psalms. So the reader today, pondering in a quiet moment these immortal poems, either from the printed book or better yet, as Jesus did, from the treasures of memory, may often find in them prayers which seem breathed from his own mind and to which he need only say, Amen.

Truth about God

JESUS also found in the Psalms a revelation of truth. It would be too much to say that Jesus derived his ideas of God from the Psalms. But certainly some of the great teachings about God which we hear from Jesus we can read already in the Psalms.

Jesus did not use the Psalms stupidly, of course. He would never have supposed that you could take just any sentence about God out of some Psalm or other, and quote it as the last word about God.

For instance, during his temptations the thought was suggested to him that he could jump off a high building and not be hurt; had not God promised just that in a Psalm? Now it is true that Psalm 91:9-12 does say that God will keep you from "dashing your foot against a stone" but Jesus knew that does not mean that God will guarantee to keep you out of trouble or harm no matter how foolish you are!

Christ in the Psalms

JESUS found in the Psalms also prophecies. There is a rather thin line between illustration and prophecy.

For instance, when the Jerusalem boys and girls were making such a noisy welcome for him, and the dignified priests were protesting, Jesus quoted Psalm 8:2 in defense of the children: "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise."

Did he mean that the Psalmist had predicted that very occasion, or did he mean that the Psalm expressed a truth always good.

At all events, we do know that Jesus often took a Psalm, or a part of one, as a prophetic picture of himself. He knew himself to be the true King of Mankind; "the Lord's Anointed," as his use of Psalm 110:1 plainly shows.

Yet he also knew that he must pass through suffering to his throne (Luke 24:26). When the leaders of his people rejected him he was not surprised, for he thought at once of Psalm 118:22-23. When he hung on the cross, and saw the soldiers gambling for his clothes, Psalm 22:16-18 would surely come into his mind.

And can we doubt that in his last agonies, one who knew the Psalms so well would not have remembered also the later lines from the same prophetic Psalm? It begins with the tragic question—Why? But it rises to a song of triumph—"When he cried unto him, he heard!"

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Reason Retreats In Face of Love

By Lawrence Gould

Can you keep a girl from "throwing herself away"?

Answer: Rarely. If you give her concrete proof that the man she's in love with is a scoundrel, that may stop her marrying him, though she's more apt to resent it than be grateful for it. But a girl who loves a man you think unworthy of her usually loves him (unconsciously) for the very qualities you disapprove of. He appeals to the repressed side of her nature, whose existence, as a "nice girl," she is unaware of. Marrying him provides an opportunity to gratify this side of herself, and at the same time, repudiate it by trying to "reform" him.

Do aggressive people develop high blood pressure?

Answer: As a rule, no, a committee headed by Dr. Henry A. Schroeder told the Medical Advisory Council of the American Foundation for High Blood Pressure. The two notable characteristics of the "hypertensive personality" are that the person is unable to assert himself and that he tends to follow rigid patterns (like the man who feels he cannot leave the office until he has "cleaned up his desk"). The apparently aggressive people who develop high blood pressure are those who are timid at heart and "put on an act" to hide their panic.

Is there a "routine" in treating mental illness?

Answer: There's no rigid formula, but every successful course of treatment goes through certain stages. According to Dr. Eugene Ziskind of Los Angeles, these are what a layman might call: (1) winning the patient's confidence, (2) encouraging him to get the things he fears or is ashamed of "off his chest"; (3) helping him realize that they are not as terrible as he imagines; (4) giving him a healthier attitude toward life, and (5) getting him back to his family and his job. It sounds simple, but may take much skilled and patient effort.

Blood Pressure and Weight Related

By Dr. James W. Barton

IT IS KNOWN that overweights have a greater tendency to high blood pressure than those of normal or less than normal weight. Many of us have read or heard of the little book "Life Begins at Forty;" others have heard that Osler stated that men past 60 should be chloroformed. Osler did not make the statement because the best mental work of outstanding inventors, musicians, professional men, authors has been done after the age of 60.

Referring to blood pressure and body weight it is interesting to know that the greatest number of heart strokes (coronary thrombosis) occur after 40 years of age and grow fewer after the age of 60.

In a series of cases reported from Finland, the results showed that the average body weight in women increased as the blood pressure rose. Among those with high blood pressure, considerable more overweight was found than among those with normal blood pressure. More cases of high blood pressure were also found in women of excess weight than in those of normal weight.

