Garner's notification of his selection for vice-president cost only a three cent stamp. Still they might have been really economical and sent him a post card.

Whether the tomato is a vegetable or a fruit has long been a disputed point, but the Department of Agriculture has officially decided that the tomato is a vegetable. But it is better than some fruits, at that.

California's oranges, on the Florida market this summer for the first time in 17 years, are reported as selling very slowly. Floridians know good oranges and prefer to wait two or three months for the genuine article.

The erudite Clermont Press points out that the word postoffice is derived from the Latin word "positus," meaning placed. There are lots of patriots hoping that through the grace of Mr. Roosevelt they will be "positus" some time after next March 4th.

Editor Gilbert Leach filled a pulpit in Leesburg last Sunday night. Don't know how he came out, but we have heard some able editors try to speak and seen some able preachers try to write, and have concluded that it is best for each to stick to his own job.

We think these taxpayers leagues forming in the state are fine, and doubtless they will be helpful. But they arrive on the scene a bit late. Had they been functioning properly along about 1925 they might have prevented some of those bond issues which are causing present high taxes. We had our dance, and now the piper is asking to be paid.

Press dispatches published a few days ago would give the impression that most of the country has been turned into gardens and truck patches by the unemployed. This back to the land movement is a fine and encouraging thing. Only we hope that the unemployed will have better luck than some amateur gardeners have known. We once grew six radishes at a net cost of $1.50 each.

We've been reading about Liberty county in northwest Florida, and if we could do as we pleased we might go there and stay, at least until the depression had time to disappear. There is no incorporated city or town in the county, no paved roads, no bank, no doctors or lawyers—certainly there can be no bonded indebtedness, and taxes must be nearly nil. But there is an abundance of fish and game, which would much as they did before civilization touched Florida. Can you imagine finding a paradise like that without having to leave the confines of Florida?

We read Garden Club Notes printed in several papers, contributed presumably by lady members of the clubs, and we get many "practical" hints about the cultivation of such things as gypsophila repens, myosotis palustris, juniperus procumbens, iberia sempervivens, and the like. Some day we hope some lady will descend from the high horse from which she delights to display her superior erudition and tell us in plain English how and when to plant so that we might have a few petunias, phlox, zinnias, violets, bachelor buttons, or anything else we have ever heard of. Perhaps these humble but valuable flowers may be mentioned, but we do not recognize them under such high-sounding names.

Prison scandals break out in all parts of the country. In Arkansas a prison guard shot a convict who attempted to escape, and as the victim lay writhing on the ground the guard shot him between the eyes "to put him out of his misery and do him a favor." It seems impossible to get men who will not abuse their power when they are placed in authority over the unfortunate who are carried by the current of life into penal institutions, often through no grave fault of their own. We have made some progress in dealing with offenders against society since the day of the dungeon and the torture chamber, but we have yet some distance to go before we arrive at intelligent and humane policies in handling these unfortunates.

There is a good deal of wonder as to why grapefruit juice, and all other fruit juices, had a tax of two cents per gallon placed upon them, the single exception being the juice of grapes. Perhaps our administration (enthusiastically endorsed by Florida prohibitionists at Orlando) felt loth to interfere with or hamper the noble experiment of wine bricks.

G. O. Lea's plan for eliminating unemployment is not so bad. He proposes that no machinery be used in road building, but that everybody complaining of inability to find a job be handed a pick or shovel and offered $1.25 for ten hours work. Lea says "the unemployed would disperse like the bonus army when they turned the tear gas on."

The Federal government does not make gifts to the states, unless under certain well-defined conditions. It is giving Florida this year $1,692,204, on condition that the state match this amount, dollar for dollar, and build $3,258,408 worth of new roads. As an emergency measure, the Federal government is lending or advancing the $1,692,204 which Florida is supposed to supply this year to accomplish this project. This $1,692,204 will have to be repaid by deductions from Federal aid funds in the future. In effect, Florida will have to spend $1,692,204 from State funds in roadbuilding before she gets any more Federal aid. This to correct what seems to be a popular impression that the whole three and a quarter million dollars made available for road building in Florida is a gift from the Federal government.

The only reason why the people of the state look with any tolerance upon the idea of extensive road building at this time is because some employment may be given to those needing it. It has been published that the State Road Department has set 20 cents an hour as the wage scale for this work. That is little enough, and in no instance ought the compensation to be lower. Yet we note that after considerable agitation upon the part of civic clubs and other agencies "wages have been increased to $1.25 per day" on a portion of State Highway No. 2, under construction in Polk county. What constitutes a day is not stated, but it is said the men work from 10 to 12 hours. The State Highway Department is responsible for such conditions, and it should stand between the greed of contractors and the rights of the laborers, and see that the latter are paid according to the scale adopted.

