BARKER AGAIN CANDIDATE FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

J. E. Sims and Dr. A. T. Eide Make Announcement for Representative

The political campaign in Highlands county is taking on more life with several announcements this week. W. J. Barker, judge for the nineteenth judicial circuit comprising Highlands, Hardee and DeSoto counties, has formally announced for reappointment to that office. J. E. (Jack) Sims of Lake Placid is seeking re-election as representative in the state legislature and is being opposed by Dr. A. T. Eide, also of Lake Placid, both formally announcing as candidates in the Times this issue.

Judge Barker was appointed to the circuit bench for this judicial district when it was first formed, was nominated for the office in 1928 and reappointed by the governor. He has proved himself one of the outstanding judges of the state and it is not expected that he will have any opposition at this election, none have announced so far.

In making his announcement, Mr. Sims sets forth his platform which will be found in full elsewhere with his announcement. He favors an adjustment of bonded debts based on the ability to pay; a law requiring a uniform system of taxation; economical but adequate provision for schools, with teachers' salaries paid when due; old age pension and workmen's compensation laws.

Dr. Eide in his platform says that public officials are the public servants; that he will uphold the constitution of the United States and the State of Florida; that he will work for questions of public issue; that he will work for an adjustment of the bonded debt according to the wishes of the taxpayers; that he will work for equalizing of assessments; that he will work for an adequate school system with a full term; that he will work for an old age pension law, a workmen's compensation law and a state homestead law. Dr. Eide's platform in full will be found with his political announcement.

The race for commissioner in district one is getting into its stride, five candidates having hurled their derbies into the ring to date with others rumored as wishing to enter. They are: J. L. Wells, S. P. Durrance, Frank (Hot Shot) Armistead, G. A. Harper and M. H. Grice. They are all seeking the office now held by John Hood who has refused to run again.

The race is also warming up in the other districts with candidates for county commissioner. In district 2, Sebring, A. F. Spooner is opposed by A. B. Allen. District three, DeSoto City, has more aspirants, J. H. Twitty having for opponents, L. C. Pearce, Willie Williams and Horace E. Gallaway. At Lake Placid, district four, L. L. Henderson so far has no opposition although it is rumored O. C. Parrish will make the race again. Down at Venus and Hicoria, district five, Ben C. Hope will have opposition in the persons of N. B. Jackson and B. S. Johnson.

Flowers Home Complete Loss By Fire Monday

The house occupied by Charlie Flowers on the corner of Winthrop street and State Road 8 burned to the ground at about one o'clock Monday morning, for a complete loss.

The fire started from a kerosene hot water heater in the kitchen, which Mr. Flowers stated he had lighted earlier in the night. After lighting the heater, he said he laid down and fell asleep. When he awoke, the back part of the house was in flames. Making his way to the armory, he turned in the alarm, but by the time the fire department could get on the scene, the fire had made considerable headway. The nearest fire hydrant was half a mile away, at the West End filling station. Chief W. H. McCarthy reported, and the firemen were helpless to stop the flames.

A few chairs and smaller articles were saved, but otherwise the contents were completely destroyed. Loss on both house and contents was partially covered by insurance.

The house was recently purchased by Flowers from John Hood.

Legion Auxiliary To Have Cake Walk

The members of the American Legion Auxiliary will sponsor a cake walk Saturday night, April 21, in the Mall at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. A. M. Morgan and Mrs. E. E. Melton have charge of the arrangements. The high school band will furnish the music .

Five cents a walk and a cake given away at the end of each walk. Come and try your luck!

County Board Met Tuesday

Again Vote Money To Help Clear Arbuckle Creek Channel

With the promise of FERA labor, the county commissioners at their meeting Tuesday authorized the expenditure of up to $100 for transportation and boat hire to complete the clearing of Arbuckle Creek of logs and hyacinths. The work was nearly completed with relief labor before the CWA was started when the project was dropped.

A committee consisting of J. L. Wells and S. P. Durrance reported to the commissioners Tuesday and said the FERA authorities had promised 12 men for 12 days with which to complete the work. As previously, Mr. Durrance will be in charge of the work and it is understood that when completed the War Department will take over the maintenance of the stream, it being considered navigable water.

Correspondence from State Treasurer W. V. Knott and Attorney General Cary D. Landis indicated that the county can operate under the Kanner bill with regard to district bonds. The question arose regarding bonds for district five which are payable by Highlands, Hardee and Glades counties. After some discussion the board decided not to take any action at this time.

As news dispatches indicated the removal of FERA assistant administrators in counties, including Highlands, the board passed a resolution asking that C. D. Jenkins be retained here in that position. Mr. Jenkins recently came from Miami and was named county assistant administrator and has indicated his desire to co-operate with all county officials in relief work.

"Snow" Dyess Found Guilty

Circuit Court Closes Criminal Docket for Spring Term

The criminal docket for this term of circuit court is practically exhausted, with no sensational cases being tried. The case of B. W. "Snow" Dyess attracted the most attention.

Dyess was charged with breaking into the Standard Oil service station at Lake Placid and stealing a number of automobile tires. The trial resulted in his conviction and he will probably be sentenced at the close of the term.

The case of Will Franklin, negro, charged with the murder of another negro resulted in a mistrial and John Woods another negro charged with assault with intent to commit murder, was found not guilty by a jury.

A Lake Placid negro was convicted on a charge of robbery, having held up Ivey Futch, taking a small sum of money from him last spring.

J. D. Thomas charged with aggravated assault, was acquitted by a jury. He is alleged to have assaulted his nephew, Leon Thomas, with a knife.

E. J. Etheredge, who was indicted several months ago on a charge of embezzlement and conversion of funds, in connection with the closing of The Highlands County Bank, and has been unable to get a hearing because of the inability of J. C. Adkins, special prosecutor, to come here to prosecute the case, has at last succeeded in getting his case set for trial. The case is scheduled to be tried July 5th.

Avon Park Student Honored at Stetson

DeLAND, Apr. 16—Stephen C. Pardee, son of S. C. Pardee of Avon Park, has just been initiated into David J. Brewer chapter, Phi Alpha Delta, legal fraternity at John B. Stetson University, where he is a student in the law college.

FORMATION OF AMATEUR BASE BALL LEAGUE

Four Clubs Join League; Schedule to Start Sunday, May 6th

The formation of an amateur baseball league was completed at a meeting of baseball representatives in Bartow Thursday night, and four clubs are definitely in the league. They are Avon Park, Frostproof, Wauchula and Bartow and these four teams will comprise the amateur league, whether or not any other teams come in. However, it is the hope of the baseball moguls to add at least two other teams to the league to make a six-team league in all. Accordingly, invitations have been sent out to six other nearby clubs and out of the six it is expected that two other clubs will join.

The amateur league officials decided upon a thirty-game schedule to start Sunday, May 6. Schedules are being prepared for a four and a six-team league, with two games a week, Thursdays and Sundays.

A $20 forfeit deposit for each team has been agreed upon. All teams will be composed strictly of amateur players, and any player in order to be eligible, must have resided in the town on whose club he intends to play 30 days prior to the opening of the schedule.

May Combine Leagues

Another possibility that is being considered is the combination of the newly formed amateur league with the old Orange Belt circuit, in which event there will likely be eight teams in the league. A meeting of managers of the two groups of teams has been called for Monday night at Wauchula to discuss the possibilities of combining.

The Bartow meeting was attended by Manager Jimmie Spencer, Frank Armistead and E. Spencer.

Register by May 1; Pay Polls by May 19 To Vote in Primary

May first is the last day to register for the Democratic primary to be held June 5th. May 19th is the last day to pay poll taxes in order to qualify to vote.

There will be two primary elections. The first will be held on June 5th, and the second primary will be held on June 26.

Polls will open at eight o'clock and remain open until sundown.

Registration books will remain open at the court house until the night of May 1st.

In order to vote this year, it will be necessary to have paid 1932 and 1933 poll taxes, unless exempt under the law.

Those exempt from the payment of poll taxes are:

War veterans who were disabled in the army or navy service, war veterans who have lost a limb and members of the National Guard. Such disabled veterans must appear before the supervisor of registration at the court house to have such exemptions noted.

Persons who became 21 years old in 1932 will have to pay 1933 poll tax and those who became 21 in 1933 or 1934 will not have to pay poll tax this year.

Persons who became 55 years old before January 1, 1932 will not have to pay poll tax.

Persons who became 55 in 1932 will have to pay 1932 tax only.

Persons who became 55 in 1933 or 1934 will have to pay 1932 and 1933 tax.

Elect Delegates to Dist. Conference American Legion

Commander R. T. Fairey and W. M. Hetherington were elected delegates and John Hood and Paul Jones alternates by Highlands post Wednesday night to attend the sixth district conference of the American Legion in Wauchula, Sunday, April 29. The nomination of a district vice-commander and district executive committeemen will be made at the Wauchula meeting, these selections to be placed in nomination at the state convention in Gainesville in June. Highlands post has been encouraged to sponsor one of its members for vice commander, and it is likely that such a nomination will be made.

May 11 Last Day For Candidates to File for Primary

Under the Florida law, the oath and filing fee for candidates who expect to qualify for the Democratic primaries must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court not less than 25 days before the first primary. Midnight, May 11 is the latest day for filing.

After entering the race, and in order to stay in the race, the law provides that three separate statements of campaign expense must be filed by each candidate.

The first itemized campaign expense statement must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court not more than 30 nor less than 25 days before the primary. May 11, 1934, is the last day for filing this statement.

The second itemized campaign statement must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court not before May 24th, 1934 and not later than May 28, 1934.

The third itemized campaign expense statement must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court not later than July 6, 1934.

To Hold Camp At Lake Byrd

Episcopal Church to Sponsor Three Camps Here This Year

With a more extensive program than last year, the Episcopal diocese of South Florida will sponsor three summer camps for young people at Lake Byrd lodge, each for periods of two weeks, Morton O. Nace, business manager of Tampa, announced this week.

Mr. Nace received announcements of dates, costs and staffs of the camps, from the Rt. Rev. John D. Wing, D. D., bishop of the diocese and chairman of the camps. A camp for younger girls will be provided this summer in addition to the two camps usually held.

The first session will be that of Camp Perry, for boys, starting Thursday, June 14, and continuing for two weeks. Mr. Nace will be director, and assistant directors will be the Rev. H. Irving Louttit, West Palm Beach, the Rev. Martin Bram, Sanford, and the Rev. William Hargrave, Cocoa. Counsellors will be Bill Morrison, West Palm Beach, Harry Black, St. Petersburg, and Ned Doherty, Miami.

Camp Wingmann, for boys, girls and adults from 14 to 25 years of age, will start Thursday, June 28, ending Thursday, July 12. Mr. Louttit will be director, assisted by Mr. Bram, Mr. Hargrave, the Rev. W. F. Moses, Lakeland; the Rev. M. F. Williams, Gainesville; Miss Alcesta and Miss Annis Tulane, St. Petersburg; Mr. Nace, Miss Betty Evans, Orlando, and William Morrison, West Palm Beach.

Camp St. Mary, for girls from 10 to 15 years of age, will start July 12 for a two-weeks' session. Miss Alcesta Tulane will be director, assisted by Miss Annis Tulane, the Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Bache, Fort Lauderdale; Mrs. Nace, Miss Hattie Hall, St. Petersburg, and Miss Kathryn Morrison, Sanford.

These diocesan camps, providing a two-weeks' vacation under church leadership for young people, are not confined to members of the sponsoring church, although all camps are managed and operated by and for the church.

Francis Spoke at Rotary Meeting Wednesday Noon

J. S. Francis, proprietor of the Avon Park Coca Cola Bottling Co. give a history of the soft drink business at the Rotary Club luncheon at the Jacaranda Hotel Wednesday noon. In his talk Mr. Francis delved into history and told how carbonated beverages originated, being first used in a medicinal way and water from natural carbonated springs used. He showed how the business had increased by leaps and bounds until at the present time it runs into millions of dollars a year.

George Hayes, assistant scout master, spoke briefly on the work he is doing with the Boy Scouts here.

Visitors at the luncheon were: L. M. Witherall of Taunton, Mass.; M. A. Crosby of Atlanta, Ga.; Major Ed. Keenan of Frostproof and Max Williams of Avon Park.

RIDGE BOOSTERS HELD MEETING AT FROSTPROOF

Over 100 Members of Booster Organization Attend Membership Meeting

The membership meeting of the Scenic Highlanders held at Frostproof Tuesday evening was well attended, over 100 representative citizens representing communities from Haines City to Moore Haven being present.

Although the organization takes in only the 14 towns along the Ridge between Haines City and Hicoria, the activities of the organization directed toward the early completion of the proposed Federal Highway from Leesburg to Miami, along the present route of road eight through the Ridge and down the west coast of Lake Okeechobee to Miami, has attracted the attention of public spirited citizens of Miami and the Okeechobee Lake region.

Speaking of the prospects of the completion of the road L. H. Kramer, chairman of the meeting, said the main job of the organization would be to get a 200-foot right-of-way over the proposed route. Work on this will start as soon as the survey is completed which will be within the next two weeks, Mr. Kramer stated. He read a letter from C. B. Trendway, chairman of the State Road Department, which stated the department was ready to start the survey as soon as the aerial survey map is completed which will probably be next week.

C. D. Gunn of Haines City, chairman of the membership committee reported that over 350 members have been obtained in the communities along the Ridge, some of the communities getting above their quota. Avon Park lacks 39 members to fill its quota. The members obtained in the different communities is as follows:

Haines City, 52; Lake Hamilton, 22; Dundee, 1; Lake of the Hills, 20; Lake Wales, 59; Babson Park, 22; Frostproof, 49; Avon Park, 36; Sebring, 53; DeSoto City, 5; and Lake Placid, 35.

Several members spoke on the desirability of getting every citizen along the Ridge to join the organization and Chairman Kramer stressed the point that it is not an exclusive organization, stating that all that is required of a candidate for membership was an interest in the growth of his community and this section of the state and one dollar.

No organized campaign for membership has as yet been started, practically all of the members thus far have come in without special solicitation.

The committee appointed to draw up a budget on the expense of providing a special five day exhibit for the Scenic Highlands at the Century of Progress this year at Chicago and other expenses necessary to follow up inquiries about the Ridge section, reported a tentative budget of $2,500 which was adopted.

This budget is to provide the five day show, a representative to stay in the Florida booth for 90 days, 75,000 pieces of printed matter and extra help in the booth during the special five day exhibit. The necessary money is to be raised in the various communities along the Ridge on a quoto basis according to population, Avon Park's quota being $375.

It was pointed out by one speaker that several communities along the Ridge had lost more than $2,500 during the last season because this section was not represented at the fair and a proper "follow-up" of inquiries made.

Representative Joe Peoples, of Glades county was present and assured the Highlanders of the cooperation of the people of his county in their efforts to obtain the completion of the Federal highway.

I. E. Scott, Tax Assessor of Glades county, was also present and assured the Highlanders of the support of Glades county.

It was stated that the road department meeting scheduled to be held in May at Sebring will probably be about the 16th of that month.

Among the citizens from Highlands county attending the meeting were Dr. W. A. Davidson and W. T. Coates, Avon Park; A. F. Spooner Ray Greene, Geo. E. Sebring; C. F. Saunders, Ray Paschall, A. C. Altvater, Fred S. Jones, E. W. Gallaher, L. H. Alsmeyer, Selwyn Ives, Miss Frede Broking and N. A. Broking of Sebring; E. J. Etheredge of DeSoto City; J. E. Sims and Jack Taylor of Lake Placid.

Chickens Killed By Hail Sunday

Hail fell in this section Sunday, and though of short duration, was of severe intensity in some spots. Alfred Englemann reported stones fell as large as hen eggs at his poultry farm on the Rex Beach property east of town and killed four grown chickens that were caught out in the open. A small amount of hail fell over town, but no appreciable damage has been reported.

Carson Keeps His Promise

Court Decision Enables Clerk To Redeem His Pledge To Voters

W. Z. Carson, Clerk of Circuit Court of Highlands county is one public official who believes in making good his campaign promises. During the campaign in 1932 he promised to reduce recording fees if elected. A recent court decision finally settled the dispute as to the legality of his election with the result that he is at last able to keep his campaign pledge.

The following letter which is self explanatory was received by this paper Tuesday morning of this week:

April 16, 1934.

Avon Park Times,
Avon Park, Florida.

Gentlemen: — One of my campaign pledges was, if elected Clerk of the Circuit Court I would reduce recording fees in Highlands county to correspond with fees charged in adjoining counties. Until officially declared Clerk I was unable to make this reduction. Had Mr. Farmer been declared Clerk he would have been entitled to the fees collected by me, and I responsible for them.

The Supreme Court of Florida ruled on April 4th that I was the legally elected Clerk of the Circuit Court of Highlands county. The Mandate has not come down from the Supreme Court yet, but I am expecting it most any day. Therefore, beginning Monday, April 16th, all papers recorded in the Clerk's Office will be reduced forty-five cents which I am sure will be in line with fees charged by Clerks in adjoining counties.

Yours very truly,
W. Z. CARSON,
Clerk Circuit Court,
Highlands County.

Gives Report City Finance

City Shows Receipts and Disbursements for Past Six Months

The financial report of the city for the past six months was presented to the council by City Clerk Francis Shockley at the meeting Tuesday night. It showed total collections for the period of $55,465.71 and expenditures of $47,397.05. With a balance on hand at the beginning of the period of $1,946.46, there is now a total balance of $10,015.12 of which the great part is pledged for bonds, leaving a small amount for operating expenses. The amount ear-marked for bonds is $8,794.15 and cannot be used for any other purpose.

The total cash received during the six months period was $28,372.87 which was made up as follows:

1933 taxes	$24,005.43
Delinquent taxes	2,473.49
Fines and forfeiture	325.00
Licenses	1,476.70
Miscellaneous revenue	92.25
	$28,372.87

Other receipts were in bonds taken in on current and delinquent taxes.

A large number of old notes and accounts have been paid during the period, the city clerk reports and the operating expenses have been kept below the budget requirements.

Important Meeting Chamber Commerce

There will be an important meeting of the chamber of commerce Monday night, April 23 at 7:30 o'clock. The meeting will not be long, but there are two or three items of importance so every member should be present.

DR. W. A. DAVISON, Pres.

QUARANTINE OF DISEASES HERE TO BE ENFORCED

Dogs to Be Innoculated and Tagged — or Else Impounded

A variety of matters pertaining to the public weal occupied the attention of the city council at a protracted meeting Tuesday night.

Dr. George Scott McKnight, city health officer, brought up the need of quarantine of infectious and contagious diseases. Dogs had attention paid them when the question of licensing and innoculation was broached and all dogs will be required to be licensed and carry a metal tag as soon as arrangements can be made for the work. The collection of delinquent insurance company licenses was also aired as well as various traffic hazards.

Dr. McKnight said he had received complaints regarding children being allowed on the streets while suffering from measles, whooping cough and chicken pox. He stated no cooperation could be had from the state board of health and suggested a quarantine ordinance. He further stated it is an erroneous idea that children have to have these diseases and that a doctor is called in only in about 10 percent of such cases.

The ordinance book was consulted and an ordinance found which gives the city health officer full power to enforce quarantine and levying a stiff penalty for non-compliance or evasion. Anyone knowing of a case of any disease is asked to communicate with Dr. McKnight.

City Clerk Francis Shockley stated he had been in communication with several veterinarians regarding innoculating dogs and the best proposition came from Dr. Boyce of Sebring. It is proposed that innoculation, license and tag will cost $1.00 per dog and full particulars will be advertised as soon as the necessary arrangements are made.

Police Chief Bob Still was given authority to build a dog pound and take up all doge running at large and charge the owners an impounding fee.

Councilman Hall was in receipt of a letter from the City of Lakeland regarding their contract for the collection of delinquent insurance company licenses and which it is proposed to put into effect here. This brought forth the statement that many insurance companies are operating here without a license and the police chief was authorized to look up agents for such companies and see that they get licenses.

Col. Charles R. Head told the council about the expenses incurred in getting the ball park in condition for the Columbus Red Birds and suggested that now everything at the park is in such good shape it should be taken care of.

Mrs. M. E. Covington and Mrs. M. V. Pilcher told the council that the FERA is now only furnishing labor on projects and asked as to the city furnishing material with especial reference to the playground project. They were asked to submit data as to the necessary material and cost.

Orders were issued to rope off the street north of the school buildings during school hours and the installation of a flashing red light at the cross roads at Slaughter's filling station was approved.

The committee named to investigate the scout house property reported what was left of the building had been sold to Bob Palmer for $20. The city clerk submitted a financial report for the past six months which was approved.

Attend Spanish War Vets Meeting

Col. and Mrs. C. R. Head and Col. Head's sister, Mrs. Ida Butler were in Zephyrhills Sunday attending the West Coast Council of the United Spanish War Veterans, of which Col. Head is president. The meeting had the largest attendance in its history, 160 members and their ladies attending.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hauptman also attended from Avon Park, as did Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burch of DeSoto City and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bassage of Sebring.

COLUMBUS TEAM LEFT THIS WEEK AFTER TRAINING

Red Birds Complete Spring Training Schedule With 10 Wins and 6 Losses

The Columbus Red Birds wound up their spring training schedule at Head Field Monday by winning a three-game series from Buffalo, and entraining Wednesday morning over the Atlantic Coast Line for home.

Columbus took all three games from Buffalo, Saturday's contest going to the Birds 8 to 5, Sunday's game resulting in a complete rout 17 to 5, and Monday's game, almost as bad, 18 to 13. Heavy hitting on the part of the Red Birds, three home runs along with the healthy swats, featured the games.

Of the 16 games on their schedule, the Red Birds won 10 and lost 6, for a percentage of .625.

The team is exceptionally well fortified with hitters this year, the team's batting average for the 16 games being .363. Players now with the club hit for an average of .371. Excluding pitchers only one player out of 14 is batting under .300. The nominal leaders are Tom Angley with .750 and Bob Parham with .500, but neither took part in enough games to give their true average.

Averages of the regulars are Terry Moore .471; Billy Myers .433; Ray Blades .429; Johnnie Gooch .429; John Hodapp .421; Stew Martin .385; Nick Cullop .373; Ben O'Dea .353; Mickey Heath .345; Charlie Wilson .333; and Eddie Delker .327.

Futher statistics compiled from the 16 exhibition games show that based upon hits allowed per nine inning game, Joe Ash leads the list with 4.5 hits. He worked only part of one game. The actual leaders are Joe Sims, 24 hits in 24 innings, 9 per game; Ed Greer, 19 hits in 18 innings, 9.5 per game; Bud Teachout, 22 hits in 20 innings, 9.9 per game; Bill Beckman, 18 in 13 innings, 12.4 per game; Ward Cross, 29 in 21 innings, 12.5 per game; Morton Cooper, 4 in 2 innings, 18 per game; Glenn Spencer, 12 in 5 innings, 21.6 per game.

In the 16 games the Birds scored 146 runs to 110 by the opposition, with an average of 9.13 to the game as against 6.88 for the opposition. The Birds outhit the enemy 231 to 167 or 14.4 hits to 10.4 per game. They made 35 errors as against 23 for the opposition, averaging 2.19 per game against 1.44 for the opposition.

Twenty-two players remain with the team and will start the season in Columbus next Tuesday. They are: Catchers Gooch, Angley and O'Dea; Pitchers, Teachout, Ash, Spencer, Greer, Beckman, Sims, Cross and Cooper; Infielders Heath, Hodapp, Wilson, Delker, Myers and Martin; Outfielders Blades, Cullop, Anderson, Moore and Parham.

This list must be trimmed to 18 players, the league limit, by May 10th, when the team will then carry 2 catchers, 7 pitchers, 5 infielders and 4 outfielders.

Alleged Drunken Driver In Jail

Deputy Sheriff Broward Coker was called to the south end of the county Monday to take charge of an alleged drunken driver who is said to have driven his truck into the car of Royce Carlton, a salesman of Arcadia, wrecking the car.

The man who gave his name as Mark Carver and said he was on his way to Citrus Center, after hitting the car drove his truck into a stump, wrecking it, but was not seriously hurt receiving only a few minor cuts about the face. Mr. Carlton was uninjured, it is said.

The accident occured near Hicoria and Deputy Sheriff Whitaker arrested the driver of the truck who is now in jail here and his bond is set at $250.00.

Pronounced "Veen"

Wien is the official name of the capital of Austria, and the word is pronounced "veen." Austrians, unless they are versed in foreign practices, know nothing of Vienna. Therefore the capital of that republic is printed Wien (Vienna). Likewise we find Istanbul (Constantinople) and many others.

CITRUS CONTROL COMMITTEE IS ON WAR PATH

Allege Auction Market Has Been Overloaded With Illegal Fruit

Orlando, April 12.—Members of the Florida Control Committee declared war on "chiselers" at their meeting here on Monday afternoon of this week.

Agricultural Adjustment Administration officials at Washington were asked to procede immediately against violators of the citrus marketing agreement and to prevent future violations.

The officials were specifically requested to "vigorously prosecute the suspected violations heretofore reported by this committee."

The immediate cause for the declaration of war against violators was the fact that "chiselers" were blamed for bringing about recent declines in the citrus market by overloading auctions with "illegal fruit."

The Florida Control Committee, of course, cannot enforce the marketing agreement, that being up to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

C. C. Commander, general manager of the Florida Citrus Exchange, launched the attack on chiseling.

"Had the regulations of the committee been lived up to prices would have been satisfactory," he charged, asserting that more fruit actually has been going to auctions than the committee has authorized. The "private sales" fruit to the same centers, of course, is extra.

Committeemen declared that immediate federal action would put an end to these "chiseling" troubles and that allotments could be handled on a strictly business basis with resulting higher prices.

The allotments to the 10 auction markets for the week of April 12-18 as approved Monday, were the same figures recommended by Secretary O. G. Strauss of the control committee after contacting receivers in the north regarding market conditions. The allotments were reduced over last week, for 130 less cars of oranges and 46 cars of grapefruit were authorized for the seven day period, were 546 cars of oranges and 270 cars of grapefruit.

The motion to adopt the Strauss figures was offered by C. Commander, who declared that "responsibility of violations of these proprates rests with the federal government."

L. C. Edwards, Tampa, favored reducing the allotments on oranges 50 percent, but he was voted down.

Mr. Edwards has led a move at recent meetings to reduce movement of fruit considerably.

Mr. Commander declared that if reductions are made, California will "dump thousands of boxes."

Discussions over the proper amount of fruit for shipment occupied more than an hour.

It was found to be impossible to adopt a general volume prorate (a limit set on the total amount of fruit leaving Florida). Attorney Francis P. Whitehair telephoned AAA officials at Washington during the afternoon to see whether this system could be adopted to deal with marketing problems. Until certain statistical data is amassed, this cannot be done, he was advised.

A move for a "shipping holiday" also lost out in the committee. Harry L. Askew, Lakeland offered a motion calling for a four-day shipping holiday, but he was outvoted.

Other business transacted by the committee included approving a long list of individual allotments to the shippers of Florida for the 10 auction markets.

A committee of three — C. C. Commander, C. A. Stewart and Sen. A. W. Young — was appointed to look into the matter of certain bills presented which it was declared were due for work done by several citrus men in organizing the control set-up last fall. Those were the days which preceded and followed the famous "Lakeland meeting" at which the citrus industry voted for a marketing agreement.

Another motion was passed which ends assessments of one-cent-a-box on shipments of fruit for Europe. Only fruit shipped to Canada and in the U. S. will be taxed hereafter.

Upon motion of W. H. Mouser the committee voted to refund payment which shippers made to the committee from Feb. 1 to 10.

years, and that he was fully behind the President in his efforts to prevent any repetition of such a condition.

He said that he was fully behind the President on the assumption that the President would not be wrong in the advocacy of his measures incident to the full restoration of employment throughout the land.

Peppers Trammell

The speaker touched upon the great disparity existing between Florida and California, the nation's two playgrounds, in the allocation of money from the various emergency funds in the Recovery program. He suggested that the question as to Senator Trammell's party loyalty made him less effective than someone else who held the confidence of the party leaders on the basis of actual performance in party fealty.

He charged that Senator Trammell's record of seventeen years in the Senate proves to be one more or less of failure. He declared Senator Trammell to be a great introducer of bills but woefully lacking in ability to get his bills through in spite of his much vaunted influence through length of service and his committee appointments.

Candidate Pepper assured his audience that he would never be found equivocating, that it will never be said of him that he lacked the courage to take an open position on controversial questions, and that his loyalty to the Democratic party will never be questioned by his conduct in Congress or during campaign years.

More Dividends In First Quarter Than All of 1932

Washington, April 11. — More favorable changes were made in dividends during the first quarter of 1934 than in the first quarter of any other year in the country's history, as revealed in the Forbes table of month-to-month dividend action. During January, February and March of this year dividends were renewed or increased by 466 companies, which is more than half the total of 769 favorable actions in the whole of 1933 and exceeds by 26 the 440 favorable actions taken during all of the year 1932. In March 1934 the number was 148, as contrasted with 29 in 1933; 43 in 1932, and 80 in 1931. In March 1,933 there were 211 unfavorable dividend decisions, while last month there were only 20. For the three months of 1933 the total was 381 and this year only 64. Types of enterprises that acted favorably reflects more spending by Americans for the necessaries of life and comforts of the home.

Trail Blazers Elect Officers

Men Who Made First Trip Over Tamiami Trail Hold Reunion

Ft. Myers, April 11.—(FNS)—Eleven years ago the Tamiami Trail was only a vision, a fantastic dream in the thoughts of many. Doubters claimed it never could or would be built. To arouse public interest and direct attention to the proposition, a group of men with courage and faith, set out to actually blaze a trail through the heart of the Everglades by driving seven motor cars across the glades.

The trip scheduled to be made in three days, required three weeks. Cars mired to the axle in muck. Thick strands of cypress blocked their path. Sturdy axemen chopped their way through, laid corduroy roads, and literally pushed their cars over the treacherous bogs. Food ran out and even the matter of obtaining drinking water became a problem. However, pluck, faith, and determination carried the trail blazers through and the story of conquering "America's last frontier" was heralded on the front pages of newspapers throughout the world.

Behind this little band of pioneers came the builders with modern machinery and equipment. Today a stream of motor cars glide swiftly along a wide velvet highway.

Those men who actually made up the personnel of the original trail blazers decided to form an organization and meet once each year, somewhere along the trail, recount their experiences, keep alive the close fellowship that sprang up, and continue their efforts to advance the interests of the famous Trail and the territory it serves.

The eleventh annual meeting of the original Tamiami Trail Blazers was held last week at Giles Camp, below Ft. Myers. Resolutions were drawn up at this meeting urging the conservation of wild life along the trail and the establishment of landing fields adjacent to it. An appeal was directed to the State Road Department to hasten the widening of several narrow bridges.

Russell Kay of Tampa was elected President of the Trail Blazers for the coming year. George V. Prime, of Sarasota, was chosen first vice president, L. J. Van Duyl, Ft. Myers, second vice-president, and L. A. Whitney, Ft. Myers, secretary-treasurer.

More Outstanding Pictures Booked For New Circle Theatre

Local theatre goers will undoubtedly be glad to learn that Manager Charlie Morrison of the New Circle, "Sebring's Friendly Theatre" has arranged for the showing of some of the finest pictures yet released, during the coming months. Basing his bookings on the thought that his permanent patrons are entitled to just as good pictures as those shown to the winter tourists, Charlie has scheduled the following: Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery in "RipTide"; Spencer Tracy in "The Show Off"; Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter in "Paddy, the Next Best Thing"; Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert in "It Happened One Night"; Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Jean Hersholt and Elizabeth Allan in "Men In White"; Will Rogers in three pictures: "Mr. Skitch" "David Harum" and "Merry Andrew"; Ramon Novarro and Lupe Velez in "Laughing Boy"; Johnny Weismuller and Maureen O'Sullivan in "Tarzan and His Mate"; Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore in "Carolina"; Rudy Vallee, Alice Fay, Jimmy Durante and Geo. White in "Geo. White's Scandals"; Frank Buck's "Wild Cargo"; "Bottoms Up" and "Stand Up and Cheer," said to be the two greatest musicals ever produced; Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone in "Sadie McKee"; Wallace Beery" in "Treasure Island" and also in "Viva Villa" now being shown at the Astor Theatre in New York at $2.00; "Hollywood Party," another outstanding musical; "No Greater Glory," said to be greater than "All Quiet on the Western Front" and, from time to time, other pictures of which announcement will be made later.

From the above list it may be readily realized that Manager Morrison is making every sincere effort to live up to his slogan: "We can't show 'em all, so we show the best."

Law Enforcement Medal To Be Awarded

Tallahassee, April 12.—(FNS)—Chosen from a field of a dozen nominees, H. BARKER AGAIN CANDIDATE FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

J. E. Sims and Dr. A. T. Eide Make Announcement for Representative

The political campaign in Highlands county is taking on more life with several announcements this week. W. J. Barker, judge for the nineteenth judicial circuit comprising Highlands, Hardee and DeSoto counties, has formally announced for reappointment to that office. J. E. (Jack) Sims of Lake Placid is seeking re-election as representative in the state legislature and is being opposed by Dr. A. T. Eide, also of Lake Placid, both formally announcing as candidates in the Times this issue.

Judge Barker was appointed to the circuit bench for this judicial district when it was first formed, was nominated for the office in 1928 and reappointed by the governor. He has proved himself one of the outstanding judges of the state and it is not expected that he will have any opposiion at this election, none have announced so far.

In making his announcement Mr. Sims sets forth his platform which will be found in full elsewhere with his announcement. He favors an adjustment of bonded debts based on the ability to pay; a law requiring a uniform system of taxation; economical but adequate provision for schools, with teachers' salaries paid when due; old age pension and workmen's compensation laws.

Dr. Eide in his platform says that public officials are the public servants; that he will uphold the constitution of the United States and the State of Florida; that he will work for questions of public issue; that he will work for an adjustment of the bonded debt according to the ability of the taxpayers; that he will work for equalizing of assessments; that he will work for an adequate school system with a full term; that he will work for an old age pension law; a workmen's compensation law and a state homestead law. Dr. Eide's platform in full will be found with his political announcement.

The race for commissioner in district one is getting into its stride, five candidates having hurled their derbies into the ring to date with others rumored as wishing to enter. They are: J. L. Wells, S. P. Durrance, Frank (Hot Shot) Armistead, C. A. Harper and M. H. Grice. They are all seeking the office now held by John Hood who has refused to run again.

The race is also warming up in the other districts with candidates for county commissioner. In district 2, Sebring, A. F. Spooner is opposed by A. B. Allen. District three, DeSoto City, has more aspirants, J. H. Twitty having for opponents, L. C. Pearce, Willie Williams and Horace E. Galloway. At Lake Placid, district four, L. L. Henderson so far has no opposition although it is rumored O. C. Parrish will make the race again. Down in Venus and Hicoria, district five, Ben C. Hope will have opposition in the persons of N. B. Jackson and B. S. Johnson.

Flowers Home Complete Loss By Fire Monday

The house occupied by Charlie Flowers on the corner of Winthrop street and State Road 8 burned to the ground at about one o'clock Monday morning, for a complete loss.

The fire started from a kerosene hot water heater in the kitchen, which Mr. Flowers stated he had lighted earlier in the night. After lighting the heater, he said he laid down and fell asleep. When he awoke, the back part of the house was in flames. Making his way to the armory, he turned in the alarm, but by the time the fire department could get on the scene, the fire had made considerable headway. The nearest fire hydrant was half a mile away, at the West End filling station, Chief W. H. McCarley reported, and the firemen were helpless to stop the flames.

A few chairs and smaller articles were saved, but otherwise the contents were completely destroyed. Loss on both house and contents was partially covered by insurance.

The house was recently purchased by Flowers from John Hood.

Legion Auxiliary To Have Cake Walk

The members of the American Legion Auxiliary will sponsor a cake walk Saturday night, April 21, in the Mall at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. A. M. Morgan and Mrs. E. E. Melton have charge of the arrangements. The high school band will furnish the music.

Five cents a walk and a cake given away at the end of each walk. Come and try your luck!

County Board Met Tuesday

With the promise of FERA labor, the county commissioners at their meeting Tuesday authorized the expenditure of up to $100 for transportation and boat hire to complete the clearing of Arbuckle Creek of logs and hyacinths. The work was nearly completed with relief labor before the CWA was started when the project was dropped.

A committee consisting of J. L. Wells and S. P. Durrance reported to the commissioners Tuesday and said the FERA authorities had promised 12 men for 12 days with which to complete the work. As previously, Mr. Durrance will be in charge of the work and it is understood that when completed the War Department will take over the maintenance of the stream, it being considered navigable water.

Correspondence from State Treasurer W. V. Knott and Attorney General Cary D. Landis indicated that the county can operate under the Kanner bill with regard to district bonds. The question arose regarding bonds for district five which are payable by Highlands, Hardee and Glades counties. After some discussion the board decided not to take any action at this time.

As news dispatches indicated the removal of FERA assistant administrators in counties, including Highlands, the board passed a resolution asking that C. D. Jenkins be retained here in that position. Mr. Jenkins recently came from Miami and was named county assistant administrator and has indicated his desire to co-operate with all county officials in relief work.

"Snow" Dyess Found Guilty

Circuit Court Closes Criminal Docket for Spring Term

The criminal docket for this term of circuit court is practically exhausted, with no sensational cases being tried. The case of B. W. "Snow" Dyess attracted the most attention.

Dyess was charged with breaking into the Standard Oil service station at Lake Placid and stealing a number of automobile tires. The trial resulted in his conviction and he will probably be sentenced at the close of the term.

The case of Will Franklin, negro, charged with the murder of another negro resulted in a mistrial and John Woods another negro charged with assault with intent to commit murder, was found not guilty by a jury.

A Lake Placid negro was convicted on a charge of robbery, having held up Ivey Futch, taking a small sum of money from him last spring.

J. D. Thomas charged with aggravated assault, was acquitted by a jury. He is alleged to have assaulted his nephew, Leon Thomas, with a knife.

E. J. Etheredge, who was indicted several months ago on a charge of embezzlement and conversion of funds, in connection with the closing of The Highlands County Bank, and has been unable to get a hearing because of the inability of J. C. Adkins, special prosecutor, to come here to prosecute the case, has at last succeeded in getting his case set for trial. The case is scheduled to be tried July 5th.

FORMATION OF AMATEUR BASE BALL LEAGUE

Four Clubs Join League; Schedule to Start Sunday, May 6th

The formation of an amateur baseball league was completed at a meeting of baseball representatives in Bartow Thursday night, and four clubs are definitely in the league. They are Avon Park, Frostproof, Wauchula and Bartow and those four teams will comprise the amateur league, whether or not any other teams come in. However, it is the hope of the baseball moguls to add at least two other teams to the league to make a six-team league in all. Accordingly, invitations have been sent out to six other nearby clubs and out of the six it is expected that two other clubs will join.

The amateur league officials decided upon a thirty-game schedule to start Sunday, May 6. Schedules are being prepared for a four and a six-team league, with two games a week, Thursdays and Sundays.

A $20 forfeit deposit for each team has been agreed upon. All teams will be composed strictly of amateur players, and any player in order to be eligible, must have resided in the town on whose club he intends to play 30 days prior to the opening of the schedule.

May Combine Leagues

Another possibility that is being considered is the combination of the newly formed amateur league with the old Orange Belt circuit, in which event there will likely be eight teams in the league. A meeting of managers of the two groups of teams has been called for Monday night at Wauchula to discuss the possibilities of combining.

The Bartow meeting was attended by Manager Jimmie Spencer, Frank Armistead and E. Spencer.

Register by May 1; Pay Polls by May 19 To Vote in Primary

May first is the last day to register for the Democratic primary to be held June 5th. May 19th is the last day to pay poll taxes in order to qualify to vote.

There will be two primary elections. The first will be held on June 5th. and the second primary will be held on June 26.

Polls will open at eight o'clock and remain open until sundown.

Registration books will remain open at the court house until the night of May 1st.

In order to vote this year, it will be necessary to have paid 1932 and 1933 poll taxes, unless exempt under the law.

Those exempt from the payment of poll taxes are:

War veterans who were disabled in the army or navy service, war veterans who have lost a limb and members of the National Guard. Such disabled veterans must appear before the supervisor of registration at the court house to have such exemptions noted.

Persons who became 21 years old in 1932 will have to pay 1933 poll tax and those who became 21 in 1933 or 1934 will not have to pay poll tax this year.

Persons who became 55 years old before January 1, 1932 will not have to pay poll tax.

Persons who became 55 in 1932 will have to pay 1932 tax only.

Persons who became 55 in 1933 or 1934 will have to pay 1932 and 1933 tax.

Elect Delegates to Dist. Conference American Legion

Commander R. T. Fairey and W. M. Hetherington were elected delegates and John Hood and Paul Jones alternates by Highlands post Wednesday night to attend the sixth district conference of the American Legion in Wauchula, Sunday, April 29. The nomination of a district vice-commander and district executive committeemen will be made at the Wauchula meeting, these selections to be placed in nomination at the state convention in Gainesville in June. Highlands post has been encouraged to sponsor one of its members for vice commander, and it is likely that such a nomination will be made.

May 11 Last Day For Candidates to File for Primary

Under the Florida law, the oath and filing fee for candidates who expect to qualify for the Democratic primaries must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court not less than 25 days before the first primary. Midnight, May 11 is the latest day for filing.

After entering the race, and in order to stay in the race, the law provides that three separate statements of campaign expense must be filed by each candidate.

The first itemized campaign expense statement must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court not more than 30 nor less than 25 days before the primary. May 11, 1934, is the last day for filing this statement.

The second itemized campaign statement must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court not before May 24th, 1934 and not later than May 28, 1934.

The third itemized campaign expense statement must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court not later than July 6, 1934.

To Hold Camp At Lake Byrd

Episcopal Church to Sponsor Three Camps Here This Year

With a more extensive program than last year, the Episcopal diocese of South Florida will sponsor three summer camps for young people at Lake Byrd lodge, each for periods of two weeks, Morton O. Nace, business manager of Tampa, announced this week.

Mr. Nace received announcements of dates, costs and staffs of the camps, from the Rt. Rev. John D. Wing, D. D., bishop of the diocese and chairman of the camps. A camp for younger girls will be provided this summer in addition to the two camps usually held.

The first session will be that of Camp Perry, for boys, starting Thursday, June 14, and continuing for two weeks. Mr. Nace will be director, and assistant directors will be the Rev. H. Irving Louttit, West Palm Beach, the Rev. Martin Bram, Sanford, and the Rev. William Hargrave, Cocoa. Counsellors will be Bill Morrison, West Palm Beach, Harry Black, St. Petersburg, and Ned Doherty, Miami.

Camp Wingmann, for boys, girls and adults from 14 to 25 years of age, will start Thursday, June 28, ending Thursday, July 12. Mr. Louttit will be director, assisted by Mr. Bram, Mr. Hargrave, the Rev. W. P. Moses, Lakeland; the Rev. M. F. Williams, Gainesville; Miss Alcesta and Miss Annis Tulane, St. Petersburg; Mr. Nace, Miss Betty Evans, Orlando, and William Morrison, West Palm Beach.

Camp St. Mary, for girls from 10 to 15 years of age, will start July 12 for a two-weeks' session. Miss Alcesta Tulane will be director, assisted by Miss Annis Tulane, the Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Bache, Fort Lauderdale; Mrs. Nace, Miss Hattie Hall, St. Petersburg, and Miss Kathryn Morrison, Sanford.

These diocesan camps, providing a two-weeks' vacation under church leadership for young people, are not confined to members of the sponsoring church, although all camps are managed and operated by and for the church.

Francis Spoke at Rotary Meeting Wednesday Noon

J. S. Francis, proprietor of the Avon Park Coca Cola Bottling Co. give a history of the soft drink business at the Rotary Club luncheon at the Jacaranda Hotel Wednesday noon. In his talk Mr. Francis delved into history and told how carbonated beverages originated, being first used in a medicinal way and water from natural carbonated springs used. He showed how the business had increased by leaps and bounds until at the present time it runs into millions of dollars a year.

George Hayes, assistant scout master, spoke briefly on the work he is doing with the Boy Scouts here.

Visitors at the luncheon were: L. M. Witherall of Taunton, Mass.; M. A. Crosby of Atlanta, Ga.; Major Ed. Keenan of Frostproof and Max Williams of Avon Park.

RIDGE BOOSTERS HELD MEETING AT FROSTPROOF

Over 100 Members of Booster Organization Attend Membership Meeting

The membership meeting of the Scenic Highlanders held at Frostproof Tuesday evening was well attended, over 100 representative citizens representing communities from Haines City to Moore Haven being present.

Although the organization takes in only the 14 towns along the Ridge between Haines City and Hicoria, the activities of the organization directed toward the early completion of the proposed Federal Highway from Leesburg to Miami, along the present route of road eight through the Ridge and down the west coast of Lake Okeechobee to Miami, has attracted the attention of public spirited citizens of Miami and the Okeechobee Lake region.

Speaking of the prospects of the completion of the road L. H. Kramer, chairman of the meeting, said the main job of the organization would be to get a right-of-way over the proposed route. Work on this will start as soon as the survey is completed which will be within the next two weeks, Mr. Kramer stated. He read a letter from C. B. Treadway, chairman of the State Road Department, which stated the department was ready to start the survey as soon as the aerial survey map is completed which will probably be next week.

C. D. Gunn of Haines City, chairman of the membership committee reported that over 350 members have been obtained in the communities along the Ridge, some of the communities getting above their quota. Avon Park lacks 39 members to fill its quota. The members obtained in the different communities is as follows:

Haines City, 52; Lake Hamilton, 22; Dundee, 1; Lake of the Hills, 20; Lake Wales, 59; Babson Park, 22; Frostproof, 49; Avon Park, 36; Sebring, 53; DeSoto City, 5; and Lake Placid, 35.

Several members spoke on the desirability of getting every citizen along the Ridge to join the organization and Chairman Kramer stressed the point that it is not an exclusive organization, stating that all that is required of a candidate for membership was an interest in the growth of his community and this section of the state and one dollar.

No organized campaign for membership has as yet been started, practically all of the members thus far have come in without special solicitation.

The committee appointed to draw up a budget on the expense of providing a special five day exhibit for the Scenic Highlands at the Century of Progress this year at Chicago and other expenses necessary to follow up inquiries about the Ridge section, reported a tentative budget of $2,500 which was adopted.

This budget is to provide the five day show, a representative to stay in the Florida booth for 90 days, 75,000 pieces of printed matter and extra help in the booth during the special five day exhibit. The necessary money is to be raised in the various communities along the Ridge on a quota basis according to population, Avon Park's quota being $375.

It was pointed out by one speaker that several communities along the Ridge had lost more than $2,500 during the last season because this section was not represented at the fair and a proper "follow-up" of inquiries made.

Representative Joe Peoples, of Glades county was present and assured the Highlanders of the cooperation of the people of his county in their efforts to obtain the completion of the Federal highway.

I. E. Scott, Tax Assessor of Glades county, was also present and assured the Highlanders of the support of Glades county.

It was stated that the road department meeting scheduled to be held in May at Sebring will probably be about the 16th of that month.

Among the citizens from Highlands county attending the meeting were Dr. W. A. Davidson and W. T. Coates, Avon Park; A. F. Spooner, Ray Greene, Geo. E. Sebring, C. F. Saunders, Ray Paschall, A. C. Altvater, Fred S. Jones, E. W. Gallaher, L. H. Alsmeyer, Selwyn Ives, Miss Frede Broking and N. A. Broking of Sebring; E. J. Etheredge of DeSoto City; J. E. Sims and Jack Taylor of Lake Placid.

Chickens Killed By Hail Sunday

Hail fell in this section Sunday, and though of short duration, was of severe intensity in some spots. Alfred Englemann reported stones fell as large as hen eggs at his poultry farm on the Rex Beach property east of town and killed four grown chickens that were caught out in the open. A small amount of hail fell over town, but no appreciable damage has been reported.

Carson Keeps His Promise

Court Decision Enables Clerk To Redeem His Pledge To Voters

W. Z. Carson, Clerk of Circuit Court of Highlands county is one public official who believes in making good his campaign promises. During the campaign in 1932 he promised to reduce recording fees if elected. A recent court decision finally settled the dispute as to the legality of his election with the result that he is at last able to keep his campaign pledge.

The following letter which is self explanatory was received by this paper Tuesday morning of this week:

April 16, 1934.

Avon Park Times,
Avon Park, Florida.

Gentlemen: — One of my campaign pledges was, if elected Clerk of the Circuit Court I would reduce recording fees in Highlands county to correspond with fees charged in adjoining counties. Until officially declared Clerk I was unable to make this reduction. Had Mr. Farmer been declared Clerk he would have been entitled to the fees collected by me, and I responsible for them.

The Supreme Court of Florida ruled on April 4th that I was the legally elected Clerk of the Circuit Court of Highlands county. The Mandate has not come down from the Supreme Court yet, but I am expecting it most any day. Therefore, beginning Monday, April 16th, all papers recorded in the Clerk's Office will be reduced forty-five cents, which I am sure will be in line with fees charged by Clerks in adjoining counties.

Yours very truly,
W. Z. CARSON,
Clerk Circuit Court,
Highlands County.

Gives Report City Finance

City Shows Receipts and Disbursements for Past Six Months

The financial report of the city for the past six months was presented to the council by City Clerk Francis Shockley at the meeting Tuesday night. It showed total collections for the period of $55,465.71 and expenditures of $47,397.05. With a balance on hand at the beginning of the period of $1,946.46, there is now a total balance of $10,015.12 of which the great part is pledged for bonds, leaving a small amount for operating expenses. The amount ear-marked for bonds is $8,794.15 and cannot be used for any other purpose.

The total cash received during the six months period was $28,372.87 which was made up as follows:

1933 taxes	$24,005.43
Delinquent taxes	2,473.49
Fines and forfeiture	325.00
Licenses	1,476.70
Miscellaneous revenue	92.25
	$28,372.87

Other receipts were in bonds taken in on current and delinquent taxes.

A large number of old notes and accounts have been paid during the period, the city clerk reports and the operating expenses have been kept below the budget requirements.

Important Meeting Chamber Commerce

There will be an important meeting of the chamber of commerce Monday night, April 23 at 7:30 o'clock. The meeting will not be long, but there are two or three items of importance so every member should be present.

QUARANTINE OF DISEASES HERE TO BE ENFORCED

Dogs to Be Innoculated and Tagged — or Else Impounded

A variety of matters pertaining to the public weal occupied the attention of the city council at a protracted meeting Tuesday night.

Dr. George Scott McKnight, city health officer, brought up the need of quarantine of infectious and contagious diseases. Dogs had attention paid them when the question of licensing and innoculation was broached and all dogs will be required to be licensed and carry a metal tag as soon as arrangements can be made for the work. The collection of delinquent insurance company licenses was also aired as well as various traffic hazards.

Dr. McKnight said he had received complaints regarding children being allowed on the streets while suffering from measles, whooping cough and chicken pox. He stated no cooperation could be had from the state board of health and suggested a quarantine ordinance. He further stated it is an erroneous idea that children have to have these diseases and that a doctor is called in only in about 10 percent of such cases.

The ordinance book was consulted and an ordinance found which gives the city health officer full power to enforce quarantine and levying a stiff penalty for non-compliance or evasion. Anyone knowing of a case of any disease is asked to communicate with Dr. McKnight.

City Clerk Francis Shockley stated he had been in communication with several veterinarians regarding innoculating dogs and the best proposition came from Dr. Boyce of Sebring. It is proposed that innoculation, license and tag will cost $1.00 per dog and full particulars will be advertised as soon as the necessary arrangements are made.

Police Chief Bob Still was given authority to build a dog pound and take up all dogs running at large and charge the owners an impounding fee.

Councilman Hall was in receipt of a letter from the City of Lakeland regarding their contract for the collection of delinquent insurance company licenses and which it is proposed to put into effect here. This brought forth the statement that many insurance companies are operating here without a license and the police chief was authorized to look up agents for such companies and see that they get licenses.

Col. Charles R. Head told the council about the expenses incurred in getting the ball park in condition for the Columbus Red Birds and suggested that now everything at the park is in such good shape it should be taken care of.

Mrs. M. E. Covington and Mrs. M. V. Pilcher told the council that the FERA is now only furnishing labor on projects and asked as to the city furnishing material with especial reference to the playground project. They were asked to submit data as to the necessary material and cost.

Orders were issued to rope off the street north of the school buildings during school hours and the installation of a flashing red light at the cross roads at Slaughter's filling station was approved.

The committee named to investigate the scout house property reported what was left of the building had been sold to Bob Palmer for $20. The city clerk submitted a financial report for the past six months which was approved.

Attend Spanish War Vets Meeting

Col. and Mrs. C. R. Head and Col. Head's sister, Mrs. Ida Butler were in Zephyrhills Sunday attending the West Coast Council of the United Spanish War Veterans, of which Col. Head is president. The meeting had the largest attendance in its history, 160 members and their ladies attending.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hauptman also attended from Avon Park, as did Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burch of DeSoto City and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bassage of Sebring.

Irate Senate Rebukes Huey Long, Then Gags Him; Jobs and Wages Highest Since 1931; Senate Rejects Higher Normal Income Tax Rate.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HUEY P. LONG, the vituperative senator from Louisiana, was soundly spanked by the senate Thursday. Their patience exhausted, Democratic leaders united in administering a sound rebuke for his conduct on the floor. The proceedings were without recent precedence in the senate. Following the blustering remarks hurled at the Kingfish, the senate clamped upon him temporarily a parliamentary muzzle that reduced him to silence.

Senatorial veterans could not remember a similar occasion when a senator has been subjected to the humiliation of such a public chorus of disapproval from his colleagues. The Louisianian's behavior in the senate has disgraced him in the eyes of the nation, Senator Pat Harrison (Dem., Miss.), told Huey.

The Kingfish screamed his protests. He shouted that Senator Harrison was the kind of a man who "would slick a knife in a friend's back and drink his blood." This brand of abuse brought Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson (Dem., Ark.), Senator Bennett Clark (Dem., Mo.), and others to their feet and the senate rules were invoked to stop the uproar. But the yelling Long, he sat down and sulked in his chair.

The senate has fumed for days as the excitable Long put on his typical exhibitions, shouting to the galleries. Thursday found almost the entire body in a wrathful revolt against these displays of temperament which have been hampering the consideration of important bills.

THAT Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the air corps, and others acted in "violation of the law" in connection with the proposed purchase of 37,500,000 worth of army airplanes, is the conclusion of a subcommittee of the house military affairs committee that has been investigating the matter. The subcommittee also found that Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war, had attempted to assure competitive bidding for the airplanes and thereby comply with the law and the intent of congress.

Gen. Foulois

The transaction in question dates back to the first of the year. Army officers, asking a public works allotment to buy airplanes, made arrangements to purchase them from special companies without competitive bids.

Woodring, the committee decided, intervened and demanded competitive bids be sought. Specifications were drawn and proposals submitter to the industry for bids. But the army felge advocate general held the proposals did not assure competitive bidding.

The committee contended that in so far as it had been able to find, Woodring's every act was to assure free competition, yet his desires were thwarted.

It mentioned, in addition to Foulois, Brig Gen. Henry Conger Pratt, chief of the army air corps' procurements division, and said Foulois gave testimony before the Rogers committee and an appropriations subcommittee which seemed to conflict.

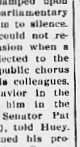

CONTINUED improvement in business activity during February and March and expansion employment and pay rolls to the highest point since the latter half of 1931 were announced by the Commerce department in one of its most optimistic reports on business since 1930.

The average weekly wage was $19.81 in February, the highest since 1931. The hourly rate of 55.8 cents per hour was within 4 cents of February, 1929. The employment improvement was general throughout manufacturing industries. Seventy-seven of the 89 manufacturing industries reported increased employment in February and 79 reported higher total wages. When classified into 14 major groups only the food group did not make an employment or pay roll gain.

TO PREVENT extreme demoralization in the industry and not to create an artificial shortage, is the intent of the production control proposals submitted to the dairy industry by the farm administration, administrators asserted in an appeal for national support for the plan. The case for limiting milk supplies was presented in a series of articles prepared by the AAA. Officials said it would be easier for them to let the dairy problem work itself out by natural processes, but it would mean starvation for the farmer.

They pointed out that the proposed plan would affect some 4,500,000 farm families, whose income had been cut in half during the depression and whose products had been selling at 40 per cent below prewar "parity."

ACTING under the power delegated to him by President Roosevelt under an executive order, National Recovery Administrator Johnson approved an amendment to the bituminous coal code imposing a five-day week of 35 hours and revising its wage scale upward, figured on a $5 base with differentials, on the entire bituminous coal industry. The amendment is subject to a hearing on April 30. Authoritative sources in Washington agreed that the operators would accept the amendment, at least until after the hearing and that the threat of a strike is avoided at least until after that hearing by the action of the NRA head.

Gen. Johnson

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, issued a statement praising the action of the administration and promising the co-operation of the union.

THE Civil Works administration has gone out of existence, and this relief organization became the works division of the Federal Emergency Relief administration.

Under this title it will use some $900,000,000 remaining from its recent grant of $950,000,000 for the year 1935 to provide relief for states, which are in turn to pass the money along to cities and counties.

For a month district agents have been working to perfect the machinery for the change.

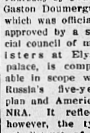

Meanwhile, administration officials made it clear that industry was not expected to take up the whole stack of unemployment, absorbing the former CWA workers in a day.

"SOAK the rich" forces were defeated Thursday when the senate rejected an amendment to the revenue bill by Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Republican, for a big increase in surtax rates.

The vote was 47 to 36. The party lineup showed 25 Democrats, 10 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite for the amendment, with 30 Democrats and 17 Republicans against it.

Estimated to produce $185,000,000 additional revenue, the La Follette amendment called for a boost in the normal income tax rate from 4 to 6 per cent, with surtaxes graduated up to 71 per cent on net incomes in excess of $1,000,000.

A "COMMON sense recovery plan" was laid before the country Thursday by France's aged premier, Gaston Doumergue. The program, which was officially approved by a special council of ministers at Elysee palace, is comparable in scope with Russia's five-year plan and America's NRA. It reflects, however, the typical distrust of experiments by the French peasant. It is marked by the same simplicity and absence of ballyhoo which has characterized all of "Gastonet's" actions since the dramatic February morning when he arrived in the civil war littered capital.

Gaston Doumergue

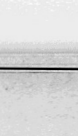

The French program is based on the theory that if the government puts its own house in order and minds its own business, industry will recover by itself.

It all boils down to a question of restoring confidence, but the methods laid down for achieving this purpose are nothing short of revolutionary for France. The keystone in Doumergue's edifice of recovery is the leveling of government expenditures down to income, which means eliminating immediately the budget deficit of some $270,000,000.

THE liberal Spanish republic has discarded one of the major pillars upon which it was built. Marshaled by the nominally moderate Radical party that once was violently anti-clerical, the cortes in an uproarious session put 7,500 clergymen back on the payroll of the state for life.

For three hours before passage of the law, which directly violates article 26 of the republican constitution, Premier Alejandro Lerroux's supporters and the shrunken left opposition hurled insults and waved fists at each other.

IMMEDIATE comprehensive revision of the national railway labor act to expedite and enforce the settlement of disputes between the railroads and their employees and to safeguard the right of collective bargaining, was recommended by Joseph B. Eastman, federal coordinator of transportation, in a letter to Representative Sam Rayburn, chairman of the house interstate commerce committee.

J. B. Eastman

His outstanding recommendations were these:

The creation of a new national board of adjustment, divided into four independent parts, whose awards would be enforceable in the courts.

The substitution of a new national mediation board of three members for the present board of mediation of five members.

The inclusion of all companies which operate equipment or facilities or furnish service included within the definition of the terms "railroad" and "transportation" in the interstate commerce act.

Provisions similar to those in the temporary emergency railroad transportation act of last year, insuring "the complete divorcement of railroad employees and management in the choice of representatives to deal one with the other" and providing adequate means for the enforcement of these provisions.

The national adjustment board would be divided into four independent parts to adjust future disputes.

THE house of representatives got busy Wednesday, suspended its rules and granted quick approval to three important bills dealing with widely divergent subjects. They were:

The administration sugar bill—subject of heated controversy for months—which slid through to final approval without even a record vote. It includes sugar as a basic commodity under the AAA, quotas domestic production of sugar beets and cane, and gives Secretary of Agriculture Wallace power to quota imports of Cuban and insular sugar.

The so-called Johnson bill, prohibiting foreign nations which are in default on private or national obligations in this country from floating their securities in the American market. The measure is the product of a senatorial investigation several years ago into the nature of foreign borrowings in the United States.

A resolution ordering a federal power commission inquiry into rates charged for electric energy by private power companies throughout the country.

GENERAL JOHNSON said at his first press conference in six weeks that he favored allowing the licensing provision of the National Recovery act to expire in June.

The general's attention was called to a report that the President favored extending the licensing arrangement, which had not yet been invoked in a single case, and he indicated that he would be at the service of the President for further discussion of the matter.

Inquiry in administration quarters concerning the recent report of the federal trade commission on the operation of the steel code led to the information that General Johnson would reply to this report shortly. The general is said to hold views diametrically opposed to those of the trade commission respecting the regulation and supervision of business by the government.

SAMUEL INSULL, fugitive utility magnate, has learned that Uncle Sam has long arms. He thought himself safe aboard the chartered freighter, on which he escaped from Greece, anchored at Istanbul, but Uncle Sam's long arm tagged him and he was arrested by the Turkish authorities. The council of ministers immediately ordered extradition to the United States. Two eminent Turkish lawyers on behalf of Insull filed an appeal with the supreme court of Turkey against the extradition order. But the appeal was denied.

Unless the former utilities magnate is able to perform some new wonder, his year and a half of flight almost half-way around the world has been brought to an end.

REPRESENTATIVES of the flour milling industry decided to operate without a code of fair competition. Their rejection of the NRA and AAA mark the first refusal of an entire industry to accept the administration's recovery plans. The decision to go ahead without NRA affiliation came after nearly nine months of fruitless negotiations with the NRA and AAA officials.

Government officials were represented as considering a legal test if the millers do not reopen negotiations. There was some talk that the millers might be put under a license.

The millers contend that the code offered would have brought ruin to the industry and would have forced up prices of flour beyond the ability of consumers to pay.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—Congress is showing every sign of wanting to be good boys and girls and play ball with President Roosevelt. It appeared when congress decided to slap the President in the face by overriding his veto of the veterans' compensation and government employees' salary question, that at last there was a definite and far-reaching breach. Many persons here thought the President had a recalcitrant bunch on his hands, and that there would be plenty of trouble during the rest of the session. Such is not the case, however, and, although there will be differences arising, the remainder of the session will show few cases in which the wishes of the President will be absolutely disregarded.

Now Ready to Be Good

The reason for this sudden change is simple. An election campaign confronts all of the members of the house and 35 members of the senate. As the thing has been explained to me by numerous representatives and senators, they were in a political situation where they felt they would rather slap the President than the veterans. The President can scold or spank them, it is explained, but the veterans have votes that are a good deal rougher than a spanking by the Chief Executive, from the standpoint of politics. Now that the potential candidates can go before the veterans of their respective districts and point with pride or something to a vote to restore the compensation, the campaigning members feel they are sitting in a good seat. They are ready to be good.

I am told that Democratic leaders in the house and senate have had innumerable visits since the vet vote from members of their party who wanted to assure the administration that they are "regular" again and will stay that way. Having obtained what they thought they had to have to insure their re-election, they will now vote according to direction once more. Then, when they start speech-making in their home bailiwick, they will talk loudly and long about supporting the President in one speech and in the next, if it be in a strong by organized veterans' area, they will shout about their friendship for the former soldiers, sailors and marines. From which it ought to be apparent that the whole thing was just a part of the great game of politics.

Democratic bolters could not have overridden the President by themselves, and that fact gave the Republicans an opportunity to play politics as well. The Republicans in the house and senate saw a chance to embarrass the President. They nudged the Democrats from every angle to override the veto and joined with the bolters on the vote just because it would put the Democratic leaders on a hot spot and would be offensive to the President. That is the way the game of politics is played. If one looks back over the records during the Coolidge and Hoover administrations, plenty of instances are shown where the Democrats, then in the minority, joined the bolting Republicans and so-called progressives in votes that were embarrassing to the President.

Just Playing Politics

As a matter of fact, there still is some doubt in the minds of many observers here whether Mr. Roosevelt had sound reason for his veto. He charged that the bill, as passed before the veto, would add $228,000,000 to the regular budget of the government. That is true. But I cannot help recalling that there are two budgets, now. One of them is the regular budget and the other, many times larger, is for emergency expenditures. At least some of those Democrats, who broke with the President on the question, are asking why the government has to cut down on its regular budget while it expands and "throws money away like water" from the emergency budget. It does cause one to pause and think about it.

In other words, the thought of those men is: why is it such a crime to spend about one-fourth of a billion dollars the way congressmen want to spend it when the administration is spending some five or six billions the way it wants to spend that tremendous sum.

Further, I cannot help recalling that, when the economy act was passed during the extra session last spring, I reported to you that the curtailment of expenditures for veterans and for several other purposes under the regular budget, was to be short-lived. I said at that time that it would be given back in pieces. Two acts of congress since have restored a total of 75 per cent of the amount taken away from the veterans, and the last act of congress restored one-third of 15 per cent pay cut to the government workers and will give them another one-third beginning July 1.

More Trouble Brewing

There is trouble brewing for President Roosevelt in another political direction. It is not a direct result of the overriding of his veto. That fact does appear to have accentuated the difficulties, however, according to most of my informants. The question that is before the administration and leaders of the Democratic party is: what is the attitude to be toward the progressives and other insurgents. It is known, of course, that there are members of the house and senate, elected as Democrats, who have no more right to call themselves Democrats than some of the radical group of the minority can claim to be Republicans. They are insurgents. There is no other proper label. They have not, do not and will not stand hitched to any program for any length of time.

Real Neutral

President Roosevelt and "Big Jim" Farley know full well that the Democrats must have the help of the so-called progressives and the radicals in some parts of the country. This is especially true in the Middle West. But the administration cannot turn against the militant and fighting young Democrats who have rallied to the solidly behind Roosevelt and the New Deal. If it snubs them, "it scorns the steps by which it did ascend" and that is never good politics. The younger group of Democrats take credit for the smashing victory of 1932 and Mr. Roosevelt cannot ignore their clamoring for recognition.

Like a ghostly shadow across the path, however, floats the forms and faces of numerous powerful men who broke away from Hoover and supported the Roosevelt candidacy. The Roosevelt blessing already has been bestowed upon Senator Hiram Johnson, a Californian, who was elected as a Republican and who supported Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy. Senator Johnson is up for election this year. On the other hand, there is young Bob La Follette, of Wisconsin. Surely, he was a liberal all the way. He supported Mr. Roosevelt as against Mr. Hoover. But young Bob has had no such blessing from the administration. Indeed, "Big Jim" Farley has strongly intimated that he is to see Wisconsin elect Charles Broughton, a regular Democrat. And so it goes.

Wolman Not to Be

When President Roosevelt announced settlement of the labor controversy between the automobile industry and the American Federation of Labor, and proposed the creation of a board to adjudicate the various questions, every one here thought naturally enough that he would select a representative of the industry and one of labor, with the third man being neutral. The natural conclusion was that the third member of the board would have no ties with either capital or labor. There was much surprise, therefore, when he named Dr. Leo Wolman, of Columbia university, New York, as the neutral member. From what I can gather around Washington, the appointment of Doctor Wolman was a bit disappointing to those who wanted a "real" neutral to sit as a member of the board.

Doctor Wolman's knowledge of labor questions cannot be denied. He has demonstrated his ability and his capacity to understand the problems. The objection that I hear, however, does not run to that phase of his ability. Doctor Wolman has been associated directly or indirectly with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for many years. However he may desire to be impartial, however basically honest he is, the thought in many places in Washington is that Doctor Wolman cannot be neutral as that word is accepted by the general public.

The week's best laugh: Federal Home Loan board regulations require that applicants for loans submit with their applications, first, a "close up" photograph of the property, and, second, a "street scene" that will show a little of adjoining property. These photographs have the purpose and the value, of course, of providing a general knowledge of where the money goes.

But the headquarters office of the loan system was not quite prepared for two photographs which it received in connection with one application that came from a colored man in a little southern town. In complying with the request that a "close up" photograph be submitted, the applicant overlooked the fact that it was of the property and sent in a picture of himself, a photograph that disclosed the wrinkles and gray hair of his age as well as two exceptionally large eyes. For the street scene, the applicant had himself photographed in his best bib and tucker, namely, his lodge uniform. And he was riding a bicycle along the street.

Strangling With Taxes Go See Alaska A 74-Year-Old Heart Iceland's Old Volcano

The Supreme court decides that government has the power to tax a thing out of existence. This decision came with approval of a 15-cents-a-pound tax on oleomargarine. The purpose of that tax is to make it impossible to manufacture oleomargarine profitably, and thus compel people to eat butter, whether they can afford it or not.

Doubtless that is wise, in fact, it must be wise, since the Supreme court says so.

But some day, when we have, as we shall have, one thousand million people in the United States, and back room for so many cows, it may be desirable to have a good substitute for butter, and we may regret today's hostile taxation.

See Alaska, and at the same time see the whole United States. Go through the Panama canal on a big boat and see what men can do when they use a nation's power. Or travel by rail, studying the cities of the country, or take your car, which goes everywhere and stops where you choose, or fly, and see the world from above.

See Alaska, a magnificent empire far away in the northwest. See what Seward bought for the United States for $7,200,000. A purchase that was called "Seward's folly." They took small change like $7,200,000 seriously in those days. But it was profitable "folly." Alaska has yielded $419,701,000 in gold, more than fifty times Alaska's cost alone. The "Juneau Empire," which ought to know, estimates that Alaska has been worth to the United States $2,500,000,000, after subtracting the cost price. The self-supporting reindeer alone will more than pay for Alaska.

In his poem beginning "Dear friend, then art lost," Heine reminds his friend that foeman hates lange arme ("princes have long arms").

Samuel Insull of Chicago learns that Uncle Sam has long arms also, and can reach out far to get what he wants.

Mr. Insull thought himself safe on his chartered Greek tramp steamer, riding at anchor under the walls of Istanbul, on the little strip of water that separates Europe from Asia. But Uncle Sam reached out his long arm, and Mr. Insull is arrested by the Turkish government, and unless the Chicago utilities magnate is able to perform some new wonder, his arrest probably means the last active chapter in his career.

Mr. Insull is seventy-four years old, a man of intense pride, nourished and increased by success, through years of unquestioned domination. It will be hard for a heart seventy-four years old to stand the strain that will be put upon him.

Nothing is safe, nothing sure. In Iceland, 150 miles east of Reykjavik, there stood a calm mountain known to have been a bad volcano in its younger years, called Skeidararjoe kull Cirka, a thick cap of ice covering the summit, every sign of reformed old age.

Inhabitants of Nupsstad yilliage, close by the peak, in Skaptafellsbya. la, felt certain that Skeidararjoekull Cirka's wild oats had all been sown. They had not.

The old volcano has blown the ice cap into cracked ice, and with fightning flashes and roarings is in violent eruption.

Some ice-capped old men have acted as foolishly, and as unexpectedly.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., gives $2,000,000 for a research laboratory that will be open to the scholars of the world. If anyone says, "He ought to spend his money in America," remind him that Rockefeller-Standard Oil money has been made all over the globe.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

Young Jim stared at him and his lip twisted as he fought back emotion.

"I don't hate you," he said quietly. "I'm only hating myself . . . the myself that was!"

Busily, then, the other began dumping the contents of the grub sack on the rock. He smiled serenely as he cooked that hearty breakfast.

* * * * * * *

Steve Drake wrote his telegram to Kate Flynn with great care. He told all that had happened as briefly as was possible but re-read it carefully to be certain that no word important to the proposed transaction had been omitted.

His last line was:

"This deal is only way out. Money must be in MacDonald's hands Thursday at four p. m."

To the operator, he said: "Send that. And I'll wait right here until an answer comes."

* * * * * * *

Butter would not melt in Franz's mouth at times, McNally had said. And this day was one of those occasions. He stood on a high point beside the Laird and showed him where he had found Steve Drake's canoe.

He spoke in a hushed tone, as one does of tragedy. He led the old man slowly to where the wrecked craft was beached and there MacDonald stood with bared head while tears ran down his wrinkled cheeks.

"Oh, a gude lad he was! A fine, gude lad. 'Nd a grand angler. . . . Why . . . Why'd he chance th' rapid?"

Franz debated with himself craftily.

"The queer part of it all, Mr MacDonald, is that the fellow was not Young Jim Flynn. The real Young Jim was drunk over on Moose lake when this fellow showed up and passed himself off for the one they'd been expecting. He admitted it to me but I didn't think it was any of my affair so I said nothing to anyone."

"But who was he? What was he doin'?"

"I can't answer that. Who he was doesn't matter. What he was doing here I could only guess."

He said that significantly and the Laird stared at him in sharp query.

"My guess would be this: that Flynn tried to buy from you and had gotten nowhere, that he knew his son was a worthless bum, that he found this fellow who made a good enough appearance and who surely is a darned good fisherman and sent him in here with the deliberate purpose of winning your confidence and friendship."

"Ye think so? Ye think that, Ind? . . . I wonder . . ." An irate gleam commenced to show in the Laird's eyes. "Queer happenin's, queer things. Ah, I'm sick of it all! Age rides heavy on th' shoulders!"

A great relief I felt when I signed his option but if he's gone, ut's gone wi' him 'nd I've got th' timber back again! If Jim Flynn's a smart trickster, no more will I have to do wi' him but I've th' property back noo 'nd just when I'd commenced to reckon on other investments."

It was Franz's opportunity, his hour snatched from what happened to have been defeat yesterday. Cleverly he played his cards. Each word he spoke was well calculated. They walked back to the Laird's where the old man paced the room while Franz listened in evident sympathy and waited . . . waited.

His waiting was rewarded and, at dawn, he started for Shoestring himself, an option in his possession. He presented his document to the register of deeds and watched that worthy scratch his head as he read it.

"Well, that's the second option on this description!" he declared.

"Second!" Franz's voice was shrill.

"Sure. Young Jim Flynn was in yesterday with it. He waited around town until this noon for a telegram."

"But . . . Why, he couldn't . . . He's . . ."

But ghosts do not transact business. He had been thwarted again but his agile mind grasped one shred of hope.

"His was a seven-day option, wasn't it?"

"Yes. Dated Thursday."

"Record this, then. It's for fifteen."

He went out of the building and walked slowly to the edge of town, throwing himself down under a tree and trying to plan. Telegrams had been exchanged between Shoestring and Chicago relating to this transaction. Now, if a man could know what instructions those messages contained. . . .

Down at the railroad station, which was also the telegraph office, a figure stood for long in the deep shadow of the building. After a time, seeing no one, hearing no one, a man slipped an iron bar beneath a window sash, put his weight on it and heard the catch give with a snap and a tinkle. Slipping into the room he closed the window cautiously behind him.

He found Steve's message, signed with the single word, Jim; and after further searching, located the reply:

"God's in his heaven, all's well with the world. The option is grand news but indication of what you have done with Dad's trust belongs the greatest happiness I have known. Twenty-five thousand currency will be delivered to Good-Bye Tuesday. Have team at Shoestring Monday noon.

"Kate."

And in the little camp beyond the Mad Woman two men lay under the arching stars and talked on and on.

"You've got it to do," LaFane said again and again. "You can do it; you must do it. In less than a week, now, you'll be as fit as you ever were. . . . And you can and you must; you can and you must!"

The boy beside him trembled a little.

EVEN after he had taken up the many details that were awaiting his decision Steve found that telegram from Kate Flynn and although one phase of her reaction gave him a feeling of vast achievement another factor gave him pronounced dismay.

If LaFane failed to do for Young Jim what Steve had hoped he might do, Kate's heart would be broken. If he were making progress, Steve had no word of it and each day that was added to the absence of the two reduced his hope by just so much.

Drake knew that the time for his unmasking was at hand. Beyond a doubt Old Jim would send an attorney to close the timber deal and the chances were that any lawyer or agent so trusted would have had dealings with Polaris in the past, and would know Young Jim well.

When Steve re-entered his cabin on the return from town to find it in a sorry state of disarrangement he experienced a moment of great surprise. Then Franz's words at the Laird's came to him. He had boasted that Steve had no evidence against him to prove that he had attempted murder.

Sure enough; the shotgun was gone. He was angered at not having taken more precautions. However, he told himself, the threat was no longer of major importance. The man could tell his story of having discovered the genuine Young Jim elsewhere in the country all most any time, now; it would make little difference to any person but Kate.

Early on a Sunday morning McNally harnessed his light team and started for town to meet the arrival due the next day.

Drake would have driven to the railroad himself but the fire hazard continued to increase, and if a burning started he wanted to be on the job; furthermore, he was hoping that LaFane would come, either with Young Jim or bearing word of him. He must be present to have at the earliest possible moment whatever news might be forthcoming.

Had he gone to Shoestring himself he might have observed things that old McNally missed.

For one thing, he might have seen Franz idling within the building, watching as Mac escorted the arrival toward the waiting wagon. He was even close enough to hear McNally say as he looked down at the brief case which was lifted in query:

"Oh, that's all right. Jim'll likely take it right down to the Laird's. Anyhow, we got a safe 'n th' store to lock it up in."

After the team trotted up into the town to have McNally's purchases loaded, Franz hailed an automobile, parleying with the driver, and was driven northward on the Good-Bye road. The car could take him only a dozen miles before the route entered swampy country that could be handily traveled only by teams, but it completed that much of the trip before McNally had more than a start on the way home From there Franz went afoot, hooded Good-Bye lake. He swam the lower river and, at night, rolled himself in a blanket taken from a pack-sack cached beneath a well concealed canoe.

Until the arrival in the country of Steve Drake, Franz's first plan which had taken many months to the fashioning, had progressed steadily. Once upon a time, he had sought to attach himself to Old Jim Flynn, render the services of which he was capable and profit therefrom, as most men profit. His impulse then had been rather decent; he was willing to give value for what he received.

Then Kate Flynn had come to Good-Bye with her father. In the beginning she appeared to like him, but her intuition had it that the man was not what he appeared to be on the surface, that he was not one, even, for her father to depend on.

When this became clear to Franz what decency had been in his character before was consumed by the fire of his greed and recklessness. Nothing remained for him in his relationship with the Flynns except gain.

But he did not betray himself in the beginning. He pretended a continuing friendship with Polaris until his connections with rival timber owners were perfected. Then he had commenced his campaign to undermine Old Jim.

Everything seemed to be going well. The arrival of the man for whom Franz had labored, the man he had assumed, would be a simple matter.

Nowadays do they give the corn club boys prizes for raising the least corn on a given number of acres?

There's a treat coming to the voters—the official political campaign book will soon be out. We can hardly wait.

A. von Parker thinks his girl should be particularly nice to him these days, this being "kindness to animals week."

That excellent paper, the Fort Meade Leader, offers to give "Thirteen Years in Hell" to each new subscriber. As an inducement that's a hot one.

Let us hope the Cannon controversy will be settled soon and for all time. It is keeping alive hard feelings which should never have been kindled or encouraged.

Highlands County News says the entrance fee in the Orange Belt League is $50,000. Did the Sebring Smoke-eaters raise that sum with their last minstrel show?

There is promise of a bumper crop of citrus fruit next season. Now if those connected with the Florida citrus industry can muster the intelligence to handle that crop . . .

We know of two gents who we think ought to be given medals for optimism, and they live right here in Florida. One has just planted an orange grove and another has started a newspaper.

A malady heretofore quite rare, has recently developed an alarming number of cases. The muscles and tissues of the patient turn to bone. A somewhat similar disease has been very general all along, but the ossification has been confined to the head.

We like to read of these golden weddings, of which there seems to be an unusual number in the state recently. In a world of change and restlessness they reassure us that the old-time fundamentals of love and loyalty still have a goodly number of devotees.

Alfalfa Bill orders out his national guardsmen to stop delinquent tax sales in a number of Oklahoma counties "to protect the homes of the people." A simple executive order probably would have produced the same result—but that way wouldn't have provided enough lime-light for Bill.

When you are traveling along toting a heavy load it seems to help quite a lot to shift the burden from one shoulder to the other, even if the weight to be carried remains just the same. That's the way some people feel about the amendment exempting homes from taxation, which is to be voted on next fall. They may have the same amount in taxes but the burden won't press in exactly the same spot.

The railroads have been having a harder time than most of the big industrial concerns, though all of the latter have had tough enough going the past few years. But railroads are still important assets to the sections of the country they traverse. One of them—the Atlantic Coast Line—has just paid $311,453 in school taxes to the various counties of Florida. Highlands county's share of this payment was $6,-231.12.

The Senatorial campaign reminds us of the story of the good but somewhat profane man who with a group visited a widow's home and led in prayer that material assistance might come to the widow. "Oh, Lord," he prayed, "we beg Thee to send this poor widow a barrel of flour, and a barrel of meal; and, yes, Lord, send her a barrel of sugar, and a barrel of salt; and oh, Lord, a barrel of pepper"—here he broke off abruptly, and then corrected his petition by adding, "Hell, Lord, that's too much pepper!" And that's the way the majority of the Senatorial candidates feel—that in this race there is too much Pepper.

Lotteries operated by municipalities, or the states, or even by the federal government, are being seriously suggested as a means of securing funds to defray governmental costs or other public expenditures. The plan is wholly repugnant to such ideas as we have imbibed in our fitful efforts to differentiate between right and wrong. Still, we have known the churches to put on raffles and such, and the State of Florida already has a profitable partnership in the race-track business. So we are a bit timid about taking a stand in the face of such notable precedents.

One of the aspirants for United States Senator, seeking to replace Park Trammell, has already fallen by the wayside. John Paul Jones withdraws from the race, stating that he is not able financially to make the campaign. It is not at all unlikely that one or more of the remaining five candidates will drop before May 5, the final day for qualifying. Florida is a big State and the expenses of a State-wide canvas runs into big money. In any event, whether correct or not, an impression is general that the only serious contender against Trammell is Pepper.

Florida may yet be brought great wealth from what have been regarded as 'waste lands," through the growth and commercialization of her fast-growing pine trees. Possibilities of the production of paper and cellulose from this source are attracting the attention of chemists and capitalists of the country. Which reminds us that we do not believe there are any waste lands in Florida. On every acre above water something of value may be grown; and even on the lands under the water fishes and froggies disport themselves in readiness to furnish food or fortune to those who have industry and enterprise.

The State Pardon Board, wincing a bit under newspaper criticism, is going to invite newspaper men to sit in at its sessions in future. The hard-boiled guys of the press may then see how easy it is to refuse the pleas of a wan and weeping wife and wailing children begging that a husband and father be restored to them. No doubt the Pardon Board has erred in extending clemency too generously, particularly in cases where major crimes were involved; but when, as in many instances, some poor devil has been caught in the toils because of some transgression not particularly vicious in its nature, no great harm may be done by allowing mercy to season justice. When inclined to condemn too severely the granting of leniency put yourself in the place of the Pardon Board—or of the unhappy prisoner praying for pardon.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

Phil Hoffman, Editor of The Oskaloosa (Iowa) Herald, says:

"Advertising over the radio, on the bill board, or in window is much like the hit and run driver. It flares for the moment then disappears in the mist and dust of the fleeing car. If you are quick enough to get the number you may find the owner later, but in most cases the phantom is gone forever.

"An advertisement in a newspaper is different. It is prepared with an idea of truthfulness and permanency. When you seen an advertisement in your paper, you do not have to jump at conclusions or chase a vanishing specter. All you have to do is to lay the paper away and refer to the advertisement at your leisure, and as often as you please. The information is there in black and white, and you can even carry the message along with you in order that every detail may be carried out by the advertiser.

"The advertisement on the air is heard only by the comparatively few who happen to be listening at the time. The advertisement in the window or on the fence is garbled by only a few passersby. While an advertisement in a good paper covers the field completely, going into every home in its territory and staying there to visit intimately with the whole family. THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR AN ADVERTISEMENT IN A NEWSPAPER."

HOW'S THIS FOR NEWSPAPER MISTAKES?

The perspiring editor and the despairing proof reader on any newspaper is being cheered by the information just released by the Boston News-Record—that the number of chances for mistakes in one column of print is as 70,000 to 1. In an ordinary newspaper column there are 10,000 letters and there are seven wrong positions that a letter may be put in, therefore there are 70,000 chances to make an error and millions of chances for transpositions. The News-Record points out that in the Immortal Will Shakspeare's most famous sentence, "To be or not to be," by transposition alone it is possible to make 2,758,009 errors. If you don't believe it, take your summer vacation to figure it out. Seriously, though, the chances to make orrors in a column of type are infinite and realization of this fact should make some of the smart alec readers of all newspapers a little less critical of occasional slips, especially when one usually finds that these critics make far more blunders in their own affairs than the printer or the proof reader make in theirs.—Winter Haven Chief.

Miami And Its Debt Problem

Refunding of Huge Municipal Debt In Hands of New York Committee

Brilliant though Miami's winter season has been, practical men are beginning to ask the effect upon the city's affairs and upon its bonded debt, largest in the state. These must be answered before real estate begins again to invite real money here.

During the past four months, Miami has held a daily average of from 200,000 to 250,000 visitors, trebling its normal population. In 90 days of the season, checkers at the entrances counted 170,000 automobiles bearing 440,000 passengers coming into the Miami city limits, practically 100 percent more than the same period last year. Entries by train, airplane, steamship and on foot exceeded even the days of the boom.

Result: On March 31, city tax collections were 49.3 percent of the 1933-34 roll, two full months ahead of the intake of last year.

The bond debt of $29,124,000 has been reduced since August by $1,300,000 in bond exchanged for back taxes and liens.

Refunding of the whole debt, now in the hands of a New York committee with $25,000,000 of Miami bonds pledged to their program, is going forward. The city since August has paid $900,000 to the committee for 1933 interest. All back interest will be refunded by certificates due in 1941. Until 1936, the current interest will be 3 percent instead of 5 percent.

Cost of running the city this winter was $131,000 more than for the same time last year. A police radio cost $10,000; federal river widening $11,000, publicity, $83,761. Because the state hiked the price of milk from 8 to 13 cents, the city hospital's milk bills have been boosted $1,000 a month. Miami has come down off its high horse of 1927, when it cost $7,000,000 a year to nurse the boom, to $2,400,000 and cannot go much lower.

The care of the winter tourist is Miami's chief industry. When it prospers, so does the rest of Florida. If people begin this summer to build houses and apartments on some of its 55,000 vacant lots, that will pull the collection nerd up to a point where taxes all around will be lower. It has taken the taxpayers a long time to realize that the tax dodger for at least five years had made them carry a double burden of taxation but they finally are seeing the point.

So, the city commissioners of Miami are taking steps to collect. They made the merchants pay delinquent personal property taxes before issuing a license to do business. This followed a proposal of a sales tax this winter that nearly led to riots. To keep the sales tax from their doorz, the merchants are willing to make reasonable payments. In addition, Miami has set up a real estate tax collection bureau, to pick up $2,371,000 in delinquent taxes, and to make it so hot for the tax dodger that future collections will be nearer 95 percent of the tax roll than 75 per cent or even 60 per cent, as they have been since 1929.

Lightning Strikes Bassenger Citizen

Lamar Campbell of Bassenger was killed Sunday afternoon about two o'clock when he was struck by lightning while walking with his wife in the open prairie near Bassenger. After regaining consciousness Mrs. Campbell walked six miles through the storm to get assistance.

Mr. Campbell was 25 years old and a member of the Brethren church. He is survived by his wife, Stella Jimmerson Campbell, formerly of Virginia, one baby daughter, his parents, one brother and five sisters.

Rev. L. L. Lininger, assisted by Rev. Curley of Okeechobee, conducted the funeral services which were held Monday afternoon. Interment was at Bassenger cemetery.

Avon Odd Fellows at Grand Lodge

Avon Park Odd Fellows and Rebekahs were well represented at the annual Grand Lodge held at Lakeland on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Those attending from here included L. D. Baker, Joe Allen, W. F. Thompson, Charles Armstrong, A. C. Wester, and O. D. Cothran.

A large delegation of 25 ladies was headed by Mrs. L. D. Baker who was named as delegate to the convention.

Insects Dislike Redwood Trees

Redwood trees, compared to other tree species, are remarkably free from insect attack.

More Crotelaria Being Used For Citrus Cover Crop

J. D. Sherman of Avon Park reports that his Morningside subdivision citrus grove is still in excellent condition although only one application of commercial fertilizer has been applied in 5 years.

Five years ago crotelaria striata was sown in the grove and good cover crops of this legume have been grown each year. The crotelaria is allowed to mature and is then cut down and thrown around the trees. The nitrogen or ammonia which the crotelaria has gathered from the air has been sufficient to maintain soil fertilization and also to provide sufficient ammonia so that the trees have made an excellent tree growth and have matured excellent crops of high quality fruit.

Many growers have seen these trees at various times and advised Mr. Sherman that they felt the trees were abundantly fertilized and did not need commercial fertilizer applications.

County Agent Alsmeyer reports that there are 5 or 6 other groves in this county which have not been adequately cared for in the past few years and in which crotelaria was growing in part of the groves. These groves have made a satisfactory tree growth and responses but have not matured the quality or quantity of fruit produced in the Sherman grove. These groves give adequate information as to the advisability of using crotelaria as a cover crop in citrus groves.

Those desiring to apply for Emergency Crop Production Loans should fill out these applications at the earliest possible moment as all of these must be completed and turned in to the Regional Director in Orlando before April 30. In discussing the matter this week County Agent Alsmeyer stated there had been very few of this type of loan applied for and that satisfactory arrangements had been made for stenographic help in his office and Miss Lillian Wooten had been appointed by federal authorities to fill out these loan application blanks, but that he feared many growers would wait until the last minute to fill these out and thus many good loans would be turned down because of lack of time. Miss Wooten will be in the County Agent's office in the court house all day on Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays and also on Saturday mornings to render any assistance necessary along this line.

The Emergency Crop loans are not to be confused with the regular Crop Production Loans which can be made out at any time, while Emergency Loans must be completed before April 30th.

Hi-League Gives Topsy-Turvy Party

The Hi League of the Methodist church held a Topsy-Turvy party at the hut Tuesday evening. The children came wearing their clothes in every crazy manner imaginable.

Merle Graham and George Elwell received honors for looking the most topsy-turvy.

A stage was arranged in one corner of the room and four girls gave an impromptu program of crazy songs and recitations. Others were called on to display their talent along this line and the affair proved to be most anjoyable. Other games and contests were played.

Tables were arranged in another room where refreshments were served. The tables were all topsy-turvy having the covers on awry, flowers scattered over the table and the vases up-side-down and chairs up-side-down under the table. The sandwiches were served from the backs of plates and cookies from a large dishpan. Hot chocolate completed the refreshments.

Mrs. Hayes Maxwell, Miss Rosalee Clausen, Mrs. Virginia Cloud, Miss Alma Harrell and Mrs. T. H. Hughs helped to make the evening pleasant for the thirty guests who were present.

Mrs. McFerrin and Mrs. Wear Entertain

Mrs. H. C. McFerrin and Mrs. Earl Wear very charmingly entertained at bridge, Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wear on the Sebring road.

Mrs. H. E. Godwin Entertains

One of the lovliest parties of the year was that given by Mrs. H. E. Godwin Wednesday at her home on Pleasant street.

A lovely boquet of spring flowers formed the center piece for the dining room table, which was arranged for the buffet luncheon.

The party rooms were thrown ensuite for the occasion and were a veritable bower of garden flowers.

After the delicious luncheon four tables enjoyed two progressions of rubber bridge.

High score prize was awarded to Mrs. Paul Jones and second high to Mrs. Mel Bass.

Those enjoying Mrs. Godwin's hospitality were Mrs. J. P. Garber, Mrs. S. C. Pardee, Mrs. L. M. Chapin, Mrs. C. Parker Anderson, Mrs. E. F. Carmichael, Mrs. Harcourt Johnson, Mrs. G. P. Thayer, Mrs. D. G. Perry, Mrs W. W. McFarland, Mrs. A. H. Able, Mrs. C. E. Crabtree, Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. A. Gilmour, Mrs. N. H. Trent, Mrs. C. H. Pardee, Mrs. M. A. Bass and Mrs. E. E. Melton.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Entertain Club

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Johnson delightfully entertained the Thursday Evening Bridge club last week at their home on Highlands avenue.

A dainty green and white color motif was emphasized in the flowers, scorepads, prize wrappings and refreshments.

Three tables were in play and after the games prizes were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dilley for high score and to Mr. and Mrs. Brisco Willis for second high.

At the refreshment hour, each table was centered with a lovely pink rose bud. A salad course in keeping with the color scheme of the evening was served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dilley, Mr. and Mrs. Freed Peden, Mr. and Mrs. Brisco Willis, Mr. and Mrs. Milford Dilley and Mrs. Irving Ford.

Mrs. S. E. Booth Hostess at Luncheon

A lovely affair of the past week was the bridge luncheon given by Mrs. S. E. Booth Tuesday at her home on Pine street.

For this occasion the hostess chose spring flowers of pastel shades for decorating, with the dining room table centered with a low bowl of the mixed flowers. A delicious two course luncheon was served.

After an afternoon of contract Mrs. T. A. McNicholas was presented with the high score prize, while Mrs. C. E. Lanier received the prize for second high.

Those enjoying Mrs. Booth's hospitality were Mesdames E. W. Hartt, P. L. Rumpsa, W. C. Touchton, C. E. Lanier, T. A. McNicholas, W. D. Dorminey, W. T. Contes and H. F. R. Reek.

Meeting Sans Souci Club Monday

Mr. C. R. Ginn, Jr., Miss Eleanor Bryant and Miss Mary Lou St. Clair entertained the Sans Souci club last Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Ginn on Camphor street.

Relief Work Functioning

Work Progressing on Seven Projects in Highlands County

The new Federal Relief set-up in Highlands county is functioning smoothly under the new administrator, C. D. Jenkins, and work is going forward on seven projects within the county and 77 people are employed besides those engaged in the social service and administrative work of the relief.

The completion of the Sebring airport is practically assured with a new appropriation of $6,694 set aside for that project and 68 men working on the project. Work is progressing rapidly under the direction of Lieutenant Mell M. Stephenson, the runway markers are in place and the runways are being "grubbed." Work is also going forward on the Avon Park airport with 59 men on the job.

Work on the school buildings of Avon Park and Sebring is being pushed with 25 men on the two projects. The weather has slowed up the work some on the Sebring school but it is believed that the work will be completed before the beginning of the rainy season.

There are 20 men employed in the Venus area, under the direction of Dr. E. L. Peck, in tick eradication work.

Official approval of the DeSoto City water works project was received yesterday and it is planned to start work on the completion of the project within the next few days, and official approval of the Lake Placid emergency landing field and the bridge construction project on the Crewsville road is expected this week.

It was announced by Administrator Jenkins yesterday that beginning Friday the work crews will work four 6-hour days each week. Working Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday each week.

Code Proescution To Start After 10 Days

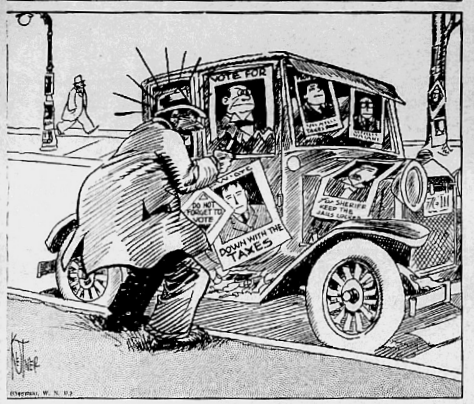

Washington, April 18.—Instructions to State NRA compliance directors to turn over to district attorneys of the United States cases of flagrant code violations were to be effective 10 days from the date of receipt of such instructions. In the meantime, they were to transmit to NRA in Washington any cases on which efforts at adjustment had failed, marked "for court action" and "supported by facts sufficient to lay the basis for indictment or injunction proceedings."

"KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES"

A Big Help!!

OH, HOI UH, HU

Society Dame—Oh, doctor, I'm so sorely troubled with ennui.

Doctor—H'm! Why don't you interest yourself in finding out how the other half lives?

Society Dame—Gracious no, I'm not looking for a divorce.

OH, OUCH!

Teacher—An heirloom is something that has been handed down from father to son. Johnny, give me a sentence with the word heirloom in it.

Johnny—My pants are an heirloom.

FORESIGHT

Suitor—Do you know why your sister won't become engaged to me?

Tommy—She's already engaged to three fellows an' she says she wants at least one who's willing to spend a cent now and then.

MEAN OLD THING

She—I've seen the snows of just twenty-one winters.

He—How many winters have you spent in the South?

NOT SO GOOD

"I found a $10 bill this morning."

"That shows you are lucky. Have a gift for finding things."

"My gift stuck by me too long. Next I found the owner."

GOOD FISHING

Teacher—Can you tell me the function of the pores of our bodies, Tommy?

Tommy—They are the things we use to catch cold with.

Scraps of Humor

ONE FOR S. P. C. A.

"My husband is a brute, and I've reached the place where I just can't stand him any longer?" said Mrs. Nosey.

"Now what's he done?" asked her dearest friend.

"Well, you know we were on a 4-party line, and he's gone and had it replaced with a private one, so I can't listen in any more," she groaned.

Pa's Part

The two village gossips were exchanging the latest news.

"And those Richleys," said Mrs. Jones, "He says very bitter things about his two good-for-nothing sons, but his wife is always making excuses for them."

Mrs. Hayes nodded.

"Yes," she smiled, "she may make the excuses, but he has to make the allowances."

Not the Same Thing

"Darling," she murmured, and her voice was shaky, "how do I know that you really and truly love me?"

"My pet, I can prove it," he said. "Why, I can't sleep at nights for thinking of you."

"H'm," she muttered doubtfully, "that's no proof. Ja can't sleep at nights for thinking of you, but I hardly think it's love."

Bad Eye

Gladys—Mother, dear, I advertised under a different name that I would like to make the acquaintance of a refined gentleman with an eye to romance.

Mother—Gladys, how awful! Did you get any answers?

Gladys—Only one—from father.—Kitchener Record.

MOST OF US DO

"Jones puts his watch under his pillow nights."

"I notice he likes to sleep overtime."

Didn't Want to Miss It

Sister—Freddy, don't you think you'd better go to bed now?

Little Brother—No, I want to stick around and see your friend explode first.

Sister's Boy Friend—Good gracious! Whatever can the child mean?

Little Brother—I heard Minnie tell mamma you were about ready to pop!

Fleeting Time

Lecturer (who has spoken for two hours)—I shall not keep you much longer. I am afraid I have spoken at rather great length. There is no clock in the room, and I must apologize for not having a watch with me.

A Voice—There's a calendar behind you, mister!—Exchange.

Manysidedness

"Every story has two sides," said the fair-minded man.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "At least two. The number of sides a story has depends largely on how many political parties happen to be in the field."—Washington Star.

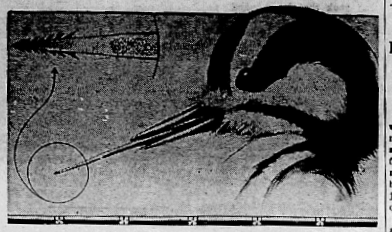

Anatomical Problem

"Bobbie, I am going to spank you as sure as anything," said Bobbie's mother.

"You can't. I'm sittin' on it," said Bobbie.—Chicago News.

Busy Woodpeckers

A Woodpecker's Tongue Is a Concealed Spear.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

SCIENTISTS have recently discovered in the dark, rain-drenched forests of Haiti a species of woodpecker which builds its own apartment house. They reported seeing a dozen pairs of woodpeckers going in and out of nests in a single dead tree trunk.

There are few birds that so satisfactorily reveal their family connection as do the woodpecker. The beginner in bird study may learn that the meadowlark belongs to the family "icteridae" but he may be excused if he does not learn at once that the bobolink, the oriole, and the red-winged blackbird, all strikingly different in habits and color, belong to the same family. He may study the wood thrush, and be surprised to find later that the robin and the bluebird bear to it a close family relationship. But if he becomes thoroughly familiar with the appearance and activities of just one woodpecker, he will thereafter be able to recognize at once any other member of the family "picidae" which he may encounter.

Woodpeckers are of wide distribution. They inhabit all the countries of the globe except Madagas car and the Australian region. More than four hundred species are known, and many geographical races of these have been described.

In North America the family is represented by ten genera, classified into 22 species, several of which in turn are divided into subspecies or geographical races. In all, 64 kinds of woodpeckers are recognized in continental United States, Canada and Baja California.

Sensible and Busy Birds.

Woodpeckers give the impression of being practical, sensible birds. Under ordinary circumstances, they do not show a hysterical fear of man; they are wary, but do not let that interfere with their work. They are very busy birds and most of the time are absorbed in climbing about tree trunks and limbs. They get along together fairly well. One sees few serious combats among them.

They do not possess the stately dignity of the heron, the singing powers of the brush, or the graceful flights of the swallow. Woodpeckers do not stir the imagination to thoughts of distant lands, as does the wild goose when far overhead we see him leading his flock toward the frozen pole. The woodpeckers are known rather as hard-working, substantial citizens of the bird world, rendering service which could ill be spared.

These birds possess highly specialized equipment for their business of getting a living. They are the only birds in our country that can dig holes in solid trees. As a group they pass most of their days pecking decayed trees or stumps for ants or the larvae of wood-boring beetles.

No other bird leaves behind such striking evidence of its presence. A hundred thousand warblers may migrate through a small region, and many may remain for the summer and rear their young. When they have gone, little sign of their former presence is left behind; but a half dozen woodpeckers in the same community will leave very definite evidence of their occupancy. Numerous holes in dead trees, with here and there an entrance to a nesting cavity, will all bear convincing testimony that these birds have been in the forests and the orchards of the neighborhood.

Woodpeckers nest in hollows which they dig in trees, and all of these lay white eggs on a bed of fine chips at the bottom of the cavities.

Their toes usually number four, two of them pointing forward and the others backward. This arrangement enables the birds to grasp firmly the side of a tree, and especially is this the case when they brace themselves with their twelve long, stiff tail feathers.

One Kind Goes After Sap.

The sapsucker (a species of woodpecker), is looked upon with serious disfavor by foresters and orchardists, some variety of it being found in nearly every part of the country. This dislike arises from its universal custom of pecking holes in live trees. The bird does this chiefly to get the sap which flows upward through the soft cambium, lying just beneath the bast or inner bark, and it also eats the cambium and bast. To get this food the sapsucker drills holes in rows on the trunk, or along a limb.

As the sap collects in the openings, it is consumed by the bird until the little springs begin to fail, when another series of holes is made near the first one. Thus the work continues, until large areas of the tree may be covered with these perforations.

The sapsucker will take the sap of maple, mountain ash, pear, plum, apple, cherry, oak, peach, spruce, and ironwood trees, and of almost all species of pines, firs, hemlocks, cedars, cypress or cottonwoods.

In the northern forests, where many sapsuckers spend the summer, numerous birch trees are killed annually by them. In the Northwest, where at times sapsuckers are unusually plentiful, whole apple orchards have been destroyed.

In some trees, such as maples, walnuts, and hickories, their holes often pierce the sap wood beneath the cambium. In the subsequent growth of the trees, these wounds sometimes cause curly or bird's-eye wood well known to lumbermen. More often, however, this exposure of the wood allows insects, fungi, or bacteria to enter. These cause blemished or decayed areas, which reduce in value the lumber which later may be cut from the tree.

About the rings of holes made by these birds in locusts and sycamores, shoots often sprout from adventitious buds, and thus the symmetry of the tree is marred. Not only are hundreds of thousands of trees injured by sapsuckers, but a considerable proportion of those that are attacked die.

The woodpeckers do not confine their attentions wholly to trees. They make their explorations for sap through the bark of various large vines, such, for example, as the Virginia creeper, poison ivy, rattan, and trumpet creeper.

Close about the nesting tree of the sapsucker there are various trees where the old birds go for their sap, and where they take their young when they leave the nest. Here the family spends the summer with an abundance of normal food supply at hand. At this season they eat also ants, flies, beetles, and various other insects which are drawn to the flowing springs of sweet sap. Other woodpeckers come to these little fountains, as well as humming birds, warblers, and at times red squirrels.

Flicker Is the Best Known.

Among the woodpeckers the flicker is a bird of distinctive personality, and it attracts universal attention. Undoubtedly it is known to far more people than are the other woodpeckers. Its local names are numerous. "Wilkrissen," "yucker bird," "golden-winged woodpecker," "high-holder," "pigeon woodpecker" and "yellow-hammer" are some of them.

Of late years the custom has developed of adopting a "state bird." Already choice has been made by the organizations of 43 states, and in Alabama, not long ago, the question of which bird should be chosen created hot discussion. In the end the "yellow-hammer" was decided upon. The fight for its name was led by a women's patriotic organization, members of which called attention to the historic fact that a company of Alabama youths had placed the bird's feathers in their caps and, designating themselves "yellow-hammers," had marched away, singing, to the Civil war.

The red-headed woodpeckers and others of the family will now and then dart down to a road or to the lawn to capture an insects, or to pick up an acorn, but when the flicker drops to the ground he remains there for some time, often until frightened away. In the woods, the field, or the garden, one may come upon him hopping awkwardly through the grass.

