UNTIL A SALE IS MADE

An advertisement of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association carries this heading: "Nothing Happens Until A Sale Is Made." The text adds, "But when sales are made, things happen. America lives, breathes, creates. There is accomplishment, pride. There is progress."

"Where are most sales made? In ads, of course. Ads that tell you what you want to know, about what you want to buy. Ads that guide you in fulfilling needs and wants. Ads that stimulate competition, help keep prices down. Ads that keep America rolling ahead."

These statements come close to being truisms. And they underline two facts of importance to everyone. In our kind of economy, advertising is a basic essential. Through their ads producers and sellers of a thousand and one kinds of goods and services compete for public favor—and, if they are to be successful, they must back up their statements by trying to give the best possible quality for the price.

Secondly, the Association's statement points up the role of retailing in this country. All the productive facilities on earth would be useless if there were no comparable mechanism for moving the products into the hands of the people who want and use them. Mass distribution, pioneered long ago by the chains and subsequently adopted by other kinds of retailers, is the full and equal partner of mass production.

Yes—nothing happens until a sale is made.

WORKING FOR THE COMMUNITY

Some extreme public power zealots would have us believe that the heavily-taxed, businesses, managed utility companies are economic ogres, which charge all-the-traffic-will-bear rates, milk their areas dry, and give as little as possible in return.

The truth is that utility company rates are set by public regulatory agencies. They cover the cost of providing the service, plus a modest profit—usually about 6 per cent of the investment—and that's all.

As for their communities and areas, it's a rare utility indeed which isn't interested in building them up, attracting more homeowners and enterprises, and making them better places to live in. A typical example is provided by a company which serves Western Mississippi. It has a full-time area development department which works closely with communities. Last fall it sponsored 11 industrial development clinics, which were attended by more than 750 state and local leaders. Its work, in cooperation with other groups, was instrumental in attracting 62 new and expanded industries providing 5,790 new jobs with a total new payroll of about $17,500,000 during 1960—these being all-time records. It actively pursues other programs of a similarly constructive nature.

Utilities, of course, don't do this just out of the goodness of their hearts. Don't they because their own welfare and growth depends on the community's welfare and growth.

DATELINE TALLAHASSEE

By Senator G. W. (Dick) Williams

This is the final report of the Legislature from Senator Williams.

TALLAHASSEE, June 2.—This will be my final report to you for this session. Therefore, I decided to make it a summary of the legislation which I felt was of primary importance and interest to the people of Highlands county. Although this was not a spectacular session, it was a very worthwhile one. Many past problems such as legislative reapportionment, which will be submitted to the people in November, were settled, and some new ones, such as Congressional redistricting, were solved. A bill strengthening the regulations against obscene literature was passed, as was one providing for the state to receive unclaimed funds in behalf of other institutions to use for universities and junior colleges. Besides some isolated increases in fees, no new taxes were approved this session.

CITRUS—A very good package was passed which should be beneficial to all county growers. Among the most outstanding bills was one increasing the buyers' bond for the protection of the grower and one tightening the law against fruit theft. A bill also passed restoring citrus workers to the list of those eligible for unemployment compensation.

STATE PARK—The appropriation for new facilities at the park in the amount of $55,000 was approved by both houses.

STATE WORKERS—All state employees in the lower salary brackets will receive a five per cent raise.

SCHOOLS—Grades one through twelve were adequately financed. The public schools will receive nearly $65,000,000 more in the next biennium than they did in the past two years. The teachers will get a $200 raise plus an optional $400 merit raise and the career improvement program was made optional.

REDISTRICTING—The Seventh Congressional District was retained in its same form with Charlotte and Okechobee counties added to form the new district.

REAPPORTMENT—The 27th Senatorial District was moved from DeSoto and Hardee and Glades counties with Highlands joining Charlotte to form a new district.

I feel that without new taxes, we did the best possible job. I am sure that the appropriations bill, although it wouldn't give teachers and state workers as much as I would have liked, at least they got some consideration.

The State of Citrus

Florida Citrus Mutual

LAKELAND.—Florida Citrus Mutual is a teenager now, or will be officially and formally so June 20 with the holding of the big cooperative annual membership meeting in Nora Mayo auditorium of the Florida Citrus building in Winter Haven.