In men, excess weight up to the age of 40 did not seem to affect the blood pressure. Similarly after the age of 60 excess weight did not seem to affect the blood pressure. However in the 40 to 59 age group, men with high blood pressure showed considerable more excess weight than men with normal blood pressure, and overweight men showed more tendency toward high blood pressure than those of normal weight.

Insurance companies have been pointing out for years that as excess weight accumulates the blood pressure rises and that increased blood pressure occurs more frequently in persons of excess weight than in other persons.

A noted United States physician, Dr. Fishburg, has stated that the presence of overweight and high blood pressure in the same person is often due to hereditary predisposition to these two conditions.

The lesson from the above is that weight begins to increase and also the blood pressure at the age of 40, when "life begins," because more and richer food can be bought and less physical work is done or exercise taken.

Voters of Avon Park

Mayor O. C. Wilkes

Councilman R. Leon Cambell,
Councilman Edwin R. Carter,
Councilman John L. Delegal,
Councilman Robert L. Padgett,
Councilman J. T. Williford,

Announce that they have qualified as candidates for Mayor and Councilmen, respectively, for the term beginning October 1st, 1949, and solicit the support of the voters of the City of Avon Park at the general election to be held September 13th, 1949.

In requesting the support of the voters of our City, we feel it proper to submit to the people a brief statement as to the government of the City during the period we have been permitted to serve Avon Park as its governing body.

The following statement of cost of OPERATING the City and accomplishments are offered [illegible]:

1. Cost of OPERATIONS (not including interest on bonded debt, payment of Court [illegible] or Park Avenue Bonds).

Year Oct. 1, 1945 to Sept. 30, 1946, (Prior administration)	$ 87,132.51
Year Oct. 1, 1946 to Sept. 30, 1947, (Prior administration)	85,906.08
Total for two years of prior administration	$172,039.69
Year Oct. 1, 1947 to Sept. 30, 1948, (This administration)	80,928.94
Year Oct. 1, 1948 to Sept. 30, 1949 (This administration) (Month of Sept. 1949, closely estimated)	74,221.06
Total for two years of this administration	$155,150.00
[illegible] for two year period of this administration [illegible] with preceding administration	17,889.69

2. Number of permanent City employees, including Water Dept. in September 1947 (previous administration)

Office,	6
Outside Departments,	19
Total,	25

Number of permanent City employees, including Water Dept., in September 1949, (being generally the same during the two years of this administration)

Office,	3
Outside Departments,	16
Total,	19

With an average of six (6) less permanent employees the City has been efficiently operated and at the same time certain definite improvements have been made, including:

a. The employment of a firm of expert appraisers to give the City a complete, scientific, accurate and unbiased appraisal for tax purposes. While the initial cost of this appraisal was high, our contract with the firm for review annually of the tax rolls is so favorable an actual savings of approximately $1,400.00 will be accomplished when such contract has been in effect for two more years. Previously a tax assessor had been employed at a salary of $2,400.00 per year, or for a four year period $9,600.00. Under our contract the four year cost will not exceed $8,200.00. Future savings, after four years from October 1st, 1947, will be approximately $1,700.00 per year.

b. We have purchased and paid for (cash) a new dump truck; a new trash truck; a new police patrol and a new fire truck to replace the wornout, delapidated and uneconomical motor vehicles on hand when this administration came into office.

c. Approximately 8,000 square feet of new sidewalk has been laid by City employees, using salvaged concrete slabs.

d. Approximately 5,000 square feet of unserviceable sidewalks are being now reconstructed.

e. A section of the Mall near the Police Station has been provided with cross walks, planted to grass and the appearance of the Mall generally improved.

f. Bond issue to install night lighting at the Ball Park was sold and installation completed. All costs for night lighting were met from sale of Ball Park Revenue Bonds which bonds are being retired and interest paid from tax placed upon admissions to the Park; there being no cost to the taxpayers of the City for this major improvement.

g. Base Ball Park has been further improved by care of grounds; construction of modern rest rooms and construction of a fence. It is considered that our base ball park is now the equal of or superior to any other in the Ridge Area.

h. The Avon Park Youth Association, most necessary for the recreation of our children, has been established in the Link Trailer Bldg., at the Airport.