MORE ABOUT THE LEAGUE FOR INDEPENDENT POLITICAL ACTION.

I was pleased to see on page 7 of the August 5th issue of The Avon Park Times a picture of the leaders of the League for Independent Political Action. This deserves to be talked about.

More and more people are beginning to realize that the old political parties, Democratic as well as Republican, are rotten through and through and that they are doing nothing for the working people. If you think they are, you are being humbugged. Their candidates are both rich men, wholly out of touch with poor people and their problems. Their platforms are so nearly alike that the voters can see no difference between them. Their head men are also well-to-do, and the office-leaders have only one thought, to stay in, or to get in. They want your votes for that one thing only. The high-minded, self-sacrificing men who hold office only for the help they can give the plain people, are all dead—if they ever were any. So this "third party" movement appeals to the jobless, the helpless, the dispossessed.

But the motives of the L. I. P. A. must not be misunderstood. The leaders are not trying to found a new party. There are five or six "third parties" in the United States now; the Socialist party, the largest, which polled nearly a million votes in 1920; the Prohibition party, which is being re-organized for the November election; the Liberal party; the Communist party; the Farmer-Labor party, etc. The aim of the League for Independent Political Action is to consolidate all of these groups outside the old parties into one voting strength. The convention in Cleveland endorsed Norman Thomas, the Socialist party candidate, whose campaign slogan is "Repeal Unemployment." The Socialist party is first, last and always for the working people. Its aim is to right their wrongs, to see that they get a square deal, and to do it by the ballot. Both of the old parties are capitalist minded. The Republicans have fed at the public trough so long that they think they must stay there always. The Democrats have had a few nibbles at it, and find it so good that they are determined to get in this time. The Socialists see all the evils that the capitalist system (supported by both old parties) has brought upon the world and they are urging the working people to stand together—to vote together—in order to do away with this recurring horror of unemployment, crime, bank failures and throttling of industry.

This subject of Independent Political Action is too big to be handled in a few sentences. It needs to be talked about, openly, earnestly and without prejudice. I have a lot of literature on the subject that I will be glad to loan to anybody, and also I will be glad to have an open forum for discussion on the Mall, in my home, or anywhere for please anyone who is interested. Who is? Just let me know.

Sunday School Lesson

FOR AUGUST 14, 1932.

SUBJECT: The Ten Commandments. (Leviticus)

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Lev. 19:18.

LESSON TEXT: Exodus 20:12-21.

TIME AND PLACE: B. C. 1491; Mount Sinai.

Introduction: We must remember that Israel was just now beginning its national life. When Jacob and his children went down into Egypt they were only a large family, and they lived under the provisions of the government of Egypt. By the time they became numerous they were placed under bondage, and whatever laws they had were imposed upon them by the Egyptians. When Israel stood before Sinai, as a free people, they were without a civil, moral, or religious code. Egypt had one. But the codes of those nations were low enough in standard to sanction gross immoralities at the very altars of their temples. The code Israel received was something new. There are not many gods as the Egyptians supposed, but one. The commonly accepted worship of idols was forbidden. Human life is sacred and must not be destroyed. All immorality, then, widely practiced in the name of religion, must be forever forbidden. Coveting, even if it does not result in securing the thing coveted, is contrary to the standard of the new code.

God was its author. This code could not have been devised by the thinking of that generation. It came from a higher source. It bears the earmarks of the eternal that it claims to be, the work of God. That it was intended to be permanent is shown by the fact that God engraved it upon stone tablets (Exod. 31:18).

The first four of the ten commandments were discussed in last Sunday's lesson, and today we have the last six.

The first, "Honor thy Father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." Thou shalt not kill. 7. Thou shalt not commit adultery. 8. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's.

The fifth commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee," is said to form some connection between the law before and relating to God, and those coming after and which relate to our fellow-men. Parents stand in somewhat the same relation to their children that God does to us, therefore, children who honor their parents in the scriptural sense, at the same time honor God. The father and mother stand on an equal footing in this commandment, in sharp contrast to the degraded position assigned to women in heathen religions.

The next three commandments: "Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal," are given in short sharp commands to refrain from gratifying our anger, passions and desires.