Detailed minutes of the meeting are being sent to at least a couple of reasons. First, to let the thousands who are expected to attend know exactly where to go. Second, to let those who don't come know that Central Florida building is a big place. Third, to let those who don't come know that these annual mutual meetings when Mutual grows toward and into adulthood.

Matter of fact, from all indications Nora Mayo auditorium will be bursting at its girders and the same will be true of the annual meeting. Last year, for instance, the big auditorium was so crowded that the Mutualmen and women and their folks when some 3,000 people turned up for the 12th annual meeting. A good 500 or more of these had to stand in the aisles for the proceedings.

"If the area meetings which we have just completed throughout the citrus-producing areas are to be taken as an indication of the number of Mutual folks who'll attend our annual meeting it's quite possible that 5,000 of our growers and their friends will come to the Winter Haven meeting," Bob Rutledge, Mutual's head man, speculates.

The area meetings to which Rutledge refers were held at 14 points in the citrus belt from February to mid-May. At every one of these meetings attendance was about double what it was in the similar series held in 1960. Simple arithmetic: double the number of growers at last year's annual membership meeting and the answer comes up 6,000.

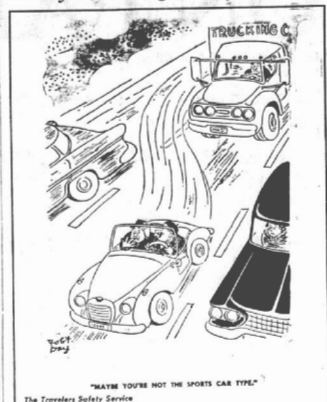

Still another indicator of this year's annual meeting crowd: Mutual now has some 800 more members than were on the rolls for the 12th anniversary get-together.

At the beginning of this year's annual membership campaign, Rutledge set an even 11,000 as the goal for number of Mutual members by annual meeting time. This figure is certain to be surpassed. A couple of weeks ago Rutledge announced Mutual's membership at 10,996.

As Mutual continues to grow—there could be 12,000 members by this time next year—it's beginning to look like we're going to be forced to hold our annual membership meetings in somebody's football stadium," Rutledge said, only half-jokingly.

CRACKER POLITICS

By Allen Morris

TALLAHASSEE.—Senator Scott Kelly wound up the '61 state session in the lower house political assets he had when the regular session began.

The Lakeland lead brought to the session a bag of proposals for reform laws resulting from the Kelly committee's revelations about highway building. And 60 days later, at the session's end, the bag was still full.

If those who killed his reforms thought they were killing the Kelly's enthusiasm for becoming a candidate for Governor in '64, they were badly wrong. He feels the legislative program actually gave him greater stature as a lawmaker.

Really, he thinks, the failure of the program in the Legislature will give him something to talk about, certainly until the lawmakers meet again in regular session in April of 1962, and perhaps right up to the time when Florida voters select their next Governor.

Encouraged by the invitations already in hand, Kelly expects to do much talking during the months ahead. He's also been stimulated by the response of audiences he has been able to address in recent days, after he became apparent that the Kelly program had been committed to the legislative wastebasket.

He was naturally depressed by this treatment, but he realized that he had bills being watered down in the legislative process of compromise, and finally he decided to go ahead and let the public's mind.

To Kelly is certain that the Road Department will continue to make the headlines in the months ahead. If this be so, and his program had been enacted into law, the Senate might have lost some of its present acceptance as an authority on highway matters.

The time lag in this field is so relatively long that the public might not realize that what then was coming to the surface had happened years ago and instead felt the Kelly laws were defective.

An example of that lag could be found in headlines during the last week of the regular session. "Auditor Says Road Department Land-Buying Procedures Unimproved in Five Years." But the auditor's report covered the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1960.

The Collins administration took some corrective steps subsequent to June 30, 1960, and the Bryant administration has had the opportunity to do even more to improve this particular situation. But the casual reader might think the old, perhaps necessary practice of a crash program still prevailed.

While Kelly thinks the places are greater, he agrees there were political nuances to his probe. For one minute, he irritated some road contractors and their allied suppliers. "And," he remarks, "they're the only people a Governor can really help much; the other special interests are concerned mainly with the Legislature."

And he feels sure that he has alienated the professional politicians, not entirely because their pocketbooks might be involved or their friends might be, but simply by reason of the fact that Kelly doesn't like the way they do business.

