

Cpl. Kenneth Cook Takes Safari In African Bush Country

Cpl. Kenneth Cook, serving Embassy duty in Africa, on leave from his duties, went on a safari down into the bush country outside the Dinder National Reserve, about 400 miles east of Khartoum, Sudan, according to word received by his parents.

Ken reported the average temperature during most of the day in the bush area, was 120 to 125 degrees, with approximately 30 to 40 percent humidity—quite different from Khartoum, where the average temperature is about 100 to 110 degrees, but with a relative humidity of 20 to 30 degrees unless it rains.

He wrote it had rained in Khartoum once since his arrival in the Sudan area, November 22, 1966. He said, "Guess what it rained?" MUD—pure mud.

Ken left the 10th of April, 1966, making the trip with an attaché of the Embassy political section and returned the 22nd of April. He wrote of going out to sight the game. Equipped with a Winchester 364 Magnum with 4 power scope. Mr. Mann has game using a Winchester 300 with same power scope, plus a 307 Magnum Smith and Wesson pistol for a side arm.

Ken, though a little disappointed not to get a lion made quite an interesting haul, one Tang very large type of deer, two red bush hares, one deer, two gazelle very small, one antelope and seven guinea fowl, quite a variety.

His curriculum during his two year assignment at the Embassy, includes the study of the Arabic language. He inserts many interesting Arabic expressions and phrases in his letter home, plus colorful accounts of activities. He is having a sword made for himself by a native Arab craftsman. The blade is inscribed with various Arabic symbols and his name in Arabic and English, inserted on the sheath, which is inscribed with silver. This type of sword is used by the Arabs in desert warfare.

While enroute to his present assignment, Ken has sent home super money from many of the places visited, in connection with President Johnson's Asian tour.

4-H Clubs From Four Counties Attend Camp

More than 150 4-H boys and girls from Highlands, Sarasota, Collier, and Lee counties will be attending 4-H camp at Camp Cloverleaf, near Lake Placid, this week.

One of the main objectives of the camp is fun, everything is done with a recreational spirit. Classes are informal, and each day the 4-Hers will have a choice of 6 different topic areas. Lunch is followed by recreation and free time followed by swimming. After supper the evening program consists of usually of square dancing, group singing and skits. Campfire and vespers usually end the day.

Responsibility will be a big lesson at camp as 4-Hers are responsible for themselves, their appearance, quarters, and grounds. Along with responsibility 4-Hers are taught respect for property, fellow campers and themselves; it teaches discipline, and how to enjoy themselves.

Older 4-H junior leaders help plan and carry out camp. They play an important role in teaching younger campers.

The most popular camp activity is swimming. One third of the 4-Hers go to camp non-swimmers, and learn to swim while they are there.

A typical day at camp begins with flag raising followed by breakfast and cabin and ground cleanups. Morning classes offer three different classes each day.
