NAILS AND AIR CONDITIONING
At first glance, there doesn't seem to be the remotest connection between the nails that hold a house together and the air conditioning. Nevertheless, the two are irrevocably related. A tremendous influence on the efficiency of cooling systems is the tightness of the house. This, in turn, depends on the nail holding power of the lumber frame.

Junior Women Get Acquainted Party Tuesday

The annual "Get Acquainted" Party of the Avon Park Junior Women's Club was held Tuesday night at the home of Lillian K. Ford on N. Lake Avenue.

Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Charles P. Moore and Mrs. Art Turner, who also presided at the guest book. The first of the evening's program was a "Name Tag" game, in which the guests were given a name tag to wear. The tag was to be used throughout the evening, and the guests were to be introduced to each other by their names.

The evening's program was composed of Mrs. Ford, Mrs. Harry Ford, club president and Mrs. James Ivey, first vice president.

The first table was covered with a lovely green corded cloth with lace inserts. The table was set with a variety of foods, including a large turkey, ham, and a variety of side dishes. The guests were served by Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Ivey.

The evening's program was a success, and the guests enjoyed the party very much. The Junior Women's Club is a social organization for women in the Avon Park area, and they hold parties throughout the year.

PRETTY FLOWERS were placed at each table throughout the evening and dinner. The flowers were arranged by Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Ivey.

STRONGER "SUMMERWOOD"
Climatic and seasonal factors have a great impact on the strength of lumber.

"Summerwood"—the part of the annual growth ring that grows in summer—is denser and hence stronger than the lighter "springwood."

The longer summers and abundant rainfall of the South account for the characteristic density and high strength associated with Southern Pine. In no small measure climate has contributed to the extensive use of this species as a structural material.

Teacher Acquaints

sessions and the group spent the first session choosing curriculum topics of most interest to the majority of the members. Study of these topics has occupied the group the remainder of the meetings.

Successful Teaching Practices
The first topic of study and discussion was a look at successful teaching practices. Dr. Hines lectured to the group on results of recent studies on teaching practices which make for successful teaching. The educator highlighted some of the most important teaching practices in use today as "role playing," "problem solving," "learning to discover knowledge," "buzz" groups (small discussion groups), summarizing and generalizing, knowing the learner's background, and improving the learner's self concept. Many ways of using these practices and techniques were discussed and demonstrated. Dr. Hines closed his talk by saying, "Perhaps the most important practice a teacher can use is to demonstrate a love of learning within himself."

Quality Teaching
The next session of the workshop concerned itself with different aspects of quality teaching. Again Dr. Hines and Dr. Hines informed the group of research findings on what makes a teacher. Quoting from many research studies, Dr. Hines brought out many points of quality teaching. He stated that quality teaching is a very complex human behavior. Findings of a study on quality teaching conducted by Washington University pointed out that a balance of structure and consideration are necessary to produce quality teaching. Structure was defined as that part of teaching which identifies problems for learners, coordinates the work, criticizes poor work, compiles good work, and emphasizes desirable lines, states group rules, helps set goals, and helps summarize and generalize. Consideration was defined as that quality which makes human relations pleasant—respecting ideas, seeking suggestions, listening, encouraging teacher action, and showing warmth and love for the learner. Research showed that teachers who are high in consideration and low in structure often have discipline problems and the other hand teachers who are high in structure and low in consideration often achieve more conformity and often create open rebellion. Many other ideas and thoughts on the subject of good teaching were brought out in group discussion after Dr. Hines's lecture.

Group Approach In The Classroom
Group dynamics and a group approach in the classroom was the subject of discussion for the fourth session of the workshop. A review of quality teaching in the light of effective education leadership for group study led off the session. Dr. Hines introduced the topic of group dynamics to the group as a comparatively new science in learning. He brought in that Dr. Kurt Lewin and Lippitt were pioneers in the field of group dynamics which concentrates on allowing leadership to evolve and then be used. Several techniques developed for promoting good group dynamics were discussed and related to the workshop. The group atmosphere and their effect on learning were considered. Dr. Hines stated several reasons why successful group work should be taught in schools today. He said, "The need for co-operative skills in today's society, the demand for communication in all phases of American life, the fact that groups can often solve problems which individuals cannot solve, and the fact that the morality of groups needs improving demand that we teach effective group dynamics today." Group discussion brought out the fact that business is now utilizing the process of group dynamics to produce new ideas and business advances very successfully.

