Around the School

The Juniors are really busy getting their heads together planning the Banquet they are to give the Seniors on March 20. The place hasn't been decided upon yet, but it is between Highland Lakes and Lake Byrd Lodge. This Banquet (not to be confused) is going to be one affair the Seniors of '31 will remember for many, many years, and the Juniors, too, as far as that is concerned.

Report cards were given out Wednesday afternoon. Thought I would let you know so that in case you saw some one that looked especially "het up" over something you would know what was wrong. I'd like to inform Don Ramon that Mr. Good's bookkeeping finished their required work very satisfactorily last week. I think he would be willing to give his bookkeepers a recommendation when they need it for their next set of books.

By the way, have you noticed the merit pins that A & B average Bookkeeping students have received? They are only bronze but what they stand for! Those receiving the pins were: Oleta Burchie, Karen Hagin, Agnes Villakits, Kelly McClure, Ruth Sturdivant, Clarence Wilcox, Francis Bowman and Charlotte Shepherd.

In the school library, there are several new magazines among which are the Country Gentleman and the Saturday Evening Post.

Eighth B News

The Eighth B grade has twenty three members enrolled. Since the beginning of school we have increased from eighteen to twenty three. For January the percentage of attendance was over 95. Since the holidays we have lost one pupil, Carlton Wingate, but we have gained three: Willie Austin, Walker Beasley and Dale Marsh who comes back from Boston.

Since we have a class organization we are giving the officers work to do. The president now has the job of dismissing the class at noon and afternoon. He does not dismiss the class until every one is seated and quiet. He has even been known to keep in some who did not co-operate with the others. This new system not only gives the pupils more to do in their home room, but it is quite a help to the teacher.

Tuesday morning Earl James, Ralph Heim and John Jackson gave an interesting chapel program on current events. We learned many things we did not know.

It Isn't The World—It's You.

You say the world is gloomy;
The skies are grim and gray.
The night has lost its quiet—
You fear the coming day?
The world is what you make it.
The sky is gray or blue
Just as your soul may paint it
It isn't the world—it's you!

Clear up the clouded vision,
Clean out the forty mind;
The clouds are always passing,
And each is silver lined.
The world is what you make it—
Then make it bright and true,
And when you say it's gloomy,
It isn't the world—it's you!

Senior News

Just to prove that Miss Bryant's efforts in English are not all in vain, Paul Mc. and Kelly Mc. became inspired and wrote a piece of poetry.

FATE

The pendulum of fate swings each day
Beating a rhythm so happy and gay
Sometimes it's goes slow
Then disaster will blow
When it beats fast
I'll be happy at last
—Paul McFarland.

PERTAINING TO METERS.

There are meters iambic,
And meters trochaic,
Meters of a musical time
But the meter that's sweeter
And either "complete"

Is to meet'er in the moonlight alone.
—Kelly McClure.

If you will carefully study the above verses you will probably see the Elizabethan influence in them. The Seniors have begun to think of graduation. In class meeting Tuesday the Seniors decided not to wear caps and gowns.

The play, "The College Hobo," will probably arrive sometime soon. This play if given by the Senior class will be given the last of February or first of March.

Junior News

Don Ramon challenges any Senior to one round of golf on the Highland Lakes course. Watch out, Bass. Our Junior golf champion says he will spot you ten and then make you root the post.

Claude Daly says he just cannot understand chemistry, for he dropped a perfectly good wool sweater in boiling sodium hydroxide, and now he has a reward out for the person who finds the vanished sweater.

Then there comes the story about Cameron Epperson who cannot go home without his little argument about circles in Geometry.

Speaking of Geometry, there seems to be no (end) to those circles.

Well, history is history when you get to talking about the three mill limit. Paul Baldwin says that sounds interesting.

Jimmie Roberts says Spanish is all right in its place, but when some of those long sentences are thrown at him, it makes him wish he was back in the cage.

The Junior class is signing off.

The report cards came out Wednesday and we weren't as thrilled over our grades as we thought we would be. We hope to do better next month.

Those who are on the honor roll this month are: W. H. Prescott, Dorothy Garrett, Mary M. Mills, Elton Perry and Grace Schweigart. Come on, boys! Don't let W. H. do all the hard work.

Dorothy Garrett was absent from school several days this week. We hope that she will be back with us soon.

Mary M. Mills and Frieda Cumming, accompanied by others, visited in Sebring Friday night.

Verna Heim motivated to Lake Wales Sunday to see friends.

Education

No subject is really mastered until the student has made it his own; until, instead of repeating what he has been told, he has worked it over in his mind so much that it does not seem to him a thing he has been taught, but a thing he has learned and can use as his own possession. All education is his best form is, indeed, self-education under guidance.

Krazy Thoughts

Well, seems like most of the jokes are on Miss Bryant. One day, this little lady, having decided to impress the Senior class with her quantity of knowledge, asked what percent of what a student studies does he forget. Answers from brilliant subjects varied from 2 percent to 99 9/10 percent. After exhausting their supply of guesses the Seniors asked Miss Bryant, just as she had assumed they would, and with all the dignity that her position would allow she started to reply: "Er—er," she started, "I believe that—er—er I've forgotten, myself!"

—I guess those figures are part of her percent that she had forgotten. And here's another—a discussion arose over the material to be used in the essay. The Senior High-lands. Some Senior offered as a topic a paragraph on our fine golf courses in and about Avon Park.

"Oh, Senior No. 1 exclaimed, only these rich old millionaires play golf. Why write about that?" Then "Squatter" Roberts burst out, "A lot of these old backwoods crackers try knocking a ball over the course and call it golfing!"

Miss B. Which class do you come under?

There are several questions I want answered—

Shirley, when was Shakespeare born?

Martin and Roscoe, what does "horses" and "goats" mean?

Mary V. What's this I hear about you and "Chick" B?

Marshall, is it true about Novella?

Chick, whose wearing your ring now?

Blossom, what's a Bee kiss?

Fred, do you really compose poetry?

Clarence, how did you get 100 on bookkeeping test?

Margaret, how's Jimmy?

Kelly, whose ring have you been wearing?

—Krazy Words.

Here it is the third day of February and our report cards are sent out to-morrow. In the seventh grade 50 percent of the pupils have an F on their cards. Of course some students fail in more than one subject and so increase the average.

In the Senior class there are only about 5 percent failing. Why should the seventh grade have such a high percentage of F students while the Seniors, who have the hardest schedule with a class of very ordinary ability, have such a remarkably good average? Perhaps it is because the Seniors understand that a D or an E means danger and they work especially hard that subject. Seventh graders do not consider reports seriously enough. Therefore they continue to fail. Every parent should make it a point to inspect these cards carefully on the first of each month. If the student is on the border line of failure, he should be encouraged to spend more time on the particular subject.

The Senior history class is finishing the American history text book this week and will then take up a course on Civil Government. This subject is considered especially interesting. One of its main features is a trip to Sebring to watch the county court in session.

Dr. W. A. Davison, a prominent Vermont clergyman who winters at Highland Lakes, spoke at chapel Monday morning. His talk was most inspiring and helpful.