The sacredness of life; the integrity and purity of home ties and marriage vow; and the safety of our property and our earnings, largely control the law of peace, trust and comfort of our homes, our community and our state.

Of the ninth commandment: "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor," a writer makes this comment: "This commandment forbids the giving of lying testimony in courts. It is also a law against the sin of slander in private life, the mean insinuations, the crafty elench and shrews, the half-truths that are whole falsehoods, as well as the open slanders. All these are cowardly but often most deadly means of attack, and many a life is blasted by them. Such lies, once started, can never be completely overtaken. They are especially common in heated political campaigns, when candidates and newspapers come as near to libel of men of the opposite party as they dare. Trade competitions and social rivalries also give rise to slanders. There is hardly a more despicable sin than this."

The tenth commandment is, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's."

This commandment involves many teachings of Christ, as "Love thy neighbor as thyself." Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them. When the people saw the lightning and heard the thunder attending the giving of the commandments: "They said unto Moses, Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die. And Moses said unto the people, Fear not: for God is come to prove you, that ye are not."

Fine Films Still Being Offered at the New Circle Theater

Following each other in a succession that would do credit to many of the state, are shown at the "Sebring's Friendly Theatre" announced another assortment of high class photoplays starting with the new picture "Red Headed Woman" featuring Jean Harlow and Chester Morris, and Lewis Stone, Una Merkel and Lila Hyams as others in the cast. This picture is too sophisticated to be enjoyed by juveniles and parents are cautioned about permitting their children to attend its showing.

Sunday and Monday of next week, with Matinee Sunday at 3:30. "Gully as Hell" will be the feature attraction. Despite its title, this picture with Edmund Love and Victor McLaglen is said to be the very clever and a funny mystery drama based on the story "Riddle Me This," which seems to this writer a far better title than "Gully as Hell" but perhaps producers have their own reasons for their meaningless titles, who knows? At any rate, following this come two extraordinarily fine pictures: "Roar of the Dragon" with Richard Dix heading the great cast, for next Tuesday and Wednesday, and "What Price Hollywood?" with Constance Bennett and Lowell Sherman, a marvellous cast, for the last three days of next week. This is, without a doubt, the best thing Connie Bennett has ever done, and it is a picture you will remember for many a day. Just to tell you in advance, what's in store for you at the New Circle, the following week's pictures line up the way: "Attorney for the Defense," "Skyrunner Soak" and "The Devil and the Deep." Who's in the cast? Well, just read next week's item in this paper and you'll get all the information you want. But in the meantime attend the New Circle, for just as often as you can and help Charlie Morrison continue to give us good pictures. He deserves every bit of help you can give him.

Roosevelt Sees Great Victory In November Election

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Gov. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, today predicted a nation-wide sweep for his side in November.

Enthusiastic over the glowing reports of old time Democratic sentiment in the South and border states, Roosevelt said he believed Gov. Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, Roosevelt remarked:

"What Byrd told me confirms reports to such an extent that it seems pretty clear at the present time the drift of political opinion is substantially the same in every State in the Union."

"This is the same drift in Vermont and Massachusetts as you will find in Illinois and Ohio."

The nominee and Byrd, who withdrew in favor of the New York executive in the fight for the Democratic presidential nomination at the national convention in Chicago, had a pleasant two-hour tour porch conference at the executive mansion.

Frank H. Breckinridge and Col. C. Walker, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, were present, the latter to go over party finance plans with Roosevelt.

Byrd minced no words in painting a glowing picture of the Solid South's Democracy. He assured Roosevelt that he would sweep the States below the Mason and Dixon line by more than the normal majorities.

Then he launched into commendation of the Roosevelt agricultural program, asserting that the farm policies of the nominee "have given added strength to the Democratic ticket in all agricultural sections."

The Republican administration's farm rehabilitation he condemned with this statement:

"The efforts of Mr. Hoover to raise prices by artificial buying through the Farm Board failed, as must every effort fail which acts in defiance of the natural laws of the operation of economic laws."

Mowing Machine Is Valuable Permanent Pasture Implement

The mowing machine is a valuable implement in a permanent pasture, state extension workers. "As the mowed grass is eaten when beef cattle should be getting all their feed from pastures and dairy cattle fully 90 percent of the farm cannot afford to let weeds shade out the grass."

With the rainy season here and weeds growing fast, pastures should be mowed regularly enough to keep the weeds down.

New Royal Neighbors Camp. A new camp of the Royal Neighbors of America will be initiated in Avon Park on Thursday evening, August 17th. All members of the camp are invited to attend. The camp is being held at the Sebring Camp, Sebring, are cordially invited to attend the ceremonies.