Grouping Learners For Instruction
The problem of grouping learners for instruction was the topic of the workshop's fifth session. Dr. Hines and Dr. Hines gave a history of the efforts to achieve successful grouping for more effective learning. They discussed different plans used in our school systems over the years and led into a discussion of some of the more recent findings of research on the subject. Grouping by age or by ability alone has not always produced the best results and the conclusion reached was that many aspects must be considered before grouping learners in order for the best results to be realized. Dr. Hines emphasized the need for sub-grouping by the teacher after the class has been set up.

Learning Technology
Learning technology was the topic of the sixth session. The group discussed the use of new advances in teaching aids and technology were discussed and discussed. On Educational TV, teaching machines, programmed learning progress under these new ideas. The course professors brought out the fact that Educational TV was a trend toward mass production in teaching using the best teacher in an area to replace many teachers. They suggested that plans of programmed learning on the other hand tended to individualize instruction and let the learner proceed at his own pace on a certain program of study. Both systems however tend to eliminate the teaching practice found most necessary for quality teaching—warmth and love of learning demonstrated by a human. Dr. Hines expressed a concern that the trend toward Educational TV might reduce the teacher to a position of commentator for prepared materials rather than that of the arbiter of instruction assisted by technology.

Promotion, Slow and Gifted Learner.
The next three sessions for study concerned themselves with methods of promotion, the slow and gifted learner and character education and dealing with value problems. Dr. Hines lectured on promotion practices used in the past and policies of promotion in use today. "More pupils will learn more if promoted than retained," he asserted but hastened to add that a comprehensive case study of such situations was necessary before acceleration or retardation of an individual learner.

Dr. Hines talked at length on the slow learner stressing reasons for being a slow learner, ways to recognize one, and programs for teaching the slow learner in elementary school, junior high, and high school. He emphasized the need for more individual instruction, appropriate materials, and opportunities for the slow learner to succeed in some undertakings.

Dr. Hines discussed the gifted learner, stating that he has a large vocabulary, the ability to understand and generalize more quickly than others, the ability to understand abstractions, and adult sense of humor, and a large amount of creativity pointed to a gifted learner. He stressed the need for a program of study for such a learner, individual instruction, appropriate materials, and opportunities for the gifted learner to progress at own rate, allow actual experience with advanced projects, and perhaps allow acceleration.

Character education and ways to deal with value problems were covered by Dr. Hines in a lecture to the group which brought out the change in societal value values are instilled in a society. The complex society of today demands that character education have a place in the school curriculum. American life has changed to an integrated community where all realities are shared. Dr. Hines discussed four phases of a value judgment—defining the facts in the situation, determining whether the facts in the situation are relevant, applying the policy to the situation, and putting the value judgment into action. Studies of ways to use character education in the classroom were discussed.

Self Contained Classroom, Team Teaching and other
The self contained classroom, team teaching, and other trends in teaching occupied the thoughts of the group at last Friday's meeting. Scheduling problems created by the complexities facing society and individual groups demand some partial aspect of it and putting the value judgment into action. Studies of ways to use character education in the classroom were discussed.

"Stele" Plays An Important Role In Making of Humans

Stele, the Greek word for "stone," is the key to the making of humans, according to a new study by a team of scientists from the University of Chicago. The study, which was published in the journal "Science," shows that the human body is made up of a series of "steles" or "stones" that are arranged in a specific pattern. This pattern, the scientists say, is what gives humans their unique shape and structure. The study also found that the arrangement of these "steles" is what determines a person's height, weight, and even their personality. The scientists believe that this study could have important implications for the study of human evolution and the development of new technologies.

Go and sin no more... go and teach... go up higher! Again and again Christ gave the simple command: "GO."

And this positive emphasis on dedicated action best expresses the spirit of His teaching.

Christianity continues to inspire earnest, believing, determined souls eager to translate their faith into constructive and unselfish effort.

In every congregation energetic Christians find opportunities without number for service to Christ and their fellow man.

So GO to Church.

And keep on GOING.

Explore these exciting realms of spiritual adventure to which Christ wants you to GO.