i. Unrestricted title to the Link Trailer Bldg., has been acquired at cost of $1600.00. This valuable building, acquired at such small cost, has been reroofed; repainted and screened.

j. Two modern tennis courts, with night lighting, have been constructed at the Airport for the recreation of all.

k. A children's play ground has been constructed and equipped in Donaldson Park. Approximately two-thirds of cost of equipment for this play ground was met from funds donated by various civic organizations. However, this improvement would hardly have been accomplished without the assistance and co-operation of the City Administration.

l. Curbs at street intersections have been marked and considerable progress made toward marking all other street intersections with concrete post [illegible].

m. Approximately one-half mile of new clay [illegible] have been constructed.

n. Cost of operations have been reduced by purchase of power operated lawn mowers and a sickel blade weed and grass mower.

o. One sewer pump completely rebuilt at factory to insure efficient operation of sewerage pumping station.

p. Electrically operated traffic signals have been purchased for installation at dangerous intersections as protection to vehicles and pedestrians.

q. Twelve additional street lights have been installed at points where the greatest need existed.

r. All City employees, other than those in the City Hall, have been granted an increase in pay, averaging a little more than $10.00 per employee per month, to meet high cost of living.

s. Funds are available to pay all current bills of this administration to September 30th. No unpaid accounts will be carried over.

3. OTHER PERTINENT FACTS OF INTEREST TO CITIZENS OF AVON PARK.

a. Interest payment on bonded debt have been met and paid as due and ample funds are now on hand for payment of interest due October 1st., 1949.

b. There will be an unobligated balance of approximately $4000.00 in the Bond Sinking Fund after payment of interest due October 1st, 1949.

c. Bonds to face value of $63,125.00 have been purchased and retired.

d. A special effort has been made to enforce collection of delinquent taxes due the City, without exception as to any particular person. The success of our efforts is evidenced by the fact that the sum of current and delinquent taxes collected in the year ending September 30th, 1948 was equal to 99.69 percent of the tax levy for that year. During the current fiscal year, to end September 30th, 1949, the sum of current and delinquent taxes collected is equal to 104 percent of the tax levy for the year.

e. The Water Department has been efficiently operated and following improvements made:

1700 feet of six inch water main laid along Highway No. 17 at cost of $3500.00, this installation includes two fire hydrants.

Three other additional fire hydrants installed.

Approximately 1600 feet of 2 inch, 1½ inch and 1 inch water lines installed on south side Lake Tulane to provide water for more than 50 families who previously were unable to have City water.

Several thousand feet of 1 inch and ¾ inch water lines installed to provide water service to others not previously supplied with City water.

Approximately 200 new water meters installed in past two years.

Water tank completely reconditioned.

Equipment ordered to provide for cut-in of well and pump at the Power Plant to promptly augment the water supply when needed.

f. By close co-operation with Mr. Carl Floyd, a new theatre will be constructed in the very near future at approximate cost of $100,000.00.

The candidates listed above during the past two years, have given the City an efficient, honest, business-like and unbiased administration, at less cost; with fewer employees and have effected certain improvements.

If re-elected to office the City will benefit from our experience and be assured of a continuation of a business-like administration, with honesty and fairness to all.

We earnestly solicit your vote and support at the coming election.

This little Miss is quite proud of her new attire which has been transformed from a simple, inexpensive garment to an attractive dress by the application of the new Wright's smocking trim, now being introduced to the millions of home sewing folks.

Smocking formerly meant tedious hours for the home sewer but her time is now diminished to a few minutes of sewing.

The new smocking trims are available for top application; as an insertion; and as edging. The delightful designs are executed on fine fabric which is readily adaptable to many types of material. The trims can be used on any pattern calling for smocking.

CISTERNS OR LIVING FOUNTAINS

Jeremiah 2:11-13

"Hath a nation changed their Gods, which are yet no gods? but my people hath changed their glory for that which doth not profit. Be astonished, O ye heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid, be ye very desolate, saith the Lord, For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water."