Dr. Davison has a certain gift for holding his audience that few others have. One fact that Dr. Davison is speaking directly to him as his subject always interest one and everything said has a direct bearing on the subject. Come again, Dr. Davison.

DON RAMON.

CHEVROLET ADOPTS BODY REFINEMENTS

New Features of High Priced Cars Now Found in Fisher-Built Bodies

Few things are sacred to the costly cars any more except size and custom bodies, points out D. E. Ralston, assistant general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

Volume has made possible such tremendous purchasing advantages that scarcely has a new feature been introduced on a high priced car before a means has been found to incorporate it in the low priced field, according to the Chevrolet executive.

"Witness the radiator screen grille," Mr. D. E. Ralston pointed out. "Popularized by one of America's finest cars, it became standard equipment within a year on every sport model in the new Chevrolet line. The adjustable driver's seat won enthusiastic endorsement when it made its public appearance on one of the higher priced cars, yet in no time at all it became a feature of every Fisher-Chevrolet body.

"Time was, and not so very long ago, when the purchase of a low priced car meant a further sizeable outlay upon delivery of that car for 'extras.' The owner had to go out and buy his own speedometer, klaxon, shock absorbers, rear vision mirror, windshield cleaner and many other items not included in the list price. Today, he gets not only these accessories; but in certain Chevrolet models ash trays, silk assist cord, arm and foot rests, radio, window curtains and a host of other fine car features are included in the list price.

"This trend of fine car features to the low priced field developed only within the past few years. The feminine influence on car design gave impetus to the trend. But the thing that made it possible in the saving effected on tremendous purchases of materials by the large manufacturer, which in turn enables him to put those savings back into the car in the interest of greater comfort and smartness."

TO BROADCAST FACTS AND FIGURES ON STATE

State Chamber to Sponsor Plan Under Know Florida Week

Jacksonville, Feb. 4.—Florida facts and figures will be broadcast in fifty half hour programs from Florida radio stations during the last week in February, according to the Florida State Chamber of Commerce, as part of the fifth annual Know Florida Week and Buy at Home Campaign.

These programs will consist of twenty-minutes of entertainment, a seven minute talk on some phase of Florida activity, and short Florida Facts. The facts and figures to be used during the programs are being prepared by the Florida State Chamber of Commerce. The entertainment features will be provided through the co-operation of local chambers of commerce and Junior Chambers of Commerce of Florida. The program will be presented through the courtesy of the Florida radio stations.

Interest in the annual "Know Florida Better Week and Buy at Home" campaign is being manifested in all sections of the state through chambers of commerce, luncheon clubs, merchants associations, and schools, according to the State Chamber.

Every community in the state has been invited to submit ten facts concerning the attractions, industrial, agricultural or other activities for use in connection with the radio programs and in campaign material. A number of cities have already appointed committees to handle the event and have their programs well worked out at this time.

This statewide observance for four years has been carried out successfully through the co-operative efforts of the press, radio stations, chambers of commerce, civic organizations and schools. It has annually brought Florida a wealth of favorable publicity and inquiries as the result of the campaign carried on locally and on a statewide basis.

HICORIA School News

Our Association met last week. A full attendance was present. After the general session, a short three act sketch was put on for the amusement of the members present. Those taking part in the play were, Juddelle Peoples, Mrs. W. D. Hope and Messrs. C. H. Shackelford, Larue Carlton and E. J. Peters.

Last week as Harvey Peeling was on his way home from school, a car driven by Mr. Shell hit him. It was thought for a while that he was seriously injured, but we are glad to say that the three of his ribs were broken. It is fortunate that he was not hurt worse. He has been out of school for over a week now.

We are giving a chicken supper at the I. G. A. store next Saturday night at 7:30. A nice plate lunch of chicken and rice will be sold for twenty-five cents. Cake, coffee and tea will also be served. The money given for the benefit of the school. Every one is cordially invited to be present.

Our mid term examinations are now a thing of the past. We hope that we all made the "first down" of the season.

Col. Bailey was out one day last week for a short stay. We are all glad when he is here.

The Croon Sets A New Style In Singing

LILLIAN DAWSON
Singing into a microphone.

Many Singers Now Know This Trick, Declares Lillian Dawson

New York City.—That broadcasting has done more than any other agency to give the natural, untrained singer an opportunity to sing before a large audience, Lillian Dawson, famous radio crooner, declares.

"Crooning which has become so popular cannot be done according to rule and rote of the singing teachers," declares Miss Dawson. "In fact, it is contrary to all accepted rules of the great masters but nevertheless a new sweet tone is being evolved and a complete revolution in singing technique is very possible."

"The commercially successful singers are nearly all crooners, that is, singers who can talk their voices into the microphone. The exact opposite means are used in the control of volume of tone. The most popular crooners cannot be heard a foot away from the microphone. They sing with a peculiar softness akin to a whisper which the other waves seem to pick up and transport with greater clarity than any other sound. They must also have songs of great sweetness and melody such as 'A Big Square For You,' probably the crooningest song ever written."

Miss Dawson comes of a family of singers and is the first untrained voice in her theatrical family to make good.

INFORMATION AT HAND FOR FLORIDA FARMERS

Department of Agriculture and Other Agencies Always Ready to Aid

Jacksonville, Feb. 4.—Florida farmers and business men have a wealth of information available to them covering practically every phase of the state's activity if they will only utilize it," says R. G. Grassfield, general manager of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce.

"This information is developed and in most part published by the Department of Agriculture at Tallahassee; the Experiment Station at Gainesville; the State Marketing Bureau and governmental agencies maintained in Florida," continued Mr. Grassfield. "It is evident from the character of inquiries received by the State Chamber of Commerce, from people within the state that the services mentioned are not known, or their value not fully realized."

"The Department of Agriculture at Tallahassee," says Mr. Grassfield, "has forty-six publications which may be obtained free upon application to the Bureau of Immigration. These publications cover agricultural topics, fruits, hay, grain and other special subjects which are more or less daily problems of Florida people. The Experiment Station at Gainesville also has numbers of bulletins upon Florida problems that are helpful to those seeking advice or guidance. These services," concluded Mr. Grassfield, "are yours for the asking. The point is you must do the asking if the valuable material gathered and published is to be of help to you."

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES

Weekly from Home Demonstration Specialists, Tallahassee

CITRUS PRESERVES.

While an abundance of citrus fruits are on hand the housewife should not forget that they will make good preserves. Try a few is the best test.

Grapefruit Preserves.

Use 1 pound of grapefruit peel, 3/4 pound of sugar, 1 pint of water, and 2 slices of lemon, 1/4 inch thick. Select bright fruit with a thick peel, and wash carefully, using a brush to remove stains. Cut in strips or shapes. Remove the bitter from the peel by adding 2 pints of water to the pound of fruit and let the lemon and boiling for 15 minutes. Pour off the water, and repeat the process until the desired taste is reached. Then add the peel and lemon to a boiling syrup made from the sugar and a pint of water. Boil until the peel is translucent and the syrup sufficiently heavy.

Whole Kumquat Preserves.