His chief interest at such times is ants, which constitute 50 per cent of his food. He secures them by use of his remarkable tongue, which can be thrust outward two and a half inches or more beyond the end of the bill. His tongue is at all times covered with a sticky saliva, which catches and holds the ants as they rush forward to attack what appears to be a long worm that has crawled across their path or entered their burrow.

This tongue is a very wonderful organ. In the mouth it branches, and the two horns pass up the rear of the skull. On top they meet, and close together the two parts run forward and downward over the right eye to the nostril, which they enter, and extend onward to the end of the bill.

For Ever-Popular Canapes

Delicacies Accepted as Almost Indispensable Part of the Pre-Dinner Hour Offer Little Difficulties in Their Preparation.

Canapes—only a few years ago we were asking each other how to pronounce the word, and now they are an accepted part of every woman's food program. They add entertainment as well as savor to the half hour before dinner and everyone enjoys looking at a tray of attractive canapes, as well as eating them.

They take time to make, and disappear in a moment, but I think they repay us for our effort when we see our guests appreciate them so much. I find that the easiest way to make them is to cut the crusts from the loaf of bread and to spread it length wise with flavored butter. Perhaps I will use ketchup or pimiento butter for the first slice, anchovy butter for the next, watercress or parsley butter for the third, and cheese for the fourth. This gives a contrast of color as well as flavor. I then cut these large slices into finger lengths, squares, diamonds and rounds, or occasionally with fancy cutters into more interesting shapes. I arrange them on a damp cloth and then garnish each one with a different combination of contrasting garnishes.

I have the garnishes ready—thin slices of pickles, green peppers and pimientoes, or slices of anchovies, stuffed olives and hard-cooked eggs, minced egg whites and strained egg yolks, tiny (capers) birdseye onions and lobster claws. I take just a few moments to arrange these garnishes in simple designs. On the finger length strips I may put an overlapping row of stuffed olives, or the same around the edge of a round. The strips of green pepper can be crossed or arranged in a simple design—the egg slices put in the center, the egg-whites, well seasoned, used as an edging, the egg yolks to sprinkle in the center or around the edges. Just the least change of arrangement will make every canape individual. Sometimes I use with these a simple canape—just spread with butter and sprinkled with chutney or some other mixed pickle.

There is also another sort of canape which makes a good first course at the table. Either bread, toast or fried bread is used as its foundation and it is spread first with a flavored butter and then covered with slices of tomato, cucumber and hard-boiled egg, and garnished with mayonnaise, stuffed olives sliced, or sliced ripe olives or truffles. A hot mushroom canape is also delicious. This is made by sauting the mushrooms, arranging them on the bread and covering with a mushroom, and a slice of grilled tomato may be put under the mushroom. Sometimes a more elaborate canape such as salmon eggs, for which I am giving the recipe, is used. Another interesting combination is made of latticed anchovy fillets or cheese spread. You may like to use small baked tomatoes on toast and cover them with a cheese sauce. A stuffed egg garnished attractively is another suggestion. Stuffed raw tomatoes or slices of green pepper stuffed with cheese, garnished with pimientoes, is another savory choice. Frozen cheese cut into squares, served on a slice of tomato or a bed of shredded lettuce is another suitable appetizer. Crab or lobster salad on a bed of cucumbers is another suggestion for a cold canape. This should be served on buttered bread and garnished with green peppers or capers.

We certainly have gone much further in our canape preparation than the dictionary—"A slice or piece of bread fried in butter or oil, on which anchovies, mushrooms, etc., are served."

Cornucopia Canape.

Toast bread, cut in finger-lengths, spread with mayonnaise and chopped egg yolk. Fold a slice of dried beef into a cornucopia, fill with onion-seasoned cream cheese, and lay on toast.

Shrimp Canape.

Mix chopped parsley with creamed butter, and spread on small squares of bread. Top with a shrimp, and fill center with seasoned minced egg yolk and pimento.

Tomato Surprise Canape.

6 tomatoes
1 cup chopped celery
1 Philadelphia cream cheese
½ cup chopped nuts
½ cup capers or chopped olives
Lettuce

Skin six firm tomatoes and place in refrigerator. Mix celery, cheese, nuts and capers together, adding tomato pulp taken from tomatoes thoroughly chilled. Before scooping out tomatoes cut off small piece of top and insert through a slit in this a small lettuce leaf, to represent handle. Place on lettuce leaves and serve with mayonnaise or French dressing, whichever is preferred.

Quick Meal.

Clam juice cocktail
Asparagus with poached eggs and cheese
Lettuce and tomato salad
Ice cream with crushed strawberries
Cookies Coffee

For the quick meal today, I am suggesting an asparagus debauch, which any devotee of this vegetable likes to have as soon as it gets within reasonable price. It makes a delicious main dish served around poached eggs on toast. It should be dressed with brown butter and grated cheese or with hollandaise sauce which goes so well with both eggs and asparagus. With this a mixed tomato and cucumber salad with a french dressing will go well. For dessert we might have ice cream with crushed strawberries or fresh pineapple.

To go back to the beginning of the meal, if the night is warm, a chilled clam or tomato juice cocktail will be refreshing.

Order of Preparation.

Prepare asparagus and cool
Prepare salad and chill
Prepare berries
Poach eggs
Make toast
Dress asparagus
Make coffee

Most Penetrating Rays

Neutron rays, the most disruptive force known to science, are produced at the University of California with the huge 85-ton magnet device. Neutrons are recently discovered particles in the nuclei of atoms. The rays are more penetrating than X-rays or radium. Charged hydrogen gas particles are pumped into the machine and are circulated at high speed. At a velocity of 50,000 miles an hour the particles strike a metal target and "crack-up." Only the neutron particles thus released can penetrate lead, so a lead shield filters out other particles and the pure neutron rays emerge. The rays come through the lead window at the rate of 10,000,000 electrons a second. Scientists hope the neutron ray may be useful to the medical profession.—Chicago Tribune.

Blessing the Pets

St. Anthony the Great is the saint of domestic animals and pets. His feast day was celebrated in Italy recently. Thousands of people flocked to the churches, carrying, leading, and even pushing their pets to receive the blessings of the priests. Horses, mules, sheep, oxen, dogs, cats, suckling pigs, and even white mice and canaries mingled in the square outside St. Anthony's church in Rome, where all day long the priests were kept busy blessing the animals and sprinkling them with holy water. Many a hardy carter, who stopped to uncouple his horses and lead them to church, went back to his work, rejoicing in the strength, zeal and service of his faithful animals.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Funny at That

Tweet—Mr. Jordan, do you think marriage is a failure?

Kipps—Well—er—I've noticed the bride never gets the best man.—Portland Express.

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system; or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem:

Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that is all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and its gentle laxative action comes from senna. Parents are urged to use just pure California Syrup of Figs. Be sure bottle says 'California'.

Too Valuable

"Two things I wanted-

"I found out my trouble"

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood.

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin.

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores... in two convenient sizes... the larger is more economical.

"As Earth Turns" Is Epic Of Rugged American Life

Gladys Hasty Carroll's Best Selling Novel Shown in Preview Here

One of the most remarkable productions that has come from Hollywood in many a long day was shown for the first time at the Avon theatre Thursday afternoon, when "As the Earth Turns" was unfolded on the screen.

The showing was a preview of the new picture, which comes to the Avon for a two-day run next Thursday and Friday. A representative group of local people were guests of the management for the preview. The picture is one of three produced within the past year that has the 100 per cent endorsement of all censoring boards, Manager Johnson told his guests, "Little Women" and "Alice in Wonderland" being the other two in this class. It is the motion picture industry's answer to its critics who have been clamoring for "clean" pictures, he stated, and patronage accorded it and similar pictures will determine the fate of this type of picture.

The picture is a tribute to the Warner Bros. genius in seizing upon epochal themes of such bigness and importance as to make them doubly interesting and entertaining. It is destined to go down in screen history with the "Cimmarons," the "Silver Dollars" and the "Show Boats" of the cinema. For there is no question about Gladys Hasty Carroll's saga of New York rural life, while a work of fiction, being a masterpiece in its colorful and realistic presentation of a slice of real life.

The picture has adhered so faithfully to the original that its popularity would seem to be assured if one can judge by the record of the book which has broken all precedents as a best seller.

While the story deals with the homely events in the every day life of a group of farm folks the picture paints these characters with such glowing colors and with so much realism that they are not actors strutting across the stage but human beings that live and breathe on the screen. They are not characters lifted out of a book of fiction, but people like you and me who love and struggle and battle for happiness.

The settings themselves are of unusual interest, with three farms, complete with homes, barns and outbuildings, which transport the spectator into the heart of New England to pass through a blustering, blizzardy winter into a springtime of birds and blossoms, to a full summer and an autumn of golden, ripened fields.

The characterizations, however, are the outstanding features of the picture—a sturdy, rugged farmer with a querulous complaining second wife, an efficient daughter, whose nature clashes like steel rapiers with that of her foster sister; a shallow, erotic product of the city, whose selfishness comes near to wrecking the home.

Then there are the two grown sons with their families, one efficient like his father, the other a shiftless ne'er do well, and still another family headed by a youthful musical genius who prefers the farm to the plaudits of the multitude.

All these are protrayed by a cast of players who fit into their parts as though carved for them by nature. While there are no stars in the production, as is frequently the case in pictures of

Control Board Helps Citrus

Majority Vote To Continue Regulating Shipments of Grapefruit

Orlando, April 19. — Although several members of the Florida Control Committee expressed themselves as favoring doing away with prorates on grapefruit for the balance of this season at the meeting held here on Monday of this week, a majority voted in favor of continuing to regulate shipments of grapefruit.

The session was one of the shortest and most businesslike held so far this year. With the recent decision of the U. S. Circuit Court of appeals in their favor, the committeemen appeared more sure of themselves than ever. Prorates for the 10 leading auction markets for the trade week of April 19-25, inclusive, call for 555 cars of oranges and 272 cars of grapefruit.

These figures call for 10 more cars of oranges and two more of grapefruit than for the previous week.

Sen. John S. Taylor, Largo, indicated he wanted to "open up" on grapefruit — that is, abandon prorates for the balance of the season because the crop is almost gone and quality is deteriorating.

Several committeemen, including C. A. Stewart, Frostproof and L. C. Edwards, Tampa said second grade fruit is bringing more now than first grade fruit brought three weeks ago. Mr. Stewart declared that growers stand to make some nice change on their poor grade fruit by selling to canners at around 75 cents a box.

A report was made on the complaint filed by Kroger stores officials (a northern grocery chain) that sufficient supplies of citrus could not be secured because of restrictions on the auctions. The report of the sub-committee read, in part, as follows:

"To avoid this in the future, arrangements have been made for the Kroger representative in Florida to advise the control committee secretary sufficiently in advance when sales will be conducted, giving their approximate requirements by markets for this period in order that allotments may be increased in these markets to supply this extra demand. They have also agreed to advise when there are no sales and periods when their requirements will be below normal."

Home Coming Day at Episcopal Church

Sunday will be Home Coming Day for the parish of the Church of the Redeemer. There will be a Corporate Communion at 11 a. m., followed by an out-door picnic at the home of Norton T. Smith.

Invitations have been issued to a number of former parishioners who have moved to other communities in recent years.

unusual magnitude, there are several who give promise of soon becoming stellar luminaries.

Jean Muir, but recently from the New York stage, leaps at once into the forefront of screen players by her simple, sincere and effective interpretations. There is an elusive, wistful fantasy about her that reminds the reviewer of Maude Adams.

Donald Woods, who makes his screen bow in "As the Earth Turns," although he has had considerable stage experience, wins his spurs as a screen player with his masterful portrayal of the boy who fights his way to make good on the farm, after being brought up in the city, and to win the heart of the girl he loves.

All of the other parts are handled by capable players, some known to the screen, but mostly noted on the stage.

The perfection of all the ingredients in the production of this picture makes of it one of the epic romances of American life that no one should miss seeing.

Political Announcements

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I hereby announce my candidacy for County Commissioner for District No. 1, subject to the Democrat primary, June 5th, 1934. I am a Florida Cracker, having been raised in Polk County, and have been a Democrat all my life. For the past ten years I have been a citizen of Avon Park. During the past nineteen years I have had a wide experience in road construction and maintenance work. I believe I am qualified to handle the affairs of the district and give competent service. I will appreciate your vote and support.

FRANK ARMISTEAD

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I wish to announce my candidacy for County Commissioner from District No. 1., subject to vote of the Democratic Primary Election June 5, 1934.

As a candidate I am pledged to no faction or individual. If elected I pledge my best efforts in behalf of my district and the county as a whole. I would greatly appreciate your support.

Respectfully,
J. L. WELLS

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of county commissioner for District 1, Highlans County, subject to the Democratic Primary, June 5, 1934.

I have been a resident of this community for the past 21 years and served previously as county commissioner for this district when it was part of old DeSoto county.

Being a long-time resident here I believe I have a full knowledge of the needs of the district and county as to roads and other vital matters and if elected promise an honest, efficient administration with a square deal for all concerned.

Your vote and support will be appreciated.

S. P. DURRANCE.

FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

I wish to announce my candidacy for nomination to the office of Circuit Judge, subject to the Democratic Primaries in June.

If you feel that my service as circuit judge merits your further confidence in my ability and integrity, I shall greatly appreciate your support and vote in the June primaries.

W. J. BARKER

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

To the Voters of Highlands County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for re-election to the office of Representative for Highlands County in the Legislature. If nominated and elected, I shall continue to serve the people of Highlands County and the State of Florida fairly and impartially to the best of my ability. Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

J. E. SIMS.

Platform

1. I favor the adjustment of the bonded debt of our political sub-divisions on a basis of their ability to pay. This is one of the most vital problems facing the people of Florida today.
2. I will favor a law requiring a uniform system of arriving at tax values in Florida, State, County and Municipal.
3. I favor economical but adequate provisions for our public schools. Teachers are entitled to their salaries when due just as any other public servants. I have supported a reasonable school program in the past and shall continue to do so.
4. I favor an old age pension law.
5. I favor a reasonable Workmen's Compensation law, one that is fair both to employer and employee.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

To the Voter of Highlands County:

I hereby anounce myself a candidate for election to the office of Representative for Highlands County in the Legislature.

If nominated and elected I shall serve the PEOPLE of Highlands County and the State of Florida fairly and squarely according to majority wishes and mandates of the PEOPLE.

DR. A. T. EIDE.

Platform

1. Public officials are merely the PEOPLE'S servants.
2. It is my duty as an American citizen to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America and the State of Florida; to assist in maintaining law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred percent Americanism; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, State and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; and to transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy.
3. Politicel office holders in the past have treated questions of public interest with more or less favor especially vested interests.

The dictionary defines 'FAVOR as follows:

1. To regard with good will;
2. To treat tenderly;
3. To resemble in appearance;
4. To help to bear out;
5. A love token.

4. If I do FAVOR questions of public issue. I will WORK for them.
5. I will WORK for (to put forth physical or mental effort; labor; toil) toward the adjustment of the bonded debt of our political subdivisions according to the wishes of the majority tax payers in their political subdivisions.
6. I will WORK for a law EQUALIZING tax assessments, Municipal, County and State.
7. I will WORK for an adequate school system a full term, and a living wage for teachers with reallocation of state funds to provide for same.
8. I will WORK for an adequate old age pension law.
9. I will WORK for a Workman's Compensation Law.
10. I will WORK for a State Homestead law. A home for every citizen.

Business Conditions Better In All Lines, Exchange Representative Finds

That both citrus prices and general business conditions are on the up-grade, is evidenced by reports from the Florida Citrus Exchange this week.

Earl Lines, Advertising Manager, who has just returned from two week's work in the markets with dealer service men, states that better times are being enjoyed throughout the markets, though not in the same proportion everywhere.

"Automobile production for April," states Mr. Lines, "will probably amount to 375,000 cars, according to official estimates. This is double the production in April a year ago. In Detroit, we are told that industrial employment was at a four year peak. Retail sales activity throughout the country, real estate transactions, car loadings, steel orders and bank clearings, all indicate a marked increase over a year ago. Both volume and dollar sales in food and fruit stores have shown a substantial increase. Profits are reported by many businesses. Carload orders for citrus at f. o. b. prices are more easily obtained in the private sale markets, because of the improved general business conditions. Our dealer service men are making good showings at their work with the retail trade."

Citrus prices have jumped considerably ahead of last year, according to E. E. Patterson, General Sales Manager of the Citrus Exchange. "Florida oranges advanced 45 cents per box in March as compared with a year ago. Grapefruit advanced 57 cents ahead of March last year," stated Mr. Patterson. "There was also a substantial improvement in March over February this year. In the 10 large markets, grapefruit brought 28 cents more in March than in February, oranges 45 cents more. These advances can be attributed to the good quality of Florida fruit, controlled shipments to market, hard selling effort and better times throughout the north."

"Black Beauty" Is Screened With a Distinguished Cast

The book that has ranked as the "best seller"—with young and old alike—for more than fifty years, has been re-created for the sound screen! "Black Beauty," Anna Sewell's classic of man's most faithful servant, which, more than all other propaganda combined, did more to alleviate the conditions of the horse, through its appealingly sympathetic manner of presenting what might be called the horse's point of view" to a man, has been made into a screen production and will be seen at the Avon theatre, Tuesday and Wednesday.

It has been estimated that more than 6,000,000 readers are acquainted with the trials and tribulations of "Black Beauty." It has been translated into every living tongue and is beloved by grown-ups and juveniles alike. First accepted as a child's book, its merits as a work of human propaganda were recognized by George T. Angell, founder of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, who was principally responsible for its huge circulation.

In producing this master work so rich in romance and pathos, Monogram has spared no pains or expense in doing full justice to the story, and lovers of the book can be assured that the screen treatment is authentic and sympathetic.

The cast is an exceptional one, featuring Esther Ralston and Alexander Kirkland, and includes such well known names as Hale Hamilton, John Larkin, Gavin Gordon, Don Alvarado, Theodore Lorch, Ed Fetherstone, George Walsh, Al Bridge and Bruce Covington.

Legion Auxiliary To Conduct Poppy Day, May 26th

Avon Park will be called upon to honor the World War dead and give aid to the war's living victims by wearing memorial popies on May 26th. This day, the Saturday before Memorial Day, will be "Poppy Day" throughout the United States and will be generally observed by the wearing of the little red flower of Flanders Fields.

Observance of "Poppy Day" here will be directed by the American Legion Auxiliary. Mrs. R. H. Lawhon, president of the local Auxiliary Unit has announced. Women of the Auxiliary will distribute poppies on the streets and receive contributions for the Auxiliary welfare and relief among the disabled veterans and their families.

Organization of a corps of volunteer workers to distribute the memorial flowers throughout the city is going forward rapidly. A large supply of the poppies has been ordered from Lake City hospital where disabled veterans have been given employment during the winter and spring making the little paper flowers.

"The purpose of 'Poppy Day' is to give everyone an opportunity to pay individual tribute to the men who gave their lives in defense of the nation," said the chairman of poppy committee. "The little act of wearing a poppy touches the individual more closely than large public ceremonies in which he is only a spectator and awakens a realization of the individual responsibility to the nation, so greatly needed at this time. 'Poppy Day' also gives everyone an opportunity to share in the vast work which the American Legion and Auxiliary are doing for the disabled men, their families and the families of the dead."

Sugar Mill Closes; Reports Big Season

Clewiston, April 19.—(FNS)—The huge mill of the United States Sugar company at Clewiston has closed after the most successful season in its history. Eighty million pounds of sugar were produced since the harvest season began last November, an increase in production of 15 percent over last year. The quality of the raw sugar was unusually high. The cane is cut from 20,000 acres of rich Everglades muck land.

Most of the 3,600 workers will be maintained at Clewiston as next season's cane is already in the ground and will require attention until the cutting season reopens early in the winter.

ELECTION CASE MANDATE HERE

Supreme Court Unanimously Favors Carson In Election Contest Suit

The mandate from the State Supreme Court in the Suit brought by L. T. Farmer in the name of the Attorney General against W. Z. Carson was received here Monday. The mandate orders "The said judgment of the Circuit Court be and the same is hereby affirmed; it is further ordered by the court that the defendant in error do have and recover of and from the plaintiff in error his costs by him in this behalf expended."

The opinion from the Supreme Court which was written by Justice Whitfield and was affirmed by every member of the court says in part:

"The respondent's name was not printed on the primary ballot and he was not nominated as a party candidate and his name was not printed on the ballots used in the general election; but his name was written on the ballots by the voters and he thereby received a majority of the votes cast at the election for the office of Clerk of Circuit Court."

"Under the statute the respondent's name could not legally be "allowed or printed" on the official ballots given to the electors as they appeared to cast their votes at the general election, but the electors could legally vote for any person qualified to fill the office by writing the name in the space provided for that purpose on the ballots, and by making the proper X marks opposite the names."

"In this case the statute did not make the respondent ineligible to fill the office because of his failure to file the expense statements under the primary law, but forbade his name to be printed on the primary ballot, and also forbade his name to be "allowed or printed" on the general election ballots."

"Respondent's name was not printed on the general election ballots. That was the penalty imposed by the statute for failure to file the expense statements. Nor was the respondent's name "allowed" to be put on the ballots in violation of the prohibition of the statute, when his name was written by the voters in the space required by the statute to be left blank on the ballots so that electors could vote for any eligible person they desired to."

"The provision of the statute forbidding commissions or certificates of election or of nomination to be given to those candidates who failed to file their expense statements, refers to nominations in the primary elections as to the election of party executive committees, delegates to national conventions, etc., in primary elections. The statute does not provide that the failure to file the required financial statements of expenses incurred in primary elections renders the person so failing ineligible to election or to fill the office if elected, though it does make a wilful violation of section 421 a criminal offense. Section 8199 (5935) C. G. L."

"It does not appear that the respondent has been convicted under the last cited section or any other law, or that he is ineligible to fill the office." Affirmed. Davis, C. J. and Ellis, Terrell and Buford, J. J. Concur.

Chief Justice Davis wrote a concurring opinion.

Wilder Quotes Law on Half Year Tags

In order to clarify the situation regarding the issuance of half year tags for automobiles, Acting Motor Vehicle Commissioner George H. Wilder has written all tax collectors in the state quoting the present law on the subject.

In his letter to Tax Collector Ruth Bass Hylton, he says:

"The present Motor Vehicle law reads in part as follows:

'Any motor vehicle or trailer acquired after June 30th of any year and not subject to registration prior to that time shall, on application to the Motor Vehicle Commissioner for registration for such motor vehicle or trailer after June 30th, or aforesaid year, be charged at the rate for such registration one half the annual rate. Provided, however, that no license plate shall be issued for less than $5.00 * * *'

"You will note from the above excerpt that only those motor vehicles acquired after June 30th, and not subject to registration prior to that time, will be permitted half year licenses."

Highlands Lodge I.O.O.F. Celebrates Birth of Order

Celebrating the 115th anniversary of Odd Fellowship Highlands Lodge No. 80 entertained Thursday night with a banquet in the lodge room in the Brickell building. The evening also witnessed the close of a membership drive by the local lodge in which 30 new members and reinstatements were reported.

Notable guests and speakers of the evening included high officials of the order in the state and were Salvadore Llosa, grand master of the state of Florida, Tampa, Leo E. Walters, past grand master, also of Tampa, R. B. Crawford, past grand master of Fort Meade, Frank McCoy, past grand patriarch of Manitoba, Canada and Gordon B. Johnson, district deputy grand master of Arcadia.

The meeting also signalized the appointment of E. A. DeLaney as deputy grand master for this district of Florida.

The very appetizing banquet was served by the wives and daughters of local members of the order and was greatly enjoyed by all present. The gathering broke up at a late hour with all present declaring they had spent a very enjoyable evening.

REVENUE INCREASE SHOWN BY COAST LINE

Returns For 1933 Show Substantial Gain Over 1932 Receipts

Operating revenues of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad company during 1933 totaled $87,908,943.33, an increase of $640,370.68, or 1.72 percent over the revenues of 1932.

The report was made by directors of the company at the annual stockholders meeting held in Richmond, Va., last week.

Freight revenues increased 3.46 percent during the past year with an accompanying increase of 7.57 percent, in tonnage handled, the report showed. Total passenger revenues decreased 8.63 percent, however, notwithstanding an increase of 30.53 percent in the number of passengers handled.

All officers of the company were re-elected.

Operating expenses for 1933 were $29,127,630.44, a decrease from 1932 of $3,143,246.57, or 9.74 percent, the report showed. Several reductions in salaries of officers and a general deduction of 10 percent in wages of all other employes, made in 1932 in the interest of economy, continued in effect. Total operating payrolls for 1933 were $18,469,455.08, as compared with $20,470,808.05 for 1932, a decrease of $2,001,362.97.

The directors reported a large increase in the number of Winter visitors to Florida in the season of 1933-34. This was attributed to the lower fares which became effective last December, to improved schedules, the severe Winter in the North and East and a general improvement in business conditions.

Gross passenger revenues in January, 1934, showed an increase over January 1933 of 8.79 percent with an increase of 118.6 percent in the number of passengers handled. During February, the increase in passengers revenues was 22.25 percent and the increase in the number of passengers was 133.52 percent, as compared with figures for February, 1933.

Freight traffic showed an increase in all classifications except brick, sand and gravel.

The net deficit for 1933 was $2,385,787.71 as compared with $6,685,229.46 for 1932, a decrease of $4,299,441.75, or 64.01 percent.

Ford Heacock Out For Representative

Ford W. Heacock well known Sebring insurance man, has entered the race for representative from Highlands county, making his formal announcement in the Times this week. He has also qualified this week, paying his filing fee to the clerk of the court.

Mr. Heacock is well known in various parts of the county, though he has not previously taken an active part in politics. He is opposed by Jack Sims, incumbent, and Dr. A. T. Eide, both of Lake Placid. Mr. Heacock has not set forth his platform as yet but says it is receiving his careful consideration.

He who plants a forest lays a foundation for future income.

SPACE AT WORLD'S FAIR COMMANDS A PREMIUM

Earl Brown Makes Report On Preparations At Century of Progress

Jacksonville, April 26.—(Special)—Exhibit space at the Chicago World's Fair is at a premium, is the report brought from the Exposition City by Earl W. Brown, General Manager of the Florida Exhibit. He spent a week in Chicago going over plans for the enlarged and improved display which this state will make in anticipation of the enormous crowds which will visit the show, following its formal opening, May 26.

"Every foot of space in the Court of States has been taken," said Mr. Brown, "with several belated applicants waiting in the corridors of the Administration building, hoping that by some lucky chance, room may be found for them. So great has been the demand for exhibit space that at least two large exhibitors are having buildings erected on piling in the North lagoon — one east from the center of the Twelfth Street Service have been engaged in clearing the property of the shipbuilding firm preliminary to start of the actual building program.

Tampa's importance as a deep-water port will be greatly increased by construction of the dry dock, which when completed will give the port all adequate harbor facilities to meet regular and emergency requirements as the largest American dry dock between Norfolk and New Orleans.

At present vessels of more than 3,000 tons must go elsewhere for repairs. Steamship companies operating between European, Atlantic and Gulf ports, which now patronize dry docks out of the line of their commercial routes will find the new dry dock a great time saver.

It is estimated that this new enterprise will bring at least $250,000 worth of repair work into the port annually. The completed project will widen the field for industrial activity on Florida's west coast and add to the stability of Tampa as a year-round city.

Dr. Davison's Letter of Resignation as President C. of C.

In resigning as president of the Avon Park chamber of commerce at the special meeting Monday evening, Dr. W. A. Davison set forth his reasons in the following letter. He expressed his appreciation for the cooperation extended him and also for the fact that all bills had been paid and there is a balance in the treasury. His letter:

Chamber of Commerce,
Avon Park, Florida.
Dear Friends:

For more than two years I have been a member of the board of directors and president of your chamber of commerce, and have received nothing but cooperation and courteous treatment; however, the time has now arrived when I must tender my resignation as a member and president of your board to take effect at once.

We are leaving May 1st for the northwest and planning to be gone several months, so we feel that you should have a president resident among you, not only to carry on the work, but to lay plans for the fall and winter months.

The chamber of commerce has wiped out all its old debts and owes no man anything today, having a small balance in the treasury and about 125 members, so that I have no fault to find or censure to offer, but do greatly appreciate the cooperation of all the people and especially of the members of the board. The chamber of commerce is one organization where neither religion nor politics should be discussed and one organization to which every man and woman desiring the welfare of Avon Park should belong.

Thanking you one and all for your cooperation and help, I am

Very sincerely yours,
W. A. DAVISON.

The people who have achieved, who have become large, strong, vigorous people, who have reduced their infant mortality, who have the best trades in the world, who have an appreciation for art, literature and music, who are progressive in science and in every activity of the human intellect, are people who have used liberal amounts of milk and its products.—Dr. E. V. McCollum.

Mass Meeting to be Held at Auditorium On Monday Evening

All citizens are urged to attend the mass meeting to be held at the high school auditorium Monday night at eight o'clock. The meeting is being held under the auspices of the local committee of the Scenic Highlanders, Ridge boosters. The principal speaker will be L. H. Kramer of Lake Wales, Roger Babson being unable to attend as first expected.

The Ridge exhibit at the World's Fair in Chicago in the summer will be discussed and explained as well as the new Federal highway through this section. Dr. W. A. Davison will act as chairman of the meeting.

EIGHT AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

Voters To Express Views On Constitutional Amendments In November

Tampa, April 26.—(FNS)—Sharing interest with the nominee who will be elected to fill the many public offices in Florida, are the eight proposed constitutional amendments that will be listed on the ballot of the general election in November, all of which merit the serious consideration of voters.

The number of proposed amendments is the greatest ever presented at one election. Four being the largest number ever to appear on a single ballot before. The proposed amendments are as follows:

1. The amendment to consolidate the offices of tax assessors and tax collectors into one office in all counties.

2. The amendment to repeal the bone-dry prohibition law in Florida.

3. Amendment to exempt from taxation all homesteads having a valuation of not more than five thousand dollars.

4. Amendment to reduce the number of judicial circuits in the state from 28 to 15.

5. An amendment to exempt picture studios from all ad valorem taxes for 15 years.

6. Amendment for elimination of grand juries except in capital cases or where the circuit judge calls the jury into session. The state attorney would file criminal information under this arrangement.

7. Amendment to empower the legislature to provide a uniform system of county and municipal government. (The object of this amendment being to eliminate the local bill nuisance in the legislature).

8. Amendment to consolidate the City of Jacksonville and the County of Duval, subject to a referendum in Duval county if passed by the state voters.

The last amendment on the list would apply only in Duval county, but must be submitted to the entire electorate, that being the only method by which the Constitution may be amended.

The proposal to consolidate the county offices of tax collector and tax assessor into one office, if adopted will become effective January, 1937, after the expiration of the present terms of assessors and collectors. Candidates would seek the combined offices in 1936 elections. There have been rumors that the validity of this resolution would be attacked in the courts to prevent the amendment from appearing on the ballot. Opponents claim it is invalid because it was not signed during a legislative session. This was the much publicized "lost and found" resolution that was signed by President Futch of the Senate and Speaker Peter Tomasello of the House September 15, 1933.

Large Bear Killed Near Lake Placid

Frank Tauchen, Julian McAdams and two other men went on a bear hunt in the section known as Parker Island, east of Lake Placid, last Sunday and was successful in killing one of the largest bears that has been reported in this section in years. The bear was seven feet and four inches long and was estimated to weigh about 400 pounds.

It is believed to be the bear that has been making raids on hog pens and killing other domestic animals in that section for some time.

Mr. Tauchen and Mr. McAdams have killed six bears in the last year and the one bagged Sunday was the largest one of the lot.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration is endeavoring to take the "bump" out of bumper crops.

NEXT TUESDAY LAST CHANCE TO REGISTER

Only Few Candidates Have Paid Qualifying Fee So Far

Voters wishing to participate in the June primary must register on or before May 1 and must pay their poll tax by May 19. Candidates who wish to qualify must file oath and pay filing fee to the clerk of the board of county commissioners before midnight of May 11.

Up to the time of going to press the following candidates had paid their filing fees and qualified themselves:

For representative: Dr. A. T. Eide, of Lake Placid, and Ford W. Heacock, Sebring.

For county commissioner district No. 1, G. A. Harper and J. L. Wells. District No. 2, A. F. Spooner and A. B. Allen. District No. 3, Willie Williams and H. E. Galloway. District No. 5, Ben C. Hope and N. B. Jackson.

Mrs. Austin Pearce has qualified as a candidate for committee woman from precinct No. 8.

Candidates for representative must pay a filing fee of $18 and candidates for county commissioner must pay a filing fee of $48. Of this sum three-fifths is used to defray the expenses of the election and the other two-fifths goes to the Democratic party.

All candidates must file three itemized expense reports, the first must be filed between May 7 and May 11, the second must be filed between May 24 and May 28 and the third must be filed not later than 10 days after the second primary which places the final date on July 6th.

Still in Full Blast Found on South Side By Constable Roberts

Constable Will Roberts got himself a still, running in full blast, Thursday night in the old Frazer quarters on the south side. Operating the still at the time were Frank McPherson and Rosalie Norris, both of ebon hue.

These two had constructed a shack with lumber from one of the mills, dug and boarded up a cellar and floored it with loose boards. The boiler, approximately an oil barrel, was in the cellar with two galvanized water pipes emerging from the top to carry off the product. These were cooled by running through two troughs of water. Whole corn was used in making the "shine" and there was one barrel of mash in the making.

After a run was made everything could be dismantled and placed in the cellar with no evidence showing to the casual observer.

Constable Roberts was assisted in making the raid by Night Officer Ivey Barwick. Both the alleged operators were placed in jail to await a hearing.

Fr. and Mrs. Johnson Leave for Nashville

Father and Mrs. Harcourt Johnson left today for Nashville, Tennessee, where Father Johnson will undergo medical treatment at Vanderbilt Hospital.

If Father Johnson's health permits he will go on to Washington where he has been invited to attend a ten-day conference at the College of Preachers, an endowed foundation which is run in connection with the National Cathedral.

On Sunday the morning service will be conducted by the Lay Reader, Mr. William M. Reck. During the month of May services will be discontinued at the Episcopal church but the church school will meet as usual at ten o'clock every Sunday morning.

During Father Johnson's absence Mr. Demos Mandis, Senior Warden, will be in charge of all parochial matters.

DeAnguera Will Manage Northern Club This Summer

F. DeAnguera left Thursday morning for Chicago where he will meet Mrs. DeAnguera who left for there two weeks ago. This summer Mr. DeAnguera will have charge of the Chikaming Country Club at Lakeside, Mich. This club is located 75 miles from Chicago and has a large clientele of Chicago business men. Mr. DeAnguera will return to Avon Park about October 1, and again assume charge of Pine Crest Lakes Club.

Stores Will Close Thursday Afternoon During the Summer

Beginning next Thursday, May 3, the stores and business houses of Avon Park will close at noon on Thursday's during the summer months. Under present plans this will continue through the month of August. The Barnett National Bank will remain open until two o'clock on Thursdays but will close on Saturdays at noon, conforming to the practice of all other banks in this district. It is expected the Thursday afternoon closing will be unanimous among the merchants, the majority having signed up and others signifying their willingness to cooperate.

Those signing thus far:

Avon Barber Shop, Georgia-Florida Market, L. W. Connell, F. M. Wolf, B. & B. Cash Grocery, Ragsdale, the Cleaner, R. C. Jarrette, Kahn's Store, Universal Markets, Inc., Jordon & Son, Orr & Son, Davis 5- 10 and 25 Cent Store, R. F. Sappington, Mrs. R. X. Droit, Jacaranda Beauty Shop, Mandis Dairy, The Doris Store, F. C. Collins, Avon Insurance Agency, Friedlander's, B. & B. Cash Market, Bon Ton Beauty Shoppe, L. D. Roberts Pressing Club, Dr. A. H. Able, The Fair Stores, R. J. Rutherford and Dr. A. R. Clark.

WALL WARNS VOTERS ABOUT AMENDMENT

Tampa Politician Against Home Exemption Amendment To Constitution

Tampa, April 25.—(FNS)—In a statement to the press this week Perry G. Wall, Tampa, long a student of Florida tax problems, warns voters to give the matter serious thought before casting their ballot on the amendment to exempt homes from taxation.

The adoption of this amendment Mr. Wall believes would practically destroy any semblance we have of a tax system. More than 170,000 homes, he points out, would be exempted from taxation under its provisions because the limit of $5,000 will exempt homes worth much more than that amount under the present method of assessment. At an average of $1,000 each, this would reduce the state and county tax rolls fully $170,000,000. The total assessment in the state is about $500,000,000.

Mr. Wall forsees another danger that rental properties now used for residences can, and will, be deeded to the renters and be exempted as homesteads under some form of a sale contract that will be devised solely for the purpose of escaping taxation, a point which has apparently been overlooked by those favoring the amendment.

Another important point, Mr. Wall brings out, is if these properties are exempt from taxation for the expenses of governmental operation, they are still left liable for bond debts and interest on bonds, resulting in increased security for bondholders. "Is this a scheme of the bondholders to increase their security?" Mr. Wall asks.

"The people of Florida need to do some serious thinking on this subject. This innocent looking amendment, apparently beneficial, is packed with dynamite," Mr. Wall concludes.

Donations Needed For Ball Team

Donations in the amount of $66.50 have been received by the baseball team, to be used for uniforms and other equipment to put the team in readiness to open the season Sunday, May 6th. More money is needed, according to Manager Jimmie Spencer, and donations may be left either with him or with W. M. Hetherington, secretary and treasurer of the team, at the Times office.

Donations to date:

DAVISON QUITS AS C. OF C. HEAD

Keller New President With Jack Head Secretary of Body

H. E. Keller was named president of the Avon Park chamber of commerce at a special meeting Monday night. Mr. Keller takes the place of Dr. W. A. Davison whose resignation was reluctantly accepted by the chamber. Dr. Davison's resignation was due to pressure of other business and the fact that he will be absent from the city for the entire summer.

With the elevation of Mr. Keller to the presidency, this left the secretaryship open and Jack Head was named for this office by the unanimous vote of the meeting.

Col. Chas. R. Head presented some bills he had paid for publicity during the Red Bird's visit here and these were approved for payment.

This brought up the question of finances and it was suggested that the chamber sponsor the first home game of the newly organized amateur team. A committee consisting of Jack Head, E. F. Carmichael and W. C. Beckett was named to arrange the details if meeting with the approval of the team.

Dr. D. G. Perry spoke briefly on the Scenic Highlanders and their efforts to promote the Ridge section. He stressed the need of maintaining the exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago this summer and said Avon Park had been assessed $450 for this purpose. Dr. Perry, W. T. Coates and E. G. Todd will head a committee to raise this amount. Dr. Perry also announced a mass meeting to be held at the high school auditorium Monday night at which time the Ridge section will be discussed together with the exhibit at Chicago and the new Federal highway through here. It is hoped to have Roger Babson, noted economist, present at this gathering.

John H. Hood, R. T. Fairey and I. H. Ford were named a committee to contact the American Legion headquarters and the Chevrolet Motor Co., regarding the motorcade to the Legion National Convention at Miami next fall. It is understood the Chevrolet Co., is donating the use of 75 cars which will start from Chicago and be the nucleus of a motorcade to Miami. On entering Florida the party will split into three groups, one traveling down the west coast, another the east coast and the third down the center of the state. The committee named is for the purpose of seeing that this section is included in the itinerary.

The board of directors of the chamber will meet on the first Monday in May unless this conflicts with the proposed state road department meeting in Sebring.

Hardee Resigns as President United Citrus Workers

At a meeting held at Lake Vigo on Wednesday, April 18, J. T. Hardee resigned as president of the United Citrus Workers. J. M. Chapman of Haines City was appointed as acting president, subject to ratification by the membership at large. Following his resignation, Mr. Hardee issued the following statement relative to his action:

To All Citrus Workers:

I desire to acquaint all of my friends and fellow workers in the Union that my resignation from the presidency was not due to any abatement of interest in the work, but entirely because I was unable to support my family and carry on in that position. I resigned reluctantly and with great regret and only because of the family burdens resting upon me.

I shall go onward and forward, doing whatever I can for the Union and the cause of the working man in this state, and I shall energetically and to the best of my ability perform the duties of any other position higher up which it might be my privilege to occupy.

Faithfully yours,
J. T. HARDEE.

New Roof For Jail.

The FERA project to put a new roof on the county jail has at last been approved and work will begin as soon as the county procures the material, according to information available at the court house yesterday.

Revolution in Austria
Why Paint Toenails?
Slow Waltz, Less Fighting
Watching the Hen Lay

Vienna and what is left of Austria are threatened with a revolution. Signs placed secretly on mail boxes read:

"Workers and comrades, remain united and be careful. The day of revenge is coming." Signed "A Fighter."

With that comes news that the Vienna-Paris-London express train was wrecked in Austria by the removal of a steel rail, causing the death of a fireman and one other and injuring many. The result of such tactics, keeping travelers and money out of Austria, may be to bring revolution more rapidly.

In New Orleans the convention of "American Cosmeticians," manufacturers and distributors of things that ladies put on their faces, announce more in the way of transformation than has been seen thus far—hair of many colors, easily changed; very fine "precious stone" effects on the finger nails.

Many things can be forgiven, but hope and pray that ladies and cosmeticians can be persuaded to give up painting the toenails. It is a terrible thing when a young woman crosses her legs to see, peeping out of new-fangled sandals, a big toe with a nail made to look like a cabochon ruby.

Knowledge of mob psychology is shown in the statement of a night club manager.

"When a fight breaks out in the club the orchestra has orders to stop jazz and everything exciting and play a slow, dreamy waltz. That quiets them."

According to information obtained by Mr. "Whirligig," a quiet waltz keeps those not interested in the fight from joining in.

An intelligent Frenchman, Gustave Le Bon, has written a book called La Foule ("The Crowd"), that confirms the night club manager's theory. Crowds do not reason; logical arguments have no effect on them. But music does affect them, and so does loud yelling.

A distinguished American, living in Spain, told how wonderfully fresh the eggs were. The farmer's wife would watch the hen sitting on the nest, taking the egg as soon as it was laid, and give it to the American for breakfast.

Similarly, the earnest, conscientious American tax collectors watch the country's business men sitting on the industrial nest and take away the dollar as soon as it is made.

The veterans' administration in Washington laid down the interesting rule that blind veterans of the World war should receive twice as much as a soldier who lost a leg in battle.

The legless veteran gets $119 a month as a maximum. If he has lost the use of both feet, or both hands, or one foot and one hand and one eye, he can get a maximum of $175 a month. A veteran totally blind is entitled to $150 a month, plus $50 for a nurse or attendant, "even though the blindness resulted from willful misconduct."

Except insanity, no misfortune is greater than loss of eyesight.

If you feel gloomy and perhaps begin to feel that "the world is going to the dogs," remember that the Gracchi believed it in Rome long ago. Adam and Eve believed it when they were put out of the garden. The world has always been "going to the dogs," yet always getting better.

May first, according to the President's proclamation, will be "Child Health day." The best way to promote child health is to encourage abundant distribution of the right kinds of food for children, particularly good, fresh milk, butter, eggs, fresh vegetables, fruits, at reasonable prices.

To pay farmers to cut down production of such things, and force up prices, may be good for prosperity, but it will not be good for the health of children.

In the Stroud (Okla.) prison young Mr. Raymond Boles, if that is his right name, knows that young, shrinking, timid American girls are sometimes dangerous. He walked into the Hudiel home, pistol in hand, told Mildred, sixteen, and her sister, Lillian, seventeen, that he was none other than the famous bandit, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, demanded the key to their absent father's automobile. Lillian took away his pistol, Mildred held him by the hair.

Since Uncle Sam went off the gold basis and began buying gold at any price he had to pay, he has brought across the water about $700,000,000 worth of new gold, an increase in our gold reserve greater than the total gold ownership of any other nation of earth, except France, England and Spain.

This makes Europe feel dubious about "selling dollars short."

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Wirt's Red Plot Story Flattened Out by Investigators—Senate Votes for Extra 10 Per Cent Income Tax—Auto and Coal Troubles.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DR. WILLIAM A. WIRT, the really eminent educator of Gary, Ind., told his story of a "red plot" to overthrow the government of the United States, so far as the Democratic majority of the house investigating committee permitted, and the general opinion throughout the country was that it was "not so hot." The Democrats declared it was utter bunk. The Republicans, who had hoped to find good political material in the affair, asserted that gag rule had been enforced.

Dr. W. A. Wirt

The revelation of the alleged scheme of the radicals, said Wirt, came to him at a dinner given by Miss Alice Barrows at a country house near Washington. The other guests were Robert Bruere, David C. Doyle, Miss Hildegarde Kneeland and Miss Mary Taylor, all, like the hostess, connected with the government, and Lawrence Todd, chief of the Tass, official Soviet government news agency in the United States. From their conversation, Wirt said, he gathered that men high in the councils of the administration were plotting the overthrow of the American social order and that they considered President Roosevelt as another Kerensky to be followed by another Stalin. The six men named by Wirt were Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace; Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture and recognized head of the brain trust; Prof. Milburn L. Wilson, head of the subsistence homestead division of the Department of Interior; Dr. Robert Kohn, head of the housing division of the public works administration; Dr. Frederick Howe, consumers' counsel of the agricultural adjustment administration, and Henry T. Rainey, speaker of the house of representatives.

The most serious charges made by the gentleman from Indiana were direct attacks on President Roosevelt; but his basis for these, as for practically all of his story, was hearsay, second-hand information and vague statements by some of his fellow guests at the dinner. In that lay its weakness, though there are many serious-minded Americans who insist that there should be a real investigation of any government officials seeking to undermine the present form of government.

The committee, having heard Wirt, adjourned for some days with the intention of calling as witnesses those who attended the country house dinner. Some of them already had denied flatly or belittled the statements made by Wirt.

LOTS of bickering resulted from the Wirt case, and in this some of the Democrats concerned did not make a good showing. Chairman Bulwinkle of the committee, for instance, asserted that Wirt was imprisoned at Gary during war times for pro-German activities, and this was indignantly denied by numerous persons who were in position to know its truth or falsity. Secretary of the Interior Ickes accused Doctor Wirt of having sought to obtain public works money for a "Fairyland" project in the Indiana dunes by which Doctor Wirt was to sell 2,000 front feet of dune land along Lake Michigan at $50 a foot, a total sale price of $100,000. The project was disapproved by the Public Works administration as "visionary and impractical," Mr. Ickes said.

Doctor Wirt issued a denial of Secretary Ickes' tale, explaining that he had no connection with the proposed project and that the company with which he was connected had held the land in question for 12 years to preserve it for park purposes.

Representative McGugin of Kansas, Republican member of the investigating committee, was "gagged" when he tried to make a speech on the case in the house, but managed to get it inserted in the Congressional Record. At the same time the Department of Justice was seeking to revive a five-year-old matter in which McGugin appeared as a lawyer for Mrs. Barnett, wife of the wealthy Indian, Jackson Barnett.

DESPITE the opposition of the house leaders and the doubt of its approval by the President, Senator Cousens persisted in his effort to put through his amendment to the tax bill calling for a flat 10 per cent increase in all income tax returns. Chairman Pat Harrison of the senate finance committee had approved it as an emergency measure and showed no disposition to reconsider.

When the Cousens amendment was first voted on in the senate it was defeated by the bare majority of 46 to 44, the Michigan senator changing his vote to the negative so as to move a reconsideration. He got busy among his fellow senators and was successful first in having the vote reconsidered and then in the measure's adoption by a vote of 43 to 36. It was certain the proposal would be firmly opposed when the revenue bill went into conference.

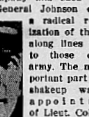

Under the Cousens proposal, a person subject to a normal tax of $100 on his 1934 income would pay $110.

Next day the senate adopted the La Follette estate taxes amendment to the bill, thus adding nearly $100,000,000 more to the tax load of the country. The amendment puts a tax of 1 per cent on estates of $40,000. This percentage is increased rapidly until 60 per cent is levied by the government upon estates of $10,000,000 and more. Under the present law, estates up to $50,000 are exempted from the tax.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S fishing trip on the Normandie ended with the arrival of the yacht at Miami. Friends advised against his landing, remembering the attempt on his life there two years ago, but he laughed at their fears. However, he and Secretary McIntyre drove directly from the pier to the train and the President was back in Washington on the next day.

General Johnson, Donald Richberg, Secretary McIntyre and some twenty White House correspondents and their wives narrowly escaped death as they were going from Coral Gables to meet the President at the water front. A big combination automobile trailer in which they were riding got across the railway tracks just in time to avoid being struck by a speeding train.

JUST before he left Washington for Miami to meet the President and accompany him back to the Capital, General Johnson decreed a radical reorganization of the NRA along lines similar to those of the army. The most important part of this shakeup was the appointment of Lieut. Col. G. A. Lynch, an infantry officer of the regular army, as Johnson's right-hand man. Colonel Lynch, whom the administrator describes as "the most advanced thinker in the United States army," is given full jurisdiction over all matters not otherwise assigned. He has complete authority to approve codes, orders, amendments and other modifications, and may sign codes that do not require the signature of the President. The NRA administration no longer will be a one-man affair, and indeed, the ground is now laid for the retirement of General Johnson, which has been predicted for some time.

LABOR conditions in the Detroit area, mostly affecting the automobile industry, remained in chaotic condition, despite the partly successful efforts of government mediators. The strike at the plant of the Motor Products corporation, which had caused a shutdown of the factory of the Hudson Motor company was settled when Edward P. McGrady, assistant to Gen. Hugh Johnson, laid before the strikers terms that had been accepted by the corporation. The workers agreed to the terms, which called for a 10 per cent increase in pay and arbitration of disputes over piece work pay rates. This enabled the Hudson plant to reopen.

The 1,700 employees of the Campbell, Wyant & Cannon foundry at Muskegon, Mich., struck. The concern makes castings for automobile builders. The 4,000 employees of the Nash Motor company still were on strike at Kenosha, Wis.

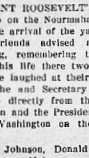

The Mechanics Educational Society of America, an organization of tool and die makers, had voted to strike unless executives of jobbing plants met their demands for a 20 per cent pay increase and 36-hour week.

There was a strike by 800 employees of the Detroit-Michigan Stove company who demanded a 20 per cent wage increase, and pickets attacked men who approached the plant to work.

ADMINISTRATOR JOHNSON'S order to the bituminous coal industry to put into effect a seven-hour day and new minimum wage rates was bitterly attacked by southern coal producers at a code revision hearing in Washington. Especially objectionable to the Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky operators was the reduction in wage differentials accorded southern coal fields.

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN completed the formation of the committee which will investigate the army air corps and its tragic attempt to carry the air mails. Newton D. Baker, war-time secretary of war, accepted the chairmanship of the committee which was declined by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. The other civilians named to assist the military members are Dr. Karl Taylor Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. George W. Lewis, director of aeronautical research for the national advisory committee on aeronautics; Clarence D. Chamberlin, noted transatlantic flyer; Maj. James H. ("Jimmie") Doolittle, widely known flyer and aeronautical engineer, and Edgar S. Gorrell, president Stutz Motor Car company.

BEFORE the criminal court in Washington Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Church South, and Miss Ada L. Burroughs of Richmond, his aid in the anti-Al Smith campaign of 1928, were finally arraigned to answer to charges of having violated the corrupt practices act. If convicted they would face a possible term of two years in prison or a fine of $10,000 or both. The specific charge is that only $17,300 of the $65,300 contribution made by Edwin C. Jameson of New York to the anti-Smith movement was reported by the anti-Smith Democrats' headquarters committee.

Bishop Cannon

It was indicated that the defense would contend that Miss Burroughs did not have to report the $48,000 in question, arguing that it was spent within the confines of Virginia by the state anti-Smith committee.

IF HENRY A. WALLACE has his way, Arthur W. Cutten, millionaire member of the Chicago wheat pit, will be barred from future trading on grain exchanges. The secretary of agriculture summoned Cutten to appear before the Grain Futures administration in Chicago on May 14 to answer charges of failing to report his trades, as required by the grain futures act, with making false reports, and with concealing his trades through false entries, dummy accounts and other collusive practices. The alleged offenses were committed in 1930 and 1931.

OFFICIALS of the Public Works administration were elated by a report received from the F. W. Dodge corporation which indicated a pronounced spring increase in job-creating building activity in which the federal public works program was a leading factor.

Reporting on the volume of contracts awarded in March for both publicly and privately financed building in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains, the Dodge corporation informed the PWA that $170,153,000 of contracts were awarded last month compared with $96,710,000 in February. Publicly financed building accounted for $120,210,000 of the March total, and privately financed building for $52,053,000.

The $120,210,000 of publicly financed work contracted for last month is about five times the amount contracted for in March of 1933 and nearly three times the amount contracted in March of 1932, according to the report.

WILLIAM WALLACE McDOWELL of Butte, Mont., the new American minister to the Irish Free State, collapsed and died of heart disease during a banquet in his honor given by President Eamon De Valera in Dublin castle. Mr. McDowell was responding to congratulatory speeches when he fell back into his chair and expired almost instantly.

FRANK WALKER, chairman of the President's national emergency council, made announcement of the next step in the administration's recovery program, the financing of housing projects all over the country with federal funds. New homes are to be built; old homes are to be repaired, remodeled, spruced up. Mortgages are to be given on generous terms, with interest low and payment permitted over 10 and 20 years.

Frank Walker

All of the activities of the government related to housing—such as the subsistence homestead plan, the Home Owners' Loan corporation, the home loan bank board, the farm credit administration, the Department of Agriculture's program of new housing for farmers—are to be co-ordinated under a single authority.

There is both an emergency and a permanent program in the scheme, and the temporary program as contemplated will be a rousing campaign, with citizens, real estate men, building contractors, union leaders, and laborers all being exhorted to join in a patriotic movement toward the restoration of the still slumbering construction industry.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—As the political pot begins to reach the boiling stage throughout the country, it is apparent that, instead of a dearth of "issues" over which candidates can harangue, there will actually be many of them. A few short weeks ago, political leaders here either boasted or moaned about the lack of issues for the campaign, according as the boaster or the moaner was a Democrat or a Republican. The Democrats felt President Roosevelt had been such a huge success that Republicans would not find a vital or vulnerable spot to attack. Republicans, whether they said so out loud or not, felt much the same way. In the interim, however, all of this has been changed and there surely will be a red hot campaign during the coming summer and fall months.

Red Hot Campaign

Looking over the situation, one sees as probable points of controversy such things as the air mail contract cancellation; the charges that the "New Deal" has overridden the Constitution of the United States; the devaluation of the dollar and the profit-taking in which the treasury thereafter engaged through seizure of gold; the encroachment of the federal government upon business itself through NRA and the scores of administrations and commissions that have been set up; the proposal to revise the method of electing the President, and the use of taxpayers' money in development of such plans as the Tennessee Valley authority, to mention a few of them.

But it seems to me that the most important issue of all is only now coming to the surface. Sincerely, it is whether the voters desire to have the various New Deal items made a permanent part of our national government.

It is to be recalled that virtually all of the items of the New Deal have been put through congress as emergency legislation. Some of them have been tested in courts on a constitutionality basis and have been upheld as emergency laws. But it is necessary to think of the pronouncements by President Roosevelt almost directly asserting his intention to make them permanent. Otherwise, they would expire in June, 1935, a little more than a year from now. The expiration date furnishes the basis for the issue that appears to be so important.

The 435 members of the house of representatives and the 35 senators who are up for election this fall will have been re-elected or defeated eight months in advance of the time when the decision must be made on continuation of the New Deal items that were enacted as emergency laws. Congress, made up of the re-elected or new members, will convene in the first week of January, 1935. That will be the congress to decide what the course shall be. It cannot dodge the question. If the President requests that the emergency laws be made permanent, and he says he will, the new congress either will do his bidding and re-enact the laws he desires, or it will kill them off by its refusal to act.

So the candidates this summer and fall must be prepared to answer whether they will support a continuation of the New Deal or will work against it. That puts the question up to the voters. It is closely akin to a referendum.

I have frequently expressed the opinion in these columns that things have happened so rapidly under the "New Deal" that most of us here cannot keep up with them. Frankly, as an unbiased observer without political affiliation of any kind, I have been unable sometimes to reach a conclusion for myself regarding many of the New Deal projects. They have been thrust upon us with such speed that it has been utterly impossible to study all of them. And that is the unfortunate part of the forthcoming campaign.

Pace Is Too Swift

If we, who are in the front rows of the theater, are puzzled, what then must be the state of mind of those who are far removed from the stage and can judge only by the few favorable or adverse effects that reach them as individual citizens?

There will be quite a bit of water go over the dam before the votes are cast in November. It may be, therefore, that a better understanding of the plot of the play can be disseminated to the country at large. I hope so, because the decision to be made is momentous. I hope, too, that the campaign will be the hottest we have had in generations. Otherwise, the questions the issues will not be thoroughly debated. If they are not thoroughly debated, thousands upon thousands of voters are going to cast their ballots as Democrats or Republicans just because they have always been Democrats, or Republicans. The coming campaign is not of that structure.

The best indication I have seen of a probability that all phases of the economic policies evolved from the New Deal will be thoroughly discussed is the greater freedom of debate in congress. All of us remember how bills were sent to the Capitol a year ago and earlier in the present session of congress, and passed without debate, or with very little. There is still too little debate on much of the legislation, but that which is going on serves to enlighten the public on the subject matter proposed. This ought to be. After all, congress and the administration are only representatives of the people who pay the bill and whose citizenship make up our nation.

Figures have just been released here showing that the federal government has approximately 650,000 officials and employees on its payrolls. That is the highest point reached since the post war days of 1920. It represents a good many hundreds of millions in dollars for salaries or wages. And the increase has been brought about despite the economy laws that were forced through congress last year, some 20,000 of the increase having occurred since January 1, 1934.

U. S. Payroll at Peak

The figures I have given do not include the members of the house and senate, nor their employees, nor do they include the scores of workers who make up the staff of the house and senate and the employees of the Capitol. The country's federal judges and their staffs are counted in the totals, but the army, navy and marine officers and enlisted men are not included. Almost 400,000 men who are enlisted in the Civilian Conservation corps also are omitted.

If one figures the average family as four persons, the federal pay roll provides a livelihood for at least 2,600,000 persons, although I am assured by the Civil Service commission that five persons is a better average than four, in which event government pay checks sustain about 3,250,000.

I do not make these statements in criticism. Ours is a vast country and a population of perhaps 127,000,000. But it seems impossible to me that there should be such a vast number of persons living on government pay checks.

I mentioned in an earlier paragraph in the letter that one of the issues about which argument is likely to be heard in every state this fall is the proposal to revise the method of electing the President. It is proposed, in effect, to amend the Constitution of the United States so that the method of electing a President of the United States would be accomplished by a division of electoral vote in each state proportionately with the division of political party strength as shown by individual ballots. For example, and as a better way of explaining what is proposed: a state may be allowed twenty votes in the electoral college. At present, all twenty electoral votes are cast for the Presidential candidate who receives the majority of the individual ballots. It is a unit rule. Now, the Constitutional amendment that is projected would force a division of those electoral votes so that, assuming the party votes were so divided, eight of the electoral votes would be cast for one candidate and twelve for the other.

Norris Election Plan

The authors of the proposed amendment are Senator Norris of Nebraska, and Representative Lea of California.

It is the charge of the Republicans that the move is designed to give the Democrats perpetual control of the Presidency. They are not making that charge out loud yet. They want congress to pass the resolution proposing the amendment to the states, so the Republicans spokesmen argue about it all over the country this summer.

The point the Republicans are making is that the so-called solid South will continue to vote nearly all of its electoral ballots for the Democratic candidate. The case of Mississippi is cited. It has nine electoral votes. The Republican party is virtually non-existent there. The result would be that certainly eight, and maybe all, of the nine votes would be cast for the Democrat, just as they are each four years under the present system. Add to the electoral votes of the South, the gains that would come from such normally two-party states as New York, and the Republicans assert that the result would be permanent control of the government machinery by the Democrats.

Representative Lea says, however, that he thinks that a virulent two-party fight would develop in every state in the Union. Representative Martin, a Massachusetts Republican, argues that the Republicans "will have a chance." And there is your issue.

Claim Paper Violin Is of Superior Quality

A violin made from the gummed paper used in orthopedic appliances has been shown in Vienna, and it is claimed that it possesses a tonal quality comparable to instruments made from selected woods by the best Italian craftsmen.

The acoustic properties of the gummed paper were accidentally discovered during the manufacture of orthopedic appliances and the violin was made as an experiment.

While it is possible to construct easily enough from paper an instrument rigid enough to permit of use as a violin sounding board, the purity of tone could not be gauged without a test. Popular opinion regarding the nature and qualities of woods employed in old violins have recently been controverted by scientific tests.

Even trained musicians cannot readily distinguish between the notes obtained from a "Strad" and other highly prized makes when properly tuned and played.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

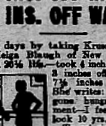

A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child. CHAPTER VIII—Continued

—11—

"When your father dies you should go back to school. You are smart. You can learn a great deal from books and maybe they can learn something from you. You're the best quill worker I know of. You're an Ojibway and should be proud of it. You should keep on being Ojibway. Do the things your mother did; marry an Ojibway boy; have plenty of Ojibway papooses. It's our trails, remember. You go the Indian way, I go the white man's way. They can't cross. Understand that?"

"No," she said and looked away and a suggestion of disappointment rested about her red mouth. It was not pain, not despair; just an acceptance of frustration, perhaps, and it touched Steve profoundly.

"I won't be here very long, now, Mary," he said. "I may be going any time, now. I will go, perhaps, even before your father dies. I don't know where. I haven't any plan. But before I go I'm going to look you up and see how your father is and fix it some way so Franz won't bother you even after I'm out of the country. You'd better get along back, now. Want a canoe?"

"No. I walk fast in the woods."

"Aren't you hungry?"

She had risen and looked at him in a manner which made him wince. It was not a conscious glance of reproach, but her face reflected a hunger such as he had not had in mind when he put the question. She was starved, silently crying for nourishment; but it was not a hunger of the body, not meat and drink which she needed.

"I have bread," she answered. "I go now, Good-by, Jim."

"Good-by, Mary."

She walked down the trail to where another branched off to take her along the lake shore and Drake stood alone, feeling small and humiliated.

His sense of having failed so miserably to meet a situation clung. It bothered him and that was why he gave the arrival of McNally's team no heed for the moment.

When he glanced up McNally was clambering down over the wagon wheel and, standing where she had risen from her place on the seat, was a girl. Outlined there against the sky, she was a Diana. Her laced pacs were trim; the riding breeches encased finely molded legs. A gay shirt fitted well over a slender torso and square, boyish shoulders. Her throat rose in a fine column and her head, flung back with the brisk breeze blowing tendrils of fair hair about it, seemed like a posture of brave defiance to the white bandage which covered her eyes.

Kate Flynn! Kate Flynn, holding in both hands a worn brief case. Kate Flynn, coming herself as a saving messenger for Polaris!

Strength trickled out of Steve's body. She was more fair to look upon than he had ever dreamed in all those dreams he had had of her fairness through these feverish weeks and it was this beauty which weakened him, not the thought that here was the person whom he could not deceive, that his pretense of being Young Jim must end now and the truth about that individual at last be told.

The girl talked softly and rapidly and laughed as one will in excitement, and old Mac, seeing Steve in the doorway, called out to him:

"Jim! Oh, Jim! Here's Katie herself!"

The girl stopped talking as McNally, taking her in his arms, swung her to the ground. The narrow bandage covered her eyes, the windows to the heart's expression, but it could not wholly hide the high eagerness which possessed her. She started forward eagerly, leading McNally toward the store rather than being led herself.

"Jim!" she called, and her voice was as lovely to the ear as her body was to the eye. "Dear, I'm here . . . Duffer, I couldn't send anybody else. I had to come myself!"

Steve moved down the steps and halted awaiting her approach in the deepest confusion he had ever experienced.

"Where are you Duffer!" she cried, breathlessly.

She stopped, withdrawing her hands from McNally's.

"Jim! Jimmy! Where are you?"

Steve stepped forward, then, swallowing drily, and took both her small hands. She clutched his convulsively, drawing herself close, touching his body with hers.

His went slightly giddy. She was freeing her hands, now, lifting them, letting them creep about his neck hungrily and her breath was uneven as she whispered to him:

"You did it, Duffer! You did it all yourself! You're the old Dad's son for certain. . . ."

She pulled his face down, offering her lips. He wrapped his arms about her; he kissed her on the mouth, a long lingering kiss unable to resist the impulse before the strength of her appeal. She responded as their lips touched and then he felt the breath gush from her lungs warm on his face, felt her body tense as if in surprise and, possibly, fright at the ardor of his caress.

"You Did It, Duffer! You Did It All Yourself!"

She put a palm against his chest, bewildered, and resisted his tight embrace.

"Jim"—bewildered. "Jim, why don't you say something to me? Speak to me, Duffer!"

He let her go, feeling weak and contrite. His voice, he knew, would reveal to her the secret, confirm the suspicions that his kiss had awakened.

And then, instead of his voice, McNally's rose.

"Fire!" he cried. "Good G—d, Jimmy! Look!"

He stood beside them, pointing

Ever since his arrival at Good-Bye, Steve Drake had been insistent that every man in Polaris' employ be ready at a moment's notice to give battle to fire. As the weather hazard increased he had been constantly on the alert for reports of smoke.

Today, the money which was to remove the Laird's timber forever from the horizon of Franz's hopes would arrive at headquarters. Timed properly, the alarm of fire would drain the place of every able man and once that brief case which Franz had seen McNally place carefully beneath the blanket on the wagon seat in Shoestring passed out of the possession of the Flynns or their loyal help and was delivered to MacDonald, the principal point in his plotting would be achieved.

So the man had waited even past the time when the fire would take a rapid hold. Then he fired his materials together against a huge pile of brush, applied the match which would send a destroying element on its way, and turned in flight southward, the direction of headquarters. Those woodsmen in the boats knew what a fire meant, starting in that resinous slash, with the whole country like tinder. It would leap across the country, burst upon the stand of green timber with such such a fury that spruce and balsam, cedar and pine would flame like torches, leaving valuable timber dead and spoiling in its wake.

It seemed to Steve that the boat scarcely crawled, as if Good-Bye lake expanded, stretched out its boundaries; as though many hours instead of less than one elapsed before he cut off his motor and leaped out.

Men flung themselves into the shallow water, carrying equipment with them, and Wartin, who had seen their approach, came running.

"Got your crew all on it?" Steve called.

"Yes; just now. But, G—d, Jim, she licked up four-five forties before we could even git in here! She's goin like h—l itself!"

The man was badly frightened.

"Going to be licked without a try!" Drake snapped. "Get hold of yourself, Wartin! Where've you put your men?"

A small crew was behind the fire, armed with shovels to throw sand and hold the line from crossing back against the wind. A larger detail was on the western flank, supplied with hand water pumpers, trying to squeeze the fire toward the lake, to keep it from widening in their direction.

"We'll start in at the creek and backfire the whole works," Steve announced decisively. "Maybe we can't stop it from crossing, but nobody'll ever say we didn't try! Hop, now! We'll drop a few rods at a time and see what kind of a job of holding it we can do."

He knew that he was taking a long chance, setting a fire to work backwards toward a phalanx of approaching flame, burning the ground clean as it went so that when the down-stuff a half dozen men followed him to another interval of heart-breaking, lung-searing work.

"Coming great, lads!" he cried when that particular engagement was won. "All right, Mac. She's cooler, now. Cross over and touch off some more. Give us a few minutes every ten rods or so and don't get caught yourself. Keep to the west of your backfire all the time."

He made his way eastward, mounting a sharp little knoll so he could have a fair view of the terrain.

On beyond, great plumes of smoke gushed upward eruptively as the front of the main fire opened and closed again, its points joining forces here and there to create great quantities of gas.

It was coming rapidly. Two, perhaps three miles an hour that front was traveling. His backfire was small and relatively cool, and still he had held the first section of it by the skin of his teeth! What would happen if the main fire reached the creek before he had burned a gap all across its way, or if the wind rose higher to make it roll even more rapidly?

For a full half mile to the westward that backfire must be laid in before the front of the burning area would be wholly blocked. It did not seem to Steve that his crew could possibly hold the pace for the length of time that would be required.

He needed men, now; all along this battle line he needed them; more men and fresh men, because an hour in there was more exacting than a dozen at ordinary labor.

And the men were coming. At least, two men. They had been combed down the Good-Bye since early day and as they saw the smoke they came faster, paddling in quick cadence. They were stalwart men, LaFane, in the stern, sat as straight as a proud Indian. The other was not quite so large of frame, not so deep in color, but Young Jim Flynn's eyes were clear, his mouth set in a line of assuring firmness and he bore his share of the task with relish. A different boy, this, from the one who had been kidnapped from his camp in a drunken stupor days before; another lad than the one who had defied his captor and sulked and sworn that he would not do as bidden. Resolution, ability seemed to be his characteristics this hot, windy morning as the canoe finally cut the waters of Good-Bye lake.

From the knoll on which he was directing the redistribution of his forces, Steve Drake could have observed the landing of that canoe, but his eyes and attention were centered on the area he sought to save by destruction, so he was not aware of their arrival until they approached, LaFane in the lead.

"One of you—" Steve began, pointing toward a place that needed attention.

He stopped short. He had addressed LaFane. The upraised hand sagged and then he turned to stare at Young Jim.

The boy looked straight into the eyes of the man who, for these weeks, had used his name. It was a hard look, a square look, difficult to determine because of its sobriety whether it was one of regard or offense. And then, after a moment, the lad smiled.

"You're Steve Drake," he said and put out his hand.

Steve did not speak. He was searching the other's countenance and thinking swiftly of what hinged on the nature of LaFane's handiwork. The real Young Jim was here, now. Pretense was done, a play ended. The Flynns must from this hour take their destinies in their hands and win or lose.

He shot an inquiring glance at LaFane. The man's lips twitched and his eyes smoldered.

"You bet!" he said in response to the unspoken query and his voice carried more enthusiasm than Drake had ever heard in it before.

"Good!" he muttered. "You've hit the job at the right time, Jim! Until now, I've run things high, wide and handsome, but from now on—"

"Not yet, Drake! Lord, man, you've got to stay on the job through this! I'm just bringing in another pair of hands and a tolerably good back. What'll you have me do first?"

That was good sense. Even though he was no longer even a usurper of authority Steve could not then take time to confer with the newcomer. His task, this day, could not be shouldered on another.

But as he outlined what had happened, what had been done, how he had spread his forces, he was anticipating: What would the men think, when they knew? This boy, come to take charge, must have them with him from the beginning to avoid trouble. Knowing what he had been they might be reluctant to accept him for what LaFane evidently now believed him to be. It was not going to be clear sailing for Young Jim.

"LaFane, if you'll drop over to the left, there, and spell some of the boys who're all in, it'll help a lot. Flynn, I'll find a chore for you in a second."

He started walking down the slope with the older man, leaving Young Jim alone.

"Continuous" means connected throughout in space of time, without interval or break, uninterrupted. "Continual" means seeming incessant, occurring on every occasion,

OPENING CHAPTERS OF THE STORY

Stephen Drake, with his four-year-old son, is rescued from a blizzard by Jim Flynn, big timber operator, whom Drake has robbed. Flynn gives Drake another chance, and the father, until his death, impresses on the boy, Steve, the debt they owe "Old Jim." Twenty years later, Steve meets "Young Jim" Flynn, his benefactor's son. Sent by Old Jim, incapacitated through an accident in which Kate, his daughter, is temporarily blinded, to take charge of the company's—the Polaris—woods operations, the youth is indulging in a drunken spree. Learning of Polaris' dire straits, and hoping to do something for Old Jim, Steve hastens to the company's headquarters. Worsting Franz, a plotter against the Flynn interests, in a fist fight, the Polaris crew assumes that Steve is Flynn's man, and he takes charge, as "Young Jim." A photograph of Kate Flynn, which Steve finds, immensely increases his desire to aid Old Jim. He gains the warm friendship of LaFane, queer woods scout. Drake escapes a death trap set for him. Franz discovers Drake's impersonation. Threatened with disclosure, Steve accuses Franz of setting the death trap, exhibiting evidence, and the man dare not act. Steve sends the Laird's timber for a rival company, Franz plans to put Steve out of the way, but the latter outwits him. Franz, believing Steve had drowned, secures another option and records it, learning then that Steve is alive. Knowing Drake has wired Kate, he steals her reply and learns that $25,000 is to be forwarded, and the time of its arrival.

up the lake to its western side where a great column of gray smoke, tinged with orange, rose like a thunder head.

Almost roughly Steve put the girl to one side and ran from the store down to the beach so he might be beyond the scattered trees and see better.

Fire for certain! The thing which he had feared and prepared for through these weeks of drought had come but, because of it, he would not for this hour at least be forced to unmask and tell this girl that her brother, so far as any man at Good-Bye knew, was still a wastrel, was still bearing the shame of a trust betrayed.

Calmly and rapidly he gave his orders. The fire fighting equipment held for such emergencies was rushed to the lake shore; outboard motors were clamped to two large, flat-bottomed boats and the pumps and shovels and axes loaded.

Within a surprisingly brief time the laden boats were heading up the lake across the head of which, now, drifted the first outriders of a heavy smoke pall.

And up there in the timber, to the southward of the burning slash, a man fled rapidly. Once he paused at an opening near the water and stared out at the boats making their way up the lake. His mouth twitched as he watched them.

The weather had played into Franz's hands. Had it rained the night before, his well laid scheme would have fallen to uselessness. But it had not rained. Heat would be great toward midday and there was no sign of a change in the skies.

main front met it there would be no food to feed it. If they waited for night, the proper time for backfiring when heavy and quiet air becomes an ally of the fighters, the front surely would have reached the green timber and might be a raging monster beyond human control.

Drake with a gasoline torch set twenty rods of fire and then waded the stream that he might better watch his handiwork and the functioning of the crew.

The men, he saw, believed their fight hopeless and he rushed in among them.

"Give me that pumper!" he cried to one and pulled the device from the fellow's back. "Hot!"—as the man made his excuse. "Hot as the hubs of h—l! But that's all the more reason for keeping after it. . . ."

Crouching low, he edged in, closer than the closest of them. He held his breath because the air was liquid heat.

"Shovels, now," he croaked. "Get your shovelers in, Mac! Close in, you!"

Sand as well as water commenced to fly. The burning spot was surrounded by fighters. The skin of Steve's face was taut and dry with the torture of heat, but they were making headway, checking the spread of the fire, driving it back.

"Good!" he panted, relaxing a trifle. "Three of you keep her where she is, now. Bury everything with sand that smokes. Spread out, the rest of you. . . . Yonder! There's another one!"

A second serious blaze was developing, set by sparks from his backfire, and wallowing through the down-stuff a half dozen men followed him to another interval of heart-breaking, lung-searing work.

"Coming great, lads!" he cried when that particular engagement was won. "All right, Mac. She's cooler, now. Cross over and touch off some more. Give us a few minutes every ten rods or so and don't get caught yourself. Keep to the west of your backfire all the time."

He made his way eastward, mounting a sharp little knoll so he could have a fair view of the terrain.

On beyond, great plumes of smoke gushed upward eruptively as the front of the main fire opened and closed again, its points joining forces here and there to create great quantities of gas.

It was coming rapidly. Two, perhaps three miles an hour that front was traveling. His backfire was small and relatively cool, and still he had held the first section of it by the skin of his teeth! What would happen if the main fire reached the creek before he had burned a gap all across its way, or if the wind rose higher to make it roll even more rapidly?

For a full half mile to the westward that backfire must be laid in before the front of the burning area would be wholly blocked. It did not seem to Steve that his crew could possibly hold the pace for the length of time that would be required.

He needed men, now; all along this battle line he needed them; more men and fresh men, because an hour in there was more exacting than a dozen at ordinary labor.

And the men were coming. At least, two men. They had been combed down the Good-Bye since early day and as they saw the smoke they came faster, paddling in quick cadence. They were stalwart men, LaFane, in the stern, sat as straight as a proud Indian. The other was not quite so large of frame, not so deep in color, but Young Jim Flynn's eyes were clear, his mouth set in a line of assuring firmness and he bore his share of the task with relish. A different boy, this, from the one who had been kidnapped from his camp in a drunken stupor days before; another lad than the one who had defied his captor and sulked and sworn that he would not do as bidden. Resolution, ability seemed to be his characteristics this hot, windy morning as the canoe finally cut the waters of Good-Bye lake.

From the knoll on which he was directing the redistribution of his forces, Steve Drake could have observed the landing of that canoe, but his eyes and attention were centered on the area he sought to save by destruction, so he was not aware of their arrival until they approached, LaFane in the lead.

"One of you—" Steve began, pointing toward a place that needed attention.

He stopped short. He had addressed LaFane. The upraised hand sagged and then he turned to stare at Young Jim.

The boy looked straight into the eyes of the man who, for these weeks, had used his name. It was a hard look, a square look, difficult to determine because of its sobriety whether it was one of regard or offense. And then, after a moment, the lad smiled.

"You're Steve Drake," he said and put out his hand.

Steve did not speak. He was searching the other's countenance and thinking swiftly of what hinged on the nature of LaFane's handiwork. The real Young Jim was here, now. Pretense was done, a play ended. The Flynns must from this hour take their destinies in their hands and win or lose.

He shot an inquiring glance at LaFane. The man's lips twitched and his eyes smoldered.

"You bet!" he said in response to the unspoken query and his voice carried more enthusiasm than Drake had ever heard in it before.

"Good!" he muttered. "You've hit the job at the right time, Jim! Until now, I've run things high, wide and handsome, but from now on—"

"Not yet, Drake! Lord, man, you've got to stay on the job through this! I'm just bringing in another pair of hands and a tolerably good back. What'll you have me do first?"

That was good sense. Even though he was no longer even a usurper of authority Steve could not then take time to confer with the newcomer. His task, this day, could not be shouldered on another.

But as he outlined what had happened, what had been done, how he had spread his forces, he was anticipating: What would the men think, when they knew? This boy, come to take charge, must have them with him from the beginning to avoid trouble. Knowing what he had been they might be reluctant to accept him for what LaFane evidently now believed him to be. It was not going to be clear sailing for Young Jim.

"LaFane, if you'll drop over to the left, there, and spell some of the boys who're all in, it'll help a lot. Flynn, I'll find a chore for you in a second."

He started walking down the slope with the older man, leaving Young Jim alone.

Using Soldiers Destroying Our Nation John D. Rockefeller

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

WE HAVE a good many professional soldiers who live in considerable magnificence and idleness in our expensive forts; cavalrymen devote much time to fancy riding not required in war; army posts are the mainstay of the aristocratic game called polo.

Since we pay an enormous soldier tax, why not make some sensible use of soldiers? Why not distribute squads of them over the country and require them to get exercise by chasing highwaymen, bank burglars, the radicals who boom peaceful and useful business institutions, and beat up peaceable workmen? Why not a thousand soldier camps instead of a few dozen luxurious ones like the Presidio, a show place in San Francisco? Why not use the fighting men we employ at such terrific expense in maintaining reasonable order in a thousand different communities?

There is a man named Oswald Spengler, whose writing one hears a good deal about. His book called "The Decline of the West," is an attempt to prove that the United States is going to the devil, and that nothing can stop it. Mr. Spengler has not yet publicly criticized us for throwing our cookstoves and beds away, and going back to campfires and brush piles, except that his statistics seem to show that the nations always destroy themselves with dissension and false progress, our pace is rather more rapid than has been the rule in national destruction heretofore.

Civilization, Mr. Spengler declares, always destroys itself because people demand too much of it. After a man gets one bath room, and is fairly comfortable in his home, he demands two or three; it was lately charged against a prominent citizen of Texas he had nineteen. Now he has lost not only his nineteen bath tubs, but his house, and the fortune that supported it. His neighbors who had but one bath room took after this aristocrat, and caught him. They are all going to the creek for bathing now, but they had an enjoyable fight.

Mr. Spengler believes the special speed we have displayed in going to the devil is due more to our editors than to any other cause. The American newspapers, he charges, have thrown away the brakes and pursue a wide open policy; they drive as fast in everything as their readers drive their new automobiles, and wrecks will inevitably destroy us a little earlier than has been the rule in older civilizations.

A few conservatives are begging for reasonable delay in traveling the road to destruction: for at least as much moderation as the Greek and Romans displayed, but ours is a fast age, and probably we shall continue to step on it.

Considering the many bad things I have known other men to do, I conclude John D. Rockefeller is an exceptionally good man. His father was a runaway, and deserted a good wife and four little children, and John was a good boy, and took care not only of his mother and his younger brothers and sisters, but looked up his father and helped him, too.

When John had children of his own, he had family prayers, and tried to bring them up right.

The Rockefeller foundation, the greatest philanthropy in the history of the world, is still on its feet, although possibly staggered a little by the recent depression. At ninety-three old John is still pursuing his policy of saying little, and doing much.

In moral conduct, finance, falrness, common sense, his average is higher than that of any other man I know from reading the papers. Of course he has been rich a long time, but this is the most excusable of faults, since every one is trying to be guilty; and I predict that after he has been dead long enough for gossip to get around to the truth (which it always does) his monument will be a little higher than those of Goethe, the poet, Hannibal, the general, or Plato, the philosopher.

After all, it is the Butter and Egg Man who is in position to most influence and better the world by making a higher average in the practical things.

Writing a bit of poetry, winning a fight, or tossing off a philosophical gem, are small matters compared with the daily Butter and Egg struggle; in this John D. Rockefeller has long been a master and made an exceptionally high average from a boy of fourteen to an old man of ninety-three.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

One of the "Long Hunters"

HE SIGNED his name "Kasper Mansker," but you'll find him referred to in frontier history as "Casper Mansko," as "Gasper Mansker" and as "Caspar Manske." But whatever the spelling of his name, the fact remains that this German-American (who was probably born in some "Pennsylvania Dutch" settlement early in the Eighteenth century) was one of the greatest hunters and Indian fighters in all border history. He spoke only broken English but the voice of his favorite long rifle, to which he gave the affectionate name of "Nancy," was a sharp, clear crack that spelled doom for many a deer and many a hostile red man.

In 1769 he was one of a party of 30 "Long Hunters" who passed through Cumberland Gap and began exploring the rich country of Kentucky and Tennessee. During the course of his wanderings Mansker discovered the salt licks in the present Davidson county, Tennessee, which were afterwards to bear his name.

After several months of hunting some of the party returned home to North Carolina, some went north into Kentucky and the remainder under the leadership of Mansker built boats and started down the Cumberland. After a series of adventures they reached Natchez on the Mississippi, where they sold their furs, hides and tallow.

The next year Mansker was back in the Kentucky country as the leader of another party of hunters. They gathered together an enormous store of buffalo, elk and deer hides. Then a party of Cherokees swept down upon their camp while they were absent and destroyed all their peltries, whereupon one of Mansker' party carved on the bark of a poplar tree this embittered record: "2,300 Deer Skins Lost Ruination by God!"

But they continued their hunting and in the banks of the Green river one day an amusing adventure befell Mansker. To his ears came a strange sound. Like a shadow he crept among the trees in his direction. Before him he saw "a man bare-headed, stretched flat on the ground, singing merrily at the top of his voice!" The singer was Daniel Boone, thus consoling himself in the solitude of the wilderness while he awaited the return to camp of his brother, Squire Boone. Such was the first meeting of these two great pioneers.

In 1779 Mansker established a settlement near the salt licks he had discovered and to the end of his days "was a strong and helpful prop of the community whose first foundations he had helped lay."

An Early Empire Builder

THEY say that "trade follows the flag" but quite as often "the flag follows trade," and it is not at all impossible that the American flag might not have flown in the Middle West if George Morgan, trader, had not shown it the way before the Revolution. As the junior member of the famous firm of Baynton, Wharton and Morgan, Indian traders, this young Philadelphian took charge of its newly-organized Indiana company in the Illinois country.

From the beginning Morgan made himself popular with the wild Indian tribesmen of the West. In fact, the Delawares thought so highly of him that they conferred upon him the name of their greatest chieftain, Taimenend, or Tammany. Unlike so many other white men of the time, he treated the Indians kindly and justly and so great was his influence over them that soon after the outbreak of the Revolution the Continental congress appointed him Indian agent at Fort Pitt.

Finding himself thwarted and his advice on how to handle the Western Indians to keep them neutral unheeded, Morgan resigned in 1779 and later settled in Princeton, N. J.

But this empire-builder could not remain idle. He found himself in life in a quiet college town. During his career as a trader in the West, he had seen the vast possibilities of that region and he had spent almost as much time in encouraging the development of agriculture there as in his trading activities. So in 1788 he visited a Utopian colony beyond the Mississippi under the flag of Spain. He secured a huge tract of 15,000,000 acres and founded New Madrid opposite the mouth of the Ohio.

But the plotting of Gen. James Wilkinson checked the development of the plan and when the new federal government under the Constitution extended its power in the West, Morgan abandoned his project entirely, retiring in 1796 to a vast estate, "Morganza," in Washington county, Pennsylvania. To him there came Aaron Burr with a similar colonization scheme, but a traitorous one of which he could not approve, and it was Morgan who gave to President Jefferson the first authentic information about the Burr conspiracy. Morgan died in 1810 but not until he had become a leader in scientific agriculture which was to do so much to develop the great empire of the Middle West.

WRITER DECRIES MODERN IDEA OF FORCED LEARNING

"Never regard your study as a duty," said Albert Einstein to the Princeton students, "but as an enviable opportunity."

Quite true! But how shall the student know this, if we persist in treating the university as a school in which tasks are assigned as a burden, and punishment is meted to those who do not do them?

If study is an opportunity, the only penalty for not taking advantage of that opportunity is failure to reach its goal. He that does not learn has thereby lost learning, just as he that does not eat has thereby lost nourishment. Why should it be anybody's task to force learning on him? If he does not want it, that is his verdict that he has no use for it. Probably he is right.

Primary learning, for children, is a duty. They do not know why they need it, and they may not want it. But, since they will be a burden to others when they grow up, if they do not learn, we have laws to compel them to go to school, and we hire taskmasters to make them study.

But not higher learning. Nobody needs that unless he does need it, and he is the best judge of that. The university should offer learning to all who wish it and are able to receive it. Why force it on others or think it anybody's business but theirs whether they choose to take it?—San Francisco Chronicle.

Too man people getting Federal relief are content, thinking they are doing FERA well.

—o—

Dillinger seems to have a good name in his home town, but that's not much of a recommendation for his home town.

—o—

Each week now seems to see an increasing number of people getting employed at real jobs. That's a heartening sign.

—o—

Dillinger should head for Georgia, so that if he is captured and can prove he is not a banker, Governor Talmadge will hand him a pardon.

—o—

Bishop Cannon's memory is not so good. He even forgets small items like $10,000, among sums that were given to help defeat bad Al Smith.

—o—

We were just a bit worried when we read the headline "Will Shoot Farmers" in the Tampa Tribune. Didn't know but that this might be another plan to limit farm production. Were relieved when it developed that the "shooting" was to be done with the camera.

—o—

Tampa cops get a break. They have been instructed that the smell of liquor on the breath is not an evidence of drunkenness. So now they don't have to smell the breath of every suspect, many of whom have the smell of liquor flavored with a strong dash of halitosis.

—o—

Our Pardon Board may do unwise things, or perhaps we just think so because it is not as adept at giving reasons as Governor Talmadge. His pardon of notorious and apparently incorrigible criminals because they were serving heavier sentences than "some bankers" seems to set a new high in executive clemency—and reasoning.

—o—

Some flurry has been created by the report that out in Arkansas convicts were hitched to a cotton planting machine, and made to do the work usually performed by mules. It is said the work would not hurt the men; but it does not seem right that men should do the work of mules. Protests were made to the Governor and the practice was stopped.

—o—

All over the State it is reported that plenty of people are registering but few are paying poll tax. And yet it looks like the privilege of voting ought to be worth $1.00 to anybody who has even moderate means. Many forfeit their right to vote who are amply able to pay a poll-tax. That contribution to good citizenship ought to be made whenever possible.

—o—

Reviewing the most important news stories of the past 25 years, Brisbane gives that distinction for the year 1925 to the incident of Floyd Collins being trapped in a Kentucky cave. That was important to Floyd, but it does not seem to us as important as some other happenings of 1925—the Florida boom, for instance. But perhaps Arthur didn't "get in" the boom as deep as some of the rest of us.

—o—

The proposition is being advocated to elect Congressmen for a term of six years—the same as Senators. Might not be a bad idea—and perhaps it would be well if elected for the longer period to make them ineligible to succeed themselves. Then half of each term would not be spent in electioneering for the next one, and they could vote their honest convictions without worrying too much about the effect upon the election back home.

—o—

Perhaps the Florida med-fly losses ought to be repaid half through State funds and the other half by the Federal government, as is contended. But Florida paid pretty dearly in that period of devilment and destruction sponsored by the Federal government; and because now Florida is not able to pay for one-half of the damages does not seem to us to relieve the Federal government from paying its half. Really we can't see why Florida should pay any of the damage.

Few and feeble were the Confederate veterans remaining to witness the various observances of Memorial Day yesterday. The thin grey line is almost obliterated.

—o—

There are now on Federal relief 4,700,000 families. That means some 23,000,000 people—nearly one-fifth of the country's population—are dependent on the government. And the distressing thing is that so many of them will make little or no effort to become self-sustaining as long as the government gives them aid.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

Well if "Uncle Joe" Sears has been readin' some of the recent editorials in Florida papers his face sure ought to be red and he's probably singin' "Gone are the Days When my Heart was Young and Gay."

Joe was sittin' pretty with no opposition but when he ran out on Roosevelt by votin' to override his veto it started a flock on his trail with heavy harpoons.

Now they're scourin' the woods tryin' to find a likely candidate to run against the veteran. The Ft. Myers News Press turned the spotlight on Jim Newell, Secretary to Governor Sholtz, but Jim ducked back in the wings and asked to be excused.

The time is so short that it is doubtful that any one can be found to oppose Joe but just the same Mr. Sears realizes that he's been spanked and he'll probably be takin' his meals off the mantle piece for the next few weeks.

In the third District, Congressman Millard Caldwell finds himself faced with opposition from two aspirants, Judge T. L. Belzer of Bonifay and Joe Bell, member of the legislature from Escambia.

Belzer knows his way around Washington, havin' served as Secretary to Tom Yon and he has some contacts that should be helpful. I don't know much, pro or con, about Bell but I doubt if he will be able to ring long enough or loud enough to disturb Millard.

Besides, Millard seems to have behaved himself quite well so far and his opponents won't find it easy to low rate his record with the voters.

Two candidates oppose smilin' J. Hardin Peterson of Lakeland. Randolph Calhoun of Sarasota and W. T. Hall of Leesburg. All I can say is they've picked a "Hardin" to beat and they've certainly got plenty of courage to even enter the ring with Pete.

The first is an important district in size, population and governmental importance. Indications are that folks are pretty well satisfied with the chap they have on the job. He's made an enviable record during his first term and in my judgment it will take a mighty good horse to bring about any tradin' with the stream swollen like it is right now.

A chap named Crank is out to knock Mr. Mark Wilcox for a loop but most folks are of the opinion there are too many Cranks in Congress as it is. Wilcox was swept into office by a wet vote, defeating the brilliant Ruth Bryan Owen. If that little lady was opposing him now he would have plenty and a whole lot more to worry about, but with just a Crank to contend with he should experience little difficulty in holding his post.

In the race for the U. S. Senate the Hon. Claude Pepper is bayin' so close to Mr. Trammell's heels that the long haired Lakelander has just about quit thinkin' it's funny.

Charles A. Mitchell, the boy from Vero Beach seems to be gettin' his second wind and is steppin' along at a rate that makes it interestin' to say the least.

Hortense Wells is still in sight and claims she'll surprise us at the finish line.

John Page Jones has dropped out and is sittin' on the curb gaspin' for breath.

Jimmie Sikes of St. Petersburg jumped into the race with the agility of an adagio dancer a few weeks ago. He got a nice hand for his first somersault but since then I haven't heard much about him.

The way it looks now in the Senate race, Trammell will be first, Pepper second, and Mitchell third when the sun goes down on June 5, but don't blame me if you make a lot of bets and loose your money.

THE LEGION LOBBY

(From the Florida Cracker Legionnaire, Miami)

The figures $228,000,000 appeared all over the scare headlines of every newspaper in the country, news commentators on radios, both local and national yelled at the tops of their lungs. Millions voted for VETERANS over President's veto, but not one them went into detail and tried to give the unknowing public the actual breakdown about the entire appropriation.

For the benefit of you Legionnaires that are interested in combatting this propaganda, and yes you will meet a lot of it, as much as we hate to say, within your own ranks among Legionnaires that are still in hopes that siding with advocates of NEL will either get them a job or keep the one they have at the sacrifice of the disabled buddy we will give you in short form just about where the 228 million dollars will go to.

About 366,000 claims will be involved, of which 29,258 are presumptive. To cover these claims it will take about $41,800,000., of which only $10,900,000 will be used to put the presumptive cases back on the rolls. $37,500,000 goes to take care of the Spanish War veterans and dependents of which there are about 215,000. $152,000 goes to take care of the increases in the pay of the disabled emergency officers.

The balance goes toward increasing the pay of the members of Congress, postal employees, federal clerks, bureau chiefs and others, including army and navy men and officers stationed through out the world.

Yet they say that the veterans (and when they say veterans it is taken for granted to mean world war veterans) got 228 millions of dollars. New forms of taxes will have to be arranged. We have made another raid on the treasury.

Bear this in mind. This is not new money to the veterans, but funds taken from them March 20, 1933, of which over thirty millions were lost and many lives that can never be regained but which according to every right they are entitled to as the new law is not retroactive.

Modern Literature of Florida

By MRS. MAY WALDEN

(Paper read at Woman's Club meeting at Highland Lakes Hotel, March 16, 1934.)

It would be the rankest presumption on my part to intimate that the paper you are listening to does anything but skim the surface of Florida literature. I can only give you some hint of its scope, and refer you to the libraries of Jacksonville, Miami, Orlando, Tampa and Winter Park to find out something of Florida authors and their products.

I have attempted a classification which includes History, Psychology, Gardening, Fiction, Screen Plays, Poetry and Songs. I must omit agriculture with its tons of pamplets on citrus culture, and propaganda literature gotten out by chambers of commerce telling of Florida's charms that must weigh several tons more.

Every library in town should make a collection of Florida literature, which should include publications in each classification; bulletins on Citrus Culture for growers, pamphlets from the Agricultural department for truck and flower gardeners; bulletins from the State Health Department for the general reading public; books on botany and birds for lovers of nature, who are so numerous in Florida; histories and legends of our fast-vanishing Indian population; accounts of explorations; battles and settlements in the early history of Florida under the five flags of the countries that fought for possession of her; fiction, which embodies habits, customs, descriptions of her Indians, Negroes, "Crackers" and mixed races; poetry that tries to express some idea of her wonderful climate, her glamorous beauty; of her passions as are manifested in her fertility, and her hurricanes: songs that breathe loyalty and devotion, sadness and joy, tranquility and serenity; in short every possible emotion that can be expressed.

As my topic is limited to modern literature of Florida, which I take it means contemporary writers, we turn first to history. The attempt to preserve something of the state's history is found in the quarterly publications of the Florida Historical Society. These papers are written from reports, diaries, letters, and all sources that give authentic information of the people and events they describe. From a bibliography sent me from the library at Jacksonville, I find the names of Carita Doggett Corse, author of "Dr. Andrew Turnbull and the New Smyrna Colony" and T. Frederick Davis, Jr., author of a history of Jacksonville.

Many people are fascinated by the stories of the Indian tribes of Florida and their legends. Among these are Mrs. Emma Mayo Bogart, author of "Legends of Kanyucksaw," and Mrs. Minnie Moore Wilson of Kissimmee on "The Seminoles of Florida." By request Judge J. C. B. Koonce of Eustis sent me four little booklets giving in one "The Saga of the Urn" or the "Spirit of Juan Ortiz," combining history, romance and legend in the story of the urn which stands six feet tall by the side of the "Old Spanish Trail" in the Dade Memorial Park at Bushnell, capital of Sumter county, about forty miles west by north of Orlando; another leaflet gives the history and reproduction of a portrait of Micanopy, head chief of the Seminoles at the time of the massacre of Major Dade and his men in 1935. Following is a "Ballad of Major Dade" by Clinton Scollard of New York and Winter Park.

"Florida, December 1835.
I can see your bivouac, Major, as the jungle night draws on;
I can see you marching, Major, in the pallid peer of dawn,
With your troopers ringed about you, trusty men you leaned upon.

Tortuous the trail you travelled, treacherous swamp and brooding lake;
Forest aisles where Spanish mosses their long spectral streamers shake,
And the scanty open spaces — tangled grass and bending brake.

Weary the hard hours of wending;
one more day and journey's end;
One more day of dark adventure
only soldiers comprehend;
One more day and cheers of welcome, friendly eye and hand of friend.

Swift and sudden came the ambush, came the fatal blind attack;
Savage shriek and frenzied warwhoop, musket roar and rifle crack,
With no chance of winning forward, and no chance of turning back.

Who shall tell the fearsome story,
—that mad melee who shall tell,
How they faced their painted foeman, how they fought and how they fell,
In that reeking sanguine shambles on the borderland of hell!

Homage to them! In their honor let the mournful "taps" be played!
Stack the guns and drape Old
Glory over them and Major Dade!"

Another gives a legend by Mrs. Linwood Jeffries of Jacksonville of the Florida moss.

"Ages before any white man touched our shores, so the legend begins, the gentle South Wind held complete dominion over all this fair land of Florida. Her many subjects went everywhere to do her bidding. Zephyr, Whispering Wind, Balmy Breeze and Wafting Fragrance were four of her helpers—but there were others just as loyal. In an old Indian ballad we are told that spring would be but gloomy weather if we had nothing else but Spring, and that was just the trouble with the days and nights the South Wind dispensed to her kingdom. It needed an occasional cool snap to give character to the climate, at least so thought the Father of the Winds. Accordingly, he dispatched the North Wind to advise the southern sovereign that he would rule for three months in her place over the land of flowers. Very loath to submit was the South Wind, for she loved her marshes and palms and vari-colored flowers. "Oh, Great Spirit," she pleaded, "do not deny me the sight of my beautiful kingdom even for a short time. I cannot bear to see my trees and flowers touched by northern blasts. I pray thee for mercy. My land is so beautiful and I love to keep it so." The Great Spirit was touched by such profound and intense love for her native land; something must be done, he thought. "Gentle South Wind," she was told, "you need sleep only short intervals during the North Wind's reign." "But what of my subjects?" asked the South Wind as she looked across the river on whose banks she held court. In the sky above the water hung hundreds of tiny gray clouds, very fleece like and lacy in appearance. "Never fear, gentle one," said the Great Spirit, "yon tiny grey clouds shall enfold your faithful spirits until you need them." Whiff! The little grey clouds fairly danced down from the sky in an ecstasy of service. Here, there and everywhere they scampered in search of others. Now the little wind spirits had taken refuge in their favorite tree tops and there the gray clouds found them. Snug close about the spirits the little clouds wrapped their greyness. All through the branches of the trees you could see these grey spirits securely sleeping. When the North Wind began to rule the land he noticed the small grey clouds among the trees. It was just about the time for icicles. "Oh!" thought the North Wind, "I can't hang icicles on these trees, icicles would spoil the effect. These grey things hang like icicles would be very becoming to the trees, and I have such a short and interrupted reign anyway.

So little grey clouds were hung gracefully from the branches, which, of course, when the South Wind awoke the first time she immediately summoned her spirits; Balmy Breeze, Zephyr, Whispering Wind, Wrafted Fragrance and all the rest slipped gently out of their grey cloaks and left them hanging from the trees. The North Wind himself strange to say, was so in love with the land as he found it that even his cold and hardened heart began to warm just a little. Soon and cruel was such that he was, he did practically no damage to the flowers and trees. Then the little grey cloaks of the southern wind spirits began to be a permanent addition to the trees for they turned to moss. Even until this very day, through Winter, Summer, Spring and Fall are Florida trees hung with streamers of grey moss."

The fourth leaflet gives the account of the death of Capt. George Washington Gardiner by Judge Koonce and describes the replica of the little fort outside of which Capt. Gardiner fell, and the fountain erected in his memory, in Dade Memorial park.

Of the authors of Florida Fiction, Kirk Monroe, author of the Flamingo Feather, etc., attracted my attention a number of years ago through my acquaintance with his mother, a beautiful white haired old lady whom I met at a Federation meeting in Miami. Mrs. Marjorie Stoneham Douglas of Miami has written a number of striking Florida stories for The Saturday Evening Post, particularly her story of the 1926 hurricane called "Blessed and Beloved." A number of our Florida authors are professors at Rollins College. Professor of Literature, Edwin Granberry, brought up at Lake City, has published three novels, dealing with early Spanish life in Florida, "The Ancient Hunger," "Strangers and Lovers" and "The Erl King." His last book, called "High Water," is being published this Spring by Holt & Co. He attended high school in Arcadia, and the University at Gainesville. His books are published in England by A. Constable & Co. He won the O. Henry Memorial prize in 1932 with a story the scene of which was laid within three miles of Rollins. While they are not "Florida products," a number of well-known authors spend the season at Winter Park, among them are Joseph Lincoln of Cape Cod stories, Dana Burnett, dramatist and novelist, Irving Bacheller, who has a beautiful estate there, and Jessie B. Rittenhouse, the poet who has recently become a permannent resident. Professor of Books, Edwin O. Grover, who has favored our club with his presence once or twice, has had a long career as publisher, author and poet. He writes me from Rollins about his work as follows: "As you may know I spent thirty years in the publishing business in Boston, New York and Chicago where my work was critical and editorial rather than creative. I have published one volume of verse entitled "The Gift of Friendship" which has long been out of print and I defy you to discover a copy. I have also written a volume of "Children's stories called "Never-Grow-Old Stories" published by Lyons and Carnahan. Since coming to Florida I have published two anthologies of Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., called "The Animal Lovers' Knapsack" and the "Nature Lovers' Knapsack." Twenty years ago I published three little books of which I am rather fond, called "My Little Book of Emerson," and "My Little Book of Stevenson" containing many of the inspirational passages from the writings of these two great authors." He also sent me copies of several of his poems, one of which "Lyric Florida" goes:

"Life here is set to music,
The year-long summer seems
A God's libation poured
From the golden cup of dreams.

At dawn the woodland thrushes,
Like angels from afar;
The mocking bird at twilight—
Each note a singing star.

By day the dome of crystal,
The heaven, singing blue;
The burnished stars of midnight
That all but drop on you.

The very earth is lyric
With red hibiscus bloom;
The flame-vine and azalea
Are threads on beauty's loom.

The orange trees shed incense
Along the common road,
Then how them down in worship
Beneath their golden load.

The towering pines are rythmic
With lofty lyric tunes,
Beneath clouds soft and dreaming
That hang thru endless Junes.

The royal palm chant psalters,
The live-oaks join the throng;
All life is set to music
And lifts its lyric song."

To get back to our novelists I quote from an earlier letter of Prof. Grover's about Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, author of "South Moon Under," who lives at Hawthorne, Florida. Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings who lives at Hawthorne, Florida, has just made a notable success with her "South Moon Under," which has sold 100,000 copies. It is a Florida story and was chosen as a book-of-the-month Club selection for October."

At Key West there lives a novelist, Ernest Hemingway, who is the founder of a school of modern literature that has had immense influence on most of the present day novelists. His masterpiece, "A Farewell to Arms" ran through edition after edition. Other authors have imitated his style, but none have equalled or surpassed him. Many object to his choice of his subject matter, but his treatment of it is pure art, and should be so recognized. Anyone who has an itching for another war, or for preparing for another war, should read this book for an all-time cure.

I merely mention Daniel B. Simmons, author of a Practical Psychology, who was born in Jacksonville, for I know nothing of him or his book. If one were to mention all the poets, rhymsters and rhapsodists who have sung of Florida's beauty and enchantment, one would have a list nearly equal to the size of Webster's unabridged. Caroline Mays Brevard, Merian Cooper, and the colored poet, James Weldon Johnson, all born in Jacksonville, are on the bibliography list sent me from that library. Of these, only Johnson, the colored poet is known to me by his writings and Johnson has some wonderful poetry.

There are two anthologies of Florida poets edited by Henry Harrison with a foreword in each written by Vivien Geiser Larramore of Miami, who was appointed Poet Laureate of Florida by the Governor. I tried to get copies of the volumes, but did not succeed. Polly McKibben, poet, chairman of Division of Literature, F. F. W. C., and president of the Miami branch of the National League of Pen Women is also author of a book of Children's Stories, and "Short, Short Story" in "American Short, Short Stories 1933," as well as numerous poems and some songs. She recently received a prize from the British Poetry Society, and has been given other honors. She was born in Massachusetts but has lived in Coral Gables for ten years. George Dillon, born in Jacksonville, who graduated from the Chicago University four years ago has two books of quite notable poetry to his credit and is now in England studying on a Guggenheim fellowship. His second book of verse won a $500 prize offered by someone in Chicago. Victor Starbuck was born and brought up in Orlando, but has been living the last five or six years in Asheville, N. C. His first book of verse, "Wind in the Pines" was published by the Yale University Press, and he is the only Florida poet represented in Stephenson's "Home Book of Modern Verse" by a poem entitled, "Peddler of Dreams." Prof. Grover to whom I am much indebted for information on most of these authors, writes also about a young student at Rollins, Gilbert Maxwell, who published last Fall through Dodd, Mead & Co., a volume of poems called, "Look to the Lightning." Competent critics have stated that this is one of the best "first books" brought out since Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Renascence." Prof. Grover suggests that Maxwell's poems, "Look to the Lightning" may be a valuable book some day and that our club couldn't make a mistake in investing $1.50 for a copy.