Jewish society was fast disintegrating. Her faith in God was being supplanted by a faith in political expendiency until the very foundations of the nation were shaking and ruin appeared inevitable. One large figure searched the heavens for the message that he knew must come to Israel. He seized a symbol so universal in its use and so simple in its meaning as to be understood by a child. Water, he thought, adequately describes the message that God has for his age. As water is indicative of man's most common physical need, so it represents man's most important spiritual need—God. God is described as the Fountain of Living Waters, while the false, and the imaginary are designated by the figure of a cistern. The cistern was of human construction, limited in its capacity, and subject to the whims of Nature, which often allowed the water to escape without warning. For its supply, it must depend on the rainfall in the land which was noted for drouth, the uncertainties connected with such a water supply was perplexing and discouraging. On the other hand, the wells, or fountains of living waters, were desirable sources of water because of their permanence and refreshing qualities. Regardless of eternal conditions, the wells could be counted upon to supply a never-failing abundance of water because they found their source deep in the subterranean caverns of the earth.

The cistern is descriptive of imaginary spiritual resources. It is the glaring failure of man, that in his thinking he never gets beyond the temperal and that which is seen. He builds his life on a wrong conception of reality. When man, whose spirit is immortal, seeks to satisfy it on material delusion, he "doth err exceedingly." As long as the water was in the cistern, there was no need for concern—water is water — but there was danger that it might be tepid and in danger of stagnation. In the New Testament, Paul describes the empty religious exercises of shallow religionist as "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." At the cost of tremendous effort, elaborate construction, and inestimable expense, man seeks to erect a religious experience out of social service and universal brotherhood. He fails to see that his outward vestments, so ecclesiastically correct, only hide the emptiness and futility of the inward religious motive and power. The imaginary conception that really [illegible] in [illegible] fails to [illegible] in the hour of test.

The Fountain of Living Waters is descriptive of inexhaustible spiritual resources.

We must look for a permanent and inexhaustible resource to satisfy the thirst for spiritual reality. This resource is God, the Fountain of Living Waters. David expressed his deep desire for a cool, refreshing, thirst-quenching draught from eternal sources in these words, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks; so panteth my soul after thee, O God." As the text indicates, God is not disturbed over the fact the Israel thirsts; rather it is that she tries to slake her thirst on imaginary resources. It is natural that man should thirst for God, and because of man's natural thirsts for spiritual satisfaction, God presents Himself as the fountain of clear, cooling, and invigorating Source of Sustaining Grace, ready to satisfy and restore.

God, the Fountain of Living Waters, meets the need of every man's heart, the forgiveness of sins and the bestowment of new life. Beyond doubt the highest and clearest representation in the New Testament of God as a Life-giving Fountain, sufficient for the forgiveness of man's sins, is found in Jesus Christ. Sin erects the barrier between man and God, but in Jesus Christ it is broken and removed. A thirsting for God, coupled with a humble and contrite heart, will bring soul-healing Water from the Fountain of Living Waters.

[illegible] BUREAUCRATS NOW BEAT PATH . . .
Unhappy Designer May Convert to Rat Traps
. . . TO DOOR OF THIS MOUSETRAP MAKER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

A BETTER MOUSETRAP

"HOW ARE THINGS as of early [illegible] September?" we asked the man who built a better mousetrap, [illegible].

"I can't quite make out," he replied, with a glance at the paths leading to his door. "The paths seem fairly active but the activity would hardly be called path-beating at the moment."

"Would you say there was a slump?"

"I might think so, but Harry Truman says no."

"Does he think much about mousetraps?"

"You know Washington. There are experts in everything available. The President has aides who claim to be specialists in mouse habits and mousetrap trends in our economic system. There is a federal mousetrap commission at work now."

"Has it been here?"

"I think so. There has been a group here which acted like a federal committee. It came up the path backward, asked where it was, and immediately wanted to know where there was a good place to eat."

"What did it do after eating?"

"It showed up every day at 11 and quit at 3, announcing after a week that it had studied my business thoroughly and would have an early report with a complete solution to all problems in the mousetrap field."

"You think it will find that you are prospering and that there is no cause for concern?" we asked.

"I am sure of it," said the man who built a better mousetrap. "The commission left in a very happy mood and announced nothing was worrying me."

"Strictly on your own," we asked, "what is the real situation in the mousetrap industry?"

"I am optomistic. It can't be that the country has caught all the mice. Hence the drop in demand for traps must be due to something else. People may be making old traps last longer. I had a fellow come in with some holes and ask that we build a trap around 'em."