Use 1 pound of kumquats to 3/4 pound of sugar and 1 pint of water. Wash the kumquats in soapy and water. Sprinkle them with a tablespoonful of soda, and cover with boiling water. Let stand 10 minutes, and rinse them in three changes of water. Make a salt 1/4 inch long on one side of each fruit, and boil in water for 15 minutes. Repeat this boiling process three times. Then drop the kumquats into a boiling sugar solution made by dissolving the sugar in the pint of water. Boil gently until transparent and until the syrup gives a slight jelly test. If the vessel is covered just before it is moved from the flame, and allowed to stand for 25 minutes it will help to plump the fruit.

Seed Orange Preserves.

Cut or grate off the yellow part from oranges, leaving the white portion of the peel. Cut in halves, squeeze the juice, but don't break the peel. Put four oranges so fixed into five quarts of water, and boil for 20 minutes. Chop to fresh water and boil for 15. Change the water twice more, boiling from 8 to 10 minutes. Drain, and boil in a syrup made from one part of sugar to one part of water until sugar is transparent. As the syrup boils down, add water to keep the original density. Pack the transparent fruit, strain the syrup, and boil it until thick. Pour it over the fruit, and process 10 minutes, then seal.

Washington Was Elected President 142 Years Ago

Received Unanimous Vote February 4, 1789

When the people of the United States turned to George Washington with the universal demand that he stand at the head of the new government and fill the great office of first President of the Republic, he evidenced the same difference which weighed upon him when he took command of the armies, according to the Division of Information of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

In response to the suggestion that he be a candidate, he recognized the fact that he was likely to be again called upon to render public service, and added simply that at his age it would involve a sacrifice which admitted of no compensation. He maintained this tone whenever he alluded to the subject, in replying to numerous letters urging him to accept. But, although he declined to announce any decision, he had resigned himself to the inevitable.

Washington made it clear that he was not pursuing the office, and would only leave his farm to take it from a sense of duty. The electoral college gave him its unanimous vote on February 4, 1789. Neither the animosity of parties, nor the large number of enemies of the new government in any of the states, could deprive him of a single vote.

The reluctance with which General Washington assumed his new position and that genuine modesty which was a distinguished feature of his character, are further illustrated by the following letter from a letter to General Henry Knox: "I feel for those members of the new Congress, who, hitherto, have given an unvarying attendance at the theater of action. For myself, the delay may be compared to a reprieve; for in confidence, I tell you (with the world it would obtain little credit,) that my movements to the chair of government will be accompanied by feelings not unlike those of a culprit who is going to the place of his execution; so unwilling am I, in the evening of life, to assume the weight of the cares, to take a peaceful abode for an ocean of difficulties without that competency of political skill, ability, and inclination, which are necessary to manage the helm. I am sensible that I am embarking the voice of the people, and a good name is my own on this voyage, but what returns will be made for them Heaven alone can tell."

Integrity and firmness are not promises; these, be the voyage long or short, shall never forsake me, although I may be deserted by all men for the consolation which are to be derived from these, under any circumstances, the world can not deprive me."

The official announcement of his election as Chief Magistrate of the United States was made to him at Mount Vernon on April 14, 1789 by Charles Thomson, the secretary of the Continental Congress. Accustomed to respect the wishes of his fellow citizens, Washington did not think himself at liberty to decline an appointment conferred upon him by the suffrage of an entire people. His acceptance of it, and his expression of gratitude for this fresh proof of the esteem and confidence of his country, were connected with declarations of difference in himself.

"I wish," he said, "that there may not be reason for regretting the choice—For indeed, all I can promise, is to accomplish that which can be done by an honest seal."

As the public business required the immediate attendance of the President at the seat of the Government, he hastened his departure, and on the second day after receiving notice of his election, he took leave of Mount Vernon. In an entry in his diary, the feelings inspired by this event were thus described: "About ten o'clock I bade adieu to Mount Vernon, to private life, and to domestic felicity; and with a mind oppressed with more anxious and painful sensations than I have words to express, set out for New York in company with Mr. Thompson and Col. Humphries, with the dispositions to render service to my country in obedience to its call, but with less hope of answering its expectations."

In his journey from Alexandria to New York, Washington was everywhere received with the greatest demonstrations of affection by all classes of his fellow citizens, which were manifested by the most flattering marks of heartfelt respect and by addresses which evinced the unlimited confidence reposed in his wisdom and his ability. At Philadelphia he was received with unusual splendor. In imitation of the triumphal entrances of Ancient Rome, an arch was erected at the bridge over the Schuylkill River, and on each side was placed laurel shrubbery. As Washington passed under the arch, a civic crown was set upon him. The fields and avenues were crowded with people, through whom he was conducted into the city by a body of leading citizens. At night the town was illuminated.

The next day, at Trenton, he was welcomed in a manner as new as it was pleasing. In addition to the usual discharge of cannon and the demonstrations of respect and attachment by military corps, and by private persons of distinction, the women of the city arranged a tribute indicative of gratitude for their deliverance, twelve years before from a formidable enemy. On a bridge over the creek which passes through the town was a triumphal arch, decorated with laurel and flowers and supported by thirteen pillars. On the front of this arch was inscribed in large gilt letters, "December 26, 1776," and beneath, formed in the flowers, "The defender of the mothers will be the protector of the daughters."

As Washington passed under the arch he was met by a party of matrons leading their daughters, dressed in white, who carried baskets of flowers in their hands, and sang an ode composed for the occasion. At Brunswick, he was joined by the Governor of New Jersey, who accompanied him to Elizabethtown Point. A committee of Congress received him on the road, and conducted him with a military parade to the Point, where he embarked for New York in an elegant thirteen-car large, prepared for the purpose by the citizens of New York, and manned by thirteen pilots.

"The display of boats," said Washington in his private journal, "which was attended and joined on this occasion, some with oars, and others with instrumental music on board, the decorations of the ships, the roar of the cannon, and the loud acclamations of the people, which rent the sky as I passed along the wharves, filled my mind with sensations as painful (contemplating the reverse of the scene, which may be the case after all my labors to do good) as they were pleasing."

At the stairs of Murray's Wharf, which had been prepared and decorated for the purpose, he was received by the Governor of New York, and was conducted, with military honors, through an immense concourse of people, to the apartments prepared for him. Washington arrived in New York on April 23 and on the 30th the Constitutional Government of the United States began with his inauguration as the first President.

Northern Man Is Drowned at Lake Placid Yesterday

Jack Story, of Vermont, and aged 21 years, was drowned in Lake Placid, formerly Lake Childs, yesterday morning when a sail boat in which he and a companion were riding was capsized in a high wind. The companion, Bill Brennan, was rescued in a serious condition and it required medical attention to revive him.

The two young men were employed by Lake Placid Lodi and were riding on the lake when their boat was seen to capsize about two miles across the lake from the boat house. Another employee rushed out to them and rescued Brennan who could not tell a very coherent story but said that Story had attempted to swim ashore. His cap and one shoe were found and the boat had drifted some distance from the place of the accident.