Maxwell was originally from Washington, Georgia. His poem entitled "Rebel" follows:

Lone in the winter the young tree
grieves,
And holds to the bough her ragged leaves;

For how is a sapling heart to know
The way of the winter and the way of the snow?

Who is a sapling to comprehend
The will of the wind and the autumn's end?

O, young tree stiffened and standing tall,
Your root is shallow, your trunk is small—

Give over your rigid arrogance,
Beg of the storm and pray to chance—

Beg of the wind to make you wise:
Nothing endured but something dies.

Two other poets I must mention besides Clinton Scollard before mentioned, who has a delicious bit on the birth of Florida.

Then on a morning blithe and bland
The land,—the longed for land!
and, ah,
Above the tawny dunes of sand
The palms of Florida!

The palms, the sunshine, and the breath
Of flowers, the sky without a stain;
And after winter's dearth and death,
Summer and life again!

One of these poets is Stephen Cochran Singleton of Miami, and sings this about "My Florida:"

My Florida! When from your low-swung stars,
Your murmurous inlets and your tide-swept bars
I take reluctant leave, and in the fading light
My spirit journeys forth upon an unknown flight,

Think you I shall not seek here to return?
Yes, I shall strive in humbleness
some way to earn
A detail on some duty that shall bear me nigh
Your well-remembered shores;
your glorious cloud-flecked sky.

"Lord," I may reverently say,
"this golden street
Is beautiful; the songs the angels sing are sweet,
But is there not some work that
I can do
Down where the gulls cry over waters blue?"

"I would not seem ungrateful,
yet I pray,
Let me go on some errand where the spray
Of salt water leaps and falls around some key.
If there be work like that, I pray
Thee, Lord, send me."

The other is the late Mrs. T. Picton Warlow of Winter Park, whose poem "And After All" was chosen from a thousand others submitted in a national poetry contest conducted by the General Federation of Woman's Clubs.

Little Man What Now?

A letter that will never be mailed is Ed Sullivan's version of a piece of correspondence between General Hugh Johnson, NRA cracker-downer, and Mr. Al Jolson, wiry Warner warbler, as follows:

Mr. Al Jolson,
Ritz Towers,
New York City.
My Dehr Mr. Jolson:

My Secretary in Charge of Cracking Down advises me that during my cracking-down sessions with Messrs. Ford, Chrysler, and those men from General Motors last week, you were stirring up trouble on Broadway by singing "I'm Riding to Heavon on a Mule." The inference to be drawn is plain enough: You are deliberately encouraging opposition to the automobile industry. I have a letter here of the 15th instant from H. Ford referring me to his telegram of the 13th instant, in which he charges that you intend to sing the song in Detroit, when "Wonder Bar" plays there. If you attempt to do so, I will crack down so hard that I'll crack up Busby Berkley's dance routines. Please wire me immediately at the White House annex.

P. S.—President Roosevelt has left on a fishing trip. Okay to wire me at the White House, direct, instead of Annex.

Red Bird Prexy Thanks Col. Head for Courtesies Here

Further appreciation of the Red Birds for the manner in which they were received here and the courtesies extended them on their visit were received this week by Col. Chas. R. Head from George M. Trautman, president of the club. His letter:

"Col. Chas. R. Head,
Avon Park, Florida.
Dear Col. Head:

I don't believe it is necessary for me to express in writing our appreciation for your many courtesies on the occasion, of our spring trip. Nevertheless, here it it. It is not very stimulating to come out of eighty degrees in the shade into snow and cold weather, although we had a perfect day for the opener. The weather since that time has been anything but favorable. We are all grateful to the citizens in Avon Park, and particularly yourself, for the many courtesies that were extended to us.

Very truly yours,
George M. Trautman, President.

Miss Chandler Wins Scholastic Honors

Miss Virginia Chandler, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Chandler, a student at the State College for Women at Tallahassee, won approbation for her scholastic work during the last semester. This is considered a high honor among the student body and Miss Chandler is receiving the congratulations of her many friends.

What Do You Expect of Your Banker?

The average thinking person will hesitate before answering this question, but eight out of every ten answers, the following has been given:

"Foresight and good judgment in all of the departments of the institution."

It is true that during the past seven years, many banks failed to exercise the best judgment, but a vast majority of banking institutions in the United States "stood the test."

The Barnett National Bank of Avon Park is affiliated with The Barnett National Bank of Jacksonville—an institution that has stood every test imaginable for 57 years, and today maintains a reputation second to none.

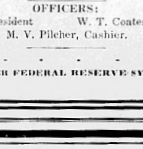

The "Barnett" appreciates its responsibility to the citizens of Avon Park.

ENCOURAGEMENT

Miss Jones—I wish I could reduce about twenty pounds.

Miss Brown—Never mind. Styles in figures change so often, yours will be in vogue some time if you live long enough.

OR SOMETHING

"I hear Newlywed pushed his mother-in-law in the river."

"Trying to drown his troubles, eh?"

NEED A CHANGE

He—Marry me and I promise to spend every evening with you.

She—That would be too much like being engaged to you.

HEH, HEH

"Why do they say the first year of married life is always the most difficult?"

"I guess because it takes about that long for a woman to get accustomed to hearing her ideal snore."

ARITHMETIC

SHARK ON DETAILS

Gladys—Listen, Mabel. This is what my boy friend says in his letter. "Darling, I think of you all day—your naturally waved hair, your brownish-gray eyes, your slightly prominent cheekbones, your twenty-four-inch waist—"

Mabel—Oh, that's a queer sort of love letter!

Gladys—Oh, didn't you know? Bob writes those descriptions of missing people for the police.—Fliegende Blaetter (Munich).

The Diplomat

"Tell me, Henry," said the sweet young thing dramatically—"tell me. Am I the only girl you were ever interested in?"

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT THE PERFECT GUM

Bedtime Story
by Thornton W. Burgess

THE STRANGER WITH THE BEAUTIFUL COAT

PETER RABBIT never will forget the first time he saw Glory the Cardinal, sometimes called Redbird. He had just hopped over the Old Orchard when a beautiful clear, loud whistle drew his eyes to the top of an apple tree. With a little gasp of sheer astonishment and delight Peter stopped short. He couldn't quite believe that he saw what he saw. He hadn't supposed that anyone even among the feathered folk could be quite so beautiful.

In Fact She Was Almost as Good a Singer as Her Handsome Husband.

The stranger was dressed all in red except a little black around the base of his bill. Even his bill was red. He wore a beautiful red crest, which made him still more distinguished looking. And how he could sing!

Of course Peter lost no time in hunting up Jenny Wren. "Who is it, Jenny? Who is that beautiful stranger with such a lovely song?" cried Peter as soon as he caught sight of Jenny.

"Glory the Cardinal," replied Jenny Wren promptly. "Isn't he the loveliest thing you've ever seen? If I were Mrs. Cardinal I'm afraid I should be jealous. There she is in the very same tree with him. Did you ever see such a difference?"

Instead of the beautiful red of Glory, Mrs. Cardinal wore a very dull dress. Her back was a brownish gray, and her throat a grayish-black. Her breast was a dull buff with a faint tinge of red. Her wings and tail were tinged with dull red. But if she wasn't handsomely dressed she could sing. In fact, she was almost as good a singer as her handsome husband.

"I've noticed," said Peter, "that people with fine clothes spend most of their time thinking about them and are of very little use when it comes to real work in life."

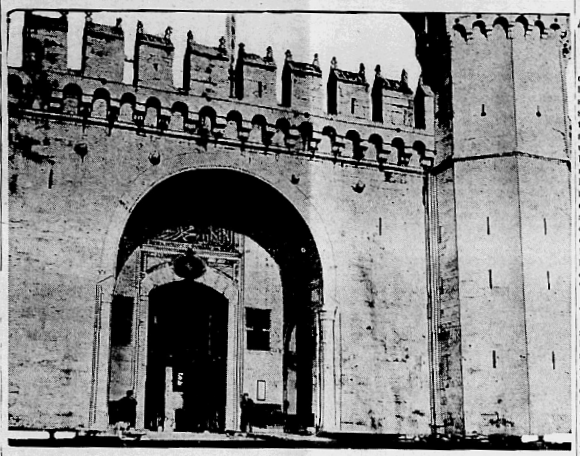

"Well, you needn't think that of Glory," declared Jenny in her vigorous way. "He's just as fine as he is handsome. He's a model husband. If they make their home around here you will find him doing his full share in the care of their babies. Sometimes they raise two families. When they do that Glory takes care of the first lot of youngsters as soon as they are able to leave the nest, so that Mrs. Cardinal has nothing to worry about while sitting on the second lot of eggs. Everybody loves Glory. Excuse me, Peter. I'm going over to find out if they're really going to stay."

When Jenny returned she was so excited she couldn't keep still a minute. "They like it here, Peter!" she cried. "If they can find a place to suit them they are going to stay. My, they will add a lot to the quality of this neighborhood!"

Mr. and Mrs. Cardinal whistled and sang as if their hearts were bursting with joy and Peter sat around listening as if he had nothing else to do.

Imposing Defenses of a Bloodier Turkish Age

CHARACTERISTIC of the new Turkey is the fact that the harem of the Ottoman sultans, who for centuries tyrannized over the Near East, has been transformed into a museum, and the casual visitor may wander through precincts once more closely guarded than any other in all the world. The harem was the most luxurious of women's prisons—for prison it was for its inhabitants—with its elaborate entrances, pillared courtyards, beautiful mosaics and jeweled treasures, including a throne inlaid with 25,000 pearls and a cradle inlaid with 120,000 pearls. In the days of its glory the harem contained from 300 to 400 women at a time. Four of these were the legal wives of the sultan, in accordance with the teaching of the Koran, and the others were attendants of the wives. The picture shows the fortress-like entrance to the palace, which represents several centuries of building.

THROUGH a WOMAN'S EYES • By JEAN NEWTON

ARE YOU VULNERABLE?

IN THE game of contract bridge, that is the big question.

It means if you have already won a game toward the rubber you must pay double and more for your mistakes. A slip that ordinarily costs you two hundred points means seven hundred if you are vulnerable.

You see, vulnerability is a privilege. It means you are already the winner of a game, and so half way to achieving the coveted rubber. It means, too, the opportunity for special privilege. A so-called "small slam," which ordinarily gives you five hundred points, nets the player who is vulnerable seven hundred and fifty.

But for that privileged state you must take a handicap, in other words, pay a price. The price is that when you bid you risk more than the player who is not vulnerable, the penalties for mistakes being higher to you.

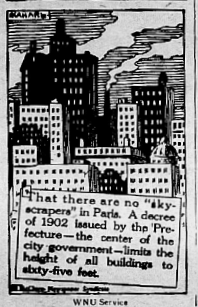

It's a good deal like life, isn't it?

There's the old saying, "The higher they stand the further they fall." It means, doesn't it, that the higher one stands the more is expected of one, and the greater are the penalties for mis-steps. In life the person who has something achieved is like the bridge player who is vulnerable. With his having more goes greater responsibility, and greater penalties.

Possessions, reputation, success, responsibility, love—they are privileges. And like all privileges we have to pay for them in what the French call "noblesse oblige"—in greater responsibility. What those without such privileges might do with impunity, we have to pay for dearly. For, as they say at the bridge table we are vulnerable.

A Little Secret Smile

By ANNE CAMPBELL

WE SAT and talked beneath the trees,
A scarlet bird sang from the wall.
The wind blew silver harmonies,
And Paula did not speak at all.

Of those who shared the garden close,
She was the only prisoner;
She and a flaunting yellow rose
From the green garden could not stir.

In her low chair she sat apart.
Her trusted crutches by her side,
Her eyes the mirror of her heart,
Her busy hands a sign of pride.

And as we spoke of many things,
The changing world, the lengthening mile,
She watched the flit of redbird's wings,
And smiled a little secret smile.

Across her countenance it went,
As sunlight flits upon the sea;
And watching her, I grew content
With life, and all it gave to me.

In that gay group of women none
Abjured the world but she . . .
The grace
Of her sweet spirit met the sun
And played upon her classic face. . . .

IDLE TO PRATE OF WEAKER SEX

Authority Asserts Old Idea Is Wrong.

For scores of centuries, the history of literature indicates, women have been considered less strong, less sturdy than men. To the feminine side of creation has been applied the term, "the weaker sex," and chivalry and manners have been predicated upon the supposition so denominated. But Dr. E. V. Allen, a member of the medical staff of the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn., has contradicted the entire notion. In a recent survey of three hundred thousand cases he says he found facts to support his contention that mothers, wives and daughters have survival powers far in excess of those of fathers, husbands and sons. In fine, the "female of the species" is endowed with "more resistance" than the male.

Doctor Allen concedes that his verdict is unorthodox. He agrees:

"Many will take exception to this statement. They will say that football players, track men, wrestlers and those who excel in feats of strength and endurance are almost uniformly males. But physical prowess is but the outward habiliment of physical superiority. A quality much better reflected is ability to withstand disease."

Men, Doctor Allen insists, are especially prone to succumb to functional ills. Digestive, lung, kidney and brain ailments shorten their lives. Granted that women may be ill more frequently and that they may be more apt to complain about their troubles, there seems to be no possibility of argument about the final figures whereby it is manifest that men die earlier than women. Even among infants the death rate for boys is greater than for girls.

Perhaps the real question is one of psychological reaction. Women may guard their health more effectively than men. Also, they are the beneficiaries of a certain protective attitude on the part of their masculine relatives. In this generation, anyway, the welfare of women is guarded, whereas men remain very much what they were a millennium ago—gamblers with fate, incessantly taking chances.

It would be easy to be dogmatic, but there are so many different angles to such a problem that the philosopher will wish to avoid a definite opinion. The one incontrovertible fact in the circumstances is that, weaker or stronger, each sex should be mindful of the necessity for making life more abundantly worth living, more worth while.—Washington Star.

Placing Him

A policeman dashed into a church while a wedding was in progress.

"Is a man called Dashington-Binks being married here today?" he asked the verger.

"He's being married now," was the reply.

"Well, I have a warrant for his arrest," said the officer.

"Friends of the bridegroom on the right-hand side of the church, please."

Mother's Cook Book

CULINARY KINKS

A GOOD soup is almost an indispensable part of the day's menu. Soup, like salad, may be made from almost anything with flavor. Those who have a soup pot always ready with stock may have countless variations, but for the small family bouillon cubes or beef extract are a great boon. A good soup stock may be made from vegetables with a cube or two of meat flavor or a teaspoonful of extract. Try this:

Vegetable Soup.

Slice one large onion, a small turnip, three stalks of celery, three dozen peppercorns, six cloves, a stick of cinnamon and three bay leaves, the same amount of parsley, thyme, and summer savory. Cover with plenty of cold water and simmer for two hours. Strain through a coarse muslin, and for each quart of vegetable liquor add a teaspoonful of extract or two cubes. Boil up and serve. From this stock, with gelatin, one may have a good flavored aspic.

Split Pea Soup.

This is especially appetizing when carefully prepared. Soak the peas over night, then put them on to cook with an onion and a half pound or more of salt pork (one may use pigs' hocks, a ham bone or fresh pork if one prefers). Cook slowly for hours until the peas are thoroughly cooked and the fat pork well done. Serve with small cubes of the pork in each soup dish. For a pound of peas and the same of pork one may use at least two quarts of water. This will serve a large family with a bowl of nourishing soup.

A Hardy Annual

"Two things I wanted-"

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood.

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin.

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores...in two convenient sizes...the larger is more economical.

Excellent Features In Store For Avon Patrons

The management of the Avon theatre announced yesterday that throughout the coming spring and summer the same high class pictures that have been shown at the Avon theatre will be featured at that popular theatre.

Among the big pictures booked for early showing are the cream of the pictures made by Warner Brothers Pictures Co., First National Pictures and Paramount Pictures. During the coming weeks and months these companies will release for the Avon theatre pictures that cannot be surpassed by any other company or companies.

Paramount super pictures booked for early showings include "Melody in Spring" featuring Lanny Ross of the Maxwell House Showboat Hour, over the radio, with Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland and Ann Sothern; "No More Women" with that popular team of McLaglen and Lowe; Bing Crosby in "We're Not Dressing", supported by a host of stars; Mae West in "It Ain' No Sin"; Earl Carroll's "Murder in the Vanities"; the incomparable W. C. Fields in "You're Telling Me"; Cecil B. DeMille's production of "Cleopatra"; Sylvia Sidney and Cary Grant in "The Thirty Day Princess"; Marlene Dietrich in "The Scarlet Empress" and Burns and Allen in "Many Happy Returns."

Super productions soon to be shown from the Warner and First National array of pictures include "Wonder Bar"; James Cagney in "Jimmy the Gent"; "Dames" with Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell; William Powell in "The Dragon Murder Case"; "I've Got Your Number" with Joan Blondell; Joe E. Brown in "A Very Honorable Guy" and also in "The Circus Clown"; "Twenty Million Sweethearts"; Richard Barthelmess in "The Old Doll's House"; Leslie Howard in "British Agent" and other pictures to be announced later.

The Avon theatre in addition to showing the very best in film entertainment, claims the distinction by reason of its beautiful lighting effect of being "The Only DeLuxe Theatre on the Ridge." Watch your newspaper for dates on the above and other excellent talking pictures.

During the coming week three outstanding pictures will be shown at this theatre. "Death Takes a Holiday," starring Fredric March is destined to go down in film history as the most different picture produced. The film will be shown Sunday and Monday. "White Woman" with Charles Laughton, Carole Lombard and Charles Bickford is billed for Tuesday. There will be only one guest night at the Avon theatre this week and that will be Tuesday night.

"Wonder Bar," Warner Brothers wonder show of the Century is billed for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. This picture will never be shown at any other theatre in this county. It is conceded to be the best film-musical ever produced by any company and boasts a cast of thousands.

Mock Trial Featured At Rotary Meeting

A mock trial featured the Rotarian luncheon Wednesday noon at the Jacaranda hotel. W. T. Coates and E. E. Mellon were jointly and severally charged with conspiracy. The presiding judge was C. E. Lanier and the prosecution was handled by A. McKee Elwell. E. G. Todd defended and he requested the defendants be tried separately so he could get two fees.

After all the evidence was heard and counsel for both sides had made their addresses to the jury, a verdict of guilty was rendered and the defendants sentenced to perfect attendance or a fine of $15.00.

Four Men Fined By County Judge

A fishing trip cost four men $25 and costs this week due to the fact that they were not particular about the way they did their fishing. Carl Prescott, R. E. Crumbley, W. H. Yarborough and H. E. Christmas, were arrested Sunday by S. P. Cooper on a charge of having in their possession an illegal seine for taking fish.

Cooper caught the men with the seine which he alleged they were using in Arbuckle to take fish which is contrary to the State Fish and Game laws. They were tried and convicted Monday in County Judge M. C. Whitehurst's court and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs or serve 30 days in the county jail.

Political Announcements

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I hereby announce my candidacy for County Commissioner for District No. 1, subject to the Democrat primary, June 5th, 1934. I am a Florida Cracker, having been raised in Polk County, and have been a Democrat all my life. For the past ten years I have been a citizen of Avon Park. During the past nine years I have had a wide experience in road construction and maintenance work. I believe I am qualified to handle the affairs of the district and give competent service. I will appreciate your vote and support.

FRANK ARMISTEAD

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I wish to announce my candidacy for County Commissioner from District No. 1., subject to vote of the Democratic Primary Election June 5, 1934.

As a candidate I am pledged to no faction or individual. If elected I pledge my best efforts in behalf of my district and the county as a whole. I would greatly appreciate your support.

Respectfully,
J. L. WELLS

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of county commissioner for District 1, Highlans County, subject to the Democratic Primary, June 5, 1934.

I have been a resident of this community for the past 21 years and served previously as county commissioner for this district when it was part of old DeSoto county.

Being a long-time resident here I believe I have a full knowledge of the needs of the district and county as to roads and other vital matters and if elected promise an honest, efficient administration with a square deal for all concerned.

Your vote and support will be appreciated.

S. P. DURRANCE.

FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

I wish to announce my candidacy for nomination to the office of Circuit Judge, subject to the Democratic Primaries in June.

If you feel that my service as circuit judge merits your further confidence in my ability and integrity, I shall greatly appreciate your support and vote in the June primaries.

W. J. BARKER

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

To the Voters of Highlands County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for re-election to the office of Representative for Highlands County in the Legislature. If nominated and elected, I shall continue to serve the people of Highlands County and the State of Florida fairly and impartially to the best of my ability. Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

J. E. SIMS.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

To the Voter of Highlands County:

I hereby anounce myself a candidate for election to the office of Representative for Highlands County in the Legislature.

If nominated and elected I shall serve the PEOPLE of Highlands County and the State of Florida fairly and squarely according to majority wishes and mandates of the PEOPLE.

DR. A. T. EIDE.

FOR REPRRESENTATIVE

I wish to announce as a Candidate for the House of Representatives subject to the Democratic primary on June 5, 1934.

I pledge myself, if eleced, to represent the people of this county as a whole.

Your support will be sincerely appreciated.

Her poem is very beautiful and appealing.

As after frost, men take the darkening mould
And burn in piles the leaves that lately wore
Green summer's jade and fall's Etruscan gold—
Now whitening ashes on an earthen floor—
So do we burn our letters, sheaves that hold
Dreams of a whole life's visioning now no more
Than empty shells or vacant rooms, all cold,
Their creaking hinges rusting from each door.

What if the spectrum flame of lavish days
Has turned to tender browns and quiet grays,
What if the song of life and love's refrain
Has lost its lilt in struggle with life's pain,
What if both leaves and letters drift in smoke—
Spring knew the lips of April—Love once spoke?

Very briefly we will consider the screen plays for I have noticed only one and that is to be developed by Rex Beach from an idea for a story by Chas. R. Rogers, to be called "Green Gold." It is an epic of the building of a great Central American fruit empire. There is little time left to mention the songs. Mrs. Polly McKibben mentions two of hers in her letter to me. One, "Luis" and the other "Dernie Lady" and both presented in New York City, one by Roxy ad the other by Earl Carrol. Another Jacksonville woman, Mrs. Roma Maxwell Avery, has furnished the text for Sophie Jean Irving's exquisite Indian Love Song, entitled "Children of the Sun." Two hundred and eighty-two competitors from thirty-two states submitted poems, and hers was chosen. This is the signature song for the National Album of Songs, compiled by Sophie Jean Irving, editor of the Hilltop magazine, published at High Springs, Florida.

I cannot close this paper without calling attention to the natural poetry and beauiful significance of the Indian names through out Florida. The earliest known name for Florida was Ikannyuksa, "the land blessed by the Sun, Moon and (their children) the Stars: where the favoring rains, breezes, light and warmth of heaven make harvests. Among the names of rivers, Suwanee means, "water beloved of the Sungod." While Ichepicksassa means, "where the moon puts the colors of the rainbow into the earth, and the Sun draws them out in the flowers." What a heritage for us! Beauty and harmony everywhere in nature—why not pence between men!

Ordinary foods are most palatable when attractively served.

SMALL CROWD AT HIGHLANDER MEET MONDAY

Lake Wales Man Explained Aims and Objects of New Organization

The meeting called for Monday night at the high school auditorium to hear a discussion of the "Scenic Highlanders" was very poorly attended. A mere handful was present to hear President L. H. Kramer of Lake Wales tell of the aims and objects of the organization. The crowd was so small the meeting was held in one of the class rooms as it would have been lost in the auditorium.

After his introduction by Dr. W. A. Davison, chairman, Mr. Kramer told how the ridge section has something to offer tourists, just as much as the east and west coasts of the state have. The ridge is not getting its share of visitors, he said and then told of the two major objectives of the Highlands in order to get more visitors here. These two objectives are the getting of the new federal highway through the ridge from Leesburg to Miami and publicity for the ridge section at the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago this summer. The latter will cost $2500 and could not be bought for $50,000, he said.

Mr. Kramer outlined the fight for the road which began about 18 months ago at a meeting of the state road department at Tampa. The route from Leesburg to Haines City is new and has been accepted by the federal government, he said. From Haines City south the route will practically follow the present road 8 to Lake Annie but curves and railroad crossings will be eliminated as far as possible. From Lake Annie the route will be via Moore Haven, around the west shore of Lake Okeechobee and follow the Miami canal into Miami.

The aerial survey south of Haines City has been completed and the physical survey is to start immediately, the speaker said. When construction starts local labor will be used in the various communities and it is hoped grading will be started this summer in order to take care of unemployment after the citrus season ends.

When completed this road is expected to be one of the finest in the state and will be constructed entirely with federal money, no state funds to be used. The right of way is to be at least 100 feet except through towns but the federal government wants at least 150 to 200 feet right of way wherever possible. According to state road department figures this new road will shorten the distance from Jacksonville to Miami by 25 miles than the route down the east coast.

Although everything seems set there is still work to do in order to have this road an accomplished fact, Dr. Kramer said and urged organization on the entire ridge. The next meeting of the road department will be in Sebring on June 11 and he asked that a strong delegation be present.

Regarding the publicity program at the World's Fair, the entire Florida exhibit will be turned over to the ridge section for five days together with all the publicity features, including radio and newspapers, free of charge. A man will also be kept up there for three months, beginning June 15 if funds are available. Literature will be distributed and contact made with all visitors who register at the Florida exhibit. To raise the necessary funds it is proposed to sell 2,500 membership in the Scenic Highlands at $1.00 each and Avon Park's quota is 450. It is desired to raise the full amount as fast as possible in order that the necessary work may start as no expense will be incurred until the funds are in hand.

Bottle of Water Sets Car on Fire

A fire caused by a bottle of water is reported from Sebring. According to Spencer Jones of the county seat a car belonging to Henry Pollard was standing in a filling station when smoke was seen coming from the interior of the car. Investigation showed a bottle of water setting in the rear window and the sun's rays shining through this had set the upholstery on fire. The bottle of water acted in the same manner as a magnifying glass and had had the same effect.

Dr. Morgan Named Vice-Commander of American Legion

Dr. A. M. Morgan, past commander of Highlands post, received the unanimous nomination of the sixth district for department vice-commander of the American Legion at a sixth district conference in Wauchula Sunday. His name will be presented at the state convention of the Legion at Gainesville in June for election to the office, though his nomination by the conference is tantamount to election.

Delegates from the south end of the district gave their support to the Avon Park Legionnaire in recognition of his outstanding work in the Legion for the past several years, the Arcadia post placing his name in nomination.

Glenn Ebersole of Arcadia, F. T. Gardiner of Punta Gorda, and Webb Hawkins of Wauchula were nominated as district executive committeemen.

Dr. A. M. Morgan and W. M. Hetherington were nominated among the delegates to the national convention in Miami in October.

Will Promote O.B. Trail Here

Yearwood Aims to Develop New Highway Through Here From North

J. R. Yearwood, well known Avon Park resident and property owner, returned Saturday from a three weeks' trip through Ohio, his former home, and other northern states. He found every kind of weather in the north, including snow and ice, and was glad to get back to the land of sunshine and flowers.

While gone Mr. Yearwood interested himself in the promotion of the proposed Orange Blossom trail which would start about at Detroit and continue down through Ohio, Virginia, the Carolinas and on down through Georgia, thence down the ridge and terminating at Miami.

Mr. Yearwood is very enthusiastic about this proposed trail which would open up some new territory and be both scenic and industrial. Through his former connections in the north he feels sure he could get full cooperation from the states the trail would traverse. He says he is going to push the project as hard as he can and would be pleased to have the cooperation of all citizens and civic bodies who are interested.

Mr. Yearwood owns 10,000 acres of turpentine land adjoining Highlands county on the north and is intensely interested in this section of Florida.

D. W. Sanders Died Here Tuesday; Was Buried Wednesday

Daniel W. Sanders, a resident of Avon Park for the past eight years, passed away at his home Tuesday following a three years' illness, heart trouble being the immediate cause of death. Interment was in Bougainvillea cemetery Wednesday afternoon with Rev. Hartzog of the Primitive Baptist church conducting the services at the grave side.

Mr. Sanders was born in Bainbridge, Ga., and was a member of the Woodmen of the World. There survive the widow, Mrs. Ida Sanders, six children and a brother and a sister. The children are Edward Sanders of Salem City, Ga., Mrs. Georgia Boutwell of Climax, Ga., Mrs. C. E. Hardin, of Camilla, Ga., Mrs. W. T. Hicks of Dothan, Ala., and Miles Sanders and Julian Sanders, both of this city. The brother and sister are Jay Sanders and Mrs. Jess Low, both of Wigham, Ga.

New Theatre Man Arrives

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bott are the proud parents of a nine pound son, born Friday, April 27. The young man saw the light of day at the Orange General Hospital at Orlando and both he and his mother are progressing very nicely. Mr. Bott is the owner of the Avon theatre here as well as theatres in other cities in Florida.

Enlists in Marine Corps

Charles Carter, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Carter, left Wednesday night for Savannah, Ga., to enlist in the U. S. Marine corps. He plans to enter the corps drum and bugle school and also take up other studies.

OPENING GAME AMATEUR LOOP NEXT THURSDAY

Brewster to Play Return Game Here Sunday; Won Thursday 8-4

Frostproof comes here next Thursday, May 10th, for the opening game of the amateur league, and will be met at Head Field by the newly organized Avon Park entry which has been rounding into shape for the past month under the guidance of Manager Jimmie Spencer.

Wauchula goes to Bartow for the other game of the league, which at present is composed of four teams, though there is strong possibility that before the opening two other teams will be entered in the league. Brewster is one of the teams waiting to come in and their entry is certain if Mulberry fans come through with a team, which now seems likely, according to Spencer.

The league games will start promptly at 3:15 and the admission charge will be 25 cents. The schedule, received today by Manager Spencer, calls for two games a week—Thursdays and Sundays.

Brewster Wins 8-4

By way of seeing what the boys had, Manager Spencer took his charges to Brewster yesterday for a practice game. Brewster won 8 to 4, but Spencer found that he had two promising young pitchers and a smooth-working infield upon which he can rely during the coming months.

Bud Clark and C. W. Merriweather, both youngsters, and both making their first appearance did a fine job of hurling for the locals and Manager Spencer predicts they will each have a berth on the regular pitching staff this season. Clark is a right hander, who pitched for the American Legion Juniors two years ago. He started the game at Brewster and worked four and a half innings, allowing but four hits. Merriweather is a southpaw and pitched one-hit ball for his half of the game. Both youngsters looked good, and except for unsteady support that was not unexpected for the first game, should have won.

Hogan, fast ball pitcher for Brewster allowed only three hits. The game was played in a drizzling rain, and the dark day and fast ball was a combination that held local batsmen in check.

Brewster Here Sunday

Brewster comes here for a return game Sunday, at which time local fans will be given an opportunity of seeing the locals in action for the first time this season.

Manager Spencer has selected Batch Dilley to pitch the opener at Head Field Sunday, and announces several additions to the line-up. Merriweather or Dr. Clark will probably furnish the relief, if any is needed. Durrh Martin will be in left field, McFerrin in right and Landress will cover the center garden. The infield will be held intact as per Thursday's line-up.

Col. Bailey Speaker At Rotary Club Lunch Wednesday

Col. F. N. K. Bailey, county superintendent of schools, was the speaker at the Rotary club luncheon at the Jacaranda hotel Wednesday noon. Called on for an impromptu talk, Col. Bailey spoke on the subject closest his heart, the schools and he also stressed the need of parents and adults setting a good example to the children. He also mentioned the repair work being done on the schools in the county and also stated that sufficient money to pay all teachers in full would be available in a few days. There will be a full nine months school term, he added.

The meeting Wednesday marked the 24th consecutive meeting with 100 percent attendance, a record that Avon Park Rotarians are proud of.

Besides Col. Bailey other visitors at the meeting were T. F. Sharpies of Lake Wales, Willis Cody and Elsie Blaisden of Frostproof and F. H. Shepardson of Burlington, Vermont.

Would Circularize All Legion Posts

Legionnaires of over ten thousand posts throughout the United States will be invited to come to Florida to the national convention in Miami, and to make the trip through the ridge section, according to tentative plans announced at a meeting of Highlands post Wednesday night. Commander R. T. Fairey announced that L. H. Kramer, president of the Scenic Highlanders had offered to send out the literature if addresses of the Legion posts were furnished him, and the post adjutant was authorized to secure the large list of names for the purpose.

Dr. A. M. Morgan registered a complaint that the flag on the staff in the mall was not being taken in at nights and was not receiving proper care. Commander Fairey, Dr. Morgan and Demos Mandis were named a committee to go before the city council and ask that either the flag be properly handled or its care turned back to the Legion, which formerly had charge of it.

Lake Placid Man Killed

Joe Rhyne Dead; Parker Mansfield In Jail Charged With Murder

Joe Rhyne of Lake Placid was fatally shot Monday night a few miles east of Arcadia and Parker Mansfield is in jail in Arcadia charged with the killing.

Mr. Rhyne, Cecil Crews, Louis House and Sam and Chis Mathis were returning to their home at Lake Placid in a car, after attending the show in Arcadia. It is said Mansfield stopped them a few miles east of Arcadia requesting their aid in getting his car out of the ditch where it was stuck. Mansfield, who it is said, appeared to be under the influence of liquor became quarrelsom, drew a gun and fired at the feet of Louis House and when the Lake Placid men got into their car to drive away he fired twice at the car. The first shot fired hitting Mr. Rhyne in the back, the second shot fired as the car was leaving, shattered the rear glass of the car, but did not injure any one of the occupants.

Mr. Rhyne was rushed to the hospital in Arcadia and died within an half hour after reaching the hospital. He is survived by his parents and three children, two sons and one daughter.

Mansfield was arrested Monday night by the sheriff of DeSoto county, assisted by two police officers of Arcadia, and confined in the county jail.

Can Pay County Tax Until June 30th

Although the delinquent tax list is already in the hands of the printer, Tax Collector Ruth Hylton stated Wednesday that those who have not paid their taxes can do so until June 30 as the sale will not be held until the first Monday in July, although the advertising fee must be paid in addition to the taxes as the list is already set and the publisher is entitled to pay for all descriptions set.

3,000 Fingerling Bass Put in Lake Verona

Three thousand fingerling bass were placed in Lake Verona here Thursday by R. G. Garrett of the Eagle Lake hatchery. Besides the bass placed here 10,000 were placed in Red Beach lake and 2,000 in Ruby lake at DeSoto City. This is the first distribution of fish this season and more are expected within the next few months. The bass were obtained through George W. Davis, conservation commissioner, Tallahassee.

FEW QUALIFIED TO VOTE AS YET IN THE PRIMARY

338 Have Paid 1932 and 1933 Poll Taxes; May 19th Last Day

Many people expecting to take part in the June primary will be disappointed unless they get busy and pay their poll tax before May 19th.

The fact that voters who took part in the general election in 1932 did not have to pay poll tax to vote in the repeal election, and voters were not required to pay poll tax to vote in the city election in Avon Park has caused many to be two years behind with their poll tax. The fact is all but 185 of the 1794 voters registered in Avon Park must pay two years in order to vote.

Only 1051 voters in the county have paid their 1932 tax and at five o'clock yesterday afternoon only 338 voters in the entire county had paid their 1933 poll tax.

Most of the voters who have paid their 1932 tax are those who took part in the city elections held in Sebring and Lake Placid last fall.

Many voters who paid their tax to vote last fall are under the impression that their 1933 tax is paid but this is not true.

Apparently there is more interest in the coming primary than in any election held in years, as there are 490 new names on the registered voters list, bringing the total up to 4,426 registered in the county, but unless this interest continues up to the point of getting the voters to pay their poll tax the vote is apt to be very light.

The number of voters now registered in the different communities are as follows: Avon Park, 1794; Sebring, 1476; DeSoto City, 214; Lake Placid, 386; Venus, 153; Hicoria, 170; Bassenger, 65; Brighton, 72, and Sunniland, 96.

In the primary election of 1932 the largest vote polled for any office was that of sheriff, with four men in the race, polling a total of 2299 votes which is slightly more than half the number of the voters now registered.

Tax Collector Ruth Bass Hylton stated yesterday that unless those who intend to pay their poll tax start coming in at once it will work a hardship on her office and if all wait until the last few days it may be impossible to take care of the rush.

New Road Direct From Avon Park to Highlands Hammock

Estimated to reduce the distance 10 miles, a new road is being built between Avon Park and Highlands Hammock west of Sebring. Starting at the west end of the Mall, the road will be a continuation of state road 8 and run directly south into the Hammock the proposed botanical gardens and arboretum.

The road is being built by the Sebring C. C. C., camp organization and is primarily to shorten the distance between fire towers at the county seat and here. The road will be 40 feet in width with a 100 foot right of way. Bridges are being built and for the present clay is being spread in the ruts in the worst places, making a temporary road to haul clay from the pits here to the botanical garden.

This route was first suggested several years ago by Gilbert Freeman when the development of the hammock was in its infancy. The route was viewed and the proposal discussed but the cost was judged to be too great at that time.

Times to Give Typewriters

Free of Cost to Those Getting Subscriptions; Not a Contest

Typewriters, absolutely free of all cost, will be given away by the Avon Park Times in exchange for subscriptions. This is not a contest in any sense of the word and there are no strings to this offer which is good for either new or renewal subscriptions.

The typewriters are standard Remington portables and are offered on two plans. On the first plan a typewriter selling for $33.50 will be given for 30 annual subscriptions and on the other plan a machine valued at $45 will be given for 40 yearly subscriptions.

The 30 or 40 subscriptions can be made up of one, two or more years, the totals to be 30 or 40 years according to the typewriter desired. The subscription price delived in Highlands county is $2.00 per year. If a subscription is to go outside this county 50 cents must be added to cover cost of additional postage.

This is a splendid chance for students who graduate from high school this year and intend to go to college to get a typewriter at no cost, except the expenditure of a little time.

Subscription blanks and further details of the plan will be gladly given to those interested and phoning or calling at the Times office.

Arrangements are bing made for further premiums for subscriptions, details of which will be announced in the near future.

Final Meeting of P. T. A. Thursday

The final meeting of the season of the Parent-Teachers association will be held on Thursday, May 10th at 3:30 o'clock at the high school auditorium. The meeting will follow an executive board meeting at which all members of the board are asked to be present.

Installation of officers will be held at this time and an interesting musical program has been arranged by the program chairman, Mrs. Jack Hend.

Parnell Funeral Held Last Tuesday

Willie Parnell, who is well known in Highlands county, died at his home in Wauchula, Sunday night following a long illness. Funeral services were held at the Crewsville Baptist church, Tuesday afternoon and burial was at the Bethel Baptist cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mattie, and eight children, Mrs. Annie Albritton of Wauchula, Mrs. Belle Albritton of Sebring, Mrs. Flossie Wilkins of Punta Gorda, Travis Parnell of Punta Gorda, Walter, John Wesley and Hobson Parnell all of Wauchula.

CITY MOVES TO GET DELINQUENT INSURANCE TAX

Approves Collection Contract and OK's New Cells for Jail

Avon Park's city dads finally approved a contract by which alleged delinquent insurance company licenses will be collected on a 50-50 percentage basis. The former council turned down a proposed contract with McLanahan-Hawes-Bruce of Elberton, Ga., whereby the latter would collect these licenses from the various insurance companies doing business in Avon Park at $15.00 per company. Thursday of last week Councilmen Pendleton, Hall and Smith made a trip to Lakeland where the plan is in operation and made a favorable report at the council meeting Tuesday night. After some discussion the contract was approved and covers delinquent licenses from 1926 to 1933 inclusive and will run for one year.

The erection of a modern and sanitary jail for the city came decidedly nearer with the council approving the proposal of the Barnum Iron Works of Detroit for supplying four cells. Fines and forfeitures of the police department, will be placed in a special account and are expected to pay for the jail in a short time. The cells will be installed at the fire station.

In connection with the police department City Clerk Shockley reported on the number of arrests and fines collected for the six months ending March 31. His report named the arresting officers and the fines paid as follows:

Cravey 25 arrests, fines $128; McCarthy, 22 arrests, fines $79; Still 20 arrests, fines $76; Prescott 10 arrests, fines $18; Rutherford 7 arrests, fines $26; Barwick 5 arrests, fines $53.

For the month of April the report was: Still 10 arrests, fines $52; Cravey 8 arrests, fines $42; Barwick 2 arrests, fines $22.50.

Max Wild inquired what the city would take for the old Cutler house and said he would give $100 in bonds for it. The city attorney said the city does not own the property but there is over $800 in street assessments and taxes owing. A committee consisting of Councilman Hall and Jordon was named to investigate and report back at the next meeting.

C. C. Flowers claimed $35 is still due him as custodian of the ball park, this being over and above what he received from the CWA. Chairman Pendleton objected to the city paying any and all bills which he said might come up and Flowers was asked to file his bill with any others that might come up on the ball park and they would be considered at the next meeting.

A letter from R. T. Willard of the Industrial Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., asked that nothing be done regarding the remission of taxes on the Jacaranda hotel building until conditions improve. Mr. Willard quoted figures to show the hotel had been a losing proposition ever since the present owners had acquired it. No action was taken, the city clerk being authorized to reply to the letter, regretting the city's inability to act.

H. R. Currie submitted a proposal for work in the mall and parks with FERA labor and gave figures what it would cost the city for material and truck hire. A very comprehensive program had been worked out by Mr. Currie and he was asked to contact the FERA authorities at Sebring and ascertain the number of man-hours available and report back to the council.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation for the many kindnesses shown and the sympathy extended during the recent illness and death of our beloved husband and father.

Mrs. Ida Sanders and family.

No Cash for Uncle Sam
The Wirt Mystery
The Tiger's Immortality
Poor Old Trotzky

Mr. Chamberlain, in charge of British finances, is a happy fellow countrymen that conditions are good in England: "The past fiscal year has shown a profit of $200,000,000," and "The atmosphere is distinctly brighter."

It is not brighter for your Uncle Sam. Mr. Chamberlain also announced that "he did not propose to make any provision for the payment of war debts to America," and the statement was loudly cheered. It is to be hoped that President Roosevelt will make a reply that will be "loudly cheered" on this side of the water.

Money can be collected from England and other countries by a tax on all shipping entering our ports.

We still own the ports and the docks—at least that is the popular theory.

They could not well retaliate, since we own little shipping. The United States would like to hear President Roosevelt say to the British, the French and the others, "There are several ways of skinning a cat, and I propose to show you one or two of them."

Young ladies attending the fateful Virginia dinner at which Doctor Wirt thought he heard somebody call President Roosevelt "only the Kerensky in the revolution, soon to be replaced with a genuine Stalin," testify that nothing of the kind was said.

In fact, the young ladies agree that the dinner started with a monologue by Doctor Wirt which outlasted the dinner. Nobody else could say a word.

The circus kept a big striped tiger named "Hoss" locked in a strong cage, strong enough to keep the tiger in, not strong enough to keep death out.

Death entered, and "within ten minutes the tiger was on his way to be made into a rug." That will be for the tiger a sort of immortality. Fire and moths permitting, his beauty may survive for 50 years, made perfect by artificial eyes, teeth and tongue, growing gradually dimmer. Man has no such certainty of eternity, apart from faith, except in his children. They do supply what might be semi-eternal representation on earth.

Parents of certain modern children, however, might well say, "I should rather be made into a rug and get my eternity that way."

You feel sorry for poor old Trotzky, despite the color of his politics. Fate put him in the Russian revolution, raising him to the heights. Stalin threw him out, into Turkey. He wandered to France and guilelessly started organizing a "fourth Internationale" to "put an end to all organized government." The French government puts him out of France, and he doesn't know where to go.

He thinks of the United States, but what with Professor Wirt and one thing and another he can hardly hope to get in here. England used to receive all revolutionaries, but some other countries may reject Trotzky to avoid offending the younger, more powerful Stalin.

Cheer up, if your house is mortgaged. Uncle Sam discovers, after 158 years of national life since 1776, that he has a pocketbook and means to use it for you. Some of his hundreds of millions will be used carrying along your mortgage until you have had time to pay it off. Even if it is not a "distress" mortgage, he may help you. The mortgage holder will be asked to reduce his interest rate and to extend the mortgage to ten or even fifteen years. In return he will have the government's guarantee that the mortgage will be paid.

Mortgaged home owners will ask, "Am I dreaming?"

Some real estaters will say, "Let me get my real estate mortgaged to my brother-in-law quickly, and let him get a government guarantee."

Thus far the government in its recovery experiment has spent five thousand million dollars for relief of various kinds. It could spend ten thousand millions. It would not cost a cent more of expense if it would print and pay out the money instead of issuing bonds that are fictitious, since bankers do not really pay for them, the interest doubling the amount paid out.

New York city has 67,000 tenement houses in which 2,000,000 people live, because there is no other place for them to live. Of the 2,000,000, 90 per cent live in fire traps, according to official report. There is, however, a silver lining to this cloud, from one point of view. When tenement houses burn down, and tenants burn up, the landlord gets his insurance. If the law forbade insurance on firetraps, as it should do, the owner would be on the spot night and day to prevent fire. And there would be less arson.

President Tells What He Wants Congress to Do—Mussolini Tries Another Restoration Method—France to Quit Armament Negotiations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a series of conferences with congressional leaders, made known his desires in the way of immediate legislation. First, he told them he would soon submit a new request for $1,500,000,000 for relief purposes, as was indicated in his January budget message. This bill will include several provisions—namely, a housing program and $500,000,000 for the public works program to aid employment. The relief will be made a part of the usual deficiency measure.

President Roosevelt

Next, Mr. Roosevelt wants a stock market regulation bill with better teeth than those in the much modified Fletcher-Rayburn measure. He desires, too, passage of reciprocal tariff, general revenue, municipal bankruptcy, and federal insurance on bank deposits measures.

In order that congress may get through and adjourn by the middle of May, the President is willing to sidetrack some of the administration measures, including the permanent air mail legislation and the Wagner bill to outlaw company-dominated unions. He was reported also to have expressed opposition to measures to create a central monetary authority.

The house, it is said, will be ready to adjourn by May 15, but there is doubt whether the senate will get through its work before June 1.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI of Italy has his own ideas of the way to restore prosperity, and they are utterly at variance with those of President Roosevelt. By his direction the council of ministers issued a series of decree laws designed to make the cost of living commensurate with the purchasing power of the lira.

The Italian lira now stands at 3 to 1 in purchasing power with reference to pre-war values, Il Duce declared. The cost of living on the other hand is 4 to 1 with reference to pre-war prices.

The two will be equalized Mussolini and his ministers declared, and here is what they did:

Slashed the pay of members of the government 20 per cent.

Cut the pay of state and public employees on a scale ranging from 6 to 12 per cent.

Slashed various supplements and indemnities granted state employees and others from 10 to 50 per cent.

Ordered every landlord in Italy to reduce rents by 12 per cent in cases of individuals and societies, and 15 per cent in case of businesses and shops.

Reduced prices in co-operative stores and military co-operatives by 10 per cent.

President Roosevelt is right, not Mussolini, said the London Sunday Express in an editorial.

"Mussolini cuts all food prices and rents on all dwellings," the paper pointed out. "He cuts, too, state salaries in excess of £2 ($10) a week. Roosevelt works the opposite way by raising wages and prices all around. Mussolini wants to reduce the cost of living. Roosevelt seeks to increase purchasing power."

DISARMAMENT negotiations under present conditions are futile, in the official opinion of the French government, and it will have nothing more to do with them, returning instead to its old plan for national security founded on armaments and allies. This is the gist of the note delivered to the British government which is held to be a death blow to any accord on armaments. The blame for failure of negotiations is laid by the French on Chancellor Hitler and his Nazi government of Germany.

The note described the increased German military budget as a "menace" and declared the German government, without awaiting the results of the negotiations in progress, has shown its determination to continue all forms of rearmament in violation of the treaty of Versailles.

"The German government," the note charged, "intends to increase immediately on a formidable scale not only the strength of its army but also its naval and air forces.

"Whatever explanation may be advanced, facts of such exceptional gravity can lead to only one observation and conclusion. They prove the German government has made impossible further negotiations."

The French laid down one condition upon which they would re-engage in disarmament conversations, and it is regarded as insuperable. That condition is that Germany return to the League of Nations and to the league's disarmament conference at Geneva.

The note concluded by calling for the final meeting of the disarmament conference to announce publicly that it is useless to continue its labors and to show the world where the blame lies.

Foreign Minister Barthou has advocated an armaments agreement even if the French had to make great sacrifices, but the Nationalist members of the cabinet, including Marshal Petain, minister of war, and Andre Tardieu, vice premier, overruled him and forced the writing of the note in accord with their views.

Barthou has now gone to Poland to try to break up the growing accord between that nation and Germany; and in Paris the Rumanian foreign minister, Nicholas Titulescu, was helping to reinforce the alliance between France and the little entente.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, British chancellor of the exchequer, introduced in parliament a prosperity budget showing how far the country had gone toward recovery in two years, reducing taxes and restoring the pay of government employees and the dole for the jobless. The chancellor reported a surplus in the treasury of almost $160,000,000 and held out bright hopes for the future. This prosperity of the British, however, isn't going to be of any direct benefit to the United States. Mr. Chamberlain said:

"Neither last year nor the year before did I make any provision for payment on the war debt to America nor for the receipt of war debts or reparations by ourselves, and in the absence of any further development I propose to follow precisely the same line this year."

SO FAR as the Democrats go, the Wirt affair is ended, the Democratic majority of the committee of investigation deciding to report to congress that the Gary educator's charges of a red plot to overthrow the government are unfounded. McGugin and Lehibach, the Republican members of the committee, formulated a minority report expressing their opinion that the inquiry should be broadened in scope. McGugin asserts there is plenty of evidence from many sources to prove that certain members of the brain trust are seeking to overthrow the established social order of the United States. Representative Hamilton Fish of New York told a gathering of Republican women that Doctor Wirt failed to prove his case because his sources of information were too remote, but that he, Mr. Fish, was going to prove it so there would be no doubt about it. Regardless of patriotic motives, the Republicans in congress are not to abandon just yet the campaign material supplied by the Wirt case.

Miss Kneeland

When the Butwinkle committee called before it the six who were with Wirt at the dinner in Virginia they all, with astonishing unanimity, denied practically everything that Wirt said occurred that evening. Each of them asserted that the doctor monopolized the conversation, talking mainly about gold devaluation, and that it was almost impossible to interrupt him. They verified only one statement which Wirt had ascribed to Miss Hildegarde Kneeland, a division head in the home economics of the Agriculture department. This was that she had objected to Wirt's proposal that the goal of the government should be a restoration of conditions in the country as they were in 1926.

Miss Kneeland, in acknowledging this statement as hers, elucidated at the committee members' request and said she would advocate, instead of 1926 conditions, better distribution of property, minimum wage laws, unemployment insurance, mother's pensions, government control of the stock market.

Chairman Butwinkle and some other Democrats declared Doctor Wirt had laid himself open to charges of perjury, but naturally they would prefer to drop the entire affair rather than to prolong it by trying to prosecute the Indiana educator.

JAPAN has issued a manifesto asserting its responsibility to maintain peace in eastern Asia and objecting to the giving of help to Chinese air and military forces by other nations. Especially the Japanese dislike the sales of airplanes to China by American and Italian manufacturers. The document amounts to a declaration of a Japanese protectorate over China.

CERTAIN tax increases written into the tax bill by the senate and passed by that body are regarded by house leaders as quite undesirable. Chairman Doughton of the ways and means committee declared they were entirely outside the original intent of the new revenue legislation, and a fight against them was planned in conference.

When the measure reached the senate it contained provisions estimated to produce $258,000,000 a year in new revenue, chiefly by stopping the loopholes through which legal tax avoidance had been possible.

The bill fell quickly into the hands of the senate "liberal" element, and provisions were inserted to add $220,000,000 to the yield provided by the house. Also, the senate inserted the provision for publicity of all income tax returns, which has been proposed many times but never knocked out before final enactment.

THE first measure in United States history to limit a crop was sent to the White House for approval after the house agreed to the senate alterations in the Bankhead compulsory cotton control bill. Final action by the senate was taken after the bill had been attacked earnestly by Senator Bailey of Texas and other southerners. Most radical so far of the New Deal measures, the bill restricts the South's output of cotton this year to 10,000,000 bales by placing a tax of 50 per cent upon all cotton ginned in excess of that figure. The secretary of agriculture is to apportion to each farmer, through his agents, the amount of cotton he may grow.

CONDEMNATION and seizure of private property in the interest of the administration's great housing program has been begun in Atlanta, Ga. Secretary Ickes, acting as Public Works administrator, asked Attorney General Cummings to file condemnation proceedings against 134 parcels of land there in the name of the Federal Emergency Housing corporation. In addition to these parcels the government is buying outright 70,000 square feet of land to complete what is needed for a $2,000,000 housing plan for negroes.

It was indicated that similar action in connection with housing plans will be taken in Chicago and other cities.

CONSIDERATION of air mail legislation was begun by the senate after President Roosevelt's new plan had been made public. His proposal was that contracts to carry the air mail be let to commercial companies on competitive bids, and that meanwhile a commission should be named to study the question of air mail transport and the development of commercial and military aviation and report to the next congress.

Four air lines filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court complaints seeking to enjoin Postmaster General Farley from carrying out his order annulling the air mail contracts. The complaints, brought by the Boeing Air Transport, Inc.; Pacific Air Transport; Varney Airlines; and National Air Transport, Inc., all subsidiaries of United Aircraft and Transport, Inc., charge that Mr. Farley as an individual canceled their contracts without a hearing, illegally, and deprived them of property "without due process of law in violation of the Fifth amendment of the Constitution."

MORE than 1,200 citizens of Lexington, Mass., while preparing to celebrate the 159th anniversary of the battle of Lexington, decided to fire another shot that, though it wouldn't be "heard around the world," might be counted on to make a slight noise in Washington. They signed and sent to their state delegation in congress a protest against certain policies of the government. Here in part is what they wrote:

"We protest against federal interference in business under the guise of promoting social reform and economic recovery.

"We protest against the passage of legislation without more careful consideration by congress.

"We protest against the indefinite extension of legislation originally designed solely for emergency purposes."

"ALFALFA BILL" MURRAY, governor of Oklahoma, doesn't propose to permit resales of property for delinquent taxes in his state. These sales were scheduled in seven counties, six others having already called them off. The governor called out his every ready National Guard, declaring that "protection for the homes of the people in stressful times like these is a vital policy transcending any temporary loss in taxes." He ordered the arrest of any county official who attempted to conduct a delinquent-tax sale.

Gov. Murray

The counties to which guardsmen were sent are scattered. In most counties the military department consists of an officer and three men. Adjutant General Barrett said a greater number was not sent for economic reasons.

SEEN and HEARD around the National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington. — Louis McHenry Howe, Franklin D. Roosevelt's right bower for the last twenty-five years —since Mr. Roosevelt was in the New York legislature—is being forced to relinquish his job as chief secretary to the President at the insistence of his physicians. Howe must take a long rest, and not worry about the "chief's" problems.

Howe will be succeeded, if Mr. Roosevelt's persuasive ability is up to normal, by Frank C. Walker, now executive secretary of the national emergency council, and until a few weeks ago treasurer of the Democratic national committee.

Walker does not want the job. He has told the President so in emphatic language. As this is written he still thinks he can avoid taking it. But the President is determined, and close friends of both are betting that Walker will be sitting at Howe's desk inside of a week or two.

Which—assuming Walker is overpersuaded—will mean a set-up about which Washington politicians and observers have often talked, but which has never really materialized. For Walker, once in that job, will really be "Assistant President." Make no mistake about that.

Sitting at Howe's desk, Walker will talk to the President not only every day, but many times a day. He will make decisions, as chief secretary. He will exercise power directly—not merely through giving advice.

Actually he has been, close friends insist, closer to the President than anyone else outside the secretariat for a long period of time—dating back to before the Chicago convention. He remained in Italy for a while many others stumped off in the President's esteem.

He Wants Walker

Since inauguration Walker's star has continued in the ascendant so far as the President is concerned. Mr. Roosevelt wants Walker around all the time. As it is he has been calling him with a frequency which considerably annoyed some of the Brain Trusters, but apparently that is not enough. He wants Walker at a desk right in the White House executive offices. And there he intends to have him, Walker's objections to the contrary notwithstanding.

Walker is already a tremendous figure in the administration. With Walker as head of the national emergency council, the President intended, in effect, that he should pass on every big issue that involved more than one of the various government departments, bureaus, commissions, authorities, or what-not. In actuality he was intended to be the umpire in all inter-governmental disputes—acting for and with the President.

More than this, he was to be key man in the national planning of the administration, looking to carrying out the New Deal policies.

But even that does not satisfy the President. He wants this man, whose soundness of judgment and clear thinking has so appealed to him, to sit at his right hand, so to speak, and help run the whole show.

Despite his extraordinary close relations with the President, he has managed to avoid the kind of enmities that usually involve a king's favorite. He is one of the few men close to the President who is not always subject to sapping and mining by other favorites and would-be favorites.

By the forced retirement of Louis Howe the President suffers a very great personal loss. No ripple has occurred in twenty-five years to disturb their friendship, and no one has ever questioned the extraordinary devotion of "Louie" to his Chief.

Old Fight Bobs Up

The Agricultural Adjustment administration is strongly behind the bill requiring that where alcohol is distilled from molasses, distillers must make compensatory payment equal to the processing tax on corn.

This provision already exists in the distillers' code, but the AAA is a little worried about what would happen if the molasses distillers were to court about it. Then, too, two of the largest molasses distillers are holding out on the distillers' code. One of them has not yet paid any compensatory taxes on the molasses it has distilled, while another, though paying the assessments, has not put its name on the dotted line.

Even back in the pre-repeal days and before the day of NRA and AAA and codes, this same sort of fight was going on. Middle western farmers, led by William E. Hull, then a congressman—later to be beaten for re-election and go back into the distilling business himself—fought for the use of corn instead of molasses to make alcohol.

Hull even proposed that alcohol —made from grain—be mixed with all gasoline, thus providing a market for a large quantity of corn.

The other triple A organization, the American Automobile association, went into this proposal and kicked it pretty high for the time being. Its investigation showed, it declared, that the addition of alcohol to gasoline was very bad economy indeed.

But the old fight is pushing up again, and may be the subject of a test vote in the house before adjournment. Far more likely of passage, however, is the proposal to penalize molasses distillers at least to the extent of the same processing tax levied on their competitors who make their alcohol from corn.

Cause of Friction

Incidentally there has been some friction between the various governmental units. The AAA was very indignant that the Federal Alcohol Control administration let down the bars to such an extent to molasses produced alcohol, the agricultural experts, naturally, being far more interested in seeing corn consumed for the making of alcohol than imported molasses.

It is imported molasses that worries the agricultural experts—the same old fight involved when the Middle Westerners fought for a prohibitive duty on "black strap" molasses.

But this corn processing tax would not only catch "imported" molasses, it would catch molasses brought in from Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Virgin Islands. The latter will probably never figure, because as the government is setting up a distillery there for the purpose of making rum, it is figured all the molasses there will be turned into rum before entering American ports.

Even this rum, however, is annoying to the Middle Westerners. They want all the liquor possible that is sold in this country made from American grain. Every drop of imported liquor destroys just that much market, they point out, for the American farmer. They would like to prohibit the use of alcohol made from molasses for bleading and compounding.

Assessment of the processing tax is a step in that direction, but it is not the end of the fight.

Housing Problem

President Roosevelt's ideas about federal aid for housing, as outlined by him just prior to leaving for the South, and as drafted into proposed legislation subject to his final approval, include, it was exclusively learned today:

1. Modernization of existing houses the present condition of which justifies the expenditure.

2. Encouraging of all new home construction that can be justified.

3. Demolition of old homes, which are not worth renovating, by the process of discouraging repair expenditures.

4. Repair and replacement of industrial structures.

In this program, as finally prepared by the national emergency council, modernization of existing homes is first in point of time, last in point of importance. With the hope of quick spending to encourage revival of prosperity, the principle of consumer credit will be adapted to financing anything that "goes on the house" just as it applied in the orgy of installment buying preceding the depression.

Even during the depression years, it is pointed out, the losses involved in installment sales were astonishingly low. Apparently most of the people who did installment buying were of the thrifty type, despite a widespread conviction to the contrary. But losses on installment buying have been far less, for example, than losses on mortgages, always prior to 1929 considered the safest possible investment.

To mobilize this credit for improvements to the homes a new type of consumer credit will be devised enabling the owner to combine in one operation all he can afford to pay out of his income for a period up to five years.

Protect Home Owner

Part of the plan is to have the program or drive in each community directed by local architects and engineers, who will be paid for their efforts by the federal government. One of their functions will be to see to it that the home owner gets the most possible for his money and also that the banks are not goaded into making loans greater than the capacity of the borrower to pay.

The amount of money that may be expended in this direction is prodigious. Some estimates of the amount of needed home repair and modernization run as high as a billion and a half dollars of the President working on the plan think three-quarters of a billion a very reasonable amount to be realized in actual operations.

This campaign, it is thought, has much more assurance of success than any of the depression efforts. The theory is that people hesitate to make expenditures, even for modernizations which they themselves believe necessary, because they are worried about their own financial futures. They did not know whether they would be able to keep their jobs, or whether their pay would be cut further. And some of those home owners were out of work themselves and did not even know whether they could keep the roofs over their heads.

With the rising tide of employment, this element, it is thought, has disappeared, and the stimulation to every other line of industry involved in such an expenditure cannot, it is contended, be exaggerated in its effect on the general welfare.

GREAT CITY'S DECLINE

Medinacelli, Spain, once a prosperous city of 15,000 inhabitants, is slowly decreasing in size and, it is now feared, will disappear within a few years. Recent visitors report that the population, which was 5,000 only 40 years ago, is now barely 700. At the beginning of the Sixteenth century Medinacelli was a splendid Castilian metropolis, a coveted Moorish stronghold and the key of the province of Aragon. Weavers filled the streets after the day's work and proud aristocrats strolled past grilled windows through which beaming black eyes gleamed at them. When the dukes and their families, who lived in splendor, passed away, others lost their livelihood and started the exodus.

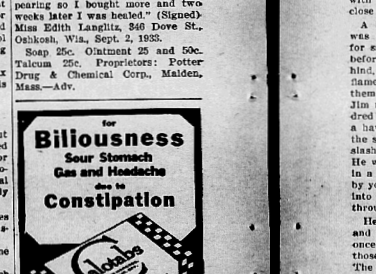

Awake for Hours with Itching, Burning Pimples

Cuticura Healed

"For over two years I suffered with itching, burning pimples that broke out over my face and arms. They were very large, red and hard and came to a head. They itched and burned so much that I could not refrain from scratching and the pimples turned into white scales. At night I would lie awake for hours.

"I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. When the samples gave out the pimples were disappearing so I bought more and two weeks later I was healed." (Signed) Miss Edith Langlitz, 346 Dove St., Oshkosh, Wis., Sept. 2, 1933.

GIRL TO WOMAN

Mrs. Hester Cason, of 2439 Wolf St., Suffolk, Va., said: "When I was a young girl growing, I had a terrible time with Pain. Pinex & Pierce's Favorite Prescription soon had me feeling fine and I developed into a healthy woman. After I married I again relied upon it to help up my strength. Now, I am the mother of two children and every month I take Pinex & Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I have never had a sick spell since. It is my greatest friend. I have recommended it to many of my friends and they all think it is wonderful."

The boy stood there and drew a hand that shook with excitement across his lips. His job! On the ground, after such a start, and to encounter such a complication for a beginning! LaFane's quiet recital of Drake's achievement was in his mind, now, and he was humble before his past and the prospect of his future . . . and humble, as well, before the man who had used his name with such effect.

As he stood there, the whirlwind came. It swept across the unburned slash between its point of origin and the line of backfire, swinging in a majestic terrible arc. At the tip of its dangling funnel, it was a shower of sparks, and these, as Young Jim watched, were sowed behind the fire fighters in the bend. Grass burst into flame; the wicked tongues found hold in the confinguration in front of them, were hedged in by an orange barrier from the rear.

Young Jim cried out, but his voice did not carry. He saw the ring of flame rise and broaden, touching with explosive tentacles all material close by.

A half moon of unburned slash was all that the men yonder had for safety. All along the roadway before them fire was running; behind, that ragged semicircle of new flames was closing gaps to wall them in. At the center of this zone Jim made out a small pond, a hundred feet across, perhaps; it offered a haven of a sort. He raced down the slope, tripping once and falling slashing his cheek on a sharp stub. He was up, cursing as he wallowed in a deceptive pile of brush, hidden by young growth, and threw himself into the creek, fighting his way through the alders on the far side.

He came out into the chopping and swung to the right, shouting once more in an attempt to make those men aware of their danger. The gap in the line of fire for which he was headed closed to solid flame as a vagrant blast of air sent the blazes crackling through the grass.

He raced back to the left, seeking a way through, but before he reached the next opening that also closed. He coughed from smoke now, and his eyes were tortured. The fire snapped and pluffed at him as if in conscious mockery. He brushed tears from his eyes and strove to locate the little pond, trying to determine whether it would attract attention, those men would be able to gain that one sanctuary in what, within minutes, would be an inferno. But smoke obscured a view of the water. He found a place between two windrows of litter that was not yet ablaze. He edged toward the narrow opening and recoiled as the shirt curled on his shoulders from the heat that beat upon him from either side. He could not go into that; it was beyond human endurance. And yet as a fresh puff of wind struck him, he knew that he must. Human lives depended on the ability of his body and will to withstand the ordeal of fire.

He had only a dozen steps to take before he would be through the worst, and he held his lungs flat so he would not breathe the flame. The skin he felt to blisters on his neck, the hair on one temple singed and he felt the fire licking at his legs as he summoned all his strength, and with one final effort ran.

He was through, choking, weakened by the heat, but through. He was within the ring of fire, charging across the acres that would be raging at any instant.

The men were losing their fight. At three points the backfire had crossed the road and was running, rolling with the wind. They were still in front of it, giving ground grudgingly, fighting as they retreated, ready to come to a full stand at the creek, and it was not until this young stripper, blackened and blistered, burst upon the nearest trio who fought side by side that they turned to see through the flowing haze that other wall of flame licking toward them from the rear.

"Into the pond!" Jim croaked. "You're cut off. . . . The pond!"

One man dropped his shovel and fled madly. The others clung to their equipment as they made a break for water.

Jim ran on to the next group, floundering and still trying to shout from his smoke-hoarsened throat. McNally finally heard him. He turned, saw what was coming and ran.

A narrow ribbon of water was just at their left. It was a slender arm of the pond, lying in a swale. Along its edge flame spears danced but it offered a way through. They sank to their thighs in the mire, gained the deeper water of the pond and threw themselves down, only their heads above the surface, faces buried in the green leatherleaf on the banks which would not burn and which pocketed life-giving air.

That was early afternoon. It was four hours later before the burn had cooled enough to let them make a break for the creek bank and cross.

On the high land yonder a wearied but still vigilant line of men stood. They had made their stand and had won. At a thousand points snags and stumps were burning, but the backfire had finally held, the red menace was thwarted.

The group of men who followed Young Jim across the creek were naturally undemonstrative and they stopped on the higher ground and looked self-conscious and foolish as others clustered around. Silently, one of them took and shook Jim's hand and more would have done the same had the boy not laughed them off.

But McNally had something to say and said it grimly.

"If it hadn't been for you," he declared, "six of us'd 've fried to a crisp. You done it. Whoever you are, young man, you're all there!"

Steve, standing a little distance, saw in the faces of the company the liing he had attired himself on the first evening at headquarters: respect, admiration, an admission of that superiority which makes men willing to follow another. But between the two incidents was a difference. He, Steve Drake, had only whipped a rascal; this Young Jim, now showing confusion himself, had saved lives. From that moment on, those men of the Polaris crew were his to command.

CHAPTER IX

EVENING, now, but it had been fresh morning when Steve Drake left headquarters.

Alone on the threshold of the store Kate Flynn had stood as the boats buzzed away, fingers working against her palms.

"Who are you?" Kate asked sharply as he approached.

"It's me, Tim Todd, Katie. Don't you recollect—"

"Oh, Tim!" She put out a hand, groping for his and clutched his gnarled old fingers tightly. "Tim, does it look bad?"

"Well, Katie, it looks pretty bad; but, then, it might look a lot worse, too. I reckon they'll get her down in about two-three jerks. With Young Jim on th' job I guess even fire's goin' to have a time of it, doin' serious damage."

"Yes, Jim . . ." the girl said, as if to herself. "Tim, tell me,"—quickly. "Tell me about this . . . about Young Jim."

"About him? Shoo! How could I tell you anything about your brother? He's turned things inside out, here. I'll be dusted if he ain't done things that nobody ever dremp' could be done! He's better 'n a chip off th' old block, I say!"

"Yes, he's done wonderfully well," the girl murmured and placed finger tips against lips that still burned from that strange kiss. "But tell me," she began, resolved to learn something of this man who had held her in his arms, who was referred to as her brother but who, she well knew, was not her brother.

"Lordy, lookit her roll now!" the old man moaned and Kate commenced to tremble, torn as she was between conflicting, and dramatic, interests.

"Is it going fast? How does it look, now?"

The old fellow described the smoke and country as best he could. He brought a chair for her to sit in because she would not leave the doorway. He tried to quiet her when she became frantic as he described the way the smoke rolled higher and spread across the upper end of the lake.

"Are you telling me the truth, Tim?" she asked repeatedly and the man swore that he was.

"Oh, for eyes!" she cried. "If I'd stayed in Chicago the bandage was to have been taken off tomorrow. The doctor insisted I must not take it off while I was away from him. So you must tell me, Tim, and tell everything. I'm depending on you, so!"

After a time, as her agitation only increased, Tim attempted to take her mind at least partially from the fire. He talked of her errand, of the salvation for the job that acquirement of the Laird's timber meant.

"Oh, the brief case!" she said. "Where is it? Mac said he would put it in the safe."

"And we will, too, Katie!"

Tim put the money away and went on talking, trying to keep her interested in things of a more reassuring nature than the fire.

At noon they were still in the doorway of the store, with Kate showing signs of the physical strain she was under.

"Better come to my shanty 'nd lay down a while," the man said solicitously.

She protested at first but Tim continued to insist that she rest and finally his way prevailed. Slowly he led her across to his one-room cabin, twenty rods from the store. She lay down on his bed and turned her bandaged face toward the wall. He stood there watching as long sobs commenced to rack her body and then busied himself preparing a lunch.

While he puttered about his stove a man emerged from the timber on the opposite side of the lake and stood looking across the neck of water toward the buildings. His brows were gathered and he waited as one will whose first objective is to be certain that when he moves it will be in the proper direction.

Afternoon waned and once he cursed softly. He had gone further in his pacing, that time, and when he halted and looked across the water Tim Todd's shanty was hidden from him by the store building. Then he nodded sharply in decision and hastened through the brush to where a canoe and pack were cached. He launched and took the few strokes necessary to bend him across the intervening water.

Then, very cautiously, looking all about and with one long stare up the lake toward where all the available man power of Good-Bye battled the flames he had set, ran across the sand toward the store.

The lowering sun was reflected dazzlingly from windows in the side of the building. He approached one, put his face close and stared within. The place was empty and he smiled. This was a safe way; to use the door would be at the risk of revealing himself to Tim. Slowly he shoved the window open, careful to make no sound, placed his hands on the sill and vaulted within. A moment later he was passing quickly around the end of the counter and dropping to his knees before the safe. . . .

Tim Todd had been talking constantly to Kate for the last half hour. The girl clung tightly to his gnarled hand.

"Looks better all th' time, Katie," he insisted. "I'd like to bet they stopped her at Otter creek, though how they'd do it in slash like that 'nd on a day like this—"

He broke short as his gaze chanced to wander to the store. Through a window on the rear side he saw a man clambering through a window on the other!

"I'll be dusted!" he muttered, dropping the girl's hand and rising. "How come that a-way?"

"What, Tim? What's happened?" Kate rose, freshly alarmed at his tones.

"Just somebody at th' store, Katie. Likely they'll need some'thin', I'll skip over."

He did not skip. He hobbled as rapidly as he could along the pathway, his old heart thumping in alarm. Twenty-five thousand dollars reposed in the old cheese-box of a safe and some man had just entered the building with stealth.

He tiptoed up the steps and poised, looking within at Frans, kneeling before the safe. Frans had inserted the point of a wrecking bar behind the inner door. He strained against it as Tim halted; with a grating and a tinkle the lock gave, the door swung open and the brief case dropped from the shelf on which it had been placed.

"Here, you, Franz! What're you-a-doin'?"

The words brought Franz to his feet, an old sound in his throat.

They faced one another for an interval of strained silence. Franz was stopped, caught red-handed. He accepted the situation resolutely.

"You'd better clear out, Tim!" he said, darkly, snatching up the brief case. "I'm on my way. Right now!"

"You're a danged thief!" Tim cried.

"Shut up and get out!" Franz snarled, walking toward him.

"Get out, be dusted! I'm in charge here! I'm responsible for what's in here. Franz, you drop that satchel!"

He lurched inside and snatched up an ax which leaned against the wall.

The younger man halted, balked by this show of resolution.

"Put down that ax, you old fool! I'm caught, fair enough, and I've got to go through with it, now. You can't stop me."

"Oh, I Can't, Eh? Can't Stop Ye, Can't I? Well, We'll See 'Bout—"

"Oh, I can't, eh? Can't stop ye, can't I? Well, we'll see 'bout—"

And quickly, stoutly, he swung his ax as though he were striking at a tree, driving squarely for Franz's shoulder.

The other leaped backward; the bit buried itself deeply in the floor and as Tim wrenched it free Franz leaped the counter and made for the window through which he had entered.

"No ye don't!" Tim screeched and lunged after him, swinging the ax again. "No ye don't! Ye can't come it over me, Franz! Back into that corner, young man! I'll split ye in two if ye try to git away, now!"

Slowly but surely Franz was being cornered. The double bit sung in wide arcs as Tim advanced step by step.

Franz's face lost color.

"Get out, old man!" he cried finally. "Get out or . . ." And then Tim was looking down the muzzle of an automatic pistol.

"Yah!" he jeered. "Ye can't scare me with no pop gun! Ye drop that or I'll chop yer hand—"

"Stay back!" Franz gasped, coming up against the safe and then the automatic spat just once, orange flame darting from the barrel.

The ax lost its firm swoop of direction. It sagged and drooped and dropped, bouncing and sliding to the far side as Tim, with a low whimper, raised both hands as if they were great weights, to his pierced breast.

"Shot me!" he gasped in amazement. "Dusted if . . . ye didn't . . ."

His knees gave. He went down slowly, willing rather than failing, slumping to one hip and then sprawled shuddering on the floor. . . .

From the doorway of the little cabin Kate Flynn had heard. She heard Tim shout; heard another voice giving answer and the tones of the exchange stirred her to action. She groped her way into the beaten path as voices raised higher, as feet thudded, as the ax crashed and smashed. Her hands were extended before her and she called out repeatedly to Tim.

Then, nearing the store, she heard Franz's final warning and Todd's gallant defiance. Lastly, the venomous spat of the pistol.

With that, the girl ceased groping. Her hands whipped to her temples, fingers fastened in the white gauze of the bandage and with a jerk she pulled it from her eyes.

Sharp pains tore to the back of her head. She puckered her lids against the assault of light and wrinkled her face against the sudden torture. But she could see, and that was all that really mattered.

OPENING CHAPTERS OF THE STORY

Stephen Drake, with his four-year-old son, is rescued from a blizzard by Jim Flynn, big timber operator, whom Drake has robbed. Flynn gives Drake another chance, and the latter, impressed on the boy Steve, the debt they owe "Old Jim." Twenty years later, Steve meets Young Jim" Flynn, his benefactor's son. Sent by Old Jim, incapacitated through an accident, to temporarily blunder, Steve starts in to take charge of the company's—the Polaris—woods operations, the youth is indulging in a drunken spree. Learning of Polaris' dire straits, and hoping to do something for Old Jim, Steve hastens to the company's headquarters. Worsting Frank, a plotter against the Flynn interests, in a fist fight, the Polaris crew assumes that Steve is Flynn's son, and he takes charge, as "Young Jim." A photograph of Kate Flynn, which Steve finds, immensely increases his desire to aid Old Jim. He gains the warm friendship of LaFane, queen woods scout. Drake escapes a death trap set for him. Frans discovers Drake's impersonation. Threatened with disclosure, Steve accuses Frans of setting the death trap, exhibiting evidence, and the mate dare not act. Steve sends LaFane to find Young Jim and sober him up. Steve wins the friendship of MacDonald, owner of timber land the Flynns need, and the Scotsman gives him an option for Polaris to buy his timber. Knowing of the option, and wanting the timber for a rival company, Frans plans to put Steve out of the way, but the latter outwits him. Frans, believing Steve had drowned, secures another option and records it, learning, then that Steve is alive. Knowing Drake has wired Kate, he steals her reply and learns that $25,000 is to be forwarded, and the time of its arrival, and plans to steal the money. Kate Flynn arrives at the camp. Her eyes are bandaged, and before Steve has to betray himself by speech a forest fire alarm is sounded. Drake hastens to take charge of the fire fighters. LaFane arrives with Young Jim.

Much Admired Windswept Prints

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S smart to be windswept. Hither and thither the winds of fashion do blow until most everything in the spring and summer mode is being made to express a very poetry of motion.

The amusing part about the breezes which waft through fashion land is that they are so well trained, blowing ever forward during the daytime hours while at night they completely reverse the order of things. Of course, it is all due to the artful manipulation of pleats and flares and various other devices which designers position at the front of the coat or dress or hat to be worn during the day until you look as if the wind were carrying you forward, while smartest evening fashions take on airplane dreaperies at the back or fan-spreading trains or similar details which make it seem as if milady were sailing her way in the very face of the winds.

Even fabrics themselves are yielding to the touch of fashion's elusive breezes. There are the new "windswept prints" for instance, which are certainly a step forward in this current vogue. These perfectly fascinating prints are developed in flower patternings, but with a distinct, difference between the new florals and those of previous seasons.

You'll love these swagger windswept prints. In the new chulla construction they are as practical as they are good-looking. And do they wear well! There's scarcely any "wear out" to them. Neither will the delicate color fade or run in washing and they iron smooth and perfect just like magic. Another grand thing about crepes of this type is that they are such a joy to work with. The texture is so firm and dependable—never pulls out at the seams and stays "put," which makes it easy for the home-sewing woman to handle.

The three adorable dresses pictured are made of the new windswept prints. Those dainty white accents at neckline and sleeves—well now, we ask you, aren't the frothy, filmy neckwear fashions simply thrilling this season? The print to the right is that gloriously colorful a mere word picture cannot do it justice, and when one stops to think that this print will wash like new, what more is there to be desired in the way of a perfect print? The filmy white organdie roll-edged petal collar and cuffs add the climaxing touch. The self-fabric stitched belt drawn through a gay colored ring is worth noting.

There is a modest beauty about the spring posies with their delicate tendrils so gracefully windswept in the print to the left which will carry especial appeal to the woman of discriminating taste. In lay of its color combinations this print is charming, but in navy with a strain of lighter blue running throughout, together with fluttery white spring posies splotched with fresh light green, it is irresistible.

The ankle-length frock with contrasting fitted jacket admirably solves the problem of what to wear for semi-formal occasions. Worn with its jacket of solid color you have the feeling of being correctly attired most any hour of the day. Remove the jacket and the dress goes just formal enough to tune in to most any afternoon occasion. It has quaint drop shoulders and cunning bow puff sleeves, with a piquant little velvet tie about the throat.

EXQUISITE LACE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The summer program heralds a widespread vogue for lace, with special emphasis placed on the gown which is fashioned of the finer sort of lace of delicate cobweb mesh. Molyneux creates this lovely dinner gown of black lace, with its subtle tracery of flowers and leaves on an enchantingly sheer background. The gown gives delightful expression to the new silhouette which calls for crispness and animated lines (the lace is stiffened with horsehair), knee-length tunic, and fullness which interprets a fan-spreading movement, just now so much admired, toward the back.

DAYTIME EFFECTS ON EVENING DRESS

A new evening frock which Augustabernard makes of her black-ish green crepe marocain has a dayliuse neckline and short sleeves that are gathered into the shoulder seam at the edges. The front of the bodice is draped into a full-length panel, caught under a rhinestone buckle at the right side front of the waistline.

Lelong fashions the skirt and jacket of this, an evening suit, of black wool, and the latter has revers of sable and sleeves that are unusually wide between the deep-fitted cuffs and the elbows. The skirt is a simple ankle-length mermaid skirt. The blouse of this suit is made of flowered satin, pinks and greens on a black background.

Grand New Nighties of Satin in Floral Prints

A visit to the shops will disclose lots of new ideas. A few minutes in one shop showed grand new nighties of heavy satin in floral prints, no well done that the result looks like panties.

Then there are tailored pajamas of heavy crepe de chine with three-quarter length coats of similar fabric. These are done in white or pastel shades and are piped in a contrasting color.

Modern Jewelry Adds to Attractiveness of Costume

A leading sportswear shop shows costume bracelet and belt sets tricky enough to renew any costume. These come in narrow and spacious widths, one set in coral, natural color, others in either silver or gold mesh.

The silver combination is accented with white metal trim. Another clever ornament here is a dog's head clip—to be attached to one's hat, neckline or waist.

LAUGH TELLS CHARACTER

Better watch that laugh from now on or people may read your character from it just the same as chirographers read it from your handwriting or astrologers read it from the stars. Dr. George C. Williams, former president of Ithaca college, says the horse laugh with a broad "a" denotes an eccentric and sometimes vicious temperament. A long "e" is feminine sound and a short "e" reveals sarcasm. A normal and healthy person laughs with the Italian sound of the "a" clearly perceptible.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Pretty dull campaign so far. Seems that the voters decline to get much het up.

We've been off the gold standard a year, and what difference has it made to the average man?

Italy is bragging about an "electrical woman" over there. Now and then we see one that gives us a shock.

PEB, noting from this paper that our Legion Auxiliary is to have a cake walk, inquires "What's a cake walk?" Didja never see a cake a-walking?

Senator Park Trammell visited George End's snake canning plant the other day, and they gave the Senator a can of snake meat. Rations like that ought to enable Park to run a mighty good race.

The Cincinnati Inquirer complains that Dillinger, Insull, Aimee and Huey clutter up the news. As for the last two named they'd pass quickly if the newspapers refrained from giving them publicity.

Experts in mushroom growing say Florida should go in for cultivating this vegetable in a big way. A few years ago out-of-state speculators grew some mushroom towns down this way. Parts of some of them are still standing.

Of course, when all those northern factory workers come down here for a 20-week vacation every winter under the Babson plan, we want them to take a real vacation. No horning in on the jobs that belong to Floridians.

Pioneers' Day is a fine idea and it should be made an annual event in every community. Those who have gone before us made a good job of building Florida and her many thriving towns and cities. It is up to those who come after to carry on, and it will help us to do this if we keep green the memory of those who blazed the way. In a little while those who are active now will be referred to as pioneers. Let us perform the tasks of the present so that we may be worthy of the same recognition that we now accord to those whose labors in the past are responsible for the development we now enjoy.

Babson reiterates his belief in the feasibility of a plan whereby Northern factory workers would spend 20 weeks of each year on a vacation in Florida. Working 48 hours a week for 32 weeks they would be employed the same number of hours in a year as if they worked fifty-two 30-hour weeks. That would allow a 30-week shutdown—and what fun they could have down here in the sunshine of a Florida winter, while both they and the factories would make substantial savings through being relieved of the necessity of providing heat, heavy clothing, etc. Seems a good and simple plan, well worth a trial. As soon as it gets to working we think we'll go north and get a job in a factory. We'd like some time to spend 20 weeks in Florida without working.

We confess that the expressions of some newspapers and individuals whose opinions we respect very highly leave us a bit in the air about the wisdom of adopting the home exemption amendment to be voted on next fall. But we believe that something should be done to encourage home ownership. Once it was the ambition of every young couple to own a home. There was some inducement to do so. Conditions have developed in late years, however, which make home ownership more expensive than renting. So that the quality of permanence so desirable for a community and so valuable in the creation of the ties, the interest, the sentiment, the stability, that come of being rooted in the soil are in danger of being lost. An active market for homes will be opened when the prospective buyers may feel that they will not be penalized for owning a home, as is the condition now. The tax exemption amendment may have some features that are not altogether free from objection — but we have seen no better plan suggested.

Bishop Cannon has been acquitted. Those who thought him innocent are happy to have their opinion confirmed; those who thought him guilty still hold to the opinion that he was in mighty poor business for a Bishop.

Few of us realize how much the humble petunia does toward beautifying the landscape at many points. Because it is a common flower we do not fully appreciate its beauty. It thrives under conditions that would discourage other plants. Like those best of all friends who give much and ask little, it brightens our lives without our being hardly conscious of it.

The Senate has passed the municipal bankruptcy bill, which promises to furnish much-needed relief to debt-burdened communities, enabling them to make a composition with their creditors. It is an important measure, and it had its origin with a Florida Congressman, Mark Wilcox, ably seconded by Congressman Peterson, of this district. Pretty good work for first termers.

We would like to see one story or other piece of writing purporting to depict Florida and her people that would enable us to recognize Florida from the attempted description. We have lived in the State some 35 years but those fiction writers who come down and in a 48-hour whirl "see Florida" can invariably introduce in their articles features of whose existence we never dreamed. Some observers, say we.

Ask almost any man you meet, almost anywhere in Florida, if there should not be a road holiday declared in the State, and he will answer emphatically in the affirmative. Yet sixty-six of the sixty-seven counties have asked for new road construction which would entail a total cost of $50,000,000. Which shows that nearly everybody is heartily in favor of a road holiday except as it might affect the building of some road in his locality or in which he has a special interest.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

I attended my first Sheriffs' convention last week and after messin' around with that gang, I can't understand why it is that all these criminals keep tryin' to escape. Of course they say you never know a guy until you live with him and maybe if I had to stay in the same house with a sheriff for a few years I might not find the companionship so congenial, but they certainly are a swell crowd when it comes to convenin'.

"Old Bill" Spencer of Hillsborough County was elected President of the association, so I guess that makes me Court Jester or somethin' but I'll tell you one thing, a fellow has to be darn careful how he gets funny with Bill.

Bill is a regular fellow and a blamed good sheriff and the thing I like best about him is that he's human. He's got the hardest crowd of customers in the world to please, but in spite of that fact, he's makin' a success of his boardin' house.

The pow-wow was held at Homasassa, about 20 miles west of Inverness on the Gulf coast. It was my first trip but I'm tellin' you now that it won't be my last. It is a beautiful spot and they tell me the fishin' around there is the finest in the country. The hotel is owned by Jhnzy Vance and operated by a genial Dutchman who proved himself a wonderful host.

At the banquet they introduced us to gopher soup and as most of us were hungry enough to go-for anything, nobody seemed to mind, but drivin' home every time I'd see one of those critters anklin' across the road in front of the car I'd have a funny feelin' in my stomach.

I've been doin' a little checkin' up on the congressional race in the Second District where Florida's Fashion Plate, the honorable Lex Green, alleged to be the best dressed man in Washington, is all cluttered up with a lot of first class competition.

When Madison threw her Kelly in the ring, it turned out to be a sure-enough campaign hat and no jokin'. The Judge has been shakin' a lot of hands and they tell me when he shakes 'em they stay shook.

At the same time this boy Sturgis from Ocala isn't lettin' any grass grow under his feet. He's prancin' around the district talkin' hard and earnest. A lot of folks. A lot of folks have written his name on their cuff as a reminder for June 5, providin' they don't forget and change their shirt in the meantime.

It will probably turn out to be one of the closest races in the state. Right now there is a lot of argument as to how it will finish. Some folks say it will be Green and Kelly who will fight it out in the run-off, while others claim it will be Sturgis and Kelly, with Green out of the picture. It is generally conceded that Judge Kelly is runnin' like nobody's business and if Lex Green does succeed in stoppin' him, he'll have to put a lot more on the ball team than he's put so far. You can take your own choice.

Personally I'm not ready to discount Mr. Green just yet, I've been fooled too many times. Political cats are funny about jumpin' sideways at the last minute. Lex still has a lot of friends and if he gets busy and jogs their memory about this and that he's liable to get a lot more votes than some floks think he'll get.

Altogether it is an interestin' race and folks in the Second District are gettin' all hot and bothered about it, specially the Irish. They're strong for Green but they'll probably vote for Kelly.

Reversing the old order, what we need now is labor creating, not labor saving devices.

CHARLES A. MITCHELL QUALIFIES FOR SENATE

Speaks In Hillsborough, Polk and Pinellas Counties This Week

The office of the Secretary of State announced this week that Chas. A. Mitchell of Vero Beach has qualified as a candidate for the democratic nomination for United States Senator subject to the June primaries.

Mr. Mitchell is making one of the most intensive and aggressive campaigns in the history of the State. He is using sound equipment and has made over 200 speeches to date.

He is speaking in Hillsborough, Polk and Pinellas counties this week.

Mitchell is advocating old age pensions; payment of the bonus in order to place money in circulation and the issuance of currency to retire government bonds in order to save the interest and add to the circulation of money.

Reports indicate that Mitchell has developed strong support in every section of the State.

Beer Sales In State Show Big Increase

Tallahassee, May 2.— (FNS) — According to a report of the State Beverage Department, beer sales for the last fifteen days in March are the greatest of any period since it was legalized on May 8, 1933.

A record of sales shows that during this period 1,670,979 bottles were sold. This is 128,585 gallons.

The state received $19,460 in taxes from these sales which amount goes into the state school fund.

Fire Chief Urges Clean Up Program of Yards and Lots

Fire Chief W. H. McCarthy issued a statement today, urging all property owners to rid their premises of the dead grass and brush still standing from last year. As soon as spring comes, the chief pointed out, these dead growths dry out, and they may be ignited by any chance spark, such as a carelessly thrown cigarette, or by any of many other ways.

Chief McCarthy went on to say that most citizens regard grass fires as of little consequence. Quite the contrary is true, since fire in dead grass and brush travels quickly, and may easily spread to homes, garages and other buildings before firemen are called.

High winds in the spring time help greatly to spread the fire, carrying sparks into grass that may be some distance from the original outbreak of fire.

He cited instances in many cities, where grass fires have broken out in several places simultaneously requiring the presence of nearly all the fire department to entinguish them, and said that the same thing could easily happen here. This would weaken the department if a fire should break out in some building or residence and would delay the response of enough men and apparatus to put out the building fire with small damage.

Chief McCarthy appealed to the citizens to cooperate by removing dry, dead growth from their lots before warm weather dries it out completely. He placed special emphasis on a request to owners of vacant lots, who sometimes neglect them while at the same time the premises on which they live are kept in perfect order.

Grass fires are often caused by the efforts of citizens to burn their lots off, the chief pointed out, and this method should never be employed. Too often, the original fire gets completely out of control and may possibly ignite the clothes of the worker, who would naturally try to beat it out. Small boys also cause their share of grass fires when they build bonfires on vacant lots.

The only safe procedure is to remove all growth and rubbish completely. Not only will this render property free from danger of fire, but it will beautify it, and the community in general.

There is also the economy angle, the chief pointed out. Every time the fire apparatus leaves the station on a fire run, it costs money—not only in gasoline, but in wear and tear on the truck, tires, hose and other equipment. Each run to a grass fire costs money that could be used very well for other purposes.

"When spring house-cleaning time comes," concluded the chief, "extend your operations to your yard or lot. It will pay dividends in safety, appearance and economy."

Half-Year Auto Tags For New Cars Only

Tallahassee, May 2. — (FNS) — George H. Wilder, acting Motor Vehicle Commissioner, states that under the new Motor Vehicle Law, car owners will not be able to purchase half-year tags after July 1, for any car acquired previous to June 30. Only owners of new cars, bought after June 30, are eligible to purchase a half-year license tag.

The new law reads in part: "Any motor vehicle acquired after June 30 of any year and not subject to registration prior to that time shall, on application to the Motor Vehicle Commissioner for registration for such motor vehicle after June 30 of aforesaid year, be charged at the rate for such registration, one-half the annual rate. Provided, however, that no license plate shall be issued for less than $5.00."

Start Work Friday On New FERA Project

Wednesday the FERA approved a project for regrading nearly nine miles of road between Bassenger and state road eight. Two crews of men will begin work on this project Friday morning.

The road runs south from Bassenger and connects up with road eight near Brighton.

The work will be confined to raising grades through low places and ditching for drainage work, Director Tuttle stated yesterday.

CARS ARE SO USEFUL

Professor Briggs was met by his wife at the garden gate.

"Where's the car, Septimus?" she asked.

"Car, my dear," said the professor vacantly; "did I take it out?"

"You most certainly did!" exclaimed his wife. "Don't you remember, you drove it to town."

"How odd!" he blithely returned. "I remember now. I arrived in town, stopped the car, and got out. Then I turned round to thank the gentleman who gave me a lift and wondered where he had gone to."

Grasping the Chance

A countrywoman arrived at a London station, and one of the first things she saw was a man setting off pigeons in a race.

For some moments she stood fascinated as the man opened the crates and liberated the birds.

Suddenly an idea came to her. She rushed up to the man.

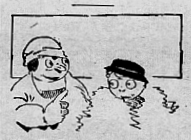

"I say, mister," she said, "you might give me one of these birds for my little Johnny before you throw them all away."

No Sense of Humor

Weary Sam—Alas, Dusty, what caused the family to throw you out on your ear and call the dog?

Dusty Rhodes — Alack, Sam, I scarcely know. I was to saw some wood in return for a pie, and when I asked the lady was it all right with her if I sawed the pie and ate the wood, all at once she seemed to get sore.

BELIEF SHATTERED

BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A FELLOW FULL OF FUNNY ANTICS

PROBABLY Peter Rabbit would have spent the whole morning listening to Glory the Cardinal had he not caught sight of an old friend of whom he is very fond, Kitty the Catbird. He was a little smaller than Welcome Robin, and was dressed almost wholly in gray, a rather dark, slaty gray. The top of his head and tail were black, and right at the base of his tail was a patch of chestnut color.

Peter forgot all about Glory and hurried over to welcome Kitty, who had disappeared among the bushes along the old stone wall. Peter had no trouble in finding him by the queer cries he was uttering. They were very like the meow of Black Pussy the Cat. They were harsh and unpleasant and Peter understood perfectly why their maker is called the catbird. He did not hurry in among the bushes at once, but waited expectantly. In a few minutes the harsh cries ceased and then from the very same place came a song which seemed to be made up of parts of the songs of all the other birds in the Old Orchard. It was not long, but it was charming.

"Did You Pass a Pleasant Winter Down South?" Asked Peter.

Peter listened until the song ended, and then scampered in among the bushes. At once those harsh cries broke out again. You might have thought that Kitty was scolding Peter for coming to see him. But that was simply Kitty's way. He was pretending. He is simply brimming over with fun and mischief and loves to pretend.

When Peter found him he was sitting with all his feathers fluffed out until he looked almost like a ball with a head and tail. He looked positively sleepy. When he caught sight of Peter he drew those feathers down tight, cocked his tail up after the manner of Jenny Wren, and was as slim and trim looking as any bird of Peter's acquaintance. He didn't look at all like the same fellow of the moment before. Then he dropped his tail as if he hadn't strength enough to hold it up. It hung limply straight down. He dropped his wings, and all in a second made himself look fairly disreputable. But all the time his eyes were twinkling and snapping, and Peter knew that he was making those changes just out of pure fun.

"Did you pass a pleasant winter down south?" asked Peter.

"Fairly so. Fairly so," replied Kitty. "By the way, I picked up some new songs down there. Would you like to hear them?"

"Of course," replied Peter. "But I don't think you need any new songs. I never heard such a fellow, excepting Mocker and Mockingbird, for picking up other people's songs."

Kitty's throat swelled and he began to sing. It didn't seem as if so many notes could come from one throat. When the song ended Peter had a question all ready. "Are you going to build somewhere near here?" he asked.

"I certainly am," replied Kitty. "Mrs. Catbird and I expect to build at once."

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

REPEATING THE WEDDING MARCH

WE HAVE just learned a new kind of wedding ceremony. A "Reaffirmation of marriage," it is called, by the well known opera singer, Reinald Werrenrath, and his wife, who took part in it.

The Werrenraths were married six years ago in the city hall of Weehawken, N. J. That was with modern efficiency, but without color or romance. It was merely tying the knot to make them man and wife.

For the past six years they have been happy; entirely, romantically happy, it seems.

And on their sixth wedding anniversary they wanted another ceremony—a "reaffirmation of marriage." Whether this was a belated realization of the bride's dream of what a wedding should be, a making up to her for something left unsatisfied, or a romantic gesture on the part of a grateful happy husband, we do not know. Perhaps it was something of both. The marriage vows were repeated, with a robed minister, the wedding march, orange blossoms, and a celebration. And congratulations, in the regular way, were received from friends all over the country.

To all appearances the husband and wife enjoyed this reaffirming of their marriage, this repeating of their vows. Perhaps they will wish, six years hence, to repeat that reaffirmation. If so, more power to them. It is good to see people happy.

The great majority of us, however, do not need so to dramatize our happiness. Most people are so glad to get done with necessary ceremony that nothing would induce them to submit to one they had managed to escape, or to repeat one they had survived! When two people are happy together, they are likely to be selfish about that happiness to the point of regarding the mere presence of others as an intrusion. Rarely do they enjoy a public display of it.

But that is what makes the world so colorful and interesting—that we are not all alike. And, as the French say, "Each to his taste."

Bit of Old Japan Transplanted to Western Shores

A STRANGE, self-supporting community thrives on the outskirts of Terminal Island at busy, modern Los Angeles harbor. Though the huge harbor is cosmopolitan in atmosphere, the most striking feature of the center of shipping industry is Fish Harbor village—a bit of old Tokyo transplanted to western shores. The little community, numbering between 3,000 and 4,000 inhabitants, has flourished for from 20 to 25 years, and has had its own public school since 1917. Four hundred and sixty little Nipponese youngsters attend the school and five Russian children—the only pupils of the white race. The teachers are all Americans, but speak accurate Japanese, while the children attend Japanese classes after school and on Saturdays, where they learn the customs and language of their native land. Most of the inhabitants of the village are hardy tuna fishermen and a few storekeepers who cater to the wants of the sea-faring Orientals. Each neat little home has its own beautiful garden, as in Japan, where practically all of the food is raised. The families all speak Japanese when they are together, restricting their school-acquired English to conversations with the rare American visitor, for Americans are not welcomed at Fish Harbor. The children are shy and their parents surly to the casual visitor, who is refused service in the stores and discouraged from returning. Patriotism of the school children is restricted to their annual Doll festival, when they dress up in their best clothing and vigorously wave American flags. The other 364 days of the year, they are Japanese, though half of them are American-born. Fish Harbor village needs no police station, as the law-abiding, orderly citizens take their minor troubles to an elder whose word is law and who settles all minor disputes. There are no courts, no fights—nothing that would require a police force in the segregated community. In the hundreds of little homes Japanese customs prevail, with diet consisting almost exclusively of fish and rice raised in their own gardens. Shoes are removed when one enters the houses, and ancient symbols decorate the walls. Marriages are performed by Buddhist and Shinto priests and heralded with days of feasting and merrymaking, while the ancient custom of respect for elders pertains. As the village is almost completely free from outside influence, nothing but the Americanized clothing of the people differentiates it from Japan. The big event of the year is the annual visit of the Japanese warships, when about 20,000 Japanese from neighboring communities turn out to welcome the sailors from across the sea with feasting and festivals. About 17 different nationalities are represented at the harbor, but of all these, Fish Harbor village is the most self-contained and picturesque. Photograph shows Japanese tuna fishermen mending their nets, spread out on the streets of Fish Harbor village at Terminal island.

PATTY AND THE BEE

By ANNE CAMPBELL

PATTY weeps! She spies a bee
Buzzing in the roses,
Running dolefully to me,
Little Pat supposes
It can keep her from the sting
Of that brown bee blustering.

If I were a yellow bee
And could choose between Posies growing fragrantly
And my heart's true queen,
I'd know where to gather bliss!
It is Patty I would kiss!

Mother's Cook Book

FAVORITE SPRING VEGETABLE

WHILE the subject is before us, let us discuss a few ways of using the well liked but odorous onion.

When cooking a few carrots add a stalk or two of celery cut fine and an onion for flavor. Cook in as little water as possible and dress with plenty of butter. The three flavors are especially good.

Scalloped Onion With Cheese.

Cook small even-sized onions, using as many as will be needed, drain and place a layer in a baking dish; cover with a rich white sauce and a spoonful or more of creamy cheese; repeat and cover with a thick layer of buttered bread crumbs. Bake until well heated through and serve hot. Nice for tea with a simple lettuce salad.

Onions With Early Apples.

Slice one or two onions, add a bit of sweet fat or butter and cook for ten minutes, adding a little water; now add thinly sliced tart apples without peeling, cook until all are tender. Season well with salt and a little sugar and serve as a vegetable with any meat. Very good with roast pork or tenderloin.

Mild Onion Salad.

Slice the southern onions very thin, add an equal measure of mild apple, a few dates cut fine and serve on lettuce with any desired dressing.

Sliced onions in french dressing served well drained as filling for sandwiches of buttered rye bread make most tasty eating. Nice for Sunday night lunch after church.

Great Love Not of Sudden Birth

Bond Never to Be Severed, Rather a Matter of Slow Growth.

"Marriage is a task for mature men and women. Love is the product of the correct solution of this task."

Reflecting on this statement, a woman writer of national prominence has this to say:

"That seems to be putting the cart before the horse, doesn't it? But it is one of the truest and wisest things that have ever been said on a subject that has not lacked attention—love and marriage.

"It is a doctor, W. Beran Wolfe, who had the courage to publish that statement. The point he makes is that more marriages would turn out well if husbands and wives acted 'as if love might be the reward of five or ten years of successful co-operation.'

"It brings to the mind the old confusion between loving and being 'in love.' The sensation of being in love is what most people feel for each other when they marry. They are attracted by various forces of the other's personality, in which they see their needs and their hopes and their dreams fulfilled. In other words they are thrilled by the prospect of what they are going to receive.

"Loving, on the other hand is feeling a bond between two human beings that can never be severed, that even after the separation of death, gnaws and pulls one to the other. That bond cannot be forged in a day. The stories of certain great loves notwithstanding, it rarely strikes like a bolt of lightning. It must grow. And its growth is the product of two people knowing each other, living together and growing together and perhaps working together and suffering together. It is the result of people feeling for each other and understanding each other, in short, knowing each other and loving each other anyway!

That is why it is more rational to expect love as the result of a successful marriage than the prelude to it, the reward of living together in such a way that attraction is enriched by friendship and understanding so that two people truly belong to each other, and through love, two become as one. And when that love is achieved it will be found that it is not interested in what it is to get, but is preoccupied in giving."

Simple Exercise for Adding to One's Height

Abraham Lincoln was 6 feet 4 inches tall; Washington was 6 feet, 2. There can be no doubt that large men, physically, have a great advantage over small men, other things being equal, says a writer in the Washington Star.

We knew a man small physically, but able intellectually, who found his lack of inches a great disadvantage. He went on a shoemaker's bench when thirteen years old, which undoubtedly stunted his physical growth, and so was handicapped all his life. He had a grandson who as a boy was undersized and feared he was to be physically like his grandfather. But that learned man suggested to him that he get into the habit of stretching out to his full length whenever he went to bed. He did that, and almost immediately began to grow taller. In a few years he became stalwart, and is now about 6 feet tall. By "taking thought" he increased his size, beyond a doubt. One of his playmates, who loomed above him before he entered his teens, is now a short man.

We suggest this to all boys who are backward in growth, as a possible way to grow tall, with all its advantages in later life.

Use Boiler in Homemade Diving Bell

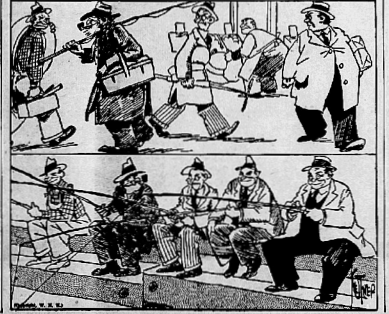

CUTTING the boiler of an old water heater in half, these ingenious school boys of Los Angeles have constructed an efficient diving bell at home at a total cost of $5, which they split between them in a partnership arrangement. The window of the bell was composed of heavy celluloid, lead weights were welded onto the boiler to bring its weight up to 90 pounds, and a bicycle pump to supply oxygen to the diver completed the outfit. The boys plan to further their study of oceanography with the diving bell this summer.

County And World's Fair

Large Truck Load of Local Products For Exhibit At Chicago

Highlands county's part of the Florida exhibit at the Chicago fair left here last Saturday by truck for DeLand, where the railway freight shipment is being assembled and will leave there for Chicago within the next few days.

There were four cases of chemically preserved fruits, containing a total of 39 fancy glass jars with such fruit as avocados, mangoes, guavas, persimmons, grapes, loquats, coffee, lichii, cashew, carissa and surinam cherries. This exhibit will comprise one of the main divisions of the Florida exhibit at the World's Fair and will be the only chemically preserved fruits shown in that exhibit except a few jars of grapes from Lake county.

In securing this exhibit Manager Earl Brown stated that these were collected because of the excellent quality and character of the chemically preserved fruit which had been put up by County Agent Alsmeyer and which was the outstanding first prize winner at the Florida Fair at Tampa last February. Last year at the Florida exhibit officials collected and prepared their own chemically preserved fruits but because of the excellent manner in which the work had been done in Highland County the jars and fruits from this section only will be used this year.