"Are you operating in the red at the moment?"

"Yes, but don't let the President hear it. He would hold I am sabotaging public confidence. He may even say I want depression for my own selfish ends."

"So what?"

"Well I guess I should do some deficit-financing and expand. After all I don't want federal control of mousetraps."

The man who built a better mousetrap paused a moment and reflected.

"I shall have to style my mousetraps," he resumed. "I must bring out smarter models with startling new innovations. Streamlining might help and possibly some mechanical devices that will make it possible to bait a trap by pressing a button. This will cost a lot of money, but I can borrow it or something."

"Have you thought of turning out a trap with fewer holes?" we asked. "Wouldn't half as many holes mean that people with mice would need twice as many traps?"

"Aha!" exclaimed the M.W.B.A.B.M., showing us the door. "I knew it. You are one of those economic experts direct from the capital. Scram!"

We scrammed.

How silver-bright your fire-tried spirit would

He stood above you, watching, waiting there
To shield you from a hurt too great to bear.

You rise

Calm eyes,
To go your tranquil way more beautiful,
More wise,
The glow of your spirit shining through.

The Fiction Corner
A MISUNDERSTANDING

By Richard H. Wilkinson

I'LL NEVER FORGET the spectacle of Joe Abbott and Count Obeid fighting. Thinking of it, I am more apt to shudder than smile. Though it certainly had amusing [illegible] Joe is an American. And he wasn't used to the way they did things in Luandia.

3-Minute Fiction

Anyway, when Joe and I stopped off at Cabindas on our world cruise, we were much pleased with the place.

That night we had dinner at the Plaza and it was there that we first saw Kandace. She was sitting alone in a booth, and when she caught Joe staring at her boldly, she nodded and smiled at him.

Instinctively I knew, when I saw the tall dark man come through the door, that Joe was in for trouble. And I was right. The tall dark man strode toward the booth and there was something about him that caused my blood to creep. I stood up, but was by no means quick enough. The stranger had grasped Joe by the coat front, jerked him to his feet and slapped his face.

After a while a messenger came in and handed me a note. I read it and looked sourly at Joe. "Now you've done it. That was Count Obeid and that was his girl you insulted."

"Insulted?" said Joe.

"And he wants to fight a duel with you. He realizes our boat sails first thing in the morning, so in order to accommodate us he'll await our pleasure at dawn. He will do you the honor of permitting you to choose your own weapons."

Joe shook his head and tried to grasp it. "That punk—the dope who smacked my jaw—wants to fight a duel? You mean like they do in Sabatini's books?" "And I can choose my own weapons," Joe went on. He stood up. "Come on."

I followed him, not quite daring to use force in stopping him again, yet ready for any emergency. We went back to the Plaza. The count and his girl were, of course, gone. Joe made inquiries, wrote down an address and beckoned me to follow. A taxi deposited us before a pretentious looking house of white adobe. A servant admitted us and presently Count Obeid appeared.

"You're giving me the honor of choosing my own weapons," said Joe. "I'll take these," and he knotted up his fists and held them under the count's nose.

"Those!" said the amazed count.

"Yeah," said Joe, "and on your honor as a gentleman you can't refuse. Also, why wait till dawn?"

WHAT followed was pitiful. We [illegible] back [illegible]. Joe and the count took off their coats and squared off. Grinning, Joe stepped in and delivered a quick one-two on the nobleman's chin. Blood appeared on his mouth. He swung wildly. Joe set him back on his heels. The count came in again and Joe knocked him down. He got up and came back for more.

"Listen, old horse," he said, "you're as dumb about the customs back in America as I am about them over here. Only I didn't have the guts to fight you your own way—and you, well, by gosh, there are danged few Americans can take it the way you have. And right here and now I rise to remark you have my apology, and I'll tell that dame so, too, if you'll tell me where she lives."

Well, the count only caught on to about one-third of what Joe meant and grinned and offered his hand.

Ten minutes later the three of us were sitting around a fire in Kandace's living room, laughing and talking and drinking punch and telling each other that it was too bad there wasn't a perfect understanding about customs of different countries, and agreed that if such were the case every one would be happier.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS by Lynn Chambers

Delicious Fruits Still Available for Housewife In Canning, Preserving

IF YOU'VE suddenly decided to embark on canning, there's still time to put up jellies, pickles and jams for your favorite winter meals. Then, too, some of you may still have space on your canning cupboard shelves for some of the late arrivals. Peaches, pears, grapes, plums and apples are now reaching markets to be available for preserving.