Efforts were immediately made to locate the body but they had been unsuccessful up to the time of going to press.

"A poor loser," is the brand the Alabama folks put on Hefflin. They know him.

If we take in Jack Worthington's Eisteddfod, wonder if he will provide our Eisteddfod fodder?

They used to pass the hat asking for aid for the suffering Armenians. Now it is the suffering Arkansans, or is it Arkansawans?

Rudy is now crooning at Miami. Did he like those samples of grapefruit tossed at him in Boston so well that he came to Florida to get more?

A Fort Meade sage has figured out that the next depression will occur in A. D. 2029. And if it's anything like this one, that is plenty soon enough.

"Citrus juice can now be had like morning's milk," states a head line in the Lake Wales Highlander. We presume this is made possible by letting the cows pasture in the citrus groves.

We reluctantly admit that Mr. Mellon is a better financier than we are, but we still think turning loose that bonus money at this time would be a big help to the country as well as to the veterans.

Looks like Will Rogers is doing more for the destitute of the country than anybody else is. Of course, others are doing lots of talking, but Will is producing and turning over the needful to the needy.

It is surprising from what sources one can get information. We even learned the correct pronunciation of a word from Winchell's column. The word is "rabbits," and its not pronounced "rabbits," either, believe it or not.

A big fair at Winter Haven last week, and another, even bigger, at Tampa, this week. Both splendid presentations of Florida products and progress, and they are bound to impress deeply thousands of visitors now in the State.

The lowly turnip seems to be saving the day out in Arkansas, where it is the principal article of food among the "croppers." You Florida folks who are talking hard times in the midst of plenty, how would you like to live on turnips and little else for awhile?

The Literary Digest, detailing the story of the Missouri lynching, in which the victim was bound to the ridge pole of a school house, and the structure burned down, observes that "the negro showed remarkable coolness." But doubtless he quickly warmed up to the situation.

While we don't blame the President for keeping mum, it is none the less true that if Al Smith were in the White House there would be no doubt as to his stand, on prohibition or any other question. One may not agree with him, but the American people admire a man who has the courage of his convictions.

The West Coast Dental Society in convention the other day, decided that the toothbrush is the best aid to health. Its popularity as a dress accessory seems to have waned, however. It used to be a "gent" did not consider himself properly dressed unless his toothbrush protruded from the breast pocket of his coat.

Prize winning citrus fruit from the Florida Orange Festival was sent to Washington by airplane, and presented to President Hoover by Congressman Drane. That means that the President has been provided with the finest citrus fruit that can be produced in the world. After Mr. Hoover eats it, he doubtless will blush every time he hears California fruit mentioned.

"TOO MANY OLIVER TWISTS SPOIL THE BROTH"

A report of a research committee declares that there are 2,124 ways in which a child can irritate its parents. There are at least a thousand additional ways the committee overlooked. But that is the way of life. Life itself provides a million ways to vex and irritate us—but we love life! We ourselves often wound those we love best, and perhaps it's only a just return that our children repay us in kind.

Don't like to criticize anybody or any agency, but when we read of the pitiable presence at relief in the stricken Arkansas section, weeks after the need was announced, we wonder why things can't be speeded up. One meal, a day per family, with little children facing the bitter mountain winter without shoes or underclothing, is far from a satisfactory commentary on the efficiency of the relief movement.

The groundhog does not make its habitat in Florida, its services as a weather prophet having never been in demand down here. Elsewhere, it peers forth from its burrow on February 2, gives one glance at a bleak and barren world, and on general principles goes back to bed, and resumes its nap for another six weeks. It knows that whether the sun shines or not there is little likelihood of less than six weeks of winter after February 2.

A queer twist of human nature is revealed by a perusal of that department of any paper which is provided for the purpose of giving people an opportunity to express their views. In at least nine instances out of ten people who write to a newspaper do so to express their disapproval of something or some one. It is indeed rare to find such a communication having for its purpose to command or approve. And yet there are lots of things in the world for which a good word might be spoken. Do we just naturally love to kick and complain?

We hold no brief for Mussolini—indeed, we look upon him as the greatest menace to world peace. Still, he has done a marvelous work in Italy. First-hand information from that country is to the effect that his people idolize him. At any rate, it is hardly worth while to foster international prejudice by repeating stories concerning him that are of questionable veracity. We sympathize with General Butler on having been placed in an embarrassing position, but that is the penalty of speaking too freely without making sure of one's facts. The circulation of rumors, even in the belief they are true, causes much of the misfortune and misery of the world. That is what has caused many recent bank failures; that is what has cruelly wrecked many a fair reputation. Such discredited demagogues as Hefflin may repeat rumors of this kind and do little harm. A man of General Butler's standing, and in his position, however, should be more careful.

Echoes of the State Press

KILLING FLORIDA'S GOOSE.

Florida is a bumper citrus crop this winter. There is nothing wrong with the quality of the fruit. The early market held steadily at good price levels, but that was when only California fruit was moving. The first thing Florida did was to ship green fruit. Unfit for human consumption, into this market. Prices dropped. There was no organized movement of good fruit. The distaste for Florida fruit created by first deliveries lingered and prices were hampered again by blind shippers who would first glut a market, then bid against each other. The result was that oranges sold at retail for as little as a penny each. Florida once more had killed the proverbial goose and even California could not laugh at the spectacle, for the reaction was not confined to Florida's products.

It is the same dull farce that followed the bumper crops in 1923-24 and 1928-29. Organized operators this winter handled 80 percent of the crop, but they were powerless to overcome the activity of unorganized, non-co-operating growers. The Florida Citrus Exchange estimates that conditions as they now exist penalize the industry at least $18,000,000 a year. The operators admit their failure. They never have been able to control the situation in any area without the support of the growers and plans for speeding growth control of the industry were before the Exchange directorate at Tampa Friday.

Earlier in the week representatives of organized growers met in Winter Haven to prepare for a mass meeting of all the growers during the Florida Orange Festival there, January 30. The meeting resolved itself into a four-hour conference over green fruit shipping and produced chiefly two recommendations, that enforcement of restrictions be transferred from the commissioner of agriculture to a new board created for this purpose and that a greater juice content be required of fruit for shipment.

Unless the growers, or a preponderant organized majority of them are determined to prevent the shipment of unfit fruit, a change of administration of regulations will have little effect. Enough green fruit will slip through to do the dirty work just so long as the growers themselves are not running for offenders. Doubtless the commissioner of agriculture would welcome the opportunity to escape this job and pass the buck, but the whole question resolves itself into one of grower control. The law, which spokesmen of the industry helped to draft, may be improved; it should be as strong as possible. Another board, however, will be useless unless it has unified support of growers in enforcing the law with firm, impartial hands. If another board will promote this condition, the change of administration may be an expedient one.

The shift from a grower, Citrus Exchange officials say, is only a contributory cause of the disastrous condition of the industry. It is not a cause at all. It is merely one of the disheartening results of failure to achieve co-operative control by growers.—Miami News.

NOW WHAT?