In selecting the plants and materials for the Florida exhibit which were secured in this county, plants telling the story of the subtropical advantages of our climate and the wonders of Highlands Hammock were selected. The following were the plants secured from this county and the donors of same: Rex Beach—Paradise Plant, aloes. Adjacent to Highlands Hammock—wild coffee, hairnet vine, hamelia and orchids; Harder Hall—Crotons, aclpha; G. T. Nelson—aclpha, croton; John Wilson, DeSoto City—Perrine lemons; L. L. Henderson, Lake Placid — Spanish pineapple plants with fruit; Jane Parabee, Venus — abachi pineapple plants with fruit.

Arrangements have been made by the officials to have name tags placed by the side of each of the varieties of plants giving the botanical name, the common name, and the name of the donor and on a map of the state the location of the source of the plant will be indicated by placing the name of the town and a star showing its location in the state.

Never Took It Up

Most folks regard work as merely one of the words near the end of the dictionary.

Sale of Poppies Is Big Help to Disabled Veterans

"A penny apiece is paid for each poppy made. A veteran, if he is not too badly disabled, can easily turn out 500 of the flowers in a short working day. This is usually the maximum number the disabled men are permitted to make in a day to prevent them from overtaxing their strength, and means earnings of three dollars a day.

"For men who have lain in hospitals for months feeling that they were useless incumbrances on the earth, three one-dollar bills actually earned are worth a fortune. For the families of these men — the poppy makers are all men who receive little or no government compensation—the money earned often means food, shelter and fuel for the winter. For the men without families the poppy earnings provide a 'stake' for the day when they must go out and attempt to re-establish themselves in life against the handicap of their disabilities.

"Veterans too badly disabled to make complete flowers sometimes form what they call 'Poppy Corporations.' Several of them work together on the same flower, each performing the operation which he can do and passing the flower on to the others to be completed. Even blinded veterans can take part in the work under this arrangement.

"Manufacturing the poppies involves large problems of financing, management and distribution for the Auxiliary women directing the project. This year wages paid to the disabled veterans will total nearly $100,000. Employment has been given to many hundreds in 58 different hospitals and workrooms in 40 states.

"The funds derived from the poppies are used by the Auxiliary and the American Legion in giving aid to disabled veterans, their families and families of the dead for whom no other aid is available. Groceries for the family of a veteran too sick to work—shoes for the children of a veteran lying ill in a distant government hospital—a loan to convalescent veteran struggling to get back on his feet—these are typical of the purposes for which the poppy contributions are used. The money is expended largely in the community in which it is raised under the direction of the rehabilitation and child welfare committees of the local Auxiliary Unit and Legion post.

The wearing of the poppy draws its wide appeal from its dual purpose of honoring the dead and serving the living. Every red flower on a lapel on 'Poppy Day' means that the wearer has thought of the men who lie beneath the poppies in France, and has contributed comething to the relief and rehabilitation of the men, women and children who are still fighting the long battle against physical and financial handicaps resulting from war service.

MORE THAN 50% LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE

IN THE NEW Firestone

HIGH SPEED TIRE FOR 1934

THE new Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 is the greatest tire Firestone has ever built. With its wider, flatter tread, greater thickness, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, and greater non-skid contact with the road, you get more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

This new development is made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, whereby the cotton fibers inside the high-stretch cords are soaked and coated with pure liquid rubber. This provides greater strength, safety and blowout protection.

Firestone engineers pioneered and developed the first successful balloon tire in 1923, and it is only natural that Firestone would lead in the further development of tire construction to meet the demands of the high-powered high-speed cars of today.

Performance RECORDS
FIRESTONE HIGH SPEED TIRES

—for fourteen consecutive years have been on the winning cars in the 500-mile Indianapolis Race.

—for seven consecutive years have been on the winning car in the daring Pike's Peak climb where a slip meant death.

—for three consecutive years have been on the 131 busses of the Washington, (D. C.) Railway and Electric Company, covering 11,537,810 bus miles without one minute's delay due to tire trouble.

—were on the Neiman Motors' Ford V-8 Truck that made a new coast-to-coast record of 67 hours, 42 minutes, 30 seconds actual running time.

The new Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934, have already proved their worth by constant testing on the Firestone fleet of test cars over all kinds of roads and highways throughout the United States.

Firestone High Speed Tires are further subjected to the most severe tests known on the greatest proving ground in the world—the Indianapolis Speedway. In fact, Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the annual 500-Mile Indianapolis Race for fourteen consecutive years—conclusive evidence of Firestone's outstanding leadership in tire development and construction.

M. M. BASS DIED MONDAY AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Buried at Winter Haven With Many Attending From Here

Death at 8 o'clock Monday evening closed the earthly career of Milledge McGee Bass, 63, who passed away here from an illness caused by a fall on March 8. Mr. Bass sustained a broken hip which led to uremic poisoning, causing his death.

Mr. Bass was a native of Lowndes county, Ga., where he was born Sept 28, 1870. He came to Florida at the age of seven, his parents locating at Geneva and later moving to Glen St. Mary, where young Bass entered the employ of the Glen St. Mary Nurseries company. He remained with this company for 23 years, serving in later years as general field manager. He went to Winter Haven in 1911 as an employe of the Glen St. Mary company but resigned in 1913 and entered the nursery business with W. M. Hampton, later selling to the Buckeye Nursery company. He was general field manager of the Lake Region Nursery and Farms company until 1916 when he joined the State Plant Board and did conspicuous service in the fight on citrus canker. In 1919 he became an employe of the Standard Growers Exchange, this firm later becoming the International Fruit corporation, and continued with them until death. During these years he served the corporation efficiently and faithfully at Fort Myers, Lynchburg (near Winter Haven), Ocoee, and finally at Avon Park, where he had charge of the Alpine Groves, comprising 900 acres of the company's holdings. He took charge of this property four years ago upon purchase of the groves by his company. The groves were in a run-down state at the time, but through his work and knowledge of the business he brought the property to a high state of production. He was prominent in State Horticultural Society ranks for many years.

Mr. Bass was a man of many fine qualities and enjoyed a wide friendship in all the communities where he lived and served. He was a prominent F. and A. M., and united with the Baptist church several years ago. He was married to Lillie Ollie Strickland of Glen St. Mary, Fla., on July 10, 1892. Surviving are his widow, a son Clarence of Miami, two daughters, Mrs. Mildred Staley and Mrs. Bob Savage of Winter Haven, two grandsons, Leonard and Lloyd Bass of Winter Haven, and four half brothers, J. O. Barton, Glen St. Mary; L. L. and T. J. Barton, Lake Alfred, and B. F. Barton, Avon Park, and one half-sister, Mrs. W. H. Stokes of Lake Wales.

The funeral was held on Wednesday, May 9, at 3 o'clock from the Ware-Smith Funeral Home in Winter Haven, in charge of Dr. J. H. Griffin, Baptist pastor, and Dr. W. K. McClure, pastor of the Avon Park Baptist church. Interment was made in Oak Lawn cemetery, where the Masonic lodge conducted the last rites.

Those attending from here included C. E. Lanier, Col. Chas. R. Head, Jack Head, Paul Jones, M. V. Pilcher, Dave Stuckey, Mrs. Clark and a number of others.

Tax Collector to be Here Saturday for Poll Tax Payments

Tax Collector Ruth Hylton will be in Avon Park Saturday night for the collection of poll taxes in order that registered voters may qualify for the primary election, June 5. So far very few voters have qualified by paying their 1932 and 1933 poll taxes and everyone is urged not to delay this any longer, Saturday, May 19 being the last day poll taxes can be paid.

Candidate Visits Here

Eugene S. Matthems, candidate fo re-election to the Florida Railroad Commission, was a visitor in Avon Park this week in the interest of his candidacy. Mr. Mathhas several opponents in the race but his friends feel confident that his record will ansure his being in the lead when the votes are counted.

Young Democrats Have Inaugurated Membership Drive

The Highlands County club of the Florida League of Young Democrats is conducting a membership campaign throughout the county with the idea of enrolling several hundred members.

The purpose of the club as set forth by the president, Owen L. Godwin of Sebring, is to stimulate in young people an active interest in governmental affairs, to foster and perpetuate the ideals and principles of the Democratic party and to provide for the people through the administration of the Democratic party the highest degree of justice, prosperity and happiness.

To be an active member a person must be under 35 years of age but the club welcomes associate members who have passed that age, Mr. Godwin stated.

At a recent meeting the following executive council was elected: Mel Bass and George Turner, Avon Park; Selwyn Ives, Owen Godwin and Walter Ivings of Sebring; Bernard Etheredge of De-Soto City; Lee Crews, Lake Placid; Charles Powell, Hicoria; R. B. Hendry, Venus and B. P. Abney, Brighton.

Anyone wishing to join the organization, either active or associate, should see some member of the committee.

TEACHERS NAMED FOR COMING SCHOOL YEAR

Board of Public Instruction Appoint Teachers For County Schools

At the regular meeting of the board of public instruction for Highlands county Tuesday, action was taken on the recommendations of the various boards of trustees for the different schools in the county. For Sebring, Samuel Long was again named supervising principal with other teachers to be named later.

For Brigiton, Miss Virginia Bowers was named teacher. Miss Bowers will graduate from the State College for Women at Tallahassee next month and has had experience in the training school.

At Hicoria Miss Lois Kelsey who taught there the last session has been reappointed. At Venus Mrs. Katie Franklin and Mrs. Espenlaub were named teachers. E. J. Peters was reappointed principal at the last meeting of the board.

For Lake Placid, the grammar school teachers named were Mrs. Robbie Kincaid, Mrs. Lillian Crews and George Kelsey; for the high school those named were Mrs. Julia Titus, Mrs. Ethel Seaverns and James Davis. Mitchell Ferguson was reappointed principal at a previous meeting.

At Sunniland, all the teachers were reappointed, C. H. Pardee, Jr., as principal and Fred Barshell and Mrs. Margaret Reish.

No action was taken on the Avon Park recommendations due to the absence of Charles Clements, member of the board.

Another meeting of the board will be held in the near future to consider further recommendations.

Wauchula Baptist Rotary Speaker

Rev. B. A. Roth, pastor of the Wauchula First Baptist church, was the speaker at the Rotary club luncheon Wednesday noon at the Jacaranda hotel. The speaker was introduced by S. J. Pendleton, chairman of the program committee, and took for his subject "Man" on which he gave a very interesting discourse.

Besides the speaker other visitors were Col. F. N. K. Bailey of Sebring and J. A. Johnson.

Special Mothers' Day Services

Special music and program for Mother's Day will be given at the 11 o'clock service of the Congregational church Sunday morning, and program in Bible school at 10.15. Bring your mother to church for this occasion—she will be grateful.

Visit Pineapple Plantings

R. A. Carlton, agricultural agent for the Seaboard Air Line, accompanied by H. C. Bennett of Gainesville, R. Bennett of Crooked Lake, Paul Haymon, Polk County agent and Louis Alemeyer visited in this county Wednesday viewing various pineapple plantings.

Metros Beat Brewster 5-4

First Home Game of Season Proves to Be Pitchers' Classic

Showing the rare combination of fighting spirit and the ability to hit when hits meant runs, the Avon Park Metros took the measure of the Brewster Miners 5 to 4 at Head field Sunday in their first home appearance of the season.

The game is properly classed as a pitchers' classic. Dilley for the Metros allowed but five hits during the game and struck out 16 batsmen to set a record for the season that will be hard for amateur chunkers to duplicate. Hagan for Brewster, did almost as well, allowing but seven hits and striking out 9.

Brewster took an early lead in the second inning when the Miners took advantage of two infield bobles and a couple of scratch hits to push over two runs.

McFerrin started the scoring for the Metros with a double in the third, advancing on Lenghart's infield out and counting when J. B. Martin singled over short. From then on Hagan held the Metros scoreless until the seventh. McCampbell walked as did Dilley, advancing McCampbell to second. Mac stole third while Young, Brewster catcher, held the ball in his mitt. When he did finally throw, his heave was wild and Mac romped on home for the tieing run.

Brewster took the lead again in their half of the eighth, when Hooker walked and Galbraith tripled to score him. Galbraith scored on a passed ball. Dilley struck out the next three batsmen to retire the side.

With two out in the eighth and the score 4 to 2 against them the Metros came to life for a hitting that lasted long enough to win the game. J. B. Martin started the rally with a single through short. Durrh Martin hit a looping ground ball to second and was safe on a hurried throw that went wild. Landress then singled to center and J. B. scored. But it was left for Paint McCampbell to come through with the winning punch. This "Old Folks" did with gusto and relish. He parked one of Mr. Hagan's fast balls into deep left field and as the little white pill settled down among the tender shoots of natal grass that have recently sprung up in the outfield, Durrh and Landress crossed the plate and put the game in the well known bag.

In the ninth, Hotshot Armistead was spiked at second base and was taken from the game. He got a deep cut on the foot, and will be out for several weeks. The cut is responding to treatment, and Hotshot says he is still running—for commissioner.

Paint McCampbell was also a casualty of the game, receiving a bunged-up right hand in the second inning when he caught a bad hop on the end of the finger.

The score:

Frostproof Wins 13-7

Presenting a crippled line-up for the opening league game at Head field Thursday afternoon, the locals lost to Frostproof 13 to 7.

Hotshot Armistead, the spark plug of the infield was out of the game with a spiked foot which he got in Sunday's game and Paint McCampbell was absent from the initial sack with a broken finger. These two were sorely missed from the infield line-up. In addition, J. B. Martin had been ill for several days and was in no condition to give his best performance at short. Add to this Dilley's sore arm which developed after he had pitched three innings and you have some of the causes for the loss of the league opener.

The bright spot in the game was the effective pitching of young Lefty Merriwether, who allowed only five hits in the six innings he worked. It looks like this youngster has got what it takes, all right, and with a little more seasoning, will develop into a winning pitcher.

Merriwether started the game and pitched the first three innings. He was then replaced by Dilley, but Batch developed a sore arm, and Merriwether was again called to the mound, and finished the game.

The score:

Times Will Give Baseballs and Mitts Away Free

Here's good news for the boys of Avon Park. The Times is giving away free baseballs and mitts with subscriptions. All you boys have to do is bring in subscriptions, either new or renewal and you will have your choice of balls or mitts, or both absolutely free.

Here's the scale of subscriptions and prizes.

For one year subscription you get a ball valued at 50c or a mitt which retails for 75c

For two one year subscriptions or a two year subscription you get a mitt selling for $1.50.

For three one-year subscriptions you get a mitt selling for $2.50 and a ball.

Subscriptions to the Times are $2.00 a year for anybody in Highlands county but if outside the county 50 cents must be added to cover the additional postage. Two six months subscriptions will count as one year.

These balls and mitts are on display and will be bought from the Smith-Dorminey Co., who carry a full line of sporting goods. If you don't want a ball or mitt come and see us at the Times office and maybe we can fix you up with something else.

FIRST STATE PARK IN HIGHLANDS COUNTY

Tract Near Highlands Hammock Accepted By State Forestry Service

A press release to all state papers by the Florida Forestry service states that the land near Highlands Hammock is the first forestry park in the state that has been accepted by the trustees of the Internal Improvement fund under recently enacted legislation directing the Florida Forest Service to investigate suitable sites for state forests, state parks, and reforestation projects, and to make recommendations to the trustees.

The release which should get considerable publicity for Highlands county states as follows:

"The land selected consists of 869 acres adjoining Highlands Hammock in Highlands county. This area lies between Sebring and Zolpho Springs near the Hardee county line. The area was deeded to the State by the Trustees of the Highlands Hammock Association, Incorporated, which administer Highlands Hammock, one of Florida's most beautiful hammocks. This land was purchased and made accessible through the generosity and thoughtfulness of the late Margaret Shippen Roebling and her husband, John A. Roebling of New Jersey and Florida.

"The area has been declared a state park by the Trustees. The Florida Forest Service has been authorized to administer and proceed with work in connection with its development as a park and as a reforestation area. It will be the site of the proposed Florida Botanical Garden and Arboretum, work on which will be started by a Civilian Conservation Corps camp located near Sebring. This camp will be under the supervision of the National Park Service. The Florida Botanical Garden and Arboretum Association will plan and direct the construction of the gardens and arboretum, which, it is anticipated, will be one of the most outstanding in the country.

"Highlands Hammock has been developed and made accessible without disturbing, insofar as possible, the natural vegetation. With the addition of a Botanical Garden and Arboretum on an adjoining area a vast variety of wild and cultivated plants, shrubs, and trees from all parts of the world will be assembled.

"Dr. John A. Gifford, the nationally known authority on tropical trees, is president of the Association and Mrs. Clara I. Thomas, Sebring, is the newly elected secretary."

Avon Park Cop Out On Bond on Assault and Battery Charge

James Cravey, Avon Park patrolman, is at liberty under a $100 bond on a charge of assault and battery. Cravey is alleged to have beaten Jeremah Boone, colored, while arresting him on a charge of speeding on Sunday morning. He is alleged to have broken his black jack over Boone's head and then beaten him with his gun, breaking a blood vessel in the negro's arm.

District Bonds -Kanner Bill

Commissioner Spooner Presents Plan Which Will Save County Thousands

The county commissioners at their meeting Tuesday resolved to act under the Kanner bill in regards to bonds pertaining to special road and bridge districts and which are payable in conjunction with adjoining counties, Hardee, DeSoto and Glades. The matter has been under consideration for some time and was brought to a head by Commissioner A. F. Spooner who had been in communication with Attorney General Landis and State Treasurer Knott regarding the legality of acting under the Kanner bill with regard to district bonds only. Adjoining counties have been working under this act and the action of the commissioners Tuesday is expected to save Highlands county several thousands of dollars on bonds which were assumed when old DeSoto county was divided.

E. J. Etheredge addressed the board regarding the proposed new federal road through here and urged the full co-operation of everybody when the state road department meets in Sebring on June 11. It will be up to the county to secure the right of way after the route has been decided on, Dr. Etheredge said and was very enthusiastic on the benefits that would accrue to Highlands county from the new road. The new road will shorten the distance from Miami to Tampa by 27 miles, he said and be the means of bringing much new traffic through this section.

The commissioners named the election officials for the various precincts for the primary on June 5 and also designated the polling places.

Little Joyce Cowart Run Over and Killed Tuesday

Funeral services for little Joyce Cowart, 19 months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cowart, were held Wednesday afternoon at the home of the parents. Rev. W. K. McClure of the Baptist church had charge and interment was in Bougainvillea cemetery. A large number of friends attended and there was a wealth of flowers.

Joyce was killed about noon Tuesday in front of her home on Tulane Circle, being run over by a car driven by W. H. Kempton. Mr. Kempton was delivering milk and the little tot had evidently followed her aunt, Mrs. Gilmour, out to the street and stooping down in front of the car and no one suspected her presence when Mr. Kempton drove off. Investigating officers considered the accident unavoidable and no arrests were made.

Mothers' Day Program Sunday At Congregational

A special Mother's Day program has been arranged by the Congregational church Sunday school beginning at 10:15 a. m., and everyone is invited to attend. The Sunday school orchestra will have a prominent part and then will come an octet of Bible verses followed by the invocation in unison.

This will be followed by recitations by members of the Sunday school interspersed with music and song. There will be a presentation of flowers to Mothers and the benediction will be pronounced by Dr. A. P. Vaughn, pastor.

Poultry Producers Met At Court House

A meeting of the Highlands County Paultry Association was held last Friday afternoon at the courthouse. Candidates for Representative, J. J. Sims and F. L. Orson, who were invited to attend and express their position regarding legislation affectin gthe association, stated in brief that they were behind the association and were unanimously enthusiastic about its success.

Candidates Ford W. Heacock and A. T. Elde were unable to be present but sent favorable letters pledging their support to the association.

Membership was extended to W. T. Sessions, poultry man of Lake Placid, who arranged to use the organization's label which denotes that his product is up to standard as to grade and pack.

Open Drive for Publicity Funds For Ridge Section

A drive to raise funds for the publicity campaign of the Scenic Highlanders for the Ridge section at the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago this summer was inaugurated at the chamber of commerce meeting Monday night. Dr. D. G. Perry had charge of the discussion of the purposes of the Scenic Highlanders and what they intend to accomplish to advertise the ridge. He also urged a strong delegation attend the state road department meeting in Sebring next month to further the building of the new federal highway through here.

The local directors of the ridge body, Dr. D. G. Perry, W. T. Coates and E. G. Todd were supplemented by a committee of 12 to raise Avon Park's quota of $450 for publicity purposes. Those named on this committee were: Francis Shockley, J. R. Yearwood, S. J. Pendleton, O. C. Wilkes, Stewart Thayer, Herbert Reck, E. E. Melton, Demos Mandis, J. B. Coen, Paul Jones, George Guthrie and A. G. Warn.

Other matters before the meeting included a proposed public bathing beach and this was referred to the Donaldson Park committee. On this committee Francis Shockley was named to take the place of R. T. Fairey, resigned.

SCHOOL FOR GROWERS IN THE RIDGE SECTION

Classes In Highlands County To Be Conducted May 17

A series of seven extension citrus-grower schools will be held in the Ridge Section of Florida during the coming week, according to announcement from the Agricultural Extension Service here.

Some of the main topics to be discussed will be citrus soils and soil amendments, grove management in the face of early rains and a heavy crop, and other problems vitally connected with the present and perspective citrus situation. Among the speakers will be Dr. O. C. Bryan, professor of soils at the College of Agriculture, W. T. Nettles, district county agent leader, E. F. DeBusk, extension citriculturist, and the county agents.

Meetings will be held in Hillsborough county at Valrico and Lake Morgan on Tuesday, May 15; at Bradenton, Manatee county, May 16; at DeSoto City and Avon Park, Highlands county, May 17; and in Polk county at Lakeland and Winter Haven May 18.

The Avon Park meetings will be held in the grammar school auditorium at 9:30 a. m., and 2 p. m., with Parke Anderson chairman. Fertilizers, rust mite control and producing quality fruit will be among the subjects discussed.

Similar meetings have already been held at Arcadia, Homestead, and Wauchula with an average attendance of close to 100 growers. Similar citrus meetings, led by the county agents, are held monthly in Lake, Orange, and DeSoto counties, and are monthly attended by about 600 growers.

Shriners of Egypt Temple to Entertain

All Shriners and their friends have been invited by Egypt Temple of Tampa to attend their free entertainment and dance at Haines City, Saturday night, May 12th.

The entertainment features will be opened by the uniformed bodies of Egypt Temple at 6:30 p. m., to be followed by card games and dancing until midnight. Both entertainment and ball will be informal, and will be held at the Polk Hotel for all Shriners and their friends.

Invitations are being sent out covering the entire jurisdiction of Egypt Temple, which includes the counties of Charlotte, Citrus, Collier, DeSoto, Glades, Hardee, Hendry, Hernando, Highlands, Hillsborough, Lake, Lee, Manatee, Okeechobee, Orange, Osceola, Pasco, Polk, Pinellas, Sarasota and Sumter.

Morocco Shrine Temple of Jacksonville and Mahi Shrine Temple of Miami also have been invited; and one of the largest gatherings of Florida Shriners is expected to attend. Noble Earle T. Myers of Haines City is in charge of arrangements.

POLITICS WARM UP AS SEVERAL MORE QUALIFY

Four Candidates Here For Commissioner; Vinson for Representative

The political campaign took on more life this week with the announcement of another candidate for the office of representative and the qualification of two other aspirants for the office of county commissioner in this district. Paul Vinson, prominent Sebring property owner and business man has announced for representative, opposing J. E. Sims, incumbent, and Dr. A. T. Eide and Ford Heacock.

In the commissioners race in this district S. P. Durrance and Frank (Hotshot) Armistead have qualified this week, making four contenders for the office now held by John Hood, the other two being J. L. Wells and G. A. Harper. M. A. Grice has announced his withdrawal from the race and has stated he would not qualify.

Down in district three, DeSoto City, L. C. (Cliff) Pearce has qualified as candidate for county commissioner. Others in the race in district three are: J. H. Twitty, Willie Williams, Capt. W. R. Maynard and Horace Galloway.

Paul Vinson is a director in the Florida Taxpayers Association and is running on the platform adopted by that body. This platform reads:

1. Opposed to any new taxes because our present tax laws provide for sufficient revenue, if the law is enforced.

2. Enforcement of present tax laws by some practical agency or plan that will bring about equitable assessments throughout the state on all classes of property, in accordance with provision of the Constitution to the effect that "the legislature shall provide a just and equitable system of taxation," using in the assessment work a state-wide method of arriving at values, based on the methods employed by successful institutions, such as insurance companies, loan companies, banks, etc.

3. Economy of government by the elimination of waste in administration and, with that in mind, the adoption of uniformity of accounts in all governmental units of the same class, thereby permitting comparisons of costs of governmental operation as between units of the same class, also so simplified that the average citizen can understand the cost of operating the government in all of its different departments, the cost of maintaining public property and the cost of new work, improvements or additions made to public property.

4. The investigation of the indebtedness of the various governmental units and a determination of the ability of the units that have defaulted to take care of their indebtedness, after deducting a reasonable amount for the necessary operation of government, basing the conclusions on a fair and reasonable valuation of property within the area affected.

Besides this platform, Mr. Vinson says he favors the Homestead Exemption amendment in order to get an adjustment of the bonded indebtedness of the various Florida political subdivisions. He would eliminate the poll tax and give part of the gas tax to the schools to replace the poll tax, all of which goes to the schools at present. He also stands for $5 license tags for all passenger cars privately owned as long as there is an 8-cent gas tax.

Judge W. J. Barker is unopposed as judge for the 19th judicial circuit, a fact which indicates the high regard in which his abilities on the bench are held.

T. A. McNicholas has qualified for the office of state committeeman and Charles Clements for member of the county board of public instruction, the position he now holds. W. H. McCarthy, Avon Park's fire chief, says he is a candidate for the office of Justice of the Peace, district one and will qualify today. The present justice, H. H. Halliday, has expressed his intention of resigning.

Leave for Class Reunion

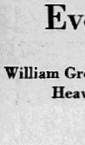

Dr. I. W. Chandler, Avon Park and Dr. J. C. Chandler of Tampa left today for the University of Georgia, Athens, to attend their class reunion, it being the 30th year since their graduation in the class of 1904. Dr. Chandler will return to Avon Park Monday.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

William Green Says Labor Must Force 30-Hour Week; Heavy Goods Industries Against General Wage Increase.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

NOTICE is served on the nation that the 30-hour week will be forced on industry, by organized labor by the use of widespread strikes, if necessary. This is the dictum of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and it causes consternation in the administration as well as grave alarm in the country generally. Green, in his May day address to workers, says the terms of the nine-power treaty and to maintain the open door in China. The British note was rather mild and Hirota's reply was held satisfactory by Sir John Simon, secretary for foreign affairs. But Secretary Hull's statement was sharper, being in effect that the United States did not propose to consult with Japan before extending assistance, financial or otherwise, to China so long as such assistance was not in violation of existing treaties.

William Green

New Deal has failed to remedy unemployment situation, since there are still more than ten millions without jobs. The 30-hour week, he says, is the only remedy available since if all industries not yet under codes are brought under them, the resulting re-employment will not give work to these millions.

Just before Green issued this statement, President Roosevelt had apparently declined to support the Connery bill legislating a 30-hour week for all industry; and General Johnson has recently abandoned as not feasible the plan for forcing a 10 per cent reduction in working hours.

ORGANIZED labor is divided on the issue of compulsory arbitration. The American Federation of Labor has declared that it will not be tolerated and that it will not appoint labor spokesmen to the industrial relations boards now being created until General Johnson gives assurance that these boards will have no power to arbitrate cases unless labor agrees.

Railroad labor, on the other hand, announced a drive for amendment of the railway labor act which would give adjustment boards power to arbitrate controversies arising out of grievances or out of interpretations of rules or agreements.

REPRESENTATIVE BERTRAND SNELL of New York, minority leader in the house, says the period of emergency is over, so he and the rest of the Republican leaders feel free now to demand that the emergency laws and bureaus be dispensed with. An amazing phase of the controversy over the New Deal thus comes to light. The opponents of the administration virtually conceded that President Roosevelt and his advisers have won their fight against the depression and declare that normal conditions have been restored or are at hand. But the President and the other New Dealers deny that the battle is over and assert that their recovery measures must be continued in force. At the same time they insist that they are not seeking to change the American system to state socialism, collectivism, communism, fascism, and that what they are accomplishing is "evolution, not revolution."

Thus a most peculiar situation in politics is created, and the man in the street is waiting interestedly to see how it will be handled in the coming campaign.

HARRIMAN is a rather small city in Tennessee but it has presented the NRA with a troubling problem. The town depends largely on the Harriman Hosiery mills, and that concern was ordered to surrender its Blue Eagle because of charges that it had violated section 7A of the national recovery act. Within a few hours the whole town was in revolt. Fifty-six merchants and other business men removed their Blue Eagles and wired to Washington for instructions on what to do with them. General Johnson sent two of his trusted lieutenants to Harriman to investigate.

THAT a general wage increase at this time will hinder rather than aid in national economic recovery is the contention of the heavy goods industries set forth in a report to General Johnson by George H. Houston, chairman of the durable goods industries committee. The report reasserts faith in the company union, approves of emergency price fixing and attacks the Wagner bill as encouraging industrial strife.

A platform of "satisfactory employer-employee relationship" is offered, containing these three planks:

"A wage scale which compensates the worker fairly and generously within the ability of the employer to pay.

"The establishment of safe and satisfactory working conditions.

"Confidence as it is affected by factors other than planks one and two—better homes, better educational facilities and all that goes to make up a healthful and happy community life."

Elsewhere the national labor board, unmentioned specifically, was nevertheless, opposed. The committee added:

"It is our firm conviction that all subsequent procedure in connection with the handling of disputes should be kept within the jurisdiction of the NRA.

"The entire recovery program contemplates the co-operation of industry under codes with the NRA."

BOTH the United States and Great Britain made reply to Japan's claim to sole authority to maintain peace in eastern Asia, and Foreign Minister Koki Hirota answered both with the assurance that Japan intended to observe the terms of the nine-power treaty and to maintain the open door in China. The British note was rather mild and Hirota's reply was held satisfactory by Sir John Simon, secretary for foreign affairs. But Secretary Hull's statement was sharper, being in effect that the United States did not propose to consult with Japan before extending assistance, financial or otherwise, to China so long as such assistance was not in violation of existing treaties.

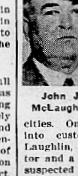

It was reported in Tokyo that Hirota was satisfied with the British attitude but was greatly concerned over Mr. Hull's note, which was a flat rejection of the Japanese claim concerning the maintenance of peace in China. Mr. Hull issued a lengthy exposition of the American government's position in the matter.

WITH unexpected celerity the railway executives and rail union chiefs reached an accord in the wage dispute, and the danger of a strike was averted for another year. At the instance of President Roosevelt but without government interference they worked out their own settlement after the federal negotiations had failed to get results and Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman had withdrawn as mediator.

Under the arrangement decided upon the 10 per cent wage cut which has prevailed in the railroads during the last two years is to be gradually wiped out in the next twelve months. Two and a half per cent of the cut in wage rates is to be restored July 1, another 2½ per cent on January 1, and the remaining 5 per cent on April 1, 1935.

In other words, instead of a 10 per cent cut rail workers will be on only a 7½ per cent cut prevailing between July 1 and January 1, a 5 per cent cut prevailing between January 1 and April 1, and full pay restoration after April 1.

FEDERAL agents believe they have uncovered a great ring of crooks for the handling of money derived from kidnapings, bank robberies and swindles. They already have arrested a number of men and are hurrying to get others before they are put out of the way by members of the gang, as has been done before. The ring, it is said, has been operating in Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Kansas City and other cities. One of the first men taken into custody was John J. McLaughlin, formerly a state legislator and a political boss in Chicago, suspected of being a leader in the disposal of the "hot money." The specific charge against him is conspiracy in the kidnaping of Edward Bremer, St. Paul banker, for whose release a ransom of $200,000 was paid. The federal agents were diligently searching for William Elmer Mead, a notorious crook, who is thought to have directed the kidnapers.

John J. McLaughlin

McLaughlin confessed that he had handled some of the Bremer ransom money, and his son was arrested with part of it in his pocket.

The Bremer investigation revealed that, a short time before the kidnaping, Martin Wunderlich, a St. Paul and Jefferson City (Mo.) contractor, was swindled out of at least $50,000, according to the operatives, by Mead and his gang, by the old-fashioned horse racing act. It was said Wunderlich obtained the money from Bremer, and this convinced the gang that Bremer would be a promising kidnap victim.

GEN. HUGH L. SCOTT, former chief of the army and one of the last survivors of the great Indian fighters, died at the age of eighty years in Walter Reed hospital, Washington. Through all his last years, Scott continued vigorously his researches and writings on the Indian sign languages which he had mastered during his years on the plains. In 1930 he was commissioned by the library of congress to compile a record for all time of this curious mode of expression.

WHILE the pursuit of John Dillinger and his fellow outlaws was being carried on—without success at this writing—three felons made a sensational escape from the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus. Armed with a smuggled automatic pistol, they terrorized 18 officials and guards, collected a shotgun, a gas gun and a rifle, climbed over the walls and fled in an automobile that was waiting outside.

Randall Norvell, a life-term kidnaper, and another convict, got out of the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Chester by crawling through a sewer, crossed the Mississippi in a rowboat, stole a motorboat and recrossed to Illinois, where for the time being they disappeared.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S reply to the attacks on Rexford Guy Tugwell, which were renewed by opponents of the administration after the Wirt story was made public, comes in the form of a promotion for the brain trust. He has been serving as assistant secretary of agriculture, and is now advanced by the President to the newly created position of undersecretary of agriculture, his salary being increased from $7,500 to $10,000 a year. A new assistant secretary can now be appointed who will relieve Mr. Wallace and Mr. Tugwell of some of their heavy duties. The department has been considered understaffed. The post of undersecretary was created by a recent act of congress.

R. G. Tugwell

Tugwell's appointment will have to be confirmed by the senate, and it was considered certain the Republicans would take advantage of the opportunity to make fresh attacks on him and his theories of government.

The President also advanced Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, a Boston banker, former assistant secretary to undersecretary of the treasury, which position had been vacant since Raymond Moley stepped out. The higher personnel of that department is now being placed on a permanent basis for the first time since Henry Morgenthau, Jr., became its head.

VICTORY in the conference was won by the senate high tax bloc, for the house conferees accepted virtually all the senate increases in estate and gift taxes, the capital stock and excess profits taxes and liberal compromises over income-tax publicity and consolidated returns.

The conference agreement was complete except for the Couzens amendment, adding 10 per cent to all individual income-tax returns next year. The house was to take a separate vote on this.

With the revenue bill thus disposed of, the senate finance committee began public hearings on the administration's reciprocal tariff bill, which the house has passed.

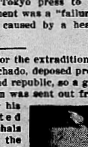

"DEAD" for more than a year, the Austrian parliament came to life long enough to approve, by a vote of 74 to 2, the new Constitution and a mass of laws decreed by Chancellor Dollfuss and Prince Starhemberg. The new Constitution abolishes parliaments and also does away with trial by jury.

ITALY'S legislature doesn't amount to much any more, but King Victor Emmanuel opened its session with a noteworthy speech praising the work of the Fascist regime. Especially interesting was his long statement concerning the necessity of increasing Italy's armed forces to the extent that the country's pocketbook would stand.

"We sincerely and ardently desire for Italy and Europe the longest possible period of peace," he declared amid thunderous cheers, "but the best guarantee of this peace is the efficiency of our armed forces."

PASSAGE through the Panama canal of the American fleet of 111 vessels, on the way from the Pacific to the Atlantic, was carried out successfully, but not in the hoped-for 24 hours. The time consumed was almost double that, which led the Tokyo press to declare the movement was a "failure." The delay was caused by a heavy rain.

CUBA asked for the extradition of Gerardo Machado, deposed president of the island republic, so a general police alarm was sent out from Washington for his arrest. United States marshals went first to the apartment he had been occupying in New York, and were told by his secretary, Julio Fernandez, that he had left for parts unknown. Federal port authorities and border patrols were told to watch for the fugitive. If they can get him back, the Cuban authorities intend to try Machado on charges of murder based on wholesale shootings which occurred a few days before he fled from the island. They also plan to ask extradition of Gen. Alberto Herrera, Machado's former chief of staff, who like his master, took refuge in the United States.

SEEN and HEARD around the National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—Growing insurgency of business against the New Deal threatens to upset a political tradition as old as party campaigns in this country. The tradition is that the party in power always wins when the country is prosperous, and always loses when times are hard.

The present movement may be misleading, but the fact is that a great many Republican leaders are hoping strongly for more and more prosperity, not just as patriotic Americans but as bitter partisans. Only with a great wave of prosperity, they now believe, will they have a real chance against Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936.

Until the last few weeks, for the whole period during which the blue eagle has been functioning and the brain trust inspiring legislation aimed at curtailing profits for the advantage of the workers and consumers, Republican leaders had been very gloomy about the prospect.

"If prosperity comes back," many of them said, "nothing can beat Roosevelt. He will be a hero and will be recognized as the savior of the country." We will not have a chance for the election of Republican candidates unless times are hard, unless it is evident that his various policies are not the proper medicine for what ails us. But as persons we want prosperity. It is better to have the country in good shape, even if we are kept out of power by that very condition."

But a proverb much older, seems to be running to this theory so generally held until lately. It is: "The devil was sick—the devil a monk would be; the devil was well —the devil a monk was he."

In short, business was eager to have the government try anything a year ago—anything to get the country back on its feet. It was willing to accept the codes, higher wages and shorter hours, in fact, it was willing to take any medicine, no matter how bad tasting. But now the devil is getting well! He doesn't like the medicine.

Becoming Alarmed

Republican orators have been preaching this doctrine, but the old politicians among them thought they were just making the best of a very bad situation. They continued certain that returning prosperity would redound to the credit of the administration and make any comeback on the part of the Republicans impossible.

It is the attitude of business executives that has upset this. They are beginning to be very alarmed over the ultimate objects of the Roosevelt New Deal, now that they think the depression is passing into history. They are particularly worried about the continued lurching on the part of the New Dealers on cutting down profits, not to mention the insistence on more union recognition, etc.

The theory now accepted by Republican leaders here is that if business continues to get better during the next year and a half, business will become more and more restive, and by the time the campaign opens up there will be a "regimentation" of business against the administration which will stand a fair chance of success.

Despite rumors about a possible turning to the right on the part of the President, the private opinion of Republican leaders is that the President's heart is set on going down in history as having set up a new order.

Senate Balks

While there is more talk on the surface about Capitol Hill's revolting on stock exchange regulation, payment of closed bank deposits, and amendment of the securities act than on the proposed new tariff powers for the President, actually senators are more concerned about that privately than anything else the President wants before adjournment. Yet the Chief Executive insists on the grant.

The point is that the senators do not want to give up their own power in tariff tinkering. Not only do they know of such power, theoretically; they are constantly being given demonstrations of its value. At the present moment the sugar allotment or quota bill is in the throes. Powerful lobbies representing the various interests are in Washington, and all the talk is not of high ethics, morals, and what is best for the country or the world. Not for a minute. There are plenty of subtle—and some not so subtle —suggestions about campaign contributions, lining up this or that faction in a state through direct or indirect connections.

Senators up for re-election this fall are particularly subject to this pressure at the moment. Some of it is annoying. But some of it is very gratifying. One of the little squabbles, for example, is whether a quota for Hawaii shall be written into the bill. The Hawaiian interests, always powerful, want it. They want that protection and they do not like the attitude of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace at all. Wallace marked down the estimate he gave the President for Hawaii. It was the only one he did mark down.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes rushed in to the defense of Hawaii. He wants Hawaii given a fixed quota in the law. While he did not say so, it was obvious that he did not want to trust the Hawaiian sugar growers to the tender mercies of Secretary Wallace.

Ickes vs. Wallace

Thus Ickes, so recently the champion of the Philippines on coconut oil, turns on the Filipinos en masse, for the Philippine representatives here are fighting against this protection for Hawaii as though against a plague. In fact, the two island groups are the chief opponents, though, of course, the best sugar interests for once in their lives are in alliance with the Cuban interests in preventing Hawaii's getting any advantage. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say they joined with the Philippines in trying to force Hawaii to take first a reduction and then a larger than proportionate share of the risk.

Wallace, who so recently rapped the beet sugar people over the knuckles, intimating that beet sugar was one agricultural industry which had little justification, is now fighting for the beet interests and against Hawaii.

All of which indicates the possibilities for otherwise disinterested senators. They discovered, many of them, a host of new supporters in their states, men whose business or social ties draw them to the Philippine interests or the Hawaiian, as the case may be. The truth is the situation is getting so much out into the open that it may easily develop into a scandal if certain operatives are not very careful, despite the recent object lessons of the danger of playing with that kind of fire.

Sounding the Public

Questions as to what is the real feeling at the moment toward the administration have been broadcast by inquiries sent all over the country by the writer in the last few weeks.

It is never easy to take a cross section and boil it down to a few paragraphs, and the mere statement of all the opinions received, while it might make interesting reading, would not be of much value, for it would be necessary to use too many words to explain why each person was interesting or apt to have good judgment, and particularly how the writer knew that particular person's judgment was good.

But here is the result of all the inquiries and answers:

1. The President is still tremendously strong—not so strong as he was six months ago—but probably stronger than he was on election day.

2. From present indications the Democrats will at least hold their own in the senate in the election this fall, which means maintenance of a huge majority.

3. The Democratic majority in the house will be cut sharply, probably not less than 75 seats, but certainly not enough to endanger Democratic control of the lower house.

4. Part of the reaction against the President is due to the improvement in business and employment, the point being that there is no longer the horrible fear, and the desire to try any remedy, so the patient is now querulous about the taste of the medicine.

5. Most of the so-called reaction is against the brain trust and its radical ideas rather than against the President himself. At least this is the spoken word as reported. Which means, of little, because that is always the way. "Loyalty lies only to the king—not to the king's ministers."

Agree on One Point

One point about which nearly all the answers agree is that while there has been an ebb tide in Roosevelt's strength in the last few months, it is an ebb from the peak of the flood, which was not attained at election time, despite the size of the landslide, but many months after inauguration. No one with whom the writer has talked, or from whom he has had written answers, ventured to say that the present stage of the popularity barometer was actually down to the election point! It may be, but no one seemed sure of it.

The point is made that the Roosevelt landslide was not a vote for Roosevelt, pro or con, against Hoover. This obvious fact, which so many is discussing the present situation overlook, though they knew it perfectly well at the time, makes any attempt at computation far more difficult. It prevents the 1932 election returns from being an accurate barometer reading on Roosevelt's strength.

However, there is no doubt that with his tours of the country and his many speeches in the campaign Roosevelt won a great deal of popular support. He was tremendously stronger on election day than the day he was nominated. He continued to grow in popularity until some mystical date when the surged individualists—always resenting the methods by which improvement was being brought about, though not knowing what else they would have done to solve the problem—came to the conclusion that no more governmental aid or interference was needed.

Did Anybody Ask? To the Grave, or Garage? No Suicide Necessary Deadly Gas Guards Gold

Uncle Sam nearly succeeded in taking his hundred and eleven warships through the Panama canal from the Pacific to the Atlantic ocean in 24 hours. All commercial traffic was barred, soldiers guarded the locks, standing as solemn as penguins on either side. It was beautifully done, credit to all concerned.

But—did anybody in Washington ask himself what would have happened if 25 or 30 enemy bombing planes had appeared, floating over the canal, while our valuable warships were passing through? What would have happened to those ships, to the canal, to the locks, to the comical little soldiers, with their guns and bayonets, standing along the edge of the water?

In California, a dog, technically and effectually killed in the laboratory of Doctor Robert Cornish ten days ago, shows signs of life, blinking its eyes in the light and twitching muscles when a fly lights on its nose.

This experiment may become important to human beings. Thousands die because of some little stoppage, that might have been prevented or corrected, just as an automobile stops sometimes because of an obstruction in the pipe feeding gas to the carburetor.

Under such conditions, the men have been taken to the graveyard. Doctor Cornish may find a way to overcome such temporary, unnecessary "deaths."

This applies especially to the human heart, that supplies life while it pumps, and brings death when it stops. In millions of cases, undoubtedly, a temporary stoppage might have been overcome and life indefinitely prolonged.

Mr. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, tells Nebraska farmers plans are necessary to "prevent the suicide of society." It is as well to have public officials view conditions solemnly, but they are not quite as bad as that. This country has more of everything than it needs, more than enough for everybody. Its problem is not plague, famine or war, killing millions, but too much wheat, too much cotton, too many little fat pinkish pigs born every minute. A nation or individual with too much of everything, but unfortunately just too stupid to arrange adequate distribution, need not necessarily commit suicide.

In September Uncle Sam will have finished building a new, huge "burglar proof" vault big enough to hold all the gold, silver, plate, silver and other valuables. The vault doors, of the toughest metal, 30 inches thick, are not the only protection. If a burglar succeeded in getting half-way through the metal door, he would release a cloud of deadly gas in which he would die in horrible agony.

The American College of Physicians heard Doctor Meakins of Montreal promise that within 50 years any man willing to "use his intelligence and will power" may live 100 years. Fifty years ago the average human being was through with life at forty. Today's average is beyond sixty. Doctor Meakins' promise of "a century of vital, energetic life for every member of the human race" is encouraging. The wise would want to be guaranteed to live "vital, energetic" part. Nothing sadder than to live merely for the sake of living.

"Four flee from Indiana prison. Three serving terms for murder [illegible] cell breakers."

That is not news. The system of justice that catches criminals and lets them go, can't build a jail to hold them, is now generally accepted as a farce.

We build sociological garden cages that hold elephants, rhinoceroses, lions, tigers, bears. They don't escape. But that is easily explained. Rhinoceroses and elephants don't know how to bribe keepers. The "public Dillinger" did not escape with the aid of a toy pistol.

At Blackwell, Okla., Rev. C. Dr. Pool, sixty, retired Methodist minister, returned to the pulpit to preach a revival sermon, taking his eyes he asked, "What is heaven like?" fell and died of a heart attack. His question, doubtless, was answered within the minute.

The senate judiciary committee approves the birth control bill, which declares, in substance, that it is no crime for a woman not to have a baby, if she does not want one, and no crime to tell her how to avoid it.

Some object to birth control on religious grounds, declaring that it opposes the will of God. Others object to it on grounds of utility. Caruso was the nineteenth child. Many of the world's greatest men and women have been members of big families, and never would have been born, under birth control, probably.

She stumbled forward those last few steps, knees weak with misgiving when Franz, pistol in one hand, brief case in the other, stepped over the prostrate form of the old man he came face to face with her.

"You . . ." she moaned. "You hot him! You killed him! You'll answer for it! I heard everything! I was just outside."

For an instant Franz stared at her. Then an odd smile crossed his face, he shoved the pistol into his holster against his side and he wet his lips.

"Yes, you heard. But, you see, you are here alone," he said simply and the quality of his tone was ominous. "And with you gone? What then? Who would know?"

Behind him Tim Todd closed one hand. From his chest a dark stain was spreading on the floor boards.

"You mean, you'd shoot me down, too? Because I know?"

Franz laughed mockingly, and tucked the brief case under one arm.

"No," he said, and stepped closer. "It isn't pleasant business, I've discovered." A slight shudder traveled his big body. "I wouldn't harm a hair of your head, Kate . . . unless it became necessary." He licked his lips again; the lights in his eyes were shifting and changing as he planned a way out for himself. "I didn't intend to steal; I didn't want to kill. I wanted to block your deal with MacDonald, only, but"—with a shrug—"things broke badly. With the breaks going against you, you do the best you can. So, with you, there are things to be done."

"What things?" she whispered, alarmed for her own safety, now.

"You are alone. When you go, there will be none to know what happened."

"No, no. You can't do that!"

"I can't? His!" He snuggled the brief case closer against his side. "What's in here, and liberty, are all I have left." He caught her hand as she started to turn away. "I can use them both, seeing that they're all I own.

"We'll start, now; just you and I. We'll be together long enough so I'll be sure I've a start. And then . . . we'll cross that bridge when we reach it."

She commenced to struggle in his grasp, twisting her arm to free it, kicking out with her small feet. But her efforts were futile. Franz dropped the brief case, turned her roughly about, pulled her hands together behind her and bound them securely.

"Oh, help!" she screamed. "Help, Help—"

His palm cut off her words.

"No one near," he reminded her. "However, there might be a little later. We will take no chances."

The bandage she had torn from her eyes hung loosely about her neck. He put one arm about her head, drawing it tightly against his breast, and with quick movements slipped the gauze across her lips, twisted a knot at the nape of her neck and then held her at arm's length, bound and gagged.

Kate made inarticulate, raging sounds, but he paid them no heed. Lifting her in his arms, with only one look behind at old Tim's form, he walked quickly out to his canoe, and laid her gently in the bottom with the duffle.

He headed up the lake to where the smoke shroud, now hanging low in the heavier air of approaching evening, obscured all landmarks.

Back in the store old Tim had rolled over. He tried to rise and could not; tried to crawl and could not so much as get his knees up. So, slowly, at the cost of infinite pain, he hitched himself along halfway to the open door. He saw the canoe making northward; he tried to call out. His face dropped again to the planks and he moaned twice and was still.

* * * * * * *

Steve Drake stood aside as the other men clustered about Young Jim Flynn, the men he had saved from probable death and the others whose hearts he had won by that achievement.

LaFane approached him, that grim smile playing about his lips.

"Broken, would you say?"

"Lord, no! Made!" Steve replied. "He's got the boys with him from the start!"

"And he'll keep 'em. He's wound on grand stuff. No need of your fearing to let 'em know who you are, now."

Drake experienced an odd letdown on this. The Polaris property was safe, with Kate's arrival; Young Jim was finally on the job, capable, competent and his courage had been spectacularly demonstrated. There was no longer any reason for him to use another's name; no longer cause to be reluctant to reveal to Kate Flynn the facts of his pretense. The twin goals for which he had struggled seemed to have been attained.

He drew a slow breath as he thought of the girl. She was more lovely than he had believed. The feel of her lips had stirred in him all manner of incredible impulses. The impression of a girl which he had built up for himself in those past weeks was a feeble thing compared to her reality.

Evening was at hand. The fire was under control. Already Wartin was preparing for the night's work; Steve beckoned to him.

"You told me where she started. Got any idea how?"

The man pursed his lips and shook his head.

"Must be a bug fire."

"What makes you think that?"

"Well, she come up over on the southwest of twenty-four. We've had no men over there all summer. There ain't any berries in that country so there wouldn't be any Injuns there lookin' for fruit. Nobody would be going through that particular country gettin' from one river to the other because there's better ways."

"Who'd have a reason? That we know, I mean? What's in your head?"

"Well, you're just about cleaned up on Franz. When you got here he was sittin' in the 'golden calf.' You've made a monkey out of him since. He ain't quit the country and he ain't the kind to forgive. If I was to want to nab the man who started this fire I'd begin right now checkin' up on where Mr. Franz esquire was at this forenoon."

A crawly premonition ran through Steve. The future of Polaris lay between the folds of a heavy brief case back there at headquarters, protected only by an old, crippled man and a temporarily blinded girl. This fact assumed ominous proportions although he tried to laugh at himself.

Why, Franz could not know that the money had arrived, he argued silently as Wartin talked on about plans for the night; but in the next breath he was remembering that the man had been present when MacDonald dictated his terms and would know that any representative of the Flynns arriving now would bring currency.

He called LaFane to one side.

"I'm dropping back to headquarters just to have a look," he said. "I'll take a canoe because Wartin may need the boats for supplies. Just tell Young Jim to sit tight until I get back. When the boys are told what we three know, we should all be together."

"Right."

Dusk was falling as Steve landed. A silence hung over headquarters which seemed weighted with import as he stepped to the sand. He stood still a moment, listening, and then called sharply:

"Hi, Tim! . . . You, Tim!"

No answer, and again a premonition of trouble went crawling along his spine. He called again; still no response.

He could see that the door of the store was open and, stopping only to take an electric flash-light from his jacket in the canoe, walked swiftly toward it.

Then he called sharply from the steps, that premonition more pronounced. "Tim!"

A faint, faint sound rewarded him: a scraping on the floor, a husky gasp.

He stopped within, snapping on the beam of his torch. He halted with a sharp oath at sight of the figure sprawled there.

"Tim!" he cried. "Tim, what happened?"

"Franz," the old fellow gasped. "Franz . . . shot me . . . took the . . . money. . . ."

Words died to bubblings in his throat as he struggled valiantly for the breath to speak.

"Franz!" Steve echoed. "He shot you down, Tim?"

"Yes."—a faint whisper.

The light Steve held on Tim's face revealed the heroic struggle he made for strength to speak further.

One of the old hands, cold as ice now, gripped his wrist.

"I'm dusted . . . Jimmy. . . . It's . . . it's money . . . —and . . ." He was struggling against the darkness which closed over his mind, clinging to that remnant of consciousness that remained, fighting to keep mind and voice functioning until he had done the thing that he alone could do. "Money," he mumbled as Drake tried to ease his posture. "Money. . . . He took it . . . and shot me . . . and Katie . . ."

"Kate? Shot Kate?"

Steve's voice sounded like a woman's, so drawn by panic.

"Didn't shoot . . . her . . . She heard . . . Saw him dust me. . . . He took her . . . tied her up. . . . Had canoe . . . and outfit. . . . Took her north. . . . Up lake. . . . Said he'd . . . he'll be . . . just h—l . . ."

Steve's moan was thick and heavy. His mouth was dry; his heart flailed his ribs.

The old man's eyes were closing. He had lived to tell this, which he alone could tell. His chin sank to his breast; he seemed to settle almost comfortably in the strong arms which held him. He had done all that he could possibly do. Now, he wanted rest.

But Drake could not let him rest.

"When, Tim?" he asked quickly. "How long ago? When did he go? How long ago was it Franz took Katie away?"

The suggestion of a frown crossed the graying face. Old Tim drew a slow, labored breath.

"Just . . ." he began and his chest collapsed and as the last of the breath slipped from his torn and fortured lungs it carried the long-drawn whisper: "No-o-w-w." The word was faint, but unmistakable.

Tim lay wholly inert in Drake's arms. The old heart had fluttered its last. Trying to be true to his trust, to function until he had discharged his duty, Tim had failed. So much had happened of treachery and pain in these last hours that it seemed to him as though Franz had only just departed, bearing Kate as a hostage.

"Just," he had said; and then, after that last pause he was ever to make in speaking: "Now."

He was dead, slain in the service of the Flynns, but this was no hour to give way to regrets, to be concerned with the dead. One tragedy had ended and nothing beneath the stars could undo it, and another was in the making that very moment, perhaps, and a fear such as Steve had never known possessed him.

He went quickly to the far end of the room and took down a rifle from its resting place on a set of antlers. It was loaded. He slipped more ammunition into his pocket and ran out, closing the door behind him.

He strained his eyes up the lake to where the first stars struggled to show through the edge of the smoke haze. Franz and Kate must be somewhere not so far off, heading for the upper river and the big country to which it gave access.

As he launched the canoe his only thought was swift pursuit. No idea that old Tim might have been mistaken in what he had told entered his mind. He felt that they were out there on the lake, almost within sight, perhaps still within the distance that ordinary sounds of travel might carry.

In the beginning the evening air was clear and he could see fairly well. But no craft, no movement, no suspicious shadow rewarded his vigilance. He stopped paddling now and again to listen. With an outfit and Kate in his canoe the fugitive would be unable to make much speed. The thing to be done then, Steve reasoned, was to get ahead of him up into the river beyond the smoke where he could lie in wait.

He approached the northern end of the lake. He was tempted to cut across to common help, to call the entire crew off the fire which was a menace only to property and turn them out to head off the scourge which threatened such a precious thing as Kate Flynn.

And yet that would take time and Kate was Franz's prisoner and he knew he was capable of effecting rescue alone once he could locate that other canoe. His eagerness, his anxiety, therefore, upset his usually good judgment.

He could not sit still. If he had miscalculated, if old Tim had been wrong about the time of Franz's departure, they might be still beyond him. The wood camp was not far away; he would go that far, anyway. . . .

A solitary window gleamed yellow as he rounded the bend below the dump, and he called, "You, Francois? On the jump!"

It was the French-Canadian with a crippled foot who had given Steve his directions the evening that he arrived at Good-Bye. His crutches were discarded now, and he hobbled with only the aid of a cane.

"Francois, you been here all day?"

"Oui! Dat foot, she hurt lak h—l so—"

"Seen anybody going up the river?"

"Sure; oui. Wan man, Franz, she go up rivair long tamm—"

"Alone, Francois? Was he alone?"

He grasped the man's arm and shook it.

"Oui! She got canoe all load wit' henvy."

"Henvy packs, eh? Lots of grub?"

"Oui, oui!" The man nodded. "Lo's stuff, Yo'ng Jeem."

"How long 'go was it, Francois?"

"Oh, mabby seex hour, mabby four hour. After—"

"Good Lord, are you sure? Why that can't be!"

"Oui. Mabby she can't be, but she so. De sun, she stan' op in sky all red lank coal."

Steve brushed past the man and stepped into his shanty.

With the stub of a pencil he scrawled a hasty note:

"Franz killed Tim, took the money and forced Kate to go with him. Is headed up the river with a long start and I'm going my best. Send plenty of help on my trail and in a hurry. Not for me, understand, but Kate may need it."

"There," he muttered. "Now, Francois, you've got to get this note to McNally somehow. Franz killed Tim Todd and stole money from Old Jim. Understand? If you take a long time getting this to McNally you're likely to sizzle in h—l for it!"

And leaving the bewildered chopper duly impressed, he ran down to the river and began paddling up the current, believing that a man planning a get-away would take the first portage into the Mad Woman.

CHAPTER X

ON HER back in the canoe bottom Kate Flynn was transported up the lake.

Until they were well into the smoke Franz did not speak. Then he said:

"Quite different, my dear, from a trip Jid once planned to take with you!" He laughed dryly. "That was . . . another year." His mouth twisted oddly, as though he were drowning futile regrets. "I loved you, Kate. Maybe I still do . . . maybe. . . . With twenty-five thousand dollars and you . . ."

Not by so much as the flicker of a lid did the girl indicate that she gave heed, but her heart was in tumult.

Franz paddled steadily and after darkness had fallen guided his canoe against the bank and stepped out.

He helped Kate to a sitting posture and then to her feet. She was stiff and lame from her long confinement and swayed as if she might fall. He held her in his strong hands, peering close into her face with the bandage across her mouth.

OPENING CHAPTERS OF THE STORY

Stephen Drake, with his four-year-old son, is rescued from a blizzard by Jim Flynn, big timber operator, whom Drake has robbed. Flynn gives Drake another chance, and the latter, with the death impression on the boy, Steve, the debt they owe "Old Jim." Twenty years later, Steve meets "Young Jim" Flynn, his benefactor's son. Sent by Old Jim, incapacitated in an accident in which Kate, his daughter, is temporarily blinded, to take charge of the company's—the Polaris—woods operations, the youth is indulging in a drunken spree. Learning of Polaris' dire straits, and hoping to do something for Old Jim, Steve hastens to the company's headquarters. Worsting Franz, a plotter against the Flynn interests, in a fist fight, the Polaris crew assumes that Steve is Flynn's son, and he takes charge, as "Young Jim." A photograph of Kate Flynn, which Steve finds, immensely increases his desire to aid Old Jim. He gains the warm friendship of Dirk Fane, queer woods scout. Drake plans a death trap set for him. Franz discovers Drake's impersonation. Threatened with disclosure, Steve accuses Franz of setting the death trap, exhibiting evidence. Franz sends LaFane to find Young Jim and Young Jim and sober him up. Steve wins the friendship of MacDonald, owner of timber land the Flynns need, and the Scotsman gives him an option for Polaris timber. Knowing of the option, and wanting the timber for a rival company, Franz plans to put Steve out of the way, but the latter outwits him. Franz, believing Steve dead and drowned, secures another option and records it, learning then that Steve is alive. Knowing Drake has wired Kate, he steals her reply and learns that $25,000 is to be forwarded. Franz, in the time of this arrival, and plans to steal the money. Drake arrives at the camp. Her eyes are bandaged, and before Steve has to betray himself by speech a forest fire alarm is sounded. Drake hastens to take charge of the fire fighters. LaFane arrives with Young Jim. Flynn distinguishes himself, winning the regard of the crew. Kate instinctively knows it was not her brother who had greeted her. Franz, having fired the woods, to draw off the crew, comes to steal the money Kate had brought. He secures it, but old Tim Todd catches him in the act, and he shoots the old man.

By ED HOWE

WHAT the people are really trying to achieve is for every day to be the Fourth of July, Christmas, Labor day, Washington's birthday, Sunday, Mother's day, New Year's day—holidays merging into each other; every morning's sun to light up a new day when we will have nothing to do but get into our cars and attend a picnic, liberty rally, or show. Of course, a few must work, to operate filling stations, hot dog stands and the like. That can be attended to by making slaves of the rich we capture and putting them to work.

The excuse for public extravagance in the United States is that only the well-to-do pay taxes, and that taxation is the quick and proper punishment for scoundrels. . . .

If the reader will call on me I will show him the poorest man I have ever known. He lost his home lately through a tax sale after paying $836 in taxes on it during a long and struggling ownership. He had eight lots. They were assessed at $100 each, although he originally paid only $80 for all of them; at no time during his ownership were the lots worth half the amount at which they were assessed year after year.

I do not know how much longer I shall be here. I have a shorter expectation than many others, being older, but I am determined while here to pursue the course best calculated to produce most comfort.

I am still able to keep my hands out of the fire and prevent unnecessary and painful burns; I am still able to avoid shooting those of my neighbors with whom I disagree, or breaking into their houses. Such actions would lead me in jail where accommodations are poor; I can better afford to practice honesty and remain at home with all its natural discomforts. I hope to continue to the end to avoid other bad habits which do not pay; gormandizing, swearing, drunkenness, cheating, idleness.

I do not much fear punishment after I am dead, but have lively appreciation of the punishment threatening during the remaining days of my pilgrimage.

If I am extremely practical it is what life has taught me; I have encountered nothing to cause me to greatly respect visionary things.

In the old days, when there was a disaster at sea, the women and children were first given seats in the life boats (it has never made much difference what happened to men). Moderns are forgetting that gallantry. In Iowa mobs of armed farmers blocked the roads and would not let milk wagons pass on the way to town with necessary supplies for the women and children. There were plenty of food supplies in the country, town people were willing to pay for them, and farmers needed the money, but the farmers were mad and determined to starve women and children to show their indignation.

We are becoming worse than the Russians. The Russian peasants have been willing to sell food supplies to town women and children, if paid for; the Russian town men went out into the country and took things before the peasants rebelled.

I believe the American farmers should rebel, but in the name of common sense why don't they jump on the politicians who have robbed them, instead of innocent women and children?

God hasn't deserted us; it is our senses.

The Russians, in enjoyment of perfect freedom to act without interference from capitalists, have not done very well; their average comfort is probably lower than in any other country in the world. . . . So I do not believe the capitalistic system is as great a scourge as has been charged by radicals ever since I can remember. Even now, when we are in our deepest slough of despondency, we are doing far better on an average than the Russians; no radical writer has returned from that country with a different story. . . . The Russian experiment is founded on a book, not on human experience, and nations have never been well managed by books.

We human creatures are said to be the lowest animals in point of things. The greatest of our tiny ambitions should be to make the most creditable history possible for future professors to write about. Will readers who consider us a thousand or a million years in the future say we did reasonably well, or will they say we played the game badly? In the distant future a man may find your skull, and carry it to colleges, museums and laboratories for examination. What will the professors say thousands of years in the future of the 1934 man? Will they speak as well of us as our professors now speak of the old Greeks?

ENDURING SENTIMENT

I HAVE been given permission to print this especially touching letter from a man:

"Dear Mrs. Post—I lost my beloved wife a year ago. The tragedy of this separation of two people who for nearly thirty years were so happy to be together, is just something that only those who are struggling to endure this same aching loneliness can know. Lately I have gotten a great deal of comfort in an idea that may, or may not, be my own; at any rate it was new to me so far as my ever having heard about it was concerned.

"My wife and I were married with the double ring ceremony. And when she died her wedding band was never taken from her finger. A few months ago it occurred to me to take her engagement ring with my own wedding band to the jeweler and ask him whether he could build up the top of my ring so that it would sink the diamond of her ring into it, without changing the under half of my ring or obliterating the engraving of our names. He said he could by melting a little more gold at the top of my band, which he did, and the post-setting looks like a conventional gypsy hoop and is not a clumsy or obvious one.

"A friend of mine told me that I was selfish to use the stone, especially as I had the gold brought over the edge to make it look smaller. My friend says it should be given to our son for him to give to his future wife, but he has no present intention of marrying and I am getting a real consolation in having something that she always wore and held dear, constantly close to me. It is not too late to pass the ring on to my son even now, or later, and he can have all the other jewels that his mother had any time he wants them.

"Am I just a silly sentimentalist, or do you think that this same plan would give other lonely widowers the real comfort that it gives me? It was not just a diamond to her, and I could not bear to leave it in hiding when I had looked at it for all those years in its rightful place on her hand. Perhaps if you haven't heard of the plan, you might want to print it with your answers for the benefit of some other sentimental reader—if there might be one."

In answer I want to say that of course I can understand how you feel and I think it is a beautiful idea that is likely to bring a little warmth of comfort not only to one, but to many. In no possible sense are you foolish. As for sentiment—what is beauty of life without it?

WRITING MATERIALS

WRITING Paper for Men: Good taste exacts that stationery for all men be very conservative. Color of writing paper: White, cream, the deeper shades of blue, or any of the grayish mixtures known as granite. (Plain gray is better for an older man than for a young one.) Smartest style of paper: Either bond or Irish linen or granite. Any plain paper with cut edges, proper. Size: Large rather than small. Size: Double sheet 5½ by 8½ inches in best taste. Single sheets slightly larger. Unlined envelopes with plainest flap. Stamping: Address or block initials, or full name and address. (Mr. is never included under any circumstances.) A man's business address is put on the face of the envelope rather than on the flap. Personal paper has the address (if any) across the flap. Color of stamping (or printing): black or blue or gray or brick red. Ink: Blue or black.

Writing Paper for Women: White, cream, all blues, grays and mauves. Very pale powder pink bond paper is just on the edge of possibility but to be avoided by the unknowing. I wish I might approve of green but I really can't. Size: Very small or medium large, single or double sheets. Very smart is the double sheet of paper that fits without further folding into a big envelope. Texture of paper unlimited, but cut edges are more convenient than rough. Any colored border fashionable—even green or red—if it be very narrow, but gilt or silver edges tabu. Stamping: Monogram, initials or address in color to match the border. A girl's name—either "Mary Smith" in full or "Mary," embossed in color, is popular for a young girl when writing to her own friends. On paper for social use the address without the name is proper on the flap of the envelope as well as on the paper—or if the monogram or name is stamped on paper, the address is often put across the flap of the envelope. Envelope lined with plain tissue to match the color of the stamping (and border) or no lining. Avoid violently patterned envelope linings except for Christmas cards. Ink: Black, neutral tint, blue, violet. (Green and red are tabu).

For Impersonal or Business Letters: Printed name in full prefixed by "Mrs." or "Miss" is proper. And this same complete name with address on the envelope flap.

Sportsmen in Move to "Restore" Wild Turkey

Keeping wild turkeys wild is the object of an experiment in southern Illinois, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Under the supervision of the state department of conservation, a group of 100 birds has been placed on an island so that human contacts may be eliminated. The final result, the department hopes, will be restoration of the game turkey, bringing with it more sport for hunters.

The decision to isolate the birds was reached after efforts to raise wild turkeys on a state forest preserve failed because of the tendency of the bird to become domesticated. In other efforts of this kind, the turkeys multiplied rapidly but failed to develop a wild wildness. Efforts to put them on their own by taking them several miles from human contact were balked when the birds took to the air and flew back to feeding stations before the preserve workmen could return.

Eighty million pounds of sugar is a "right smart lot of short sweetnin." That is the quantity produced by the sugar company down at Clewiston since last November. Twenty-thousand acres of cane were cut—and there are millions of acres of the same kind of lands waiting to produce sugar at the touch of capital.

After a winter of record breaking cold in the North, heat of such intensity as to endanger crops and to cause at least one death, has been experienced thus early in May. Here in Florida we had a winter of almost unbroken mildness, and May thus far has been most delightful. Florida is the place to live.

The crop of suckers never fails. Edwin Young Clarke and his wife were convicted of fraud at Jacksonville the other day. They had sold $755,000 worth of certificates in a fraternal organization they called "the Esskaye, Inc.," and those who put up the money testified they received nothing for it. Clarke was a national officer in the Ku Klux Klan until pay dirt from that source began to pan out poorly.

A recent article by Russell Kay brings us great mental relief. As everybody knows the government has been advancing tremendous sums of money for farm relief and what not. We had the idea that somebody would have to pay this money back some time—we tried not to think about this, but occasionally the thought would intrude. Now Mr. Kay makes us happy and clears away all the clouds with the statement that nobody will have to pay back the money—it will pay itself back. "Momentum," "added values" and 'new wealth," Mr. Kay assures us, will turn the trick, and the loans will be self-liquidating. We trust this optimistic outlook includes our personal obligations, too. Self-addressed, stamped envelope enclosed, Russell, and please advise us where, when and how we can get a moderate supply of this here, now, "momentum."

Two of our county contemporaries are engaging in what seems to us a silly argument over the political "boss"—if any—of the county. There is no surer way to build up one than to feed him with newspaper publicity.

Edison is gone but important inventions on which he worked are still developing. Experiments indicate the possibility of producing an adequate supply of rubber from the common goldenrod in such an emergency as the country being cut off by war or other causes from tropical sources of supply. The golden rod used in these experiments is grown in Florida which supplies the type best adapted to rubber production.

—o—

This is the time of year when many fine young men and women are stepping out from the sheltered shades of scholastic life to enter the world of business and industry. They will be told there are no places for them—that in the present scheme of things they have no chance. We trust they will disregard such pessimistic croakings. There is a chance in the world—a big chance—for young people who base their lives on the old-time fundamentals of honesty, industry and thrift, and who are energetic and resourceful. There is little chance for those who pause to listen to the preachments of discontent, or wild theories that the experience of the ages has proven unsound. There will be no place for those who wait for others to make a place for them. There are people who would die of thirst while drifting down a river of pure water—they would not have initiative or aggressiveness enough to reach down and dip up a drink. It is true that these are times when opportunity does not seem to be seeking the man—but that does not mean that intelligent search may not disclose opportunity. And one other injunction, which though it may not sound a popular note may be useful: "Do not hate successful people—try to be one of them."

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

I have been readin' in the Ft. Myers News-Press about a fellow down at Clewiston who has gone Communist or Bolsheviki or somethin' and is actually makin' a lot of money on a 20-acre farm.

The amazin' thing is that he seems to be doin' it all by himself. He hasn't asked his Congressman for free seeds, won't mess up with the NRA or AAA, doesn't seem to be interested in Federal Aid, and hasn't written Mr. Wallace about Farm Relief.

As nearly as I am able to find out, this queer egg seems to have the unusual idea that while it's his duty to support the government, he's got no business askin' the government to support him.

Imagine a guy with such crazy ideas in this day and age. First thing you know some investigator will have him on the list as Public Enemy number so and so. There ought to be a law against a fellow cuttin' up and carryin' on like that.

Why even the stuff he's growin' is against the rules. Rhubarb, imagine, why everybody knows you can't grow rhubarb successfully in Florida, anyhow not commercially. Agricultural experts decided that a long time ago. But this fellow down in Clewiston went right ahead and did it anyhow.

He not only has twenty acres of rhubarb under cultivation, but he's sellin' it. That's another outrageous thing. A farmer growin' a crop is bad enough, but when he goes so far as to actually sell it ,the matter certainly ought to be looked into.

About the time all the rest of the farmers were busy plowin' up every third row, this chap decided to let 'em play around with their cabbages and tomatoes while he found somethin' that the market wasn't flooded with, so he went haywire and planted a mess of rhubarb.

Some folks felt downright sorry for him and others wanted to send him to Chattahoochee. The rhubarb was helpless when it got mixed up with that rich Clewiston muck. It just couldn't do a thing but grow, and boy, how it grew. The harvest was 20 tons to the acre.

The grower learned that the price in New York for fresh rhubarb was anywhere from 17 to 60 cents a pound durin' the winter months and by hittin' the market in December and January a fellow was pretty sure of at least 25 cents a pound. He got out a pencil and paper and did some figurin' and found that with 20 acres, and 20 tons to the acre, the answer was a whole helluva lot of money at 25 cents a pound.

A lot of rhubarb in the ground at Clewiston and a 25 cent market in New York presented a problem in geography but Mr. E. S. Keppler was the kind of a guy who could make ends meet. He had this rhubarb business by the tail and he wouldn't let go. He loaded 5,000 pounds on a truck and sent his son north with it. He got busy and did local peddlin'.

New York took that rhubarb with open arms and yelled for more. The local markets did the same. Mr. Keppler was able to pay off the mortgage, get a new car with knee-action wheels, buy mama an electric refrigerator and have enough left over to insure an ear to ear smile from his banker every time they happen to meet on the street.

If everybody goes into the rhubarb business it won't be long, of course, until they'll be plowin' that up along with everything else, so here's hopin' the folks down there will use some judgement.

There are many other crops that offer just as great an opportunity for profit if growers will use their heads and do a little experimentin' and pioneerin'. You'll always find someone to tell you this or that can't be done but the fellow who goes ahead and does it anyhow will win. Florida needs a few more guys like Mr. Keppler of Clewiston.

TWENTY-EIGHT SEEK TEN STATE OFFICES

Some Candidates Without Opposition In Primary; No Republicans Qualify

Tallahassee, May 9.—(FNS)—Information released from the office of the Secretary of State, Robert A. Gray reveals that 28 qualified candidates seek the 10 state-wide and congressional offices to be filled in the June Democratic primaries.

No republican candidates have qualified for office. The Democratic nomination, therefore, will be equivalent to election.

Justices Armstead Brown and Fred H. Davis of the Supreme Court are unopposed for re-election.

W. J. Sears, congressman-at-large is also without opposition.

Senator Park Trammell, seeking another term as Florida's junior Senator is opposed by Charles A. Mitchell of Vero Beach, Claude Pepper of Tallahassee, James F. Sikes of St. Petersburg and Mrs. Hortense Wells of Tampa.

Qualified candidates for the State Railroad Commission in Group One are Eugene Matthews of Starke, seeking re-election, George S. Davis of Palatka, William J. Placie of Tampa and Lester Wells of Tallahassee.

Mrs. Mamie Eaton-Greene, seeking re-election to the Railroad Commission in Group Two, is opposed by Herbert P. Caro of Pensacola, Jerry W. Carter of Tallahassee, Good Good of Orlando, John W. Newberrn of High Springs, and William J. Pruitt of Miami.

Randolph Calhoun of Sarasota and W. E. Hall of Leesburg are running against J. Hardin Peterson, the incumbent, in the First Congressional District.

Representative Ruth Ena. Green of Starke, seeking re-election has two candidates as opponents in the Second District. James R. Kelly of Madison and Wallace Sturgis of Ocala are the qualified candidates.

Millard Caldwell of Milton, representing the Third Congressional District is unopposed for re-nomination.

Major Paul Crank of Orlando and Mrs. Bula E. Ocker of West Palm Beach are opposing Representative Mark Wilcox in the Fourth Congressional District.

Go ahead and do it—it's easier to succeed than explain why you didn't.

Dr. Kellogg Praises Healthfulness of Florida Fruits

Orlando, May 9.—(FNS)—Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, head of the famous Battle Creek sanitarium, addressing the Florida State Horticultural Society, paid tribute to the health value of Florida citrus and other tropical fruits.

"Citrus fruit has saved more human lives than any other type of fruit," the noted physician stated.

He predicted that Florida would soon stand out as the most healthful state in the union, through the consumption of its own healthgiving products.

Terming the Avocado the most perfect edible fruit known to science, Dr. Kellogg stated his belief that Florida would some day lead the world in the production of this fruit. He also spoke highly of the paw paw and the papaya as valuable health fruits.

Interesting Meeting of Woman's Club

When the Woman's club met at Highland Lakes hotel last Friday for a luncheon, they had one of the most interesting meetings of the year. The luncheon table was centered with a beautiful arrangement of Easter lillies and blue lace flowers. A delicious three-course luncheon was served.

Mrs. M. V. Pilcher president, presided over the business meeting at which the annual reports of officers and committee chairmen were read.

After the transacting of all business the following program was enjoyed. Mrs. A. J. Knull of Lake Wales sang several solos accompanied by Mrs. Lee Wheeler also of Lake Wales. Mrs. George Chute of Babson Park gave an interesting talk on "Good Citizenship," after which the officers for the coming year were installed. Mrs. Buford Gumm of Lake Wales had charge of the installation ceremony and the following were installed:

Mrs. M. V. Pilcher, president; Mrs. S. E. Booth, first vice-president; Mrs. G. P. Thayer, second vice president; Mrs. G. A. Stebbins, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. R. Ginn, recording secretary; Mrs. Lester Armstrong, treasurer; Mrs. J. B. Coen, Sr., registrar.

Mrs. Gumm addressed the club on "What the Federation Means To Us."

Each one taking part on the program was presented with a pretty bouquet of flowers, by Mrs. E. G. Todd.

There were 34 members of the Avon Park club present and four visitors.

Mrs. Johnston Hostess at Bridge

Mrs. Reuben T. Johnston entertained Thursday at her home in Highland Lakes at a lovely luncheon bridge. The rooms where the four tables were set for play were beautifully decorated with roses, gladioli and other cut flowers in profusion. A delectable luncheon consisting of creamed chicken, salad, ice cream and cake and iced tea was served to the 18 guests present and the hostess.

The trophy for high score was awarded to Mrs. W. H. Yates, Mrs. S. C. Pardee second high, and Mrs. Rogers received low.

K. K. C. Held Meeting Saturday

The second meeting of the K. K. C. was held at the home of Fay Gordon on Saturday, May 5th. A short business meeting was held after which the members adjourned to the kitchen for an enjoyable afternoon of making candy. Unfortunately the candy did not harden. However, all were provided with spoons and it was just as good as if it had hardened.

P. T. A. Has Final Meeting of Season

The final meeting of the Parent Teachers Association was held Thursday afternoon and officers for the coming year were installed as follows: Mrs. Fred Patterson, president; Mrs. Jack Head, vice-president; Mrs. T. A. McNicholas, treasurer and Mrs. T. C. Hobbs, historian. The retiring president, Mrs. Otto Skipper, extended her thanks for the help received during the past year and the new president asked for all cooperation possible and announced a meeting of the executive committee would be held in the near future

A delightful musical program was rendered under the direction of the program chairman, Mrs. Jack Head. Those taking part were Betty Touchton, Martha McNicholas, Sujette Dorminey, and Winifred Hood with a song and Thelma Perry, Minerva Perry, Betty Touchton, Jane Hartt, Francis Cason and Mary Cason in musical numbers.

Prof. R. T. Fairey gave a report on the band's trip to Tampa and reports were heard from the secretary, treasurer and standing committees. The membership chairman, Mrs. W. C. Touchton announced the P. T. A. had received a certificate for meeting the membership requirements for the year.

Sans Souci Club Met on Monday

Misses Elizabeth Atchley, Alma Harrell and Louise Houck were joint hostesses to the Sans Souci bridge club Monday evening at their suite in the Jacaranda hotel. Lovely bouquets of summer flowers were used in decorating.

After several interesting progressions of contract, at which time Miss Eleanor Bryant won the high score prize, the guests enjoyed a treasure hunt. Much fun was had as each one followed a different trail to find at the end an attractive treasure waiting there.

Light refreshments were served to the following: Mrs. Freed Peden, Mrs. R. L. Brown, Mrs. C. R. Ginn, Mrs. Raymond Dilley, Miss Mary Lou St. Clair, Miss Mildred Myers, Miss Eleanor Bryant, Miss Hettie Hundertmark, and Miss Millie Pearson.

Eston Melton Celebrates Birthday

Master Eston Melton celebrated his third birthday anniversary Saturday afternoon by entertaining a few friends on the lawn of the Anchamel apartments.

After a happy afternoon the children were served orange juice, ice cream and cake. The birthday cake was decorated in pink and white with three white candles.

Those present were Virginia Carmichael, Arden Anderson, Betty Jones, Gloria Garber, Buddy Chapin, Yvonne and Skeezix Fulton and Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Jones of Bartow.

Mrs. Chapin Honored at Party

Mrs. L. E. Bass and Mrs. G. P. Thayer delightfully entertained Tuesday at a bridge luncheon honoring Mrs. LeRoy M. Chapin who is leaving soon for Washington, D. C. The party was held at the home of Mrs. Thayer, which was attractively decorated with a variety of spring flowers.

A delicious buffet luncheon was served and places marked by small corsages of everlasting flowers, at the tables arranged on the porch.

After an interesting afternoon of contract, prizes were awarded to Mrs. Jack Head high, and Miss Myrtle Jones, second high. The honoree was presented a lovely gift.

Those present were: Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. C. Parke Anderson, Mrs. Jack Head, Mrs. Paul Garber, Mrs. W. T. Coates, Mrs. Mel Bass, Mrs. Frey, Mrs. H. E. Keller, Mrs. E. F. Carmichael, Mrs. E. U. Youngquist, Mrs. P. L. Rumpsa, Miss Mildred Haney, Mrs. E. E. Melton, Mrs. Louis Peeples, Miss Myrtle Jones of Bartow, and the honoree Mrs. Chapin.

Miss Pearson Honors Guests

Honoring her guests, Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Becton of Orlando, Miss Millie Pearson entertained at bridge Saturday evening in the palm room of the Jacaranda hotel.

A variety of colorful flowers were used in decorating and after several interesting progressions of contract, Miss Mildred Myers and Raymond Dilley received the high score prizes. Mr. and Mrs. Becton were presented a lovely gift.

Light refreshments were served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Ginn, Mr. and Mrs. Freed Peden, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dilley, Mrs. R. L. Brown, Mrs. L. E. Hagood, Miss Mildred Myers, Miss Elizabeth Atchley, R. S. Funderburk, and the honor guests Mr. and Mrs. Becton.

Surprise Party For Mrs. Anderson

On Wednesday evening a few friends of Mrs. C. Parke Anderson helped to celebrate her birthday anniversary by surprising her with a party. Contract bridge was enjoyed on the solarium of the Anchamel apartments and after the games Mr. and Mrs. Paul Garber were awarded the prize for the evening.

Mrs. Anderson was the recipient of lovely gifts from her friends.

The birthday cake with lighted candles was served with ice cream to the following: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jones, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Carmichael, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Garber, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Melton, Mrs. LeRoy M. Chapin and Miss Myrtle Jones.

Monday Club With Mrs. Jones

Mrs. Paul Jones was a charming hostess Monday afternoon when she entertained her bridge club at her home on Durrance street.

The party rooms were decorated with lovely garden flowers and after the games the prize for high score was awarded to Mrs. J. P. Garber.

A dainty salad course was served to the following: Mrs. M. E. Covington, Mrs. A. H. Able, Mrs. J. P. Garber, Mrs. L. M. Chapin, Mrs. W. D. Dorminey, Mrs. S. E. Booth, Mrs. C. P. Anderson, Mrs. D. G. Perry, Mrs. E. F. Carmichael, Mrs. W. T. Coates, Mrs. E. E. Melton and Miss Myrtle Jones of Bartow.

Mrs. Armstrong Hostess to Club

Mrs. Lester Armstrong delightfully entertained the Wednesday Afternoon bridge club at her home on Wednesday.

Roses and other spring flowers were artistically arranged in the party rooms where three tables enjoyed an afternoon of contract.

After the games, Mrs. Roland Droit received the high prize and Mrs. O. C. Wilkes the second high.

A delicious salad course was served to Mesdames J. L. Wells, Joe Bass, R. Droit, J. L. Taylor, C. S. Bell, E. E. Smith, W. E. Dawson, C. L. Johnson, E. P. Lacey, O. C. Wilkes and E. A. Kreis of Tampa.

G. E. Turner of Orlando spent Thursday here as a business visitor.

Auxiliary Well Represented at Conference

At the meeting Sunday, April 29th, of the sixth district American Legion and Auxiliary which was held in Wauchula, Avon Park auxiliary unit was well represented.

The business meeting was held at the Woman's Club house, where later the Auxiliary was joined by the Legionnaires for a social hour with light refreshments.

Those attending from here were Mrs. T. H. Hughs, Mrs. John Hood, Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. L. Marlin, Mrs. C. L. Johnson, Mrs. R. H. Lawhon, Mrs. Virginia Cloud and Mrs. A. R. Clark.

Erle Pabor Has Birthday Party

Master Erle Pabor, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Pabor, celebrated his 10th birthday anniversary Friday evening, by inviting a few of his friends to a theatre party. After seeing the show at the Avon theatre the party went to a drug store where refreshments were served.

Each of the guests remembered Erle with a useful gift.

Those helping to make this a memorable and joyous occasion were Sanford Hartt, Desmond Roberts, Tommy Bryant, Jack Witt, Herbert Todd, Warren and Dale McFarland, Powell Skipper and Harry Elwell.

Baptist, Methodist Brotherhood Meet

The Wesley Brotherhood of the Methodist church and the Baptist Brotherhood held a joint meeting Tuesday evening at the Methodist hut.

A committee of ladies served a bountiful supper which was enjoyed by all.

The speaker on this occasion was Rev. J. W. Rogers who is pastor of the Methodist church in Wauchula. He delivered a very interesting address. Short talks were also given by Rev. W. K. McClure and M. K. Radcliffe.

There were thirty-five present.

"Melody" Film Presents Star Of Air Waves

When the Paramount film, "Melody in Spring," comes on Sunday and Monday to the Avon theatre, fans of radio and the motion pictures will have their first opportunity to see Lanny Ross, the young tenor who has risen to national popularity by his singing on a radio network.

For, "Melody in Spring," with Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland and Ann Sothern marks the screen debut of this handsome chap, recently brought to Hollywood under contract with the Paramount studios.

Norman McLeod directed this picture from the screen play by Benn W. Levy. The original story was written by Frank Leon Smith. It concerns the hilarious adventures that befall an ambitious singer when he attempts to sell himself as a feature on the nation's most popular radio hour.

Charlie Ruggles, married to Mary Boland of course, is a wealthy manufacturer of dog-biscuits, who owns the most popular radio hour. He has a penchant for collecting souvenirs and curios. Ann Sothern, his daughter, falls in love with Ross, but her father isn't so much in favor of the young fellow.

When, however, he learns that Ross has a hobby of climbing mountains, things look brighter, until, through an innocent action on the part of Ross, Ruggles is thrown into jail.

Then amidst laughter and song, romance blossoms.

Girl Scout News

Hello folks: The Scouts had a grand time on their picnics Saturday before last, and take my word for it, there were plenty of "touch-me-not" backs the next day. As it turned out it was too hot for our stew, however, with a nice cool lake to swim in and sandwiches to eat, we made quite a day of it. We had a very nice Scout meeting last Friday night, at which Captain Porter showed a new way of formation, which I think we will continue. We'll see you again next week.

Cagney Coming to Avon Theatre in "Jimmy the Gent"

"Jimmy the Gent," the Warner Bros., picture starring James Cagney, will be the feature attraction at the Avon theatre for a two-day run beginning Thursday.

The picture is based on the hilarious comedy romance by Laird Doyle and Ray Nazarro and concerns two crooks who are both trying to expose the other to impress the girl they both love.

The story unveils in humorous vein the unique racket of heir chasing, that is, the hunting down of lost heirs in order to inherit unclaimed estates. And the two notorious heir chasers, James Cagney and Alan Dinehart, do not stop at bribing persons to act as heirs and coaching them into perjured testimony.

Bette Davis is the feminine lead opposite Cagney and the girl over whom Cagney and Dinehart do battle for her love. Alice White, Allen Jenkins and Mayo Methot are said to supply much of the comedy element although the fast talking and fast acting Jimmy always turns up with his share.

The romantic angle is not neglected and is supplied by two couples, Cagney and Miss Davis and Allen Jenkins and Miss White.

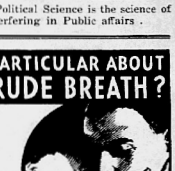

Poppy Is Memorial Flower of The American Legion

The memorial poppy which the women of the American Legion Auxiliary will distribute here on "Poppy Day," Saturday, May 26, will recall vivid pictures to the minds of World War veterans who served overseas, according to R. T. Fairey, commander of Highlands post of the American Legion. The poppies blooming amid the waste and destruction of the battle front, and among the bare graves of the dead, left an unforgotable impression on the American soldiers, he said.

"When the American divisions drove forward in the great offenses of 1918, they entered a region torn, desolated and trampled by the most tremendous battles of history. Destruction and death were everywhere but amid it all the little wild poppies bloomed on. When machine gun and shell fire took its toll from the American ranks, the poppy was nature's floral offering on the graves of the dead. To us those poppies seemed to symbolize the brave spirit of our fallen comrades and when we returned home we made the poppy the memorial flower of The American Legion."

THE SQUEAKY VOICE

"WHO'S that?" Peter Rabbit pricked up his ears and stared up at the tops of the trees in the Old Orchard.

Instantly Jenny Wren popped her head out of her doorway. She cocked her head one side to listen, then looked down at Peter. "I don't hear any strange voice," she snapped. "The way you are staring, Peter Rabbit, one would think you were hearing something new and worth while."

Just then there were two or three sharp, squeaky notes from the top of one of the trees. "There!" cried Peter. "There! Didn't you hear that, Jenny Wren?"

"For goodness sake, Peter Rabbit, you don't mean to say that you don't know whose voice that is?" cried Jenny. "That's Rosebreast. I didn't suppose there was anyone who didn't know that sharp, squeaky voice. It rather gets on my nerves. What anybody wants to squeak like that for when he can sing as Rosebreast can, is more than I can understand."

At that very instant Mr. Wren began to scold as only he and Jenny can. Peter looked up at Jenny and winked slyly. "And what anyone wants to scold like that for when he can sing as Mr. Wren can is too much for me," retorted Peter. "But you haven't told me who Rosebreast is."

"Oh!" Cried Peter. "Isn't He Lovely?"

"The Grosbeak, of course, stupid!" sputtered Jenny. "If you don't know Rosebreast the Grosbeak, Peter Rabbit, you certainly must have been blind and deaf ever since you were born. Listen to that! Just listen to that song!"

Peter listened. That song was coming from the very tree from which had come those squeaky notes a few minutes before. Peter looked puzzled. "Do you mean Welcome Robin's song?" he asked sheepishly.

"No, I don't mean Welcome Robin's song," snapped Jenny. "What good are a pair of long ears if they can't tell one song from another? That song may sound something like Welcome Robin's, but it's different, and it's better. That is Rosebreast singing, and there he is right in the top of that tree. Isn't he handsome?"

Peter looked up to see a bird nearly the size of Welcome Robin. His head, throat, and back were black. His wings had patches of white on them. But his breast made Peter catch his breath with a little gasp of admiration. It was a beautiful rose red. The rest of him underneath was white. It was Rosebreast the Grosbeak.

"Oh!" cried Peter. "Isn't he lovely?"

THROUGH a WOMAN'S EYES
By JEAN NEWTON

COURSES FOR PARENTS

"WELL, of all the presumption! Courses for parents! I'd like to see anybody try to tell me how to take care of my own child." When it comes to a doctor telling you about physical care, that's one thing. But the idea of people who are perfect strangers to your child—and half the time they're men and women who are not even married—telling you how to understand your own child! Why, next they'll try to teach the mother bird how to care for her young!"

I heard a woman say that with reference to the "Courses for Parents" offered by a Child Study association. And I felt sorry for her child.

For to understand, to "take care of" a child, requires first of all a certain breadth of vision and—humility. The last job in the world for the woman who thinks she "knows it all" is the care of a child. Natural arrogance and selfrighteousness are nowhere so dangerous as in association with children, where they are likely to be allowed full sway, unopposed.

True, it is not necessary to teach the mother bird how to care for her young. But the problem of sustaining a young bird until it is able to fly is somewhat less complicated than preparing a child for the problems of human life. The people best equipped for this task, both by gifts of nature and by study and training, are far from confident or arbitrary about it. Rather they are full of humility before the task in which they daily find new wonder and joy as well as new problems.

It is so big a story, all that must go into "course for parents," that it can be no more than suggested here. The first point about it is the recognition that the mere having of children does not necessarily pre-suppose the right equipment for the best and wisest treatment of them. That is an idea that has long ago been disproved. Some parents are naturally experts—if we may use a metallic sounding term on this subject—as well fitted by nature for their work as is the mother bird. Some are not. But all can gain by wise counsel. The wise counsellors may have less opportunity than they themselves for knowing their children, but they can help parents, through their deep study and understanding of human beings and the problems of young human beings—how to interpret what they know of their children in a way that will be infinitely useful to them and beneficial to the children.

NEW DISHES

WITH macaroni, spaghetti and noodles pushing themselves into our menus from soup to dessert, we are obliged to note some new ways of serving these most wholesome foods, if we keep up to date.

Fried Macaroni Slices.

For variety this makes a most tasty breakfast dish, served with broiled slices of bacon. Cook one-half pound of macaroni in salted water until tender. Drain and blanch, add two beaten eggs, one-half teaspoon of salt and one-half cup of milk. Press into a greased pan and bake in a hot oven for an hour. When cold unmold, slice and fry a golden brown.

Spaghetti Alaska.

Cook one-half pound of spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Drain, cut into pieces and chill. Remove the bones and skin from a large can of salmon and shred into fine pieces. Add one teaspoon of grated onion, one tablespoon of lemon juice, one-half cup of chopped celery and season to taste with salt. Pour boiling water over a package of lemon gelatin, using one cup of water, stir until dissolved, then add three-fourths of a cup of cold water and set aside to thicken. Mix one-third of a cup of mayonnaise with the salmon and gelatin and pour into a mold and chill. Whip one cup of cream until stiff, add two tablespoons of vinegar, salt and paprika and the cooked spaghetti. Unmold the salad and serve on a bed of lettuce with the spaghetti and cream in a ring around it. Sprinkle with paprika.

Spaghetti Muffins.

Cook two ounces of spaghetti until tender, drain and cut into half-inch pieces. There should be three-fourths of a cup. Sift one-fourth of a cup of sugar, one teaspoon of salt, five teaspoons of baking powder, and two cups of flour. Mix spaghetti with one beaten egg, three tablespoons of melted butter and one cupful of milk. Add the liquids to the dry ingredients and beat well. Bake in greased muffin pans in a hot oven for 30 minutes.

Sheep in the Rain

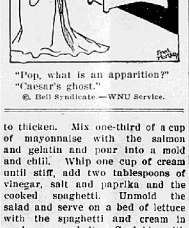

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE sheep on the hillside are caught in the rain,
Like us they are powerless under its beat.
We push on the starter and struggle in vain
To climb the tall hill where the two roadways meet.
The car and its master, impatient and worn,
Seem helpless as sheep, and almost as forlorn.

But soon we will be at the top of the hill,
And the sheep without shelter will face the storm still,
Resigned to their fate, with a patience as vast,
As the world, they will wait till the tempest is past.
They are wiser than we, for they know—the storm done
Their Shepherd will send them his blessing—the Sun!

Sauces Lend Variety and Flavor to Many Dishes

A discriminating taste in foods is a sign of the epicure. In the United States we are beginning to lose this nicety of discrimination. We have become so accustomed to mixing all sorts of ingredients together in order to get something new and different, that our appreciation of what constitutes congeniality of ingredients is getting dimmed. There can be ill-chosen mixtures which make dishes almost unpalatable, yet which persons hesitate to say they don't like, lest they appear to be out of tune with modern ideas of culinary art. There is a noticeable presence of finesse in combinations of ingredients which distinguished the dishes of the famous old-time chefs. A cultivated taste in foods, one which makes the epicure, is quite another thing from the uncultivated appetite which considers odd mixtures constitute fine menus.

There is no reason why ingredients which do not form unwholesome chemical combinations should not be put together in the cause of variety in dishes, as far as a digestible diet is concerned. It is rather the knowledge of what form happy combinations of ingredients, as well as wholesome ones, which distinguishes the fine chef from the mediocre one of today, as of yore. One of the main tests is in the use and the combination of flavorings, seasonings, of herbs, pungent and sweet, and the quantity of each needed to supply delicacy or zest to dishes.

Another test of the good cook is the sauces she makes. In these the variety of ingredients is often large, and they must be congenial. The use of different sauces at different times on the same foods lends as much variety to a dish as do combinations of ingredients in the dish itself. There are sweet and tart sauces, and sour-sweet sauces. There are bread sauces and fruit sauces. There are piquant sauces and coating sauces. There are sauces for fish, meat and fowl, for eggs, for puddings, and ices.

A good sauce and one appropriate to the food is "the making" of many delicious dishes of very inexpensive foundations. The meat used in making soup can be transformed into a main dish to satisfy an exacting appetite, if a good bechamel sauce is poured over it. Lobster or oyster sauce will supply a rather flavorless boiled fish, such as haddock or cod, with just the right taste to make it worthy to be set before guests. Cabbage becomes a dish for an epicure when it is shredded, boiled a few minutes in many times its bulk of rapidly bubbling hot water, drained well and mixed with hollandaise sauce.

It is worth while for a homemaker to study flavors and seasonings of her own combining, and to make sauces in variety, if she would successfully supply a note of difference to her menus.

Adventists to Hold Camp Meeting at Orlando May 18-27

The thirty-eighth annual camp meeting of Seventh-day Adventists in Florida will be held again at Forest Lake, near Orlando, May 18-27, on the grounds of the Forest Lake Academy where the Adventists operate a large industrial school. The services and special meetings will be held in a large tabernacle specially built for the occasion. The delegates will be accomodated in the available rooms of two large dormitories and a veritable "city of tents" erected on the grounds.

President L. K. Dickson of Orlando states that the prospects are bright for the largest delegation in the history of the state. He bases this on the marked increase in membership the past year, and the ever-increasing interest taken in these annual occasions.

Nationally known speakers will come from Washington, D. C., the world headquarters of the denomination. There will also be present some international field secretaries who are continually making a tour of the one hundred forty-five countries, in every nook and corner of the globe, where the Adventists carry on a philanthropic gospel work in four hundred fifty-five languages. Those representatives will have thrilling stories to tell of the marvelous advance of modern missions.

President S. A. Ruskjer, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, who presides over the various conferences of the southern states will also be present at this important meeting and will take an acive part in the general meetings.

A number of delegates will come from Nashville, Tennessee, representing the Southern Publishing Association of the denominations. They will render their report of the large number of books and periodicals distributed in the southern states the past year, also of the other sixty-seven publishing houses scattered over the world. The total sales of literature put out by these sixty-eight publishing houses the past year amounted to $3,499,304.03. They publish 1,635 different bound books, 246 periodicals, 938 pamphlets, 3,788 tracts, a total of 6,607 separate publications (containing 493,193 pages) in 157 different languages. A single copy of each would cost $1,951.87.

President Dickson also informs us that the staff of the Florida Sanitarium and Hospital, located at Orlando, and representing a chain of 112 sanitariums and treatment rooms conducted throughout the world by the denomination, will conduct a series of health lectures at this meeting, giving practical demonstrations of how to care for the sick and suffering. A cafeteria and store will be operated on the grounds for the convenience of the campers, thus enabling them to be present at the numerous meetings held during each day.

New Tires Give 50 Per Cent Longer Non-Skid Mileage

A new high speed tire is announced by Firestone Tire & Rubber Company and is now on display, featuring an increase of more than 50 per cent in non-skid mileage, according to J. L. Wells local Firestone dealer.

"The new tire has five important improvements — flatter tread, wider tread, deeper non-skid, greater thickness, and more and tougher rubber," Mr. Wells said. "This is made possible by the Firestone patented process of gum-dipping, by which the high stretch cords are soaked and coated with rubber, providing greater strength, safety and blowout protection.

"The Firestone developments embodied in this new tire have been proven by constant testing on Firestone's fleet of test cars, day in and day out, 24 hours a day, over all kinds of roads and highways throughout the country, 12 months in the year.

"In addition the Firestone rubber compounds, designs, strength, blowout protection and rugged endurance are proven at the Indianapolis 500-mile endurance race where Firestone tires have been on the winning cars for fourteen consecutive years.

"A further example of the stamina in these new tires was the recent 250-mile stock car race at Los Angeles where "Stubby" Stubblefield and Al Gordon, who finished first and second, completed the race without a stop, pounding over uneven ground and tearing around the curves at 90 miles per hour. They showed the ability of these new tires to stand the terrific punishment and give them protection from skidding. The tires were the same kind that we have on display for the safety of motorists.

LEADERSHIP

"The Ultimate Test of Leadership is Performance"

FIRESTONE has maintained its leadership in tire development by producing a new tire for 1934 with a wider tread, flatter contour, deeper non-skid, greater thickness, and more and tougher rubber, which gives greater non-skid safety, more traction, greater blowout protection, and more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

These achievements are made practical by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, providing greater adhesion between the plies of the high stretch cords and between the Gum-Dipped body of the tire and the tough, massive non-skid tread. It also provides greater strength, longer flexing life, and greater protection against blowouts.

Gum-Dipping made it possible for Firestone to design, develop and put on the market the first successful balloon tire in 1923. This tire was the pattern used by all others and completely revolutionized the tire industry and set standards for the automobile industry.

Firestone also developed the first all rubber non-skid tire, and has always been first to give motorists the benefits of new discoveries in non-skid design, providing more traction and greater non-skid safety.

For fourteen years leading race drivers have driven to victory on Firestone tires, built with Gum-Dipped high stretch cords. They have trusted their lives to Firestone Leadership —as they know that the patented Firestone construction features provide them with greater safety—longer mileage—and greater blowout protection.

Protect yourself and family by driving in today and replacing your smooth, thin, dangerous tires with the new Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934.

THE ADHESION TEST

Note how the rubber in a Firestone tire clings to the high stretch cords. This greater adhesion is made possible by Gum-Dipping which soaks the cords in liquid rubber, and saturates and coats the millions of fibers inside the cords.

THE ACID TEST

To be positive that rubber penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, a solution of sulphuric acid which quickly destroys cotton but not rubber, is shown in test tubes with Firestone Gum-Dipped fibers and fibers from any other tire made. Firestone Gum-Dipped fibers withstand the acid as they are the only fibers that are insulated with rubber, minimizing friction and heat, the deadly enemy of their life.

ROAD AND TRACK TEST

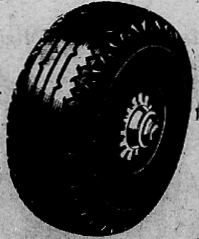

The extra strength — longer wear — greater traction—more non-skid safety—and greater blowout protection of Firestone High Speed Tires are the results of the most severe road and track tests. These have made possible the outstanding world records on road and track.

The NEW Firestone AIR BALLOON FOR 1934

The new Firestone Air Balloon for 1934 embodies all the improvements in the new Firestone High Speed Tire. The lower air pressure provides maximum traction and riding comfort. Gum-Dipping safety-locks the cords, providing 30 to 40% greater deflection and blowout protection.

COUNCIL DEFERS ACTION LEGION CLUB PROPOSAL

Highlands Post Asks For Use of Scout House Lot; Police Accused

Avon Park's city council deferred action Tuesday night on the proposal that the American Legion be given the use of the old Scout house property on Lake Lotela for the purpose of building a club house, the property later to be deeded to the Legion. The matter was brought up by R. T. Fairey as commander of Highlands post who recited briefly the history of a proposal for Donaldson park whereby the Legion was to erect a club and community house and which had apparently fallen by the wayside.

Prof. Fairey said FERA labor had been promised as far as possible for the construction work and the logs and other material were being donated. He said also it is proposed to tear down the present Legion building on N. Butler street and use the material from there. The club house would be used by the Legion with the local post as custodian of the property, which could be used by other organizations when agreeable, he explained.

Objections to immediate action were voiced by Councilman W. T. Hall who pointed out the property in question is the only water front property owned by the city and could be developed by the city as a bathing beach.

Prof. Fairey pointed out that the Legion's use of the lot, which does not extend to the lake, would not prevent others from using the bathing facilities and the project would be developed for community use. Hall believed the lot could be made a source of revenue for the city, from the renting of bath houses and boats and added there must be sports and other attractions in order to get tourists.

After some other discussion during which Mayor Covington declared the Legion's proposal should be accepted and Councilmen Pendleton and Smith expressed belief that a solution could be arrived at amicably and to the satisfaction of all concerned, the entire matter was taken under consideration by the council for action at the next meeting.

Prof. Fairey also entered a protest on behalf of the Legion to the practice of the city leaving the flag on the Mall out all night and asked that some city employee be designated to take care of it. Council agreed something should be done and named Park Superintendent H. R. Currie to take care of the flag.

A complaint by Richard Ellis that the police are showing favoritism in making arrests received scant consideration. Ellis charged that he and others had been arrested in a poker game in which Patrolman Cravey's brother-in-law was also participating, but was not arrested. Chief Bob Still denied this to be a fact. Ellis also charged that white and colored were placed in jail together.

Councilmen Hall and Smith and City Clerk Shockley reported on their conference in Orlando with officials of the Florida Public Service Co., regarding a new contract for fire hydrants. No action was taken as new figures will be submitted. The city attorney suggested the city should build their own water system for fire fighting using lake water with a pumping station on Lake Verona.