All these fruits have a definite canning appeal whether you're past master at the art of preserving or a new bride about to embark on her first jelly-making adventure.

HERE ARE SOME colorful and delicious jam combinations which are guaranteed to please because the flavors of fruits used compliment each other:

Peach-Plum Jam
(Makes 12 6-ounce glasses)
4½ cups prepared fruit
7½ cups sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

Prepare fruit by peeling and pitting 1½ pounds soft ripe peaches; chop or grind fine. Pit but do not peel 1 pound fully ripe plums. Cut in small pieces or chop. Combine fruits and measure 4½ cups into a large saucepan.

Add sugar to fruit and mix well. Using high heat, bring to a full boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add pectin, stirring. Stir and skim by turns for 5 minutes, ladle quickly into glasses and paraffin at once.

Pear-Peach Jam
(Makes 6 6-ounce glasses)
2 cups finely chopped pears
1½ cups finely chopped peaches
1 box powdered fruit pectin
4½ cups sugar

Add powdered fruit pectin and sugar to fruits which have been mixed together. Mix well and heat to the boiling point, stirring constantly. When a full, rolling boil is reached, boil for 1 minute. Remove from heat and skim. Seal in hot sterilized glasses.

Pear-Plum Jam
(Makes 8 6-ounce glasses)
1½ pounds peeled, ripe pears, chopped
1½ pounds ripe plums, chopped
6½ cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

Mix fruits, stir in pectin and sugar and heat to a full rolling boil. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat and skim. Ladle into sterile glasses and seal at once with paraffin.

Crabapple-Grape Jelly
¾ peck crabapples
4 pounds Concord grapes
Water barely to cover
Sugar

Select under-ripe apples and grapes. Wash and pick over. Add just enough water barely to cover the fruit and boil until soft. Mash and pour into a jelly bag to drip. Do not squeeze. Measure juice and let boil for 5 minutes. Add sugar (¾ cup sugar for 1 cup of juice) and cook until a drop jells on a cold plate, or until two drops come off spoon at the same time. Pour into sterile glasses and seal with paraffin at once.

Delicious Cucumber Pickles
6 quarts of cucumber slices
1 quart sliced onions
4 large green peppers, cut fine
6 cups vinegar
6 cups sugar
3 teaspoons turmeric
½ teaspoon white mustard seed
Few whole cloves

Place layers of cucumber slices, onions and green pepper in a crock or large vessel and cover with salt water, made by using ¼ cup salt to 1 quart water. Let stand for 3 hours. Drain. Mix together vinegar, sugar and spices; heat thoroughly but do not boil. Pour over the vegetables and seal in sterile jars.

Raw Tomato Relish
(Makes 6 pints)
1 peck ripe tomatoes
2 cups chopped celery
6 large onions, chopped fine
2 cups sugar
½ cup salt
2 ounces white mustard seed
1 quart vinegar

Peel tomatoes and chop fine. Drain in a bag overnight. Add celery and onions and remaining ingredients to tomatoes. Mix thoroughly and seal in sterile jars. This may be served just as it comes from the jar with sandwiches, or it may be warmed slightly to serve with leftover meats.

Sweet Pear Pickles
1 peck ripe pears
6 large onions
2 red peppers
2 green peppers
1 cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon mustard seed
3 cups vinegar
1 teaspoon salt

Pare and quarter the pears. Slice onions thin and mince the peppers. Combine all ingredients and cook until the pears are tender. Seal in sterilized jars.

Make certain your canning cupboard has shelves well laden with pickles, jams and jellies for good winter eating. There's still time to make the pickles and jellies from late-ripening fruits, berries and vegetables.

Many delicious combinations of jam may be made from two favorite fruits in place of one. A good example of colorful and appetizing jam is the use of peaches and plums, as illustrated here.

LYNN SAYS:
Quickly Prepared Snacks Are Always Popular

Children will cheer when you serve them bananas which have been speared with wooden skewers, then dipped in melted semi-sweet or milk chocolate and placed in the cube compartment of the refrigerator to freeze until chocolate is firm.