Meeting recently the executive committee of the American Legion decided that it was in favor of the immediate payment of bonus certificates to veterans of the most recent war. In view of the action, or rather inaction regarding this subject at the national convention held in Boston, the move on the part of the committee is somewhat surprising to some, perhaps not so surprising to others.

Veterans of the war and legionnaires are somewhat at odds on this subject themselves. Many favor immediate payment, others believe that the money would be such more useful in 1945 when the majority of these certificates are mature. There are, of course, two sides to every subject. Just what immediate payment of this so-called bonus would mean is also a subject that would be rather a speculative one.

Perhaps the veteran's point of view at this time is guided largely by his present financial status. If he has a job, is getting along tolerably well, he will no doubt look with some concern upon immediate payment. If on the other hand he has been thrown out of work through no fault of his own, has for the last several years been struggling against adversity, the farm or may for one cause or another find himself very hard pressed for funds at the present time, he will doubtless acclaim the immediate payment of the certificates with enthusiasm.

All of which is not here nor there so far as the executive committee of the American Legion is concerned. We have also understood that the Legion was conceived and dedicated to keep out of politics. And its most recent action, or that of its executive committee, is getting dangerously near political pastures.—Plant City Courier.

WILL FLORIDA RETRENCH?

In a few weeks the state legislature will convene in Tallahassee. With that convention of representatives will be many new members who have made certain promises to their constituency. Will they keep their promises? Politicians so seldom do that it is hardly to be expected that they will.

The appeal will come in from every district; pressure will be brought to bear to get through legislation for this county and that, and in all probability, instead of consolidating boards, more new boards will be established, and new salaries fixed. That has been the record of practically every legislative body in Florida for the past 20 years.

In spite of all this, North Carolina offers us a good example, which we will do well to follow. Governor Gardner has proposed a ten percent cut in the salaries of all state officials; not only that, he has suggested as his program, a cut in the budget of about twenty percent, covering the biennium term. He would reduce the cost of operation to about seventeen one-fourth millions of dollars.

If the state of North Carolina can accomplish this feat and still maintain the necessary departments for the progressive conduct of the state's affairs, in the interest of the taxpayers of that state, Florida should be able to accomplish something to relieve the overburdened taxpayers of this state. It has been a long time since Florida has had a legislature that seriously considered economy. Our state has been pretty well occupied in devising ways and means of securing additional revenue through devious methods of taxation. Now let our congressmen try the method of retrenchment for a change. The budget, we believe, will stand the lopping off of several millions of dollars per annum.

It is time now to have a little mercy on the taxpayers.—St. Petersburg News.

OUR MARVELOUS TRAVERTINE DEPOSIT.

New Port Richey has one of the finest deposits of marble rock to be found anywhere in the United States, which is fully borne out by geological surveys by the U. S. Geological bureau at Washington, and the special geologist of the Sea Board Air Line railway company. This marble, which is of a beautiful, light colored color, underlies the entire property of Ralph Werner and adjacent lands, and is easily accessible for quarrying. All it needs is to be taken over by some firm with sufficient capital to market it. The Seaboard railway officials are ready to co-operate fully with anyone, or a stock company, for that matter, who will start working this unusual deposit.

Complete geologist reports and analysis can be had from the Press office by anyone genuinely interested in the possible development of the enterprise.—New Port Richey Press.

Fish-eyed Andy Mellon, boss of the U. S. treasury and the boss of Herbert Hoover and most of the rest of the republican administration, can't see the veterans' side of paying the adjusted compensation certificates in full. He has plenty, and then some, of this world's goods, and, of course, can't understand how it is that thousands of people in this great and glorious country are starving.—Inverness Chronicle.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE

Harris Ellisworth, Editor of The Roseburg (Oregon) News-Review, says:

"The principal trouble with business, (retail business, I mean) as I see it is just this: Merchants need a make just a little harder effort to get business. Let me illustrate with an example which is a definition of three well known words:

"An OPTIMIST is a man who, when he is told the wolf is at the door, refuses to believe a word of it and therefore upon opening his door thus unprepared is promptly gobbled up by the wolf.

"A PESSIMIST, upon learning that the wolf is at the door, believes it is no use to struggle further so he opens the door and gives himself up to the wolf.

"An OPPORTUNIST, however, learns with interest that a wolf is at his door. After studying the situation thoroughly, he hurls the wolf into the house and emerges after a brief interval clad in a new wolf skin coat!

"The record of business failures is filled with the names of business Optimists and business Pessimists. You find few Opportunists there.

"Any business man who owns a business that is really entitled to success, and who has never been started in the first place, can succeed if he will study his field, his market, his merchandise and his customers and then use a sensible amount of newspaper advertising and use it SERIOUSLY.

"Newspaper advertising is a proven force if properly used. Many returns have become disastrous with newspaper advertising because they, themselves, lacked the energy and the applied intelligence to use the newspaper space to make money for them. Use of newspaper space does not require the services of an expert to be successful, but its use does require the application of INTELLIGENCE."

HOOVER is going to make a survey of the farm situation, being an engineer his training requires that a survey must be made. By making the survey, a thorough one, he should get through in time to survey the cemeteries where the farmers are buried.

Fossum Sets Record at Highland Lakes

(By A. DUFFER)
Harold Fossum, the big six foot pro from old Illinois, drove his way to establish a new record at the Highland Lakes golf course last Friday afternoon. He turned in a card of 71 for the round, one under par, and after due consideration and much consultation among the journal devotees of this quaint old Highland Lakes estate it was the opinion of all that 71 was a record for any man to shoot at. It is rumored about that a card of 69 has been turned in but unfortunately for that excellent score none seems to know who is responsible for it or when it happened. So we prefer to take actually rather than hearsay and announce that 71 now stands as the official (and incidentally, attested) record for the Highland Lakes course.

Playing in a foursome with Louanna Thomas of Hotel Highland Lakes as his erstwhile partner, the two defeated Harold Hall, a prominent amateur of New York City and Charlie Norberg, pro at Lake Forest, Illinois 5 and 4, but continued on the remaining holes in the hope that a record would be established.

Fossum's play was featured by his terrific drives and superb second shots, practically every drive flirting with the 250 yard mark, and but few second shots failing to come to rest somewhere on the green. Unfortunately for all of us (as well as for the pros.) the new over-sized pellet must be played in the little cup before scores can be counted and often when we go three or four hundred yards in two strokes and arrive on the green 20 feet from the pin, we find that

The new Ford has more than twenty ball and roller bearings

EVIDENCE of the high quality built into the new Ford is the extensive use of ball and roller bearings. There are more than twenty in all—an unusually large number. Each bearing is adequate in size and carefully selected for the work it has to do.

At some points in the Ford chassis you will find ball bearings. At others, roller bearings are used regardless of their higher cost. The deciding factor is the performance of the car.

The extensive use of ball and roller bearings in the new Ford insures smoother operation, saves gasoline, increases speed and power, gives quicker pick-up, decreases noise, and gives greater reliability and longer life to vital moving parts.

Other outstanding features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Hondaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, the extensive use of fine steel forgings, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

hole by inches. He had to take a five. On number 18, his shot came to rest about four feet from the pin. After deliberation he putted and missed, the ball, this time, rimming the cup and he had to be content with a 71 (who wouldn't).