Remittance of some interest on delinquent taxes on the Haney and Harper homes was approved, the city attorney giving an explanation of the circumstances in each case.

The mayor mentioned complaints regarding Patrolman Cravey beating up negroes when arresting them. The mayor claimed Cravey is an excellent officer but is getting lots of opposition. The charges should be investigated, he said. Pendleton charged that white men are behind the negroes and inciting them to resist, and named Hall, Jordon and himself as an investigating committee.

Enjoy Camping Trip

Leo Smith, Henry Wild, L. C. Davis, Murray Williams, H. A. Maddox, Roy Maddox and young Sullivan enjoyed a night's camping on Lake Angelo last Friday. On Saturday the rest of the boys were the guests of the Maddox brothers for the day.

Visits Avon Park

HON. J. HARDIN PETERSON

The Honorable J. Hardin Peterson, Congressman from the first district of Florida was in Avon Park Monday for a visit. Although he did not address the voters of the county in the interest of his campaign for re-nomination he announced that he will attend the picnic at Venus Saturday, May 19. Although the picnic is given for the benefit of the candidates from District No. 5 of Highlands county, it is understood that Congressman Peterson will be given an opportunity to speak and will make a short talk to the voters.

COUNTY BOARD MET AND APPROVE BALLOT

Commissioners Approve Official Ballot For Primary Election June 5

Meeting in special session Tuesday afternoon the county commissioners approved the form of the ballot for the primary election June 5 and ordered the ballots printed. In a resolution formally passed it was set forth that one candidate, W. E. Hixson, who had filed his oath as candidate for the office of justice of the peace for the first district, Avon Park, had failed to pay his party assessment according to law, therefore, his name was not eligible to be placed on the ballot.

The secretary of state having certified to the board all candidates for state and national office qualified for the primary, the certificate was ordered filed. No party other than the Democratic having certified candidates no ballots will be printed other than for the Democratic party.

The candidates whose names will appear on the ballots are:

For United States Senator: Charles A. Mitchell, Claude Pepper, James T. Sikes, Park Trammell and Hortense K. Wells.

For Representative in Congress, 1st district: Randolph Calhoun, W. Hall and J. Hardin Peterson.

For Railroad Commissioner, group 1: George S. (Doc) Davis, Eugene S. Matthews, William J. Placie and Lester Wells.

For Railroad Commissioner, group 2: Herbert P. Caro, Jerry W. Carter, John Good, Mamie Eaton-Greene, John W. Newborn and William J. "Bill" Pruitt.

For Member House of Representatives: A. T. Eide, Ford W. Heacock, J. E. Sims and Paul Vinson.

For Board of County Commissioners, district 1: Frank (Hot Shot) Armistead, S. P. Durrance, G. E. Harper and J. L. Wells; district 2: A. B. Allen and A. F. Spooner; district 3: H. E. Galloway, Wm. R. Maynard, L. C. Pearce, J. H. Twitty, and Willie Williams; district 4: L. L. Henderson and O. C. Parrish; district 5: Ben C. Hope and N. B. Jackson.

For Member Board Public Instruction, district 1: Charles Clements and S. J. Pendleton.

For State Executive Committeeman: T. A. McNicholas and F. W. Shockley.

For precinct committeeman, precinct 1A, G. W. Kohler and T. A. McNicholas; precinct 3, O. S. Bowles, E. J. Ethereidge and C. A. Stevens; precinct 8: M. E. Lanier and Mrs. Austin Pearce.

LEGION PLANS BEAUTY CONTEST IN NEAR FUTURE

Winner To Be Guest of State Convention at Gainesville Next Month

Highlands Post 69, American Legion will sponsor a beauty contest to determine who will represent Avon Park at the state convention of the American Legion at Gainesville June 7, 8 and 9. The contest will be staged at the Avon theatre in connection with the regular show on Thursday night, May 31. Three out of town judges will be selected, but their names will not be announced until the night of the contest. Regular theatre prices will prevail.

The committee named to handle the event consists of Dr. A. M. Morgan, chairman, W. M. Hetherington and Paul Jones. Entrants are asked to contact any member of the committee as soon as possible. They should register at Dr. Morgan's office not later than Saturday, May 26th, which is the last day upon which contestants may enter.

The winner will have all expenses paid to Gainesville and will be the guest of the Legion for the three-day convention. The contestants will be chaperoned by the American Legion Auxiliary, composed principally of the wives of Legionnaires, who will see that the big bad soldiers don't get gay with the pretty little gals—and how! But if not satisfied with this arrangement, they may carry their own chaperones.

The winner of the Gainesville contest will represent the state at the National Legion convention in Miami in October.

A Memorial Day program was discussed at the post meeting Wednesday night and E. E. Melton, A. McKee Elwell and Charles Sherman named as a committee to have charge of the arrangements. The exercises will be held on Wednesday, May 30, either in Avon Park or jointly with other veterans' organizations at Sebring or maybe both.

Commander R. T. Fairey and Dr. A. M. Morgan were named the post delegates to the state convention at Gainesville and E. E. Melton and Louie Marlin were named as alternates.

Ford Heacock Issues Statement Relative To His Platform

Ford W. Heacock, candidate for representative has issued the following statement setting forth his platform:

"I favor:

1. Adequate financing for full school terms.
2. Living wage for school teachers.
3. Conservative road building program.
4. Conservative road maintenance program.
5. Economy in government administration.
6. A workmen's compensation law, equitable to employer and employee.
7. Conservation and propagation of fish and game.

"I oppose:

1. Any aid to municipal bondholders.
2. Local legislation without proper legal advertising.
3. Sales tax, unless made necessary by passage of Homestead Exemption law."

Ballots Ready for Absentee Voters

Voters in Highlands county who expect to be absent from the county on Primary Election Day, June 5, may cast their ballot at the office of County Judge M. C. Whitehurst at the court house in Sebring after Sunday, May 20th. The ballots for this purpose have been prepared and the judge will have a supply for each precinct in the county on hand.

Saturday, May 26 Is Poppy Day

The American Legion Auxiliary will have charge of the poppy sales, Saturday, May 26th, assisted by a group of young girls.

The public is urged by the Auxiliary to support poppy sales, and assist them in financing needy relief work among veterans and their families.

James A. Gibson Died Wednesday Night; Burial in Tennessee

Funeral services for James A. Gibson, 66, were held this morning at 11:30 at funeral parlors of Stephenson and Blythe, the Rev. W. K. McClure, pastor of the Baptist church officiating. The body was shipped in the afternoon to Manchester, Tenn., the former home of the deceased, for interment, accompanied by a daughter, Mrs. Connie Jordon. Members of the Odd Fellows lodge acted as pallbearers.

Mr. Gibson had been in failing health for the past two and a half years and passed away Wednesday evening at 6:30 at his home. He was born near Petersburg, Tenn., and served as county clerk at Manchester, Tenn., for a number of years. He professed his faith in Christ early in life and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian church. In 1890 he married Miss Mary Francis Lovett. He had been a resident of Florida for the past 13 years and was a member of the Odd Fellows for over 25 years.

Besides the widow there survive two daughters, Mrs. Naomi Alderman and Mrs. Connie Jordon and a son, Nowlin Gibson, and three grandchildren, all of this city.

SATURDAY DEADLINE FOR POLL TAX PAYMENT

Secretary of State Gray Estimates An Approximate Vote of 200,000

Tallahassee, May 17.—(FNS)—Registered voters of the state are reminded that Saturday, May 19, is the last day which they may pay their poll taxes and qualify to vote in the primary elections. Men and women over the age of 55 years who register according to law are exempt from poll tax payments as are those who have just reached the voting age and will cast their first ballot.

The number of registrations, which is the greatest of any off-year election in the history of the state, is not necessarily an indication of the number of votes that will be cast.

Secretary of State Robert A. Gray estimates a primary ballot of approximately 200,000 on June 5. The estimate is based on tabulations of registrations compiled in the secretary's office.

State law requires printing and distribution of an official campaign booklet to qualified voters in advance of the first primary. Secretary Gray announced that 250,000 copies of the pamphlets will be delivered to the various county registration offices.

The state will spend approximately $15,000, which includes the cost of printing and distributing the campaign books, in connection with the coming elections. This sum was appropriated by the legislature for this purpose. The cost to the various counties is estimated by Secretary Gray at from $100,000 to $130,000 covering both primaries. The major expense will be for payment of inspectors and clerks for nearly 3000 voting precincts in the state.

Fire Destroys Home Tuesday Midnight

Loss estimated at $1,000 was done about midnight Tuesday by a fire in the west part of the city, a house owned by Charles Campbell being totally destroyed. The house was unoccupied at the time and the cause of the conflagration has not been determined. The fire department made a quick run but had to get all the trucks on the scene in order to get sufficient hose to reach to the closest available fire plug, the nearest one having been cut off.

Rotarians Have Spelling Contest

A. McKee Elwell won the spelling contest at the Rotary club luncheon at the Jacaranda hotel Wednesday noon. E. E. Melton acted as "teacher" of the class and the competition was keen. Another feature of the program was musical and vocal selections by Miss Zelda Langford and the Misses Mary and Myrtle Turner. The only visitor for the occasion was Jess Brumbaugh of Haines City.

Supreme Court Re-Instates Quo Warranto Case; Stays Further Foreclosure Suits

STATE ROAD PATROL STARTED LAST WEEK

Twenty Uniformed Officers To Patrol Highways To Reduce Accidents

Tallahassee, May 16—(FNS)—As a result of Governor Sholtz' proposal to the State Cabinet that instructors from the State Road Department, State Motor Vehicle Department and the State Railroad Commission be assigned to traffic enforcement, a uniformed highway patrol of 20 members began their duties as state traffic officers last week, in an effort to reduce Florida's accident death toll.

The new officers met in Tallahassee recently and received instructions from Attorney General Cary Landis, Governor Sholtz and others regarding their powers under the law to enforce traffic regulations in co-operation with sheriffs and municipal officers. The inspectors from each department were also instructed in the duties of the other departments, so that their efforts will be pooled in enforcement of their present duties in addition to enforcing traffic laws.

They were assigned to various districts, so that over-lapping of efforts will not occur. In this way the entire state will be covered by a uniformed force practically amounting to a patrol.

All the officers are properly uniformed. When night work is done their cars will be equipped with identifying lights so that motorists will know they are being haled by officers of the law.

Governor Sholtz has expressed his favor of a regular state patrol. Treasurer W. V. Knott said he considered it a splendid idea and would like to see a permanent patrol. Chairman C. B. Treadway of the State Road Department, Chairman Eugene Matthews of the Railroad Commission and Commissioner George Schuler of the Motor Vehicle Department all expressed their hearty approval of the plan and pledged their co-operation in the safety campaign.

Proposals for establishment of a State Highway Constabulary have been made in several past sessions of the legislature. The result of the work of this uniformed highway patrol may result in the introduction of measures to create a State Constabulary at the next legislature.

Sebring C. C. C. Camp Moving to Tampa

Final orders were received Tuesday afternoon in regard to the change in location of the Sebring C. C. C. unit. It has been known for some time that a move was being contemplated, but the official word came through at last ordering Capt. Farnham to be established in Tampa by Saturday, May 19. The first platoon left early Thursday morning with part of the equipment and put the new site in shape for the rest of the company who will leave either today or Saturday.

The new home of Co. 1418 is located 2 miles north of Sulphur Springs on Florida avenue. The land is quite high and drainage will be a very easy problem to solve. There are a large number of big oaks and pines on the site, thus insuring plenty of shade for the tents and also will tend to make the completed camp much more enchanting and picturesque.

The present plans are to house the men in tents, as they have been at Sebring, and as soon as possible to build a mess hall and recreational building. There are no buildings of any type on the site so everything will start from "scratch."

The men and personnel of Co. 1418 regret leaving the paradise they have had in Sebring but when the new home is built they invite the many friends they have made here to visit them and see if it can compare to "ye ole camp" on Lake Sebring.

Precinct 1: Clerk, Charles D. Sherman; inspectors, Paul Jones, L. M. Orr and Mrs. Lucy Crumley sheriff, Lloyd Correll; polling place, Mrs. Ola L. Head's office in the Jacaranda Hotel building.

Precinct 1A: clerk, S. E. Booth; inspectors, Alton Elder, Mrs. Louise Armstrong and Mrs. Mary S. Sweaningen; sheriff, Joe Allen; polling place, rear rooms of the Barnett National Bank Annex building on Lake avenue.

CITRUS PRORATING TO CONTINUE THIS WEEK

Control Committee Announce Fruit Prices Are Steadily Improving

Orlando, May 16.—Grapefruit prorating was continued for another week by the Florida Control Committee at its meeting here on Monday.

No changes were made in the allotments on either oranges or grapefruit for the 10 auction markets of the country.

While an effort was made by Lawrence Gentile, Orlando to discontinue prorating for the balance of the season on the ground that insufficient fruit remains to prorate, the committee voted against his motion to abandon the prorates.

Storage holdings of citrus came in for some discussion. Secretary O. G. Strauss of the Control Committee said there were around 355 cars of grapefruit in storage and 349 cars of oranges.

He estimated that, according to "shippers' figures" there remained for shipment the balance of this season about 685 cars of grapefruit (less storage holdings) and 1,375 cars of oranges (not counting oranges stored).

Just before the meeting L. C. Edwards, Tampa, who is an independent member of the control committee, revealed that he had just refused an offer of $2.50 a box for a share of his remaining crop of about 60,000 boxes of Florida Valencias.

Mr. Edwards attributed gains in citrus prices to regulation of the markets by the control board.

He said he figured he would hold on to his 60,000 boxes for a while and "take the market." He said he might realize up to $6.00 a box for some of this fruit, the way he figured.

Committeemen set a meeting of the sub-committee on changes to the marketing agreement for Wednesday, May 23, at 10 o'clock in the morning at Secretary O. G. Strauss' office in Orlando. At that time proposed amendments to the agreement will be discussed and changes and improvements will be recommended to the whole committee, soon after, for action.

Preparations are being made for the National Stabilization meeting on citrus at Washington on June 18. At that time National coordination plans will be perfected. Lawrence Gentile and R. B. Woolfolk, Orlando; I. A. Yarnell, Lake Wales and Sen. John S. Taylor, Largo will represent Florida.

A resolution was read Monday from the Florida State Horticultural Society calling attention to a need for advertising next season to sell Florida citrus throughout the nation.

R. D. Keene, Winter Garden, sat as an alternate in the clearing house group, while Frank G. Clark, Indian River City, was an exchange alternate at Monday's session.

Stops Collection of Taxes In All of Outside Area

The quo warranto suit, questioning the city's right to exercise jurisdiction over the enlarged city area, and dismissed some time ago by the supreme court, has been re-instated by the court, and an order issued staying further proceedings with tax foreclosure suits against any of the co-relators or intervenors or "any others in like situation in the enlarged area and not included in the original Town of Avon Park," pending the final disposition of the case.

Copy of the order was received this morning from the supreme court by Edwin Walker, attorney for the Avon Florida Citrus Corporation and others interested in the suit.

Under the order, the litigants are permitted to file briefs on the question of whether the cause should proceed to a hearing by the supreme court or by the circuit court on the facts as set up in the amended information and the city's amended answer. The relators are allowed fifteen days from May 15th to file their briefs; the city then has fifteen days in which to file its briefs, and the co-relators will then have an additional fifteen days in which to file final briefs.

The effect of the order is to stop all foreclosure suits against property located in the enlarged area until final disposition of the case, bringing to a stand-still the collection of all city taxes except those imposed upon property in the original Town of Avon Park, as constituted prior to the enlargement Acts of 1925 and 1927.

The Court's Order

The supreme court's re-instatement order follows:

"The relator and co-relators having filed their Supplemental Extraordinary Petition for reinstatement and rehearing in the above cause and having indicated their desire to file briefs in support thereof and also asked that the Court reinstate its order staying all suits and actions in the enlarged area of respondent pending the final disposition of this cause.

"Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered that said cause be reinstated and that this Court retain the jurisdiction of the above cause for further consideration thereof.

"It is further ordered that the parties to said action are permitted to file briefs on the question whether the cause should proceed to a hearing by this Court or the Circuit Court on the facts relevant to the amended information and the amended answer thereto.

"The relator, co-relators and intervenors shall file their briefs within fifteen days after briefs of relator, co-relators and intervenors are filed; and relator, co-relators, and intervenors shall file their final briefs within fifteen days after respondent's brief is filed.

"It is further ordered that the order of this Court heretofore entered staying all suits and actions by the respondent in the enlarged area be, and the same is hereby, reinstated, and the City of Avon Park, a municipal corporation, be, and it is hereby, prohibited and enjoined from further proceedings with any foreclosure suits against any of the co-relators or intervenors relating to property involved in the above Quo Warranto proceedings; and the said respondent is hereby prohibited and enjoined from proceedings further with the prosecution of the suits listed in the petition of the petitioner herein and any other suits of like character or nature against the property of said co-relators and intervenors and any others in like situation in the enlarged area and not included in the original Town of Avon Park, pending the final adjudication of this cause in Quo Warranto, until the final disposition of this cause or until further orders are entered vacating this order."

The suit was first instituted in 1930, when approximately 300 property owners petitioned the attorney general to file quo warranto proceedings questioning the city's right of jurisdiction over their property. The attorney general filed the suit, and the 300 property owners were joined as co-relators with the attorney gen-

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Insull, Brought Back for Trial, Defends Himself—Russia Resents Being Declared a Defaulter—Chamber of Commerce Criticizes New Deal.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SAMUEL INSULL, once the grand old man of public utilities, has been brought back home to be tried for his alleged sins after his long period of refuge in foreign lands. His "prison ship," the Exilona, arrived off Fort Hancock, N. J., and Insull was taken off at open sea by the United States coast guard cutter Hudson, which landed him quickly. After an automobile ride to Princeton Junction, he was put aboard a train and transported swiftly to Chicago. His son, Samuel Insull, Jr., had been permitted to join him on the Exilona and accompanied him on the trip west.

Samuel Insull

Landing on American soil, Insull appeared to recover his old time confidence. To reporters he said: "I am in America to make the most important fight of my life. I am fighting not only for freedom but for complete vindication. I have erred, but my greatest error was in underestimating the effects of the financial panic on American securities, and particularly on the companies I was trying to build.

"I worked with all my energy to save these companies. I made mistakes—but they were honest mistakes. They were errors in judgment, but not dishonest manipulations.

"Arbitrarily, I had been instructed to resign as head of these companies which I had built and which I had tried to protect.

"I was told that I was no longer needed. Tired from the fruitless struggles to save the investments of thousands of men and women, discouraged in my attempts to save the investments of my friends and associates as well as everything I had, I got out.

"No charges were brought against me until I had been away for three months. My return at that time would have further complicated the problems of the reorganization of the companies.

"The whole story has not yet been told. You only know the charges of the prosecution. Not one word has been uttered in even feeble defense of me. And it must be obvious that there also is my side of the story.

"When it is told in court, my judgment may be discredited but certainly my honesty will be vindicated."

RUSSIA has been angered by a ruling of Attorney General Cummings and there is danger that all the plans for re-establishing trade with that country will go awry. Mr. Cummings was called on to determine what nations would be barred by the Johnson act from marketing their securities in this country or in any way receiving financial assistance. This he did by announcing the six foreign nations that are not in default to the United States government on their obligations. These are Finland, Great Britain, Italy, Latvia and Lithuania. Finland has met in full all installments on its war debt. The others have made token payments on recent installments.

By inference, these nations are considered in default: Greece; France, Austria, Belgium, Esthonia, Germany, Hungary, Poland and Jugoslavia. Russia, Armenia and Nicaragua have not paid, but their debts have not been funded.

Soviet Russia fell in the default class because it ignored obligations of the preceding czarist and Kerensky governments. The czars sold bonds totaling $86,000,000 in America and the brief Kerensky regime borrowed $187,000,000 from the United States treasury.

Dispatches from Moscow said the resentful Russians were likely to take retaliatory steps in the form of a recommendation that all Soviet economic organizations refrain from planning any orders from America with the exception of such items as cannot be had elsewhere. This recommendation was made recently by the organ of the commissariat of heavy industry and, it is understood, already has been put into effect.

The Soviet government insists it cannot be held liable for the Kerensky debts. A possible explanation of the Soviet attitude—which is summed up in the press with the statement that the government will not be coerced into a Kerensky debt settlement—lies in the fact that if it consents to negotiate the question with America, it will be compelled under the Rapallo treaty to consider German claims for payment of pre-Bolshevik debts to that country on a basis of equal terms.

GREAT BRITAIN and Japan are on the verge of a big trade war. The British have threatened to take strong action to protect their textile export interests against increasing Japanese competition, although the British government officially declares it will do everything to maintain amicable relations with Japan. The official position in Tokyo is that Japan can take care of herself, and there was every indication that it would not yield to the British ultimatum that it must modify its trade program and tactics. The British threat was that quotas would be imposed on Japanese goods, but trade leaders in Tokyo said this would not hurt their country seriously, especially since Japan's imports from the British Isles in 1933 totaled 83,000,000 yen or a like figure as was reported there, 80,000,000 yen. Hence, they said, the Tokyo government would be able to make reprisals.

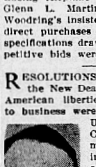

Trade with the British dominions is considered far more important and the Japanese are confident the dominions will not follow the mother country's lead—especially Australia, which sold to Japan in 1933 four times its purchases, and Canada, which sold seven times as much as it bought.

ACCORDING to the unanimous report of a house committee of investigation, Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the army air corps, acted "in clear violation of existing law" in the proposed purchase of airplanes costing $7,500,000.

Coupled with the criticism of Foulois was a commendation of Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war.

The report stated that late in 1933 the Public Works administration set aside $7,500,000 for the purchase of army airplanes. It asserted that Foulois had decided to buy the planes, without competition, from the Northrup corporation, the Boeing Airplane company and the Glenn L. Martin company. Woodring's insistence, the plan for direct purchases was dropped and specifications drawn on which competitive bids were asked.

RESOLUTIONS declaring that the New Deal is destructive of American liberties and dangerous to business were adopted by the United States Chamber of Commerce at the closing session of its annual meeting in Washington. This despite the fact that President Roosevelt had warned the members of the organization to quit crying wolf and to support his recovery program. However, the resolutions were mildly worded and there was in them no outspoken condemnation of the major components of the New Deal.

Gen. Johnson

Chief among the resolutions adopted were those urging:

Extensions of the temporary deposit insurance plan.

Modification of the securities act.

Use of trade associations as NRA code authorities.

Continuation of the right of employers and employees to negotiate freely.

Opposition to compulsory unemployment benefit legislation.

That the federal government should collect its taxes fairly.

That income taxes should be levied on income alone.

That exemption of farmers, who trade their wheat for flour, from the wheat processing tax should be abolished.

At a dinner Gen. Hugh S. Johnson was the chief guest and after his address he submitted to an inquisition on the present and prospective policies of the NRA. Asked directly if the principles embodied in the recovery act were to be permanent, he replied:

"If there has been any good demonstrated by the recovery act, it will live and it ought to live; if there has been any bad it will die and it ought to die."

Admitting that there has been a lapse in public interest and enthusiasm, the general said a new campaign to make the nation's Blue Eagle conscious was being mapped. He also admitted that the controversy between labor and industry is becoming more acute. He expressed the opinion that the ideal relationship between labor and management had been worked out in the bituminous coal industry.

CHURCHILL DOWNS, in Louisville, provided some 55,000 lovers of horse racing with the annual spectacle of the Kentucky derby. The great race was won by the favorite, Cavalcade, owned by the Brookmeade stable, with Discovery and Agrarian finishing second and third. The winner was ridden with consummate skill by the veteran jockey Mack Garner.

PLANS of the Home Owners Loan corporation provide that building companies must be under the Blue Eagle to obtain any of the $200,000,000 worth of business which the government will create in extending aid for reconditioning homes, including those on which the government takes over the mortgages.

BISHOP CANNON escaped being retired from the college of bishops of the reformed, or the conference of the Methodist Church, South, rejecting the recommendation of the committee; but the delegates, in accordance with their economic program, voted out of existence the powerful general board of temperance and social welfare of which the militant bishop has been the head. This board has long been a recognized factor in national politics. In a recent report on its activities Bishop Cannon called for a methodist drive for a new national prohibition law and challenged the church to make the wet and dry issue a test of every candidate for public office.

According to the vote of the conference all future pronouncements made in the name of the church "on great social questions of national or international importance, shall be made through a collaborative statement to the college of bishops, rather than through individual boards."

WILLIAM H. WOODIN, who was President Roosevelt's first secretary of the treasury, has passed away, succumbing to the throat affection that forced his resignation from the cabinet last December. In his death the country loses a business man of the highest type and a gentleman who had the respect and affection of all who knew him. He became president of the American Car and Foundry company in 1916, and also was president of the American Locomotive company. His interests were varied, for he was musician, composer, art lover and student of government as well as leader in industry.

ATTORNEY GENERAL CUMMINGS feels that the forces of the Department of Justice are inadequate to cope with the gangsters, and will ask congress for about $2,000,000 in excess of the $28,700,778 authorized the department for the fiscal year 1935. Next year's appropriation is the lowest granted the Justice department since the war.

With the additional money the attorney general contemplates purchasing for the division's agents a fleet of high-powered automobiles, a few armored cars and ample guns and ammunition. Likewise the force of investigators will be added to.

MAJORITY and minority reports of the investigation into Dr. William A. Wirt's "red plot" stories were made to the house, and they were just what had been expected. The majority of the committee held that Wirt's charges were untrue and that his companions at the famous dinner party did not make the statements he had attributed to them. Representatives McGugin and Lehlbach, the Republican and minority members of the committee, characterized the investigation as a "repudiation of all precedents" and indicative of intentions to "suppress all information" which might directly involve the brain trust.

EXACTLY 36 years from the day Admiral Dewey destroyed the Spanish fleet in Manila bay, the legislature of the Philippines accepted the new offer of the United States for the independence of the islands as embodied in the Tydings-McDuffie act.

Under the terms of the measure, the Filipinos will obtain complete independence in 1946. During the intervening years a commonwealth government, to be set up probably next year, will govern the islands.

WHEN the senate committee on privileges and elections opened the hearings on the demands that Senator Huey P. Long and his political follower, John H. Overton of Louisiana be deprived of their seats, the political groups that have been seeking especially to oust Kingfish remained in the background and left it to the women of Louisiana to take the lead in the fight. These women are headed by Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, who has been indefatigable in the campaign against Long and his crew.

Mrs. Hammond

The women were represented as counsel by Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, war-time acting judge advocate general, who has pending against Long a suit for libel. His opening statement dispelled the idea that Long's opponents would be satisfied to let Overton remain in the senate if the "Kingfish" were thrown out.

"We expect to prove," said General Ansell, "the charge that there was fraud in the 1932 Louisiana primaries sufficient to vitiate the election of Senator Overton; that Senator Overton was an active perpetrator of that fraud; that Senators Overton and Long were designers and instigators of that fraud."

SEEN and HEARD around the National Capital

By CARTER FIELD

Washington.—More than 2,000 federal agents are shortly to be turned loose in an effort to round up illicit distilling and bootlegging. This is President Roosevelt's answer to the March revenue figures, which indicated a consumption of distilled spirits of only 40,000,000 gallons a year, whereas the lowest estimate made before repeal was 90,000,000 gallons, and government experts figured 105,000,000 gallons in estimating revenue.

At present there are only 700 agents. As a matter of fact, these have just been put in the field. Director Choate of the Federal Alcohol Control administration wanted $11,000,000 for enforcement. Director of the Budget Lewis Douglas wanted only $5,500,000. The President, when he saw the March figures, decided against Douglas.

Actually there is more illicit distilling and bootlegging now than there was during prohibition, in the opinion of Mr. Choate. Dr. James M. Doran, head of the distilled spirits institute, who during prohibition was director of the bureau of industrial alcohol, believes there is at least as much.

Some months ago Doctor Doran, and the liquor trade generally, were much concerned over the treasury's inadequacy of the distilling industry. But no one in the business thought the pinch would come until next winter at the earliest. It was thought the distilling of whisky, for example, to put into storage, would take care of a considerable fraction of the capacity.

But the penalties for overcrowding the field have arrived already. They have arrived because the consumption of legal distilled liquor is running at only 40 per cent of the expectations of even the most conservative.

Doctor Doran pointed out to the writer that actually the wet territory in the United States today is about the same as it was in the years 1910 and 1911, while the population of that wet territory is at least 10 per cent greater than it was in those years.

Illegal Liquor Flood

Yet the consumption of legal liquor in the United States is only about 20 per cent of what it was in those years.

There is not, the doctor points out, due to any decrease in drinking. There is no such comfort for the drys in the picture. It is due to the tremendous flood of illegal liquor.

Gin gives the solution to the question. In December there were 333,703 gallons withdrawn and taxpaid. In January this was 335,602 gallons and in February 285,106 gallons.

Bearing in mind that gin is the base for most cocktails, it is the opinion of most experts here that the legal tax-paid gin would not supply the consumption in New York, Boston and Philadelphia alone, let alone for the country. The answer is bath-tub gin. The bootlegger starts with a profit of $0.80 a case—a very fair profit.

But it is not just taxes alone. For example, the early closing hours. People giving parties run dry after nine o'clock, which is closing time in most states. So they call up the bootlegger. In New York a wholesaler cannot deliver a case to a customer. The drinker must go to the retail store. In many instances pay cash, and carry his goods home. The bootlegger is right on the job, eager to deliver, and at a price lower than the legal store can meet. The same thing is true for days and holidays.

March figures indicate a consumption of 40,000,000 gallons a year, but Doctor Doran figures the government will be lucky if it collects revenue on 30,000,000 gallons. "What is the answer?" he was asked.

"Strict enforcement and more intelligent local regulations," he answered.

Dillinger Hunt

Attorney General Cummings' interest in the Dillinger hunt has not been just that of a patriotic American who wants to see a law defying murderer caught or killed. Nor has it been merely the interest of the head of a department whose men are on trial so to speak, and who wants to see his own force function properly. On the success of the Department of Justice operatives in this pursuit may easily hang, as Mr. Cummings sees it, the fate of his twelve anti-crime measures now pending before congress.

Mr. Cummings knows perfectly well that his measures for federal policing—for that is what they amount to—would normally not have a chance in the world of passage. Too many senators and members of the house are opposed to any more federal intrusion into state affairs than they can prevent.

That is what happened to the old secret service. President Roosevelt had some of the operatives of that service looking into questions, which certain members of the house and senate did not want looked into. There were so many of these congressional objectors, as a matter of fact, that in the very next appropriation bill they were able to add a clause restricting the operations of the secret service to two functions—protection of the person of the President and running down counterfeiters.

Actually the government has an army of gumshoe men outside the secret service, the restriction on that service placed in a moment of congressional fear being the reason that the detective agencies are scattered through all the departments instead of being under one head as was originally intended.

The Post Office department has quite an aggregation. So has the State department which incidentally is really the most "secret" of all, though it is not entitled to use the word. Labor has many operatives, some of whom are assigned to tricky attempts to evade the immigration laws. But the one that has had the most publicity for many years now is that of the Department of Justice. This is the force which worked on neutrality violations before the United States got into the World war, and on sabotage and treason cases afterwards.

Efficiency Test

It is this force, a part of which, trained in the special school of the bureau here in Washington, is chasing Dillinger. All are assured to have demonstrated the ability to shoot straight under the most intense excitement, always remembering that while it is important to hit the person aimed at, it is even more important not to hit your fellow operatives or innocent bystanders.

Mr. Cummings knows that if his men make a good showing in this spectacular case there may come a wave of public sentiment for federal law enforcement, which may sweep his 12 pet measures through congress despite the states' rights objections to practically every one of them. A bad performance would be helpful to those who are fighting his measures.

Thus it was not just to get enough operatives to the spot quickly that the Department of Justice used airplanes in moving its men. The point was to get men who had demonstrated their ability both as marksmen and as men who handled themselves capably under great stress. In short, picked men.

Stock Market Bill

Passage of the stock market regulation bill in at least as drastic a form as it was reported by the senate banking and currency committee is the strong probability. Action there seems to most impartial observers to be pretty stringent even as it stands, although the radicals and progressives insist it was "emasculated" in committee by the amendments proposed by Senator Carter Glass.

Incidentally no one was as surprised as Glass at this charge of "emasculation." He still thinks the revised form of the bill is just as harsh on the stock exchange as the criticisms made of the exchange and its practices.

The real objection of stock exchange operators to the measure no longer centers on the margin requirement. In the bill before the senate, these are now left to the discretion of the new commission of five to be appointed by the President.

But the provisions of the measure still remaining, which in effect deal with regulating all corporations whose securities are listed on the stock exchange, is something else again. The net effect of that portion of the bill will be to decrease enormously the amount of business done on the exchange. It will cut down the commissions earned by the exchange members. This is one more idea. It is a definitely known fact. Officials of scores of corporations have told their friends on Wall Street that they will not submit to the amount of governmental regulation and supervision implied in these paragraphs of the stock exchange regulation bill. The answer is that when the bill goes into effect these corporations will withdraw the present listings of their stocks. Those stocks no longer will be bought or sold on the New York Stock exchange. They will change hands thereafter only in private dealings.

Hard on Stockholders

This will work a severe hardship on the stockholders of those companies. This the officials admit. It will be such a hardship that certain other companies, which would like very much to withdraw their listing if the bill passed, are refrain from doing so. For it would mean that those stocks could no longer be used to anything like the present extent as collateral for loans, not only for stock exchange operations imposed in the bill, but because, as there would no longer be a constant record of the actual selling price of the stock, lenders would not be willing to advance as much on those stocks as security.

The objects of the new measure go far afield from that. They are linked in with the New Deal idea of regulating business, prices, profits, salaries, wages, and every detail connected with business, and as many corporation heads said privately on recent visits to Washington, the difference between the internal revenue bureau type of investigation and that of the federal trade commission is a horse of a very different color.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—There is a rising tide of belief here in Washington that President Roosevelt's policies are leaning more away from the things that marked them as the "New Deal," a year ago. It can be doubted no longer that he is veering away to some extent from the experimentation that constituted this program advanced by the myriads of professors with whom he surrounded himself at the start of his administration. Professors are not carrying the water on their backs that they did awhile ago, and it has been noted that Mr. Roosevelt is less and less willing to lean before he looks.

Turning Conservative

Upon the cut of the fabric at this time, I believe the consensus to be that Mr. Roosevelt is turning to a more stable, as distinguished from a theoretical, foundation for the future. The developments have been predicated apparently on a swing in public sentiment. Obviously, without public sentiment behind any plan, there will be a dearth of confidence. By all and sundry, it is said the President is seeking to establish confidence. Most of all, and finally, it seems he has arrived at the necessity for winning confidence of business people, big and little, so that distinct changes can be expected through the summer when congress is not here to worry him.

Doubtless, the trend towards the conservative instead of the more radical course he followed earlier, is due to the fact that the bulk of the people now feel they have a right to state objections. Surely, objections are being stated to a greater extent than at any time since he took office. In other words, the theories of the professors have proved bad in spots, and any nation of ambitious people eventually will tire of preachments. The danger is that the pendulum will swing too far, and that the good and practicable things of the New Deal may be washed out by a wave of conservatism and reaction.

There are numerous things to which attention may be called in demonstrating that Mr. Roosevelt is not going to experiment too much in the future. His firm stand against nationalization of silver is one. His determination to tinker no further with the currency is another. A third indication is the President's decision to let that the original goods or durable goods industry can have some relief, and another intimation is the way congress has acted about legislation to control the security exchanges. The President could have put congress' teeth in the stock exchange bill if he wanted to do so. But he has held off. Likewise, he has taken a position against payment of deposits in closed banks by use of inflation. The vehicles of those who would go far on the radical courses.

Mr. Roosevelt has not stressed NRA expansion as his radical followers thought he was going to press it. Those who conceived NRA still do not admit that NRA has ground down the little businesses in the interest of the big ones, but Mr. Roosevelt apparently sees it. He is represented in high places as hoping that the NRA board of review will show up the weaknesses of the codes so that modifications can be made where necessary. Many of the "NRA crowd," as they have come to be known here, are disgruntled about it. They think that NRA, like the king, can do no wrong. Being a keen student and a master psychologist, Mr. Roosevelt sees those things and he has taken hold of them apparently before they have become so bad as to destroy whatever benefits that may accrue.

Too Idealistic

What is the cause for the change in the scenery? There are two reasons of which I hear discussion most frequently. Many of the plans were too idealistic for use universally among a practical people, and, the second, there is a tendency to write "Thou shalt not" into too much legislation and regulation for carrying out the recovery program.

The American people, as I judge them, will obey orders that change their lives around for just so long. Then, they blow up in a big way.

For an example of what I mean, the congress recently passed the so-called bankhead bill that will limit the production of cotton in the United States to ten million bales annually. It is compulsory. Unless a cotton farmer agrees to reduce his acreage and comply with the other terms of the law, "thou shalt not" market what is grown without the payment of a heavy tax, a tax so burdensome as to remove any possibility of profit. Mr. Roosevelt signed the bill and gave it his blessing, but I heard any number of newspaper correspondents and observers remark when they read his statement that he was saying merely that he "hoped" it would be of some value. Surely, he did not predict success.

All through the various recovery laws and regulations, one finds so many "Thou shalt nots" that one of the eastern metropolitan newspapers printed a cartoon, captioned "Dreams of Forgotten Age." The chief character in the cartoon was that figure so famous as representing "Prohibition."

The thought behind the cartoon was deeper in the minds of some than just the humor and lesson that it portrayed. Therein was a story of "too much Washington." Sooner or later, unless I have misread my history, there is to be a broadside of reaction rise up against "too much Washington" in the way lives are lived. The current period seems to be the high point, but it had its beginning, in my opinion, when the Constitutional amendment was adopted providing for direct election of senators.

Causes Irritation

There was, if you pause to remember, a general disgust with the steady procession of indictments, arrests and trials of minor liquor law violators. Even consistent and conscientious supporters of prohibition now and then burst forth against the administration of it when men and women, otherwise respectable in their communities, were convicted as criminals because they dared to take a drink.

The Department of Agriculture supplied the newspaper correspondents with an announcement a few days ago that two men in South Dakota had been arrested and had pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States in connection with the 1933 emergency hog buying program. The announcement described the case as "of national importance and interest as similar fraud cases are pending in other federal courts."

It will be recalled that there was quite a bit of cheating in the administration of CWA job planning. There was some stench, too, in the handling of seed loans in two or three parts of the country, and there is plenty of complaint about some window-box farmers who have been drafting regulations in AAA. NRA has been under fire from time to time because, in some instances, vast industries were compelled to sit across a table in drafting a code with a man who had had no experience whatsoever in that industry.

So what wonder is it that a man will do as one about whom I heard. He boasted about his chicken dishes. That is, among friends, he said: "Of course, I am a chiseler. Of course, I am making money out of this code. But the reason I am doing it is because I am thinking of the next few years—when the tax collector is going to take virtually all of the profits I make to pay up for this waste."

In my roaming around in Washington, I find more and more people who are asking which of the two major political parties, the Democrats or the Republicans, is going to have courage enough to pull the government back to Washington as a government, and allow people to run their own business?

Looks Like Backtracking

It is important to record, in this connection, that the Department of Agriculture already is taking a step in the direction of allowing private business to run its own affairs by its announcement that government control of dairy production is not to be attempted at this time. From the information I have been able to pick up here and there in high places, I suspect that dairy production control is never going to be attempted, but Secretary Wallace's announcement said only that control would not be attempted "for the present."

One can only guess whether this is the beginning of a trend, a backtracking, from the governmental control extreme to which some of the professors would like to have gone. They advanced the control idea to the ultimate in the Bankhead compulsory cotton production control law and they have pushed the control principle almost as far in wheat, tobacco, corn and hog industries. With regard to the dairy business, however, they ran into trouble. The stumbling blocks and obstacles met in that attempt illustrate better than anything that I know that industries in the United States have interests too divergent to permit of a universal regulation. I mean by this: practices and problems vary in every locality and there are few industries which can be lined up under the same rules of operation without some of them being handicapped and others profiting unduly.

The dairy industry gave proof of this fact, according to the announcement by Mr. Wallace which said: there would be no attempt to undertake a production control program without the support of a substantial majority of the industry.

—14—

"It's a long carry, where we're going. If you'll give me your word to come along, walk fast and not hinder me, I'll untie your hands."

She shook her head and made a courageously spirited sound.

"Good! If that's how you feel I should have no qualms. It's my liberty I'm working for, now. Nothing else counts!"

He stripped off his belt, backed Kate to a birch tree, secured one end of the strap about her wrists and tied the other to a branch at the height of her shoulders. By drawing down she could hold her hands at the level with the small of her back; when she did not resist the pull of the branch they were held high, in a position that strained muscles and tendons and forced her to bend far forward.

"I won't be gone so long," Franz said, after he had swung the canoe to his shoulders. "Maybe, by the time I get back you'll be more reasonable."

Actually, he was not gone long, but to the girl a whole epoch passed before his return, unwelcome though it was. She wept at times and breathed irregularly. She tried to stand motionless at intervals and listen in the faint hope that help might be coming. But who could know what had happened? Who could guess where she was? Old Tim's body might have been discovered long since, but what would that mean to McNally and that man who had kissed her?

They had called him Young Jim, but he was not her brother. Of that she was certain. Certain, too, of other things; his strength and resourcefulness and courage. Some unidentified wonder-worker was on the job at Good-Bye and had been for over a month. Could he help her, now? Could he come, and in time? . . . She began to sob again.

Franz reappeared without a warning sound. He rearranged his pack and asked:

"Will you keep still if I remove the gag?"

She shook her head.

"Fair enough! Will you walk?"

Again she indicated refusal.

"Well, once I wanted to hold you in my arms. Now . . . I'll have to!"

He unfastened the belt which held Kate prisoner, lifted her quickly and, holding her close, took the trail with his double burden. He went to the limit of his endurance and put her down with an oath.

"You kitten!" he snarled. "Holding you so . . . stirs memories and impulses!"

He kissed her roughly on the cheek and she struck out at him with an arm which still ached and throbbed from her experience at the landing.

He laughed, then, hoarsely.

"Don't like it, eh? Perhaps you'll have to. . . . We'll go on. Will you walk now?"

She would walk, yes. A new terror was injected into her heart to mingle with other fears by the burden of passion which his laugh revealed. She nodded and turned, starting before him.

"Good!" he said. "It's better."

And now to delay him became an objective. Kate halted in the gloom of the trail and tried to make him understand she was tired, needed respite. He jerked the gag free from her lips, holding a hand ready to stifle any outcry.

"I'm weak! I'm tired!" she pleaded. "I'll walk as long as I can, but I must rest!"

"Sit down here, then," he said grudgingly. "I'll give you a minute. . . . And I'll leave this off, if I have your word that you won't screech."

"No!" she said stoutly and the bandage again pressed her lips tightly.

As she sat on a boulder she worked her feet constantly in the trail, softly scuffing up the forest duff to attract the eye of any who might come that way later.

Franz ordered her on again. She obeyed reluctantly.

"Get along!" he snapped. "Get along faster!"

Kate was stubborn. He picked her up again roughly and pressed forward, holding her unnecessarily close, and she writhed in his embrace until he set her down. Then, for a time, she walked rapidly.

He permitted her a brief rest further on. To gain time, later, she tripped and fell purposely and lay on the ground sobbing.

"Get on!" the man raged.

She tore the bandage from her lips.

"You coward!" she moaned as he stooped and lifted her to her feet, ready again to still her outcries with a hand. "You'll never get away! You'll never get away from . . . from . . ."

She had faith but no name for the man in whom that faith reposed.

"Your Young Jim, eh? Mean him?" He sneered. "The d—d pretender! You didn't know he was using your brother's name and authority until today, did you?"

"Do you think he'd try to deceive me?" she asked, bound to betray nothing.

He stared at her in the darkness. She could feel his breath on her forehead.

"You're lying, now. What's he to you, anyhow?"

"My friend!"—stoutly and honestly. She felt sure of that much.

"Friend, h—l! Listen, Kate. . . . Handsome stranger comes to the rescue of the operation and the lady in financial distress falls for him. That it?"

"No. Of course not."

A surge of jealousy swept into his heart. He laughed scornfully. "The idea of you falling for a squaw man!"

"I don't believe you," she said simply. "Besides, even if I did, even if it were true, it would be beside the point. He has done so many impossible things this summer that finding you and taking you back to answer for what you did this evening should be a simple matter."

Franz slung up his pack with a grunt.

"Devil with him!" he muttered uneasily and glanced behind. "But we'll get on, regardless. I'll leave that gag off for a while. Screams in here won't carry far and in return I'll expect that you'll walk faster. Otherwise . . ."

He left that threat unfinished.

As the stars began to fade they reached the Mad Woman. Walking through long grasses, they came to the canoe on the river bank, just below the swift water.

"You stand here," Franz said. "He'll have one more thing to guess about, if he gets this far!"

He launched the canoe, put the duffle in it and, then, track line over his shoulder, waded into the rapid.

The girl understood his strategy. Followers of their trail would see this sign, would believe that they had gone down-stream and would waste days, perhaps, in searching the lower country.

The man turned about and called:

"Come on, now. Step into the water there and wade up after me."

Swiftly, with firm drags of her heel, Kate etched in the wet sand a crude arrow, its point up the river.

Before Franz had cause to call again she was in the water, wading after him as he had bidden, leaving an unmistakable message for any who might be coming to aid her.

And one was coming!

Through the darkness Drake paddled up the Good-Bye. It was long after midnight before he approached the flat where the trail came down the divide which separated Good-Bye from Mad Woman.

He landed at the foot of the trail, and turned on his flash. And after he had played the beam about the trampled landing and examined the birch he knew what had happened, even to Kate's tortured wait, bound, helpless.

Rage swept him and for the first time in his life he was shaken by the desire to maim and kill as, canoe on his back, he plunged into the trail, trotting beneath his burden.

But only man tracks were there, revealed by the shaft from his flashlight. It puzzled him. Just the man sign, indicating two trips. But on one carry he had been weighted down until he staggered and sank deeply in soft places.

Then he saw where Kate had been put down for the first time and the thought that Franz had held her slender body in his arms made blood pound in his ears.

It was broad daylight when he reached the Mad Woman. He followed the footprints down the branch of the trail that led to the right. They had stopped a few rods from the water's edge; then they had gone on and the girl had stood waiting while Franz loaded his canoe.

She had stood still but not idly. The indicating arrow she had drawn in the wet sand stared up at him and he grinned and said aloud: "Good girl!"

Where Franz would elect to leave the Mad Woman, Steve could not know. But he could not be so far in the lead now. These tracks left in the silt were not old.

* * * * * * *

In a little bay of the lake, as dawn came up, Mary Wolf was blowing up the breakfast fire. With the blaze going, she looked at the meagre bed where her father lay, his back to her, and spoke. He did not answer.

Slowly, apprehensively, she moved toward the crude shelter. She stood outside and bent forward, a hand at her breast, to see the face of the wrinkled, old man. She sank slowly to one knee and touched him. He did not move. Old Jim Wolf had followed his fathers.

CHAPTER XI

FRANZ believed he had left only sign which would indicate that he had gone in the opposite direction. He stopped paddling to roll a cigarette, to consider, audibly, the matter of food. But he did not finish what he had started to say; did not complete the cigarette.

Far, far behind him a fleck had appeared on the water. He broke his words short, arrested all movement and then, opening his fingers, let paper and tobacco drop to his knees.

"So now . . . More shooting!" he asked and Kate started up to a sitting posture.

For an interval both strained their eyes to observe that approaching canoe and then Franz laughed.

"If it's one, removing him is simple. . . . And it looks like one!" he growled.

He swung toward a point of rushes which projected from the nearest island.

The girl, gone white, now, did not speak as they glided into the screening growth. Franz drove one paddle into the bottom and hitched forward, placed the other on the opposite side of the light craft and turned to Kate. Queerly fascinated by his deliberation she watched him draw his pistol, slip out the clip and fill it to capacity.

"You're going to shoot . . . from ambush?" she asked.

For answer he grasped her quickly in his arms, drawing her head tightly against his shoulder. With his handkerchief he bound her mouth again despite her efforts to break away and, again removing his belt, twisted the leather about her wrists.

"I Won't Be Gone So Long," Franz Said After He Had Swung the Canoe to His Shoulders.

"From ambush," he said. "I'm either making my get-away or exacting a heavy price. And if you try to make one move you'll be the first!"

He stroked the trigger significantly.

Steve Drake kept on. He watched constantly for another craft, scanned the horizon for the smoke of a campfire, even eyed closely the scattered flecks of froth and bubbles on the placid water in the hope they might yield some information of significance. No sign of life was present, however, except water fowl.

In the canoe screened by rushes Franz spoke the first word for half an hour.

"Alone . . . on the foot." Relief was in his tone, along with a terrible sort of elation. He twitched the muzzle of his pistol toward Kate and added: "I'd as soon send you with him as not. Remember that, if you please. When this is over, I'll land you at the head of the lake. You'll get back, somehow."

Steve approached the islands in a quandary. Each moment that passed added to Franz's chances of escape, and as for Kate . . . He drew his shoulders upward in a shuddering shrug when he thought of her alone with that renegade.

Ducks flew up as he slipped past the first island and on their flight pitched toward a patch of rushes off to his left.

Gracefully, the ducks plummeted for it and then the leader, with a quick bank and a rise, was in full flight again, sounding an unmistakable note of warning to the others. Something was there, hidden from Drake by the rushes, which frightened the ducks. . . .

Almost in a reflex Steve dropped his paddle and grasped the rifle which lay between his feet, and hitched forward, weapon poised and ready to fire.

He was half-way erect when a man's head and shoulders emerged above the rushes and a girl's scream, sharp and clear, carried to him across the water.

The man was Franz, fifty yards from him. Franz, whipping his gun hand upward and Franz's pistol leaping as it barked!

Steve was poised on bent knees, clapping the stock of the rifle to his shoulder as the other fired. It was as if a sledge had struck the barrel of his gun, as though hot iron seared the thumb of his left hand, and the impact set him reeling, sagging, fighting to stay in the canoe, but, despite his efforts, pitching over sideways with a mighty splash.

The gun slipped from his right hand as the butt raked the gunwale. He was in the water, on his back, the rifle slipping through his weakened fingers, sinking down into the depths to leave him unarmed.

He came up, the canoe screening him for the moment, and again he heard the girl scream. A bullet tore through the canoe at arm's length to the right of him, and he sank at once, feet foremost, beneath the surface.

Kate Flynn, in a ferment of fright, had lifted her bound hands to the handkerchief across her mouth as Franz rose for his first shot. One jerk and the gag was about her throat and, heedless of the penalty that might be exacted from her, she had screamed her warning.

"D—n you!" Franz snarled. "You'll pay for . . ."

But he did not look at her. He stood watching, waiting, having more important matters than her disregard for his threats to occupy him at the moment. The girl tugged frantically at the belt holding her hands.

"Stop!" she cried after that second shot. "Stop it! He's helpless and you . . ."

Her voice failed her as Franz shot again and still again, drilling the empty canoe with lead.

He waited after that fourth shot, poised, pistol ready. He hoped that he had hit to kill, but was not certain and took no chances.

Steve, his lungs bursting, ceased his struggle to remain submerged, looked upward to locate his canoe and shot to the surface.

He all but gained that meager shelter without betraying himself. Only the flip of one hand beyond the bow gave him away, but that was enough and Franz tensed as he took careful aim to bore the canoe at the point where he knew, now, the other lung gasping for breath.

Kate saw and understood. She felt the tremor which ran through Franz's body as he steeled himself. And then as his hand squeezed to send the bullet speeding to where it surely would find a mark, she threw her whole body to the right as sharply, as vigorously as she could and drove the rail of his canoe to the water's edge.

The pistol exploded. The bullet tore up the water harmlessly a few yards beyond the rushes and Franz, with a retching oath, stepped into shallow water. The rising gunwale caught his toe and he sprawled into the rushes, throwing out his hands to save himself.

"D—n you—" he cried again, lunging to his feet. His hands, his wrists, were thick with mud and as he floundered up he turned the pistol to look into the barrel and swore again as he saw silt clogging it.

And Kate called shrilly:

"Quick! Quick! He can't shoot! He can't—"

Franz shook the gun savagely, tore at the slide to make it function and looked back to see Steve shoving the canoe recklessly from before him, striking out toward the rushes in a long, swift crawl stroke.

Franz, rapping the pistol on the canoe, watched Steve's rapid approach as he worked the slide frantically. It began to slip easier. He gave the weapon one more flip and mud from the barrel spattered the water about his knees. He turned, as Kate, with a desperate wrench, freed her hands. He laughed and raised his arm once more. His man was there, wholly exposed, coming closer all the time. . . .

"Come on!" Franz called thickly. "Come on . . . to h—l!"

And Kate was on her knees, wrenched one upended paddle from its place in the lake bottom. She tore it free, swung it with all her might and Franz, seeing from the tail of his eye, ducked sideways. But he was too late. The edge of the blade hit his arm, silhouetted down the sleeve to his hand, caught the pistol barrel and the weapon, with a spin and plop, disappeared into the roily water.

"You'll pay . . . You'll . . ." he choked angrily.

May Day Not Merry
Giant Bootleg Industry
Good News, New Homes
Converting Criminals

May 1 was the day Europe devotes to labor and radical demonstrations. Fortunately, this country selects a later date for Labor day. Even so, Chicago and New York were on the alert, fearing that American branches of Europe's radicalism might become active by contagion. In Paris alone, 40,000 guards, many tanks and machine-gun patrols filled the streets. Several were injured.

There was a general strike in Spain, and Cuba was worried about attacks on United States property. Such was the early news.

The advantage of a dictator who really dictates was shown in Italy, Germany, Turkey, Russia. In those countries no May day or Labor day agitation develops. The people get orders and obey them.

In Germany, the day was devoted to Nazi speeches, telling how much happier a workingman is under Hitler than he ever was before.

In Italy, Turkey and Russia it was "business as usual," with the dictator in command. The dictator idea may spread before the world gets over its crop of troubles.

The government turns an army of 2,500 agents loose against bootlegging, which has become a serious matter. During prohibition, bootleggers only flouted the Constitution. Now they cut down government income.

Figures supplied by Joseph H. Choate, Jr., director of federal alcohol control, show that bootleggers are manufacturing more whisky than the total legal consumption. And the bootlegging distilleries are not little "moonshine" affairs, but enormous distilleries, "with stills tall enough to extend through three or four stories of well equipped buildings."

In the first quarter of 1934 stills were seized with a capacity for producing 68,000,000 gallons of alcohol spirits a year. Bootlegging enterprises involve robbing the government of hundreds of millions a year.

Good news, fortunately, is not lacking.

Business better in many directions.

The government has $300,000,000 of "new money" available for building American homes and modernizing old homes. That should put many to work and create cheerfulness. To live in a home run down, unpainted, dilapidated, is gloomy, discouraging.

Leland Harvey, notorious jailbreaker of Georgia, recently pardoned by Governor Talmadge, with the advice, "Go and sin no more," takes the advice seriously. He attended a revival meeting conducted by Rev. Wade H. House at Macon, Ga., and joined the church.

This offers an idea to police that chase bandits and can't catch any. Let the police buy Salvation Army uniforms, drums, flutes, tambourines and hymn books, and try converting criminals that they can't catch.

Nothing could be more pleasing than to see Dillinger, accompanied by two policemen in Salvation Army uniforms, walking up a sawdust trail, shouting, "Hallelujah, I'm saved!"

The brain trust, using big words, automatically called the small farm on which a man might make a living for himself and his family the "subsistence homestead." Now it appears that some can't pronounce subsistence, others don't know what it means, and a new short name is sought. What do you suggest?

This depression, even with all encouraging news—"5,000,000 put to work," etc.—reminds you of the voyage of the "ancient mariner," who went drifting along, "the first that ever burst" into unknown seas. Who or what it was that shot our albatross, and brought all these troubles on us, Wall Street, technocracy, overproduction, the war, or what, nobody knows. But we have them, and can only sail on through the gloomy waters, thankful for occasional encouraging voices.

The birth rate falls alarmingly in Scotland. It is even suggested by "respectable" people that "some form of polygamy" may be necessary.

W. H. Phillips, head of the Association of Registrars, fears a one-half reduction in population.

Illegitimate births have been numerous and not too severely criticized in Scotland. Widespread information concerning birth control may have diminished their number, and caused the polygamy suggestion.

Any falling off in the Scotch birth rate would be a loss to the world.

It needs as many Scotch men and women as it can get.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Ask Your Doctor Questions

IT IS certainly encouraging to physicians to see the interest that people now take in keeping well, or rather keeping fit.

Your doctor will tell you that he has a number of patients who come to him once or twice a year to be thoroughly overhauled. They have already learned that they save their health and considerable money by visiting their dentist twice a year, and believe that the rest of the body should receive the same attention.

Thus the doctor finds after making a complete examination—eyes, ears, nose, throat, heart, lungs, blood pressure, blood, urine, outlining diet, sleep, and exercise habits, and explaining the results, that the patient wants still more information.

After the examination is complete, the patient goes to his pocket and takes out a sheet of paper on which are from five to twenty-five questions about himself that he wants the doctor to answer.

Some of these questions seem very simple, almost foolish, in fact, but the average doctor remembers that he has made a special study of the body, its workings and its needs, and gives his patient, however intelligent, has been too busy at his own line of work, to think of study much about his body.

Thus the up-to-date physician, who is really interested in his patient and not in his patient's ailments only, explains or answers all questions in simple language easily understood by the patient.

Naturally, in answering a patient's questions the doctor must know how to acquaint his patient with his true condition without alarming him, thus showing him the way to live safely and happily.

The days are long past when a doctor feels it can be unprofessional to talk freely to his patient, for as Dr. Charles Mayo, of the Mayo clinic, says, "any physician who does not take his patient into his confidence is simply not up to date."

So when you go to your doctor to be overhauled, think about anything that may be affecting your health—a slight cough, losing or increasing weight, frequent head colds, frequent chills, frequent "gas" attacks, attacks of diarrhoea, constipation, headaches or aches anywhere in the body.

Don't be afraid or ashamed to write these things down and ask your doctor about them.

Why More Mental Patients Are Now Cured

ALTHOUGH the number of mental cases is increasing and number more than half the total of patients in all hospitals, nevertheless the new methods in use to restore mental health may more than keep up with this increasing number.

As you know the number now being restored to health is about six of every ten entering these mental institutions.

In former days a patient entered with a history of being sullen and quiet, or noisy and quarrelsome, and he was treated with suspicion by the head physician right down to the lowest employee about the institution.

He was closely watched and was given little freedom. His food and rest were supervised but that was about all.

What do we find now?

Dr. W. C. Menninger, in the Journal of American Medical Association, states that a patient enters a mental hospital, not with symptoms but with problems.

What can be done for him?

It is not sufficient that he be made physically comfortable; rest and freedom from responsibility alone will not satisfy his psychologic or mental needs. His problems must be studied intensively.

Solving the problem can be worked out in two ways: first, by making his surroundings pleasant or more agreeable than what he has had at home or elsewhere; and second, by a series of friendships scientifically arranged during his stay in the institution.

From the moment a patient enters the hospital an attempt should be made to provide him with surroundings suited to his needs and wishes—to adapt the institution to him rather than adapt him to the institution.

Scientifically controlled "friendship" is regarded as the chief factor in the process of recovery. Thus doctors, nurses, orderlies, everybody around the institution make it a point to be friendly and do everything possible to make the patient understand that they are anxious to see him get well.

You can readily see how different this is from the former methods where the patient was given food, rest, and a little exercise daily, as nothing more was thought necessary.

Speedy Fish

The bonito, a member of the mackerel family, is one of the speediest of fishes. It is estimated that a single sweep of its powerful tail will propel it for at least 100 yards.

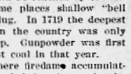

PRIMITIVE COAL MINING

Coal was first dug in the British Isles on the south shore of the Firth of Forth. For centuries there were no means of draining coal pits, and early coal was obtained in hilly districts, where it could be reached by tunneling. In some places shallow "bell pits" were dug. In 1719 the deepest coal mine in the country was only 360 feet deep. Gunpowder was first used to blast coal in that year.

In pits where firedamp accumulated, it was exploded each morning by "a resolute man of purpose," who went down clothed in rags saturated with water and provided with a long pole at the end of which was a lighted candle. There was no form of safety lamp until the year 1815.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

Says the Avon Park Times:

A recent article by Russell Kay brings us great mental relief. As everybody knows, the government has been advancing great sums of money for farm relief and what not. We had the idea that somebody would have to pay this money back sometime. We tried not to think of it, but occasionally the thought would intrude. Now Mr. Kay makes us happy and clears away all the clouds with the statement that nobody will have to pay it back. It will pay itself back.

"Momentum," "added values," and "new wealth," Mr. Kay assures us, will turn the trick, and the loans will be self liquidating. We trust this optimistic outlook includes our personal obligations, too. Self addressed stamped envelope enclosed, Russell, and please advise us when and how we can get a moderate supply of this here, new, "momentum."

Well, that's a fair question. Not bein' a college professor, I don't know anything about gold or silver standards, or how to inflate or deflate the dollar, but since everybody else is writin' on the subject I figured I might as well try my hand at it.

Now this "personal debt" proposition is easy to explain even if you don't understand it after I get through. It's like pullin' rabbits out of a hat or the answer you get on a Ouija Board.

Anyhow, suppose I walked up to you and said, "Here Buddy is $10. I want you to keep it for me. I'm goin' swimmin' and I'm afraid I'll lose it or something."

So you took the ten spot and put it in your pocket. About that time your bootlegger came along and started to get hard about that ten smackers you owed him.

You didn't have any money of your own, but remembering my ten you handed it over to him, figurin' you could scrape up another for me somewhere.

The bootlegger went down the street and his tailor stopped him and said: "How about that ten bucks you owe me." So again the ten changes hands.

It was a hot afternoon, so the tailor decided to go swimmin'. When he gets to the beach he finds you sittin' on the sand waitin' for me to come out so you can explain about my dough.

He stepped up to you and said: "Hey Buddy, I didn't expect to find you here, but I'm glad I did. Here is that ten dollars I owe you for the settin' eggs the wife got last week."

About this time I come out of the bath house all dressed and ready to go. I say: "I'll take that ten back now if you don't mind."

So you fork it over. I look at it closely before I put it in my pocket and exclaim: "Well, I'll be hornswoggled, this cock-eyed bill is counterfeit and I start to rip it up."

You start to stutter and stammer and I say its not your fault and besides I won it on Bolita anyhow, so what difference does it make?

So you see how it works. You didn't have a cent and my money was not good, yet you paid a ten dollar debt, so did the bootlegger and the tailor. You returned my money and everyone is square.

METHODS OF CURBING THE KIDNAPERS

A Havenite was heard to suggest that all the states and the federal government make it a 10-year prison penalty for anyone to pay ransom to kidnapers. He takes the attitude that when the criminals knew that people were liable to punishment for paying ransoms the criminals would desist from their kidnaping tactics and there would be no more abductions for profit. That might have the desired effect, but possibly others feel that the electric chair or the noose for the kidnapers (together with other racketeers and gangsters) would have a more sobering effect on the criminal element. Both ideas might be put into practice with beneficial results.—Winter Haven Chief.

FORUM

C. C. C. Company 1418, Fla. Camp P-56
Sebring, Florida, May 16, 1934.

Editor, Avon Park Times,
Sebring, Florida.
Dear Sir:

May I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to your newspaper and to the citizens of Highlands County for the kind consideration given our camp.

The Civilian Conservation Corps Company No. 1418 is to move to Sulphur Springs, Tampa. The first platoon leaves Thursday, May 17, and the entire company will be located at the camp site by Saturday, May 19.

It is with deep regret that the company bids farewell to its many friends in Sebring and Avon Park, and to the beautiful country that has been its home. The Civilian Conservation Corps company, which is to replace us, is to be congratulated on their good fortune in securing an opportunity to enjoy the happiness that we have had during our stay with you. It is our hope that we will find the same spirit of co-operation in our new location that we found here.

In conclusion I also wish to express appreciation to the city and county officials for their courtesy to the camp.

Highlands County; — "Au Revoir."

Very truly yours,
WARD W. FARNHAM,
Captain 6th Cavalry (RES)

Sunday School Lesson

FOR MAY 20, 1934.

(Compiled by Moore Haven-Religious-Literary Society)
Subject: The Future of the Kingdom.

Golden Text: "The Kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ: and he shall reign for ever and ever." Revelation 11: 15.

Printed Text: Matt. 25: 1-13.

Time. — Tuesday afternoon of Christ's last week.

Place.—Christ uttered this discourse on the Mount of Olives, just east of Jerusalem.

"Then," the first word in the lesson, refers to the second coming of Christ (and to each person, probably means the date of his death). The "lamps" were hollow cups, to be filled with oil, and having a rounded pecnacle for the wick. The foolish virgins failed to carry any additional oil to fill their lamps. "There was nothing insincere about them; they were only foolish and shallow. They had some oil, but not enough." (Dummelow).

They tried to make preparation, when it was too late. To the person who is spiritually prepared, the second coming of Christ will be an occasion of joy and not of fear, "and the door was shut" * * clearly implies that when Christ comes probation ends. Many other passages in the New Testament each likewise. Attempts to prepare ourselves after he comes will be in vain. The lesson clearly teaches that one person cannot be saved by the religion or service of any other individual; that the only redemptive sacrifice was that made by Christ.

Our lesson test is as follows: "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish.

They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them: but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. And at midnight there was a cry made. Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps. And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for our lamps are gone out. But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: But go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, verily I say unto you, I know you not. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh."

In the application of the parable, the bridegroom represents Jesus himself, and his coming at midnight symbolizes Christ's second coming, in which he will take the world by surprise. The marriage feast represents the heavenly state, which is similarly pictured in a parable of the Great Supper (Luke 14: 15-24) and the Royal Marriage Feast (Matt. 22: 1-14).

The "wise virgins" represent sincere, earnest Christians who are spiritually prepared for any emergency. But the parable has to do chiefly with the foolish virgins. Opinions differ as to whether they represent merely professing Christians. Their lamps burned for a time and they seemed to have a real regard for the bridegroom. But in any case they did not have enough religion to suffice when the crisis came. They probably represent shallow Christians. The religion of such people is a surface affair and does not penetrate to the depths of their being. Such religion may seem to be sufficient when all is going well, but it will not suffice when we are called upon to meet our Lord.

Watching for the Bridegroom, * * did not consist of looking continually down the road to see if the bridegroom was coming. The wise maidens went to sleep when it was the natural time to go to sleep, the same as the foolish virgins did, and they are not criticized for so doing. However, they were prepared to meet the bridegroom whenever he should come, and this is exactly what is required of us. "They that were ready went in with him to the marriage." Their watching consisted in being ready. "Watch therefore" and "Be ye also ready" are practically synonymous as used by Jesus.

Any person who is constantly ready for Christ's second coming will be spiritually prepared for any other crisis; and the great crisis which will come to every person, except those who are alive at the end, is death.

The great practical lesson which the New Testament teaches in connection with Christ's second coming is the need of being spiritually prepared therefor.

TO OPEN NEW FAIR MAY 26

Lower Cost to Visitors; 84 Miles of Free Exhibits.

Chicago.—A new World's Fair will open here May 26.

It is not simply an encore of the 1933 Century of Progress Exposition. In addition to many startling new features it retains all those of last year's Fair that were too important and popular to leave out—but even they have been enlarged, changed and improved.

This time, too, you will cost little to see and little to get to. There are 84 miles of interesting free exhibits. The Exposition will look after the visitor's comfort hospitably, efficiently and inexpensively. Last year the average visitor spent only $1.17 a day inside the grounds.

World's Greatest Fountain.

Workmen have torn down more than 100 of the old buildings. New ones have replaced them. The entire physical appearance is different, with new color and new landscaping everywhere. New lighting effects at night, even more daring than those of the 1933 Fair, surpass anything of the kind ever attempted anywhere. Scores of new exhibits have been added, one of them the largest ever built. Virtually every exhibit held over has undergone considerable change.

Comparable to the ferris wheel of the 1893 Fair and the sky ride of 1933, the outstanding single feature is the largest fountain ever built. It is a fountain of water sufficient to serve a city of 1,000,000 population, and its spectacular lighting, in five colors, draws as much current as an average city of 150,000.

Visitors "Tour World."

Fifteen foreign villages, twelve of them new, all of them patterned after the lovely Belgian village of the 1933 Fair, make the Exposition more truly worthy of the name "World's" Fair than any predecessor ever was. They offer the visitor the unique opportunity of making, in effect, a tour of the world in a single day.

Eleven of the villages are on a street of their own, where the Midway stood last year. The old Midway has disappeared and a new and more thrilling one has been built on the Northerly Island beach.

On the street of foreign villages are reproductions of life and scenes in North Africa, England, the German Black Forest, Colonial America, Ireland, Italy, Tunis, Belgium, Paris and Spain; there is also a Mexican village and the Streets of Shanghai.

Ford, Packers New.

New to the Fair is the exhibit of the Ford Motor company, with its $1,500,000 exposition of the drama and progress of transportation, spread over eleven acres. Not the least important and exhibitory will be that of Henry Ford's own solution to the farmer's problem; he will show the farmer exactly how he can bring relief to himself by raising and processing soybeans.

The great packing companies, represented jointly last year, have come in separately, and in a big way. Swift and Company has the entire 23rd street bridge for exhibits and has built a huge band shell and amphitheater for free concerts. For ten weeks, beginning July 1, the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play there twice a day. Armour and Company tells the story of the progress of the industry in its large new building in the Lagoon. Wilson and Company has part of a packing plant actually in operation.

Standard Oil (Indiana) will present daily, in a new arena, a daring animal act with thirty-three lions and tigers performing in the same cage at the same time. Science will be made to perform seeming miracles every day in a scientific revue in the court of the Hall of Science. There will be plenty of free entertainment elsewhere on the grounds.

The Word "Bankrupt"

The word bank means bench. The Lombards, who introduced banking into England, used benches erected on the market place for the exchange of money. When one of these money lenders failed, his bank or bench was broken up or disrupted, originating the word bankrupt.

LEGAL NOTICES

Sans Souci Club Has Kid Party

Members of the Sans Souci contract club were entertained with a buffet supper Monday evening at the Myers home with Mrs. R. L. Brown, Miss Mildred Myers and Mrs. Raymond Dilley as hostesses.

Invitations written on children's stationery were issued as follows:

Come to our "childhood" party

At the home of Sadie and Mid, May 14th at 6:30 p. m.,

Is the date and time of your bid. Please come dressed as children

Bringing memories of years long past,

If you fail, take this as a warning

Your fate will be "an outcast."

After enjoying a delicious dinner served on the porch, with ice cream cones and animal crackers for dessert, the guests were ushered into the yard where they played games such as "follow the leader," "drop the handkerchief" and "London bridge is falling down."

Later they were invited into the house where several progressions of contract were enjoyed. Attractive tallies of colored cut-out characters from comic strips were tied to the favors which were miniature dolls with candy wrapped in cellophane paper, partners being found by matching dolls.

Each guest was presented with a prize according to the number on the back of her talley.

Those enjoying this gala event were Mesdames: Joe Bass, C. R. Ginn, Jr., Freed Peden, L. E. Hagood, Floyd Johnson, Ben Stewart, Misses Millie Pearson, Louise Houck, Hettie Hundertmark, Mary Lou St. Clair, Elizabeth Atchley, Alma Harriell and Eleanor Bryant.

Mrs. Bell Hostess To Wednesday Club

Mrs. C. S. Bell charmingly entertained the Wednesday afternoon bridge club at her home in the Hobbs apartments on Wednesday.

A variety of flowers were placed about the party rooms and after the games a dainty salad course was served to the guests.

Prizes for the afternoon went to Mrs. Roland Droit and Mrs. J. L. Wells for high and second high scores.

Members of the club present were Mesdames J. L. Tayler, W. E. Dawson, Roland Droit, J. L. Wells, Lester Armstrong, E. E. Smith, R. A. Clark, Phil Abrams, and Joe Bass. Guests of the club were Mrs. Jack Head and Mrs. C. L. Johnson.

Fields Is Nutty Inventor in His First Star Role

"You're Telling Me" is the title of W. C. Fields' first starring picture for Paramount, which comes Sunday and Monday, to the Avon Theatre.

Featured with Fields are Larry "Buster" Crabbe, Joan Marsh and Adrienne Ames. Eric Kenton directed.

The picture, the screen play of which was written by Walter DeLeon and Paul Jones, tells the humorous story of the adventures which befall a goofy inventor when he tries to be a big name in his home town.

His daughter can't marry the man she loves, because she lives on the wrong side of the tracks in "Decent people just won't associate with them Bisbees," say the high-hats.

But when old pop runs into a foreign princess and they become side-kicks, things change. And the clever manner in which she and Fields turn the tables on the town, and bring about his daughter's happiness, brings this laugh-filled film drama to a most hilarious ending.

Scraps of Humor

HAS GOOD CHAUFFEUR

Captain Fried, hero of many ocean rescues, reaches New York but once a month on an average. The other day a friend asked him how he got from the ship to his home in Tuckahoe.

"By machine," he answered.

"How long does it take?"

"Less than an hour."

"You must have a good chauffeur," the friend said.

"Yes," said Fried, "but she won't let me drive!"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Another?

She had just accepted him, and they were blissfully discussing the "might-have-beens."

"Darling," he inquired in the confident tone of one who knows what the answer will be, "why didn't you accept that little donkey, Jones?"

"Because," she answered, dreamily, "I loved another."

Plain Dumb, Maybe

"What makes you think he was an amateur in crime?" asked the chief.

"Well," replied the cop, "there was a filling station on one corner, a speak-easy on another and a popular beauty parlor in the block, and yet he goes and robs a dinky gents furnishing store."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

More Appropriate

Mrs. Jewsmith—I suppose you'll want a den in our new house?

Mr. Jewsmith—I'd like one but I dead such a dog's life I guess I'll have to be content with a kennel.

Fellow Feeling

Lawyer—Your wife asks for heavy alimony and I fear she will get it.

Bob Speeder—Can you get it before some judge who is paying alimony himself?—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Different Kind

London child (on her first view of a rainbow)—Oo-mummy—what is it, advertising?—London Tatler.

OVERSTUDY

"A man must be a student all his days to hold a position like yours," remarked the admiring constituent.

"That is true," answered Senator Sorghum, "and, like a student, I get so weary of hard lessons that I am going in for more recreation. I am going to organize a movement to include a sports page in the Congressional Record."

Here O. K.

"Go easy. This hill's not too safe."

"Can't slow down—the brakes are not working."

"You don't mean to say—"

"Oh, don't get panicky, the horn's all right."—Toronto Globe.

Poor Credentials

Hurja—Say, I was a fool to tell that dentist that you sent me to him.

Sincepaw—Fool—what do you mean?

Hurja—Well, he just made me pay cash in advance.

HAS THAT ADVANTAGE

"Why do you write so many letters to the newspapers, old man? Do you suppose anybody wants to see your views in print?"

"Well, it's better than talking to yourself."

Good Start

An old-timer, meeting a young fellow at the racetrack, affably inquired: "Joe, how are you fixed?"

"Well, I've got five tips in a six-horse race."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Easily Explained

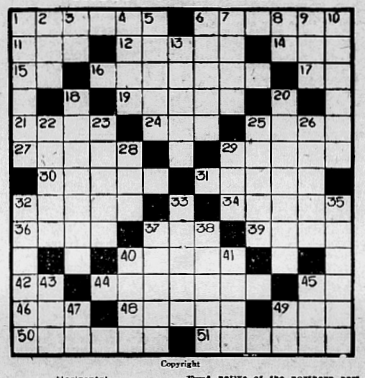

Judge—How can you be so mean as to swindle people who put confidence in you?

Prisoner—Well, your honor, they are the only ones that you can swindle.

Completely Revived

Grandpa (awakening from gland operation)—Oh, dear me, I know I'm going to be late for school today.

BEDTIME STORY
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

FARMER BROWN'S FRIENDS

AS PETER RABBIT sat admiring Rosebreast the Grosbeak, another bird appeared in the tree with Rosebreast.

"Who's that?" cried Peter.

"Mrs. Grosbeak, of course. Who else would it be?" sputtered Jenny, rather crossly.

"Never, never would I have guessed it," replied Peter. "She doesn't look the least bit like him except that she is the same size and shape."

This was quite true. There was no beautiful rose color about Mrs. Grosbeak. She wore brown and gray principally, with little touches of buff here and there, and with dark streaks on her breast. Over each eye was a whitish line. It didn't seem possible that she could be the mate of handsome Rosebreast. To Peter she looked more like an overgrown member of the Sparrow family. While Rosebreast sang, Mrs. Grosbeak was very busy picking buds and blossoms from the trees. This struck Peter as queer.

It Didn't Seem Possible That She Could Be the Mate of Handsome Rosebreast.

"What is she doing that for?" he inquired.

"For the same reason that you bite off sweet clover blossoms and leaves," replied Jenny Wren tartly.

"Do you mean to say that they live on buds and blossoms?" cried Peter. "I never heard of such a thing. I shouldn't think that Farmer Brown would like that."

"Tut, tut, tut, tut! You can ask more silly questions than anybody of my acquaintance," retorted Jenny Wren. "Of course, they don't live on buds and blossoms. If they depended on those they would soon starve to death. Use your head, Peter, use your head. You know well enough that buds and blossoms last only a very short time. The Grosbeaks eat a few just for the sake of variety, but they live mostly on bugs and insects. You ask Farmer Brown's boy who helps him most in his potato patch, and he'll tell you it's the Grosbeaks. They certainly do love potato bugs. They eat some fruit, but on the whole, they are about as useful folks around the garden as anyone I know. Now run along, Peter Rabbit, and don't bother me any more."

Peter didn't run along right away. He sat around watching Rosebreast and Mrs. Grosbeak until he happened to look up to see Farmer Brown's Boy just starting down through the Old Orchard. Then Peter decided it was time for him to leave.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes
By JEAN NEWTON

WHAT'S IN THE JOB

"THERE is no harder job in the world than looking after children. I don't envy any nurse or governess her job."

The woman who said this went on to mention the various details involved in the care of children. She omitted none, from the petty chores of inspecting finger nails to the necessity for keeping after a child to do homework or practice on the piano.

And in her viewpoint it was all wearing, exhausting, repetitious drudgery that must be resented by all but a type of mind without imagination.

That reminds me of an old story. You may have heard it, but it's a good story anyway. It's a story of three stone cutters who were working on a large block of granite. A stranger who happened to be passing asked the first cutter what he was doing.

"I'm cutting stone," growled the man.

He asked the second.

"I'm working for $7 a day," he replied.

But the third answered, his face alight:

"I'm building a cathedral."

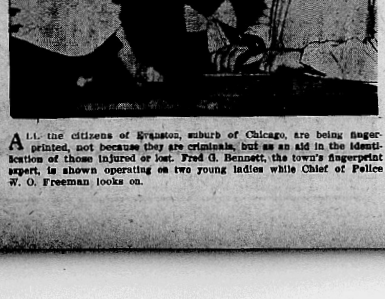

There was perhaps no damage done in the operation of cutting stone by the attitudes of the first two workmen. The harm involved was to themselves. But those to whom is entrusted the care of children have in their hands tremendous power for good and harm. The material which they will help to mold is precious beyond the worth of all the cathedrals in the world. Only those who have a creative love for their work and pleasure in it, only those who see in even the petty details the vision of something they are building should ever be permitted into that great sphere of responsibility.

The care of children does indeed require a certain type of mind. But not a mind without imagination. On the contrary, the most important qualification for the woman who would acquit herself creditably in caring for a child is an unusual quality of imagination—the ability to realize the important implications in apparently trivial tasks, the cathedral of character that she is building out of the stone of daily routine.

The care of a child requires a better person than many types of work that are more varied and far better paid. It requires one with fine qualities of heart and mind, with the artistry to color her daily work with an ideal. Of course, such nurses are rare; such people are rare. My child had the good fortune to know such a nurse, to whom let this be an appreciation. Her name was Emma Wenzel.

THE CHILDREN'S LUNCH BOX

WHERE the child must carry a lunch at school, every effort should be made to make the food appetizing. Fresh fruit when it is possible, should always be included. Jams, jellies, dried fruits such as figs, prunes and raisins or dates will help out when apples, oranges and fresh fruits are not available.

Fruit Paste.

Thoroughly mix chopped dates, raisins, dry figs and finely ground nuts with orange juice and a little cream. Spread generously on thin, buttered bread.

Quick Orange Jam.

Take two cupfuls of orange pulp and juice, one lemon, pulp and juice, and one and one-half cupfuls of sugar. Boil ten minutes. Put into jelly glasses and seal. Serve in sandwiches or with toast. A small glass of this jam makes a dainty addition to the lunch basket.

For a wholesome sandwich spread one slice of the buttered bread with orange marmalade and the other with cottage cheese. Put together and wrap in waxed paper.

Carrot, Celery and Nut Sandwich.

Mix ground raw carrots, celery and nuts with lemon juice and boiled dressing. Put the mixture into cases made by scooping out a roll cut in half. Fit the halves together.

Egg Sandwich.

Chop hard cooked eggs, moisten with lemon juice, season with salt and pepper, spread over a lettuce leaf, place on a buttered slice of bread. Cover with a plain buttered slice.

THE GREAT INHERITANCE
By ANNE CAMPBELL

THOU hast promised me an inheritance
More treasured than silver and gold,
More beautiful than the precious jewels
My dazzled eyes behold,
Thou hast promised me, Thou hast promised me
A luxury untold.

In my Father's house, Thou hast promised me,
There are mansions for my soul,
Where the curtains of worldly doubt and fear
Thy healing, scarred hands roll.
Thou hast promised me, Thou hast promised me
A bright and starry goal!

Thou hast promised me an inheritance
When done with earthly strife,
A boon to make a journey fair
That with threatening clouds is rife.
Thou hast promised me, Thou hast promised me
The gift of eternal life!

Sound

Sound is usually defined as the sensation caused by stimulation of the auditory nerves and, according to this definition, there would be no sound unless there was an ear present to receive the sound vibrations. However, in physics sound is defined as the energy which occasions the sensation of hearing. Then, in a physical sense, sound would be present wherever there were sound waves regardless of whether it was actually heard or not.

Sacred Water of India

Amritsar, India, owes its foundation to the sanctity which attaches to the site. According to Hindu mythology, it was there that Rama's army was restored to life after its destruction by his sons. In Guru Ram Das' days a cripple bathed, after seeing a crow change from a jet black hue to the whiteness of a swan merely by dipping its wings in the magic waters, and was transformed into a vigorous man.

REVIVE GLORIES OF OLD PALACE

Historic Home of Sun King Restored.

Restoration of the palace of Versailles, from the great chateau to the charming Marie Antoinette village on the grounds, has been criticized by a member of the French academy. The work, carried on with funds donated by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is too thorough, says the critic, and while it has saved the palace of palaces from falling into ruin, everything looks too new. The French ministry of fine arts and the historic monuments commission, however, approve the restoration.

While the palace of Versailles is generally conceded to be the ultimate in royal residences, and the yardstick by which magnificence is measured, it may also be said to represent an Eighteenth century Public Works administration project, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "One of the reasons given by Louis XIV for the construction of the great chateau and its vast park was that it would give employment to some 30,000 workmen for several years."

Built for reasons of state, Versailles soon became the setting of a court so dazzling that many of the French nobility closed their great chateaux in the country and came to take up quarters in a palace that could shelter nearly 10,000 persons. And near the palace, Louis built the Grand Trianon, a glorified marble bungalow.

Left to ruin after France became a republic, Versailles was partially restored by Napoleon I five years after he had installed 2,000 of his veterans in the central wing of the palace. But the greater part of the work of transforming Versailles into a museum was done by Louis Philippe, being completed in 1837. Its adaptation into a museum of social and political history has been natural and tasteful. The great central wing, which is nearly half a mile in length, now houses a unique collection of paintings, sculptures, carvings and objets d'art. The palace itself was built principally by Mansard around the hunting lodge of Louis XIII. In reversal of the usual sequence, the palace was built and then the little town grew up. But a year after the removal of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette to Paris by the mob, the town was so desolate that a Russian traveler could scarcely get a wretched meal.

The salons and apartments of Louis XIV and his successors form a stimulating background for the imaginative person who wishes to turn back the clock to the days of the Sun king and relive the glittering epoch of the Louis. The original furniture and pictures were lost, but the walls, ceilings, paneling and stucco still reveal the elaborate Louis Quatorze. The rooms given over to the Historical museum, founded by Louis Philippe and dedicated to "all the glories of France," contain a collection of pictures and sculpture retelling the history of France through its famous characters, battles, and events.

The park and terraces alone cover an area of about six square miles.

Although the playground for the plutocrats of the day, Versailles has been a stage for more serious acting. The "Tennis Court" oath of the fighting National Assembly was taken here in 1789, and here in 1782 the new United States of America had been formally recognized by Great Britain. On September 19, 1870, the victorious Germans, bands playing the "Marseillaise," entered Versailles. In January, 1871, King William, surrounded by representatives of all the reigning families of Germany, members of his family, his generals, and his ministers, here established the new German empire. And in the same Galeries des Glaces in 1918 a defeated German nation signed the Versailles treaty.

GOVERNMENT TO AID STATE INSTITUTIONS

To Spend More Than a Million Dollars In State of Florida

Tallahassee, May 17.—(FNS)—After a long and arduous effort on the part of Governor Sholtz and his cabinet to secure financial assistance from the federal Government for much needed improvements at the various state institutions, federal funds have been made available for the improvement projects.

The program calls for an expenditure of more than a million dollars, most of it supplied by public works and emergency relief funds. The money from the federal agencies is an outright grant to the state and will not have to be repaid. State funds have not been available for the construction of buildings, repair work, improvements and additional equipment so badly needed at the various institutions.

Governor Sholtz said he expects actual construction to be started soon. Hundreds of men will be given employment when the work is started. The state will supply supervision when the program is actually under way. Plans have already been drawn at the direction of the state cabinet.

The projects include improvments at the Florida State Hospital at Chattahoochee, the Boys Industrial School at Marianna, Florida Farm Colony at Gainesville, Girls Industrial School at Ocala, Belle Glade prison farm, school for the Deaf and Blind at St. Augustine, the University of Florida and various airport developments.

INTEREST REDUCED ON PRODUCTION LOANS

Farmers Will Pay Five Per-cent Interest Instead of 5½ Percent

W. R. Altman, secretary-treasurer of the Wauchula Production Credit Association has just received word from Governor W. I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration in Washington, D. C., that the interest rate on new loans from production credit associations has been reduced from 5½ to 5 percent.

According to Mr. Altman the new 5 percent interest rate becomes effective immediately on all new loans and advances made by the association and will be applicable until further notice.

"The new interest rate of 5 percent will not affect loans already advanced in full," Mr. Altman said. "These will continue to bear the rate of interest prevailing at the time the loan was closed. The interest charges on loans from the association are collected when the loans mature. The Wauchula Production Credit association is now making loans on acceptable crop and chattel security to farmers in Highlands, DeSoto and Hardee counties.

"The reduction of the interest to 5 percent on new loans," Mr. Altman continued, "is made possible by a recent sale of Federal intermediate credit bank debentures to investors at an unusually low rate of interest. The association gets money to lend farmers from the Federal intermediate credit bank of Columbia, South Carolina.

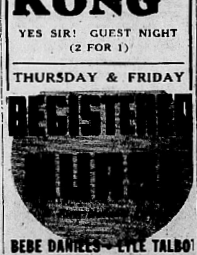

"The lowering of the interest rate on new loans to 5 percent is the second reduction in two months, the rate having been reduced from 6 to 5½ percent on March 16.

"According to Governor Myers," said Mr. Altman, the Federal intermediate credit bank is passing on immediately to farmer-borrowers from production credit associations the saving made possible by lower cost of getting money. The confidence of investors in the security of the intermediate credit banks has been such that the banks are able to get money to lend at the lowest discount rate in their history. Governor Myers says that the resulting low rate of interest on production credit association loans is enabling farmer-borrowers to save thousands of dollars on the cost of their farming operations this year. If the associations make sound loans, and loans that are collectible, an adequate supply of low cost money will continue to be available."

Political Announcements

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I hereby announce my candidacy for County Commissioner for District No. 1, subject to the Democrat primary, June 5th, 1934. I am a Florida Cracker, having been raised in Polk County, and have been a Democrat all my life. For the past ten years I have been a citizen of Avon Park. During the past nineteen years I have had a wide experience in road construction and maintenance work. I believe I am qualified to handle the affairs of the district and give competent service. I will appreciate your vote and support.

FRANK ARMISTEAD

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I wish to announce my candidacy for County Commissioner from District No. 1., subject to vote of the Democratic Primary Election June 5, 1934.

As a candidate I am pledged to no faction or individual. If elected I pledge my best efforts in behalf of my district and the county as a whole. I would greatly appreciate your support.

Respectfully,
J. L. WELLS

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of county commissioner for District 1, Highlans County, subject to the Democratic Primary, June 5, 1934.

I have been a resident of this community for the past 21 years and served previously as county commissioner for this district when it was part of old DeSoto county.

Being a long-time resident here I believe I have a full knowledge of the needs of the district and county as to roads and other vital matters and if elected promise an honest, efficient administration with a square deal for all concerned.

Your vote and support will be appreciated.

S. P. DURRANCE.

FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

I wish to announce my candidacy for nomination to the office of Circuit Judge, subject to the Democratic Primaries in June.

If you feel that my service as circuit judge merits your further confidence in my ability and integrity, I shall greatly appreciate your support and vote in the June primaries.

W. J. BARKER

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

To the Voters of Highlands County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for re-election to the office of Representative for Highlands County in the Legislature. If nominated and elected, I shall continue to serve the people of Highlands County and the State of Florida fairly and impartially to the best of my ability. Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

J. E. SIMS.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

To the Voter of Highlands County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for election to the office of Representative for Highlands County in the Legislature.

If nominated and elected I shall serve the PEOPLE of Highlands County and the State of Florida fairly and squarely according to majority wishes and mandates of the PEOPLE.

DR. A. T. EIDE.

FOR REPRRESENTATIVE

I wish to announce as a Candidate for the House of Representatives subject to the Democratic primary on June 5, 1934.

I pledge myself, if eleced, to represent the people of this county as a whole.

Your support will be sincerely appreciated.

FORD W. HEACOCK.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

I wish to announce my candidacy as a nominee for the office of Representative of Highlands County, subject to the will of the Democratic Primary, June 5, 1934.

My platform is the program as adopted by the Florida Tax payers Association.

Your vote and influence will be appreciated.

P. L. VINSON.

Supreme Court Re-Instates Quo Warranto Case

eral in the suit. Such large property owners as the Avon Florida Citrus Corporation, Pine Crest Lakes Country Club, Pine Crest Lakes Company, John Henry Smith, Norton T. Smith and others are parties to the suit. They were later joined by Alpine Groves Co., and others as intervenors.

The information alleged that the 1925 and 1927 Acts of the Legislature enlarging the Town of Avon Park from 1¼ miles square to 6 miles square was unconstitutional and void because the property taken in received no municipal benefits. The city's area was enlarged from 2¼ square miles or 1440 acres to 36 square miles or 23,040 acres.

The supreme court held the information filed showed a good case. The city filed an answer denying the allegations of the information and alleged facts attempting to show that the enlarged area received city benefits and should properly remain with in the enlarged city limits. The supreme court held the answer was not good, and thereafter the city filed an amended answer, alleging that the entire area was thickly populated and built up and needed the city's protection and in doing so set up question of facts which would call for a jury trial. The court held it inconvenient for the supreme court to hold a jury trial and dismissed the case with the right on the part of the co-relators to bring a new suit in the circuit court.

The attorney general and co-relators then filed a petition for reinstatement of the case in the supreme court and the above order re-instating the case has just been received.

The city's amended answer alleges that the entire area is built up and receives municipal benefits such as lights, water, sewage service, police protection, streets, sanitary garbage collection and other city benefits all furnished by the City of Avon Park.

The co-relators, in their original information, allege that of the entire area of 36 square miles, there are 12 square miles not inhabited, all of which is alleged to be in citrus grove plantings and wild lands. This property, the co-relators allege, receives no benefits from the city. Co-relators further allege that not a dollar of the bonded debt of the city has been spent outside of the original Town of Avon Park, and that the city has not built and maintained any streets or roads or given other benefits outside of the original town.

The conflicting claims make a jury trial necessary to establish the facts.

Anti-Theft Device For 1935 Auto Tags

Tallahassee, May 16.—(FNS)—Manufacture of Florida automobile tags for 1935 will be started soon at the State Prison Farm at Raiford, according to an announcement from the Motor Vehicle Department.

The 1934 auto license plates were made with a theft-proof lock device attached, under a contract entered into by the Motor Vehicle Department and Fortinberry Brothers of Jackson, Mississippi, who hold the patent on the device used on this year's tags.

Commissioner George Wilder stated that it had not been decided what type of anti-theft device, if any, would be used on Florida's 1935 automobile tags.

The new licence plates will be painted a grapefruit yellow with black lettering.

NEWS AND VIEWS ON ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

Weekly Presentation of Happenings and Problems Affecting Prosperity

A few months ago more experts were inclined to be dubious as to the success of the cause of disarmament this year.

Now it looks as if the arms conference is to be even more of a dismal failure than the most pessimistic feared.

There are two very large flys in the disarmament ointment. One is Germany, which is increasing its military budget, is arming rapidly, and is cleverly abrogating the arms provisions of the Versailles treaty. So long as Germany follows this course, France refuses to disarm—will, in fact, build up its defense forces accordingly. Both Germany and France blame each other for wrecking the conference.

The other fly is Japan, which has all the major powers worried. Events of last year—culminating in the withdrawal of Nippon from the League of Nations—have proven that Japan doesn't just talk, she acts. And she isn't in any mood to arbitrate.

The upshot of all this is that a world which hasn't been able to recover from the deleterious effects of the last war is again nearer war than at any time since the spring of 1914. Unless there is a definite change of policy, every great power will follow a course of intense nationalism, as Germany, under Nazi rule, is doing now. Foreign trade will languish. Sky-high tariff walls, even complete embargoes, will be created. An armament race will begin—and if that happens, taxpayers of all countries will find out what heavy taxation really is. Nothing in the world is so expensive. The last war, for example, cost the world close to $400,000,000,000, according to the Carnegie foundation, and future generations will pay for it.

Oddly enough, the best hope for peace and disarmament is the depression! Most countries are pretty close to being broke. Their citizens are complaining loudly about taxation. There's not an economist of standing who doesn't believe that another war would lead to national bankruptcies, revolutions—that it would set civilization back a hundred years. And a good many lookers-on are of the opinion that memories of the last war are still strong in the minds of the common people, who bore the brunt of the struggle, even if they have been forgotten by premiers and chancelleries and high commands.

Most interesting international events are now centering in the far east. Japan's statement of policy—which was politely phrased, but said in effect, "We'll run China and everything else around here; you white boys better keep your hands off or else!"—startled the world. And England's announcement that it would be necessary to protect her textile industry from Japanese competition has caused both powers to prepare for an intensive trade war which will be fought with tariffs now—and perhaps eventually with navies.

It's a serious situation—the fuse is laid, and only a match is needed to start it going. One encouraging phase of it is the general belief that the U. S. will let other countries do their own fighting, will keep absolutely neutral.

oOo

These international events have rather obscured the doing of Congress, so far as headlines are concerned. But it's been a busy body. Most important act, in the light of its effect on industry, was the passing of the stock exchange bill by the House by an astonishing heavy majority. It now goes to the Senate where there will be more opposition, though it is believed that enough votes will be forthcoming to put it through. In an attempt to placate industry, which doesn't like the bill at all, the securities act will be made less severe.

Both Senate and House have okayed the new revenue bill, designed to bring many millions more into the treasury. Its main feature is higher taxes for big incomes, lower taxes for small incomes. Gifts, corporations, and individual holding companies will be soaked harder. The bill contains numerous stiff guards against evasion. The ten percent additional tax clause for 1935 was stricken out.

There hasn't been any silver law passed yet—but white metal advocates are jubilant. They recently conferred with the President—then predicted that a bill would be enacted to back 30 percent of the nation's money with silver.

The Senate passed the new airmail bill, and the House will undoubtedly follow, as the bill has Administration backing. Under it the I. C. C. will fix and determine public convenience and necessity for all air mail routes and establish rates.

Finally — this isn't a Congressional note but it's important — watch labor happenings. Recently A. F. of L. President Green called on Mr. Roosevelt, demanding a 30-hour work week. What the President said hasn't come out — but it is reported that Mr. Green was plenty mad when he left the Executive offices, said there would be a 30-hour week or he'd find out why.

FLORIDA AIRMAIL SERVICE RENEWED

First Mail Plane Left-Miami Yesterday Under New Contract

Miami, May 17.—(FNS)—Florida airmail service, suspended when Postmaster General Farley canceled contracts, was resumed this week on regular schedule.

The Miami-New York run was taken over by the Eastern Air Lines. The first plane left Miami Wednesday morning at 7:30. The Eastern Air Transport Condor planes put into use provide passenger accommodations and the night passenger service, abandoned when mail contracts were cancelled, was resumed with the mail service.

Operation of the Jacksonville-Atlanta-Chicago service is expected shortly.

Postmaster J. E. Wall of Tampa stated that he had not received instructions on the resumption of air mail service for west coast cities connecting at Daytona Beach with the north-south route. In view of the fact that bids on plane service from St. Petersburg and Tampa to Daytona Beach to connect with the Miami-New York line will be opened May 25, it is doubtful that the automobile star route service from the west coast will be resumed for the brief interval, Mr. Wall said.

POLITICAL RALLY HELD AT VENUS LAST SATURDAY

County Candidates Express Views and Make Bid for Votes

The citizens of Venus gave a picnic for the voters of the district and the candidates for office at the picnic grounds in that community Saturday and all candidates present were given an opportunity to address the voters in the interest of their candidacy.

E. J. Etheredge, county chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee started the program with the introduction of Owen Godwin of Sebring, Chairman of Highlands County League of Young Democrats who presided and introduced the speakers.

Congressman J. Hardin Peterson was the first speaker. He enumerated several instances where he had obtained benefits for the State and his district. His talk was short and to the point and apparently made a favorable impression on the crowd.

Judge W. J. Barker, candidate for Judge of Circuit Court, without opposition, was the second speaker and confined his talk to a few well chosen remarks with only slight mention of his candidacy.

The candidates for representative were called on in alphabetical order, Dr. A. T. Eide of Lake Placid, being first received a round of applause and responded with a short talk practically confined to his platform.

Ford W. Heacock, Sebring, candidate for the office of representative, stated that if elected he would not represent any particular man, faction or corporation but would represent the entire county. He stated with some emphasis that he favored a full term of school and a living wage for teachers. His talk was well received by the audience.

J. E. Sims of Lake Placid, candidate to succeed himself as representative, was the only speaker that used his full alloted time to present his cause to the voters. He mentioned several bills he supported during the last session of the legislature among which were the bills to reduce the judicial circuits from 28 to 15 and the elimination of grand juries except in capital cases or when called by the circuit judge. He also stated that he favored the constitutional amendment to consolidate the offices of county tax assessor and tax collector. He also promised to support an old age pension bill.

P. L. Vinson, the last candidate for representative called on, confined his talk to his platform which has been published in the press of the county.

The chairman stated that Ben C. Hope, candidate for commissioner from district three, was not present and called on his opponent, N. B. Jackson, who made a short talk in which he declined to speak on the campaign issues because his opponent could not be present. Mr. Hope was seen in the crowd a few minutes after Mr. Jackson stepped from the platform, but was not called on to speak.

Mr. Cassels, prominent citizen of Venus, made a short talk in which he thanked the county officials and others for their co-operation in making the meeting a success.

From a standpoint of political rantings and excitement the picnic was a failure but from the standpoint of a good meal and a friendly get-to-gether and general good time it was certainly a success.

Nazarenes Thankful For Contributions

During the last few weeks the Church of the Nazarene has had on a campaign for the purpose of raising the indebtedness on the property. Several of the members have been putting forth considerable effort in canvassing for donations and in praying. There has been splendid cooperation on the part of most of the members as well as several of their friends. The church in general wishes to express its thanks for the way the friends of the church in Avon Park, Sebring and Wauchula have responded to the solicitations. There has been considerable improvement financially in every department of the church. With a few minor exceptions, all of the old back debts have been paid as well as the running expenses. This has been done by the prayerful cooperation of the membership, and the hearty response of the friends in Avon Park.

Sheriff's Office Arrests Two Here; Also Three 'Leggers

Two warrants were served in Avon Park this week by the sheriff's office. One charged Roy Cole with stealing a .38 Smith and Wesson revolver, the property of B. B. Edwards. The other warrant was for Mrs. Robert White and among other things charged her with the neglect of her children. The affidavits for both warrants were sworn to by Police Officer James Cravey.

Early Wednesday morning Deputy Sheriffs Coker and Long arrested Homer Kelly, Noah Hammone and Will Comer, all colored, on the old DeSoto City road and claim they found 15 gallons of shine in their car. The three men of color are said to have been prominent in the best bootleg circles in the Sebring district and were thought to be coming from Crewsville when caught with the goods. One is said to have remarked that his luck had run out on him at last.

Florida Tags Foil Outlaws

Commissioner Says New Type Tag Is Help In Crime Prevention

Tallahassee, May 23.—(FNS)—The flight of John Dillinger, Indiana outlaw, through the middle northwest recently and accompanying pursuit by state and federal operatives, doubtless would have presented obstacles for the bandit had he and his gang been forced to use a type of automobile "lock-tag" similar to that now in use in Florida.

This is the opinion of George H. Wilder, acting state motor vehicle commissioner, who cited statistical information of his office to prove his point that the present tag has been highly successful from a standpoint of preventing unlawful transfers from one vehicle to another.

The commissioner added that the strictness of Florida laws is such that automobile owners face an almost impossible situation in obtaining a second plate and that in the event a band of criminals stole one of the present plates to use in covering up their escape, the tag would have to be mutilated to such an extent in removing it that detection would be made easy.

"In these days of quick police action through use of the radio and other crime combatting means, a "lock-strip-tag" type of plate is highly desirable and greatly valuable as a barrier to successful flight of sought criminals," Commissioner Wilder said.

Big Attractions Booked at Avon

The coming week will be filled with excellent attractions for theatre-goers at the Avon theare. Clarence Buddingon Kelland's popular story, "Thirty Day Princess" with Sylvia Sidney in the starring role supported by Cary Grant is booked for showing on Sunday and Monday. The story which ran in one of the popular magazines recently has been read and enjoyed by more local people than any other popular fiction of recent date. The story is all about an American girl who becomes a psuedo princess for thirty days. Comedy and romance are intermingled in such a manner as to make A1 entertainment.

Tuesday and Wednesday at the Avon theatre will bring Richard Barthelmess in "A Modern Hero." This popular star is supported in the picture by the talented Jean Muir, who will be remembered for her portrayal of "Jen" in "As the Earth Turns." Marjorie Rambeau, Highlands county's own star also has an important role.

Thursday will be American Legion day at the Avon. On that night the cream of Avon Park beauty will compete for the title of "Miss Avon Park for 1934." The feature attraction for the night will be "Woman's Man" a story of a movie star with John Halliday in the leading role.

On Friday the management of the Avon theatre proudly presents Lionel Atwill in "Beggars in Ermine." This picture is one of the outstanding dramas of the current season and will be enjoyed by all classes. The picture is based on a story of a cripple who organizes the cripples of the nation and finally becomes a great power for them and for himself.

AVON METROS WIN ONE GAME AND LOSE TWO

Down Wauchula 13 to 5 and Then Lose 8 to 2; Protest Frostproof Game

Avon Park defeated the Wauchula team in Sportsman's league here Sunday by the score of 13 to five.

The game was a swat-fest in which the two Martins, J. B. and Durrh furnished most of the action. Each hit safely four times out of five times at bat, and each got a triple. The two batted in five runs and scored seven times between them, accounting for 12 out of the 13 runs made by the locals.

Lefty Merriweather started on the mound for the locals, but was a trifle wild, which coupled with infield errors allowed five runs in the first three innings. Bud Clark finished the game and pitched shut-out ball for the remainder of the game.

Wauchula 8, Avon Park 2

The Metros journeyed to Wauchula Tuesday to play off a game scheduled that was rained out Sunday, the 13th, which the Growers took 8 to 2. Due to the fact that several of the boys were unable to get off from work to go along with the team, Manager Jimmie Spencer was compelled to use a patched-up line-up, and they were not quite good enough for the Growers.

Frostproof Wins 9 to 1

Thursday's game in Sportsman's league went to Frostproof 9 to 1. It was a good ball game up until the sixth inning, when a bad decision at the plate marred the game and accounted in large measure for the loss of the game.

Frostproof was leading 1 to 0 in the sixth and had the bases loaded with Melton at bat. A squeeze play was on, and Clark, pitching for the Metros, deliberately pitched an outside ball. The batter stepped over the plate to reach the pitch, and those nearby say he fouled the ball. Umpire Gibbs first called it a foul, then changed his decision to a ball and then to a strike. Meanwhile, the ball went by the catcher, two runners scored, and Gibbs allowed the scores to be counted. Two more runs were added during the inning, and four more in the next inning, the game ending 9 to 1.

Manager Spencer protested the game because of the ineligibility of Shortstop Brown, a Lake Wales resident, playing on the team.

Brewster Here Sunday

The next scheduled game for the league will be played here on Sunday, with Brewster, which has taken the berth left vacant by the withdrawal of the Bartow club from the circuit.