Farmers' Week In Progress; Over 1,500 Attending

Over 1,500 farmers and farm women, representing every section of the state, are attending the "Farmers' Week" at the University of Florida this week, according to Dr. Wilburn Newell, dean of the College of Agriculture. Monday at 11 o'clock Hon. Nathan Mayo, commissioner of agriculture gave the opening address. A tour of the Experiment Station and College of Agriculture farms followed in the afternoon.

Other speakers for the week include Governor Doyle E. Carlton, representatives from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Florida Citrus Exchange, Florida Clearing House association, practically every specialist with the College of Agriculture, leading farmers, and more. Special sections are being held in citrusiculture, trucking, dairying, poultry raising, livestock and crop production, beekeeping, tung oil and pecan, ornamentals, and forestry. A complete program for women is in progress.

The farm tour Monday afternoon proved to be one of the most helpful features of the week. First, the horticultural grounds were visited where the Experiment Station's modern refrigeration and cold storage plant was inspected. Other points visited were the light intensity experiments with vegetable crops, and the Satsuma, tung oil, and other fruit, and ornamentals test plots. A stop was made at the plant introduction gardens where some 400 plants are being tried. Among the plants that have been introduced through this garden are the velvet bean, Crotalaria, Napier grass, and other new important crops.

Well, just read next week's item in this paper and you'll get all the information you want. But in the meantime attend the New Circle, for just as often as you can and help Charlie Morrison continue to give us good pictures. He deserves every bit of help you can give him.

At the livestock barns the value of purebred bulls on grade cows was demonstrated, the Station's fine foundation ewine herd and the hog feeding experiments were visited. Of particular interest were the experiments with fattening crops and the sanitation system of grazing. The dairy herd of 42 cows was visited. Other points to attract much interest to the farm machinery plant, the farm machinery laboratory, and the greenhouses.

The program will come to a close Friday at noon.

Mayo Offers New Plan For Marketing of Farm Products

A new marketing plan for Florida farmers was advocated by Nathan Mayo, commissioner of agriculture, in an address opening the eleventh annual Farmers' Week program at the University of Florida at Gainesville Monday.

Concentration points for products is the real need of small farmers, Mayo said, adding that he hoped the next legislature would make provisions for establishment of such points.

Under his plan, concentration points would be designated at central locations for 50 to 100 miles apart. Warehouses would be erected and possibly cold storage plants at such points.

The plan would permit assembling of farm products in large quantities where they could be graded and sold.

Heretofore, one of the difficulties confronting buyers, Mayo said, has been to obtain products in large quantities.

With cold storage facilities, a surplus of perishable products could be stored until marketed.

Mayo also outlined the work of his department and expressed belief normal prices for Florida agricultural products would return before those prices in other States.

He said he saw brighter days ahead for the farmers and said they would come largely through their own efforts.

Florida Jersey Makes Good Official Record

To place herself among the State's Jersey, Sophy's Majesty Heiress at the Florida Experiment Station dairy herd has just completed a 365-day Register of Merit record, producing 10,022 pounds of milk and $35.49 pounds of butterfat.

She was milked twice daily and otherwise treated as an ordinary dairy cow, according to Dix Arnold, in charge of the herd. There are now 13 Register of Merit cows in the Station's herd of 34. Seven heifers and four older cows are now on test.

CITRUS INTERESTS SEEK AUTHORITY FOR ADVERTISING

Growers Asked To Support Movement For Fund To Carry Citrus Message To Consumers In North.

Following up the series of meetings held throughout the citrus belt to crystallize sentiment among growers to back an advertising campaign in the northern markets the Tampa Daily Times said Monday.

Authority is asked from growers for collection of a fund, which might aggregate between $400,000 and $500,000, with which to advertise Florida fruit in a questionnaire now going out from the headquarters of the Clearing House Association in Winter Haven.

Agreed upon at a meeting in Jacksonville, a few days ago of the joint committee representing the clearing house, the Citrus Exchange and the outside shippers, the questionnaire purposes an assessment of two cents a box on grapefruit and oranges and of five cents on tangerines, to be deducted from growers' returns by the marketing agencies.

As the directors of Florida Citrus Exchange already have voted to participate in financing the campaign, up to one-half of the total outlay, provided eighty percent of the total citrus volume of the state joins in the undertaking, it is understood the questionnaire will not be mailed to members of this growers' co-operative organization.