Fossum already holds the record with a 68 at Pine Crest and at the Lake Placid Open tournament this year, he shot a 78 to win handily from his nearest rival by 4 strokes. Now all he needs is to lower his own course record to such an extent that it will stand inviolate for years and he can return to his home club at Lawsonia, Green Lake, Wisconsin, after hanging up a few records for the boys to shoot at. Just now rounding into mid-season form, he is working hard to lower this fine score (which most of us would gladly take) as many strokes as possible. So beware, Old Man Park, beware!

Grove, Farm and Garden

Chemical Analysis Shows Minerals In a Grapefruit Tree

A 19-year-old grapefruit tree was recently analyzed at the Florida Experiment Station at Gainesville to determine just what mineral or fertilizer elements that tree, with its leaves and immature fruit, contained.

According to Dr. R. M. Barnett, associate chemist at the Florida Experiment Station, the tree, taken from a grove near Dunedin last May, was 17 feet high, and had a spread of over 18 feet. It showed a healthy, deep green color, and contained nearly 1,200 immature fruits when sampling began.

The soil was a well drained semi-sandy type and had a pH reading of close to 5. It had a hard or semi-hard pan to 6 to 8 inches below the surface. Above it was a fine sand with relatively high water retaining capacity. No cultivation was practiced, and fair amounts of organic matter had been supplied to the grove. For the past few years it had been fertilized with a high analysis, concentrated, complete fertilizer, and additional inorganic nitrogen.

After all parts of the tree were weighed, and representative samples analyzed the green weight was 1,200 pounds, containing 600 pounds of dry matter, about 10 pounds of lime, less than a pound of magnesia, about 4 1/2 pounds of nitrogen, 1 1/2 pounds of phosphoric acid, and a little over 5 pounds of potash. According to the best estimates from sample soils, the tree contained over 70,000 pounds. The ratio of nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash in the tree was about 1:0.25:1.25.

An interesting contrast in this analysis was that the older parts of the tree contained 71 percent of the total dry weight, 73 percent of the lime, and 62 percent of the magnesia, while the nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash were about equally divided between these older parts and the more active growing parts.

RURAL COMMON SENSE By Spuds Johnson

WHEN GOLDEN CITRUS FAILS TO BRING GOLD DOLLARS, WHAT THEN?

What profiteth it us if we grow huge crops of farm products which we are unable to market at a profit? Florida's citrus growers find themselves in the predicament of having a large supply of good quality fruit, but, for the most part, only poor to mediocre markets. What is the remedy? That is the question.

The editor of The Progressive Farmer believes that more co-operation would help. He has some pertinent comments which he made recently.

"Reaping the richest harvest of golden fruit in our history, we are taking in turn a mere pittance for it, Florida is at the moment making an almost unparalleled good will contribution to the table and to the health of the nation."

"The crop would undoubtedly be bringing a price somewhat in keeping with the splendid quality of the fruit if Florida growers were in position to market it. Each harvest season for generations has been a season of warfare. Little co-operating groups have cut each other's throats for years. They are still at it and as a result we are buying the choicest oranges ever picked from a tree for a penny apiece at retail."

"The California orange growers organized in a small way some forty-odd years ago. Twenty years ago they started a systematic campaign of advertising that in the meantime has amounted to a total of $12,000,000. Half of this was spent during the past five years. Where a little fruit was handled in the beginning, $100,000,000 worth was handled during the season recently closed, which, by the way, was one of the most successful the California growers have ever had."

"The Citrus Growers' Exchange of California is now handling co-operatively some 78 percent of the state's total crop, and the losses are almost too large to count—11-10,000 of 1 percent this last year. The best record of co-operation Florida has made up to now was the 30 to 40 percent of the crop handled co-operatively last year. The record of the present season may be better. But Florida has a long way to go to reach the 78 percent mark set in the great state of the Golden West."

Butter is defined by an act of Congress as the food product made exclusively from milk or cream or with or without common salt, less than 2 percent additional coloring and containing not less than 80 percent by weight of milk fat.

Seed Treatment Controls Sweet Potato Diseases

Treating seed sweet potatoes with corrosive sublimate is an effective means for preventing several fungus diseases that might give trouble later on, according to Dr. W. B. Tisdale, plant pathologist for the Florida Experiment Station at Gainesville.

Just before bedding, those potatoes that show roots or blight should be discarded. The healthy ones should be disinfected for five to eight minutes in a solution of corrosive sublimate made by dissolving three ounces of the crystal in 24 gallons of water. After 10 bushels have been treated add one-half ounce more of the crystals, shake up to 24 gallons with water and treat 10 more bushels. The solution should then be discarded. He advised bedding the potatoes as soon as they are treated. Corrosive sublimate is a deadly poison and should be handled with care.

Florida Press To Hold Session at Gainesville

The Florida State Press Association will hold its annual meeting at the University of Florida, February 13 and 14, in connection with the first annual Institute of Inter-American Affairs. The editors will follow the Institute program Friday morning and will take up their own program that afternoon and Saturday. A large array of notable speakers is being secured, and a good attendance of the press crowd is anticipated.

The Suvannapress Press Association will hold its quarterly meeting at the same time and place.

Treat track seed with 1:1,000 corrosive sublimate and thus eliminate diseases that are carried on the seed.

February Is Time For Planting Many Flowering Plants

February is the ideal month for planting many beautiful flowering shrubs in Florida, though very little planting can be done in northern states, Major W. L. Floyd, professor of horticulture, Florida College of Agriculture, at Gainesville, recently explained. Our plants are more nearly dormant at this time, transpiration is less, and the injured roots will heal and new ones form in time for the growing season a little later.

Flowering shrubs that he suggested planting now include abelia, buddleia, Callistemon, camellia, clematis, hibiscus, hydrangea, jasmine, oleander, spirea, and viburnum. Roses also fall in the February class.

Among the herbaceous perennials he named were alysium, aspidistra, canna, cinnar, gladiolus, lilies, and tuberose. These are grown from bulbs or rootstocks, and should be planted in well prepared, carefully enriched soil, which is well drained, but of good water holding capacity.

Annual flowering plants have always created much interest, since they can be started easily and will bloom quickly. Many of these are also planted in well prepared, carefully enriched soil, which is well drained, but of good water holding capacity.

The ones he suggested for planting now include ageratum, aster, calliopsis, cosmos, marigold, nasturtium, petunia, phlox, poppy, verbena, and zinnia.

State Will Begin Series of Schools In Dress-Making

A series of dressmaking schools for home demonstration club members will begin the last of January and continue through March, with home demonstration workers at Tallahassee, report. These schools will last for three days in each community, and such problems as pattern alteration, simple trimmings, the use of machine attachments, and the like will be studied. At the end of the school each woman will have made a simple cotton dress for herself.

Similar schools are to be held over the state to study making textiles, curtain draperies, and other home improvement items. The county home demonstration agents, with state workers, and machine specialists will assist with these meetings.