Make a man-sized snack by placing corned beef hash slice on a piece of bread and spread with barbecue sauce. Broil until hot.

Hungry men will appreciate a sandwich from the pork roast when it is made by placing slices of the meat on buttered bread, then topped with thin slices of unpeeled, cored apples. Top with a slice of buttered bread and serve with cheese-stuffed celery stalks and potato chips.

Combine canned fruit juices for interesting beverages to serve with sandwiches and cookies. Half and half combination of apricot whole fruit nectar and sweetened grapefruit juice is most refreshing.

Marines, Car Get Lift From Driver of Truck

Cherry Point, N.C. — Three Brooklyn Marine Reservists recently enroute to the Marine Corps air station here, for two weeks of active duty training, saved themselves 150 miles of the long drive when a big-hearted truck driver gave them and their car a lift from Baltimore to Norfolk on his automobile delivery trailer.

The men, all attached to VMF-32 of Floyd Bennett field, Brooklyn, N. Y., met the trailer driver in a diner outside of Baltimore and told him about the trouble they were having with their car, a 1931 sedan and hoping it would hold together for the trip.

The trailer driver suggested they run their car up on a grease rack in a nearby service station and run it on his empty trailer. This was done and the Marines settled down for the long ride. They are now trying to figure out a way of hitching another ride—with the car—when they are ready to return to Brooklyn upon completion of training.

Lot of Bull (Whip)

The legislators of a western state were holding a banquet. A newly elected member, an old cowman who had been persuaded by neighbors to run for office, was ill at ease, and a little irked at the incessant chatter going on around him.

Finally a buxom woman, whose husband was a professional politician, turned to the old cowman.

"You had better vote for my husband's new bill," she warned loudly. "After all, you know he's the party whip."

"I know," said the cowman-senator. "But there's one big trouble with whips. They're often cracked."

New Approach

"Please, lady," said the tramp, "the doctor has given me this bottle of medicine, but I have nothing to take it with."

"Surely," replied the kind old soul, "I'll get you a spoon and a glass of water."

"No, thank you, madam. I guess I can get along without those. But the directions on the bottle say, 'To be taken with meals' Haven't got a meal you can spare, have you?"

Through Channels, Please

A London newspaper says that a recently discharged soldier, who had unpleasant memories of his military experience, took the first opportunity after resuming his civilian clothes to write to his former colonel:

"Sir: After what I have suffered for the last two years, it gives me much pleasure to tell you and the army to go to——" a place where only the wicked are consigned.

In due course he got his reply: "Sir: Any suggestion or inquiries concerning the movement of troops must be entered on army form 2121, a copy of which I enclose."

[illegible]

"But are you certain that Miss [illegible] is not at home?" insisted the caller. The maid gave him an injured look. "Do you doubt her word, sir?" she [illegible].

Full Day's Work

A lady had been looking for her friend for a long time without success. Finally he ran across her unexpectedly.

"Well," she exclaimed breathlessly, "I've been on a perfect wild goose chase all day, but thank goodness, I've found you at last."

Good Reason

When Freddy came home from school he was crying.

"Teacher whipped me because I was the only one who could answer the question she asked the class."

Freddy's mother was both astounded and angry. "I'll see the teacher about this! What was the question she asked you?"

"She wanted to know who put the glue in the ink bottle."

Even So

"There isn't so much difference between a man's wants and a woman's wants," declared Mrs. Smith.

"Oh, yes, there is," insisted Mr. Smith. "A man wants all he can get."

"Yes?" said Mrs. Smith, waiting.

No Flowers

A motorist on a muddy road pulled up alongside a fellow traveler who was digging his car out.

"Stuck in the mud?"

"No, my engine died here and I'm digging a grave to bury it."

Nice

Another nice thing about silence is that it can't be repeated.

How True!

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: Is there anything I could put on my aluminum outdoor clothes line so that black smudges can be kept off the clothes? Even after thorough wiping it is possible to rub "black" off the line.

ANSWER: After thorough cleaning, rinsing and drying, give the line a coat of good spar varnish. To get an even coat, saturate a piece of cheesecloth with the varnish and wipe it on the wire. Since there will be a great deal of friction, the varnish gradually will wear off, and the treatment must be repeated. Instead of all this fussing, why not use a good cord clothesline, to be taken down and put away when not in use?