Fair Store Has Big Clearance Sale to Start Tomorrow

The first clearance sale since he opened last fall is announced by Phil Abrams, manager of the Fair Store. All his nationally known merchandise has been marked down for this sale, he says, and nothing special has been purchased for the event. The stock is all new with new arrivals of well known merchandise arriving daily. A number of the articles which have been reduced in price for this occasion will be found in a page advertisement elsewhere in this issue of the Times.

W. R. England's Mother Passed Away

Funeral services were held at Carterville, Va., on Thursday of last week for Mrs. Melvina England, mother of W. R. England of this city. Mrs. England had been in failing health for some time having fell and broken her hip three years ago. She passed away on Monday, May 14, at Washington. Besides the son here, another son, Alfred England of Washington, D. C., survives. Mr. and Mrs. England attended the funeral, leaving here Wednesday and returning Friday of last week.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank each and every one of our friends and neighbors for the kind words and deeds, extended us in the death of our husband and father.

Mrs. J. A. Gibson and family.

Wedding of Interest To be Held Sunday

Probably one of the most elaborate weddings of the spring is to be held on Sunday night at the First Methodist church on Lake avenue when Miss Epworth League and Mr. M. E. Church will be united in holy matrimony.

The ring ceremony will be used and Rev. J. B. Reid, pastor of the First Methodist church will officiate.

The bride will be attended by eight bridesmaids, namely, Miss Kathryn Saggus, Miss Mildred Martin, Miss Childers, Miss Hazel Reddick, Miss Frances Cason, Miss Zula Maude Ford, Miss Hilda Reddick, and Miss Sara Lucy Trent. These will be gowned in beautiful organdie dresses of pastel shades and will carry arm bouquets of red and pink radiance roses.

Miss Patsy Loomis will act as maid of honor. She will wear a white chiffon and will carry a bouquet of pink radiance roses.

Tom Graham will act as best man and the groomsmen are Bill Lacey, Alvin Ebi, Fred Reddick, George Hayes, Roland Bailey, Richard Bennett, Billy Martin and Otto Foster.

Junior Stebbins will give the bride away.

The church will be elaborately decorated with palms and spring flowers.

The ceremony will begin at eight o'clock and all friends of Miss League and Mr. Church are cordially invited to attend.

Program For Memorial Day

Highlands County Veterans To Honor Departed Comrades of All Wars

Memorial Day services for the dead of all wars will be held Wednesday morning at Bougainvillea cemetery by Highlands Post 60, American Legion and everybody is invited to participate. The services will be brief and include the decoration of the graves of departed veterans, with the American Legion Auxiliary participating. In the afternoon the post and auxiliary will join with other veteran organizations in the county in memorial services at the municipal pier at Sebring at four o'clock. This service will be sponsored by the United Spanish War Veterans, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion Posts and their Auxiliaries.

The program is to be short and impressive and it is expected that a large crowd will be present to witness the service.

The program will be as follows:

1. Music—High School Band.
2. Advancing colors — Uniform Guard.
3. Vocal solo — Mrs. Ruth Sebring.
4. Prayer—Major E. E. Barton.
5. Mothers' Memorial Address—Mrs. Lucy Dunham.
6. Roll Call of Veteran Dead—P. R. Price, answered by F. P. Burch.
7. Dropping wreath from plane for Sailor Dead, J. M. Stephenson, Pilot.
8. Memorial Address — William Hauptmann.
9. Taps.
10. Firing squad.
11. "Star Spangled Banner"—High School Band.

Immediately after the program, which will last about one hour, the Auxiliary of the United Spanish War Veterans will serve their annual chicken pie supper.

The family and friends of all departed veterans are especially requested to be present at the ceremony.

FERA Recreational Activities Here in Summer Months

A new project under the auspices of the FERA is a recreational program which starts throughout the country today. Gideon Jaeger of Sebring is supervisor for the county and will have efficient assistants in the various communities.

In Avon Park Mrs. John Raab will have charge of the story telling for the young children in Donaldson Park and will be assisted by other ladies of the community. C. A. Eads will have charge of swimming and water sports and these will be held in Lake Lotela.

It is planned to conduct contests of various kinds throughout the summer with greater activities after the schools close.

BEAUTY CONTEST ENTRIES TO FILL AVON THEATRE

Merchants and Businessmen Sponsoring Candidates for "Miss Avon Park"

The stage of the Avon theatre will be a mass of lovliness and daintiness on the evening of Thursday, May 31 when Highlands Post 69 of the American Legion stages the beauty contest to determine "Miss Avon Park for 1934." A number of young ladies have already signified their intention to enter and are being sponsored by local merchants and business houses. Evening gowns will be the order of the evening, the old style bathing beauty parade being a thing of the past and out of date. Visions of feminine grace and charm will parade before the audience with unannounced out-of-town judges to select the winner of the evening.

"Miss Avon Park" will represent the city at the American Legion state convention at Gainesville next month. The winner of the contest there will go to Miami in the fall as "Miss Florida" with the national convention of the Legion.

Those entered to date with their sponsors are:

Zelda Langford — Wells Motor Company.

Patsy Loomis—Jacaranda Beauty Shoppe.

Carmen Booth — Ott & Son.

Oleta Bigbie — Jacaranda Drug Store.

Sara Lucy Trent — Avon Insurance Agency.

Mildred Martin—Mandis Dairy.

Zula Maude Ford— Main Street Service Station.

Evelyn Clements — Badcock Furniture Co.

Myrtle Turner — Smith Dorminey Co.

Helen Beckett — Avon Park Times.

Johnnie Mae Smith — The Fair Store.

Hilda Reddick — Gulf Refining Co.

Grace Schweigart — R. F. Sappington.

Mary Turner — Avon Park Drug Co.

Martha Wever — Universal Markets.

Letta Rock — F. S. Jordon & Son.

Gladys Helms — Ridge Crate Co.

Allie Lee Belin, Katherine Gibson, Virginia Gough and other young ladies will enter, with sponsors to be announced later.

Avon Rotarians Learn All About the Show Business

The Avon Park Rotarians know all about the show business, all the inner mysteries, the trials and tribulations and the workings of a motion picture projection machine. The information was imparted by H. M. Johnson, manager of the Avon theatre, at the regular weekly luncheon at the Jacaranda hotel Wednesday. Mr. Johnson delved into ancient history in connection with his subject and continued through the middle ages down to the present time. His talk was very interesting and much appreciated by all present.

Another feature of the luncheon was the presentation of a 100 percent button to Col. Chas. R. Head. The colonel had made 100 percent attendance during the past nine years up to April and the presentation of the token took him by surprise. In a few words he acknowledged his appreciation of the memento.

Visitors were George E. Sebring, F. T. Haskins, F. N. K. Bailey, Albert Varena and Dr. H. V. Weems all of Sebring.

Political Speaking at Band Stand on Mall Saturday Eve

There will be a political speaking and rally at the band stand on the Mall on Saturday evening, starting at eight o'clock. Candidates for the various offices in the district and the county will speak and express their views on matters pertaining to their candidacy and a large number of voters is expected to be on hand.

The Avon Park grammar school will close next Friday with sixth grade promotional exercises at 8:45 a. m. The high school will continue through June.

Mrs. Zada Collins Died Here Sunday; Burial in North

Christian Science services for Mrs. Zada Mae Collins were held Tuesday morning at the home on Tulane Circle. Mrs. Elizabeth Ewing had charge of the services, the music being furnished by Mrs. W. T. Hall, Mrs. H. E. Keller and Mrs. Grover Daly. The body was taken to St. Petersburg and placed in a receiving vault and later will be taken to Detroit, Mich., for burial. Pall bearers Tuesday were W. T. Hall, Grover Langford, W. W. Owens of Frostproof, P. L. Rumpsa, H. F. R. Reck and C. R. Barnett.

Mrs. Collins passed away Sunday afternoon at the age of 65 following a long illness, a cerebral hemorrhage being the immediate cause of death. Besides the husband, George Gale Collins, there survive a son, F. Stanley Collins of Detroit and a sister, Mrs. Ella Booth of Elyria, Ohio. Mrs. Collins was a native of Le-Roy, Ohio, and had been a resident of Avon Park for the past 18 months.

Petitions For New Roads

County Board Designates New Roads In Eastern Part of County

Two petitions for roads were received by the county commissioners at their meeting Tuesday. One was for a road running south from the Sunnyland schoolhouse and blazers named on this were, E. W. Gray, T. A. Cason and J. D. Reish. The other road is in the Bassenger and Brighton districts along the Kissimmee river. Blazers named for this were, John Carter, Sid Lowe and J. C. Pearce.

A communication from Gov. Dave Sholtz enclosing a resolution passed by the recent state meeting of sheriffs was read. The resolution proposed that counties include in their next budget an appropriation to take care of road patrols during the coming winter season. The commissioners took no action on this.

Having recently decided to apply the Kanner bill to district bonds taken over from Old DeSoto county, the commissioners authorized the purchase of $4,000 old district five bonds, past due, at 60 flat.

Gas Used By FERA Exempted From Tax

Tallahassee, May 23.—(FNS)—The state cabinet last week, ordered all gasoline used in carrying on Federal Emergency Relief projects exempted from state taxes. The exemption applies only when the gasoline is actually used on FERA projects and not in private automobiles of administrative employees or executives. The federal administration will consider this tax exemption as part of Florida's contribution to relief costs.

All Day Meeting at Congregational

The Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational church entertained Wednesday with a covered dish luncheon in the parlor of the church. The ladies met in the morning and spent their time sewing. At the noon hour they were joined for lunch by their families.

Later in the afternoon a short business session was conducted by Mrs. L. E. Bass, president.

There was a very good attendance.

Woman's Club Announcement

There will be a called meeting of the Woman's club on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the club rooms. This meeting is for the purpose of presenting before the club a petition for a garden department and an amendment to the constitution.

All members are urged to be present.

Episcopal Food Sale June 2nd

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal church will sponsor a food sale on Saturday, June 2nd. Plenty of good things to eat will be there and special orders may be given before that date to any of the members. The sale will start at an early hour.

FEDERAL AIDED FARMS ARE BEING PLANNED HERE

Project Calls for Purchase and Development of 1,000 Acres

Headed by County Commissioner John Hood, a committee is seeking to establish subsistance farms in this community, for the benefit of the unemployed and other needy families. The idea has the backing and support of the federal government in other states and this aid is being sought for the project here.

The plan here calls for the purchase by the federal government of approximately 1,000 acres, including what is known as Crane pond east of town. This pond would be drained and this would provide what is said to be excellent land for farming purposes. The land is owned by the Consolidated Land Co., and they have agreed to sell at what is said to be a very reasonable figure for that type of land.

When drained and cleared the land would be divided into 10 acre farms, one such farm being considered ample to support one family. Besides purchasing the land it is expected the government would give considerable assistance towards housing, providing seed and fertilizer and the necessary livestock.

The land is being surveyed by William Overton, and County Agent Louis Alsmeyer and both the Seaboard Air Line and the Atlantic Coast Line Railroads are cooperating to the fullest extent in their power.

The fact that Avon Park is an indusrial town with seasonal employment is considered a logical reason for the federal government giving this project the fullest support. The same plans have operated in other states to excellent advantage and given aid to numerous large families, whereby they were able to support themselves and leaving a surplus of products for cash sale.

Absentee Voting To Continue To May 31

Tampa, May 23—(FNS)—The period of absentee voting for the first primary election by qualified voters, as fixed by law, began Monday of this week and will continue until May 31, for the convenience of persons who will be out of the county or state on June 5.

Absentee voting is done in the office of County Judges. Regular official ballots are used. Voters are required to take the usual oath of citizenship and the further oath that they will be out of the county or state on election day. Ballots are sealed by the voters in plain envelopes and placed in the ballot boxes by the County Judge when the boxes are sent to the precincts.

Trade Failures Fall To Low of 14 Years

New York, May 23.—Business failures in the United States in April, both in number and liabilities, touched an exceptional low. Dun & Bradstreet report 1,052, for which total liabilities were $25,786,975. With the exception of the short month of February this year, when total insolvencies were 1,049, there has been no month since January 1920 in which failures were so few. Failures in April 1933, when the tendency was toward a lower level, were 1,921; in April 1932 they were 2,816, and in April 1931 they were 2,383, in both instances the highest ever reported for that month.

Auxiliary Meeting Next Monday

All members of the American Legion Auxiliary are asked to be present at the meeting, Monday evening at the home of Mrs. C. L. Johnson at 8 o'clock. Mrs. A. R. Clark and Mrs. Johnson will be joint hostesses.

This is to be a very important meeting and a 100 percent attendance is desired. Visitors for the evening will be Mrs. Edith L. Petrey of Arcadia, who is past vice-president of the 6th district, Mrs. Rupert Hughes of Arcadia, National Chairman of Music and past department president, and also Miss Ruth McAlya of Arcadia, who is present department secretary. These ladies will have much of interest to bring before the Auxiliary.

A social hour will be enjoyed after the business meeting.

Balm for Bankers
Wheat Burning Up
We Drink More Whisky
Six Billions for Weapons

The new stock exchange law may bring business and balm to worried bankers that now look upon their pitiful, huge piles of "liquidity," alias ready money, unable to lend it, because they are afraid of everything that culls itself "security." That is as bad as having a cow and being afraid to milk her lest she kick.

The definition of a banker as one who "lends you an umbrella when the sun is shining and takes it back when it rains" is not just. The sound banker is one who does not lose his bank's money. How can he lend it when he has not the faintest idea what anything or anybody is worth and does not even know what a dollar is worth?

A law compelling stock speculators to margin their gambling by 40 or more per cent may stimulate bank loans. The banker may say to the speculator and broker, "I'll add 20 per cent cash to that margin, or even 40 per cent, because I love you both, only I must have a first lien on the entire business." What would the virtuous, reforming brain-trusters do about that?

Bad news from wheat-growing regions, intense heat burning up crops. In Nebraska, hot winds added to injury done by the sun's heat, sweeping away moisture.

The experiment of planting only just as much wheat as is needed may prove disastrous if rain is too long delayed. You cannot regulate crop production as you can that of automobiles, or shoes.

In this year of our Lord, Americans are drinking more whisky than they did before prohibition, and paying taxes on it. Three hundred millions of gallons of bootleg liquor is not included in the statistics. Beer drinking has fallen off 50 per cent, according to reports from Washington. Prohibition restored whisky as the national drink.

Thomas Jefferson, who thought beer would produce an antidote to drunkenness, which was widespread in his day, would be disturbed by the beer news. But he was old-fashioned.

Figures supplied by the League of Nations show that European countries have spent about $6,000,000,000 since the last war on killing machinery for another war, while carefully refraining from paying the $10,000,000,000 that they owe us.

It is announced from Paris that, for the fourth time, France will default on the war debt to the United States. And it is probable that England will default again, as she did last time. Last time she handed Uncle Sam "a token," saying:

"Please accept that, and don't call it a default."

It is doubtful if this country would accept a token this time. England probably either faces a substantial payment or official default.

Germany, owing private debts to Americans, English and French plans to pay the English and French, and let the Americans wait, in accordance with a well-established European custom. President Roosevelt is said to have informed Germany that he does not favor this discrimination.

He might stop the German nonsense by informing Mr. Hitler's government that until he treats his American creditors exactly as any others the ports of the United States will be closed to German products and, if necessary, to German ships, also.

This country doesn't need Europe, and Europe does need this country.

"Steel" is looking up, the output being at a higher level now than any time since June, 1930.

Incidentally, in Geneva, where world news and war news centers, it is learned that "the nations are strengthening every military branch of their governments."

If all this getting ready should end as it usually does in Europe you would see United States steel production go up, up. Many million tons of iron would be needed for killing.

It is to be hoped that this time our government will not send ten thousand million dollars to Europe to pay for her killing machinery, as was done last time.

A Texas candidate declares his congressional candidacy anonymously, refuses to give his name, but issues a photograph of himself as a boy six years old, with "button shoes and a suit forty years old," saying, "Judge me by this."

That picture is apt to deceive the public. At the age of six almost any human being looks intelligent, honest, pleasing. But forty years of time, politics and scheming often change that.

Insull, Brought Back for Trial, Defends Himself—Token Payments on War Debts Are Barred—Compromise Silver Bill Being Formulated.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SAMUEL INSULL, once the grand old man of public utilities, has been brought back home to be tried for his alleged sins after his long period of refuge in foreign lands. His "prison ship," the Exilona, arrived off Fort Hancock, N. J., and Insull was taken off at once by the United States coast guard cutter Hudson, which landed him quickly. After an automobile ride to Princeton Junction, he was put aboard a train and transported swiftly to Chicago. His son, Samuel Insull, Jr., had been permitted to join him on the Exilona and accompanied him on the trip west.

Landing on American soil, Insull appeared to recover his old time confidence. To reporters he said: "I am in America to make the most important fight of my life. I am fighting not only for freedom but for complete vindication. I have erred, but my greatest error was in underestimating the effects of the financial panic on American securities, and particularly on the companies I was trying to build.

"I worked with all my energy to save these companies. I made mistakes—but they were honest mistakes. They were errors in judgment, but not dishonest manipulations.

"Arbitrarily, I had been instructed to resign as head of these companies which I had built and which I had tried to protect.

"I was told that I was no longer needed. Tired from the fruitless struggles to save the investments of thousands of men and women discouraged in my attempts to save the investments of my friends and associates as well as everything I had, I got out.

"No charges were brought against me until I was three away for three months. My return at that time would have further complicated the problems of the reorganization of the companies.

"The whole story has not yet been told. You only know the charges of the prosecution. Not one word has been uttered in even feeble defense of me. And it must be obvious that there also is my side of the case.

"When it is told in court, my judgment may be discredited but certainly my honesty will be vindicated."

RUSSIA has been angered by a ruling of Attorney General Cummings and there is danger that all the plans for re-establishing trade with that country will go awry. Mr. Cummings was called on to determine what nations would be barred by the Johnson act from marketing their securities in this country or in any way receiving financial assistance. This he did by announcing six foreign nations that are not in default to the United States government on their obligations. These are Finland, Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Latvia and Lithuania. Finland has met in full all installments on its war debt. The others have made token payments on recent installments.

Immediately after the attorney general's ruling was made public it was authoritatively stated in Washington that President Roosevelt had decided to accept no more token payments; therefore England and the others that have made such payments will fall into the default class on June 15, when the next payments are due. Even Finland may now default. If the nations proffer token payments they may be accepted by the treasury as "on account," but the nations will still be held in default and thus will be shut out under the new Johnson act from obtaining any government loans in the United States.

The President will inform congress, it is reported, that he desires no legislation at this time with respect to the debt question.

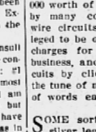

Soviet Russia fell in the default class because it ignored obligations of the preceding czarist and Kerensky governments. The czars sold bonds totaling $80,000,000 in America and the brief Kerensky regime borrowed $187,000,000 from the United States treasury.

AIMING directly at the American Telephone and Telegraph company and the Western Union company, both of which are said to have defied him, Recovery Administrator Johnson made public a drastic code for the wire communications industry prepared by his own staff. Imposition of a code is regarded to all intents the same as writing law for the industry affected, equal in scope to the authorization for licensing industry. Nothing like it has been resorted to heretofore.

In the telegraph case, with all but one minority group flatly opposed to any code, the NRA is proposing to change long-standing conditions and alter the internal economy of the industry on the ground that existing conditions burden commerce and reduce employment. A date for hearings was set, after which the President was to be asked to take action.

The code, if adopted, would deprive extensive interests of financial advantages amounting to many millions of dollars, the NRA authorities declaring these are not fairly held. Among the things it would abolish are: Exclusive rights of the Western Union Telegraph company to something like $25,000,000 worth of business annually; use by many corporations of private wire circuits leased at figures alleged to be out of line with regular charges for the same volume of business, and free use of these circuits by clients of the lessees to the tune of millions of dollars worth of words each year.

SOME sort of a compromise on silver legislation that will be acceptable to both the White House and the silver bloc in congress is likely to be worked out, though Senator Borah, who wants outright remonetization of the white metal, thought the plan being prepared would not serve. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and eight silver senators held prolonged conferences, and all but the gentleman from Idaho were fairly well satisfied. Senator King of Utah said he hoped for a bill which would nationalize silver bullion and provide for the establishment of a 25 per cent silver reserve for currency. Briefly the measure will be mandatory as to policies and permissive in leaving to the discretion of the President the means of carrying out those same policies.

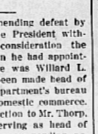

Secretary Morgenthau

TO AVOID impending defeat by the senate, the President withdrew from its consideration the names of two men he had appointed to office. One was William L. Thorp who had been made head of the Commerce department's bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. The senate's objection to Mr. Thorp, who has been serving as head of the commerce bureau pending action on his nomination, was based on the fact that he once registered as a Republican in a Massachusetts primary.

The other withdrawal was of Irene A. Vlosen as United States attorney for the Eastern district of Louisiana. He was opposed by Senator Huey P. Long.

ANDREW W. MELLON, the venerable and wealthy ex-secretary of the treasury and former ambassador to England, came out on top in his latest contest with the Department of Justice. The government had accused him of evading his income taxes and sought his indictment by a federal grand jury in Pittsburgh. However, the grand jury refused to return a true bill, declaring the charges were without basis.

A. W. Mellon

The foreman of the jury was William Beeson, a bank clerk. Among others on the jury were five laborers, two farmers, two engineers, two mechanics, two clerks, one plumber, one carpenter, a lumber dealer, and a writer.

Mr. Mellon said: "I am of course gratified that I have been exonerated by a jury of my fellow citizens. The fact that the grand jury reached a sound conclusion, notwithstanding the unusual methods pursued in my case, is proof of the good sense and fairness of the American people."

In previous statements Mr. Mellon had charged Attorney General Cummings with playing politics "of the crudest sort," and had set forth at length his innocence, asserting he had overpaid rather than evaded his taxes.

The finding of the jury probably ended finally the affair, Mr. Cummings saying the government would not challenge the decision. He may also put an end to the not infrequent attacks on Mr. Mellon in both houses of congress.

AIR mail flying by the army has come to an end, and the routes are being taken over by commercial aviation as fast as the short term contracts are let.

DRASTIC reorganization of the NRA to give the federal government a permanent balance of power between large and small industries was recommended in the majority report by the Darrow board, which President Roosevelt decided not to make public in its original form but referred to three government agencies for preliminary digesting.

On the theory that the NRA has shown business incapable of self-regulation, the 5-to-1 majority report proposes to scrap all the present code authorities in favor of an entirely new set-up in which the federal government, big business and little business have equal voting representation.

Within the NRA itself there is a growing feeling that it would be better to let up on the extension and enforcement of codes for small and miscellaneous industries and reduce the NRA policy to co-operative control of hours and wages. Administrator Johnson doesn't like this, and it would also be opposed by the industries and organized labor. The President is waiting.

HOW the League of Nations proposes to aid China was told in a long report, made public by the Nanking government, covering the arrangement made by Dr. Ludwig Rajchman, representative in China of the league. This plan, it is supposed, led to Japan's recent statement of a policy demanding that other nations keep their hands off China. The document was politically inocuous, being chiefly the recommendations of technical advisers for projects designed to attract foreign capital to China and consolidate it as an independent nation. The list of advisers did not include any Japanese.

The chief interest in the report, from the standpoint of the United States, concerned the section devoted to cotton. It shows that China must purchase about $60,000,000 worth of raw cotton annually.

A Chinese national military and communications commission has just left Shanghai for the United States by way of Europe. Its twenty-two members are instructed to learn how China can acquire a modern war machine and methods of communication that are up to western standards.

REPORTS from Cairo, Egypt, told somewhat hazily about fierce fighting that was going on in the Arabian peninsula where Ibn

Ibn Saud

Saud, the fanatical king of Saudi Arabia, was making war on the ancient kingdom of Yemen, determined to conquer it. Already the Saudian army, which is powerful and equipped with all modern arms, had captured the Yemeni seaport Hodeida, and it was advancing to attack Sana, the capital. The war started with a border dispute.

According to the conflicting stories reaching Cairo, both sides claimed victory. One report was that the Saudi Feisal, heir of Ibn Saud, had overtaken and defeated the rear guard of the retreating Yemeni army.

From Yemeni officials, however, came telegrams stating that their retreat had been halted and that the Saudian army suffered a severe defeat in a 23-hour battle. Capture of 30 armored cars, nine of them undamaged; 36 guns, and 400 prisoners was claimed by the premier of Yemen, who wired that the Saudian casualties exceeded 2,000.

Because of their nearby territories in Asia and Africa, Great Britain, Italy, and France were watching the conflict with deep concern and all had warships at hand to protect their interests.

GREAT BRITAIN and Japan are on the verge of a big trade war. The British have threatened to take drastic action to protect their textile export interests against increasing Japanese competition, although the British government officially declares it will do everything to maintain amicable relations with Japan. The official position in Tokyo is that Japan can take care of herself, and there was every indication that it would not yield to the British ultimatum that it must modify its trade program and tactics. The British threat was that quotas would be imposed on Japanese goods, but trade leaders in Tokyo said this would not hurt their country seriously, especially since Japan's imports from the British Isles in 1933 totaled 83,000,000 yen or little more than was exported there, 80,000,000 yen. Hence, they said, the Tokyo government would be able to make reprisals.

Trade with the British dominions is considered far more important and the Japanese are confident the dominions will not follow the mother country's lead—especially Australia, which sold to Japan in 1933 four times its purchases, and Canada, which sold seven times as much as it bought.

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—The Republicans are giving some indications that they intend to fight for election of their partisans in the next congress on the ground that the emergency is over and that President Roosevelt and his administration are continuing on a spending spree just to afford deserving Democrats a pie from the government counter. The tipoff as to the direction from which the attack will come arose the other day without attracting a great deal of attention. Representative Snell of New York, the Republican leader in the house, who opposed one of the newer brain-trust creations because he declared, unequivocally, "the emergency is over."

Queer Quirk in Politics

After Mr. Snell had made the statement, I inquired of a number of persons, astute in politics, what they thought of this anomaly. Here is a leader of the opposition party declaring that the emergency is over, and if that condition exists, the leader of the opposition, by inference at least, has admitted that credit for the job must be given the Roosevelt administration. I find a belief that the Democrats can hardly admit the correctness of the statement without admitting at the same time that there should be an end immediately to the countless emergency powers granted the Roosevelt administration has set up. It seems to me, therefore, that we are witnessing one of the most ridiculous situations that has ever occurred in politics where peculiar things are the rule. Succinctly, it amounts to this: each side actually is contending that the other is right.

Of course, it should be said, much water will flow under the bridge before the votes are counted in November; indeed, many changes will have come before the congressional campaigns in the various states get stirred up to a white heat, but unless the course of battle now indicated is altered, I predict the Republicans will have to do some fancy high rope walking. It surely appears that getting one's own legs tangled up in those arguments is about the easiest thing in sight.

Curious possibilities are offered by the situation. For example, are the Democrats going to go out on the hustings and saying to their mass meetings in effect that "we have not succeeded; we must have the A.A.A. and the NRA" and others? And, at the same time, are we going to hear from Republican spellbinders that "the Democrats have licked the depression and they must now put out the fire"? Instead of spending and running up bills which the taxpayers must meet"?

Neither side, of course, will say it in those words. But, if the argument goes ahead as it has started, it will have to be the substance of their tale to the voters. There will have to be some very careful, as well as very quick, thinking before the campaign's end. One political observer here suggested that this turn out to be the most confusing campaign because of the anomaly that is now presented by Mr. Snell's declaration.

There is considerable discussion here as to how far-reaching the effect may be if the Republicans stress, with sufficient vigor, the contention that the Democrats are trying to hold on to the extra jobs and dollars they are continuing to spend taxpayers' money for repayment of political debts. There is always something sinister about that kind of thing. Whether the charge is right or wrong, many voters get suspicious when campaigners persist in talking about raids on the federal treasury. They always think of it in terms of theft of money from the local bank or stores and not in the terms of political maneuvering, although I confess I can see little difference. It always has happened that the political party in power has controlled the flow of public money. It is spots where the funds will do the most good, politically, and when either side kicks about that, it seems to me it is exactly like one mule calling another "longear."

Just Speculation

I won't even suggest that I can guess what the ultimate effect of these strange arguments is going to be. Anyone who tries to predict the result at this time is just being silly. The best judgment I can give is that the results in the various congressional districts are going to vary. The difference likely will be dependent entirely upon how many mistakes—plain bonehead statements—the various candidates make in their attempts to follow arguments and analyses laid down for them by the national political committees. My belief is that there will be plenty of them and there ought to be, therefore, a considerable amount of surprise when the votes are counted.

It is quite apparent to the Democratic leaders, and they say so, that a number of house seats, now held by Democrats, will be turned over to the Republicans next fall. There are seats occupied by Democrats who have no reason on earth to be in the house except by virtue of the tremendous landslide that placed Mr. Roosevelt in the White House. Districts normally Democratic are more than likely going to continue to elect Democrats, but the "political accidents" that elected many others of the vast majority in the house are going to send many home because they come from overwhelmingly Republican communities. The Republican leaders are asserting they will pick up eighty or ninety seats from the Democrats next November. There can be no doubt that they will gain some, but eighty or ninety is a high figure in anybody's language.

It seems to me that Representative Mark Wilcox of Florida has won a rather signal honor in his first term as a member of the house of representatives by obtaining passage of the legislation that has come to be known as the municipal bankruptcy bill. It is something like twenty years since a "freshman" member of the house of representatives has sponsored a piece of legislation of national scope that was passed and became a law. Plenty of new members have introduced bills, nationwide in their effect, but as far as my research has disclosed, none has been successful in the last twenty years.

'First Termer' Wins Honor

Mr. Wilcox won membership in the house by defeating Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the famed William Jennings Bryan, for the Democratic nomination in his district where the nomination is tantamount to an election. So he was given a baptism of fire before he ever reached the house itself.

The measure, as I said, is national in scope and it probably will affect the financial status of some 2,500 communities which the bill calls taxing districts. This list of taxing districts includes municipalities, counties, boroughs, villages, parishes, townships, and incorporated taxing districts such as schools, drainage, irrigation, levee, sewer, port, sanitary, port, or any other districts in which improvements have been made in bonds and sold to pay for them. In order to take advantage of the provisions of the law, the taxing district must declare itself to be insolvent and unable to pay the interest or principal of the debt. The officials of the taxing district may petition a federal court for the right to arrange its affairs on a new basis, but the court must be shown that at least three-fourths in number and amount of holders of the bonds are willing to agree to the terms of a compromise. If they do agree, then the court may issue a decree that will compel the remaining bondholders to accept the settlement.

What happens, of course, is that the taxing district will be able to replace the defaulted bonds with a fresh series, probably at a lower interest rate. The taxing district gets out of the predicament of what amounts to bankruptcy, and the bondholders get new securities which are marketable and have something like their face value, because the interest will be paid. This privilege is extended for only two years, but it is the general understanding that the communities concerned will be able to accomplish settlements with their creditors much sooner than that, and it is obviously hoped also that improved financial conditions throughout the nation will make the job of rearranging the debts easier than it was a few years ago.

One of the obvious results of having the spotlight turned onto an individual or a fact or an issue is plenty of comment. People talk about it. Sometimes, however, the talk develops jibes and jests and oftimes they are not pleasant, for the ardent advocates of a proposition to swallow. For instance, until recently discussion of NRA had been confined to serious argument, very often of a heated character. Lately, however, jokes and puns about NRA have been emerging with greater frequency and there are now a considerable number of them. The latest, and one of the best that I have heard, runs as follows:

N. R. A. me down to sleep,
I pray Thee, Lord, my codes to keep;
If I should bust before I wake,
Ah, I'll get by, my plant will take.

I hear already that the American Federation of Labor considers the reference to it in the doggerel to be closely akin to unfair practice, or whatever it is organized labor says about those who are not its supporters. General Johnson's reactions are not yet a matter of record, although I know he has seen the thing.

BERNARD SHAW has changed his mind again about Communism. In an address to Oxford undergraduates, who thought they were Communists, he said: "You don't know what you are talking about. No single breath of tyranny is missing in Russia. It is carried into effect there on a gigantic scale." . . . Shaw wants to be a Communist, but is so intelligent he cannot avoid seeing its faults. When in Russia he made fun of the Communists to their faces. They were one day taking him to the races, and he said to them: "I suppose you have arranged for all the horses to win, you believe so much in equality."

How do some favorites get their start? Buddha is an old-time foreign hero to whom millions say their prayers, yet the British encyclopedia says no such person ever existed. I think we common people pay too much attention to heroes; none of them are as good or great as the shouting of followers would indicate.

I met a man recently who lives in a town of a thousand population in the South, where there are three negroes to one white. "We are getting along," he said, "because we have always lived simply; we have known how to produce our food, and are doing that now." . . . The same word comes from rural places everywhere. The rush to the towns has been stopped; the tide now is the other way. Originally the first duty of the people was to feed themselves, and they did it. They can do it again. The towns and cities are most artificial, and are being hit hardest. There have always been too many agents, judges, colonels, generals, in the towns. I thank the Lord they are being starved into going to work.

Silerius said, in his memoirs, that his favorites among his generals, neighbors and wives often annoyed him with acts and words with which he found fault; but he recalled that his generals, neighbors, wives and special friends had cause for equal resentment at times against his conduct toward them. Men are so constructed (and women, of course, are cut in the same timber) they cannot entirely satisfy anyone. The little good in us all must be cultivated, and made as agreeable as possible. Any man of reasonable candor and intelligence knows he is a wretched bundle of poor flesh always wearing out, and that a decent average in managing it is all he can hope for; that to achieve this decent average of success, we have been occasionally proclaimed as wise," Silerius adds, "but am so weak I am ashamed in my own presence, although I sincerely believe in exchanging civilities and such small assistance as I am able to offer, with those who are equally kindly disposed toward me."

The Beer Bust Head punishes me very savagely. So does the bust head following a big dinner, but I rather enjoy the Head Bust Head. We have about ruined the country voting bonds for good roads, and stolen a good deal of the money so appropriated; but we have the roads.

And, fearful as I am of debt, and national bankruptcy, I find a little satisfaction in good roads when I am able to temporarily forget the future. Recently I motored 1,400 miles through country unfamiliar to me. Fine paved roads every foot of the way. When able to forget the bond interest constantly piling up, the threat of national bankruptcy, I was almost proud of my country again: the Road Bust Head was almost enjoyable.

He groped the bottom for the weapon but Kate leaped from the canoe, raised the paddle again. He fended the first blow with his arm and lunged for her, but she jabbed at him with all her strength, hurling him backward.

Steve Drake was within twenty yards when Kate struck the weapon from Franz's hand; within ten when she struck again with her paddle, was dragging himself through the shallows for the reeds when Franz turned in flight.

He gained the channel bank and dived. Breathing hoarsely, Steve followed. Franz looked behind and gasped out a curse. He threw his hips upward and dived . . .

He went under abruptly and drove himself down, but Steve followed the eddies and bubbles he left, knowing the other's panic would cost him dearly though he might gain for the moment.

Franz came up to the right, shaking water from his eyes, gasping air avidly. A moment later he cried out as Steve's one hand fastened in his shirt.

Franz struck out, but the blow, though it caught Steve on the point of the chin, was light and ineffectual. Drake seized one of Franz's hands and twisted the arm cruelly. They went under, Franz's legs groping for a hold on Steve's, his fingers scratching at the throat.

They turned over. Franz tried to shove Drake deeper but could not and, as if by prearrangement, they broke their holds and shot to the surface, gasping for air. A brief interval they rested so, face to face, treading water, and then Franz commenced to swim again toward land.

But on his third stroke a hand grasped his ankle, his head was dragged under and Drake's body floated over him, binding his arms and legs close. He struggled an instant and then went limp.

Steve let him up, then, holding firmly to his shirt front while the man gagged and choked.

"You can't . . . get away," he panted. "Enough? . . . Will you . . . go back, now?"

Franz's mouth opened and closed convulsively. ". . . to h—l!" he rasped.

"Then I'll take you!" Drake cried. "Hold you under . . . until you . . ."

Franz half turned and fought Steve away with thrusts of one arm. Beneath the surface his other hand was busy, seeking, tugging at something, and as Drake broke through the guard and grasped for a hold on clothing it came up with as much of a sweep as he could manage in the water and on that movement a glint of flashing brightness swept for Steve's middle.

He threw himself quickly on one side to elude the blade, gasping out a word as he realized he had failed. A sharp sting above his left groin manifested itself but he had the knife hand securely, twisted and wrenched it, sending the man under, holding him there mercilessly until the fingers finally opened and the knife sank slithering toward the bottom.

Then Steve had to let go, strangling as he was from the water he had swallowed. The sting in his side had became a burning. He gave that no heed, however. He raised one arm high and turned his face toward the rushes where he had last seen Kate.

"Got him!" he called hoarsely. "Bring the canoe . . . . Got him . . ." But he winced from the throb in his belly which had by then replaced the sensation of burning.

He had believed he finally had Franz captive, but before his words were well spoken, the fellow broke loose and was swimming away. Steve followed, a great weariness, something more than the effects of this tremendous exertion, creeping through his muscles. He shot his eyes and used all his will to close quickly before that could happen which, it seemed certain, was going to happen now. And when he opened them Franz was nowhere in sight.

He stopped swimming at once, treading water sluggishly and pressed one hand to his wounded side, wincing from the pain the touch rendered.

Behind, he heard the canoe approaching. The sounds penetrated through a queer sensation in his ears. It was like a thickness, something hampering his hearing as fog will hinder sight.

The approaching paddle dipped rapidly. Still Franz did not show himself.

Steve brushed a hand across his eyes. His ears were going bad; were his eyes playing tricks, also? An odd warmth lay over his side, now; it was almost comfortable. . . .

Movement hurt him, now. He moaned from the pain and then, a few yards beyond, came a ruffling of the surface. Bubbles. . . . Bubbles, coming upward from deep down. . . .

"Stay back!" he gasped over his shoulder and the sounds of the paddle ceased.

He waited an interval for breath. The sun broke through the clouds again. Somehow, its light seemed feeble. Perhaps his sight was dimming. . . . Nevertheless, he let himself under water and stared about and saw what he saw. . . .

Speech was impossible when he rose that time. He scarcely had strength to beckon Kate forward. It seemed that she would never get across that intervening strip of water; seemed as if he could not stay afloat another fractional second.

But he did. His fingers found the gunwale and curled over it. With great effort he raised his other hand and took hold and leaned his forehead against his wrists, breath quick and shallow, not caring a great deal, now, that what strength remained in his body seemed to be pouring into the lake through his side.

"Got in!" the girl said huskily. "Here! Let me help you!"

"No," he tried to say stoutly, but the words came only in a whisper. "Please," he added. "Let me . . . just rest a . . . moment."

That was better. Resting was sweet. But the fingers of one hand wanted to let go. He shut his teeth as he fought to retain a hold on consciousness. His job was not done. He had one more obligation to discharge.

"Where," he began, without lifting his face. "Where . . ." What was it he had wanted to say? What had prompted a question? . . . "Where's Franz" he finished dully.

"Franz? He's . . . he's gone. You saw. He didn't come up. What's wrong with you?"—sharply. "What's happened?"

The lovely timbre of her voice shot through his veins like a stimulating drug. He raised his face to look into hers. Her eyes, those clear, widely set, blue eyes which had been bandaged when he looked at her closely before, set up a strength within him which gathered wit, marshaled his resources, gave him strength and clarity of mind.

"I'm all right," he muttered. "Tired. . . . What I started to ask was, where's the brief case?"

That was the thing he had left to do! Today was Wednesday. Tomorrow at four the contents of that portfolio must be in MacDonald's hands or all that he had tried to do for Old Jim Flynn would be as nothing.

"It must be here," the girl said. "He had it in the store. But that's no matter now. Are you . . . Are you all right?"

"Right," he answered, but his voice was thick despite the comparative ease with which his mind functioned for the moment.

"Get in, then. Oh, this is terrible! And we must hurry back to headquarters. They'll have found Tim and will be searching the whole country for us!"

"Yes," he muttered and tried to smile. They'd be searching, well enough. They'd been on his trail for long, now. But he must finish his job before more strength drained from his body. . . .

"I'll rest here," he said. "Paddle into the shallows. I might . . . upset you. . . ."

Kate picked up the paddle and headed for the little island. Steve closed his eyes, but he knew that the girl's eyes were on him much of the time. His feet trailed helplessly behind. His side began to throb and sting. He felt bottom and bounced to a stand, clinging dizzily to the canoe so he would not fall.

"Should be in here," he mumbled, reaching uncertainly for a pack sack. "We've got to know . . . now."

He loosed the straps of the pack. "There!" He pulled back the flap, exposing the duffle within. "There it is!" He drew out the light leather case as if it were a great weight. His hands were cold, fingers like sticks of wood. He tried to open it and failed. . . .

"You better," he said. He couldn't let her know that he was hurt. He'd worked for her, fought for her; she was dependent on him, now. If she knew that everything was getting fussy . . . "I'm . . . still a little shaky, I guess. . . ."

"But come ashore first. You need rest."

"No. Open it now. . . . Please!"

She opened the case and exposed the red envelope, sealed and sound and safe.

A great sigh left Steve's breast and he lurched against the canoe, shoving it sideways through the reeds, all but falling across it.

"Good!" he said thickly. "Safe, eh? Listen! . . . Listen, Kate Flynn." He wet his lips and tried to fight back the overwhelming weakness. "Listen, that money's got to be—"

"You're bleeding!"

Her cry cut him short. She screamed out again that he was bleeding.

"Nothing," he muttered. "Nicked me . . . a little . . ." But he looked down, following her terrified glance, and saw the red life fluid seeping through and mingling with the muddy water in which he stood.

She got out of the canoe herself and stood beside him, putting a slender arm about his waist, dragging one of his over her shoulder.

"Come!" she said, calmly enough. "Walk with me. So." He tried to move, but his feet seemed to be buried deep in clinging clay. He reeled as he tried, and all but fell again. "That's splendid!" she said and laughed, and her voice was filled with vigor. "Just a little way, now. Careful. Don't fall. There, that's better!"

As one would encourage a timid child she talked him into effort which otherwise would have been beyond his strength.

"Here we go! We're out of the water, now. . . . Just a few more steps. Over yonder's some bracken. Better to lie in that than on this wet sand."

"Sure," he said dully. "Sure thing. . . ."

"Now . . . Careful. . . . Here, I'll let you down."

But she did not let him down. She could not ease the slump of his weight and it dragged her to her knees with his fall.

His face had lost all color, his eyes were closed and a fine sweat prickled out on his brow.

"Can't you speak to me?" she begged. "Listen! If you hear me just open your eyes. Can't you do that much?"

But the eyes did not open. His breathing was scarcely perceptible and the hand she held was without the warmth of life.

"Oh, merciful God!" she prayed. "Oh, God, let me save him! Oh, God, let me serve him as he has served me!" And then, conscious of her own inadequacies for such a situation: "Oh, God, send me help!"

And then she called aloud for human help. But she knew screams were of no avail, and his life might be slipping away as she tried to make them serve.

Kate told herself this as she knelt beside this man she did not know, whose identity, even, was not within her wildest guess but who, for weeks, had been fighting her fight and who, today, had saved her from whatever might have been.

She rummaged his pockets for a knife, found the slit in his clothing through which the wounding blade had cut, made it larger and exposed the lacerated flesh. Blood oozed out in regular gushes and, loosing the bandage which still hung about her neck, she spread its folds over the long gash, pressing it down, holding it firmly, fighting the tremors in her hands, sobbing a little and calling out to Steve to speak to her . . . just to give some sign that he heard her. . . .

CHAPTER XII

IT WAS a long time before Mary Wolf finished the task of scraping a resting place for her father's body. Then she lowered it gently.

For an interval she knelt there on the soft, sweet earth, hands lax at her sides. "I'll ask the sisters to pray," she said aloud as if to end an annoying quandary and began scraping the fresh earth back upon the blanketed form.

She displayed no emotion. She was of a people which knows the futility of regrets. Her father had reached the end of an arduous trail. This was what she had known must be and it was better so. She would go back to Good-Bye and on to Shoestring. It was about school time and Young Jim had told her to go to school. She would do what he said. He was right. . . .

• • • • • • • • •

For hours, it seemed, Kate Flynn held that wad of gauze against the wound in Steve's side. In the beginning, blood had persistently oozed beneath the edges of the bandage but that had finally stopped. However, she did not dare relax the pressure. His life was in her hands. Others would be searching. She knew McNally and Wartin; she knew that with the discovery of Tim's body and her absence and the absence of this man whoever he be, they would fling their companies of searchers far.

But it might be days before she was found and in mere hours the light rise and fall of this man's chest might cease. . . . She cried aloud at the thought and bit her lip and told herself again that screaming would do no good, that she must hold her mind and courage and strength under strict discipline.

Help was nearer, then, than she could have dreamed.

Old Francois had taken long in reaching the fire fighters and delivering Steve's note. It was well after midnight before two canoes began their dash up the Good-Bye.

LaFane, in the bow of the first, stepped ashore at the Mad Woman trail. The battery of flashlights gave sufficient light for them to read the sign left there.

"Down . . . both of 'em," said LaFane, at the forking of the trail.

Any other would have believed so, too. The tracks of both men and the girl they followed took the right-hand fork and, with their faith so firm in the one who had led them all summer, it did not occur to them to search for further indications.

"It sure looks as if they went down river," LaFane repeated. "But we may be wrong. You,"—to a grappling young woodsman—"take the trail back to the Good-Bye and bring two canoes with plenty grub over here to wait for orders."

"Who'll go with you?" Young Jim asked. His voice was strained and his lips twitched in suspense.

LaFane said promptly:

"Wartin and I. You and Mac scout the lake. If you find anything that looks hot, follow it. If there's no sign, come back here. We'll get word up if we need help below."

And so Young Jim Flynn entered the lake from which LaFane had dragged him a fortnight before, eyes scanning the near shore and the islands beyond.

They went slowly, following the eastern shore line.

"What's that yonder?" Young Jim asked some time later, pointing with his paddle.

"Looks like a canoe." They headed on it and as they drew near old Mac said starkly: "'Y G—d, 'tis a canoe!"

They went swiftly after the craft.

"It's Young Jim's!" McNally said sharply, not yet knowing the strange tangle of names which had concealed identities from him and all others except LaFane.

"Look!" cried the boy. "Isn't that a bullet hole?"

"One . . . two . . . why, three of 'em!"

For a moment they stared at one another, mutely questioning.

"He caught up with them!" the boy said huskily. "He caught up and there was shooting and . . . God knows what else!"

"All we know is that they're up ahead, son! And you and me are closest to 'em and we got no time to lose. No use proddin' around here any more. After murder, theft and, anyhow, more shootin' and whatever happened to Katie, he'll make tracks up country, if he's able. He won't be around here. He'll be goin' yonder with all he's got. Our only chance is to find where he leaves the upper river. Anybody curious about us and who comes lookin' 'll find this canoe. Set her adrift and let's git on our way!"

They began to paddle desperately as mist flowed down into the lake again, obscuring landmarks more than a few rods away.

CHAPTER XIII

THE first drop of rain falling on her cheek forced Kate Flynn to a decision. To remove the pressure of her thumbs from that bandage might permit the blood to flow again; to leave this unconscious, weakened man exposed to a soaking might take away his last chance of ultimate survival.

Slowly, she relaxed the pressure she had held on the wound and anxiously watched the edges of that clotted gauze. No fresh flow appeared. The bleeding was stopped for the interval.

She staggered and almost fell from the cramps in her leg muscles when she tried to rise. She hastened to the canoe and threw the duffle ashore. A tent was there, of balloon silk, packed in its bag.

This girl had been in the woods enough with her veteran father to know something about making camp. Swiftly she shook out the shelter and set it up over the spot where Steve lay. She placed a blanket gently over him after another inspection of the bandage, pausing only an instant to look into his white, still face.

She ran into the timber, gathered fuel, and heaped it in three piles along the beach, fifty paces apart, and, with matches found in Franz's pack, ignited her fires.

Father of Factories

Richard Arkwright, the inventor of the spinning frame, was born on December 23, 1732. Before the days of Arkwright, British cotton manufacture was a home industry, carried on in the cottages of the workers. His invention of the water-frame, which made spinning a mechanical process for which water-power could be used, started the factory system, which, after a period during which the old methods and the new existed side by side, completely killed the domestic industry. A curious fact about Arkwright is that, although his invention revolutionized cotton manufacture he had very little mechanical skill himself, and had to enlist the services of another man to carry out his designs. Like other inventors of the period, too, he had considerable troubles over patent rights. But he was luckier than some in being able to make money. He died a comparatively wealthy man.—Montreal Herald.

Fabric Gloves Add Zest to Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN it comes to exciting events in the fashion realm the scene centers around fabric gloves and the matching accessories which go with them. The new gloves reveal style potentialities such as the rank and file of us never dreamed could exist in connection with what once upon a time we were wont to regard as mere hand coverings, with perhaps a little variation in design and stitching and color now and then.

However, here on the stage of fashion this very moment speaking for themselves is an endless array of gloves made of every material known to the ingenuity of man and revealing a wealth of ideas which are simply breathtaking in point of originality and audacious styling.

The importance of cotton for frocks and gowns, for smart ensembles and for suits started the furor for creating a need for gloves to coordinate in fabric and feeling with the new costumes for daytime wear. This movement toward unique fabric gloves received additional impetus from the great French couturiers. With utmost enthusiasm Chanel and Talbot, those two foremost originators of sportswear vogues, sponsor fabric gloves with matched accessories for spring and summer. So sound and altogether intriguing is the idea, it is spreading like wildfire throughout fashion's domain.

The interpretations of this new mode for matching accessories are legion. Just a glimpse of the new gloves of linen with gingham printed linen cuffs together with a tailored flower of the printed linen to wear on coat lapel or at the shoulder of a sports frock (illustrated to the right) and your peace of mind will be destroyed until you become the happy possessor of just such or its equivalent.

Perhaps you will covet even more a white scarf collar of open basket-weave cotton, crossbarred in blue at the ends and edges with white gauntlet gloves of crinkled cotton crepe with deep pointed cuffs of matching basket weave, such as the figure seated in the picture is wearing.

Chamoisette, that practical standby, is glorified anew this season in gloves that feature pin-checked gingham cuffs lined with plain gingham, with matching reversible collar-scarf in the monotone and checked fabric. It appears also in gloves with cuffs and matching tailored bow for shoulder or neckline made of gayly printed cotton. A most attractive accessory set of crocheted string features gloves and scarf of white, with the flared ends of the scarf and the flared cuffs of the gloves in three graduated shades of blue.

But do not think that your new fabric gloves simply must have matched accessories to be smart. There are so many materials and so many styles in glove fashions in general, it is impossible to do more than enumerate the important trends. Watch for the very sheer mitanese chiffons when the hot weather comes. They are in dark shades as well as white and are the coolest ever as well as wonderfully good looking.

Many of the new gloves in a variety of fabrics reflect the tailored vogue. Note the group pictured in the inset. Below to the left is a glove of dull luster diagonal oatmeal-type fabric in a slip-on style; above it, a washable chamoisette open cuff gauntlet with smart wood button at the wrist; next (top to the left) a sansheen slip-on with two tiny pearl buttons at the wrist and with scalloped edge; in the center, another chamoisette glove with novelty stitching trim in leaf design around the cut-out edge of the open cuff (very smart in navy). Above to the right short slip-ons in the honeycomb knit with rib-knit frill edging; below, gloves featuring a pleated self-fabric frill and diagonal stitching; and concluding the group a most outstanding type—crochet string slip-ons with lacy cuffs which look as if hand crocheted.

GREEK AND ROMAN TREND IN SANDALS

The shoe designers, who are taking themselves as seriously these days as the old masters immortalized in the Metropolitan museum, have delved into the ancient history of many nations to produce the array of sandals and ghillies, bejeweled dance slippers and tailored pumps that confront the modern woman whose grandmother used to be contented with one good serviceable pair of shoes a year.

The up-and-coming de'ic this season will wear sandals modeled after those worn by Helen of Troy, or beach slippers such as once adorned the pink-tipped toes of Cleopatra.

Authentically Greek and Roman in their inspiration are the new sandals worn not only for beach wear, but to complement any kind of summer sports costume. They're simple affairs made only of a couple of straps and a sole, leaving the toes altogether untrammeled.

The footgear of a monk in Capri provided the inspiration for the monk sandal which promises to be the rage of the summer resorts.

Year-Round Velvet

Velvet has become a year-round fabric and the new cords, diagonals, tweeds and ciquelike velvets are as practical for summer wear as they are for fall and winter.

Colored Tweeds

Those soft camel's-hair tweeds are being woven now in such combinations as a dull rose-purple with a tan check.

If candidates for representative could foresee the amount of grief and worry that will be attached to the job they are now after, it is fairly certain that each of them would do an Alphonse and Gaston act and bow out of the picture.

The problem of getting money for operating expenses is going to be staring a lot of city councils in the face next year. From all indications city officials had just as well get their pencils sharpened and start figuring, for the homestead tax exemption amendment is as good as on the books now.

Short drama from real life: Beautiful girl poses as model to illustrate magazine advertising. She confides to friends and they watch for ads. Ads appear. The picture appears. Confusion and embarrassment follow for the ad cometh out with the caption, "What a FOOL she is," and telleth all about her pink tooth brush.

From the way the other candidates are hopping onto Pepper it is a sure sign that all of them consider him the man they have to beat. But Pepper keeps right on plugging for votes, and from all indications he is getting them lined up for the first primary. The second go-round will tell the tale as between him and Trammell, or so they say.

This is the season of the election prophet. Give him a good chaw of tobacco and a piece of white pine for whittlin' purposes and he can sit on the park bench and figure it all out for you. The fact that his favorite candidate ran a poor third in the last election doesn't dampen his enthusiasm for picking 'em for you, and his logic is just as convincing—to himself.

Failure of the Democratic party in Florida to draw a definite line between Democrats and free-lancers has brought on some ludicrous situations from time to time in the primary elections. But the fur-lined bath tub goes to the gentleman who stands sponsor for a red-hot Socialistic meeting while asking the Democrats of his precinct to elect him as their executive committeeman. That's a bit thick, and a little hard to take, even with the most liberal and generous interpretation of what, why and when is a Democrat. For while the Democrats have no objection to honest converts to the cause and might even stand for a little proselyting on Presidential election years, still they don't go about the country hunting up Socialists and what nots so that they may hand them over the reins of the party. Precinct committeeman is not a large office as offices go, but the one and most important prerequisite for a candidate seeking the place should be his absolute and unswerving loyalty to the party.

Every day or so somebody asks us who we are supporting for this or that. Our answer is that we are supporting our wife and kids, and trust that you are quite well. We have a lot of friends running for local offices, and we don't believe any of them have ever been caught stealing hogs or feeding slugs to slot machines, so we are letting them do their own good running with our blessings. We expect to pick out a good man in each race and vote for him, win, lose or draw, and trust that you do the same. Among the state candidates, we would like to see Hardin Peterson returned to Congress because he deserves it and there is no reason under the sun that we know of for making a change. We would like to see Park Trammell replaced in the Senate with a new man, and we believe Claude Pepper is the man who should replace him. Then there is Eugene Matthews running for re-election to the railroad commission. He is a former newspaper man, with a good record of service both in office and out, and should be retained on the commission. But don't get us wrong—none of these fellows have promised us a job, the public printing or the steps to the white house, so we're not going to fall out over them, either. The thing to do is to choose the best men you can and stick to them. If more of that were done in this country, we would have cleaner politics and better officers.

Don't like the care-worn expression the artist has given Our Dave on the picture they are exhibiting at the World's Fair. He didn't look that way when he came here two years ago—but he wasn't governor then.

Roasting ears and watermelons are two products now rolling out of the state in carload lots to contribute to the joie de vivre of our friends in the north. People would be incredulous if told that Florida is a "corn state," but it ships enough corn to produce more revenue than is enjoyed by some of the states in which corn is one of the staples. Only we ship our corn in the form of roasting ears, receiving prices far in excess of that which the grain brings. Fort Meade is now shipping green corn at the rate of about four cars a day.

The Times is in receipt of a new price list for printing, furnished by the Graphic Arts Code Authority, and the prices have been put into effect. On the whole the prices are about the same as we have been charging, and we consider them fair both to the printer and to the customer. The main advantage to the industry is that it establishes a uniform price, which has long been needed, and eliminates cut-throat prices. The advantage to the customer is that his printing will be done by printers who know their business, because nobody will buy inferior printing when good printing costs no more. Now, if the NRA people will put enough teeth in the blamed thing to make it work, everything will be jake.

Avon Park's Rotarians honored their fellow member, Charles R. Head by presenting him on Wednesday with a perfect attendance emblem for his nine years attendance at Rotary without a single miss. This is a record in which the Colonel and his club may take a justifiable pride. Like all things worth while, it was not brought about without some effort and some sacrifice. It has undoubtedly meant the foregoing of other appointments and sometimes other pleasures. It has meant "making up" at other places on innumerable occasions when impossible to attend the local club meeting, or when away from home. At one time that we know of, it meant getting up out of a sick bed, against doctor's orders, and driving to Sebring in order to make up. It is a pleasure to note here the accomplishment, and congratulate the Colonel on his long and uninterrupted record of service to his club.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

I've attended political rallies,
A dozen or more I guess.
And if half of the things they say are true,
We're sure in a helluva mess.

From Capitol Hill to the Courthouse,
The guys who are IN are the Nertz,
They've pilfered and robbed and betrayed us,
If they could they'd have taken our shirts.

Their records are blacker than storm clouds,
Their page of performance is blank,
In the U. S. Senate and Congress,
Our representation is rank.

They tell us it's worse at the state house,
What chance have the people there?
Where promises made are forgotten,
And we find they were only "hot air."

They created Boards and Commissions,
Provided for taxes and fees,
While we staggered on to the poorhouse,
Burdened down to our knees.

And the men on our County Commission,
What care they for you and for me?
They have used their position and power
To favor their own coterie.

The Judge and the State's Attorney
Sworn to up-hold and defend,
Justice is blind, but they're blinder
If the culprit's the ward boss's friend.

There isn't a man in an office,
That's fit his position to hold,
At least so it seems when opponents
Their miserable records unfold.

And when those IN office address us,
The story is just the reverse.
They point with pride to their record
And show where it could have been worse.

They warn us against swapping horses,
And tells us that they know the ropes,
And promise that if reelected,
They'll serve us beyond fondest hopes.

And we, the dear gullible people
In banana oil up to our chin
Take sides with this one or that one
And hope our selection will win.

But after the melee is over
And the smoke of battle has cleared,
We'll still have our nose to the grindstone
And be cussin' the fellows we cheered.

Political Announcements

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I hereby announce my candidacy for County Commissioner for District No. 1, subject to the Democrat primary, June 5th, 1934. I am a Florida Cracker, having been raised in Polk County, and have been a Democrat all my life. For the past ten years I have been a citizen of Avon Park. During the past nineteen years I have had a wide experience in road construction and maintenance work. I believe I am qualified to handle the affairs of the district and give competent service. I will appreciate your vote and support.

FRANK ARMISTEAD

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I wish to announce my candidacy for County Commissioner from District No. 1., subject to vote of the Democratic Primary Election June 5, 1934.

As a candidate I am pledged to no faction or individual. If elected I pledge my best efforts in behalf of my district and the county as a whole. I would greatly appreciate your support.

Respectfully,
J. L. WELLS

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER

I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of county commissioner for District 1, Highlans County, subject to the Democratic Primary, June 5, 1934.

I have been a resident of this community for the past 21 years and served previously as county commissioner for this district when it was part of old DeSoto county.

Being a long-time resident here I believe I have a full knowledge of the needs of the district and county as to roads and other vital matters and if elected promise an honest, efficient administration with a square deal for all concerned.

Your vote and support will be appreciated.

S. P. DURRANCE.

FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

I wish to announce my candidacy for nomination to the office of Circuit Judge, subject to the Democratic Primaries in June.

If you feel that my service as circuit judge merits your further confidence in my ability and integrity, I shall greatly appreciate your support, and vote in the June primaries.

W. J. BARKER

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

To the Voters of Highlands County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for re-election to the office of Representative for Highlands County in the Legislature. If nominated and elected, I shall continue to serve the people of Highlands County and the State of Florida fairly and impartially to the best of my ability. Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

J. E. SIMS.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

To the Voter of Highlands County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for election to the office of Representative for Highlands County in the Legislature.

If nominated and elected I shall serve the PEOPLE of Highlands County and the State of Florida fairly and squarely according to majority wishes and mandates of the PEOPLE.

DR. A. T. EIDE.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

I wish to announce as a Candidate for the House of Representatives subject to the Democratic primary on June 5, 1934.

I pledge myself, if eleced, to represent the people of this county as a whole.

Your support will be sincerely appreciated.

FORD W. HEACOCK.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

I wish to announce my candidacy as a nominee for the office of Representative of Highlands County, subject to the will of the Democratic Primary, June 5, 1934.

My platform is the program as adopted by the Florida Tax payers Association.

Your vote and influence will be appreciated.

P. L. VINSON.

Mrs. Yates Hostess at Bridge Friday

Mrs. W. H. Yates was a charming hostess when she entertained at a lovely bridge party last Friday afternoon.

A dainty color scheme of pink, green and white was used, with these colors predominating in the beautiful flowers and again reflected in the refreshments.

At the close of the games prizes were received by Mrs. Jack Head, Mrs. H. F. R. Reck, Miss Carlotta Patterson and Mrs. Ewing Brumbaugh.

A delicious sweet course was served to the following guests: Mesdames W. C. Touchton, Frances Shockley, G. P. Thayer, E. P. Lacey, E. P. Loomis, C. E. Lanier, P. L. Rumpsa, H. E. Keller, W. H. Kempton, T. A. McNicholas, John Hood, H. C. McFerrin, H. F. R. Reck, F. R. Patterson, D. B. Farnell, Jean Ricketts, A. H. Able, Olive Anderson, Ewing Brumbaugh, L. E. Bass, Katherine Bristol, C. S. Donaldson, S. C. Pardee, C. P. Anderson, S. E. Booth, Raymond Dilley, E. F. Carmichael, M. E. Covington, W. T. Coates, Roy Felkner, J. P. Garber, Jack Head, Wm. Hauptmann, Hollingsworth, J. B. Hart, R. Johnston, Paul Jones, Gerrould, Ben Stewart, C. H. Pardee, E. W. Hartt and Miss Carlotta Patterson.

Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Able and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Yates and niece Miss Gwendolyn Parker, left on Thursday for Fort Myers Beach. Mr. Yates and Dr. Able returned to Avon Park yesterday while the ladies will remain for a few days.

Missionary Society Meets at Hut

Fifteen ladies of the Methodist Missionary Society assembled at the Hut on Tuesday for a study class.

Beginning at ten o'clock, Mrs. Harry Jackson discussed three chapters of the mission study book "Eastern Women of Today and Tomorrow," by Ruth Frances Woodsmall.

At the noon hour the husbands and families came in and a delicious luncheon was served.

Mrs. R. A. Gerrard and Mrs. J. D. Raab had charge of the afternoon class. This book is most interesting. It deals with the relationship of christian missions to the development of women of the Orient.

The next class will be held at the home of Mrs. J. D. Raab next Tuesday afternoon beginning at three o'clock. The book will be completed.

Sans Souci Club Met Monday

Mrs. Joe Bass was hostess to the Sans Souci club Monday evening at her home on Verona avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Hall who have been wintering at Highland Lakes, have returned to their home in Bloomington, Ind.

C. B. Martin left Tuesday for Mayodan, N. C., where he will be a member of the Maydon baseball club for the rest of the season.

Mrs. D. V. Rouse and children Bobby, Alice and Mary of Orlando, returned to their home today after visiting a few days here with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bledsoe left Saturday after spending several months in Avon Park. Mr. Bledsoe was connected with the Federal fruit inspectors.

Mrs. Joe Lander and son Joe Allen of Raiford, have been the guests this week of Mrs. Lander's mother, Mrs. L. E. Bass, at her home on Lake Lotela.

Mrs. C. Parke Anderson and Roscoe Bass spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Okeechobee where they went to attend the funeral of Mrs. L. M. Raulerson.

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Davison and Mrs. Davison's mother, Mrs. Johnson, have gone to Grand Forks, South Dakota, to spend the summer months. They expect to return to Avon Park in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Ellis Wray of Montgomery, Ala., are expected tomorrow to spend two weeks with Mr. Wray's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Elmore Wray. Mr. Wray is connected with the Alabama Power company in Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Y. Hartt left on Sunday for Mankato, Neb., where they will be the guests of relatives. While they are away their home will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hartt and children.

Might Be Good Plan Now

The Dakota Indians used to call their children, at birth, Eldest Son or Eldest Daughter, the children following being Second, Third, etc., until circumstance, development of character, or personal appearance should suggest a name to be borne through life.

Midnight Show at the New Circle Saturday

A special midnight pre-view showing of "Mr. Skitch" starring the inimitable Will Rogers, with Zasu Pitts, will be held at the New Circle, "Sebring's Friendly Theatre" Saturday night at 11:30 p. m. Regular showings of this splendid comedy will be offered starting with Sunday Matinee at 3:30, through Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rawlings and Miss Elizabeth Rawlings left today for Washington, D. C., and Rectortown, Va., where they will spend the summer. They will also spend a few days in Blackburg, Va., attending the commencement exercises of V. P. I., where their son, Lusby, is a member of the graduating class.

To The Voters of Highlands County

In announcing my candidacy for County Commissioner of Highlands County, I feel the voters should know something of me and of my qualifications for the office.

I attended high school in Lakeland, Florida, and took Mechanical Engineering at Stetson University. For a number of years I was engaged in this profession.

Later I did road constructin in Polk county, particularly about the cities of Lakeland and Lake Wales. During recent years I have been in the automobile business and affiliated lines in this city.

I have lived in Florida for thirty years. In 1924 I came to Avon Park. I built my home in 1926, which I still own. In 1928 I established the Wells Motor Company at my present location, and through five years of depression have enlarged this business from one to a seven-man proposition. I believe I can say without boasting that I have as good a business in this line as there is in Highlands County.

If I am elected County Commissioner I pledge myself to the people to a fair and impartial administration. I have looked very carefully into the requirements of a commissioner and I feel that I can measure up to the standard. In addition to a wide business experience, I am perfectly familiar with such matters of road construction and maintenance as would come under my supervision, and I likewise have had a wide experience in the hiring and handling of labor.

I will thank you for your votes and will guarantee to give the people of this county, one and all, without fear or favor, a fair and square deal.

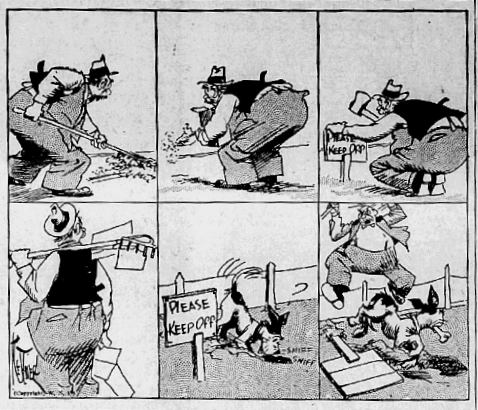

Faithfully yours,
J. L. WELLS

DRESSY DESIGN IN FROCK FOR HOUSE OR STREET WEAR

PATTERN 9937

Looking lovely around the house is an art worth cultivating. It isn't a luxury to have good-looking morning frocks. It's just a matter of choosing the right designs. The frock in the illustration is so comfortably trim that it is nice to do your housework in, and yet, it has so many delightful fashion details that you can actually use the same pattern to make an afternoon or street dress. For mornings make it of one of the checked, striped or figured new cottons. For afternoons, use sheer cotton or silk.

Pattern 9937 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch fabric.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth St., New York.

PETER FINDS A FRIEND IN TROUBLE

SEEING Farmer Brown's Boy coming through the Old Orchard, Peter Rabbit decided that that was no place for him, so he scampered for the Green Forest, lipperty-lipperty-lip. Just within the edge of the Green Forest he caught sight of something which for the time being put all thought of Farmer Brown's Boy out of his head. Fluttering on the ground was a bird than whom not even Glory the Cardinal was more beautiful. It was about the size of Redwing the Blackbird. Wings and tail were pure black, and all the rest was a beautiful scarlet. It was Redcoat the Tanager. At first Peter had eyes only for the wonderful beauty of Redcoat. Never before had he seen Redcoat so close at hand. Then quite suddenly it came over Peter that something was wrong, and he hurried forward to see what the trouble might be.

Redcoat heard the rustle of Peter's feet among the dry leaves and at once began to flap and flutter in an effort to fly away, but he could not get off the ground.

"What is it, Redcoat? Has something happened to you? It is just Peter Rabbit. You know you don't have anything to fear from me," cried Peter.

The look of terror which had been in the eyes of Redcoat died out. He stopped fluttering and simply lay panting. "Oh, Peter," he gasped,

"What is it, Redcoat? Has something happened to you?"

"you don't know how glad I am that it is only you. I've had a terrible accident, and I don't know what I am to do. I can't fly, and if I have to stay on the ground some enemy will be sure to get me. What shall I do, Peter? What shall I do?"

Right away Peter was full of sympathy. "What kind of an accident, Redcoat, and how did it happen?" he asked.

"Broadwing the Hawk tried to catch me," sobbed Redcoat. "In dodging him among the trees I was heedless for a moment and did not see just where I was going. I struck a sharp-pointed dead twig and drove it right through my right wing."

Redcoat held up his right wing and, sure enough, there was a little twig sticking out from both sides close up to the shoulder. The wing was bleeding a little.

"Oh, dear, whatever shall I do, Peter Rabbit? What ever shall I do?" sobbed Redcoat.

"Does it pain you dreadfully?" asked Peter.

Redcoat nodded. "But I don't mind the pain," he hastened to say. "It is the thought of what may happen to me."

Do You Know—

That in its beginning the American newspaper was a very small affair. The Boston News-Letter, one of the first newspapers published in America, April 24, 1704, was printed on half a sheet of paper 7½ x 12½ inches. It contained one advertisement—that of the proprietor.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes
By JEAN NEWTON

SOME BABIES LIKE SNAKES!

TWO groups of eighteen-months-old infants were placed in two separate rooms—and snakes permitted to run around among them. Oh, yes, the snakes were harmless, had less possibility for harm even than any new-born puppy!

Now for the result. The group of children from normal homes screamed with fright. The other, consisting of babies born and raised in the hospital, allowed the snakes to crawl over them—in fact, they "watched them with delight!"

The point made by the scientists who sponsored that experiment is that our fears are not natural or instinctive, but implanted. The babies in the hospital had been isolated from the "fear suggestions" against snakes which are planted in most children.

All that is, of course, of interest to us. What is more important to all of us, is the implications, which we cannot escape, that in every department of life we "grow our own fears."

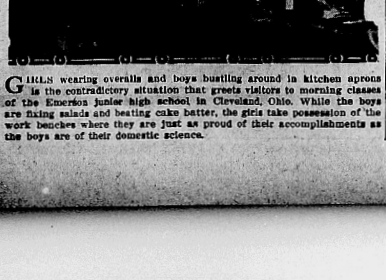

The worries which, according to doctors, are the chief burden of modern life, therefore the worries that kill, are the result of special fears. And so many of those special fears have no more basis in fact than the fear of children against the wiggling snake. So many of our fears are implanted and cultivated long before there can possibly be any sense to them.

It would be a good pain to "take inventory" of our fears, to bring them out in the open, set them up where we can look all around them and analyze them and track them down—to what they really are.

There is one fear—or distrust, which is the same thing—that is perhaps more of a burden to us in everyday life than any other. That is the one that has to do with people because they happen to be different from ourselves. Adults in this enlightened age allow their viewpoints to be warped by no more intelligent distrust than that of the child who has a horror of any Chinese because "yellow men eat children" and of Indians because a demented Italian "burnt the barn down." Fear myths of that kind, of course, exist in direct proportion with ignorance. But there are some so deep-rooted emotionally that even education does not always eliminate them. We can combat them only by bringing them out in the open and testing ourselves against them—the way scientists test to overcome their doubts.

Cleveland Girls Learn Men's Work

GIRLS wearing overalls and boys bustling around in kitchen aprons is the contradictory situation that greets visitors to morning classes of the Emerson junior high school in Cleveland, Ohio. While the boys are fixing salads and beating cake batter, the girls take possession of the work benches where they are just as proud of their accomplishments as the boys are of their domestic science.

Mother's Cook Book

SEVERAL GOOD THINGS

FOR a warm day try the following cooling and delightful dish:

Jellied Consomme.

Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water. Dissolve in one quart of hot consomme. Pour into bouillon cups and chill, or pour into a shallow pan and when chilled cut into cubes or beat with a fork, before serving in the cups.

Melba Pastry.

Take one cupful of oven-dried crumbs, when a golden brown put through a food chopper. Mix well with one-third of a cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and four tablespoonfuls of butter. Line a large pie plate with the mixture and bake in a slow oven for 20 minutes. Allow the crust to cool, then pour in the cooled filling.

Cucumber Jelly.

Grate enough peeled cucumbers to make a pint, season with salt, pepper, paprika, olive oil and vinegar—two of oil and one of vinegar. Add one teaspoonful of gelatin softened in two teaspoonfuls of cold water, dissolve over hot water until soft, then add to the cucumber and mix well. In the bottom of each individual mold, place a half walnut meat, then pour in the cucumber mixture. Serve turned out on lettuce leaves and top with a teaspoonful of mayonnaise. A little grated onion added to the cucumber will improve it for most people.

Banana Custard.

Slice three ripe bananas. Cook two beaten eggs, one-fourth cupful of cake crumbs and one cupful of milk two minutes or until the custard slightly coats the spoon. Add two teaspoonfuls of lemon rind and stir in the bananas. Pour into a greased baking dish, set in a pan of hot water and bake until the pudding is set. Cover with a meringue and brown.

Deviled Crab.

Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and when well blended add one cupful of thin cream, one teaspoonful of paprika, a dash of cayenne, two egg yolks, two cupfuls of crab meat, one-half teaspoonful of lemon juice, two-thirds of a cupful of buttered bread crumbs. Mix and cook three minutes, place in a buttered ramekin and cover with buttered crumbs. Place a thin slice of lemon on top of each serving. Bake until brown. Garnish with parsley.

Rome as It Was in the Days of the Caesars

PAUL BIGOT, member of the Institute of France, constructed this beautiful model of the city of Rome in the time of the Caesars, on a scale 400 times smaller than the actual dimension of the buildings. At the left is the Circus Maximus, with the Coliseum at the right, above which is the Imperial Forum with the temples of Constantine and Venus. The Tiber follows the edge of the model at the top of the picture, past the Palatine and the Capitol.

"After all a vegetarian diet reads to a meat eater," says Titian Tillie, "like a bunch of botony."

MY CABIN
By ANNE CAMPBELL

I SHALL have a cabin with no pictures in it.
There will be wide windows gleaming in the sun.
Every oaken frame will hold a landscape in it,
Changing in the morning and the setting sun.

Nothing ever painted will excel the splendor
Of the lovely scenes that bless my weary gaze.
Dawn will come with fingers silver-tipped and slender,
And the midnight moon will leave her misty ways.

Paintings cannot tempt me when the hills and valleys
March outside my window in eternal pride.
From my hilltop cabin where the east wind dallies,
I shall see the treasures Time has deified.

Up to His Neck

Old Peiping City of Charms

Ancient Capital Has Been Center of Chinese Life for Forty Centuries; Spoken Of by Marco Polo, When He Was Kublai Khan's Advisor.

Peiping, for long the focus of news interest in the Far East, has had a marked increase in population for more than a year, owing to an influx of refugees. Already the 1,500,000 mark has been passed, as shown by a recent census, and still merchants, countrymen, dispossessed officials, and other social groups stream to the city's friendly walls. A bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society describes the ancient capital of China.

"To Peiping, alias ancient Chi, Yu Chen, Yencking, Chung Tu, Khanbaligh, and Peking, influxes of population are not new," says the bulletin. "During many times in its long span of forty centuries people have come and gone, but the city under one name or another has lived on. No other city in China is so rich in historical associations. Few cities of the world, in fact, hold more interest for the visitor than does Peiping.

"To this city journeyed Marco Polo when he met and became adviser to the mighty Kublai Khan. In the heart of Peiping still stands the old drum tower that boomed forth the watches of night when Messer Marco lived in the courts of the great Tatar ruler. Fly over the ancient capital today and you can see the definite outline of a portion of the crumbled ramparts that enclosed Khanbaligh, as the city was then called. They lie to the north of the present walls.

"The wide streets, that form such a contrast to the narrow twisting alleys of most old Chinese cities, also reflect the influence of the Tatars. Today many of these streets are being paved with asphalt to do away at last with the deep dust or mud and the persistent ruts that have been cut during the passing centuries by countless camel caravans and two-wheeled 'Peking' carts.

"Peiping is really a city beside a city and cities within a city, each separated from the other by massive walls. Within the great fortified Tatar city is the old Imperial city. Pinkish-red walls, yellow tiled on top, in turn set apart the 'Purple Forbidden City' in the heart of the mounted Imperial enclosure. And adjacent to the Tatar city on the southern side is another walled rectangle that composes the Chinese city, the section where, in 1644, when the Ming dynasty fell, all of the Chinese were forced to live, the Manchus having appropriated the whole of the original city.

"The old Tatar walls remain much the same today as when they were piled together more than 500 years ago. Wars, time, and prying tree roots, however, have caused them to crumble and bulge in places. Spots show where repairs have been made. Nine of the nine gates are intact, and all of the corner towers have been destroyed except two. The government railway has tunneled through the wall at the southeast gate so that engines smudge the ancient barrier.

"The more cataloguing of historic temples, palaces, and buildings would make an impressive list. The Temple of Heaven in the south portion of the Chinese suburb, where emperors once made sacrifices to the heaven and earth, and the 'Purple Forbidden City' in which they lived are of the greatest interest.

"Unlike remote Lhasa, which was found to be tawdry when it was finally opened for the public to see, the Forbidden city proved to be more elaborate than had been anticipated. Although the last Manchu emperor, Pu Yi, who has recently been made ruler of Manchukuo, abdicated in 1912, he was allowed to live in the Forbidden city until 1922. Since that time a committee has had the palaces in its charge, and has converted a considerable portion of the group into a museum, portions of which are open daily to visitors.

"Despite the fact that the Chinese capital has been moved to Nanking, the legations of foreign countries remain in Peiping. The ministers and their staffs are able to travel to Nanking and Shanghai at their convenience on good trains or by air, so are not disposed to abandon the costly and comfortable properties in the legation quarter in the southern portion of the Tatar city.

"Traffic in Peiping is colorful and varied. Camel caravans, two-wheeled 'Peking' carts, automobiles, and rikshas, together with pedestrians and burdened coolies, jostle each other on the streets and at the narrow apertures of the gates. Almost every day countless wedding and funeral processions move along the streets with their palanquins and all the red and tinsel glitter that China assembles around these two important events. In truth, no city in the world has a more picturesque and varied traffic.

"But Peiping, although it is no longer the capital of China, lives not entirely in the past. It has excellent colleges and libraries that make it a leading cultural center for the country. Through the help of the Rockefeller foundation it also has an efficient hospital and medical school for the training of Chinese doctors and nurses."

Two Sides

"There are two sides to every argument."

"That's true," said Senator Sorghum. "But an argument is like a coat. There's a wrong side and a right side."—Washington Star.

MITCHELL SPOKE HERE TUESDAY TO SMALL CROWD

Candidate for U. S. Senate Made Good Impression on Hearers

Chas. A. Mitchell, candidate for United States Senator, spoke in Avon Park Tuesday morning in the interest of his candidacy. He made a strong plea for votes on a platform of re-emburesement to growers for loss caused by the Medfly eradication and on the basis that he is a poor man's candidate. He made a good impression and judging from the comments on the street after his talk he won several supporters.

In his introductory remarks, Mr. Mitchell stated that in times such as these, when our people are distressed and sorely tried, political gatherings should not be the scene of attacks by one candidate upon the others, but rather should be the coming together of American citizens for the purpose of considering our problems and of attempting to arrive at successful solutions of them. He paid tribute to President Roosevelt and his administration, and said that the President, as the chosen leader of the American people, had proved his right to his leadership by the results of his first year in office. He stated that approximately 96 percent of our national wealth is in the hands of less than five percent of our people and that we could not have prosperity until the great mass of the people had money in their hands in order that they might trade with each other. He said that we must end the present situation wherein a few become immensely rich while millions face starvation. He proposes a heavy tax on large incomes and inheritances and that we use a portion of the money received from such a tax for the purpose of providing an old age pension system in the United States. He pointed out that the average citizen has small chance to make more than a bare living and that if he educates his children and contributes to the welfare of his community, he is unable to save for his old age, and that such a citizen upon reaching his or her sixties, was entitled to receive a modest check each month as compensation for years spent as a good citizen in the building up of the nation.

Mr. Mitchell pointed out that the Government issues tax exempt bonds in which persons of great wealth invest their entire fortunes and escape taxation, and that money is placed in these securities which otherwise would come into the hands of the farmers, laboring men, merchants and professional men of the country. He proposes that we issue currency and pay off these Government Bonds and thus save six hundred ninety million dollars in interest each year which is paid by the common people of the nation. He pointed out that such a plan would impair the credit of the Government, but that we would simply exchange a piece of paper that does not bear interest and that can circulate among the people, for a piece of paper that bears interest and does not circulate, and that the Government would owe not one dime more than at present.

He said that he personally favors the immediate payment of the Adjusted Service Compensation Certificates commonly known as the "bonus" as a means of placing money in circulation. He points out that the Government has been and is now engaged in the spending of several times the amount necessary to pay the bonus in an effort to place money in circulation. He said that the bonus was an obligation we had promised to pay on or before 1945, and that it is better to pay off a debt ahead of time in order to place the money in circulation rather than to spend the money for things that will have no permanent benefit and still have our debts facing us. He is also opposed to cutting compensation of pensioners and low salaried Government employees and says that savings made by such cuts should be made instead by cutting higher salaried officials and employees.

He proposes Federal aid for the public school system to the full extent necessary to provide a full term and adequate salaries for teachers throughout the State, until such time as the State is able to fully and adequately finance our public schools.

Mr. Mitchell said that in past years a person knew that if he was willing to do an honest day's work in whatever his occupation might be he could make a living for him-

Home of Col. Lee Damaged by Fire Saturday Night

Fire which is said to have started in the kitchen, did considerable damage to the home of Col. J. M. Lee Saturday night. The house was occupied by H. C. Kennedy and family but they were all down town at the time. All the doors and windows were closed and the fire practically gutted the interior of the house. The fire was discovered by a passing motorist who phoned the fire department. The department made a quick run and were warmly praised for their work by the insurance adjusters.

Damage to the house was estimated at $1,750 and to the furniture $750, both items being covered by insurance.

MOVEMENT STARTED TO PROTECT BLACK BASS

Effort Being Made To Stop Shipment of Bass Out of State

Florida's famous Black Bass will be entirely depleted in a short time if immediate action is not taken to stop the sale and shipment of this important game fish. Florida, the only state that ships black Bass, is being ridiculed throughout the nation for allowing this practice to continue.

"Many Floridians, who do not fish, do not realize the value of one of Florida's greatest assets — the Black Bass," according to C. D. Kirk, State Chairman of the Consolidated Black Bass Commission representing all of the Chambers of Commerce and service organizations throughout the state.

Over 700 tons of Black Bass, the king of fresh water fish, are shipped annually from Florida to be sold in the markets along with Mullets, Cats, and Snappers at from seven to ten cents a pound. Analyzing these figures the fact is brought closer home to every citizen when it is proven that every pound of fresh water bass is worth from one to five dollars when caught on the end of the tourist fishing line.

Political Candidates Queried.

Every candidate for the House and Senate in the state has been requested to take a stand on this important subject. Too long has Black Bass been traded for votes and the citizenry, in general, and sportsmen, in particular, are now aroused and are determined that every candidate for office take a stand. As the time for voting is at hand it is suggested that every citizen use his influence at the coming election to bring about enough pressure to stop this wanton waste of one of Florida's greatest assets. For years different groups and organizations have tried single handed to have legislative action put a stop to this practice but this is the first time a concentrated effort has been put forth and this state-wide movement is assured of success, according to Chairman Kirk.

Rotarians Enjoy Musical and Boy Scout Program

H. F. R. Reck had charge of the Rotary club program at the luncheon Wednesday noon. The program was divided into two parts, the first being a series of piano solos by Miss Letta Reck.

Then came four Boy Scouts in charge of Scoutmaster George Hayes and gave an exhibition of signalling, first aid and other scout work. The scouts taking part were Edward Touchton, J. L. Green, Charles Sherman and Donald Todd.

Visitors at the luncheon were F. T. Haskins, Ford Heacock and J. M. Stephenson of Sebring and H. A. Chadburn of Jacksonville. E. E. Melton presided in the absence of Dr. D. G. Perry.

VETERAN DEAD ARE HONORED BY THEIR COMRADES

Impressive Ceremony Held at Sebring Pier on Wednesday

Wednesday afternoon a large group of citizens from all sections of the county met at the Sebring Municipal pier to witness the memorial services conducted by the various veterans organizations of the county for the veterans dead of Highlands county.

The service was short and impressive starting with music by the Sebring School Band under the direction of Prof. P. J. Gustat followed by the advancing of the colors of the Sebring and Avon Park Legion posts.

Following a short prayer by Major E. E. Barton. Mrs. Ruth Sebring sang a beautiful selection in her usual charming manner.

Mrs. Col. Lacy Dunham delivered a touching address on what Memorial Day means to Mothers.

P. R. Price called the roll of departed veterans with Prof. R. T. Fairey of Avon Park placing a flower in a cross for each absent veteran. The roll call included Confederate Veterans: Geo. S. Sloman, A. A. Robertson, Edwin R. Richardson, David Cash, and Rayford Durrance. Union Veterans: S. S. Williams, Alfred Boraff, S. G. Donaldson, Jas. H. Armstrong, S. E. Daly, Henry Bossler, H. R. Devoe, Joseph Bell, Hypolite Kugler and E. P. Brown. Spanish War Veterans: William H. Pabor, Peter Kiessling, Sewell Albright, Chas. W. Pabor, Isaac Dottery and Ben Pollard. World War Veterans: Jesse Tryer, Leslie Collier, William B. Dunwoody, Chas. Liakos, G. C. Lighthiser, Guy N. Bever, Willie Webb, Oscar David Johnson and Manning Land. National Guard: Burl Hancock.

Following the roll call W. Hauptmann, of Avon Park delivered the Memorial address with dignity and reverence.

Following the sounding of "Taps" a firing squad from the Headquarters company of the National Guard stationed at Avon Park fired a volley and the program was closed with the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the School Band.

Seated on the platform were Prof. R. T. Fairey, Commander of American Legion Post of Avon Park; Col. C. R. Head, Commander of United Spanish War Veterans; N. A. Broking, Commander Highlands County Post Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States; Capt. W. R. Maynard, Commander Leslie Collier Post American Legion; and Dr. A. T. Eide, Commander of Lake Placid Post of American Legion.

Music, Drama and Comedy Make Up Film Fare at Avon

Those who like their Western stars to fairly tear down the theatre will be more than satisfied when they see Bob Steele in "Galloping Romeo" at the Avon theatre on Saturday.

Bing Crosby, star of stars to millions of movie fans appears in his latest picture, "We're Not Dressing" on Sunday and Monday. Bing sings song after song and laughs follow each other in quick succession in this musical romance. Carole Lombard, Burns and Allen, Leon Errol and Ethel Merman make up the supporting cast—not to mention the skating bear. The picture is sure to please lovers of musical talkies.

A double feature program is billed for Tuesday and Wednesday. Victor McLaglen and a splendid cast in "Laughing at Life" is feature number one on this bill. Feature number two is "Sixteen Fathoms Deep" featuring Sally O'Neil. This picture is not very entertaining but is interesting to Floridians because a number of the scenes are taken at Tarpon Springs, Florida. The story is laid in the sponge fishing colony there.

Our Joan, yes you guessed it—Joan Blondell is starred in "I've Got Your Number" on Thursday and Friday. The picture which is classed as a comedy drama is packed with laughs and action. Glenda Farrell, Pat O'Brien, Allen Jenkins and Eugene Pallette complete the cast. Joan and Glenda as telephone girls solve a mystery while Pat and Allen as trouble shooters supply laughs. The management urges those who enjoy boisterous comedy to see this picture.

FERA Approves Mall Project; Work to Start Immediately

H. R. Currie, park superintendent, announces the approval by the FERA authorities of his project for the beautifying of the Mall, work to start immediately. The number of man hours allotted is 7,800 and work will consist of claying the entire Mall, the placing of three inches of muck around all shrubbery and the claying between the curb and the sidewalks. The Mall will also be sown with centipede grass.

It is estimated that 675 cubic yards of muck will be used and 600 yards of clay.

Cactus park opposite the city hall will be completed. The trellises and the beds will be finished, the latter to be surrounded with cabbage trunks or mill cores. One trellis will be enclosed with celoglass and the walks will be finished. The pool cannot be fully completed at this time but the outside wall will be erected with the concrete work to be done later.

CITRUS GROWERS GET INCREASED RETURNS

Returns Over Quarter Million Dollars Ahead of Last Year

Tampa, May 26.— (Special) — With the continued advance in orange prices last week, and the substantial returns on grapefruit, as compared with a year ago, there came to Florida growers more than an additional quarter million dollars in net revenue as compared with prices of a year ago, according to C. C. Commander, General Manager of the Florida Citrus Exchange.

"Last year citrus prices declined toward the end of the year," stated Mr. Commander. "This year orange prices are advancing. Grapefruit is declining slightly. A year ago Florida oranges were selling at $2.06 per box. Last week's average in the 10 auction markets was $3.76 per box, $1.70 ahead of prices obtained a year ago.

"Although 365 cars went into these markets, prices advanced 10 cents per box the previous week. Prices were 13 cents per box ahead of the same week two years ago.

"The most attractive thing about these orange prices at present," stated Mr. Commander, "is the fact that a quarter million dollars additional revenue to growers is coming back in state income each week. Calculating 365 cars at 360 boxes per car, total of 131,400 boxes, oranges alone brought growers over $223,000 additional money as compared with the same volume at prevailing prices a year ago. The premium on grapefruit represents more than $40,000. The grand total premium return to the state is in excess of $264,000.

FLORIDA EXHIBIT IS READY OPENING DAY

Only State Exhibit Ready To Receive Visitors First Day

Tampa, May 30.—(FNS)—Word has been received from Chicago, that following the precedent set last year, Florida was the only state to have its exhibit ready for the formal opening of the 1934 Century of Progress.

In spite of the fact that the opening day was marked by a raw wind the attendance was greater than on the opening day a year ago. Officials predict that all World's Fair attendance will be smashed by the 1934 show.

A greatly enlarged exotic garden is an outstanding feature of the Florida exhibit this year and is expected to prove a mecca for professional plant lovers.

The Tarpon Springs sponge boat, the "Ruth Elder," under command of Capt. Arthur Komines sailed into its berth in the north lagoon for the opening ceremonies.

The beautiful model Florida tropical home in the housing group was likewise ready for inspection and opened to visitors the first day.

Fair officials conceeded that with her exhibit complete and ready for the opening, when all other states were unprepared, enabled Florida to again "steal the show" this year.

PATSY LOOMIS IS "MISS AVON PARK FOR 1934"

Packed Theatre Sees Bevy of Beauty and Charm in Legion Contest

Miss Patsy Loomis is "Miss Avon Park for 1934." That was the decision of the judges at the American Legion Beauty Contest held at the Avon theatre Thursday evening. Mrs. Nellie Wilcox was placed second and Miss Gladys Helms, third. Miss Loomis was sponsored by the Jacaranda Beauty Shoppe, Mrs. Wilcox by the Park Motor Co., and Miss Helms by the Ridge Candy Co.

The three judges, Guy Ruhl of Frostproof, Mayor Ausley of Wauchula and Ernest Jones of Sebring had a hard task in selecting the winner. There were 21 contestants, each arrayed in their best bib and tucker and each one a picture of feminine daintiness and sweetness.

First, each was introduced individually and then they were all grouped on the stage in a semicircle. Then came the eliminations which finally narrowed down to the winners.

Immediately preceding the revue little Miss Betty Anne Holland was introduced as "Miss Avon Park of 1950." Comedy was introduced by the announcement of an unknown contestant who went under the title of "Miss County Commissioner, District 1." Phillip Boardman carried off this role to the amusement of all with his six feet, four of angular grace.

The winners were announced by H. M. Johnson who also acted as announcer for the evening. Post Commander R. T. Fairey extended thanks on behalf of Highlands Post 69 for the help and cooperation of the business houses, the girls and the splendid attendance which made the contest a success. He presented Miss Loomis with a lovely arm bouquet of flowers, and stated that she would also get the trip to Gainesville next week to represent Avon Park in the Legion state beauty contest. Mrs. Wilcox, second prize winner and first maid of honor, received a book of ten passes to the theatre, and Miss Helms, third prize winner and designated second maid of honor, received five passes.

Other contestants besides the winners were Misses Carmen Booth, Mildred Martin, Allie Lee Belin, Oleta Bigbie, Virginia Gough, Almaroo Hartt, Hilda Reddick, Myrtle Turner, Evelyn Clements, Letta Reck, Sara Lucy Trent, Mary Turner, Johnnie Mae Smith, Helen Beckett, Catherine Gibson, Martha Wever, Zelda Langford and Hester Childers.

The theatre was packed with every seat occupied and all contestants were received with rounds of applause. The Highlands Post of the Legion realized a nice sum from the event, from which expenses will be paid for the contestant to the Legion state convention and beauty show in Gainesville June 7, 8 and 9.

Metros Win Two Straight Games in League Play

The Avon Park Metros won two straight games in Sportsman's league this week, taking the home game here Sunday from Brewster 1 to 0 and getting the best of a slugfest Thursday with the Wauchula Growers, whom they defeated 11 to 7.

Sunday's game was one of those rare exhibitions that baseball fans long for but seldom see—steady pitching, fast fielding and heads-up baseball all the time.

Merriwether pitched his first full game of the season for the locals and held Brewster to four scattered hits.

Bud Clark pitched Thursday's game for the Metros, and though hit freely was not in serious danger except for one inning when the Growers bunched hits and made five runs. Five triples and a home run figured in the heavy hitting of the locals. The circuit clout, made by Durrh Martin in the first inning, went to the center field fence.

Aroused by the recent wave of lawlessness, leaders are expected to offer to the next Texas legislature bills simplifying and speeding up procedure in criminal court cases.

Teachers at School Next Four Weeks to Coach Children

Charles Clements, member of the county board of public instruction for this district, announced this morning that due to the short school term last year many pupils have failed this year in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth grades. That due to this fact he has made arrangements with the county school authorities for two teachers to be at the school for the next four weeks to coach these children in order that they may attain passing grades and not remain in their present grade for another term. Mr. Clements says the county will pay the teachers and there will be no expense to the parents.

2 MURDERS COMMITTED IN COUNTY SUNDAY

Two Negroes Arrested For Murder Committed 45 Minutes Apart

Two murders were committed in Highlands county early last Sunday morning only 45 minutes apart, according to information given by Doyle Schumacher.

The first killing took place in the colored quarters in Sebring at 1:30 a. m. Sunday when Robert Polk stabbed another negro, Handy Masstaine to death with a large jack knife, in an argument over a 25-cent bet on a card game.

After stabbing his victim in the heart and head Polk made his way to DeSoto City and was traced from there to Avon Park by Deputy Sheriffs Long and Coker. From Avon Park he took the train to Wildwood where he was picked up by the chief of police, J. K. Aiken, on information furnished by the sheriff's office here. In spite of the fugitive's clever plan to throw the officers off the trail he was apprehended within 24 hours after the crime was committed and is being held in the county jail for the action of the grand jury.

The second murder occured in the colored quarters in Hicoria at 2:15 a. m., when J. K. Merritt killed Frank Zellhus, another negro with a shotgun when he broke into a room occupied by Merritt and the wife of Zellhus. Merritt made no attempt to get away and was arrested by Deputy Sheriff E. A. Whitaker of Hicoria. County Judge M. C. Whitehurst and Sheriff Schumacher investigated the case and ordered Merritt held for the action of the grand jury on a charge of murder.

Viola Thomas, negro girl, received serious knife wounds in the fight in Sebring while trying to separate Polk and Massaline, she is expected to recover, however.

Meeting Called For Organization of Garden Club

In step with the statewide beautification program, a meeting is called for Monday night at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. G. P. Thayer, corner Lake avenue and Pleasant street, to organize a garden club to which all interested in gardening and maintaining an attractive town are urged to be present. All of the surrounding towns are already organized.

Mr. Currie will be present to explain what fine assistance is being given for the Mall under the FERA.

MRS. G. P. THAYER,
Chairman, Garden Committee of Woman's Club.

Intimidation of Witnesses Charged By McNicholas

A charge of intimidation of witnesses was made in justice of the peace court Wednesday morning when Jeremiah Boon and other witnesses failed to appear against James Cravey in his scheduled trial for assault and battery.

County Prosecuting Attorney T. A. McNicholas stated to the court that the State witnesses had been intimidated and run away from the jurisdiction of the court, and for that reason he would ask for a continuance of the case. The request was granted. S. C. Pardee, attorney for Cravey, stated that he was ready for trial.

R. M. Ray was appointed to the Santa Barbara, Cal., fire department after he had gained a half-inch in height through exercise.

CANDIDATES FOR OFFICE SPOKE ON MALL SATURDAY

Large Crowd Hears Candidates for Office Speak Their Views

Politics filled the air of the Mall Saturday night around the band stand with candidates for various county and state offices telling the voters their stories and seeking their support. It was a general political rally with T. A. McNicholas, secretary of the county Democratic committee acting as chairman and introducing the speakers. The candidates for representative came first with Fred Heacock of Sebring the first speaker.

Mr. Heaccek elaborated on his platform and attacked the record of J. E. Sims, the incumbent and a candidate for re-election, saying it is open to criticism. He also attacked the platform of Dr. A. T. Eide, another candidate for the office. He paid his respects to he Sebring American, saying a series of their editorials referred to him by inference and connected him with a political machine. He denied the connection and said he is no man's candidate but would represent everybody in the county and no party, group or corporation.

J. E. (Jack) Sims also enlarged on his platform and defended his record as a member of the last session of the state legislature. He said the Wilcox bill, recently passed by Congress, should be taken advantage of with regard to the bonded indebtedness of cities. He named the laws he had worked and voted for in the last session of the legislature. He answered Heacock who he said admitted the bonded debt question is out of the scope of the legislature and then asked why the legislature had not done anything about it. He did not care who ran the other candidates, he said and he himself was not the candidate of any group, clique or corporation and added that his previous experience made him better qualified for another term. He said he is fundamentally opposed to a sales tax until the bonded debt is adjusted, but if the homestead tax exemption amendment passes, and there is no alternative, he would support a sales tax.

Paul Vinson, next up, said he represents the taxpayer. He had offered his platform to one of the other candidates, he said and it had been refused on the grounds he did not need a platform, but had adopted one two weeks later. He had qualified as a taxpayer and is trying to save the homes. None that had gone to Tallahassee so far, he said, had been interested in the taxpayer or the schools. He recited his platform and added he favored a homestead law which would throw open the cut-over lands for homestead purposes. He claimed to pay more taxes than all of his opponents combined.

Dr. A. T. Eide, the last speaker for representative, also recited from his platform which he said he was proud of and promised not to double cross anybody as he said had been done in the past. The Wilcox bill will help the bonded debt question, he said and be enlarged on the question of the need of a workman's compensation law, which practically every state except Florida has. He cut his talk short in order to give time to Congressman J. Hardin Peterson, who was present.

Then came the candidates for county commissioner for district one. Frank (Hot Shot) Armistead, was called first and said he was a real Florida cracker born and raised within 35 miles of Avon Park. He had had much education, he said and rode nine miles to school when a boy and had never attended a university. Anybody can build a clay road, he claimed and the need is to take care of the money at present as there is not much to spend. He admitted he did not know anything about bonds but said there is a county attorney who does. He flashed an old empty pocket book and said that is what he has been up against, and appealed for help for a poor cracker.

S. P. Durrance cited his qualifications as he had previously served as county commissioner and asked for re-election. He promised faithful service and to treat everybody alike.

Then came G. A. Harper who said the position of county com-

Kidnaping Discouraged We Are Highwaymen Now Poor Baby Orang Slaughtering the Macon

William F. Gettle, recently kidnaped, is back with his family. Three of those that managed his kidnaping are in jail, have confessed, and are given life terms.

The little girl, June Robles, heaven be praised, is back with her family. She was found "in a shallow hole covered by cactus, chained by her ankles, her clothes filthy and her body emaciated." She was too weak to walk or answer questions and could only say "I want my mamma" to those that found her, nine miles from her home in Tucson, Ariz.

Her kidnapers have not been caught as this is written. There is, however, no speculation whatever as to what will happen to them if they are caught.

The men of Arizona like kidnaping as little as do the men of California. And if they come within reach of those kidnapers, the latter will be taken care of so thoroughly that they will never need any care at any later time on this earth.

It is your duty to hope, piously, that there will be no violence. But you are not advised to bet on it.

By the President's decision France and England, not having paid their debts, are officially declared in default, and will not be allowed to borrow in this country even from private sources. This will not be pleasing to England or France or to international American bankers, but it will suit the American people.

Europe may not hold American dollars at so low a price, now that she is no longer able to borrow them by the carload, or import our United States gold by the neat little barrelful.

After the President announced the default and this country's refusal to accept any pretty little token, the London Evening Star, in big type, called the President's announcement a "highwayman act by the United States."

Considering that the British government is bullying Germany over a miserable little debt of $120,000,000, the British weishers should not object to the President telling them that they are in default when they are in default and owe over five thousand millions.

Human mothers, the young, nervous kind, should be warned by the fate of Betty, Chicago's two-pound baby orang-utan, and Betty's mother.

Surroundings in the zoo made the loving orang-utan mother intensely nervous and she worried about her baby so much that her supply of milk gave out. The mind affects the mammary glands. She would allow nobody near her baby to feed it artificially and keepers feared that she would kill her baby if they tried to take it from her. It was pitiful to see her try to feed her baby with milk from her mouth which she took from a can in the cage.

The first rule is relax, try not to be made nervous. Easy to advise, hard to do.

A lot of heavier-than-air planes were sent somewhere, in imitation warfare, and the big Macon was sent along. This column pointed out the foolishness of that proceeding, sending such a ship deliberately against a swarm of enemy planes. The intelligent "high command" in this enterprise displayed all the intelligence of a ground mole.

Naturally the high command now reports that the Macon was put out of commission.

If the intellectual high command will read about the battle of Jutland and the service rendered there by a German Zeppelin, he will know more about the proper use of lighter-than-air craft.

Germany's preparations for war in the air, especially the alleged efficiency of her German-invented "airplane predictator," should interest us. The Germans are developing the world's greatest fighting air fleet, in competition with France, buying engines in the United States, England, wherever they can get them, keeping preparations secret.

In Brooklyn, boy twins have been fighting pneumonia with oxygen to help them. Little Roy, who weighed only two and a half pounds at birth, died. His brother, Ross, weight at birth six and one-half pounds, lives. Where did that twin go when he lost his fight?

Did he return whence he came, to start back here again as a humble little servant of Omnipotence, to help improve this earth? Did he go to heaven, as all hope he did, to fly around in perpetual bliss? Or, as some think, coldly, did his little drop of consciousness go back to the source of life, whence it came, as the failing raindrop eventually returns to the ocean?

Reed's Victory Over Pinchot Delights Opponents of New Deal—NRA Will Abandon Codes for Small Businesses.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

SENATOR DAVID A. REED of Pennsylvania, fighting in the Republican primaries for re-nomination, emerged from the hectic battle victorious over his rival, Gov. Gifford Pinchot. Reed's majority was in the neighborhood of 100,000, and long before all the returns were in Governor Pinchot gave up and wired his congratulations to the senator.

Senator Reed

Since Senator Reed, one of the Old Guard conservatives, has been an unrelenting critic of the New Deal, and Governor Pinchot, a "progressive" Republican, has given his full support to President Roosevelt's policies, the result of the primaries was hailed with glee by opponents of the national administration. Both the candidates made the New Deal the issue in their campaign, and when the governor was prevented by illness from making speeches, Mrs. Pinchot took the stump and vigorously defended the President's programs of recovery. Notwithstanding all this, Postmaster General Farley said: "I do not regard the defeat of Governor Pinchot as a New Deal test," and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader, took the same attitude. President Roosevelt refused to comment.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, issued a pronouncement that the Pennsylvania primary result was "a great victory for the American citizen who wants a square deal and not a New Deal."

Governor Pinchot, who has tried twice before to get into the senate, said he would continue to fight for the interests of the people against concentrated wealth, and it was reported that he would run independently in November.

Joe Guffey, Democratic leader in Pennsylvania, easily won his party's nomination for the senate, but the Republicans claim he will have small chance against Reed in the election.

LEADERS of the Republican party in Indiana turned down Senator Arthur R. Robinson quite decisively. They not only defeated his plan to gain control of the party organization, but also refused to give assurance that he would be unopposed for renomination in the state convention June 5. The best the senator could get was an indorsement of his fight in the senate "for constitutional government" and for his stand "against bureaucracy as exemplified by the Democratic party and its administration."

Among those mentioned as possible rivals of Robinson for the nomination are former Senator Jim Watson, former Representative Frederick Landis and former Gov. Harry G. Leslie. Robinson angered the state committee by attacking its officers.