143 Projects Studied at Experiment Station

During 1930 workers at the Florida Experiment Station at Gainesville studied 143 projects, and found the answer to a number of problems that were vexing Florida farmers. Some of the most practical discoveries came from pig feeding, citrus fertilizing, berry growing, tung oil fertilizing, and insect control experiments. During the year 13 bulletins were added to the large list the station now has for free distribution.

Most of the experiments are conducted at the main station at Gainesville, but there are four branch stations and a number of field laboratories scattered over the state.

FARM WOMEN HAVE RECORD DAY CANNING GRAPEFRUIT

President W. A. Fraser to Speak at W. O. W. Meeting in Florida

Head Camp Meeting to Be Held in Clearwater March 9-10; Many to Attend

THE state-wide head camp meeting of the Woodmen of the World of Florida will be held at Clearwater, March 9 and 10, according to an announcement made today by Head Consul C. C. Whittier of Lakeland.

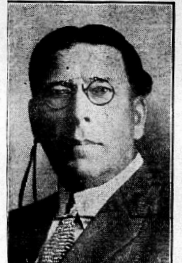

The head camp meetings are held every two years, and according to Head Consul Whittier, delegates and members of their families will journey from all parts of Florida for the meeting this year at Clearwater.

The Woodmen of the World is exceptionally interested in Florida because the national association owns $100,000 worth of Florida municipal, county and state securities.

"The Florida camps this year are fortunate in being able to prevail upon President W. A. Fraser of the association to make the principal address this year," said Mr. Whittier. "Mr. Fraser will make only a few speeches at head camp meetings this year, and he has honored the Woodmen of the World of Florida by including our convention among his dates. We are going to turn out the greatest crowd that has ever confronted President Fraser at a Florida meeting."

Head Consul Whittier stated many new members are being obtained and will be initiated at the time of the head camp meeting in honor of President Fraser's visit.

Mr. Fraser is one of the leading fraternalists of the world. He has had more than 30 years experience in the fraternal insurance field. He has been associated with the Woodmen of the World since 1897. For many years Mr. Fraser has been active in the field of public and community service. During the World War he was connected with the bureau of conservation of natural resources and chairman of the advisory board for the division of military and naval insurance.

W. A. Fraser

Last June 6 the Woodmen of the World celebrated its fortieth birthday.

Climbing steadily the Woodmen of the World now is the strongest fraternal organization in existence, recently being declared 104.6 percent solvent, holding total investments in securities of over $38,000,000, with gross assets amounting to over $102,000,000. The membership of the society is estimated over 500,000. Since its organization in 1890 the Woodmen of the World has paid in death losses and disability benefits more than $20,000,000.

Two of the largest enterprises that have placed the Woodmen of the World in the fore rank of progressive fraternal insurance societies, and made it nationally prominent are the War Memorial Hospital at San Antonio, and Radio Station WOV at Omaha, Nebraska.

At the present time the Woodmen of the World is constructing a $150,000 Chapel and Bird Sanctuary at San Antonio, Texas, on the grounds of the Memorial Hospital.

Be a Modern Mother Hubbard Keep An Emergency Shelf

A modern Mother Hubbard Went to the cupboard For a snack for her guests and herself; And when she got there— For she kept an 'emergency shelf!

Old Mother Hubbard wouldn't have had to disappoint her hungry guests or herself either if she had lived in 1931, and maintained an emergency shelf. The modern housewife has rendered such dismal service as out of date as the shapless garment named for the Mother Goose heroine. On her pantry shelf is arrayed a stock of packed and canned goods which can be quickly turned into a dainty desert or eaten without further preparation. In addition, the clever housewife keeps on hand some baked delights to supplement the menu or provide a "snack" for the party at a moment's notice which is almost a custom nowadays.

If your life-style is in the habit of bringing home friends without your knowledge, or if your circle of friends include "drop-ins," the emergency shelf will come in handy for ingredients to "piece out" the dishes and make them go farther and look prettier.

To make several servings grow where only a few grew before try this: Add shredded coconut to puddings or mix it with canned or fresh fruits to make a cocktail or dessert that looks festive. Canned grapefruit makes an excellent cocktail or combined with lettuce and dressing a delicate salad. Pour flavored corn syrup and nutmeats over the ice cream to make a professional sundae from the ice cream bought at the corner store. Use it, too, to make a sauce to pour over the state cake used for the pudding or to place the carrots, sweet potatoes or other lowly vegetables. Dates stuffed with cheese may be added to the salad servings to make enough to "go round," and the plain dates make an admirable addition to the home baked apple. Canned pimientos are a means of doing out the entire, and are a real life-saver in the preparation of salads and sandwiches. The ready-prepared dessert, with a cornstarch base, are quickly turned into company dishes, and come in a multitude of flavors.

Here are two quickly-made desserts suitable for the emergency meal, using staple ingredients which most households have on hand.

Banana Logs
3 large bananas
3 tps. lemon juice
1 egg white
1/2 cup heavy cream
2/3 cup shredded coconut
1 1/2 tps. powdered sugar

Cut the bananas into four slices crosswise, sprinkle with lemon juice. Stand each section on end in buttered glass or enamel baking dish. Beat egg white until stiff; then beat in the powdered sugar; fold in one-third cup coconut. Place a tablespoonful of the meringue on top each banana. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for 10 to 15 minutes. Remove to a serving plate. Serve with sweetened whipped cream in which the remaining coconut has been folded. Serves six.

Twenty-minute Trifle

2 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/4 tsp. salt
3 tps. cornstarch
1/2 cup raisins
1 cup pitted dates

Scald two cups of milk and add brown sugar and salt. Mix cornstarch with one-half cup cold milk and add to hot milk, stirring until smooth and thick. Add fruit cover and cook thoroughly in double boiler at least twenty minutes. Pour into molds to cool. Serve with cream.

Lace Wafers

(For storage until needed)
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup dark corn syrup
1/2 cup shortening
1 tsp. ginger
1 tsp. soda
1 tsp. salt
4 cups pastry flour or 3 cups bread flour and 1/2 cup cornstarch
1 cup seeded raisins
2 tps. baking powder

Put cooking oil, sugar, syrup, ginger and salt into saucepan together. Stir mixture until it boils; then boil five minutes. Pour into bowl and stir in flour, soda and baking powder sifted together until just stiff enough to drop from spoon. Add raisins and drop by spoonfuls on oiled baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees F., eight to ten minutes. Store in tin box.

The Florida Experiment Station at Gainesville has a farm inventory form with helpful suggestions for taking the inventory, and will send a free copy to any Florida farmer. The first of the year is the best time for most inventories. An inventory will show where the business stands, furnish a list of the property, and serve as a credit statement.

Snoop's Little Joke

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

FOR FEBRUARY 8, 1931.

SUBJECT: Jesus the World's Teacher.

Golden Text: "As you would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." Luke 6:31.

LESSON TEXT: Luke 6:27-42.

Jesus and his disciples, on the Sabbath, "Plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands." The Pharisees could not object to eating the grain, for the Law (Deut. 23:25) so permitted; but they said the rubbing of the grain was labor which should not be done on the Sabbath. "And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath." Then Jesus spoke to the man with the withered hand and healed him. Merely speaking was not labor, and the Pharisees could not accuse him of breaking the Sabbath, but "were filled with madness" against Jesus.