Last session the commercial movement of citrus from Florida was between 20,000,000 and 22,000,000 boxes, it is estimated by the statisticians of the industry. This year the output is likely to be somewhat smaller, most of them are said to believe. Weather and other complicating factors render it difficult to obtain dependable figures.

On the basis of a twenty-million production, a two cents a box assessment would yield $400,000. Additional amounts would be yielded by the fact that the proposed tangerine charge is five cents. A maximum of $500,000 is considered high, however, in view of the probability of a smaller crop than last season and of the difficulty in collecting assessments from fruit in bulk, by truck or otherwise.

Two Questions Asked.

Questionnaires sent out by the Clearing House association ask replies to two inquiries, as follows: "1. Are you in favor of the all-state advertising program of Florida oranges, grapefruit and tangerines being sponsored by the Clearing House and the Exchange?"

"2. Do you agree to an advertising assessment on your fruit of two cents a box on oranges, two cents a box on grapefruit, and five cents a box or strap on tangerines, and authorize the deduction of said amounts by the concern through whom you sell your fruit to help defray costs of such advertising?"

An accompanying explanatory statement from the Clearing House advertising committee makes it clear that the contribution of the Citrus Exchange has been assured and that the present endeavor is to enlist the support of growers not affiliated with the co-operative body. Some details as to administration also are outlined in this statement, reading in part:

"The Florida Citrus Exchange has approved the idea of uniting the industry on an advertising program and has made a definite financial commitment, providing that Clearing House members and outside growers and shippers raise an equal amount and also providing the total volume of fruit participating is not less than eighty percent of the total citrus volume of Florida.

"The Clearing House and the Exchange have agreed that the administration of the advertising program be under the direction of a joint committee, two members of which would be selected from the Clearing House, two members from the Exchange and one member from outside shippers, provided the outside growers contribute twenty-five percent of the amount contributed by the two first named organizations.

"The financial commitment of the Exchange is definite and it is now necessary that the independent growers who ship their fruit through or sell to shipper members of the Clearing House, as well as growers outside of both the Exchange and the Clearing House, assure their shippers that they favor the advertising program and authorize the shippers through whom they may market their fruit or to whom they may sell their fruit, to deduct a fund on each box, the money to be applied specifically toward the advertising fund to be administered under this program.

Avon Park Wins From Arcadia In Seesaw Game

Arcadia lost a slugging match here Thursday to the Metros 11-10. The game was one of those up and down hill things, where most everything did happen, including a near riot, as a wrought-up Arcadian batsman attempted to collar Umpire Tom Eades for calling him out on strikes. The scrap was of little consequence, however, as Blind Tom was fully protected by many, protesting and shouting in addition to which he was offered plenty of assistance from the fans on the side lines.

Arcadia took a five-run lead in the first inning, as they pounded on Dilley's offerings for four hits, one a triple by Larriette, and took advantage of a costly outfield error by Dilley to bat in the third, the visitors annexed three more, and it looked like the old ball game for the night. But John Young relieved Dilley, who took left field, and did his bit at bat by making three hits and two runs and batting in four more of the eleven runs.

The Metros, not to be outdone by Arcadia's snappy start, took one of the long lanky McNally for five straight hits, the first one a triple by Hawkins, and the tall boy faded from the picture in favor of "Chicken" Buchans, who was hit freely, but stayed the rest of the game. The locals added three more in the fifth, and taking advantage of the breaks in the seventh tied the game up with four more runs.

Hawkins started the seventh with a single, Bass did likewise, and Dilley took one in the ribs to fill the bases. Pugh hit to Dunwoody at third, who threw wild at the tying run, and Hawkins and Dilley both scored. J. B. Martin hit a hot grounder to Dunwoody and the third baseman let it go between his legs for two more scores.

The Arcadians scored one run in the eighth to give them a one-run margin, which they held but briefly, as the Metros came back in their half of the same inning to score twice, providing the one-run margin which was enough to win. Dilley's double, after Milton had singled and Hawk got on through an error, furnished the necessary punch to put over the tying and winning runs. Roscoe Bass was called to the mound in the eighth to finish the game. He set the Arcadians down in the last inning with three straight outs, two of them strike-outs.

ers outside the Florida Citrus Exchange to determine whether or not you want the industry to advertise Florida oranges, grapefruit and tangerines, and in that event it is necessary that you definitely commit yourself to the program, thereby enabling the shippers who will handle or purchase your fruit to make the necessary financial commitment so that at least eighty percent of Florida's 1932-33 citrus crop may be represented."