IN ORDER that congress may adjourn June 5, the President and several congressional leaders got together and pared down the legislative program. They agreed to limit the "must" bills to four measures. These are:

The one billion, three hundred million-dollar emergency appropriation bill carrying funds for the continuation of the New Deal relief activities.

The communications control bill proposing the consolidation of federal regulation over all communications.

The loans to industries bill, authorizing RFC and federal reserve bank advances to smaller industries on intermediate credit terms.

The deposit insurance extension bill, continuing the temporary federal bank deposit guarantee plan for another year in lieu of putting the permanent program contained in the Glass banking bill into effect at this time.

Mr. Roosevelt sent to congress a message explaining why the first named bill is necessary, and urging that no more than the amount asked be appropriated.

One other measure that may be put through at this session is the silver bill upon which the President and the silver bloc agreed and which was to be introduced with a message from Mr. Roosevelt. As predicted, this is a compromise containing these provisions:

A declaration of policy that the government recognizes silver as primary money and that the nation's metallic reserves shall be 25 per cent silver and 75 per cent gold. This is mandatory.

The secretary of the treasury is authorized and directed to purchase silver until it reaches $1.29 an ounce or until its metallic reserve strength reaches 25 per cent. This is both permissive and mandatory.

The President is authorized to nationalize silver through condemnation. This is permissive.

CONSIDERATION of the records of three Chicago federal judges in receivership and bankruptcy cases were under consideration by the house judiciary committee, with the possibility of impeachment in prospect. A sub-committee turned in a report on the jurists, Charles E. Woodward, James H. Wilkerson and Walter G. Lindley, making no recommendations for or against impeachment but criticising sharply their allowances for attorney and receiver fees.

With respect to Judge John P. Barnes, who has handled several receiverships and bankruptcies in the federal courts at Chicago since 1933, the subcommittee declared it had "no criticism as to his conduct in these matters."

"SNATCHERS" are not faring so well in the Far West and Southwest. Six-year-old June Robles, who was kidnaped from Tucson, Ariz., was found in a tomb-like hole where she had been kept chained, and there were good chances that her abductors would be caught. The child was weak but uninjured.

Los Angeles police in a sudden raid freed William F. Gettle, oil millionaire who had been kidnaped and held for a large ransom, and arrested three of the men who abducted him. The trio confessed, were promptly given life sentences and are now in the San Quentin prison.

GENERAL JOHNSON and his assistants in the NRA are tired of trying to enforce the multiplicity of codes for small groups and therefore the administration has decided to abandon thousands of those arranged for lesser industrial plants and service establishments. In fact, to regulate prices and trade practices and conditions in innumerable details in countless small businesses has proved to be impracticable and the effort has taken an outrageously large percentage of NRA work and funds.

Gen. Johnson

Johnson said he was working on arrangements to substitute simple agreements for codes covering small industries. These agreements merely will cover wages, hours and the collective bargaining guaranteed of the recovery act.

The agreements may be identical with the Presidential re-employment contracts that employers signed last summer pending adoption of codes. Those who are relieved from codes will be permitted to continue to display the Blue Eagle if they sign such agreements. The relaxation probably will apply to nearly all small establishments except retail stores.

It is reported in Washington that General Johnson would soon ask the President to empower him to supervise and check prices which private business concerns are charging their customers. This would be the start of his attack on the charges that the NRA is fostering monopoly and high prices. The President could take the action by issuing an executive order and congressional sanction would not be necessary.

The silk textile industry found itself overloaded with surpluses of goods, and the NRA permitted all the mills to shut down for one week, during which time 30,000 workers are unemployed. The shutdown was ordered by the silk textile authority, the board set up by the industry itself to rule the industry under the code. Officially the NRA itself did not order or approve the layoff, but it is watching it closely. It may suggest the same device to other industries. The cotton textile manufacturers are reported to be eyeing the silk shutdown enviously.

CAPT. GEORGE POND and Lieut. Cesare Sabelli opened the ocean-flying season with an attempt to make a nonstop hop from New York to Rome—a thing that has never yet been done. They ran into dense fogs and head winds over the Atlantic and then had such serious engine trouble that they were forced to land their big Bellanca monoplane, the Leonardo da Vinci, on the west coast of Ireland. According to their stories, the aviators were mighty fortunate that they did not fall into the ocean and drown.

STRIKES in many branches of the automobile industry will occur unless the striking employees of the Fisher Body plant at Flint Mich. win their demands, accord ing to President Green of the American Federation of Labor.

"The strike of the workers employed at the Fisher Body plant at Flint, Mich., reflects the spirit of unrest and discontent which prevails among the automobile workers at the present time," Green said in a statement.

"There will be no peace in the automobile industry," he added, "until the grievances of the workers are fairly settled, discrimination and coercion stopped, the right of collective bargaining established and company union domination and intimidation stopped."

Dissatisfaction has been accentuated, he added, "because of the failure of the automobile labor board to function properly and effectively."

Labor troubles along the American waterfronts increased daily. On the Pacific coast thousands of seamen quit work in sympathy with the striking longshoremen, and the mayor of Seattle asked Secretary of the Interior Ickes for federal troops to protect non-union workers. In the ports of the Great Lakes a general strike of tugmen was threatened. At Galveston the longshoremen were still out, and hundreds of other workers went on strike.

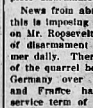

BY A VOTE of 62 to 13 the senate passed the Fletcher-Rayburn bill which places the securities markets of the country under the regulatory control of a federal commission. The measure already had passed the house, but with the provision that the federal trade commission should be the regulatory body, and this difference, together with the house's provision for a fixed margin requirement, caused some delay in the conference. At a press conference President Roosevelt stated that he preferred the house version of the bill in those two particulars and that he had told the chairman of the committee so, although he had kept his hands off the measure until it was passed by both house and senate.

THE White Star liner Olympic, coming slowly into port in a fog, rammed and sank the Nantucket lightship, seven of the latter's crew being killed and four, including Capt. George Braithwaite, saved. Captain Binks of the Olympic blames the accident on an error in the radio direction beam which he was following, though this device has heretofore been considered infallible. He admitted, however, that at the time of the collision he was five miles off his supposed course and that his radio signals, submarine signals and reckoning all misled him as to his real position.

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY SWANSON announced that as soon as funds can be obtained from the public works appropriation asked by the President, the construction of twenty warships will begin. These vessels, it is estimated, will cost $40,000,000.

This building program will include twelve destroyers, two destroyer leaders, and six submarines, forming the first year's program under the Vinson act, which authorized the replacement of 102 ships to bring the navy up to full treaty strength by the end of 1939.

"WORLD Good Will day" was held May 18, and to mark it students from colleges in all parts of the country gathered in Washington and staged a demonstration in support of world disarmament. Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, daughter of United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, was chairman of the affair, and after the meeting Miss Wheeler led a delegation to the White House and presented to President Roosevelt a petition asking him to take the lead in securing a world treaty for complete disarmament.

Miss Elizabeth Wheeler

News from abroad indicates that this is imposing a tremendous task on Mr. Roosevelt, for the prospects of disarmament are growing slimmer daily. There is no abatement of the quarrel between France and Germany over German rearming, and Paris has lengthened the service term of its soldiers, which example Belgium probably will follow. Hungary and Jugoslavia are engaged in a bitter border dispute and the former has asked for help from the League of Nations council, which has opened another session in Geneva. Japan, still stubbornly aloof, seems to be seeking a new excuse for hostilities against China, alleging that a number of Japanese soldiers were killed by Chinese troops.

The League's commission on the Paraguay-Bolivia war in the Gran Chaco submitted a report recommending that all nations of the world, especially the American republics, be asked to join in an effort to shut off from the two South American countries all the materials necessary to carry on a war.

Washington.—The NRA Review board's report to President Roosevelt, in which it was outspoken in its criticism of many NRA principles, has created more of a furore in Washington than anything since the administration canceled the air-mail contracts, without granting the contractors a hearing. In fact, I gather from all indications that the board's attacks were directly responsible for General Johnson's action in releasing small businesses of certain kinds from responsibility under the codes. The far-reaching consequences of the board's criticisms can only be partially evaluated at this time, but the celerity of the Johnson action in meeting some of the charges by the board has led to more than a sprinkling of suggestions that it may be the beginning of the end for NRA.

Report Hits NRA

General Johnson explained, in releasing the minor industries from the codes, that they constituted a small part of the recovery program to warrant the expense and time involved in administering these codes. Of course, he could not very well admit that NRA was a failure insofar as the little fellow are concerned, but nevertheless there are plenty of observers in Washington who so construed his statement. The interesting thing about it was that his announcement was made public after the board's report had been sent to President Roosevelt and after the President had submitted the document to NRA for an analysis of the criticisms.

The board was convinced after hearing appeals for relief by a comparatively small number of individual businesses that some of the codes were having the opposite effect intended. Evidence which is believed to exist seemed to show that the "little fellows" in the business world were being stifled by the larger units, and that was the very thing which President Roosevelt had hoped NRA would prevent.

It is to be remembered that the review board never was wanted by General Johnson and the NRA supporters. The board was the brainchild of several senators and representatives, who had received too many complaints from the "little fellows" that they felt the urge to demand some means of review of NRA policies and codes. Its origin might be assumed to have caused the board, headed by Clarence Darrow of Chicago, to feel its mission was one of protection for the little fellow. Having watched it operate as a hearing body, I think I can say its members tried to maintain an open mind. On one occasion, I recall, the board did not mince words in telling the representative of a small business that he could expect no help from it until his own house had been washed of oiliseling and sharp practice.

Business Confused

Thus the board catapulted a handful of red hot coals into the political arena. Mr. Roosevelt dodged the first bombshell by sending the report to Attorney General Cummings, to the federal Trades commission and to General Johnson for what he called "an analysis." Newspaper correspondents thought they could analyze the thing, but they could not get the opportunity. Their discussion these days gives rise to the thought that they will sit around awaiting the chance to "analyze" it to the full extent of their powers when they do get bold of it.

As a result of the fresh outburst of trouble for NRA, I made a number of inquiries around NRA headquarters, which are continuously crowded with representatives of businesses who are seeking to find out what to do. These individuals, to a man, were thoroughly confounded and confused. They were, in many instances, unable to determine what to do as to many business practices; they could not get complete instructions or interpretations, nor were they able to learn the NRA attitude in an advisory way on propositions on which they desired rulings. Having observed the job that General Johnson and his NRA staff is trying to do, I can understand why these various questions can not be answered. They simply have so much work to do that it is almost a physical impossibility to get it done. But to me, that fact tells the story of the weakness inherent in any attempt to codify practices of businesses, national in scope, from a Washington bureau.

As an exposition of the problem in another way, I learned that one great corporation is operating under 51 codes. There is one department store here in the city of Washington that is operating under and responsible to 11 code authorities. One corporation, relatively small in size and doing a selling business in not more than five eastern states, had to sign a total of 14 codes. All of this is because of the diversification of the business.

As far as I can see, if every type of industry must have a code, there is no way out. A business that touches more than one line is going to be under code for each line touched and it will have to be so if codes are to be a part of our economic structure. Yet, as the review board's report indicates, there is a certain hardship developed by such a system that is rather difficult to defend.

My inquiries, however, brought out another fact that to my mind is highly important and about which little has been written. That is the expense which these businesses must bear in connection with the codes and attempts to find out what is expected of the firms who have been given the blue eagle of NRA membership.

There is not a day goes by that NRA officials do not receive flocks of business men who come from far and near for interviews, for conferences on proposed codes, for interpretation of codes already written, for talks with the authorities as to whether exceptions can be made to the universal rules laid down in the codes, and for the answers to a thousand-and-one other questions. The expense of these trips to Washington, the hotel bills, the time away from their jobs, all of these things have to be borne by the individuals, businesses or corporations interested.

Sanders' Resignation

The resignation of Everett Sanders of Indiana, as chairman, and the impending meeting in Chicago of the Republican national committee has served to focus a spotlight on that political agency which it has not drawn since the days of the 1932 campaign. As a matter of fact, the Sanders resignation has stirred up more discussion and has caused more Republicans to show their faces than some folks thought were still alive. It has demonstrated that there is life in the G. O. P. yet. But the job ahead of it is one of finding how the latest strength can be utilized under a solid leadership, and that means the first task is to find that leader for national chairman.

Thus far, it can be said there is an entire lack of unanimity among the Republican national committee. They appear not to have any idea as to the identity of the man who should be elected to head the party organization.

Undoubtedly, the weakness of the Republican position at this time is lack of leadership. A real leader, as far as I hear discussion of the subject, simply does not yet appear on the horizon. If it were not for the various crosscurrents, it would be natural to expect that the several factions could get together and operate harmoniously. That, sad to relate, apparently is impossible. The "old guard" doesn't relish the idea of surrendering power. Much criticism has been heard of the Republican leadership in congress during this session. It has been said the leadership has been spineless, and of the do-nothing kind. But the consensus around Washington would seem to be that Senator McNary of Oregon, in the senate, and Representative Snell of New York, in the house, have been impotent largely because the Democratic majority was so huge that they could never really voice the minority position.

Foolish Prediction

I have heard some of the Democrats assert that the Republican party can never come back; that it is through. Nowhere does history justify such a prediction. It is necessary only to go back to the campaign when Warren G. Harding was elected to the Presidency, or to the overwhelming defeat of Alfred E. Smith by Herbert Hoover. In each case, some of the Republican leaders were so short sighted as to say that the Democrats were through. Time has proved such prognostications to be utterly foolish. It likely will make the present unwise predictions of Democrats look the same way in the course of a few years. It seems to me to be unwise at any time to consign a political party to a grave unless there is no more blood left in the carcass.

From what I can hear about the Republican committee's financial condition, the plight of the Democrats a few years ago can be regarded as only slightly serious. Neither the national committee nor the congressional and senatorial committees can make any plans for a fight because it takes money to make the mare go.

Whatever the results are of the coming election, however, it is apparent now that Republican leadership first must be established. The Democrats have that leadership in Mr. Roosevelt, but they have to accept responsibility also no that they can expect to be attacked. Just as happened during the Hoover regime, the "outs" can make the fur fly for the "ins" if they develop leadership.

Education Lonely Old Men Shiftless People

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

IT IS often said the people must become educated before reform can be expected. This is accepted as meaning that every man must be so completely educated in our modern ways as to be able to teach in college. Education thus becomes so great a task we are discouraged in contemplating it. . . . Our estimate of an education is wrong. After a man is thirty, if not naturally a dunce, an intelligent reading of Wells' "Outline of History," combined with his own experience, will educate him. Those intending to teach should attend technical schools, as do doctors, lawyers, painters, engineers, etc. There are dozens of short summaries of everything one needs to know; a new one was added last fall, and writers are favoring that style of writing lately. These summaries not only educate a reader, but entertain him better than will detective stories or novels.

I know an old fellow whose children are all married and gone, and who does not sleep well. He does well enough during the day, but anyone passing his house late at night may see lights burning. The servants are kind, but he will not go to bed. He walks the floor alone and wide awake a good deal at night; and night is especially lonely. Lately he employed a woman of sixty to assist him from 11 p. m. until people are moving on the streets again. She has a soothing way about her, and he gets to sleep oftener during his dangerous hours. If he awakens, he finds her asleep in her chair at the foot of his bed, but she awakens easily, and again she reads to him, or they talk. During these hard times, many good women are seeking employment, and the crop of lonely old men is large. Why not?

I regret shiftlessness, but have admired shiftless people. The man and wife I hang around most are the most shiftless people I have ever known, but are "good fellows," and tremendously smart. They have long had in their employment an old colored servant they now owe so much they can't pay her, and thus get rid of her by discharge. The black woman resents the action, and they are trying to find a doctor who will perform it on credit. They have had her teeth fixed four times, and still owe for it.

Americans are judged abroad by what American books, magazines and newspapers say; by speeches delivered at meetings of various social clubs and political organizations. All these are unnatural, and foreigners do not know us; our publicity agents have given us a character we do not deserve. What the average American thinks and believes is not known even in his own country; the American attends moving picture plays, not because he is much interested in the vulgar people who make them, but because they cost only twenty-five cents, and occasionally have a good news reel or comedy. . . . I lately attended a moving picture theater and only six others were there. Never before have I seen a "show" presented to an audience of seven, and it was the best theater in town, showing the best available picture plays. American people are not as crazy about the disreputable crowd at Hollywood as is believed abroad.

I may be mistaken in what I think I know in my eightieth year, but I am more certain of it than ever before, and I have less time left in which to change my mind.

At eighty I am not afraid of the future. I have been treated with reasonable justice all my conscious life, and expect as much of the future. No one can convince me there is a devil after death to torture me for eating, drinking loving, hating, trading, venturing. I have lived a long time and thought as clearly and fairly as I could, and have heard not a word from a reliable source to make me fear a devil to torture me after I am dead. A million ghost dancers have howled dismally at me throughout life without frightening me. They might as well cease dancing; the truth is not what they say it is. There is more mercy than they claim.

I have a son I think quite wise; rather able in taking care of himself. The other day he was at home, and a suspicious man kept calling him by telephone. I knew the suspicious man, and what he wanted: a big favor: to "work" my son. . . . I warned him, and the young man replied: "That's all right—don't worry: I'll work him right back." There are so many who try to "work" you I warn you to acquire the ability of my son, or you'll be ruined.

Three smokes, three shots; these are to the woodsman what the S O S is to the mariner.

The fires, however, must burn continuily, they must be fed, and with green wood, which would throw out dense smoke, but as she hurried back toward the canoe for a hand-ax she saw one of Steve's knees double and straighten again in a spasmodic movement.

She prayed again when she saw blood oozing from the wound. She watched the rain bent out her fires and did not dare leave off the task of holding that bandage tight. She just sat there and pressed her hands down. When the hard driven canoe passed her island, though it was within easy rifle shot, she had no indication of the nearness of friends.

The hours dragged on. For an interminable interval Kate Flynn sat holding the bandage firmly against Drake's side and then, as the pants gave way to a steady rain, he commenced to mutter and stir again.

A mumble came from his lips, her own name, spoken so clearly and sharply that the girl started.

"Yes, I'm here. It's Kate, here with you!"

His eyes opened and stared at her blankly.

"It's all right," she said. "The bleeding has stopped. Please lie still so it won't start again. Do you understand, that?"

His lids fluttered closed but he lay still. Whether he had understood or not she could not know.

She had the tent up before the rain became more than scattered drops and with a piece of driftwood scraped a shallow trench about it in case the clay produced a downpour. Then more blankets were fetched and the pack tucked beneath Steve's head for a pillow.

Soon thereafter she left him for a few moments, taking the hand-ax and hunting feverishly through the timber for dry wood. She found a dead cedar stub and a dry tamarack standing, hacked at them and carried the slivers back to the tent. She cut green poles and managed to get the fly up to give their shelter added protection and to make a place to keep her fuel dry. Fortunately the rain had come with little wind.

But before she had gathered sufficient fuel to keep a fire going through the night, Drake was stirring and muttering again. When she sat down by his side and put a hand on his clammy forehead and spoke gently he locked his fingers about her small wrist and would not let go. After a time she tried to disengage his clasp so she might start the fire going, but he clung the tighter and murmured thickly. Holding her so appeared to give him peace and so she sat there, shivering now and then, drawing the corner of a blanket about her shoulders, and it was not until nearly dusk that she could unlock his fingers and slip away without rousing him.

She dragged driftwood from the beach and made a pile of it behind the fire which served the double purpose of throwing heat into the open front of the tent and drying fuel for the night hours. Then she resumed her vigil beside the unconscious figure, determined to fight sleep with all the resources at her command.

So it was that Mary Wolf, paddling her light canoe through the steady rain, saw a point of warm light shining through the darkness.

"This might be Franz, come to look for her despite Young Jim's command that he let her alone.

She went on, proceeding with utmost caution. But she wanted to know who was there. If it were Franz, she would not be forced to keep a watch for him afterward.

She thought she heard a sound, an odd noise which she could not identify. She arrested all movement. That was strange. Another woman, crying here in a camp. . . .

So the Indian girl came upon Kate Flynn, kneeling at Steve's side, begging him to speak, to make some sign that he was aware of her being there.

Her words covered the small sounds of Mary's approach through the rushes until she was not until the new arrival's shadow fell across Steve's figure that Kate started up, alarm and relief mingled in her heart.

"Oh!" she cried. "Oh, you've come! . . . Look! This man is terribly hurt! He was stabbed and has bled most of his life out!"

Mary appeared to give no heed. She stood bent over, hands crossed on her breast, eyes fast on Drake's drawn face.

Her own countenance was in shadow and Kate, distracted as she was, did not observe her garments, did not recognize her as an Indian until she turned and asked:

"He bleed now?"

"No. . . . Oh, you're . . . You should know what to do! Your people know how to treat wounds; Oh, can't we do something?"

She was almost hysterical in her relief at having aid in carrying this great burden of responsibility.

"Where he hurt?" Mary asked, and Kate drew back the blankets to reveal the ugly patch on Drake's bared body.

"See? It doesn't bleed any more. I held it tight for hours until it stopped. Oh, what else can be done?"

The Indian girl then did a strange thing. She knelt quickly and took one of Drake's hands in both hers.

"Yo'ng Jim!" she called softly. "Yo'ng Jim!" Her voice husked. "Yo'ng Jim, you all right?"

She held her breath for answer but none came, no indicating movement or change of expression, even. She turned a tragic face to the white girl who swayed away from her with something like shock as Franz's lying words came back to her. A squaw man, he had said this man was, and here was a young squaw, a stricken expression in her eyes. . . . The thought that this was the man who had cared for her, perhaps was now dying for her and who, only a few hours ago, had kissed her, might be the lover of this dusky girl wrenched and tugged at something deep in her heart.

"He alive, no-thing," Mary whispered. "He won't say no-thing!" She bent her body low, cheek close to Drake's face and Kate started to turn her head away but when she saw that the movement was not in curess but in query she checked the gesture of aversion. "He breathing," Mary said. "He not hot. Maybe . . . You got whisky?"—almost sharply.

"No; there's no whisky. You . . . must go for help, now; right away; we can't wait!"

"No." Mary's word was adamant. "He die, may-be, I go away. You do some-thing by him. Me, I do some-thing, too."

She turned to the scattered packs beyond the fire, dumping their contents to the ground, opened a grub sack, exploring its contents.

"Yes," she muttered and poured coffee into a kettle, running into the reeds for clean water.

Deftly she raked the coals from the fire and put the kettle on to boil. Then, without a word of explanation, disappeared into the timber. In a few moments she returned with a wad of pitch on a curl of birch bark. This she put to heat on a pan cover, went to her own canoe and returned with a bundle from which she extracted a piece of white cloth, tore the cloth into ribbons and then, testing the consistency of the softening pitch with great care, brought her materials into the tent and drawing back the blankets set to work to bind the clotted gauze firmly into place.

She smeared the pitch on the flesh, pressing an end of cloth into it, carried the cloth over the bandage and pitched it down on the other side. Over and over, first this way, then that, she drew the softening cloth fragments until the chance of breaking the clot by movement was slight.

By then the coffee had boiled. She fetched the kettle within sand, a spoonful at a time, dropped the hot fluid into Drake's mouth, persisting until he had swallowed several times.

"Coffee. No whisky," she told briefly and sat back on one hip. He not bleed now. Coffee make him strong."

"But he must have help. Some one who knows about injured people must be brought here or he may die."

Mary nodded.

"And I can't go!" Kate cried. "I couldn't get back to headquarters. I couldn't carry a canoe across that trail. You can, can't you? You go for help."

"May-be. Not now. He is not hot. Maybe I go sometime. He needs me now. He is my friend."

"Friend?" A tightness came into Kate's tone as a wonder which was almost alarm asserted itself when the word caused her once again to think of the possible relationship of these two.

"He your brother? I see you once. You are Ol' Jim's girl. I know. This"—with a gesture—"Yo'ng Jim, he is my friend."

She was silent a moment, struggling against things, wanting to speak, not knowing just how.

"Me, I got no brother. I got no-body. Yo'ng Jim was good to me. He make Franz let me come here. He tol' Franz to leave me be. Franz . . . I Franz's girl-long time. I say to Yo'ng Jim I be his girl. Wash, cook. He tell me no. He tell me to go to school. He is my friend," she repeated simply, as though it explained everything, and in the words was an inflection, a quality which made Kate Flynn know that Franz had lied.

A low moan came from Steve just then, which checked the many questions Kate wanted to ask. After a moment his brows furrowed and he uttered a weak, inarticulate word. Then, as if the effort of that had wearied him beyond measure, he let breath slip from his lungs and turned his head to one side.

Silently Mary moved away and replenished the fire. She heated the coffee again and brought a cup and spoon and forced more of it into Drake's mouth.

Throughout this interval Steve was strangely aware of voices near him. They came to his consciousness, however, as from a great distance, rushing nearer, retreating as rapidly, all but fading out, then coming close again.

Steve fought against an overpowering weakness, a terrible lethargy. He was in pain somewhere. Yet there was something he had to say . . . something he must say . . . something on which more than his own life depended. . . .

He could not remember what this was. He repeatedly exhausted his sparse strength in trying to recall the message he must give, the order he must issue. He would lie in an old state of rest until vigor came back and he could feel strong enough to grow angry at the things which stood in the way of his recollection. He tried to sit up and some one held him down and that stirred hot rage in him, but he did him no good because these others were so strong and his body had become so feeble, like a child's, or an old, old man's.

But for a time, he was at peace. Yes, more than at peace. He had a feeling of wonderful happiness. He was happier than he had ever been in his life. Some one he had always wanted to see was at hand; some voice he had hungered and thirsted to hear was in his ears. . . . Then things, even happiness, faded out, and after another incalculable interval he was aware of fretting again.

"Franz!" some one said in a thick, unnatural voice, and he realized that he himself had spoken the name. "Franz, I'll . . . I'll let you go if you'll give her back!"

"Yes," a voice answered. Not Franz's voice; that other voice. "Yes, I'm back. It's all right. I'm here. What is it?"

He found himself staring into that face, a face now bathed in the soft warm light of a snapping fire.

"Oh," he said and closed his eyes and smiled. So she was all right, then. "All . . . right," he whispered.

Then something was pressed to his lips.

"It is hot," a voice said. That must be Mary's voice. Where did she come from? . . . A hand raised his head gently and he felt strong coffee scorch his lips. He sipped obediently and dropped back. This was strange. . . . He was alone with two girls, and had a job before him. . . . A man with things he must do who can't remember what they are can't be alone with women. . . .

He stirred, trying to sit up, and Kate's voice begged him to lie quiet.

"All right," he murmured. If she wanted that, then that was what she would have. . . . Lord, but she was lovely to look upon! . . .

So it came to be dawn before he looked about him with clear consciousness. At his feet sat Mary, her eyes fast on him.

"Hullo," he said.

Mary gestured for caution, finger at her lips, and tilted her head towardsthe sleeper.

"Your sister," she said, leaning close. "She tired."

"Sister? What's that—"

Kate roused, her movement cutting off his words.

"Oh!" she gasped as she saw the clarity in his countenance. "Oh, how do you feel? Are you stronger, now?"

"Strong? Not very." He smiled slightly. "But what's all the fuss? What went on? How'd we all—"

"Oh, God!" he moaned as memory of what had happened and what might yet happen flooded back. "What day's this?"

"It doesn't matter," Kate said soothingly, coming close to him. "So long as you're feeling better, it doesn't matter—"

"Matter? Of course, it matters. Think! What has happened. . . . I got in Tuesday and all day yesterday—

"That's it! I remember, now. . . . All right, if you say so I won't sit up. But listen, I'm giddy as the devil. Things are going round outside but I'm thinking straight. Today at four o'clock that money's got to be in MacDonald's hands or Polaris is sunk. I remember, now. . . . Franz nicked me with a knife. D' I stay out all this time? Whew! Say, we've got to snap into it."

"But you mustn't think of things like that," Kate protested as one would talk to a petulant child. "It makes no difference what happens to Polaris until you're all right."

"Me!" he scoffed feebly. "I'm all right except for being helpless. I must 've lost a lot of blood. I'm weak as . . . as somebody. But I guess I got weak trying to arrange things for you Flynns. I can't fall down on the job with the finish in sight. Where are the boys?"

"I haven't seen a soul except Mary, here, since you overtook Franz and me yesterday morning," said Kate.

Steve groaned.

"I sent word. Something slipped. . . . I wonder . . ." He shut his eyes tightly and, opening them, stared at the Indian girl a long interval.

"Mary, you ever been through the country between here and MacDonald's?"

"Oh, yes,"—lilly.

"How long would it take you to get there?"

"Long ways. Maybe all day."

"I'd take you more than all day to go by canoe, that's certain. Listen, Mary, once you wanted to do something for me and were honest about it. Well, now's your chance. There's something I've got to have done today that's more important than anything I've ever tried to do in my life. . . . Except one thing, of course."—with a grave smile at Kate. "Understand that? Good.

"I've got something to send to MacDonald. Will you take a package to him across country and get there before four o'clock today?"

The girl squinted at the sun and shrugged slightly.

"May-be. I go fast all time."

He tried to move and turned his face helplessly to Kate.

"I'm stiff as a board. In my hip pocket is a note-book and pencil. No; no. . . . Other one. . . . Yes, that's it. Now, write out a receipt for the Lord's sign. That option's blindline. All we've got to do is fulfill its terms. Get the dates straight in your head and make the receipt an acknowledgment of the initial payment on the option recorded in this county as of such-and-such a date. Good, now!"—as the girl began to write.

After a moment she read it to him; he suggested a change and then gave the document his approval.

"That'll hold him," he said excitedly, color beginning to stain his cheeks. "Now, where's the brief case?"

He shifted his gaze to the waiting Indian girl.

"Mary, that bag's got more money in it than you'll ever see. More dollars in it than you can count. I'm going to trust you with it. If you should meet anybody on the way—which isn't one chance in ten thousand—and who might not be my friend, you keep it in your hands.

"You get to MacDonald's before four o'clock this afternoon. You give this bag to him and tell him to write his name on this paper. Then you take the paper to headquarters and give it to . . . Mrs. LaFane. She'll be there, surely. You wait for me there and you'll have your reward or the stars'll fall!"

"Sure, Yo'ng Jim. . . . Good-by," she said, and tucking the receipt into her blouse, took the brief case and turned to her canoe.

Steve was in a sweat by that time. Every pore seemed to be open, letting his meager store of strength gush from his weary body.

"No good!" he whispered after a moment. "I'm all in. . . . But she'll get there. I'll bet on that girl . . ."

Battleship Disappeared

In the great naval battle of Jutland, in the World war, the British armored cruiser, Black Prince, of 13,500 tons and carrying over 800 men, disappeared during the fight, without a living man knowing how or just when it went down. Not a survivor was left, only a lifebuoy near a mass of wreckage to tell its fate.

Lice Are Common on Young Cattle

Use Raw Linseed Oil Before Pasturing, Recommended for Control.

By C. L. Blackman, Specialist in Dairy Husbandry, Ohio State University. WNU Service.

Before cattle go to pasture in the spring is the best time to rid them of lice. Raw linseed oil is the best material to use.

The oil should be brushed thoroughly into the coat and all over the animal, and then thoroughly brushed out. The lice, creeping through the coat of the animal, become covered with a thin film of oil which clogs their breathing organs. The process repeated a second time ten days later kills the lice which hatch after the first treatment.

A day or so after the treatment the cattle take on a dirty appearance. This is remedied by rubbing the animal with a damp cloth dipped into warm water. The treatment must be followed by careful grooming to remove loose, matted hair.

Lice are found most commonly on the younger cattle, which are not so carefully groomed as the milking herd. They concentrate usually on the shoulders, the withers, and about the neck.

Cattle that rub against fences and trees are seeking relief from itching caused by lice. So are cattle that scratch their heads and necks with their hind feet. Dirt on these parts of the body, put there by the scratching, is almost a certain indication of the presence of vermin.

Brush Dams Last 3 Years; Other Types More Durable

To farmers who would like to know how long temporary check dams built in gullies for control of soil erosion will last, the United States bureau of agricultural engineering supplies information derived from experience.

Check dams made of brush will last from two and one-half to three years. This is time enough for vegetation to grow on the silt accumulated in the gullies and to prevent erosion of the soil.

Pole dams, which are more efficient in catching silt than brush dams, decay fairly rapidly but will last about a year longer than brush dams. After standing up for three or more years, pole dams will sometimes give way during a series of heavy rains.

Time seems to solidify rock dam construction by adding a heavy blanket of silt and grass and similar debris. Rock dams last longer than any other type of temporary check dam.

Guard Against Insects

With the likelihood that market values of many commodities, particularly food crops produced on farms, will rise as a result of the NRA, AAA and other governmental activities, it is more important than ever that such stored products be protected against destructive insects, says M. D. Farrar, research entomologist of the Illinois state natural history survey. In a statement to the extension service of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, Farrar points out that it is a quite common experience for insects to be found feeding on stored food products after they have been held in storage a few weeks to several months. Dried beans, peas, apples or fruits of all kinds are particularly susceptible, if stored in a warm place.

Keep Ditches Clean

No tile drain is better than its outlet. During the winter months obstructions have accumulated along most ditches. A stump, log, or stick may have lodged across the channel. Grass, weeds and smaller sticks become lodged against such obstructions, forming a dam across the stream. Sediment carried by water will be deposited above such natural dams, submerging any drains that enter the stream near by. Frequent inspection of a ditch will reveal such troubles.

A Girl Like Milly

By ROBERT SIDMAN

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

I DIDN'T like it, and I told her so. I said, "Gees, Milly, we didn't have to come to the park to sit down and talk, even if it is spring. We could've done that up at my place, or yours. Anyway." I said. "I ain't so keen on talkin'."

"Neither am I," she said. "So let's not." And she flopped down on a bench. I walked away, tryin' to dope out whether I'd get mad clean through or not. Only you can't always get mad clean through when you're that way about a girl, especially a girl like Milly.

The next thing I knew she was lightin a cigarette. And then it all happened.

I heard somebody say, "Milly!"

I turned about to go back to her then, when I saw a guy I didn't know, talkin' to her. He was leanin on a little no-account fruit cart an sayin' "Lucky for me, I seen you lightin' that cigarette. I wouldn't've noticed you if you hadn't lit that match just when I was passin by."

She said, "Yeah. It is dark. Wonder why the lights haven't been turned on."

"Something's wrong with the works, maybe. How are you, Milly?" he said.

She said, "Oh I'm all right. Tom. How about yourself?"

"Who, me?" he said, surprised like. "Oh, I ain't so good. I—I—" He had to stop for a minute. "I guess I'll be all right, though. I'm glad I seen you here. Do you come to the park much?"

"No," she said. "This is the first time I been here since—well, since you left me, I guess."

"Uh-huh," he said. "That's what I thought. I come by here most every night. I probably would've seen you before if you'd been here."

He lit up, and the two of them sat there and smoked a bit. I wanted to, too, but I didn't. Finally, he started talkin' again. "Do you remember—" he started to say, but he didn't finish it.

She said, "Yeah, it was right here on this bench."

"That's right," he said. "A year and three months ago."

She said, "Four. This's June, you know."

"No," he said, "is it?" She must've said yes, because I heard him say, "Time flies, don't it?"

"I sure does," she said. They smoked some more. Finally, he threw his butt away.

"Milly," he said, "I miss you like h—l."

"Yeah?" she said.

"I sure do," he said. "I know it was my fault. I know I left you. But I was mad."

"I'll say you were mad!" she retorted grimly.

"But I been sickin' around," he said. "I been sick about that Rumanian," he said. "I find out I was wrong, and that you never did go runnin' around with him. Not that I'd blame you now, if you had," he said.

Milly took a long drag. "Well," she said, "what about it?"

"I'm sorry," he said. "I love you. I love you more than I ever did. I—How about—We ought to—" He couldn't say anything more.

"You mean you want to patch everything up all over again?" she asked him.

"That's right," he said. "Let's be married again."

She laughed, only it sounded like she was cryin' a little. "I been hopin' that some day you'd say that," she said. "I'm willin'. Only there's one thing I want to tell you first."

"What's that?" he said.

"It's about the Rumanian," she said. "You were right the first time. I did run around with him on the QT," she said. "But I never loved him. I never even liked him much. I just did it to make you jealous."

"Oh, that's all right," he said.

"But I promise, if you'll come back to me, I'll never even see him again," she said.

"Oh, that's all right," he said. And he got up, too.

She got up, too. "Ain't you goin' to kiss me, Tom?" she said.

So he kissed her, and they went off together. He never even saw me.

• • • • • • •

I stood there and watched them across the horse-ridin' road. Then I decided it was time I ought to be headin' for home, too.

I stopped by the first lamp post to take some dirt out of my shoe, and I felt somebody tap me on the shoulder. I looked up. "Oh, hello, Mike," I said. It was one of the cops I knew.

"What you doin' out here by yourself, Van?" he said.

"Oh, nothin'," I said.

"Go home then, you crazy Greek," he said. "It's gettin' late."

"I ain't sleepy," I said. "And besides, you shouldn't never call no Rumanian a Greek. They don't like it," I said.

"Well, you needn't get mad about it," he said. "I just made a mistake, that's all. Anybody can make 'em."

"Yeah," I said. I didn't know I'd been snappy with Mike. I like him too much to be snappy with him.

"Well, g'night, Van," he said.

"G'night, Mike," I said.

With building materials soaring to the highest prices in several years, property owners are faced with the paradoxical condition of a steadily declining market for improved real estate. When modern five-room bungalows that would cost $2500 to build are being offered for half that amount, with the lot thrown in, there is something dead wrong somewhere. That something is the tax and bond situation. The homestead tax exemption amendment, regardless of what it may do to upset the tax structure in other ways, will encourage home owning, and that should do more to bring the price of houses back to their real value than anything that has happened since the boom.

Local real estate note: There is some desirable property on the south extension of Road 8 at the west end of the Mall. This road, recently opened, may in time become the new federal highway, carrying all through traffic around the edge of the city instead of through the city over the present No. 8 route. If that comes to pass some of those corner lots will make good sites for filling stations, hot dog stands and beer emporiums to take care of the traveling public. Reviving an old boom-time slogan, "Now is the time to get in on the ground floor."

Florida's famous black bass will be entirely depleted in a short time if immediate action is not taken to stop the sale and shipment of this important game fish, says a bulletin from the Consolidated Black Bass Commission. Over 700 tons of black bass are shipped annually from Florida to be sold in the markets at from seven to ten cents a pound, when every pound of fresh water bass is worth from one to five dollars when caught on the end of the tourist fishing line, says the bulletin. The commission, which has the backing of chambers of commerce and service organizations throughout the state, is attempting to put on record every candidate for the house and the senate on a movement for prohibiting the shipment and sale of black bass in the state. Without question the preservation of the bass for the enjoyment of sportsmen and as an attraction to bring tourists to the state is vastly more important than the small amount of revenue commercial fishermen reap from the sale of the fish. By all means, let our candidates for the Legislature endorse the movement and support a measure to save one of Florida's most valuable assets.

Saw three children, the eldest not over 7, standing almost in the middle of the road thumbing a ride the other day. Parents ought to teach children better than to do such a dangerous and improper thing. With the tendency toward devoting the least time possible to work, and with even mere infants thumbing rides, we predict at no distant time a generation of people with nothing at the end of the arm except a gigantic and much elongated thumb.

Frostproof has a special election law in which only property owners and those who have paid occupational license tax are eligible to vote in city elections. To our surprise the supreme court has upheld the constitutionality of the law, when it appears on the surface, that the law could easily have been knocked out.

As the primary nears, the indications become more positive that Peterson's election to Congress for another term is "in the bag." Messrs. Calhoun and Hall, the two other Congressional candidates, are fine and deserving men, no doubt, but they naturally picked the wrong time to run. Mr. Peterson has won the right to a second term, and it seems assured that the electorate will give it to him.

—o—

The press of the state has been scorching the Pinellas County Medical Association and a similar society of New York City for suspending for one year, Dr. Edward F. Albee for "unethical" advertising. Dr. Albee, be it known, is a famous orthopedic surgeon from New York City, who is establishing a sanitarium at Venice. Thinking to boost a good thing along, as is its custom, the Seaboard Air Line Railway, without Dr. Albee's knowledge or consent, noted the fact in its folders and referred to it on its menus. Unreasonable at it may seem, the doctor was adjudged guilty of advertising, rated as a serious breach of ethics by the medical societies. We hesitate to confess such ignorance, but until the medicos raised the rumpus, we admit that the good doctor was a total stranger to us, and in our hit-and-miss reading we had failed to see the item about his new sanitarium. We will wager that a great many other people know of Dr. Albee that never heard of him until he was "disgraced" by his fellows. We fail to see that any harm was done to his profession or to his society through the Seaboard publicity, and since the press has so generally sided with him, he has gained more notice throughout the state than he could have gotten otherwise in a decade of ordinary practice. So, if the doctors had any idea of discrediting him, their attack has had the opposite effect. The time may come when the best doctors of the country will advertise when and if they please, and no one will be suspended for so doing. As it is today, only the fakes and quacks—the purveyors of cure-alls among the medical men—may advertise, when these could easily be silenced by straightforward and truthful advertising by the best men of the profession.

self and family, but that through personal experience, as a poor man, living in a small community, he knows that at present, nine out of ten citizens have a continual fear of the future for themselves and their families and that to change this condition we must have money in circulation. He pledged himself to an earnest effort to bring back economic security and personal happiness by seeing that the Government changed from the old policy of catering to great wealth and big business to a new policy of guaranteeing the average citizen a chance to make a living and asked the assistance of the common people of the entire State in the winning of this campaign as an evidence of their support of the program he proposes.

Latent Heat

Latent heat means a quantity of heat which has disappeared, having been employed to produce some change other than elevation of temperature. By exactly reversing that change, the quantity of heat which has disappeared is reproduced. Maxwell defines it as the quantity of heat which must be communicated to a body in a given state in order to convert it into another state without changing its temperature.

VOTE FOR Paul Vinson
Candidate For REPRESENTATIVE

Running on the Platform of the Florida Taxpayers' Association:

1. Opposed to any new taxes because our present tax laws provide for sufficient revenue, if the law is enforced.

2. Enforcement of present tax laws by some practical agency or plan that will bring about equitable assessments throughout the state on all classes of property, in accordance with provision of the Constitution to the effect that "the legislature shall provide a just and equitable system of taxation," using in the assessment work a state-wide method of arriving at values, based on the methods employed by successful institutions, such as insurance companies, loan companies, banks, etc.

3. Economy of government by the elimination of waste in administration and, with that in mind, the adoption of uniformity of accounts in all governmental units of the same class, thereby permitting comparisons of costs of governmental operation as between units of the same class, also so simplified that the average citizen can understand the cost of operating the governments in all of its different departments, the cost of maintaining public property and the cost of new work, improvements or additions made to public property.

4. The investigation of the indebtedness of the various governmental units and a determination of the ability of the units that have defaulted to take care of their indebtedness, after deducting a reasonable amount for necessary operation of government, basing the conclusions on a fair and reasonable valuation of property within the area affected.

I Also Favor:

1. Reduction of Auto License Tags to $5 for all passenger cars or privately used trucks, as long as we have an 8-cent gas tax.

2. Elimination of poll tax.

3. Reduction in auto license tax and elimination of poll tax to be replaced by diverting one cent of gas tax to the school funds for payment of teachers' salaries.

4. I favor a federal old age pension and also a State Workmen's Compensation Law.

5. I favor the homestead exemption amendment, and if the proposed amendment does not exempt homes from taxation for bonded indebtedness, I will favor a new law that will exempt homes from all taxation.

6. I favor a Homestead Bill that will provide all lands with taxes unpaid for five years, will be open for homestead.

7. I will oppose any additional taxation with provide all lands with taxes unpaid for five years, will be open for homestead.

I will appreciate your vote and support.

Sans Souci Club Has Nonsense Party

The Sans Souci contract club was entertained Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Freed Peden with Miss Hettie Hundertmark, Miss Millie Pearson and Mrs. Freed Peden as hostesses.

The party rooms were attractively decorated with roses, fern and yellow and white snapdragons.

Invitations reading as follows had been issued to the guests:

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the best of men."

So why not have a jolly meeting at a nonsense party next Monday evening at the home of Wilma Peden, 8 o'clock. Admission 5 senses."

Upon arrival each guest was presented with a dunce cap which was worn throughout the evening.

Various contests were conducted to determine whether or not the guests had their admission charge of five senses with them.

Tables were then arranged for contract, partners being found by matching comic post cards. The first table to complete the progression was given the pleasure of a visit to the Art Gallery where famous paintings were nonsensically illustrated. Those from the other tables later visited the Art Gallery and each was given a score according to the number of paintings correctly identified. Two more progessions of bridge were played and the nonsensical idea entered somewhat into the game of bridge also. During one progression the losers were requested to wear gloves which created considerable merriment.

The three hostesses dressed as waitresses, wearing little yellow aprons and caps, passed printed menus from which each guest chose her own refreshments. While the orders were being filled the guests were busily working Mother Goose jig saw puzzles for which the first four couples to finish were given a score.

When the orders were filled some guests found themselves in a disastrous state of affairs with such as a toothpick, an onion and bologna on the plate when a slice of Pine, Hidden Tears and the Last of Poor Dog Tray had been ordered.

The hostesses were in great sympathy with the guests and came to their rescue by serving them brick orange ice and vanilla cream with angel food cake. Punch was served during the evening. A color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in the decorations, refreshments and prize wrappings.

The high score prize was awarded to Miss Mildred Myers and second high to Miss Louise Houck.

Those enjoying this Nonsense party were Miss Elizabeth Atchley, Miss Alma Harrell, Miss Eleanor Bryant, Miss Mary Lou St. Clair, Miss Louise Houck, Miss Mildred Myers, Mrs. C. R. Ginn, Jr., Mrs. Sadie Myers Brown, Mrs. Raymond Dilley and Mrs. Hayes Maxwell.

Miss Shirley Coates Celebrates Birthday

Miss Shirley Coates celebrated her tenth birthday anniversary last Friday with a lovely party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Coates on Lake Lotela.

A happy time was spent playing out-door games with punch being served throughout the afternoon, to the guests.

At the refreshment hour the children were ushered into the dining room where the table was centered with a beautiful white birthday cake adorned with ten glowing candles. Ice cream, cake and candy were served.

The honoree was the recipient of many attractive and useful gifts from her friends.

Those helping to make this a happy occasion for Shirley were: Dorothy Welch, Nita Bryant, Barbara Allen Marlin, Willa Pearl McGibbeny, Marjorie and Betty Winifred Hood, Laverne Fortner, Peggy Mandis, Gwendolyn Parker, Josephine Reck, Veda Nea Yearwood, Dorothy and Martha McNicholas, Sajette Dorminey, Betty Doughton, Gloria Hughs, Madge Pilcher, Janice and Marilyn Halliday, Nancy Morgan and Sara Jane Hobbs, Jack Head, Jr., Edward Sherman, Bobby Keller, Sanford Hartt, David Lanier, Howard Todd, Jimmie Yearwood, Eric Pabor, Desmond Roberts, Dale McFarland, Asthur Crews, Joe Allen Lander, Bud Patterson, Calvin Bryant, and Lee Everett Hagood.

Mrs. Coates was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Carrie Collins.

Legion Auxiliary Met Monday Night

A most interesting meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary was held Monday night at the home of Mrs. C. L. Johnson, with Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. A. R. Clark as hostesses.

After a short business session, with Mrs. R. Lawhon president, presiding short but very interesting talks were given by the following visitors: Mrs. Edith L. Petrey of Arcadia, past vice president of the sixth district, Mrs. Rupert Smith of Arcadia, national chairman of music and past department president, and Miss Ruth McAlya of Arcadia, department secretary. Mrs. J. McAlya, mother of Miss Ruth McAlya, was also present. These ladies were presented with lovely corsages from this unit.

A social hour was enjoyed and light refreshments were served.

Those present were: Mrs. Petrey, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. McAlya, Miss McAlya, Mrs. R. Lawhon, Mrs. L. R. Marlin, Mrs. D. G. Perry, Mrs. Demos Mandis, Mrs. W. H. McCarthy, Mrs. Virginia Cloud, Miss Frances Hargrove, Mrs. W. M. Hetherington, Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. E. W. Hartt, Mrs. T. H. Hughes, Mrs. Robert McCabe, Mrs. John Hood, Mrs. Loca Stuckey, Mrs. R. C. Jarrett, Mrs. E. E. Melton and the hostesses, Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Johnson.

Miss Dawson Honors Mother

Miss Ines Dawson entertained at bridge on Tuesday evening at her home on 214 E. Walnut street in honor of her mother, Mrs. W. E. Dawson, who celebrated her birthday anniversary.

Gay colored flowers made attractive the party rooms where three tables were in play. At the close of four progressions, of contract scores were totaled, Mrs. Frank Armstrong receiving high score prize and Mrs. J. L. Taylor a consolation prize. At the close of the occasion the honoree was surprised with a shower of lovely gifts from her friends.

A delicious refreshment course of Boston cream pie and tea was served to the following guests: Mrs. Phil Abrams, Mrs. Frank Armstrong, Mrs. J. L. Taylor, Mrs. J. L. Wells, Miss Lillian Smith, Miss Barbara Wever, Miss Hazel Cameron, Mrs. E. E. Smith, Mrs. C. C. Bell, Mrs. Francis Shockley, Mrs. Roy Felknor, Mrs. Edgar T. Koch, Mrs. Roland Droit, Mrs. W. E. Dawson, honoree, and Miss Inez Dawson.

Mr. and Mrs. Dilley Hosts to Club

Mr. and Mrs. Milford Dilley entertained the Thursday evening bridge club at their home on Thursday of last week.

Pretty bouquets of mixed flowers were placed about the living room where three tables were in play and at the end of the games a delicious salad course was served.

Prizes for the evening went to Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Johnson for high score and to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dilley for low scores.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. James Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Freed Peden, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. John Hood, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dilley and Brisco Willis.

Freshmen Honor "Miss High School"

The Freshman class of the Avon Park high school entertained Friday evening in honor of Miss Thelma Perry, who has been named "Miss High School" by the student body.

The party was held at the home of Miss Perry and the entire high school was invited. Contests and games furnished the amusement for the evening.

A color scheme of pink, yellow and green was used in decorating and again reflected in the refreshments.

At a late hour a delicious salad course was served to the guests.

Legion Auxiliary Picnic Tomorrow

The members of the American Legion Auxiliary and the girls who helped sell poppies last Saturday are invited to attend a picnic tomorrow at Lake Letta. Bring a basket lunch and be at the home of S. Y. Hartt at ten o'clock in the morning. Swimming and other outdoor sports will be enjoyed before the picnic lunch is spread at noon.

Wednesday Club With Mrs. Droit

Mrs. Roland Droit was a charming hostess Wednesday afternoon when she entertained her bridge club at her home in the Hobbs Apartments.

Roses and other summer flowers were in abundance throughout the party rooms and after the games the prizes were received by Mrs. C. L. Johnson and Mrs. M. V. Pilcher, for high and second high scores.

An ice course was served to the following: Mesdames W. E. Dawson, Roy Felknor, A. R. Clark, Francis Shockley, Edgar Koch, Lester Armstrong, Ewing Brumbaugh, Harry McFerrin, J. L. Taylor, M. V. Pilcher, Jack Head, J. L. Wells, Phil Abrams, Charles Bell, C. L. Johnson and E. E. Smith.

Sunday School Class Party

The Sunday School class of Mrs. J. B. Coen, Jr., was entertained Thursday night of last week at the home of Mrs. Irving Ford, with Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Coen as hostesses.

Mrs. J. L. Wells, president, presided over the short business meeting after which a social hour was enjoyed. Several contests and other games were played.

At the refreshment hour ice cream and cake was served.

Those present were Mesdames M. K. Radcliffe, James Spencer, Milford Dilley, Pearl Holland, J. L. Wells, Mercer, Charles Clements, D. Martin, Love McGiboney, Wever, Earnest Spencer, and R. Lawhon.

Meeting of Methodist Missionary Society

The Methodist Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. John D. Raab on Tuesday afternoon. The mission study book "Eastern Women of Today and Tomorrow" was completed with Mrs. Hayes Maxwell and Mrs. C. H. Pardee leading the discussions. All those who studied this book feel that they are more familiar with present day conditions in the Orient.

Mrs. E. P. Lacey and Mrs. Raab were joint hostesses for the afternoon and at the close of the meeting served a delicious ice course with cookies.

Fifteen ladies were present.

Blizzards Here and There

Blizzards, intensely cold and snow-laden, are outstanding events of winter in the northern interior of North America, but our continent has no monopoly of them. The most terrific blizzards on earth are doubtless those that rage on the border of Antarctica, while Russia, where blizzards are called burans or purgas, is able to match the worst American experiences.

Another Message to the Voters

By G. A. HARPER, Candidate for County Commissioner

A commissioners relation to his county is exactly the same as a director's relation is to his corporation.

Highlands county is a ten million dollar corporation, with a two million dollar indebtedness.

A high official of Highlands County who has been in office a long time, stated to me last week that a set of commissioners who were not capable of grasping the fundamental principles of their many serious responsibilities would do the county more harm in one year than it could overcome in ten years.

A commissioner's responsibilities are not limited alone to engineering problems, nor are they limited to strictly business qualifications alone, while they are both seriously involved among the hundreds of important duties.

For one instance, the tender care of old and afflicted people and helpless widows and orphans, requires qualities of sympathy and I have those qualities.

The responsibilities of the courts and all men connected with the county in any way, form or fashion are under the charge of the County Commissioners, to a great extent.

The roads, public buildings schools, helpless and dependent people, the courts, the economic development, the appointment of County Attorney, and men to other positions, all of the expenditures of the county, issuing, selling and retiring all bonds with interest, and levying taxes to cover these moneys spent, and literally hundreds of other important functions require time, care and attention to make the county function prosperously and properly. The proper immediate care and action, or immediate neglect of these duties mean either coming out of the mire or going deeper into it.

My aims are not to place any more burdens upon the county in anyway but to try to lift some of our present burdens, and I will "keep on the grai," in trying to get our share of that Government money that Washingon has set aside for the purpose to help lift some of those burdens. The candidate who is fighting against that and said that we should make ourselves content to do on just what we have to do with, which is nothing, as the money on hand is hitting the laborer and the county in the face with a sledge hammer and driving him deeper in the mire.

By the term, "working man," I mean the man whose family support is dependant on his effort at public work for wages.

Whether we like it or don't like it, Washington has set aside millions for distribution over the U. S., and while opportunity is now banging at our door, if Highlands County fails to get her share of it and use it for permanent re-employment purposes, then we are fast asleep and we will never wake up. This government money is going to be distributed from Washington whether we like it or don't like it, we can use our share of that money and make it function for the County forever into the future, if we ourselves exercise the proper directorship ability. So far, we have failed to get our share, yet my opponent stated that we should be satisfied with what we have on hand.

I want your vote and I promise to pay you back in service.

Last year when CWA work sprang up all of Highlands County Commissioners came together to my house, and asked me to estimate the cost of building some roads for them, which I did. Why didn't these County Commissioners get Mr. Wolfe to do this estimating for them? He claims road building experience.

As to who would be my choice for county attorney, I will truthfully and frankly tell you that my mind has not made any selection yet. But if elected, I shall then try to ascertain what man in the entire county could and would render the most efficient service to the county in that capacity, in an impartial way, then I would do my best to have that man appointed.

If elected I shall try to serve all alike in an impartial manner; I will try to give the proper time, care and work to all of the functions of a commissioner's responsibilities, not one function and not two but all functions.

I will give my best personal interest, care and attention to our old and dependent people, to help less widows and orphans, and dependent, helpless, afflicted.

I will try to distribute the county's business equally among our merchants and service stations.

I will try to cooperate with the other commissioners and you people for the common welfare of all.

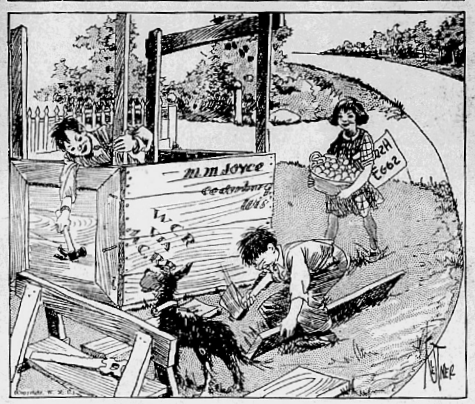

I will exercise all principles of honesty and justice.

Vote for me on election day. I promise to pay you back in service.

PATTERN 9695

A small girl will look very sweet in this little dress. The yoke is scalloped in front and plain in back. There are little bows which tie the sleeves very smartly, and a cunning collar. Her mother can make the dress, omitting the lower part of the sleeves and the collar, as the small sketch shows. Use the pattern to make several different dresses; for example, it's cute made of a cotton print, and equally dainty in one of the pastel shades in plain silk or linen, or dimity.

Pattern 9695 may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10. Size 4 requires 2⅛ yards 35-inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 W. Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

WRIGLEY'S GUM

BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

AN UNEXPECTED FRIEND

WHILE Redcoat the Tanager was telling Peter Rabbit of his dreadful accident, Mrs. Tanager was dying about in the treetops nearby, calling anxiously. She did not look at all like Redcoat, for she was dressed almost wholly in light olive green and greenish yellow. "He can't even fly up just a little way so as to get off the ground!" she cried anxiously. "Isn't it dreadful, Peter Rabbit, to have such an accident happen? We've just got our nest half built, and I don't know what I shall do if anything happens to Redcoat. Oh, dear, here comes somebody! Hide, Redcoat! Hide!"

Meanwhile Mrs Tanager Came and Talked to Him and Fussed About Him.

Poor Redcoat, with the old look of terror in his eyes, hurried along, trying to find something under which to hide. But there was no way of hiding that wonderful scarlet coat. Peter heard the sound of heavy footsteps, and looking back saw Farmer Brown's Boy coming. "Don't be afraid, Redcoat," he whispered. "It's Farmer Brown's Boy, and I'm sure he won't hurt you. Perhaps he can help you." Then he scampered off a short distance and sat up to watch what would happen.

Of course, Farmer Brown's Boy saw Redcoat. No one with any eyes at all could have helped seeing him because of that wonderful scarlet coat. He saw, too, by the way Redcoat was acting, that he was in trouble. He understood instantly that something was wrong with one wing, and running forward he caught Redcoat.

"You poor little thing. You poor beautiful little creature," said Farmer Brown's Boy softly as he saw the cruel twig sticking through Redcoat's shoulder. "We'll have to get that out right away," continued Farmer Brown's Boy, stroking Redcoat ever so gently. Somehow at that gentle touch Redcoat lost much of his fear and a little hope sprang into his heart. This was no enemy but a friend. With his knife Farmer Brown's Boy cut off the twig on the upper side of the wing. Then, doing his best to be careful and to hurt as little as possible, he worked the other part of the twig out from the under side. Carefully he examined the wing to see if any bones were broken. None was, and after holding Redcoat a few minutes, he carefully set him up in a tree and withdrew a short distance. Redcoat sat there for some time as if fearful of trying that injured wing. Meanwhile Mrs. Tanager came and talked to him and fussed about him and coaxed him and made as much of him as if he were a baby.

After a while he ventured to try his wing and found that he could fly. Then he and Mrs. Tanager disappeared in the Green Forest.

"I knew Farmer Brown's Boy would help him, and I'm glad he found him," cried Peter happily and started for the dear Old Brier Patch.

THIRST-QUENCHING DRINKS

LONG ago before a mixed drink was ever thought of, the lemon was the king of fruit, used for refreshing healthful drinks as well as served hot, for medicinal purposes. Today it is more popular and more widely used, as it is needed to give zest to almost any other fruit drink.

For those who like to have a tinkling drink to offer a friend in a hurry, the fruit juice mixed with the syrup is a great convenience. Take one and one-half cupfuls of lemon juice and add three cupfuls of sugar. Bring to a boil and cook for ten minutes. Then bottle and place in the ice chest. Use the syrup in glasses of water and ice without any further preparation. A tablespoonful or two to a glass is sufficient.

Lemons as well as oranges are rich in vitamin C. They are recommended as the best kind of a preservative for the teeth. Mix lemon juice and salt and use as a cleanser of the teeth and gums. Add water and use as a mouth wash. It leaves the mouth refreshed and stimulated, is especially good for the gums, to harden and keep them firm and healthy.

Raisins.

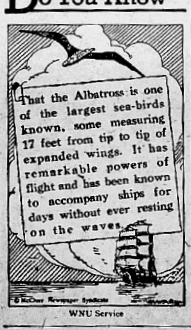

Put one pound of raisins through the food chopper, add a quart of water and bring to a boil, then let stand over night. Add the juice of two lemons, two tablespoonfuls of the sirup and pour into glasses half filled with cracked ice.

Coffee Caramel Parfait.

Scald one and one-half cupfuls of milk with two tablespoonfuls of ground coffee, add one-half cupful of caramelized sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt to the strained milk and cool. Beat two egg yolks with one-half cupful of sugar and add to the other ingredients. Cool, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and one and one-half cupfuls of cream. Pour into a mold and pack in ice and salt for four hours.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

THERE ARE NO SCAPEGOATS TODAY

"ON WHAT new scapegoat are we going to saddle the burden of our responsibilities?"

A minister asked that. His reference was to certain aspects of our economic and political conditions which it is not the purpose of this column to go into. What interests us is much that is brought to mind by mention of that word "scapegoat."

It reminds one of the people (women, we may well say, because this is not a predominantly masculine trait) who, whatever happens to them are interested first, and foremost in finding some one or something to blame. Of course it never alters or lessens trouble, it never changes anything to find some one to blame. But judging by the relief with which some of us pounce on a pretext for placing responsibility at any door but our own, one would think that this in itself eliminated the trouble, lifted the burden.

When we find ourselves in a dilemma, there may be a certain amount of satisfaction in the knowledge that it was not our fault, that we had done our best, that the adverse results were brought about through forces entirely beyond our control. Momentary satisfaction. But what then? Is the fault remedied, the situation helped? Not at all. We are just where we began—faced with the necessity for doing the thing that will help.

It is interesting to note here the origin of the word "scapegoat," from which we also have our modern slang expression, "making some one the goat." The word comes to us from a legend of Hebrew antiquity when the people attempted through sacrifices to make atonement for their sins. Sometimes there were sins that could not be paid off in this way, sins that could not even be narrowed down to those responsible. These sins a tribe or group would metaphorically heap on a goat, who, with his load of guilt, would be driven into the wilderness to expiate the crimes of ingenious humans!

Life is not so simple today. In this hard-boiled age, there are no scapegoats, on which to load our sins. Today our problems, our faults, mistakes, whatever they may be, come home to roost. And the only way to get rid of them is to take the bull by the horns (not the goat!) and by our best efforts, correct or eradicate them.

BUNDLE OF JOY

By ANNE CAMPBELL

MARILYNN'S her name, but we
Have another we employ!
It describes her perfectly:
Bundle of Joy!

There are sacks of shining gold,
There are silks of rarest dye,
There are bundles, which unrolled,
Capture the eye.

But a priceless tapestry
Spread against the blue of day
Does not mean as much to me
As one clear ray

From a baby's azure eyes!
With a glance both pure and coy
She can bring me Paradise!

Stalking the Dandelion

OLD CHRISTMAS STILL KEPT UP

Had Origin in First English Colony in New World.

Each year we read with sentimental interest descriptions of the celebration of "Old Christmas" by fisherfolk and other residents of the ancient village of Bodunthe, on the long and narrow outer barrier islands that impound Pamlico sound off North Carolina. Sometimes we read that the celebration is held on January 5 and sometimes that it is held on January 6, the difference being that Twelfth Night, or old Christmas Eve, may have greater emphasis in celebration than Twelfth Tide on Twelfth Day (Old Christmas Day) as the villagers continue a celebration that extends back to their forefathers and even the time of Sir Walter Raleigh and establishment of the first English colony in the New world.

However, if we search the back districts of the Missouri Ozarks, it is quite likely that we could find this belated celebration of Christmas much closer to our own modern homes, as well as hear the belief expressed that on Twelfth Night cattle of the fields kneel in greeting to the new-born Christ. This tradition and refusal to accept the calendar corrections of Pope Gregory were brought to this country by early settlers from Britain and persisted for many generations not only in the barrier islands that protect North Carolina from the raging sea, but in the mountains along the western seaboard, spreading even to the Ozarks of Missouri and Arkansas as the mountaineers sought new homes.

It is fitting, however, that the tradition and its spread only by family and that the outstanding community expressions remains near the place it was introduced to America, in Dare county, North Carolina, where the first white child to be born in America came into being. This child was Virginia Dare, granddaughter of John White, a leader, whose small Roanoke island colony disappeared without trace while White was on a journey home for supplies.

Rodanthe is only about a score of miles from Roanoke island and a part of the same chain of banks, with Kitty Hawk, where the first successful airplane flight was made, only a few miles away on the same chain. So what better place could be found for the support of tradition, even though there be some uncertainty whether it is in observance of Old Christmas Eve or Old Christmas Day that fishing nets are laid aside?—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Effects of War Gases

Most physicians believed at the close of the World war that the results of the gas attacks during the war would surely be the development of tuberculosis and bronchial troubles among the victims. Fifteen years have passed without the feared after effects.

A careful check by the War department and the Veterans bureau has revealed that very few of the tubercular and bronchial cases can be laid at the door of gas attacks. In most of these cases it is believed that the germs were already present and not caused by the gas. Medical officers believe that enough time has passed to show up any after effects caused by the gas experience.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Candidates For Office Spoke on Mall Saturday

missioner is a serious proposition with many responsibilities of which one was putting men to work on the land. He cited the possibilities of a large track near Istokpoga which he had surveyed for the CWA. He said he had called attention to this to county officials but no action had been taken although here is plenty of money in Washington for this purpose. Put unemployed men on unemployed land, he said, and improve the workers' condition. He told of his qualifications and the different positions he had held as a civil engineer.

The last speaker, J. L. Wells, said everyone knew him and his record as a business man. The office of county commissioner is most important, he said and needs a business man. Vote for the man to whom you would entrust your own business, he urged. He pledged a fair and square administration for all and added he had the needs of the county at heart.

For the office of member of the board of public instruction the only candidate present was Charlie Clements. He said if his past year and a half's honest and effective work was appreciated he would like to be re-elected. Regarding the Highlands county land, he said he was not opposed to it as reported but is for a nine months school term and then the land if there is sufficient money left.

Senator Henry Murphy, although not a candidate at this time also spoke briefly and urged everyone to study politics as they are everywhere.

The last speaker of the evening was Congressman J. Hardin Peterson who is seeking re-election.

In part Peterson said:

"I have been your congressman for only 14 months, but take pride and I think justly so, in what I have been instrumental in accomplishing for the first district and its people in that comparatively short time. I did not go to Washington with any expectation of setting the world on fire within a few days or a month, but I have worked consistently and hard for my district.

Promises Service

"My experience, I consider, is worth a great deal in Washington to the people of the district. I am receiving encouragement and pledges of support from thousands of voters throughout the district. I pledge you that if you renominate me, I will go back to Washington and stick to the job as I have in the past. I'll repay you by honest, hard-working efficient service."

Peterson said that 40 percent, or $7,500,00 of the entire federal CWA appropriation for Florida was expended within the first district. He cited among other accomplishments, his success in obtaining federal farm loans for Florida, and his efforts in behalf of the state's fishing industry. There is an annual shipment of 84,000,000 pounds of fish from Florida, he said, affording a livelihood to 11,000 persons.

"What I have sought to do," he said, "is to prevent inroads on this great industry by the shipment of tons and tons of canned fish into Florida from other states, and the bulk of the shipped product has come from California. Our fishing industry is one that deserves all the aid and protection we can give it."

Peterson also pointed out that as a result of his efforts, a federal representative was now making a survey in the first district, in the interest of refinincing drainage districts, to lift the tax burden from the people.

Western Union Handled Millions of Words in Winter

Florida, that Elysian land of winter sports, produced a bumper crop of sports and other stories during the first four months of 1934, according to Tim W. Collins, local manager of Western Union. Literally millions of words of news flashed over the Western Union wires from Florida as President Roosevelt fished, and proved that he fished, off the coast, as seventeen baseball teams did their spring training, as Carnera and Loughran fought at Miami, and as the ponies circled the race tracks.

"Society, acquiring its winter coat of tan, yielded the leading role to sports and government as the big telegraph network hummed with stories hot from Florida," said Mr. Collins. "Between March 1 and April 10, newspapermen in Florida filed more than 4,000,000 words of special stories with Western Union, not counting the great volume handled over special direct lines supplied for the United Press, for the Western Union sports tickers, and for messages between President Roosevelt's communications headquarters at Miami and the White House at Washington, D. C.

"Baseball training and pre-season games accounted for a large part of the total press wordage sent out of Florida in March and early in April, although the race tracks produced several hundred thousand words, and the Carnera-Loughran battle was described in nearly 100,000 words, which required twenty-four special telegraph circuits. Because it has the nation's largest telegraph network, Western Union was able to handle all of this in its stride and give fast and efficient service regardless of the volume of telegraph business filed."

SLIGHT ERROR.

St. Petersburg.—Anyway, the Rev. Dr. James A. McClure, first Presbyterian church pastor, has a sense of humor.

His topic is to be "The Secret of Power" but one of those things that happen substituted a "k" for a "w."

THE WINNER

FOR UNITED STATES SENATOR

ABLE LAWYER . . . CONVINCING SPEAKER . . . STRONG CAMPAIGNER . . . WITH A CREDITABLE BACKGROUND . . . AND INFLUENTIAL FRIENDS IN EVERY COUNTY . . . WHO GOT THE LEAD AT THE OUTSET, HIS FRIENDS ASSERT, AND IS NOT ONLY MAINTAINING IT, BUT INCREASING IT . . .

In a few fitting words Florida's potent Tampa Tribune sums up Claude Pepper as a man . . . his standing in his profession . . . and his courage and aggressiveness as a campaigner.

The Tribune reflects the opinion of Claude Pepper held by tens of thousands of Floridians who will go to the polls June 5th determined to send him to Washington next January as Florida's Junior Senator.

They are convinced that Claude Pepper will give Florida the kind of service to be expected of a United States Senator.

They realize that Florida needs a man fully alive to and cognizant of the needs of the State.

They know that Claude Pepper is able . . . .

That he is honest . . . .
That he is courageous . . . .
That he is as aggressive as he is courageous . . . .
That he is fair . . . .
That he will rise above political considerations . . . .
That he will be open and above board . . . .
That he will enjoy the confidence and respect of his fellow members . . . .
That his platform is in full sympathy with the needs of the time . . . .
That the pages of history are full of achievement that had nothing to do with seniority . . . or so-called experience . . . .
That President Roosevelt and every other President of our country had no previous experience . . . .
That by Trammell's rule or reason Presidents and Senators should be allowed to continue in office for life . . . .
The people of Florida do not subscribe to the claim that experience is the measure of a man's fitness, because too many have failed to possess qualities necessary to make experience valuable . . . .
The people know that this is alike as to politics . . . as to business . . . as to the professions . . . as to artisans and workmen . . . and working women.

The people of Florida are convinced that the Tampa Tribune is right—that Senator Trammell's record is unworthy of further endorsement . . . that he has had ample time to make good his promises . . .

The Junior Senator asks the people of Florida to return him to the Senate for another six years to draw another $60,000 from the public payroll.

Famed Will Rogers says he knows only what he hears. So it is with most of us. Senator Trammell, too, appears to know that the people are saying that

"Claude Pepper will be our next United States Senator."

The Junior Senator demonstrates this in his campaign speeches. . . . He knows that he must beat Pepper, or, being the astute politician which he is held to be, he wouldn't worry about Pepper. He knows that Pepper must be stopped . . . that's the battle cry. But the people won't be fooled.

The people of Florida have been most generous to Senator Trammell.

Has he been equally fair and generous to the people who have honored him for a third of a century with a well-paying position on the public payroll?

The people are saying that he hasn't! They are determined that "IT'S TIME TO MAKE A CHANGE."

From the Ocala Banner

"We are convinced that Claude Pepper will be right up there at the top (or second) when the votes are counted in the First Primary. And that, facing the veteran Trammell in the run-off, he (Pepper) stands a beautiful chance to pick up a big majority of the votes from the three candidates who trailed."—Ocala Banner, May 18.

Claude Pepper Will Win

Because he has the ability to do;
Because he is a man of energy and ambition:

Because he is NOT living in the past;
Because he has his FUTURE BEFORE him.

A vote for Claude Pepper is a vote for Progress . . . a vote for our present and future . . . and NOT a vote for the past, which so many of us are trying to forget!

VOLUME VI. — NUMBER 14. AVON PARK, FLORIDA, FRIDAY, JUNE 8, 1934. PRICE: FIVE CENTS

ELECTION COUNT SHOWS SEVERAL RUNOFFS NEEDED

Wells and Armistead; Sims and Eide Go Into Second Primary

With sunshine in the morning and rain in the afternoon, election day passed off quietly with 756 voters casting their ballots in both Avon Park precincts out of a total of 944 qualified. The centers of interest were in the commissioners and representative races, all candidates having an efficient corps of workers. For commissioner J. L. Wells and Frank "Hot Shot" Armistead go into the second primary on June 26. Wells totalled 288 votes and Armistead 258. The other two candidates, G. A. Harper and S. P. Durrance polled 126 and 66 votes respectively.

In district two, Sebring, A. F. Spooner swamped his opponent, A. B. Allen for county commissioner. Spooner is the present commissioner from that district and ran up a total of 409 votes against Allen's 210. This was one of the surprises of the election as the race was expected to be close with Spooner having a slight advantage. Two years ago Spooner had a majority of 55 votes.

In the fourth district Commissioner L. L. Henderson will retain his seat having won over his opponent, O. C. Parrish by 16 votes. Henderson totalled 171 and Parrish 157 votes. In the primary two years ago Henderson won by the close margin of 8 votes.

In district three there is another run-off. L. C. Pearce and J. H. Twitty will have to fight it out in the second primary. Pearce led the field of five candidates for commissioner and polled up 113 votes in the three precincts of the district. Twitty polled 59 and then came Willie Williams with 43, H. E. Galloway with 26 and Wm. R. Maynard with 21. In the second primary two years ago Twitty defeated Pearce 112 to 95.

In district five Ben C. Hope, incumbant, went down in defeat before N. B. Jackson, who totaled 140 votes in the two precincts. Hope had 95 supporters who voted for him. Two years ago Hope received 108 and Jackson 92 votes.

In the race for representative, J. E. Sims led in the county and hopes to be returned to office at Tallahassee. His total vote was 789 and his opponent in the run-off will be Dr. A. T. Eide, who polled 536. Ford Heacock was a close third with 492 votes and then came Paul Vinson with 349.

In Avon Park there was a tough battle for member of board of public instruction. The present member, Charles Clements, posed out his opponent, S. J. Pendleton, by 48 votes. Clements polled 385 and Pendleton 337. In precinct 1-A the race for committeeman was between G. W. Kohler and T. A. McNicholas. Kohler won, having 216 votes and McNicholas 160.

McNicholas was also defeated for state executive committeeman, getting 725 votes while his opponent, F. W. Shockley, rolled up a total of 1204.

Other committeemen contests were in precincts three and eight. In the former, O. S. Bowles polled 56, E. J. Etheredge 54 and C. A. Stevens 35. In district eight Mrs. Austin Pearce defeated M. E. Lanier. She got 23 tallies and Lanier seven.

Getting into the state offices, Claude Pepper led for senator. He polled 764 votes and then came Park Trammell with 700. Charles Mitchell was third with 411 and then came Hortense Wells with 112 and James T. Sikes with 96.

For congressman, J. Hardin Peterson ran away from the others and totaled 1613. Randolph Calhoun was next with 199 and W. T. Hall with 190.

For railroad commisioner, group one, the vote was: George S. Davis, 269, Eugene Matthews, 904, William J. Placle 100 and Lester Wells, 465. In group two for the same office the result was: Herbert P. Caro, 418, Jerry W. Carter, 660, John Good, 222, Mamie Eaton-Greene, 191, John W. Newbern, 110, and William J. Pruitt, 86.

H. A. Strauble accompanied by his great-grandson, Bobby Rouse of Orlando, left Monday for his home in Green Bay, Wisc. Bobby will remain for a months visit with relatives before being joined for the return trip by his mother, Mrs. D. V. Rouse and sisters, Alice and Mary.

Sebring Expecting A New Post Office

Visions of a $65,000 new post office building for Sebring were presented to the county commissioners at their adjourned meeting Wednesday. The matter was presented by J. P. Wheeler, federal re-employment agent for the county, who told of the possibility together with one at Arcadia. Mr. Wheeler pointed out the number of skilled men who would be needed in the construction work. Mayor W. B. Crawford asked that the county contribute towards the telephone bill for the re-employment office and $10.00 per month was authorized for the next three months.

Dr. J. M. Adams, spokesman for the Sebring Chamber of Commerce, asked that the county make provision for right of way for the proposed new federal highway through the Ridge. The commissioners did not take any definite action but promised to co-operate to the fullest extent.

The commissioners also passed a resolution extending their thanks to the state director of the national re-employment service for placing the regional district office in Highlands county.

Oranges Bring Better Prices

Late Fruit Shows Marked Improvement Over Last Year

TAMPA, June 5—(Special) — The Florida Valencia orange described by Earl Lines, advertising manager of the Florida Citrus Exchange as being, "the finest in the world," has again advanced this week over last week's average in the ten largest markets by 39 cents, making the general average $4.15 this week for 248 cars.

This makes eight consecutive weeks that oranges have advanced; ranging from 5 cents to 51 cents over each previous week. For fifteen consecutive weeks orange sales have been higher than the same week a year ago, and for the last three weeks, prices have been better than the same week two years ago.

The records of the statistical department of the Florida Citrus Exchange show that for fourteen weeks, starting the week of February 24th through the week ending June 2nd, 2,670,400 boxes of oranges were shipped to the ten large markets bringing a total of $7,817,680, making a general average of $2.95 per box.

For the same period of time last year 3,082,800 boxes were shipped to the ten markets, yielding a total return of $6,934,680, or an average of $2.25 per box. This year for these fourteen weeks in comparison with that period last year, 412,400 less boxes were shipped. The present season's fruit brought $943,000 more money and 70 cents more per box.

Woman Appointed Fla. Relief Director

Jacksonville, June 7.—(FNS)—Miss Mabel Berry has been appointed director of relief for the Florida Emergency Relief Administration, according to an announcement of Julius F. Stone, Jr., administrator. Miss Berry will assume her duties June 11. She will succeed Walter Wilbur, who has been temporarily in charge of the Florida organization since it took over the work of the civil works administration.

Miss Berry comes to Florida from Rochester, N. Y., where she has been director of relief work.

Wilbur is to become associate field representative for the federal relief administration with headquarters at Atlanta.

Sholtz Proclaims Legion Day Oct. 23

Miami, June 7.—(FNS)—Governor Dave Sholtz, who was instrumental in securing the American Legion National Convention for the State of Florida will proclaim Tuesday, October 23, as "Legion Day" in Florida, according to an announcement made by officials in charge of the 1934 American Legion convention, to be held in Miami, October 22-26.

Convention officials estimate 75,000 legionnaires form all parts of the country will attend the convention. A huge parade by thousands of former service men through flag-draped streets will be a feature of "Legion Day."

Treadway Family In Auto Accident

Mrs. C. B. Treadway and children, Chester B. Jr., Mary Elizabeth, and Margaret, who had planned to attend the State Road meeting at Sebring Sunday and Monday, will be unable to be there due to injuries received in an automobile accident in Lake county last Monday.

Mrs. Treadway, who had not fully recovered from broken ribs on her left side which resulted from a recent accident, received several broken ribs on her right side and bruises on her head and face. Chester B., Jr., was bruised while Margaret, who had one leg, which had been broken in the previous accident, in a cast, suffered injuries to her head, shoulder and leg. Mary Elizabeth was not hurt.

Mrs. Treadway is the sister of F. T. Haskins of Sebring.

Children Invited To Donaldson Park

All children are invited to come to Donaldson Park every afternoon from one to five o'clock. There are plays, games and stories and there is no charge, this being one of the recreational projects of the FERA. Mrs. John D. Raab and Mrs. Virginia Cloud are in charge and promise to take good care of the kiddies. Gideon Jaeger of Sebring is county supervisor for the county.

On rainy afternoons the gatherings are held in the Masonic Temple.

Knife and Ice Pick Figure in Fight

A knife and an ice pick came into play Sunday in the colored quarters and caused the arrest of Humphrey Miles and Eliza White. Humphrey is alleged to have used the knife on Eliza who retaliated with the ice pick. Constable Roberts arrested both the combatants and they were later released under bond.

FORCED SPENDING BEING ADVOCATED

Relief Administrator Has Plan To Eliminate Hoarding of Large Incomes

Jacksonville, June 7.—(FNS)—Julius F. Stone, Florida's Federal Relief administrator has a plan to cure America's ills by the enactment of legislation which would compel spending, through the establishment of a compulsory spending tax on all incomes, requiring individuals to spend 75 percent of their income or lose any unspent portion to the government.

Mr. Stone gives details of the plan in a book just published entitled "Compulsory Spending." He points out that people with small incomes from $3,000 to $5,000 would not be affected for they already, as a class, spend more than 75 percent of their incomes, but the man who enjoys an income of several hundred thousand dollars would find himself forced to spend two-thirds of it to escape the tax.

The procedure, according to Mr. Stone's plan involves no confiscation. It does not take something away from one group and give it to another. The plan, he believes, would do away with all income and inheritance taxes and would put millions of dollars into circulation.

Covington Spoke At Rotary Luncheon

Mayor M. E. Covington was the speaker at the Rotary luncheon Wednesday noon. He told of his recent trip north and of his visit to the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago.

H. M. Johnson, manager of the Avon theatre, was introduced as a new member. Visitors at the luncheon were Ben Burch of Lake Wales and T. B. Link of Columbia, Tenn.

Walton Touchton Graduating From Riverside Academy

Gainesville, Georgia, June 4 — (Special) —Commencement exercises of Riverside, famous military school that has its permanent quarters in this city and winter home at Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Florida, were featured today by the graduation address delivered by the Honorable Philip Weltner, Chancellor of the University of Georgia System.

The graduating class of eighty-nine cadets included Cadet Walton C. Touchton, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Touchton of Avon Park. Cadet Touchton, who received Riverside's Scientific Diploma, was a member of the Theta Sigma Fraternity, and of the Academy's fifty-piece cadet band which last winter won first place at the annual Gasparilla festivities at Tampa, Florida.

Avon Park Has New Industry

Peyton Covington, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Covington has established a shop to make flower wall pockets out of bamboo. He is making a large shipment this week for Memphis, Tenn. He gets $1.00 each for out of town shipments, and 50c each for local orders. Peyton will use the money he makes out of his new enterprise to finance a trip with the Flaming Arrow Council of Boy Scouts to Washington this summer.

Bartow Methodist To Speak at Hut

Texaco Bulk Plant Office Safe Blown

Professional safe crackers made their appearance in Highlands county Monday night when they blew the safe in the office of the Texaco Company bulk plant at Avon Park. The yeggs evidently thought to make a haul and expected to find a large sum as the banks were closed Monday and Saturday, and Monday collections would be on hand. They were doomed to disappointment, the total cash on hand being $13.00 and a few odd cents, all in change. They left the checks that were in the safe but the currency had been placed elsewhere for safekeeping.

The robbery was discovered Tuesday morning by Manager O. C. Wilkes when he opened the office. The safe was a wreck with the door strewn over the floor. The wires which were connected with the battery to explode the nitro-glycerine were also on the floor.

The sheriff's office was notified and they called in Atlantic Coast Line special officers for assistance. No clews were found nor fingerprints, the yeggs evidently having used gloves.

The deed was committed about 12:30 a. m., Tuesday, three explosions having been heard about that time. No attention was paid as those who heard them thought it was an automobile backfiring.

Development Is Looked For

Northern Interests Prefer Ridge Section After Tour of State

Extensive developments of great interest to Avon Park and vicinity are expected to materialize in the near future, it was learned today, following the visit of J. Glen McSparran of New York and Columbus, Ohio, and Hal Stanpey Fox of Lancaster, Pa. They have toured Florida for the past two weeks investigating conditions for a group of northern interests and have paid special attention to climatic conditions in the summer time.

They have investigated citrus and agricultural development and are especially sold on the Ridge section. They have discounted the idea that Florida is a torrid and infested state in the summer and state they have never spent a more ideal summer vacation in their lives.

They returned to the north to convince their associates that within five miles of Avon Park everything can be grown that can be grown anywhere else in the state or in any other state. They expect to return in about 60 days prepared to close definitely some development projects.

With reference to the proposed Orange Blossom Trail they state that if this starts at Key West and continues through to Mackinac in Northern Michigan it will be one of the greatest highways in the world. All the maidens will want to travel it and the old timers also, in order to revive bygone memories.

17 Counties Make Big Saving On Bonds

Stuart, June 6.—(FNS)—Seventeen Florida counties saved $1,381,552 and retired over $2,009,000 in bonded obligations by taking advantage of the Kanner bill which permits counties to redeem bonds with gas tax funds, according to State Representative O. A. Kanner.

The above figure includes the principal only, Mr. Kanner stated, and does not take into consideration a considerable saving represented by past due coupons attached to the bonds, the interest being wiped out.

80 Percent Stolen Cars Are Recovered

Tallahassee, June 7. — (FNS) — Out of 190 automobiles reported stolen in Florida this year up to April 1, law enforcement agencies recovered 154, or about 80 percent, according to reports tabulated here by the office of George Wilder, acting state motor vehicle commissioner.

This was a decided improvement over last year when during a similar period 223 automobiles were stolen and 145, or about 58 percent, were recovered by their owners.

AVON PARK BOND DEBT DISCUSSED BY CITY COUNCIL

Hall and Smith Favor Making Adjustment and Settlement

Avon Park's bonded debt came in for a great deal of discussion at the adjourned council meeting Thursday night. Council members appeared to be divided, Messrs. Smith and Hall calling for a refunding program, a settlement of some sort either through the Wilcox bill or not, in fact some definite program. Chairman Pendleton, aided and abetted by the city attorney, urged a continuance of the present method of trading bonds for taxes and buying bonds when and where able. He also urged a raise in millage to take care of the payment of taxes with bonds and refused to listen to any other suggestion. Councilman Jordon did not take part in the discussion but apparently sided with Hall and Smith.

Councilman Smith said the city is going into the hole faster every day, asserting the mounting delinquent interest and coupons far exceed the bonds being retired for taxes and by other means. He urged that the city take advantage of the Wilcox bill and some sort of settlement with bond holders to be arrived at.

Councilman Hall told of a settlement arrived at by St. Cloud which apparently is in the same position as Avon Park. An account of the settlement is in the Municipal Record and Hall read this. The bond principal has been refunded over a long period of years with interest starting at one percent and gradually working up to five percent. All delinquent interest has been wiped out except that these coupons will be settled at 15½ cents on the dollar with money from delinquent taxes used for this purpose and tax payers getting the advantage. Provision is made for the city to buy bonds at the market and thereby reduce the principal and all trading in bonds for taxes appears to be eliminated. It was asserted that 50 pieces of property had been sold in St. Cloud since the settlement was made. The total cost of this settlement was placed at $500.

Pendleton and Pardee strongly opposed any such action, the former claiming the city did not have $500 with which to effect a settlement. The city attorney threw cold water on the Wilcox bill, saying he did not think it would help Florida cities. He also claimed the bonds cancelled for taxes and by other means offset the increasing delinquent interest. This was denied by Smith.

Hall had a letter from Harry Bennett, a representative of the holders of a large block of bonds offering to submit a plan. It is thought his plan is similar to that at St. Cloud and he will meet with the council in the near future.

Following a talk by E. G. Todd, who was accompanied by W. T. Coates and Paul Jones, the council voted to donate $100 to the Scenic Highlanders for the purpose of advertising the Ridge section at the Chicago Exposition this summer. The donation will be paid $25 per month. Mr. Todd told of the objectives of the Scenic Highlanders in getting a Federal highway through the Ridge and in advertising this section. All the council present were agreed that it is ideal publicity.

The route of the proposed new highway was discussed and it was urged that as many as possible attend the meeting of the state road department at Sebring next Monday. The city offices will be closed and as many stores as possible asked to close for a portion of the day in order to give the business men a chance to attend.

Gerald Bee of Sebring, representing the Prudential Insurance Company, presented a plan for group insurance of city employees, they paying part of the premium and the city part. The plan received favorable comment but action was deferred in order to see if a local insurance agent had a similar proposal to make. This was done on recommendation of Councilman Smith.

City Clerk Shockley reported on the progress being made at the airport and said the FERA authorities expected to have it complete by August 9. He also reported a cave in the Mall at the West End filling station which had been repaired.

BRISBANE
THIS WEEK

Socialists in Office
New Deal Complete
Religious War in Mexico
War Changes Rapidly

Americans, old-fashioned, surprised to find old professed Socialists selected by the government to supervise and criticize plans for industrial recovery, may find comfort in Europe.

Socialism has become, in many places, an important part of the world's political machinery, and without serious damage to what Russia calls "capitalism."

Ramsay MacDonald, formerly a worker in the British mines, now prime minister, is a Socialist, always has been. In his cabinet working with him harmoniously, are some of the most conservative men in England, including old school Tories.

Socialists have been prominent in the French government for years, even "extreme Socialists."

Old Clemenceau himself, the aged "Tiger," who kept Germany out of France and sent the kaiser to Holland, was a Socialist, enemy of aristocracy and the church.

It was his hostility to the church that prevented his being chosen President of the French republic after the big war.

Socialists, like others who believe they could make the world over and better, often find when power comes that the world is doing about as well as it can and that the wise plan is to go along with it.

Prof. Raymond Moley, who ought to know what is what in the new era, writes:

"With the passage of the stock exchange bill, the New Deal is practically complete. There is nothing that the President or any responsible member of the administration has said to indicate that any important further development of governmental authority is contemplated. This will be reassuring not only to business, but to the vast masses of people who do not want democracy to undertake too much.

"The problem now is one of administration. It is the practical business of perfecting the structure that has now been built. That means a problem of getting men to do it, for good men make good administration."

Mexico witnesses the beginning of another war against the Catholic church, in the important state of Sonora. The governor, Rodolfo Elias Calles, has ordered every church in Sonora closed and gives the priests 12 hours to leave Sonora.

Already religious services had been reduced to an absolute minimum. Governor Calles of Sonora is the son of P. Elias Calles, who years ago closed churches in many places in Mexico.

Peiping reports Soviet Russia "rapidly placing the entire area of outer Mongolia upon a wartime basis," getting ready for Japanese invasion.

Conditions have changed since the last Russian-Japanese war. About 100 years before that war started, Charles Fourier in France predicted that Japan would fight Russia, and Russia would lose because of difficulty in transporting troops across Lake Baikal, and so it turned out.

There will be no question of transporting troops across Lake Baikal in the next war. Flying machines, with poison gas and explosive bombs, will fly high above Lake Baikal. That lake, like the English channel, once so important... is now as though it did not exist.

Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, says Great Britain will not undertake to preserve China's territorial integrity or her "open door" and will not participate in any action "against Japan or any other power in other parts of the world unless the United States gives its full co-operation."

You ask yourself: "When did Uncle Sam volunteer as world-wide policeman and chief chestnut-puller-out for the British empire?"

Secretary Hull, seeing war in the distance, says militarism must be curbed. The best and only way to deal with foreign militarism is to have here in the United States the machinery necessary to curb it, in case it should turn in our direction.

In the noble world of "sport," which fills so many American pages, and occupies the intellects of millions except when they are listening to the radio or sleeping, the noble red man easily adopts the white man's "sport ethics."

In New Orleans, Tommy Marvin, Indian wrestler, was wrestling with Chief Chewcki, also Indian. "Clamping a chin lock on the chief, Marvin calmly filled Chewcki's eye with tobacco juice." Chewcki, confronted by "a condition, not a theory," conceded the fall.

It is almost a pleasure to read further on "Chewcki won the last two falls and the bout by knocking Marvin unconscious."

House Committee Votes to Impeach Judge Woodward; Troops Suppress Labor Riots in Two States; Chicago's Fair Reopened.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

FIFTEEN of twenty members of the house committee on judiciary voted for impeachment action against Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward of Chicago, and it was announced that formal charges against him would be drawn up and presented on the floor of the house within a few days. The house must then decide the matter of impeachment and if it finds the charges substantiated the jurist will be tried at the bar of the senate. According to reports in Washington, flagrant nepotism was to be the major charge against Judge Woodward, this being based on evidence showing he appointed the law firm of Loucks, Eckert & Peterson to many lucrative attorneyships in bankruptcy and equity receivership cases; that his son, Harold, was employed by this firm, and that Harold's compensation was raised from $2,000 to $13,000 a year soon after Judge Woodward began making those appointments.

Judge C. E. Woodward

The vote in the committee was nonpartisan. Three members were absent. Eleven Democrats and four Republicans voted for impeachment. Of the five casting their ballots against impeachment four were Republicans, one was a Democrat.

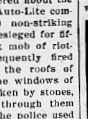

LABOR troubles became so serious that state troops were mobilized in Minneapolis and in Toledo, Ohio, and despite the presence of soldiers there was a great deal of rioting and violence. In Minneapolis the striking teamsters and building tradesmen rejected an order of the regional labor board to end the strike immediately, and insisted on fighting to a finish. The employers had accepted the labor board's terms. Governor Olson had brought 3,700 men of the National Guard to the city. In the midst of the disorder on the streets, Congressman Francis H. Shoemaker was arrested for inciting violence and was found guilty, being given the choice of ten days in the workhouse or a $50 fine.

Toledo's battle centered about the plant of the Electric Auto-Lite company in which 1,800 non-striking employees had been besieged for fifteen hours by a great mob of riotous strikers and frequently fired upon by snipers on the roofs of nearby buildings. The windows of the plant were all broken by stones, and torches thrown through them started many fires. The police used tear gas bombs but were roughly handled by the mobs, so six companies of state troops were called out and they, marching with fixed bayonets, scattered the strikers and released the imprisoned employees.

Later the strikers and their friends gathered again and fought furiously with the troops, showering them with bricks and paving stones. Dozens of soldiers were injured and finally the exasperated guardsmen fired on the mobs, two rioters being killed and many wounded. Tear gas and the more powerful "knockout" gas were freely used by both sides.

Charles P. Taft, son of the late President, was sent from Washington to Toledo as special mediator for the national labor board of the NRA.

SENATOR ROBINSON, majority leader, heard rumors that some senators were planning a filibuster for the purpose of killing the administration's tariff bargaining bill. He said he was ready to squelch any such scheme by prolonging the daily sessions of the senate. "If that is the intention we will meet at 10 a. m., and stay until 8 p. m.," he said. "And if that doesn't work, we'll come here at 9 a. m. and stay till the same hour in the evening."

Sen. Robinson

Minority Leader McNary said "none of the fellows" on the Republican side was involved in the embryonic filibuster. He declared they were ready to vote as soon as general debate ended.

The house, after two days of work, passed the administration's industry loan bill and sent it back to the senate. The senate has approved a bill fixing the maximum total RFC five-year loans at $250,000,000 and limiting the amount the twelve federal reserve banks could advance to $280,000,000.

But the house discarded the senate provisions and inserted its own, which increased the RFC total to $300,000,000 and cut the reserve bank maximum to $140,000,000. The differences were to be adjusted in conference.

CLARENCE DARROW'S report on the NRA, submitted some time ago to President Roosevelt, has been made public, and in the main it was just what was expected from the Chicago lawyer and his colleagues. It analyzed eight of the more important codes and found that seven of them foster monopolies, help big business and do a lot toward putting small concerns out of business. These seven codes are: Electrical manufacturing, footwear division, rubber manufacturing, motion pictures, retail solid fuel, steel, ice, and bituminous coal. The report folded no monopolistic features in the cleaners and dyers' code.

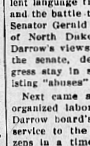

Administrator Johnson and his chief counsel, Donald R. Richberg, had been given the report, previously for the purpose of composing a reply to it. This they did, to the extent of 50,000 vigorous words. They answered all the Darrow charges and asserted the report was "superficial," "intemperate," "inaccurate," "prejudiced," "one-sided," "inconsistent," "nonsensical," "insupportable," "false," and "anarchistic."

Darrow came back with a caustic answer that drew further violent language from the NRA chiefs, and the battle then became general. Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, a supporter of Darrow's views, spoke for hours in the senate, demanding that congress stay in session until the existing "abuses" are corrected.

Next came a bitter attack from organized labor, asserting that the Darrow board's report was "a disservice to the nation and its citizens in a time of great economic stress."

A row broke out in the Darrow group that left several members not on speaking terms with one another. William O. Thompson, a member of the board, accused Lowell Mason, the board's counsel, of tampering with the records.

PAT HURLEY, former secretary of war, appeared before the senate civil service committee in a warlike mood and angrily denied that there be a full examination of charges that he was party to a purchase-plot hatched by Republicans at his home in Virginia. He declared that it should be determined whether the Department of Justice is out to smear all members of the preceding administration or whether A. V. Dalrymple, the special assistant attorney general who made the charges, is "just an irresponsible falsifier in charge of the wooden pistol section of the Department of Justice."

Patrick J. Hurley

Mr. Hurley bitterly criticized the department for "arresting one of the men whom they declined to name had informed them of the meeting at Hurley's home, where prominent Republicans were alleged to have planned how they could hold on to patronage jobs despite a change in administration. Dalrymple denied that he had made the charges himself.

CHICAGO'S exposition, A Century of Progress, is reopening for another summer with a big military parade and much ceremony. The fair has been reconstructed and redecorated and is a bigger and better exposition this year than the one that called forth so much enthusiastic praise in 1933. The best of the former exhibits and features have been retained, but many new ones have been added and everything has been brought up to date. There are 12 new foreign villages for the edification and amusement of visitors; the Chicago and Detroit symphony orchestras will give long series of fine concerts; the scientific and manufacturers exhibits have been vastly improved and enlarged; the "Midway," bettered in various ways, has been moved to the lake front of the island; and the active exposition is resplendent with new colors and new lighting.

CLYDE BARROW, classed as the worst of the "bad men" of the Southwest, and his woman companion, Bonnie Parker, were trailed to Gibsland, La., by Texas rangers, led into ambush near that village and shot to death by the Texans and a posse as they sought to flee in their automobile. The two had a machine gun and a shotgun in their hands as they died, and their car was loaded with weapons and ammunition. Barrow, who had been in the police news for eight years, was charged with the death of 12 men and with many robberies.

CONSTITUTIONAL government has been discarded by another European nation. In a bloodless coup d'etat the Bulgarian army took control of that country under a military dictatorship. King Boris either sponsored the movement or quietly yielded to it. He promptly signed about thirty decrees that were prepared in advance, dissolving the parliament and putting the new government in power, with Kimon Georgieff as premier. Members of the former government and several other persons were arrested. Not only in Sofia, the capital, but throughout the country the military leaders were in control of the situation and no disturbances were reported except from that part of Macedonia that now belongs to Bulgaria. For years the Macedonians have been demanding their independence, and they do not approve of the Fascist government set up by the army.

King Boris

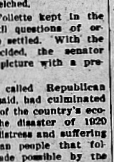

The program of the new government was set forth in a long manifesto calling for the creation of a disciplined, orderly state. The principal alterations in the structure of the government include a sharply reduced membership in the legislature, which is to be under firm control of the administration, a reduction in number of the country's political subdivisions, a general weeding out of municipal and provincial authorities, and an intensification of attention upon the interests of villages and rural regions.

The new premier is a veteran soldier and politician whose mild appearance belies his firmness and activity.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT told congress what kind of silver bill he was willing to accept—the compromise explained in this column recently—and such a measure was promptly introduced by Senator Key Pittman. Some members of the senate silver group were far from satisfied with the bill, but there was every indication that it would be passed before the end of the session, the senators from the silver states accepting it in lieu of anything better from their point of view. If they sought to defeat it the probable result would be a long fight and no silver bill whatever. The bill really leaves to the discretion of the President the making of silver a part of the monetary system and the stabilization of its price.

DR. GEORGE F. ZOOK has resigned as United States commissioner of education, effective July 1, and President Roosevelt has designated John Ward Studebaker of Des Moines, Iowa, to succeed him. Doctor Zook, who formerly was president of the University of Akron, will become director of the American Council of Education in the fall.

FOR more than thirty years the radical La Folletteites of Wisconsin have been operating as Republicans and under that label have competed, often successfully, for control of the state. Now this is to be changed. With the aid of delegates from labor and farm organizations, the followers of Senator La Follette, assembled in convention in Madison on June 14, formed a new party and named it the Progressive party. No statement of principles was made, all attempts to bring one forth being squelched.

Senator La Follette

Senator La Follette kept in the background until questions of organization were settled. With the party name decided, the senator came into the picture with a prepared speech.

The period called Republican prosperity, he said, had culminated in the collapse of the country's economic life. "The disaster of 1920 and the acute distress and suffering of the American people that followed were made possible by the betrayal of the people's trust by men in both parties, controlled through their party organizations by privileged interests."

John J. Handley, secretary of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, told the delegates he was disappointed in the character of the conference. Speaking deliberately and carefully for organized labor he said he had hoped and expected the conference was to bring together all of the forces of liberal thought. If it does not, he said organized labor will "not go along."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—President Roosevelt's determination to advise congress as it leaves for home after the current session, of some of the things that he wishes to present for its consideration next January has injected a new factor into the forthcoming political campaigns. Most of the careful observers here think his maneuver was politically smart. They take the view that he actually has presented to the country and the voters the general outline of his future legislative program in order that he can have something of a mandate given the representatives and senators who are chosen in this fall's elections.

Smart Politics

I haven't seen any signs yet that will indicate how the Republicans and other anti-Roosevelt forces will attempt to meet this new factor, but it is quite apparent that they will force debate upon many of the projects of the New Deal that have already been enacted into law, as well as the embryo plans contained in his late messages. Some leading thinkers around Washington have thought that Mr. Roosevelt is taking advantage of the natural attacks that will be promoted by the opposition in order to ascertain for himself whether he has gone far enough with his social reform movements. It seems there can be no doubt that he will be in a position to know the temper of the country after the voters have heard his various New Deal items discussed. And he is being suggested almost in the same breath that if the votes strike down many of the administration wheelhorses and those who have stood by the New Deal, the administration will not press some of the more far-reaching social legislation that Mr. Roosevelt mentioned in the series of messages lately sent to congress.

Examining the proposals, such as old age pensions, unemployment insurance, revision of NRA principles relating to minimum wages to meet practical instead of theoretical conditions, and several others, one can hardly escape the conclusion that only the subsidy of them all this time when they will become fodder for campaign debate will enable the country to know its own mind. In other words, as I see the picture, if the country as a whole wants such far-reaching changes in its laws, it will show it by sending proponents of such proposals to seats in congress.

I have heard some discussion, however, to the effect that in taking the bold step of giving congress advance information of his thoughts, Mr. Roosevelt was seeking at the same time to present a more complete picture of his New Deal." By so doing, of course, he naturally can expect that progressive New Deal reform ideas will have something more to use in advocating retention of the changes. They will not be in the dark as to what the future holds. Many of them will have studied these carefully if they have become a bit shaky about the course that the President is following. At any rate, if the Democrats emerge from the fall elections with anything like their present strength, the congress that meets in January, 1935, will be no tractable, or more so, than the present one. Anyone can see the President would be unable to put over his New Deal without an obedient congress, hence he is staking that confess, too, by disclosing plans in advance.

It is not too much to say that there has been a tremendous stiffening of backbone in congress in the last several weeks. It has been more pronounced, I believe, than at any time since Mr. Roosevelt took over the reins. So, there might possibly be some trouble brewing on Capitol Hill. This condition is regarded by some as being the more clearly discernible because the President frankly said he did not urge enactment of his proposals at this session.

Trouble Brewing

There has been no secret about the fact, around here, that Mr. Roosevelt wanted to get congress out of town at the earliest possible date. I have heard it suggested even that he had hoped he could get the leaders to bring about an adjournment before the silver question got out of hand. But that desire was lost, if he entertained such hope. He has had to swallow some silver legislation which, it is quite apparent, he does not like. Political expediency made it necessary.

No one here has been able to explain just why the silverites have been able to muster so much strength. There are only seven silver states, and from the political standpoint, it is to be assumed that they cannot wield the power that is inherent in legislation affecting the more populous areas. But the silver bloc has persisted in its efforts. It has been recalcitrant in many ways, and if never was licked completely. As far as I am concerned, I cannot see where it is going to be of any particular help. But the silver advocates tell me I am wrong, and, whatever else may be said, their views forced Mr. Roosevelt into a corner where he had to take a small dose of silver medicine.

It was easy to see a week or so ago that if the President had been able to stall off the silverites a little longer, he would have succeeded in getting an adjournment before he was compelled to agree that the country's money should be backed by 25 per cent of silver coin or bullion. Financial sharps assure me that actually the legislation on silver will do nothing more than raise the price temporarily to those who have silver to sell.