He "went out into the mountain to pray." * * * he called unto him his disciples * * * chose twelve, whom also he named apostles. In the presence of his disciples and a great multitude who came to be healed he taught them in what is called "The sermon on the Plain." One book says, "Luke's sermon is much shorter than Matthew's twenty nine verses against one hundred and eleven. A more important difference is the fact that in Matthew the Beatitudes are spiritualized, while in Luke they deal with simple material conditions, and Luke omits the Beatitudes for the meek, the merciful, the pure in heart, the peace-makers." * * * Beatitudes most in harmony with his Gospel. On the whole, the two sermons * * * on the plain and on the mount * * * may be regarded either as reports of different discourses or as different versions of the same discourse."

After pronouncing certain blessings and woes Jesus began our today's lesson "Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you. Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you. And unto him that smiteth you on the one cheek offer also the other." These are sometimes called "The impossible Commandments." To most of us they do seem impossible, and certainly we do not fulfill them. One writer says they are hard even "to the point of Gethsemane and crucifixion." We can only try and pray that God help us to do his will. We may be encouraged by the statement that a real desire to be able to keep those commandments is real conversion, for "every one that loveth is born of God." Another writer says, "There are many points in our Lord's teachings of which we may say that the 'letter killeth,' but even that does not mean that such commandments are to be disregarded, nor held of little value. Then follows the Golden Rule, 'As you would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.'"

Of that rule Jesus said, "For this is the law and the prophets. Of the Golden Rule it is said 'The Golden Rule requires the putting of oneself in the other's place.' The physician should do for his patient what he would have done to himself were he in that patient's place; the employer should treat his employee as he himself would want to be treated were he in the employee's place." * * * It requires thought, the effort of putting oneself in that other's place to find out what would be best for that other one."

In verses 32-35 of the lesson Jesus compares this Golden Rule with some of the usual ways of loving, doing good, lending, and asks, "What thank have ye? for sinners do also even the same. One may be honest, deal fairly and justly and be accommodating, and yet not be within the acceptable Christian rule. About seven centuries ago a preacher said, 'Now, we find some men whose love is like a very broad vessel; that is, they can meditate a great deal upon our Lord and with great desire and fervor, but they are hardly two inches deep.' Jesus gave another command, 'Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.' On this command the following comment is reasonable, 'We are not forbidden to form opinions of others * * * the employer of his employees before he places important interests in their hands. The citizen must decide on the merits of candidates before he picks votes. What is forbidden is * * * picking flaws, seeking out the bad in men in preference to the good.' We should not unjustly condemn for the sake of condemning."

"Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye?" Habitual fault finding with others is a dangerous fault within ourselves. Most of us cannot overcome such fault by our own strength. Accepting and following the spirit of Jesus is the one great remedy for such habit.

COVINGTON REPORTS PROGRESS ON CEMETERY

98 Palms Are Set Out and More Needed For Beauti- fication of Cemetery

Expressing appreciation to the public and press for assisting in soliciting funds for palms for beautification of the cemetery, M. E. Covington writes the following:

"In behalf of the Avon Park Cemetery association we wish to thank the public and press for its most liberal support in soliciting funds with which to purchase palms in order that we might beautify the cemetery.

"For your information I say that up to this writing we have planted 98 palms that average about six feet tall and today we put in over three hundred feet of galvanized iron pipe and nine new faucets. Water now may be had in almost any part of the old cemetery.

"We are most anxious for about forty more palms which will complete our present program. If you contemplate helping us in this enterprise please do so at once. These palms are very beautiful. At the beginning of our drive we had quite a few people who were practically all paid. Again thanking the public for its confidence. Avon Park Cemetery Association

CITRUS TOUR PLANNED FOR ALL DAY FRIDAY

To Study Cutting of Costs In Relation To Fertiliza- tion of Groves

As decided at the meeting of citrus growers at the court house a week ago Friday, a tour of a number of the citrus groves of the county will be held today under the auspices of the county agent, Louis Almsver. The main idea behind the tour is to learn how costs can be cut, especially in relation to fertilizing and the value of the fruit. In connection with this tour, the county agent has sent out the following letter:

Dear friend:

The returns which many citrus growers are reporting from the use of their fruit have been very good and very close to below the cost of production. This causes many of them to say that they will have to lower their cost of production, produce a higher quality of fruit and get more of the dollar that the consumer pays for the fruit. The first two can perhaps be controlled by the grower, but the last, at least, is beyond his control. At least, growers are reporting a big decrease in cost of production and a much higher quality fruit. Their fruit topped the Chicago, New York, and Philadelphia auction markets and selling higher than Indian River brands.

If you are interested in changing your grove more on the profit side of the ledger, you will want to attend the demonstration tour on Friday, Feb. 6th. We will start from the City Hall at Lake Placid at 9:30 and have the following schedule:

9:35—Lake Placid Land company grove, Albert DeVane, manager.
10:10—Lake Childs grove, Albert DeVane, manager, O. F. Gardner, president.
10:45—Dr. Patterson grove, Hicoria.
11:00—W. D. Hope grove, Hicoria.

11:45—Col. F. N. F. Bailey's grove, DeSoto City.
1:30—A. L. Butler grove, west side of Dinner Lake.
2:00—S. V. Hart & Son, Lakemont, west side of state road, eight miles.
3:15—O. B. Alvarez grove, Lakemont, north of Air field.

Will visit other groves if time permits and then all interested go through citrus cut fertilizer plant at Frostproof.

Prof. E. F. DeBask, extension citrus specialist of the University will be here with us to assist in conducting the tour. At each stop the above growers will tell you how they produced the fruit and methods they used in that grove. You will then be able to judge the rea more desolate and dismal spectacle than a neglected grove of any size. All day long the rows and the struggling, stunted trees being smothered by the Spanish moss tangled in their limbs, and the tattered sign is all too frequent. Perhaps this neglect is the answer to the present problem of over-production.

There is a great diversity in citrus fruit groves in Florida, just as there is in deciduous fruit orchards in Michigan and either, neglected, is equally a disgrace to the owner and a distress to the observer. In Florida there is a practice of individual ownership of small-acreage parcels in a combined large block. A grove comprising 100 acres or more may be owned by any number of persons, each having a small individual unit, say five or ten acres, of the larger block. The whole grove may be worked by some person or company, as is common, for all of the owners. Or a portion of the owners may work their own unit and pick their own fruit with varying degrees of efficiency. But it is likely that among so many there will be several who neglect their holdings entirely. And these are a veritable abomination in the sight of every admirer of good horticultural practice, either in orchards or groves.

The owners of these small groves are very likely to be northerners, who have at some time, invested in grove settings, with the idea that they could later spend pleasant and profitable winters, merely picking from their trees with varying degrees of efficiency. But it is likely that among so many there will be several who neglect their holdings entirely. And these are a veritable abomination in the sight of every admirer of good horticultural practice, either in orchards or groves.