The early knocking of his highway reforms program left him a general contractor, real estate, insurance free to pay more attention to other legislation. For instance, he says he would have been able to do for adequate school financing.

He also put in a bill to get broader public attention to the political campaign. While the bill didn't get anywhere, Kelly thinks it accomplished some useful purpose by causing comment.

Kelly proposed to the campaign spending to voter registration. A candidate for statewide office could spend $100 for each 1,000 persons registered to vote regardless of party, in the first primary, and $50 for each 1,000 eligible to vote in the second primary.

Using the present registration figure of 2,045,282 by way of illustration, the Kelly formula would allow each candidate for Governor to spend $201,700 in the first primary and $100,850 for the runoff—a total expenditure for a two-candidate race of $302,550.

Kelly said the public records showed that Parris Bryant spent $768,448 winning the Democratic nomination last year while Doyle E. Carlton, Jr., the runner-up, paid out an average of $167,000 in the first primary.

The Polk Senator, viewing the spending situation as a potential candidate, believed it would be wise to allow each gubernatorial aspirant to know in advance how much money he could legally accept. Nearly $1 million, he thinks, starts off with the best of intentions but as the voting day nears gets scared and accepts money from every-which-way.

To those who thought the failure of his highway reforms program would wind up Scott Kelly as a statewide political figure, Kelly suggested they take another look. "I like a fight," he declares.

Haley Reports From Capitol

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It is difficult to see how the Latin American situation can get worse, but I am frankly fearful that it inevitably must unless those who manage our foreign policy recognize that Castro's Cuba is the root of the troubles among our neighbors.

The assassination of the Dominican dictator, Trujillo, and the violence in Venezuela are certainly, to put it mildly, disturbing to our peace of mind. As this is written, no one knows exactly what or who was behind the Trujillo killing. It could be one thing or several things, but I know the whole truth.

Therefore his death, whether perpetrated by communists, by personal enemies, or by a combination of all three, opened the door to communist infiltration of still another Latin American country.

I personally suspect—but do not know—that Trujillo's assassination was the result of the efforts of ambassadors, ministers and other foreign service officers.

Members of the House thus have little influence in the making of foreign policy. He may, of course, introduce a resolution stating the "sense of the House" that the President do this-and-so to meet a problem. But I question that such action, if contrary to carefully worked-out plans of the Administration, would be in the national interest.

Our nation's motto is "In God We Trust." But in these critical times, we must do things that trust the Almighty. We must pray for his help for our leaders, once they have set a firm course of action; but it must be firm and positive action. In that way, and that way only, can we win this struggle.

Week's safety suggestion from FBI: Bossman H. N. Kirkman. The way to get ahead in traffic is to stay far behind the crazy driver.

Magazine Assails Hucksters Who Prey On Unsuspecting Children

The innocence of childhood daily is being tested by exposure to "the roughest huckstering technique developed by the advertising industry," according to Changing Times, the Kiplinger Magazine.

An article in the current issue of the magazine deals with the schemes that have evolved in recent years to get hold of youngsters' nickels, dimes and dollars through ads in their favorite reading material—comic books and teenage magazines.

"Many publishers do keep presentative publications, using themselves and their children as guinea pigs.

"What these efforts un-derstand is a depressing collection," the editors report. They found "services that prey on youngsters' ambition to make something of themselves; will-of-the-wisp 'free' products; sly devices to push children into buying something they may not want; claims involved with it not beyond the limit of exaggeration associated with hard-sell advertising for adults."

Among items ordered by the magazine staff members was a "real mobile tank" for "only $4.95" which turned out to be cardboard sections, which had to be assembled by inserting cardboard tabs on each part into slots cut in the others.

Other ads followed up by the magazine were for contests that are not contests but sales gimmicks, stamps that are not stamps, poems to be set to music, and private training schools for airlines jobs.

"Although the teen-ager may be nicked for many more dollars than his younger brother, every child duped by a slick advertisement stands to lose something in terms of his attitude toward life," the article concludes.

"Childhood is a time of training for adult life, and children, obviously, should not be sheltered in total ignorance of the fact that there are advertising gimmicks and that there are people who will mislead them for the sake of a buck.

"The problem is to teach them this without making them learn the hard way by becoming involved in some frustrating sales scheme or letting them get the notion that such operations are the accepted norm of American business and advertising ethics."

Memories of 1913 School Closing

The following poem, written by George M. Kelley in 1913, teacher of District School No. 86, Jefferson County, Ill., has been preserved by one of his third grade pupils, Mrs. Ben Flutey, the former Cecilia Watson, in a little booklet containing other gems of admonition and inspiration, which he presented his pupils from the first through the seventh grades at the closing of his school. A striking contrast to the closing of our schools today.

CLOSE OF SCHOOL

Our term now ends,
and forth we go,
To spend vacation days,
And give our spirits
each the glow
Of health and pleasant ways.

And so you'll lay aside
your books,
And wander here and there,
To see just how the big world looks
And banish every care.

My dearest thanks,
my warmest love
To all my girls and boys;
I fondly wish where'er
you rove
No harm will mar your joy.

Rev. John F. Mangrum Named Rector Of Local Church

Rev. John F. Mangrum this week became rector of Church of the Redeemer, Avon Park. He and Mrs. Mangrum came here from Mount Dora, where he was vicar of St. Edward's Episcopal Church.

Father Mangrum is a graduate of Western Michigan University and the Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn. In World War II he served in the Pacific area. In addition, he has done graduate work at Albion College and Wayne State University School of Social Work.

From 1949 to 1951, he was rector of St. James Episcopal Church, Albion, Michigan, and chaplain to Episcopal Students in Albion College.

From 1951 to 1956, he was rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Detroit, a famous parish located on the edge of Detroit's "Skid Row." While there he also served as superintendent of St. Peter's Home for Boys, a residential treatment center for exceptional teenage children.

In 1956 he moved to Mount Dora to become the first resident vicar of the Episcopal Church there. In 1959, what parish built a new church which became a center of interest for architects and Florida visitors due to its unusual contemporary structure of native Florida fieldstone and natural wood beams.

Father Mangrum's hobbies are baseball and music. In Detroit, his parish was located right across the street from Tiger Stadium. A violinist, Father Mangrum has been a member of the Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, and Honolulu Symphony Orchestras. In Mount Dora, he was founder and first president of the Golden Triangle Mutual Concert Association.

In addition to these interests, he has been a member of the Elks, Detroit Episk, Guild, Farmers Grange, Kiwanis Club, American Legion, V.F.W., and the Board of Trustees of Waterman Memorial Hospital, Easton, Florida. In 1960, Rev. Henry I. Louttit, Bishop of South Florida, appointed him to the Evangelical Commission of the Florida Council of Churches. He is secretary of the Christian Healing Commission of the Diocese of South Florida.

Father and Mrs. Mangrum are living at the guest home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Touchton while Church of the Redeemer is building a new rectory for them. On Sunday night they were guests of honor at a parish dinner in Redeemer Parish House.

The Rev. Mr. John F. Mangrum and Mrs. Mangrum were welcomed by the parish on Sunday night held at the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer.

Mr. J. A. Johnson and her committee were in charge of the modern family style meal. The young people were served first from a buffet table set up on the church lawn. They later departed for the high school auditorium to attend the Baccalaureate Services for the graduating class. The adults were served in the Parish House. The menu consisted of a plentiful supply of fried chicken complemented by other food brought by those attending.

Flowers for the occasion were furnished by Mrs. and Mrs. Curtis and Mrs. Colver. Following the supper, Senior Warden, J. Johnson, introduced Father Mangrum, who expressed his pleasure at being in Avon Park for the work here. # Here's the Answer

--- deep rooted in God's Word --- The Book.
When Sir Walter Scott lay dying—he called for The Book. The servant who best knew his library hesitated and asked,
"Which Book?" Being the writer and reader of many books, Sir Walter said,
"There is only one book for a dying man."
Is it not equally true for a living man?
What book compares in value to aid us in better living? Do you try to find out what is your highest duty? Do you want guidance? Do you cherish peace of mind? Do you seek inspiration?
Do you really want to know what life is for? This man holds The Source ---
The Answer --- The Divine Way.
Day by day let us enrich our minds,
let us seek from the Bible, wisdom, and try to understand God's purpose for us in His World.
See you in church or Synagogue
this week.

Have You Tried Thumping A Melon Lately

If it goes "pink" it's green.
If it goes "pink" it's ripe.

This old homespun formula for telling when a watermelon is mature enough to pick—still popular in many parts of the South—may be all right for the garden grown varieties.

But it is hardly practical in Florida, the nation's leading watermelon state, where more than 500 million pounds this year will come from 75,000 acres.

If all the watermelons grown in Florida in a year were placed end to end, they would make a delicious green-striped fence 6,800 miles long.

Obviously these growers can't go around thumping watermelons to tell if they're ripe. They use more modern—and more efficient—methods. Such as the color of the vines, or the color of the melons themselves.

The maturity of the melon is very important because this determines the amount of sugar it has, and the sugar governs the taste. The South Florida growers are very late-conscious. They want Americans to keep on eating their melons and liking them.

If a melon goes "pink" when it is picked, it will be pink when it is eaten, instead of the deep red that it should be to taste best. Melons not ripe much after they are picked, if any. Some varieties lose a little of their sweetness if they are kept too long, although watermelons may be stored almost indefinitely in a cool place.

From all accounts watermelons are one of America's favorite foods. We average eating 16½ pounds apiece every year. Probably some good reasons for this are that, besides being pretty to look at and good to eat, watermelon is relatively low-calored (only 100 to the average serving) and high in vitamin A and other nutrients.

While there are many wonderful ways to serve watermelon, one of the simplest—and most popular—is to carve it into bite-size balls and serve it—thoroughly chilled.

If you want to make a real bougie, add cantaloupe and honey dew balls.

But if you want to have a downright banquet, serve the plain melon balls in a frosted brandy snifter and cover them with chilled rose wine! Delicious!

New Citrus Group To Name Advisory Slate

LAKELAND.—An Industry Advisory Committee on economic and marketing research will be one of the first slated to be appointed by the new chairman of the Florida Citrus Commission after the Commission is reorganized here next Wednesday, it was announced today after the Commission is reorganized here next Wednesday, it was announced today by General Manager Homer E. Hooks.

Hooks said a law recently passed unanimously by the Legislature allows the Commission to spend up to five per cent of its revenue on marketing and economic research. In prior years, a small amount of the Commission's funds was spent on this type activity.

The Commission, with five new members, will meet here next Wednesday to reorganize for the coming season and elect a chairman and vice-chairman.

"I will ask the new chairman to immediately appoint a three-man committee from the Commission to oversee this new activity and also appoint a nine-man economic and marketing advisory committee made up of industry and trade representatives," Hooks said. "We hope to get this important new program into action this summer."

Hooks said a department within the Commission had been created for this purpose with Dr. William E. Black as director of economic and marketing research. According to Hooks, five general areas would be explored, including demand, supply management, long-range planning, market development and market structure.

"The new program came as a result of industry meetings with trade and professional people when the need for such research was agreed on," Hooks said. "The industry then presented its wish to the Legislature in the form of a bill to allow the Commission to establish a project for broadening Florida citrus markets as production increases."

No one leaves before his commission, of course, the boss leaves early.

Clifford Kraft, who is conducting an inventory of county property, appeared at the board meeting and asked for instructions for placing numbers on county vehicles. The board voted to place small metal identification plates on autos and small trucks.

In response to a letter from DeSoto City Attorney Harry Lee, the board voted to pay DeSoto City's share of the road and bridge funds into the funds of District 3, District 3 will then assume road and bridge maintenance in DeSoto City. This has been the procedure for several years.

The commissioners passed a resolution endorsing Kermi Massey for a movers license. Massey must present such material as a part of his hearing before the state railroad and public Utilities Commission.

The board awarded the bid for clay to Tower Groves. The bid included three acres of clay north of Avon Park. The board awarded Fishing Creek maintenance project to Hardee Development Corp.

The board voted to advertise for a bookkeeping machine for the clerk's office and for a new truck for district 3.

increased appropriation for the Juvenile Court in order to hire a full-time counselor (at the proposed salary of $4200 per year). The Merit Board presentation included the recommendation that Miss Benni Lynne Eastman be hired for the counselor job.

At that time County Attorney Dundy pointed out to the Board that the state law requires that the County Merit Board submit to the Juvenile Judge a list of three names and that from these names the Judge hire a counselor. It was emphasized that actually hiring of a counselor is not the responsibility of the commission.

Merit Board members and Juvenile Judge Mervin Rehner had promised that if funds for a counselor were made available the job would be advertised, and all applicants would be screened.