Senator Borah's recent outbreak on the President's proposal for authority to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements with foreign nations is typical of the dangers confronting the administration in a session where adjournment is too long delayed. Senator Borah, though Republican and a member of the minority in congress, has a strong following in congress and throughout the country. When he arises in his place, therefore, and challenges the administration, urges the country to return to constitutional government and says there is no niche alongside of Washington and Lincoln" for a brave leader to preserve a free government—when Senator Borah makes that challenge, a good many persons are going to ask, whither are we going? The Borah speech was such a ringing call for clear thinking that I believe his concluding paragraphs are worthy of recording for their consideration:

Borah's Outbreak

"We have had emergencies before, have had more than one hour of peril. The Constitution has been sufficient and sufficient in all instances. And now, of all times, we should show our faith in, and our devotion to, our form of government. Now, more than at any other time in our history, we should by word and deed demonstrate the faith which made this Republic, and which will preserve it.

"In the midst of world turmoil, Washington pinned his faith to Constitutional democracy. That steadfast soul never wavered, never doubted. In the midst of civil war Lincoln declared that the government of the people, for the people, and by the people should not perish from the earth. There is a niche alongside of these two immortal defenders of free government for the brave American who in his place of power accepts the challenge of these apostles of terror and fanaticism, of these enemies, avowed enemies of free government and of personal liberty, and against all comers declares his faith in the efficiency and the worth of the republican institutions and his determination to maintain and preserve them in all of their integrity at any cost and at all hazards."

It is to be noted that Senator Borah made no reference to any individual now entrusted with power. His challenge was to the New Deal in its entirety, according to the opinions that I have heard expressed. From many directions I have heard views that the Borah speech probably would arouse more fright among opponents of the New Deal than anything that yet has happened.

The inability of some government officials to carry out assignments given them by President Roosevelt, as a result of overlapping of authority or assumption of power by others under the completeties of the present governmental setup, has begun to attract attention. There are numerous instances that can be cited, but lately I encountered one that appears to me to be typical.

"Ding" Hits Snag

Mr. Roosevelt brought J. N. Darling, who is probably one of the greatest cartoonists of our day, to Washington as chief of the biological survey. Mr. Darling, whose signature "Ding" is known far and wide, is a zealot in his desire to restore game birds and animals to the numbers of earlier years.

The biological survey is a unit of the Department of Agriculture. Funds with which Mr. Darling was to acquire waste land, timber, swamps and swail, were to come from the vast appropriation managed by Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior. There was to have been $25,000,000, and Mr. Darling said when he came to Washington that he believed a splendid job could be done with that sum. He proceeded upon recommendations of a Presidential commission to make plans for acquisition of the necessary lands and was moving ahead steadily pace when he learned that Mr. Ickes had declined to make the funds available as planned.

THE roving correspondent of the Kansas City Star once called on me and said: "The women all say you are a woman hater. How about it?" . . . I said I wasn't, and that all the women didn't say so. In support of this statement, I gave him a letter from a woman in Texas, but he made no reference to it in the two columns he wrote about me. The woman said: "I am barely nineteen, and have a deformed body. I am familiar with you through the Kansas City Star, and I want to give the devil his due, for you are the writer who has done me most good. Being a cripple, I have a wicked and fast temper, but you have taught me to control it for my own benefit. Your constant teaching that one should behave for one's own sake, as a matter of profit, because it is finally the easiest and best way, I have been able to understand and practice with more success than any other."

Early man had a strong disposition to whip his wife, and often did. I have seen a picture in an old book of an angry husband entering the house carrying a switch, and of his wife cringing and begging for mercy, as I did as a child in the presence of an angry father. (In this old picture, also, is the figure of a woman evidently the wife's mother, who begged for mercy, too, as my mother begged for mercy for me.)

Wives have taken the switch from the hands of brutal husbands. Men have granted equal rights, but the women are still screaming as though regularly whipped. Men of today submit to the gross absurdity of police women, stateswomen, but the women are as busy as ever in telling of wrongs long since remedied.

As far back as the time of Sllerius women insisted on rights that were actually wrongs. Sllerius, in his memoirs, tells of one of his wives going bareleggedd, although she was of considerable age, and it didn't look well. Sllerius objected to the custom. Any reproof of women today sets them screaming as though the reproof were a beating.

Men of the present generation are the heirs of the experience of men of an older time. Thus we have learned of the greater usefulness of signaling water by turning a tap, instead of a more troublesome journey to a spring. The modern bank, hotel, railroad and school are merely cogs in the wheel of civilization as it goes round endlessly, and is slowly improved because of the disposition of men to seek greater conveniences. A clean, dependable man is a development of good behavior, as is a useful machine or system lightening our labors and our worries.

If I should marry again (I have about as much notion of it as of being born again) I think I should relieve my friends of the bother of a public ceremony. In our extravagant and wasteful American way, marrying has become more troublesome than a fire. The bride is worn out, the father bankrupt, and all those who read the prenuptial notices in the newspapers are disgusted. There is also the trouble of attendance on the ceremony and reception, to say nothing of presents, which especially do not wish to attend or buy, and for days previously are glowered at by wives who know they are trying to get out of it; for wives love weddings.

Why would it not be a good idea to give half the present amount wasted on weddings to starving old soldiers, the poor, union labor organizations, railroads and bankers in distress.

It would be a great convenience to me if some of the army of writers now useless would devote their time to reading, and print collections of the choicest of good things found in novels, essays, histories and the mass of writing of every kind. I thank James Truslow Adams for a sentiment he lately buried in a book, and which I happened to encounter: "The wisdom of the past," he says, "is not to be undone in the present by a few telephones, motor cars or radios."

• • •

One of the best of our monthly magazines is a book for editors to decide what shall go in, and what kept out. These men must be among the best and most experienced of editors. In a recent issue one of them writes an article explaining how members of the board make their selections. I should say the board acted wisely in deciding on this article for publication, since it interested me, and probably interested others; here was fine citizen editorial judgment. But the same issue contained an article I have decided in the weakest I have ever seen printed in a publication of distinction; so far as I can judge, it lacks wisdom, reader and editor. I failed at every point. . . The work of the best men is frequently so weak that it amazed me.

"Don't talk, please," urged Kate, drawing the blankets about his shoulders.

She sat close beside him then for a long interval, it seemed. He wanted to talk further but could not. The flow and ebb of his strength was marked by definite sensations. He felt it reach a low point and commence to build again.

"Has she landed?" he whispered.

"Just now. . . . She's drawing out her canoe. . . . Another moment of silence. "She's looking back, now. . . . Good luck, Mary!" He felt that she was waving her hand. "She's going into the timber, now. . . . She's gone."

Kate rose and went to the fire.

"Here's a broth made of smoked meat and meal," she said. "Take it now, and then more coffee. Mary said it was the thing to do. She knows. I felt so helpless. . . ."

Obediently he sipped from the cups she held for him, his head held against her side, and after that he slept for a time. It was a deep sleep. He was conscious of the girl's presence all the time and when he finally roused she was standing under the fly looking down at him. He smiled weakly.

"More to eat?"

"If it's from your hand," he answered.

He was definitely better by then, but still events and people were tangled in his mind.

"Things are all jimmied up," he confessed. "Of course, I remember getting shot at. Was that right here? Was, eh? . . . And I recall about Franz trying to get away and killing me and then drowning. But after that it's . . . it's kind of like a photograph out of focus. Fuzzy. How'd Mary get here, for instance?"

The girl sat cross-legged beside him and told all that had transpired during his period of unconsciousness.

"And you all alone!" he murmured. "Holding my life inside my body with your hands." He looked at her hands. "They're so small," he said. "I . . . I've wondered a lot about you. Why, a girl like you all alone and thinking you had a dying stranger along!"

"Not a stranger," she said gently. "It was hard, but chiefly because I felt I owed so much to you."

He experienced an odd embarrassment at such pointedly personal talk. He was not strong enough for that yet, he found.

"Nobody showed up. I'll bet they went down river. I was so . . . so up in the air that I never left any warning at the landing."

She told him of her futile attempts to send up smokes.

"Hain, eh? That explains it! Chances are some of 'em went right by us yesterday and never guessed we were so near. It's clear as a bell now and there's no wind. Hadn't we better try the smoke signal again?"

"Certainly! I'll get the fires going, now."

"Wish I could help. You're no girl to be lugging fire wood for a big buck like me."

"If you never help another person in your life, and if you live to be older than the hills, you've done your share," she said soberly and turned away to hide the emotion in her eyes.

When the fires were going she returned to his side. For an interval she spoke no word and then, when he smiled inquiringly, she asked:

"Who are you?"

"I'm Steve Drake. I knew your dad when I was a kid. . . . Kind of a rotten deal, pulling wool over your eyes the way I did. But . . . I'll tell you how it was."

He went back to that day when Old Jim Flynn saved him and his father from perishing in a blizzard. He told it all, just as it had happened, from that time on. Kate did not interrupt. When he narrated how LaFane had handled Young Jim tears came into her eyes.

Breaks marked the story, of course, times she made him stop and sip food and stimulant.

"Well, that's it," he finally ended. "I've been an imposter, but it seemed to be the only way. If you'd have known about the kid before he got straightened out, you'd have been frantic; if the men realized I was a stranger, they never would have stuck to the job. Now, if Mary gets to the Laird's on time, we're set. If not . . ."

"If not, then it never can be said that a brave fight wasn't made! I . . . What can I say to you, Steve Drake? Words are so empty. All I can say, I guess, is to echo the words of Mary Wolf: You are my friend."

"Those," he said, "are the sweetest words I've ever heard."

She surrendered her hand when he reached for it and he gripped it close.

CHAPTER XIV

IT WAS Young Jim himself who sighted the three smokes. He and McNally hastened toward the island and within minutes of their arrival the older man was on his way down the lake with plenty of orders for the detachment of men he would surely find there.

"Doctor?" Steve snorted when Kate gave her first instruction. "I should say not! Why, I'll be good as new tomorrow. I'll take it easy and go out with the boys."

He would do no such thing, Kate insisted firmly. He would stay in this very spot until a doctor gave him permission to move.

And so a larger tent was brought in before night and more blankets and an abundance of food.

Late the next day the doctor appeared. He looked Steve over carefully, redressed the wound and questioned and prodded.

"In a day or two," he said. "You keep quiet here for a day or two and then you can go out safely."

"Good Lord! You mean I've got to be babied and waited on when I feel fit as a fiddle?"

"Safer that way," the doctor asserted.

LaFane stepped close to the bed. then. He had brought the doctor and carried news of Mary as well. She had made the trip through the timber successfully and with half an hour to spare had reached MacDonald's. The old Scot, having no other course, had signed the receipt and accepted the money.

"But he didn't want to do it," LaFane added. "He's pretty mad. He says you're a good fisherman and a good liar. If Mary hadn't gotten there on time he'd never have gone through with the deal."

"I'll have to make my peace with him when I'm permitted to do as I

"Those," He Said, "Are the Sweetest Words I've Ever Heard."

please again! He's a nice old codger and I'd hate to leave the country with him feeling this way."

LaFane and the doctor moved down to the beach, leaving Young Jim and Kate in Steve's tent.

"Leave the country?" the girl asked. "What do you mean by that?"

Her brother looked sharply at her, catching a repressed quality in the tone.

"Why, what'd I stay here for?" Steve countered. "The actual, real, certified Young Jim's all set to go. I don't aim to stick around here and ask the Flynns to make room for me."

"Ask them?" she cried. "Why . . . when . . . Don't you see . . ."

Her voice choked up and her eyes misted.

Steve looked at Young Jim and at the girl, and then turned his head away.

"Gosh," the boy said, "we'll be needing you, now that it's going to be such a whale of an operation. That is, if we could get you to stay."

"Well, that's fine of you. . . . I haven't anything in particular to do. There are things . . . reasons . . . that is—" He cleared his throat as he felt color mounting into his cheeks. "What I'm trying to say is this: if you've a job of work that I can do I sure'll welcome a chance at it."

"Oh, yes; there'll be work, all right," said Kate as if her mind were on other matters. "Besides . . . you see . . ."

She, in her turn, was stammering and Young Jim, uncoiling his long legs, grinned as he rose.

"Where you going?" Steve asked.

"Mostly out of the way until you two can say some of the things that seem to be on your minds," he chuckled.

[THE END]

Early Pharmacopoeia

The greatest landmark in the history of pharmacopoeias, is a work published in London in 1617. Ten committees to compile it had been appointed twenty-eight years earlier. This work listed 1,028 simple drugs and 832 preparations and compounds. Among the substances it recommended were cream of tartar, flowers of sulphur, calomel and sugar of lead. Add it told how to prepare goats, blood, young swallows, earthworms, millipedes, coral and precious stones, how to purify wool fat and how to dry the lungs of foxes.

ON BEING LATE

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

BARBARA WILLIAMS is the sort of person who never arrives anywhere on time.

If you have an appointment to meet her on a certain street corner at a certain time, you can depend upon her being at least a half hour late, and safely regulate your own time of arrival accordingly.

No matter what the circumstances or how important the function Barbara concerns herself not with promptness.

Of course she is always full of excuses and apologies, and actually gives the impression of being frightfully sorry that "something intervened so she just couldn't make it."

Moreover, she is a wholly lovable person, possessed of an incredibly sweet disposition, and delightful company.

And when she looks at you with deep concern and pleading written in her rather attractive brown eyes, you are apt to cover your annoyance with a forgiving smile and hope that next time she'll make an effort to be more accommodating.

There have been numberless suggestions offered for cures for people having this being late fault.

But most always these suggestions are offered by persons who don't have to live with folks like Barbara Williams.

It is quite simple when you are not dependent on a Barbara Williams for one thing and another, to suggest tyrannical methods of effecting a cure.

Dick Williams, who is Barbara's husband, is an easy going sort of person, and for a time after their marriage in 1928 his wife's tardiness didn't bother him a great deal.

But as their wedded life progressed, the thing began to get on his nerves.

After a year of meeting Barbara downtown once each week on Thursday nights in order that they might dine out together, and having to wait 30 minutes beyond the scheduled time, he spoke of the matter, at first casually, then more seriously and finally in an outburst of anger.

And on such occasions Barbara would turn the full power of her large brown eyes on him and nod her head in sad agreement.

"I don't blame you, darling," she'd say. "Not a bit. I should try to be on time, shouldn't I?"

And Dick would rage: "You certainly should! Why, it's positively selfish. Insulting. Folks invite you places and you can't even pay them the courtesy of arriving on time! You ought to be ashamed!"

"I am," Barbara would admit humbly. "I am ashamed, precious."

And "precious" would get up and take her in his arms and kiss her and tell her he was sorry he had talked to her so, but something really ought to be done about it.

• • •

Which would bring the matter to a close, and Barbara on the day following would accept an invitation to a bridge party at three in the afternoon and would arrive at 3:30, having forgotten or disregarded her firm resolutions made in Dick's presence on the night before.

The thing at length reached a point where Dick, driven to exasperation, his nerves on edge, his pride injured, determined that some drastic step would have to be taken to effect a cure.

It must end.

He loved Barbara, he knew, more sincerely and deeply than did the average husband in this day and age.

She had no other faults that were worth mentioning.

She qualified in every respect as a wife and companion and helpmate in his chosen profession.

Yet, despite everything—everything, by golly—she had to be cured of this one deficiency, or one, perhaps both of them, would go crazy.

And forthwith Dick set himself down to think and scheme and plan to the best of his ability.

And after an hour of deep mental labor, he hit on an idea.

Today was Tuesday. Friday next would mark their second anniversary.

It meant a lot to Barbara. A great lot.

She had been talking about it, planning on it for weeks. She had bought a new frock in which to celebrate.

She had selected the place where they were to dine, chosen the theater which they would attend afterward.

It was, in fact, a big day in her life.

A thrilling, romantic, cherished hour during which she could be alone with her husband and tell him how perfectly adorable he was and how happy she'd been during the past two years.

Dick's plan, taking all the above into consideration, was, on the surface, cruel.

And yet he told himself savagely it was no more than she deserved.

It would, he wagered, cure her once and for all of her great fault.

And so, having decided to promote his brilliant idea, Dick advised his wife that on Friday evening he would meet her on the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets at exactly five o'clock.

He would, he said, leave the office early in order to get there.

This would allow them plenty of time for dinner, without having to hurry.

Barbara was thrilled.

She thought he might have forgotten.

The fact that he had voluntarily mentioned the great day increased her happiness 100 per cent.

She kissed him tenderly and agreed to the time and place of the meeting.

During the intervening days before Friday Dick felt rather low.

He hated to resort to such tricks; he hated to make Barbara unhappy if it could be prevented.

She was so wholly lovable and trusting. Yet he must go through with it. It was the only way.

She must be cured.

And so when, at last, Friday rolled around, Dick left the office early as previously planned, but instead of driving in town toward the agreed meeting place, he turned his car toward the suburbs and home.

He drove slowly, moodily.

Once or twice he almost changed his mind, but the traffic was heavy and turning about would be difficult.

He parked his car in the garage which he rented, a couple of blocks from the house, and sat in it a few moments, unhappily contemplating the blank wall ahead.

It was now 5:15, and he judged that Barbara would just about be arriving at Tremont and Boylston.

He couldn't conceive of her being more than a quarter hour late on their anniversary.

• • •

Presently he climbed from the machine, closed and locked the garage doors, sighed heavily, and started home. It was, he reflected, going to be a pretty trying scene when they faced each other later that evening.

He pictured her now, standing on the corner, looking about for him, an anxious expression in her brown eyes.

He saw her garbed in her new gown, the dress she had bought and preserved for this occasion.

He saw the eager anticipation in her face; the growing disappointment and despair when he didn't come.

"It's no more than she deserves," he told himself savagely.

"I'll cure her once and for all of this habit of being late. She deserves it!"

Yet as he swung into the walk and unlocked the front door, a feeling of utter misery swept over him.

He felt like a cad, sneaky, utterly unmanly. He wished mightily that he had decided against the idea.

It was an underhanded thing to do, a pretty low way of getting back.

He entered the living room, flung his hat on the divan and slumped dejectedly into a chair.

Guilt and shame and misery were written on his face. And suddenly he gave way to the urge he had been fighting against.

He leaped to his feet, glanced at his watch, discovered it was exactly 5:35 and decided that if he hurried he could get in town in ten minutes. He could offer some excuse. A flat tire. Engine trouble. Anything to explain—

Abruptly he stopped, stared, swallowed, rubbed his eyes.

The bedroom door had opened.

Barbara stood there, resplendent in her new gown, her hat on her head, gloves in her hands, bag tucked under her arm.

At sight of him her eyes widened. She rushed across the room.

"Darling! Oh, precious, how sweet of you to think of coming home to get me! I wondered if you were intending to let me ride in on the dirty street cars. And you got here just in time, too. I was just about to leave! Another moment and I would have been gone!"

Dick stared and blinked and tried to adjust his confused thoughts.

Five thirty-five his watch had said.

And she was just about to leave! And on their anniversary, too!

Rage seized him.

He opened his mouth to speak, checked himself, saw her big brown eyes looking at him so tenderly, so lovably, so adorably.

A feeling of helplessness, utter, stark helplessness took possession of him. He wondered what he'd better do, wondered what he could do, wondered what anyone else in his place would do. And then decided that, under the circumstances, there was only one thing he could do. And he did it. He drew her toward him, folded his arms about her and kissed her.

Ostrich Fast Runner

The ostrich, one of the swiftest creatures on earth, uses its outspread wings to help it in running, and it can thus reach an amazing speed. Unfortunately for the bird, it does not run straight, but in large circles, so that a hunter mounted on a horse much less swift than the ostrich can cut corners and thus get within gunshot of his quarry. The ostrich feeds mostly on grass and vegetable matter, but it will eat almost anything, including small animals and birds.

Fashions for Juvenile Smart Set

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SUMMERTIME means vacation time, which brings clothes-planning time to hand for mothers who would dress their style-conscious children fashionably and appropriately.

Since camp life plays so important a part in the modern child's life, it might be well to consider the clothes question from that point of view. Designers of juvenile sportswear declare there is an increasing tendency to feature bright color in camp and playtime apparel. Because materials are strong and sturdy is no reason why they cannot be gayly colorful and attractive. So, the cotton broadcloths, the poplins, the gabardines and the argentine cloth which serve so admirably for children's recreation and everyday utilitarian clothes are coming out in unusually cheerful hues this season.

For youngsters who romp through woods and climb and wade and attend "gym" classes the idea of shorts with inner bloomers that are brought up high so as not to be visible, is advocated. The newest shorts are pleated at front and back so as to give the appearance of a skirt.

After play hours, what then to wear? Why not a cunning tailored ensemble, on the order of the clever three-piece which the pretty little girl, to the left in the picture, is posing? The ensemble theme is being played up enthusiastically for children this season. Being so interchangeable with blouses and such, it is a guarantee of a well-dressed appearance for most any child at most any hour of the day. In fact, an outfit like this may be considered almost an entire wardrobe in itself.

With the jacket on, this lilliputian tailleur of marine blue flannel looks as modish as mother herself wears on cool days and on shopping tours. Looks nice, too, with the coat removed, for that wee button-up-the front blouse of matching blue flat crepe is most wonderfully chic.

The older girl in the picture, who is helping little sister don her smart jacket, has on a sleeveless dress which also admits of interchangeable blouses. The one she is wearing while she poses for her photograph is a Mexican-stripe wash silk. Of course it would have to be stripes, for they are smart for everybody, old and young, this season.

Style interest in little girls' dresses is said to center around the necklines and sleeves in the newer models. Which accounts for the wide pleated collar which finishes the neck of the wee frock of pale pinkish soft taffeta which the tot to the right in the group is wearing. You will note also that the sleeves are fancifully smocked. The vogue for taffeta has extended into the juvenile realm. If you prefer pastel crepes they are equally as good style for tiny folks' party frocks.

That sweet child in the foreground looks adorable in her airy-fairy frock of embroidered organdie.

PLEATING IS USED QUITE EXTENSIVELY

There is much pleating in use now, and it isn't all used for neckwear, although it does seem as though nothing fluffier than neckwear would be found. Ruffles and frills galore are lovely on some and so absurd on others. Narrow side pleatings can, however, be worn by almost any figure, which is not true of the dipped polonaise.

The time has come to speak a word in favor of brown. The season is so clearly a blue one that women have been inclined to underestimate the high style interest in brown. During the first showings of the imports for midsummer brown was impressive and something of a surprise for, by that time, women were so happy that it was a blue year.

With the interesting brown and white, brown and grege and brown and beige prints came lovely costumes in which yellow and brown were pleasantly associated.

Brown Still in Picture as Nifty Summer Color

While it is true that navy and black are leaders in spring fashions for daytime, it becomes increasingly apparent that brown is to be reckoned with. It is an important color by itself and especially in prints, particularly printed crepes.

The brown prints are featured in separate frocks, in jacket costumes and also in long coat ensembles and redingotes, and it's interesting to observe the definite favor shown combinations of plain and printed crepes, featuring brown shades.

A favorite version of the jacket costume with monotone skirt, worn with printed jacket and bodice, and costumes of this sort is attractive when done in polka dots, dots in dime or quarter size. Brown with white is then the favorite combination.

WATCH NECKLINES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A change in necklines is in progress. High cut fronts are giving way to low cut fronts after the order of the charming neckline which graces the gown pictured. This stunning cafe dress is fashioned of a handsome chiffon bembery. Slim, long sleeves accentuated by three tiers of fine pleated net ruffles and a soft satin bow are intriguing details.

PRESERVING CACTUS

One of the last official acts of President Hoover was to set aside 60,000 acres on the slopes of the Santa Catalina mountains, northeast of Tucson, Ariz., as a permanent home for the giant cactus. The area was proclaimed a national monument, with the object of preserving to posterity a representative stand of the peculiar flora developed through the ages by the arid, semi-desert conditions of that region.

In addition to the other forms of desert growth, the tract contains a large amount of the saguaro, suwarro, or monument cactus, specimens of which reach a height of 50 to 60 feet. The Santa Catalinas are the eastern boundary of the area in which giant cactus are found exclusively in the Southwest.

Jerry Carter's "seven good reasons" seemed to be good enough for most of the voters.

Trammell supporters who might otherwise get worked up because the Senator is high man in the first primary are reminded that John Martin was high man two years ago, but Dave Sholtz is governor.

Red Newton's claim of five readers reminds us that every columnist has at least three readers—the writer, the linotype operator and the proof reader. Who are the other two, Red?

Congressman Peterson's outstanding victory was well deserved and most gratifying to his large following throughout the district. We know of no reason why he should not have many active and useful years ahead of him in Congress.

It is unusual for a state officer to receive so much favorable comment on the conduct of his office as is accorded to Col. J. M. Lee through the press of the state for the manner in which he is making good as state comptroller. Service is the watchword of his organization.

One of the things this country needs is more Clarence Buddington Kellands, Rex Beachs and Damon Runyans to write good old American stories and fewer Princess Maries to clutter up our magazines with their unending memoirs, in which few of us can have any conceivable interest.

Congratulations to Fred Touchton, high man in the State Senate race in the Pasco-Citrus-Herdando district. He eliminated one of the most experienced politicians in that part of the country in his first fling at politics. His Avon Park friends are confidently expecting him to win the run-off.

Add new industries: Bamboo pockets for flowers. Large bamboo poles are used, cut in convenient lengths. These are notched between the joints, forming a number of water-tight pockets, one above the other, into which flowers may be placed as in vases. They are effective and artistic when used for decorating churches, halls, or banquet rooms. Mayor Covington was the first to use them locally, and his son is now making and shipping them commercially.

Legislative candidates in many cases have pledged themselves against any new forms of taxation. Without disparagement to them and believing their intentions to be good, we do not see how it will be possible for them to live up to that promise. If faced with loss of revenue from one source, new taxes will have to be imposed. If the homestead tax exemption amendment carries, it is our belief that a sales tax is inevitable. Home owners, who seek relief in the amendment, should keep this thought in mind, and choose between a tax on their homes and some form of sales tax.

It isn't often that we gloat over the defeat of a candidate, but we feel like laying aside the Golden Rule and the Ten Commandments, or whatever it is that should govern our feelings at times like these and do some 24 karat gloating. We refer to the defeat of Pat Whitaker in Tampa. Ever since the time he waved our good old honest rag around in the court room and called it a "yellow sheet," to the amusement of a crowd of political hangers-on that he was hired to entertain, we've been laying back for this opportunity of handing Pat the well-known Bronx cheer, and we do so with a great deal of satisfaction. Thanks, Tampa, for affording us the pleasure.

The Times begins the publication of the delinquent tax list with this issue. It fills five pages of the paper. Had the complete list, which included all lands now held by the state, been published as provided by Act of the Legislature, the list would have been five times as large. But newspapers in the sixty-seven counties designated to publish the list for this year petitioned the attorney general for a ruling to eliminate the state lands from the list, as useless and unnecessary expense, and thus saved the ultimate taxpayers thousands of dollars. It is doubtful if this unprecedented bit of altruism on the part of the newspapers is fully appreciated by the public. The saving to the state—and loss to this paper—amounted to about $4,000.

The United States senatorial race shows conclusively that the people of Florida want a change. Not all of them centered on the same man but 62 percent of them voted for a change. That Trammell is on the way out is the unmistakable verdict. According to latest returns, which are practically complete, Trammell received 77,000 out of a total of 200,000 votes, or 38 percent of the total. Pepper got 73,000, or 36 percent of the total. Thus, Trammell, the old wheelhorse—heretofore considered invincible—could muster but 2 per cent more strength than did his youthful and comparatively inexperienced opponent. The other candidates received about 50,000 votes. It is reasonable to believe that a majority of these were protest votes. If that is so, they will turn to Pepper rather than to Trammell as a second choice. Pepper's close vote has given his supporters added confidence. Many on the fence, will fall to his side. It looks like Pepper is a sure winner.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

Well one thing we've learned in this political campaign is that radio stations know more about the value of TIME than newspapers know about the value of SPACE.

When a candidate called his opponent a "liar" it was news and the newspapers gave him front page space but if he wished to tell the radio listeners the same story it cost him several dollars a minute with the dough on the barrel head.

From the viewpoint of hard-boiled radio executives the fact that so-and-so was about to apply for the job of Congressman was just plain old fashioned advertising in front of a microphone, although it might be NEWS to some dumb editor.

And Mr. So-and-so didn't protest. He laid his coin on the counter and spoke his little piece. But if the next issue of the newspaper failed to tell its readers exactly what he said in the news columns, he would rave and carry on somethin' scandalous.

Both radio and newspapers are effective publicity agents. In the present day political aspirants find it profitable to use both. If publishers were to refuse free space as religiously as the radio refuses free time, newspapers would command greater respect and advertising linage would take a jump.

This will probably never occur, however, for most newspapers place public service above personal profit. Editors will take off their coats and work to elect the men they consider best qualified to lead as a public duty.

Junior-Senior Banquet

A delightful event of Tuesday evening was the banquet given by the Junior class honoring the Seniors, at the Highland Lakes hotel.

The dining room was beautifully decorated with garden flowers for the occasion. A color scheme of red, white and blue was used in the table decorations, this being the Senior class colors. Mint cups of red, white and blue were placed at each Junior place and a package of life savers tied with red, white and blue ribbon representing diplomas, were favors for the Seniors.

Immediately upon assembling at the table every one joined in singing "America." Miss Marjorie Lacey was accompanist for the evening.

Woodson Sadler, president of the Junior class, was toastmaster for the occasion and gave the toast of welcome which was responded to by Clyde Clark, president of the Senior class.

A toast to the faculty was given by H. L. Bishop and the response was given by Prof. R. S. Funderburk. Then a toast to the Seniors by Carmen Booth and the response by Clyde Clark.

Colonel F. N. K. Bailey, superintendent of public instructions gave a most interesting talk.

The versatility of the Senior boys was tested by the Junior girls when they called upon them to do impromptu stunts, which afforded much amusement to all present.

A delicious menu of fruit cocktail, congealed salad, baked chicken and dressing, potatoes, peas, rolls and ice cream decorated with tiny flags, and cake, was served.

The following hostesses, hosts and guests enjoyed this most delightful affair.

Seniors—Martha Flowers, Evelyn Clements, Virginia Baldwin, Mildred Wray, Jane Heubner, Marcia Weisheyer, Letta Reck, Marie McFarland, Willa Mae Sibley, Josephine Folsom, Zula Maude Ford, Dorothy Schweigart, Lucille Saggus, Clyde Clark, Sport Mercer, G. D. Godwin, A. B. Wells, Arthur Johnston, Eddie Flowers and Lamar Stewart.

Faculty—Prof. and Mrs. R. T. Fairey, Prof. and Mrs. Joe Bass, Prof. and Mrs. E. F. Carmichael, Col. and Mrs. F. N. K. Bailey, Prof. G. F. Smith, Prof. R. S. Funderburk, Miss Atchley, Miss Bryant and Miss Pearson.

Juniors—Martha Weaver, Mildred Martin, Allie Lee Belin, Marie Hancock, Mary Coen, Dorothy Hobbs, Sally Moore, Lora Mae Bachand, Carmen Booth, Patsie Loomis, Raleigh Foster, Otto Foster, Fred Reddick, Ralph Helms, Charles Bost, Woodson Sadler, Walton Crews, and H. L. Bishop.

Glee Club Ladies Have Social Time

The members of the Avon Park Ladies Glee Club met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. George Guthrie. The husbands of the members were present also and a delicious covered dish supper was served on the lawn. Singing and contests were enjoyed by the 30 guests and members present.

It is planned for the Glee Club members to get together for a social time once a month during the summer months.

Former Avon Park Couple Wed

Of much interest to their many friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Mertice Coker and Mr. L. D. Geiger, which took place in Fort Myers June first. The Rev. C. P. Tew of the First Baptist church of that city officiated.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a lovely green ensemble with white accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Geiger left immediately for a wedding trip on the East Coast, from which they returned this week, stopping over in Avon Park Tuesday to greet friends and relatives.

Mrs. Geiger is the daughter of Mrs. Viola Hendry of Arcadia and the niece of Mrs. Gilbert Stebbins of Avon Park. She is a graduate of the Avon Park high school, having been an honor student of the class of 1930. After graduation she served as office secretary for the Avon Florida Citrus Corporation.

Mr. Geiger is the son of Mrs. B. Geiger of Tampa, where he has lived the greater part of his life. He is the manager of the Grand Central service station in Tampa, which he operates for the Standard Oil Company.

The young couple will make their home in Tampa.

Mrs. Hartt Entertains Wednesday Club

The Wednesday afternoon bridge club was most delightfully entertained this week, by Mrs. E. W. Hartt, at the S. Y. Hartt home on Lake Letta.

The guess were invited for ten a. m., and after two progressions of contract a very delicious luncheon was served by the hostess to the guests.

Prizes were won by Mrs. S. E. Booth and Mrs. D. G. Perry for high and second high scores.

Those enjoying Mrs. Hartt's hospitality were Mrs. T. A. McNicholas, Mrs. C. E. Lanier, Mrs. H. F. R. Reck, Mrs. M. E. Covington, Mrs. N. H. Trent, Mrs. D. G. Perry and Mrs S. E. Booth.

Monday Club With Mrs. Melton

Mrs. E. E. Melton entertained her bridge club Monday afternoon in the solarium of the Anchemel apartments.

The guests arrived at one o'clock and desert was served, after which the afternoon was spent playing contract. At the close of the games Mrs. C. Parke Anderson was awarded the prize for high score.

Those present were: Mrs. A. H. Able, Mrs. M. E. Covington, Mrs. J. Paul Garber, Mrs. C. Parke Anderson, Mrs. D. G. Perry, Mrs. Paul Jones and Miss Myrtle Jones of Bartow.

Baptist Sunday School Picnic

The annual picnic of the Baptist Sunday school was held on Thursday afternoon of last week at the picnic grounds on Lake Anoka.

Games, swimming and contests were enjoyed until five o'clock when a bountiful picnic lunch was spread and served.

Approximately two hundred and twenty-five members and friends of the Baptist Sunday school were present.

Unique Party Tuesday Evening

The Hi League of the Methodist church enjoyed a dress parade party at the home of George Gerrard on Tuesday evening.

The guests came dressed in their best and with great difficulty the judges decided that Dorothy McNicholas was the prettiest girl and George Gerrard the handsomest boy. To decide which of these two had the best senses, they were put through severe tests. If they failed to pass the test someone had to pay a fine for them and so on through the evening—plenty of fun. To climax this perfect evening of merriment, it was announced that the big surprise of the party was a watermelon cutting.

Mr. Smith, who lives on the Wauchula road had grown these melons especially for the young people of the Methodist church.

Thirty-five girls and boys were present to enjoy this affair.

Meeting of Missionary Society

Mrs T. H. Hughs was hostess to the new circle of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church on Tuesday afternoon at her home on Canfield street. The meeting was opened with repeating the Twenty-third Psalm, which Mrs. Ginn used as the scripture lesson for the Bible study.

Mrs. Ginn presented the study in a most interesting manner.

Mrs. W. M. Hetherington read the minutes of the last meeting.

A short business session was held with Mrs. Maxwell in charge.

It was voted that this circle would have a special project this month, doing more social service work.

The benediction was repeated in unison.

Mrs. Hughs had planned a musical contest which was enjoyed immensely, after which she served iced grape juice with angel food cake and divinity.

Garden Club Met Monday

The newly organized Garden Club of Avon Park met Monday night at the home of Mrs. G. P. Thayer on North Lake avenue.

Mrs. Thayer was elected chairman of the club and a committee consisting of Mrs. C. S. Donaldson, Mrs. C. E. Crabtree, and Mrs. W. H. Kempton, was appointed to prepare a constitution to be presented at the next meeting.

Mr. H. R. Currie was present and gave an interesting talk on the mall project and also told of the city beautification plans that are being made.

There were about twenty present.

The next meeting will be held next Monday night at the home of Mrs. Thayer at 7:45 o'clock.

Mrs. Abrams Hostess to Club

Mrs. Phil Abrams was a charming hostess Wednesday afternoon when she entertained her bridge club at her home on East Pine street.

A variety of colorful flowers were arranged about the party rooms where two tables were in play. After the games a delicious ice course was served by the hostess.

The prize for high score was won by Mrs. Roland Droit and Mrs. J. L. Wells received the second prize.

The guest list included Mrs. W. E. Dawson, Mrs. Lester Armstrong, Mrs. Roland Droit, Mrs. J. L. Taylor, Mrs. E. E. Smith, Mrs. J. L. Wells, Mrs. Charles Bell, and Mrs. A. R. Clark.

Mr., Mrs. McFerrin Entertain

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McFerrin entertained a few friends last Thursday evening at bridge. Two tables were in play and at the close of several interesting progressions Mrs. Paul Garber was awarded the prize for ladies' high score and Paul Garber received high prize for the men.

Dainty refreshments were served and a birthday cake was presented to Stewart Thayer, this being his birthday anniversary.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ware, Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Garber, Miss Carlotta Patterson and Stewart Thayer.

Vernon Lanier, student at Boll's Military Academy in Jacksonville has arrived to spend the summer with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lanier.

CAP AND BELLS

IT PAID BEST

The school teacher was giving her class a talk on the sayings of the wise.

"Now, here is a very good example of what I mean," she said. "'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

"Teacher," piped up little Bertie, "my father says he always sticks to that motto in his business."

"How noble of him!" said the teacher. "I'm sure he must be a very fine man. By the way, Bertie, what is your father's profession?"

"Oh, he's a boxer," replied the boy proudly.

The Tummy Letters

The primary teacher was helping the children to tell the difference between the letters "d" and "b."

"Johnnie, how can we tell these letters apart?" asked the instructor.

"Well," answered the lad, "one has its stomach in the front and the other has it in the back."

Lost Prophets

First Roman (at a Christian massacre)—We've got a capacity crowd, but still we're losing money. The upkeep on the lions must be pretty heavy.

Second Roman—Yes, sir. These lions sure do eat up the prophets.

Question All Right

At a college examination a professor asked: "Does the question embarrass you?"

"Not at all, sir," replied the student. "It is quite clear; it's the answer that bothers me."—Toronto Globe.

His Masterpiece

"Which of your works of fiction do you consider the best, Mr. Penwright?"

FROCK THAT MAKES PARTICULAR APPEAL TO HOUSEKEEPERS

PATTERN 1625

For smart housekeepers—this captivating frock that will give you a neat and attractive appearance during your busy daytime hours. And as for making it—there's just nothing difficult about it at all. The front and back yokes are economically cut in one, the semi-belted waistline is readily adjusted, and of course, pockets are indispensable. A tubbable cotton print with either self or contrasting ruffling would be nice. The Instructor—illustrated sewing lesson—will help you put the frock together step by step.

Pattern 1625 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 takes 3¼ yards 39-inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

NOT TAKING CHANCES

"You'll have to send for another doctor," said the one who had been called, after a glance at the patient.

"Am I so ill as that?" gasped the sufferer.

"I don't just know how ill you are," replied the man of medicine; "but I know you're the lawyer who cross-examined me when I appeared as an expert witness. My conscience won't let me kill you, and I'll be hanged if I want to cure you. Good day."—Border Cities Star.

His Dual Self

Some Hollywood actors were discussing loneliness when one, a noted egomaniac, remarked: "I could stand being on a desert island with the one I love."

"Wouldn't you rather have some one with you?" quickly asked another of the party.—Boston Transcript.

Shifting the Blame

"Did you ever dodge any taxes?"

"No, sir," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "I can't figure out my tax returns for myself and I can't help it if I happen to employ a special expert who has his own ideas."

Marble Cross, Too?

She—How dare you say my father is a wretch!

"WE PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO:"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON JUNE 14 thousands of Americans will, as a part of the annual celebration of Flag day, repeat this sentence: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all." It has been said that "The Pledge to the Flag" has been repeated more than any other quotation from modern literature. For that reason the man who wrote it and the circumstances under which it was written deserve to be remembered.

It is singularly appropriate that this pledge, which has been repeated so many times by so many thousands of school children, should have been written by a member of the editorial staff of the publication which for so many years was Young America's favorite magazine—the Youth's Companion. Francis M Bellamy was his name, and at the time of his death on August 28 1931, the memory of his greatest claim to distinction was revived by his widow who gave an interesting account of the origin of the pledge.

A little group of men, who in 1891 believed the flame of patriotism was dying out because of momentous developments in industrial and political circles, sought to "fan the spark into new life," she explained.

This effort resulted in President Benjamin Harrison proclaiming October 12, 1892, as the first national holiday in honor of the discovery of America. Delegated to write a proclamation as part of the original ceremony, Bellamy produced a 27-word pledge that stood the test of time.

Chief among the leaders of the movement," said Mrs. Bellamy, "were President Harrison, James B. Upham, publisher; William T. Harris, federal commissioner of education; and Mr. Bellamy, a member of the editorial staff of the Youth's Companion.

"Mr. Upham conceived the idea of a revival of patriotism at a time when material things occupied the attention of most people. His first plan was to place an American flag over every schoolhouse. As a result, 25,000 flags waved on as many school buildings.

"Then the suggestion was adopted for a national holiday. Committees were formed, public men were interviewed. This handful of men virtually consecrated their lives to the task of obtaining governmental recognition of Columbus day.

"Mr. Bellamy saw congressmen, senators and others in the public eye. He interviewed President Harrison and Grover Cleveland among others.

"Afterwards he aroused interest among congressmen by inducing them to give interviews endorsing the project, to newspapers. It wasn't long before senate and house passed a joint resolution giving the President authority to proclaim the holiday, with standard exercises in public schools.

WOODROW WILSON

"At last everything was completed except the opening proclamation. The secretary of state asked Mr. Bellamy to do that. Mr. Bellamy nominated Mr. Upham, but the latter refused. After many long weary hours over the draft, my husband produced the pledge that has remained unchanged since then.

"And that's all," she concluded. "All except that Mr. Bellamy's health was imperiled in his work to rediscover America 400 years after Columbus landed."

Although the United States is one of the youngest members in the sisterhood of nations of the world, her flag is one of the oldest in the world. Aside from the swallow-tailed, Savoy colors of Denmark, adopted in 1219, and the flag of Switzerland, which dates from the Seventeenth century, history records no national flag with a longer continuous life than ours.

When the Second Continental congress on June 14, 1777, adopted a resolution which read: "Resolved, That the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation," the French tri-color had not yet come into existence. The present British flag dates only from 1801. Germany changed its flag after the fall of the empire in 1918, but even the flag used during the World war was less than 50 years old.

The American flag has three symbolic names—the Stars and Stripes, the Star-Spangled Banner and Old Glory.

The name Stars and Stripes dates, of course, from its very beginning, and is based upon the description of the banner in the flag resolution of June 14, 1777.

The Star-Spangled Banner dates from the War of 1812. Orators may have called our flag by that name before that time, but it remained for Francis Scott Key, a young Maryland lawyer who was detained on a British warship during the bombardment of Fort McHenry on the night of September 12, 1814, and who saw "by the dawn's early light" of September 13 "that our flag was still there," to express his joy in a poem which was later set to music and which took the country by storm.

The name Old Glory dates from 1824. "On August 10 of that year a crowd had gathered at the wharves of Salem, Mass., to witness the departure of the brig, Charles Daggett, which was about to set out on a round-the-world cruise. Master of the Charles Daggett was Capt. William Driver, noted for his sturdy Americanism and his deep love for his country's flag. So his neighbors had brought him a fine American flag to be hoisted to the masthead of the brig. When the new banner had been run up in its place and rippled in the breeze in all its beauty of red and white and blue, Captain Driver, looking aloft, had a sudden inspiration. "I'll call her Old Glory, boys, Old Glory!" And thus was another symbolical name for our flag born.

Flag day has been the inspiration for a number of memorable tributes to our national banner. In a Flag day address during the World war President Wilson said: "This flag which we honor and under which we serve is the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a nation. . . . It is fitting that we celebrate the day of its birth; and from its birth until now it has witnessed a great history, has floated on high the symbol of great events, of a great plan of life worked out by a great people."

On Flag day in 1914, Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior in President Wilson's cabinet, speaking before employees of his department, delivered a eulogy which has become something of a classic in the literature of the flag. It is the following:

THE MAKERS OF THE FLAG

This morning, as I passed into the land office, the flag dropped me a most cordial salutation, and from its rippling folds I heard it say: "Good-morning, Mr. Flag Maker."

"I beg your pardon, Old Glory," I said, "aren't you mistaken? I am not the President of the United States, nor a member of congress, nor even a general in the army. I am only a government clerk."

"I greet you again, Mr. Flag Maker," replied the gay voice; "I know you well. You are the man who worked in the sweltor of yesterday straightening out the tangle of that farmer's homestead in Idaho, or perhaps you found the mistake in that Indian contract in Oklahoma, or helped to clear that patent for the hopeful inventor in New York, or pushed the opening of that new ditch in Colorado, or made that mine in Illinois more safe, or brought relief to the old soldier in Wyoming. No matter; whichever one of these beneficent individuals you may happen to be, I give you greeting, Mr. Flag Maker."

I was about to pass on, when the flag stopped me with these words:

"Yesterday the President spoke a word that made happier the future of 10,000,000 peons in Mexico; but that act looms no larger on the flag than the struggle which the boy in Georgia is making to win the corn club prize this summer.

"Yesterday we made a new law to prevent financial panics, and yesterday, maybe, a school teacher in Ohio taught his first letters to a boy who will one day write a song that will give cheer to the millions of our race. We are all making the flag."

"But," I said impatiently, "these people were only working!"

Then came a great shout from the flag:

"The work that we do is the making of the flag.

"I am not the flag; not at all. I am but its shadow.

"I am whatever you make me; nothing more.

"I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become.

"Sometimes I am strong with pride, when men do an honest work, fitting the rails together truly.

"Sometimes I droop, for then purpose has gone from me, and cynically I play the coward.

"Sometimes I am loud, garish, and full of that ego that blasts judgment.

"But always I am all that you hope to be and have the courage to try for.

"I am the Constitution and the courts, statutes and the statute-makers, soldier and dreadnaught, drayman and street sweep, cook, counselor and clerk.

"I am the battle of yesterday and the mistake of tomorrow.

"I am the mystery of the men who do without knowing why.

"I am the clutch of an idea and the reasoned purpose of meaning.

"I am no more than what you believe me to be and I am all that you believe that I can be.

"I am what you make me; nothing more.

"I swing before your eyes as a bright gleam of color, a symbol of yourself, the pictured suggestion of that big thing which makes this nation. My stars and my stripes are your dream and your labors. They are bright with cheer, brilliant with courage, firm with faith, because you have made them so out of your hearts; for you are the makers of the flag, and it is well that you glory in the making."

We owe our official celebration of Flag day to President Woodrow Wilson. On May 13, 1916, he issued a proclamation designating June 14 of each year as Flag day, and it has been so observed since that time.

As for the honor of being the "originator" of Flag day, it would be difficult to award that title to any one person, since several Americans contributed to the idea.

One of them is a woman, Mrs. Laura B. Prink, widely known as the "Mother of Flag day." During President Wilson's administration she was editor of the Patriotic Instructor in New York and in that publication suggested setting aside June 14 as Flag day. Her suggestion was forwarded by the Daughters of the American Revolution in New York to the President, and his proclamation of May 13, 1916, followed soon afterwards.

Another who seems to have a just claim to the title of "originator" is Benjamin Altheimer of New York. Under the title of "Flag-Day Man," the New Yorker magazine in its issue of June 14, 1930, told his story as follows:

If the lady on your left tires of your more ponderous dinner topics, you might tell her about Benjamin Altheimer. "Benjamin Altheimer," you might say, "is responsible for Flag day; did you know that?" To prove that you are not just trying to be funny, you can give her the facts about Mr. Altheimer, and how he thought up Flag day. Here they are: He is a real person, alive, and well, and lives right in old New York. Although eighty, he can still get about spryly. No one in the world gets a greater thrill out of walking up Fifth avenue on June 14 than he does. After all, he put those flags out there—yours and mine and Lord & Taylor's and everybody else's.

Mr. Altheimer thought of setting aside a special day for the Spangled Banner, back in 1910. He was on a visit to San Antonio, and he watched with sparkling eyes the flag-retreat ceremony at Fort Sam Houston one afternoon. It impressed him mightily. He was about sixty then, and a great patriot in a quiet way, a lover of the flag of the Betsy Ross tradition, of the United States of America generally (oddly enough, he was born in Germany.)

He came to America as a young man, plunged into banking and brokerage out in St. Louis and, in no time, made millions of dollars. His gratitude for the quick success that he, a foreign-born Jew, had in a strange country, took the form of philanthropy and patriotism. He gave to hospitals, founded libraries, aided government projects, financed charities, led off campaigns for the relief of victims of fire, flood, war, and unemployment. Always in his mind, however, there lurked a desire to do something for America in a big way. The incident at San Antonio was his inspiration. A great reader of our history, he knew (or if he didn't, he looked it up) that June 14 was the day on which congress accepted Betsy Ross' flag. Then, with the same spirit and gusto that had put over charitable campaigns, he started his drive to interest the nation in its flag. He began on St. Louis. He promised to give a fine flag to any institution which would formally observe Flag day on the fourteenth. The Second Presbyterian church of St. Louis was the first to respond—in 1911. Other churches, synagogues, and schools fell in line. Mr. Altheimer soon had to go into the flag-purchasing and presenting business on a big scale, with secretaries and others helping him to meet the demand. Since he was retired from banking, he could give all of his time to it. In 1912 St. Louis, as a municipality, celebrated Flag day. Flags were everywhere. All traffic stopped for a full minute at a given time. Mr. Altheimer was happy. He was happier yet when, in 1917, he got to President Wilson in person, and Flag day was made a national occasion. In 1927, the one-hundred-and-fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the flag, the United States Flag association invited Mr. Altheimer, along with Lindbergh, to attend its celebration in Washington. He couldn't go, because of illness, but the association sent him a cross of honor and a citation, signed by Coolidge, "for having planted the true appreciation of the flag in the hearts of the American people."

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Weak Stomach

PERHAPS you have a weak stomach and have tried various medicines without getting satisfactory results.

It is only natural when you have an "ache" in the stomach, heartburn, a tendency to vomit after eating, and attacks of diarrhoea that you should take "stomach" medicine.

As a matter of fact, what is called weak stomach may be due to a number of causes that have nothing to do with the stomach proper.

For instance, any poisoning in the system from bad teeth or tonsils, infected gall bladder or a sluggish intestine, can so upset the stomach that it will not do its work properly.

As you know, the majority of people who have real stomach trouble such as ulcer, have brought on that condition because of their mental make-up—nervous, irritable, excitable.

Another cause of weak stomach is an incorrect diet; that is a diet not suited in quantity or quality to the ability of the digestive tract.

Dr. F. Kraupl, Berlin, says that the whole series of symptoms of weak stomach, up to the actual formation of ulcer, could often be avoided—if the diet were always right for the stomach.

The thought then is that in all cases of weak stomach, the individual should get a complete examination by dentist and doctor and everything that may be interfering with the work of the stomach removed or corrected.

It has been often noted that where test meals and X-ray examinations have been made, no deformity, delay in emptying, or other ailment was found, yet the individual suffered with a "weak stomach." By simply changing his habits, studying his diet, giving him a little change or vacation, the stomach became strong and free from any disturbances.

In other words, the stomach very often is weak or feels weak because of conditions in the body or the mind instead of in the stomach itself.

Migraine or One-Sided Headache

DESPITE all the efforts of practitioners and research men, the cause of migraine or one-sided headache has not been discovered.

You may remember that an institution, in an endeavor to investigate this ailment, advertised for "victims" to submit to treatment and were forced to turn away many hundreds, such is the number afflicted.

Drs. M. Critchley and F. R. Ferguson, in London, state that migraine may be due to the liver, the eye, the food, and other causes. They believe that there are two factors entering into the cause—something already existing in the body, and something which affects this body condition.

As you know, this is also the thought in epilepsy, the cause of which has not yet been discovered. In epilepsy there is a body condition, and some outside influence such as food is the match that sets off the already prepared fire.

If then migraine may be traced to the liver, to the eye, or other part of the body, or to the food eaten, then the natural method of treatment would be to try to determine which one of these may be giving the trouble in each particular case.

Thus, to investigate a case of migraine, a regular routine should be followed, which would include:

1. A careful previous history of the patient, and also his family history.

2. A physical and mental examination.

3. Careful testing of anything abnormal about the eyes.

4. An X-ray examination of lower floor of the skull, the sinuses, the gall bladder and the intestinal tract.

5. Full examination of the fluid in the brain and spinal column, and the pressure of this fluid.

6. Examination of the blood sugar, the urine, and the alkali reserve of the blood and tissues.

7. Finding the rate at which the body processes work, or the basal metabolism as it is called.

Doctors Critchley and Ferguson state it is useless to fight off an attack and recommend retirement to a quiet darkened room as soon as possible and the use of a quieting drug.

Between attacks some patients are helped by epsom salts, special diets, and sometimes by emental treatment or suggestion.

Sufferers with migraine might well think about the above complete examination and the possibility of locating the cause of their suffering.

OLD TIMERS SEE PASSING OF TWO VILLAGE FORUMS

The motor car is credited with broadening the horizon of whole peoples. With all due respect to benefits accrued, it must be admitted that some debits should be charged up to that contraption.

Recently the passing of the livery stable was hymned as an effect of motorizing communities. With this change must now be considered another metamorphosis attributable to invention. It is the change that has come over the barber shop. And that is a product of another invention—the safety razor.

Between the motor car and the safety razor, the man who remembers his old home town can locate the slump of democracy. It seems a serious charge, but it applies to the destruction of the old-time forums, and among these the livery stable and the barber shop were rivals for first place as the rendezvous of the village debaters. In the more leisurely years, both were scenes of bitter argument over the burning issues, for men were the chief custodians of the country's political welfare, and the livery stable and the barber shop were essentially masculine. Hence they were items in the nurture of democracy, since it was in these forums that the great questions were settled and the preponderance of one policy or another determined prior to elections.

But now all this is changed. The garage has failed to succeed the livery stable, and the barber shop has not only been taken over to some extent by feminine patronage, but it has fallen away as an essential in the convenience of shavers, who have turned by millions to the safety razor and self-shaving. So what has been the result? May it not be ventured that some of the indifference of the electorate, some of the breakdown in party allegiance—both commonly attributed to changes in election methods—are due to the disappearance of these community forums of political discussions?

In a way, the old-timer of the old home town will tell you, the motor car has decentralized community life, even while expanding it. And the safety razor, the same authority will inform you, has dispersed debaters and made bathroom introverts of men who used to argufy while waiting for a shave.—Minneapolis Journal.

MOTTLE LEAF CONTROL PROBLEM IN COUNTY

Two Different Methods Tried In County With Varying Success

By LOUIS ALSMEYER.

There is much interest in the use of zinc sulphate on citrus trees for the control of mottle leaf, which is sometimes called Frenching. This work was first started in California about three years ago and remarkable results were secured by the application of about five pounds of this material per tree to the ground underneath the branches.

Several growers in this section followed the lead of California in these treatments and applied zinc sulphate to the ground under the branches of the trees last year. Results secured from this work in this section have not been at all uniform. In the DeSoto City area excellent results were secured while at Avon Park poor results, if any, were received from that treatment. This year the first work of spraying the trees with zinc sulphate was done in this county and the results so far have been rather outstanding. Last year California county agents tried spraying the affected trees with zinc sulphate and secured good results, showing the advantages of spraying over the application of this material to the ground. In spraying the trees it seems desirable to have as high a concentration of the zinc as is possible without serious burning. This maximum seems to be seven pounds of the 36 percent zinc sulphate or its equivalent to 100 gallons of spray solution. At present this zinc sulphate is added to the lime sulphur spray, used for the control of rust mites, and the results thus far have indicated no decrease in the rust mite control from the lime sulphur. Thus the cost of application is reduced to a minimum. Seven pounds of this zinc sulphate which costs from .04½ to .07c per pound, depending on quantities purchased, will give sufficient coverage for at least 20 trees with a 14 foot tree spread or about .01½c per tree for material, while if the zinc is applied directly to the ground, five pounds per tree will be required at a cost of about .27c per tree. Results from the zinc treatment in spraying are noticed in six weeks while from the soil treatment it is often two or three months.

The above information is given as a progress report and is not in the nature of a permanent recommendation. It is only to be used as an indication of interesting work to be given further trial. Several demonstrations have been arranged in various parts of the county to secure as accurate information on this treatment as is possible. Results secured from this new treatment have been rather sensational in some places and the tendency may be to use this in an effort to correct many conditions for which treatment it is not adapted. It would not be amiss to try the treatment on a few trees in each grove before any treatment is made to the entire grove.

* * *

The Assistant County Agents in Tulare and Kern counties in California, in an article on this subject in the May Citrus Leaves, have reported as follows: "In preparing the suggested spray mixtures the amount of zinc sulphate should be adjusted according to the amount of zinc it contains. The amounts of some of the more common strengths of zinc sulphate which are equivalent to 10 pounds of 25 percent zunc sulphate are given below:

22.5% zinc content, 11 pounds
25.0% zinc content, 10 pounds.
28.0% zinc content, 9 pounds.
36.0% zinc content, 7 pounds.

Zinz sulphate has no effect on lime-induced chlorosis. Growers who are not certain that their orchards are affected with mottle leaf should consult the local county agent's office.

The flock of Dr. L. N. Moody of Sebring is in fifth place and is also making an excellent record. The records compiled from these flocks located in various parts of the state are important to poultrymen.

In the Florida exhibit at the Century of Progress, the exhibit of chemically preserved fruits from Highlands county is occupying an important place. These fruits are preserved in acid in very attractive jars and tell the story of the tropical fruit production in this county to all the visitors at that exhibit.

The chemically preserved fruit shown by this county at the Florida Fair at Tampa has always attracted much attention. Because of the exhibit which was sent to Chicago to the World's Fair it will be necessary to secure practically a new exhibit for this coming winter season. Anyone having mangoes, guavas, and similar fruits which can be used for this exhibit should get in touch with the county agent.

Comedy, Drama and Thrills on Avon Program

A widely diversified program of entertainment is offered at the Avon theatre during the coming week. On Saturday of this week the feature attraction is an especially interesting western, "Rainbow Ranch," starring Rex Bell, (Mr. Clara Bow to you.)

Joe E. Brown stars in a story from the pen of Damon Runyan, author of "Lady for a Day" on Sunday and Monday. This story is entitled "A Very Honorable Guy." This picture is replete with laughs. Joe is supported in this film by Alice White. Brown as a tin horn gambler, down on his luck sells his body for a thousand dollars. After that things happen thick and fast. To tell more would spoil it for those who are planning on seeing it.

Tuesday and Wednesday — Guest Nights—bring an especially fine picture, "Wharf Angel," featuring Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster, Dorothy Dell and Allison Skipworth. The story is laid in the Barbary Coast of 'Frisco and for sheer drama cannot be bested. There is plenty of action and suspense in this film to satisfy anyone and entertainment enough to please those who demand the best.

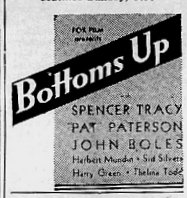

Coming on the heels of "King Kong," "Son of Kong" sequel to its mighty predecessor is billed for Thursday and Friday. The thrills enoyed by those who recently saw "King Kong" will make them anxious to -see "Son of Kong." In search for buried gold the adventurers experience thrill after thrill among which are Cannibles, Sea Serpents, prehistoric beasts, a 12 foot giant ape, and a horrifying earthquake. The picture is sure to please those who enjoy the thrills and chills of adventure.

GLADES NATIONAL PARK 2ND LARGEST IN U. S.

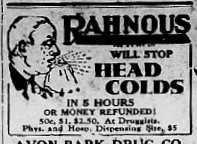

Yellowstone Park Only National Park Larger Than Florida Park

Miami, June 7.—(FNS)—The inclusion of the Everglades National Park in the National Park system is an important link in rounding out the park chain of regions of interest from a national standpoint. It is the only undisturbed region in the United States that is climatically tropical. When developed the park will be entirely different from any now established, and outranked in size only by the Yellowstone National Park. Its wild life is distinct as compared with other National Parks. It is the year around home of vast numbers of tropical birds including the ibis and beautiful egret. The palm, mahogany and rubber trees will furnish a decided contrast to the maple, birch and other trees of the temperate climates.

The Park project was first brought to the attention of the National Park Service in 1929 by Chairman Ernest F. Coe of the Tropic Everglades National Park Association. Senators Fletcher and Trammell, Representatives Ruth Bryan Owen and W. J. Sears played important parts in the early legislative history of the park. Representative Mark Wilcox together with Peterson, Green and Caldwell have worked faithfully in a united effort for the measure during the present session of congress when the bill was finally enacted.

Now that the Everglades National Park has been authorized by congress the state of Florida must procure the land by gift, exchange for other lands, or by purchase. The governor of Florida is empowered to appoint a commission for this purpose by act of legislature. When the park land is acquired and accepted by the Federal Government it will be developed and administered on a basis with all other parks of the national system.

Many nation-wide associations have pledged their support to the project including the American Forestry Association, American Game Association, National Parks Association and others.

EVERY winner in the 500-Mile Indianapolis Race—the most gruelling tire test in the world — drove to victory on Firestone High Speed Tires.

Race drivers know that heat generated by friction inside the cotton cords is the greatest enemy of tire life. These men will not risk their lives on any but Firestone Tires, because they know the high stretch cords in every Firestone Tire are protected by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping.

Gum-Dipping soaks the high stretch cords in liquid rubber and saturates and coats the millions of fibers inside the cords, counteracting destructive friction and heat. It provides greater adhesion between the plies of the tire, and between the Gum-Dipped cord body and the tread.

Firestone chemists and engineers kept pace with new car developments by building stronger, safer tires to meet the exacting demands. Drive in today and equip your car with new Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934, with deeper, thicker, flatter, and wider non-skid tread, more and tougher rubber, more traction, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

Remember, in Firestone High Speed Tires there is Greater Strength—Greater Safety—and Greater Blowout Protection than in any tire made.

THE ADHESION TEST

Note how the rubber in a Firestone Tire clings to the high stretch Gum-Dipped cords. This greater adhesion and strength is made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping.

Note how the rubber in an ordinary tire pulls away from the cords that have not been soaked and insulated with rubber. This causes friction and heat within the cords, resulting in separation.

PERFORMANCE RECORDS
FIRESTONE HIGH SPEED TIRES

—for fifteen consecutive years have been on the winning cars in the 500-mile Indianapolis Race.
This Means Blowout Protection

—for seven consecutive years have been on the winning cars in the daring Pikes Peak climb where a slip meant death.
This Means Non-Skid Safety and Traction

—for three consecutive years have been on the 151 buses of the Washington (D. C.) Railway and Electric Company covering 11,357,810 bus miles without one minute's delay due to tire trouble.
This Means Dependability and Economy

—were on the Neiman Motors' Ford V-8 Truck that made a new coast-to-coast record of 67 hours, 45 minutes, 30 seconds actual running time.

THE NEW
Firestone AIR BALLOON FOR 1934

The new Firestone Air Balloon for 1934 embodies all the improvements in the new Firestone High Speed Tire. The lower air pressure provides maximum traction and riding comfort. Gum-Dipping safety-locks the cords, providing 30 to 40% greater deflection and blowout protection.

Get 1935 low-swung style by equipping your car today with these new tires and wheels in colors to match your car.

NEW O. B. TRAIL TO RECEIVE HELP BY ROAD BOARD

Highway Will Be Designated From Key West To Canada

J. R. Yearwood, prominent citizen of Avon Park, was in Sebring Monday to present his plan to the State Road Board to have a road designated as the Orange Blossom Trail reaching from Key West to Canada.

Mr. Yearwood stated that in a conversation with Chairman Treadway, he was assured that Mr. Treadway was heartily in sympathy with the movement and would gladly designate that part of the highway running through the state as "The Orange Blossom Trail."

The proposed route for the trail is from Key West to Miami on through Clewiston, Moore Haven, Venus, Lake Placid through the Scenic Highlands to Haines City through Orlando to Jacksonville thence through Georgia via Waycross and Augusta to Asheville, N. C., to Bristol, Tenn., over part of the Shennandoah valley route to Bluefield, and Charleston, W. Va., crossing the Ohio river at Portsmouth, through Columbus and Toledo, Ohio, to Detroit, thence to the straights of Mackinac and across the international boundary into Canada.

The proper officials in Ohio, Michigan and Georgia have been contacted regarding the designation of the name for that part of the road through their respective territories and Mr. Yearwood has been assured of their co-operation.

The fact that the road will cross every east and west highway coupled with the fact that it traverses the most scenic part of the United States as well as the great industrial and agricultural sections will make it a popular route, Mr. Yearwood stated.

A series of meetings will be held for the purpose of getting the endorsement of the various towns on the Ridge. The first meeting will be held in Avon Park within the next 10 days.

In further comment on the Orange Blossom Trail Mr. Yearwood pointed out that E. G. Todd, Dr. D. G. Perry and others are interested in the trail and were present during his conversation with Chairman Treadway. He said he was the promoter of the Dixie Highway which has been of such benefit to the south.

Another name for the proposed trail is the Honeymoon Trail and is being so designated by some people. It will lead to sunshine and happiness in the land of flowers, health and opportunit. It will traverse the ridge section, from which it derives its name, this section being the home of the citrus industry in Florida. It has thousands of lakes and is one of the beauty spots of the country. Hunting and fishing abounds and there are many scenic attractions including the Bok Tower at Lake Wales, the Mall at Avon Park and the Highlands Hammock between Avon Park and Sebring.

Famous people have homes in the Ridge, including Rex Beach, Roger Babson and Marjorie Rambeau. Excellent schools are provided and there are plenty of excellent hotels and golf courses. The water is the finest and clearest in the world and unsurpassed for drinking and bathing.

Legion Hears Report On State Convention

Highlands Post of the American Legion at its meeting Wednesday night heard a report of the state convention held at Gainesville last week. The report was made by Commander R. T. Fairey who attended as a delegate from the local post, together with Judge M. C. Whitehurst. At this convention Dr. A. M. Morgan was elected vice commander for the sixth district.

Dr. Morgan made his report on the beauty contest by which Highlands Post realized a nice sum. Dr. Morgan and his committee were accorded a rising vote of thanks for their efforts.

Church Elder Here

Elder J. B. Lochen of Lakeland, in charge of the Seventh Day Adventist churches for this district, will be in Avon Park tonight and Saturday morning and will speak at the church.

Scenic Highlanders Week Is Set Aside at World's Fair

Information was received Tuesday from the officials of the World's Fair at Chicago that the special week set aside for the Scenic Highlands will be August 12 to 18, inclusive.

The Highlands is the smallest area in the state to get one of the eight special shows in which the products and advantages of the particular section are stressed in the Florida exhibit.

The procuring of this concession is directly due to the efforts of the "Scenic Highlanders," an organization representing the 14 cities and towns along the Ridge from Haines City to Hworin.

The special exhibit at the fair this year will be staged as follows:

FLORIDA DAY — Friday, July 20—Governor David Sholtz and staff and members of his cabinet; chairman and members of the Florida World's Fair Commission; Chairmen of the several County Boards of the State; the Mayors of Florida's Municipalities; the executives of Florida Chambers of Commerce and officers of statewide organizations, will be guests of Honor. The Governor and his party will be accorded the usual military salute and escort through the Court of Honor to Florida Hall in the Court of States. Special entertainment and reception will be announced later.

WEST COAST FLORIDA—July 8 to 14, inclusive—Counties participating — Charlotte, Hillsborough, Manatee, Pinellas, and Sarasota.

CENTRAL FLORIDA — July 15 to 21, inclusive—Counties participating — Alachua, Citrus, Clay, Hernando, Lake, Marion, Orange, Osceola, Pasco, Putnam, Seminole, and Sumter.

WEST FLORIDA—July 22 to 28, inclusive—Counties participating—Bay, Calhoun, Escambia, Gulf, Holmes, Jackson, Okaloosa, Santa Rosa, Walton and Washington.

SOUTH FLORIDA—Aug. 5 to 11, inclusive—Counties participating—Collier, DeSoto, Glades, Hardee, Hendry, Lee, Monroe, and Okeechobee.

SCENIC HIGHLANDS—Aug. 12 to 18, inclusive—Counties participating—Highlands and Polk.

LOWER EAST COAST—Aug. 19 to 25, inclusive—Counties participating — Broward, Dade, Indian River, Martin, Palm Beach, and St. Lucie.

UPPER EAST COAST—Aug. 26 to Sept. 1, inclusive—Counties participating—Brevard, Duval, Flagler, Nassau, St. Johns, and Volusia.

NORTH FLORIDA—Sept. 2 to 8, inclusive—Counties participating—Baker, Columbia, Franklin, Gadsden, Hamilton, Jefferson, Leon, Liberty, Madison, and Wakulla.

FLORIDA STATE NEGRO EXHIBIT—Sept. 10 to 15, inclusive.

DAYTONA BEACH GETS STATE LEGION MEETING

Sixteenth Annual State Convention Held at Gainesville Last Week

Gainesville, June 14.—(FNS)—Dr. W. E. Whitelock, of High Springs, was elected commander of the American Legion, Department of Florida, at the sixteenth annual state convention of the Legion held in Gainesville last week.

Mrs. S. S. McCahill of Miami was elected president of the auxiliary. Joe L. Clark, St. Petersburg, retiring department commander was elected national executive committeeman. Daytona Beach was selected as the next state convention city.

Dignitaries of the state and nation, including the National Commander of the Legion, Edward A. Hayes and Florida's "first member" Governor Dave Sholtz, gave before the assembled convention, which were attended by many local citizens as well as legionnaires and women's auxiliary members.

Among the resolutions adopted during the session were those endorsing the state administration's safety movement and urging continuance of the Legion's outstanding activities, education, law and order.

During the election of delegates to attend the national convention to be held in Miami in October, rules were suspended and Governor Sholtz was unanimously voted delegate Number One.

Those attending from Avon Park included Commander R. T. Fairey, Dr. A. M. Morgan, Judge M. C. Whitehurst, E. E. Melton, Charles Sherman, Ed Welch and Demos Mandia. Mrs. Percy Loomis and Miss Patsy Loomis also attended, the latter being Avon Park's entry in the state wide beauty contest.

Florida Hatcherymen To Meet In Orlando

Orlando, June 13.—A meeting of Florida baby chick hatcherymen to discuss the entire hatchery code will be held at the Angebilt Hotel here Tuesday, June 19, beginning at 10 a. m.

The meeting has been called by J. A. Hannah, managing agent of the National Commercial and Breeder Hatchery Committee, and notice is being sent to Florida hatcherymen by Norman R. Mehrhof, poultry specialist with the Agricultural Extension Service.

Youngest Legislator From Putnam County

Palatka, June 13. — (FNS) — Among the new faces in the 1935 legislature will be the youngest representative in the history of the state.

Walter Warren, of Putnam county, who defeated a seasoned campaigner, R. C. Middleton, by a majority of about 500 votes is 21 years of age.

WORLD'S FAIR OFFICIALS PRAISE FLORIDA EXHIBIT

Declare It To Be Greatest Exhibit In Entire Exposition

Chicago, Ill., June 13.—World's Fair officials were given a view of the completed Florida Exhibit, Saturday night and were unanimous in pronouncing it not only the outstanding exhibit in the States' Group but one of the greatest exhibits of the entire exposition, from the standpoint of beauty and education.

"You may quote me as saying that we regard the Florida exhibit as one of the best on the fair grounds, from every point of view," said Col. Hubert F. Miller, director of Federal and States Relations. "It is not only one of the largest exhibits on the grounds ranking with the displays made by the Ford Motor company, General Motors and Chrysler as to area, but it is one of the most complete as an exposition of what the state has to offer tourists, health and comfort seekers, farmers and fruit growers, manufacturers and investors."

"In addition to its utilitarianism the Florida exhibit is a thing of beauty," continued Col. Miller. "I saw it every day during the exposition of last year and I have tried to visit it every day thus far this year because of its sheer beauty, and, I am not the only one that feels about it as I have expressed myself. I have met countless men and women in my office and in my official wanderings around the exposition grounds who have felt the same way, regarding Florida's very successful effort at furnishing a picture of the state's resources and attractions," said Colonel Miller in conclusion.

"The sentiments expressed by Colonel Miller have been echoed time and time again by representatives of the Chicago newspapers and the correspondents of other newspapers throughout the country who are stationed at the Fair Grounds," said General Manager Brown. "All have been kind to Florida in the matter of favorable reference to the exhibit in the columns of their respective publications. The radio people, too, have given freely of their time for programs, the talent for which has been supplied by the entertainment staff of our exhibit. Florida is seemingly more popular this year than last and we are striving to merit that popularity."

Special Childrens' Fathers' Program at Congregational

An elaborate program in honor of Childrens' Day and Fathers' Day has been arranged for Sunday morning by the Congregational Sunday school. The program starts at 10:15 a. m. and a number of children will take part. There will be recitations and songs and numbers by the Sunday school orchestra and quartette.

OFFICIAL COUNT SHOWS PEPPER CLOSE SECOND

Led Opponents in Forty of Sixty-Seven Counties in Senatorial Race

Official tabulation of the vote in the first primary showed Claude Pepper to be the neck and neck runner-up to the veteran Park Trammell, with Trammell leading in the state-wide count by only 1925 votes. The total vote was 213,897. The three other candidates were left far behind as Trammell and Pepper polled three-fourths of the vote.

The vote certified by the state canvassing board on the basis of official reports from all counties was:

Trammell, 81,321; Pepper, 79,396; Charles A. Mitchell, 30,455; James F. Sikes, 14,558 and Mrs. Hortense K. Wells, 8167.

Pepper led in 40 of the state's sixty-seven counties. Trammell led in 23; Sikes in two and Mitchell in two.

Pepper began the second phase of his campaign Tuesday night in Pensacola. His itinerary for the twelve speaking days following is admittedly the most intensive ever undertaken by a candidate for a state-wide office in the history of the state. It calls for approximately seventy speeches, averaging about six a day, including full days spent in the larger cities.

In opening his campaign incident to the second primary between Senator Trammell and himself, Mr. Pepper issued the following statement;

"I wish I could shake hands with and personally thank every person in the State who made our splendid vote possible on June 5th. From the bottom of my heart I am grateful. The things we stand for are right. They are worth fighting for. They are in accord with the sentiment of the people. The New Deal has been the inspiration of a new quality of public service. The people have learned not only that they need better conditions but that they can have better conditions through their Government.

"Florida is growing greater every hour. We can build her beyond the wildest dreams with the proper help from the Federal Government.

"A senator must represent all of the people; must represent all sections. He must put service over above self. He must be in tune with the times and not only know the needs of the people but be in genuine sympathy with them.

"It is the ideal of service which the people have approved and which I shall personally carry to almost every county in the State before June 26th. I sincerely ask the wholehearted help of every citizen."

As the second campaign opened newspapers were preponderately of the opinion that Pepper would secure a vast majority of the more than 50,000 votes which went to the three eliminated candidates. Since Trammell's lead was so small in the first primary, commentators have reached the conclusion that Pepper would lead Trammell by 15,000 or more votes on June 26th.

Counties where Pepper led were:

Baker, Bay, Bradford, Calhoun, Citrus, Clay, Dixie, Duval, Escambia, Franklin, Gadsden, Gilchrist, Glades, Gulf, Hamilton, Hendry, Highlands, Holmes, Jackson, LaFayette, Lake, Leon, Levy, Liberty, Madison, Martin, Monroe, Nassau, Okaloosa, Okeechobee, Orange, Osceola, Santa Rosa, Sarasota, Sumter, Suwanee, Taylor, Union, Wakulla and Washington.

Trammell led in Alachua, Brevard, Broward, Columbia, Dade, DeSoto, Flagler, Hardee, Hernando, Hillsborough, Jefferson, Lee, Marion, Palm Beach, Pasco, Polk, Putnam, St. Johns, St. Lucie, Seminole and Volusia.

Mitchell led in Indian River and Walton and Sikes was ahead in Collier and Pinellas.

Turner Speaker at Rotary Meet

C. P. Turner of Highland Lakes was the speaker at the Rotary club luncheon at the Jacaranda hotel Wednesday noon. Visitors for the meeting were Prof. P. J. Gustat of Sebring, Rev. Harry Walker of Daytona Beach and Miss Willa Mae Sibley, high school honor student.

Out To Win

Claude Pepper, neck and neck runner-up with Park Trammell in Senatorial race, will continue aggressive campaign with seventy speaking dates in run-off race June 26.

Arrange Full School Term and Increase in Teachers' Salaries

According to Charles Clements, the board of public instruction for Highlands County has tentatively arranged for a full nine-months school term for both grammar and high schools next year. The plans also include an approximate 10 percent increase in teachers salaries. The plans are based on an expected increase in revenue from the state for school purposes. Mr. Clements says and unless something unforseen occurs the program is expected to go through as arranged.

Ball Club Needs More Donations

It will take about $140 in all to equip the baseball team, according to Manager Jimmie Spencer, who is making an appeal for further funds to carry on. Up to date, about $100 has been subscribed, leaving $40 more needed to put the team over. He will appreciate it if those who haven't already so will pay their pledges, and will also welcome additional donations from others interested in baseball for Avon Park.

Col. Head Elected Jr. Vice Commander of Spanish War Vets

According to advices from Pensacola where the Florida Department of the United Spanish War Veterans have just completed its annual encampment, Col. Charles R. Head of this city has been elected junior vice-commander of the state department. Col. Head has been very active in veterans' work and the honor accorded him is appreciated by his many friends here.

Clements in Charge of Highlands Bank

Charles Clements, state liquidator for closed state banks in this section, announced this week the Highlands County Bank at Sebring had been taken out of the hands of the conservator and placed in receivership for liquidation. Mr. Clements will have personal charge of the work which will be accomplished as fast as possible.

State Road Board Hears From Large Ridge Delegation

Largest Delegation Ever To Appear Before State Board Meeting Requests Action On Road 19.

The state road department, meeting in Sebring Monday, virtually assured a delegation of nearly 500 ridge residents that the present route of state road 8, from Haines City to Lake Placid, will be the location for the new federal highway soon to be constructed from Leesburg south on the ridge.

The assurance was given by Chairman C. B. Treadway of the department, who stated, however, that locations made by state engineers for the new road must receive approval of federal engineers before they can be accepted.

The board members heard representatives of the delegation of ridge residents — the largest ever to appear before any meeting of any Florida road board — before the chairman announced that the present route of road 8 would be followed as nearly as possible.

The delegations came from Haines City, Lake Hamilton, Dundee, Lake Wales, Babson Park, Frostproof, Avon Park, Sebring, and Lake Placid.

Among those addressing the board and urging the importance of the construction of the road were R. T. Dewell of Haines City, the mayor of Dundee, Mr. Bruster of Babson Park, John Maxey of Frostproof, T. A. McNicholas of Avon Park, Geo. E. Sebring of Sebring, E. J. Etheredge of DeSoto City, W. Coachman of Lake Placid, J. E. Sims of Lake Placid, and Alexander Blair spoke for the south end of the ridge.

The road board voted to meet during August, at its next regular meeting, at St. Augustine.

Little definite action was taken, most of the proposals submitted to the board by delegations being taken under advisement.

The board did, however, adopt resolutions renewing the $20,000 annual lease of the Bridge of Lions at St. Augustine, the Vilano bridge in St. Johns county and Shands bridge, also in St. Johns county.

Action of a committee of the board in agreeing to pay $67,000 for an additional 5½ miles of the Conners highway, now being purchased by the board, was approved.

Mrs. W. S. Jennings, Jacksonville, advocated a four point program of state beautification for adoption by the board. The four points included highway beautification, airport beautification, establishment of state and municipal parks, and development of inland waterways.

Chairman Treadway assured Mrs. Jennings, who represented the beautification commission of the state chamber of commerce, that the board will bend every effort toward making beautification a thing of primary importance on roads to be constructed in the future as well as on roads already in existence.

He said the board is working on rights of way for parks along roads just inside the state line.

Value of all highways in the state constructed by the state road department, but not including those taken over by the state after being constructed by counties or special districts, was placed at $140,483.06 in a report given by H. W. Sheppard, auditor for the department.

Of this amount, Sheppard said, $3,886,512 has been contributed by the federal government in emergency relief funds.

Sheppard reported that recent economies have reduced the scheduled $2,550,000 deficit for 1934 to $2,113,429.96. This, he said, compared with the total debt of the department on December 31, 1933, of $3,174,043.57. Sheppard explained that the debt was largely one inherited from the previous administration.

L. H. Kramer, Lake Wales, appearing as general leader of the group of ridge residents seeking immediate action on the new federal road, asked that the route be surveyed at once.

Treadway informed him that the department would start the survey immediately.

"This is an opportune time for us to secure rights of way, if we can learn what the location of the road is to be," Kramer said. "Polk county commissioners have agreed to purchase the rights of way, but in view of the present increasing price of property, it is essential from an economic standpoint that the rights of way be secured as

FERA Swimming and Instruction Program to Start

The schedule for the FERA recreational program on Lake Lotela has been arranged and announced. Swimming and life saving instruction is included with C. A. Eads, and Lowell O'Bannion detailed as life guards and instructors for Avon Park. There is a small pier with a pavilion for shelter and there is also a row boat available. The program follows:

9 a. m. to 10 a. m.—Small boys and girls swimming instructions.

10 a. m. to 11 a. m.—Life saving instruction, for beginners.

11 a. m. to 12 noon—Supervision of free play and water games.

1 p. m. to 2 p. m.—Supervision and first aid classes.

2 p. m. to 3 p. m.—Swimming instruction in advanced styles and form diving, boys and girls.

3 p. m. to 4 p. m.—Life saving instructions, leading up to American Red Cross Junior Life Saving tests, boys and girls.

4 p. m. to 6 p. m.—Life guard duty and supervision of free play.

This program is now in effect and has been approved by Gideon Jaeger, county supervisor of FERA recreational activities.

Senator Trammell Here This Morning; Spoke on Mall

Senator Park Trammell of Lakeland, who is seeking re-election for the fourth term as United States Senator, was a speaker on the Mall this morning. Due to the heavy rains there was only a small attendance and the senator's speech was short.

Following his introduction by Mayor M. E. Covington the senator called attention to the fact that he is chairman of he naval affairs committee and is a member of other important committees in Washington. He cited his efforts in getting dry dock and shipbuilding facilities at Tampa and Pensacola. He stated he is the author of the law providing for 100 percent of federal funds for federal roads, Florida obtaining a large amount without having to put up a penny.

He also claimed authorship for the law calling for full appraisal of groves for loanpurposes whereby thousands of grove owners had obtained loans of from $150 to $200 per acre on their groves. He also said he is responsible for the first measure providing for home owners' loans.

Commenting on his opponent, Claude Pepper of Tallahassee, the senator said he was not the author of any legislation while a member of the 1929 state legislature that had been of any benefit to the people of Florida, but instead he had devoted his time to supporting the present law providing for tax certificate foreclosure. Trammell stated his opponent displays no constructive thought and in all his speeches and campaign literature had not advanced a single or original constructive idea.

He favored the proposed Orange Blossom trail from Key West to Northern Michigan and would do all possible to put it over.

Ford Leads All Makes Cars in Volume of Sales

Ford led all other makes in sales of passenger cars during the first four months of 1934, according to official tabulations of motor vehicle registrations throughout the United States just issued by R. L. Polk & Co.

Total Ford registrations of new passenger cars in the four months period aggregated 162,788 units out of a total of 552,316 new cars of all makes registered in the United States in this period.

The Ford total of registrations of passenfer cars, commercial cars and trucks during the same four month period was also in the lead.

Ford's percentage of the total business in May was increasing according to advance reports compiled by Polk in 106 leading cities in key points throughout the country.

Five Little Girls at Once
Big Bills Come Back
Only Flew the Atlantic
Cuba Remembers

Mrs. Olivia Dionne of North Bay, Ont., had five children last Sunday and "expected" another. She has ten children, her family increased by five girl babies at one birth.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe of Callander says: "The five little girls are all well and chirping."

This will interest millions of women far more than NRA, the Russian-Japanese complications or the approaching home-going of congress.

Bills of large denomination, from $500 to $1,000 and $10,000, are used rarely in ordinary affairs.

When banks began closing and people became frightened, it was observed that bank customers were asking for these big bills in exchange for checks, and, before long, millions of them disappeared. The federal reserve considers it a good sign that they are coming out from hiding.

Just before the bank crisis the amount of big bills in hiding rose to one billion nine hundred millions. Of these large bills, three hundred and fifty millions have recently returned to the United States treasury and to reserve banks, which, according to the federal reserve, indicates "better times."

Two French flyers, Capt. Maurice Rossi and Lieut. Paul Codos, landed on Long Island after an attempt to fly nonstop from Paris to California, 6,000 miles. The two Frenchmen are said to be greatly humiliated by their inability to fly on and reach California, where a glorious reception awaited them.

It would seem that flying the Atlantic westward, infinitely more difficult than going the other way, is a sufficient accomplishment, considering that less than twenty-five years ago Lord Northcliffe was offering ten thousand pounds to any man that would fly across the little English channel.

The day is not far away when men will fly nonstop from Paris to San Francisco as a matter of course, and from anywhere on earth to any other spot on earth.

The people and government of Cuba are trying to find four assassins accused of attempting to murder Jefferson Caffery, United States ambassador. The real Cubans, intelligent people, seek no quarrel with the United States. They "remember the Maine" and what happened to Spain after that ship was sent to the bottom. Spain was driven out of Cuba and all the way home across the Atlantic and out of the Philippines as well.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, an able, energetic and kind-hearted woman, went to Alderson, W. Va., to inspect the federal prison for women and speak to the 400 inmates. For such an address, or any address to any prisoners, the best text is the well-known remark of the Bohemian John Huss, looking at a poor drunkard in the gutter: "But for the grace of God there lies John Huss."

Mrs. Roosevelt talks over the radio, and for doing so is paid $500 a minute. Others do the same and are paid as much or more, but Mrs. Roosevelt gives all her radio receipts to charity.

Not many of the others do that.

Mussolini, observing world-wide preparation for war, and no disarmament, says, "If I must fight, I must," and gets ready, wastes no time sobbing or sighing.

Before 1940, beginning at once, he will spend one thousand million lire on fighting surface ships and the same huge sum on fighting airships.

The "Century of Progress" exposition is opened for the second year with a success big enough to please even Chicago. Anything must be big to satisfy Chicago.

Already it is apparent that this year's greater and better exposition will eclipse the first year, in attendance and in every other way.

Henry Ford was there to inspect his new exposition buildings. Before he realized it, half a dozen young Americans, twelve to fifteen years old, had recognized him, appointed him their guide, without pay, and kept him busy for an hour explaining everything to them, while his distracted secretaries tried to remind him of important business appointments.

Mr. Ford told them:

"These boys are more important. There is nothing serious the matter with a country where the young people are interested in new ideas."

Do not fail to visit Chicago's wonderful "Century of Progress" exposition this summer. See what has been done in the past century of progress. See your country, coming and going, and ask yourself what the next century of progress will accomplish, when this little depression stomach ache shall have been forgotten.

President's Memorial Day Address at Gettysburg; Major Labor Disputes Trouble Administration; Attempt to Assassinate Ambassador Caffery in Havana.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

BEFORE a vast multitude of persons gathered at Gettysburg battlefield President Roosevelt delivered a Memorial day address that was in effect a vigorous attack on critics of his plans for national recovery. Introduced by Governor Pinchot as "the first citizen of the world," Mr. Roosevelt first paid eloquent tribute to the men of the North and South who fought bravely on that historic field, and described how the sections of the nation had been welded into one, its unity being aided by foreign wars, until now all sectionalism has disappeared. He continued:

President Roosevelt

"We are all brothers now in a new understanding. The grain farmers of the West do not set themselves up for preference if we seek at the same time to help the cotton farmers of the South; nor do the tobacco growers complain of discrimination if, at the same time, we help the cattle men of the plains and mountains.

"In our planning to lift industry to normal prosperity the farmer upholds our efforts. And as we give the farmer a long sought equality the city worker understands and helps. All of us share in whatever good comes to the average man. We know that we all have a stake —a partnership in the government of our country.

"Today we have many means of knowing each other—means that have sounded the doom of sectionalism. It is, I think, as I survey the picture from every angle, a simple fact that the chief hindrance to progress comes from three elements which, thank God, grow less in importance with the growth of a clearer understanding of our purposes on the part of the overwhelming majority.

"These groups are those who seek to stir up political animosity or to build political advantage by the distortion of facts; those who, by declining to follow the rules of the game, seek to gain an unfair advantage over those who live up to the rules; and those few who still, because they have never been willing to take an interest in their fellow Americans, dwell inside of their own narrow spheres and still represent the selfishness of sectionalism which has no place in our national life."

GOING from Gettysburg to New York, the President embarked on the cruiser Indianapolis, put out to sea and reviewed the American fleet, which, as assistant secretary of the navy, he helped to command during the World war and in which he maintains the warmest interest. With him were Secretary Swanson and Josephus Daniels, the war-time navy secretary. There were some other distinguished guests, but members of congress tried in vain to get aboard.

The Indianapolis was anchored about a mile from Ambrose lightship, and 88 fighting ships passed proudly in review. The Pennsylvania, flying the four-starred flag of Admiral David E. Sellers, commander of the fleet, led the parade and then, with the Louisville, turned out of line and anchored near the Indianapolis. It was an imposing spectacle, such as had not been witnessed since the early days of President Coolidge's administration.

AT THE annual exercises at the United States Navy academy 463 midshipmen were graduated. A total of 332 were commissioned ensigns in the navy, 25 lieutenants in the marine corps, one lieutenant in the Philippine scouts and 106 will resign.

UNDER the present administration the navy is doing quite well, but the army feels it is neglected. Secretary of War Dern and Newton D. Baker, who held the portfolio during the war, appeared before the house committee and urged the passage of the Thompson bill, which would increase the strength of the army to 165,000 enlisted men and 14,063 officers. That the present regular army is inadequate in the face of present disturbed world conditions was declared by both gentlemen.

The American army as now manned would not simultaneously protect our outlying possessions, train civilians, and repel "any sudden invaders," Secretary Dern insisted. A more satisfactory army would cost the nation $35,000,000 annually, he said in explaining that he had not suggested an increase to President Roosevelt because of the President's desire to balance the budget.

Mr. Baker could not "imagine an army less than five times the present size of ours having the slightest effect on the military policy of any other nation." Of course, he did not advocate any such increase; he said that four divisions, one in each section of the country, with a fifth free to train civilians, would suffice.

THOUGH administration leaders have asserted that labor troubles are to be expected in a time of recovery and that they are not alarmed by the strikes that are now in effect or are threatened for the near future, it was evident in Washington that these optimists were disturbed by the prospect of general strikes in the cotton textile and steel industries. It was believed President Roosevelt would have to intervene in the effort to bring about peace.

As General Johnson refused to change the order permitting cotton mills to reduce their output by 25 per cent for twelve weeks, the United Textile Workers of America summoned all cotton mill employees to quit their machines, and it was predicted that 300,000 would respond. The workers claim the reduction would amount to 25 per cent cut in their wages, and say they will not stand for this. They also demand a 30-hour week with no reduction of pay.

Fighting for recognition of non-company unions, a point on which the steel masters will not yield, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers announced that a general strike would be called in mid-June unless its members win the right to choose spokesmen freely for collective bargaining.

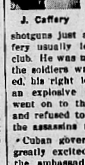

The union leaders, who contend the collective bargaining guaranty in the NRA has been violated by employers, asked:

"Is the American Iron and Steel institute more powerful than the President of the United States?"

CUBA is now entirely freed from United States suzerainty, through a treaty which was signed at the State department by plenipotentiaries of both countries and ratified by the senate. The pact abrogates the Platt amendment, providing for the maintenance of the independence and territorial and financial integrity of the island republic and authorizing the United States to intervene therein for the protection of the country and the preservation of order. In the new treaty the United States retains the lease of Guantanamo as a naval base.

The people of Cuba rejoiced exceedingly over the abrogation of the Platt amendment, and President Mendieta declared a three days national holiday.

HAVANA police learned that there was a plot to assassinate Jefferson Caffery, American ambassador to Cuba, and the American property on the island. They took extraordinary precautions to protect Mr. Caffery, but despite the presence of soldiers at the entrance to his home some unidentified assailants drove by in a car and poured a stream of bullets from sawed-off shotguns just at the time Mr. Caffery usually leaves for the Pan-American club. He was not injured but one of the soldiers was grievously wounded, his right leg being torn off by an explosive bullet. Mr. Caffery went on to the yacht club calmly and refused to say who he thought the assassins might be.

J. Caffery

Cuban government officials were greatly excited by the attempt on the ambassador's life, and there was an inclination to blame the Communists, but leaders of that party denied their followers had anything to do with it. In recent demonstrations the radicals have attacked Mr. Caffery in their speeches. Presumably the plot purposed as to stir up trouble between the governments of the United States and Cuba.

ENDEAVORING to learn what small business throughout the country thinks about the NRA, the national industrial conference board has been conducting a survey that has not brought definite results. Tabulating these results as best it can, the board states it found that 34.6 per cent favored the NRA as a whole; another 12.8 per cent favored it with some reservations; 36 per cent were definitely opposed to it, while 6.4 per cent could not see that it made much difference.

DELEGATES from the five New England states, New York and Pennsylvania have now signed a solemn pact for the protection of women and minors in industry, which has been under negotiation for several years.

The compact, which must be ratified by the legislatures of the several states, contemplates minimum standards of wages for women and minors and contains a provision that "an employer shall pay a woman or a minor an unfair or oppressive wage." State boards are to be set up with authority to investigate pay rolls and require compliance.

CHARGES are made by the house agriculture committee that joint stock land banks have been using federal funds made available under the 1933 farm loan act to buy in their own bonds at 35 cents on the dollar while pressing foreclosures on their debtors.

The committee approved the Fulmer bill to authorize farmers who have obtained loans from joint stock land banks to buy on the open market their stock in said bank bonds, tendering same to the joint stock land banks in payment of their indebtedness. The bill would also enable farmers to repurchase their lands that have been previously foreclosed if said lands are still in the possession of these banks.

THE Irish Free State took another step toward becoming a republic when the dail eireann passed a bill abolishing the senate. After this action had been taken President Eamon de Valera said: "We want England to get out. We do not want to have anything to do with Britain. If there is to be any form of association it must be in the common interest of both. We must be the judges of whether it is to our advantage or not."

Eamon de Valera

No definite plan was mentioned, and none is expected to be put forward before March, 1935, when abolition of the senate will become effective. Until that date any action of the dail would have to have senate approval.

It is apparent that De Valera no longer hopes that Ulster will be included in any Irish republic.

STATESMEN from many nations met in Geneva and reopened the sessions of the disarmament conference, with a full realization of the fact that their failure may mean the renewal of war in Europe in the not far future, and possibly the end of the League of Nations. Such hope as they had of breaking the impasse seemed to rest on the plan which Foreign Commissar Litvinov of Russia said he was ready to offer. It was believed he would concentrate on a policy of political security as a basis for disarmament. Norman H. Davis, American ambassador-at-large, presented the views of President Roosevelt, urging an accord emphasizing supervision of arms and a more rigid control of international traffic in arms.

Louis Barthou, foreign minister of France, showed no inclination to yield to the German demands for rearmament. The French are said to believe Hitler is due soon to run up against domestic troubles that will tie his hands; they will continue to promote their defensive alliances until the German chancellor gives in, and just now are counting on a pact of mutual assistance with Russia and the little entente which will be signed if, as expected, Russia enters the League of Nations. The French also are hoping for an accord with Italy.

Premier Mussolini of Italy, in a speech before the chamber of deputies, said that disarmament talk was foolish and in so many words suggested that war was the only way out of the economic adversities that beset Italy and Europe generally.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed the joint resolution of congress empowering him to stop arms shipments destined for countries at war and immediately proclaimed an embargo against shipments of arms or munitions from the United States to Bolivia and Paraguay. His action was the first of its kind in American history. Because of existing treaties he could not forbid actual shipment of arms but he did prohibit their sale in the United States to the warring countries.

Costa Durels, Bolivian representative in Geneva, before an open session of the League of Nations council invoked Article 13, the arbitration clause of the league covenant, as a basis for settling the conflict with Paraguay. If his demand is granted the dispute will automatically go to the World Court of Permanent Justice for settlement. Durels said an arms embargo would mean the "finish" of Bolivia.

CODOS and Rossi, French flyers who hold the distance record sought to better their work by making a nonstop flight from Paris to California. They got across the Atlantic ocean all right, but a weakness of one wing of their big monoplane developed and they were forced to land at Floyd Bennett field, New York.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—The expanding influence of the federal government on the lives of individuals throughout the United States suddenly has become a matter that is attracting attention, and more and more repercussions are to be noted in the National Capital. Some observer tell me they think it is an indication that the multifarious agencies that have been set up under the New Deal are at last in full operation and their effects are now reaching to the grass roots of the country. However that may be, it can be stated without equivocation that the so-called alphabetical soup (the various administrations and boards and commissions known only by initials) are making their presence felt for better or for worse in the lives of individuals.

I cannot agree with the exaggerated assertion by a leading Republican politician that "we are subject to Hitler decrees from a hundred different sources," but there seems little doubt of the vast power being wielded by the various New Deal agencies.

Feel Effects of New Deal

For instance, Harry Hopkins, federal relief administrator, has decreed that there will be no drought relief funds for cattle owners supplied by the federal emergency relief administration unless the holders of any mortgages on those cattle agree not to foreclose on such mortgages. And, be it said, the mortgage holder who refuses to make such an agreement is up the well-known stump. He can take the cattle, of course, when the mortgage matures, but if the mortgages have many months to run, the cattle are liable to die of starvation in the meantime. Without attempting to decide the merit of such a policy on the part of the federal government, the illustration shows the power that is wielded from Washington.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation has been exercising its influence with banks for some time. While RFC officials insist they are not attempting to control policies of banks, it nevertheless remains as a fact that they are exercising voting power in the boards of directors of numerous banking institutions. They went so far in the case of a great Chicago bank as to insist that the man they selected be elected by the board as its chairman. In addition, through the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, the bank policies on loans are closely watched, and this is happening at a time when the President and some of his advisers are strongly urging the banks to make loans.

Under NRA and the numerous codes, various terms and conditions for business are laid down in the practices.

Typical of How Code Works

Here is a typical case: the code for the graphic arts industries has a provision prohibiting extension of credit for periods of two years. That is, a printing plant owner or publisher of a country newspaper or anyone else wanting to buy a linotype machine had been allowed sometimes as much as five years in which to pay for the expensive equipment of that kind. Now, however, he must pay for it within two years or the manufacturer will be a code violator by selling it on a long term basis. Thus, it is to be seen that the NRA exerts an influence on what might be called the innocent bystander. The country publisher cannot save up gold with which to pay for the machinery because he would be a criminal to have gold upper most in mind.

Again declaring that I am not discussing the merit of the proposition, it remains as a fact that the federal trade commission is exerting an influence on the type of investments individuals make as a result of its control over the issue and sale of shares of stocks or bonds. Of course, the commission cannot reach a corporation that is doing business only in its home state, but the larger corporations engage in business on a broader scale than that and the bulk of shares and bonds, therefore, must not be issued until the federal trade commission's securities experts have determined the facts about the corporation that offers them. It is a matter of record, of course, that numerous corporations have sold purely fake sky stock, but the point I am attempting to make is that here is another federal influence on the lives of individuals.

* * * * * * *

As we go through the month of June, another phase of the New Deal becomes effective. I refer to the development of the country's forests, privately as well as publicly, owned. While there will be no noticeable results for some time, the President's forest conservation policy has become operative nevertheless, and it is a long-range affair that is generally accepted as building for the future.

Forest Conservation

The program which the President initiated when he started the Civilian Conservation corps embodies a definite scheme for restoring forests that have been cutover and constitute nothing more than waste land; it provides for selective cutting of trees in lumbering operations, and it is designed to create in the minds of citizens the necessity for sustaining our forests against the time when, at the present rate of destruction, there would be no more lumber. I was surprised when the forestry service told me that forest land was just about one-fourth of the entire area in the United States. But the forestry officials reminded me at the same time that unless there is a serious conservation movement, there is only enough timber in sight to provide lumber for about thirty years more. Originally, it will be remembered, there was about 40 per cent of the entire continent in virgin timber.

Mr. Roosevelt is proposing legislation, most of which will be ready for the session of congress meeting in January, 1935, to provide machinery for co-ordinating the efforts of the federal and state governments and for gaining the co-operation of private land owners in restoring growing trees.

* * *

A good many Washington observers are wondering how soon the federal trade commission and NRA are going to lock horns.

Headed for a Clash

The two agencies are certainly headed in the direction of a clash. It is generally conceded here that sooner or later General Johnson's NRA codes that establish monopolies in various fields of commerce and industry are going to be made the subject of pithy comment from federal trade commission circles. How soon it will come, or what form the disagreement will take, of course, can be only a matter of conjecture now.

It is necessary to recall the basis upon which the federal trade commission was created in order to get a clear understanding of the clash that is to be expected. First of all, the creators of the federal trade commission idea had in mind the idea of a federal agency that could do watchdog business all of the time. Where it found unfair practices, smothering of the little independent units, and such other conditions as some sharp-shooting businesses use, the commission can, and does cite them publicly. It goes after the facts in public hearings and exposes the practices. It also issues orders directing the offending businesses to eliminate the objectionable practices. If they choose to disregard the commission's orders, the matter is turned over to prosecuting officers of the government and tougher penalties may be imposed.

Now, the national recovery act and General Johnson's codes have gone a long way toward making the commission's guardianship of little business nil in its effect. The codes permit monopolies, or rather, the codes prescribed under the recovery act that the anti-trust laws shall not apply to those businesses signing the terms and conditions of the codes. It is seen, therefore, that the provisions of the federal trade commission act can hardly be enforced. That is to say, the commission cannot order a business to cease doing something that General Johnson's codes declare to be quite all right.

Thus far, the commission has kept reasonably quiet about the thing. It is true, however, that its members have thoughts about the situation that would make interesting reading if they were to be expressed openly. The commission has kicked about a few of the codes in a mild sort of way. Its criticisms have been tempered, it is said, by the fact that none knows exactly how to go about effecting a reconciliation of the diverse positions enacted into law in the recovery act and the federal trade commission act. Apparently there have been no instructions from the White House and so the commission is looking upon merely as drifting until such time as an administration policy is framed.

Few observers, and few important leaders as well, are willing to attempt prediction as to the outcome. One reason is that NRA is under fire from several directions, and I believe it cannot be said to what extent the general principles of NRA are going to become embedded in our industrial structure.

Government officials are becoming more and more concerned about the growth of smuggling and bootlegging of liquor. A determined effort is being made to check the illicit trade, but the optimism expressed by officials charged with the responsibility does not ring very loud. Indeed, the talk I hear is a good many quarters is that there must be some revision downward of the import duties and the local and state taxes on liquor.

I CONFESS to 80 years of idleness, work, observation, mischief, wisdom, folly. What have I found my most important job? To constantly strive to better manage myself, that I may increase efficiency of mind and body.

A man named F. C. Fox became general manager of the Santa Fe system some years ago, and went out on the line in a special car. Two or three of the older officials were with him, and they sidetracked one morning, somewhere. An Irish section foreman soon appeared who was well acquainted with the older officials. The Irishman had come down to demand more wages (really very generous, and he knew it, but like the rest of us, he was always clamoring for more). So to the officials he knew he pointed what a good man he was; how he had long been imposed on; how valuable his services were to the company, etc.

The officials he had long known agreed with him (in our disposition to get along, we all lie to a man's face, and roast him behind his back). "The man to see is inside," the officials said; "the new general manager." Then the Irishman started climbing the car steps, grumbling his protests, and declaring he intended to speak a piece of his mind, after long suppressing his indignation. . . . Almost immediately the Irishman returned from his visit to the new general manager, "a big fellow, ain't he?" the Irishman said, and returned to his work.

F. C. Fox is a large man; at that time young and athletic. Mr. Fox was sitting at his desk, back turned. The Irishman sized him up, did not speak to him, and quickly backed out. Everybody respects the Big Fellows, although nobody admits it. Perhaps they should not; such admission may be confession of cowardice—of lack of nobleness; I do not know, and am not discussing the question here. I only wish to say everybody respects the big fellows a little more than they respect the little fellows.

"We all bluff a good deal; and bluffing is mostly foolish.

Your "hand" has a certain value. The ten will take the nine; and so on up to the controversy between the two spot and the ace; or between the section foreman and the general manager. There may be a certain satisfaction in indignation meetings, public and private, but they have brought me so little through my many years that I attend few of them.

The world has widely accepted H. G. Wells as a man of unusual fairness, education and intelligence, by giving him honorable distinction. He recently made a speech in London and said: "In many regions of the earth there is an epidemic of intolerance which takes ugly and novel forms. To me it seems, more than anything else, a rebellion of the clumsy louts against thought and sanity; and they are now rampant everywhere with idiotic symbols, and idiotic salutes contriving idiotic cruelties, is the civilized majority safe? Personally I do not think it is, and I expect to uneasy for another ten years; by that time I expect the clumsy louts to be conquered by a capable majority which should have better controlled them long ago."

Mr. Wells' statement is true enough, but it isn't new. I've been saying the same thing, in almost identical language, at least four years.

* * *

Why should not grand opera be given for what it will bring in at the box office? Why should we go so far in art as to pay a lot of men and women enormous salaries to screech in a manner we do not actually care a great deal for, and demand that business men or the government, pay the deficit? . . . All the rest of us are compelled to advertise our show, and take whatever comes in. Why should not artists do the same? . . . You may reply they simply will not. All right: then let them go to the devil, or to Italy, or wherever they come from.

* * *

"The less we have to do with women," Schopenhauer wrote, "the better. They are not even a 'necessary evil'; life is safer and smoother without them. Let me recognize the snare that lies in women's beauty, and the absurd comedy of reproduction will end. Thus the extinction of the race will be achieved. Why should the curtain that has just fallen upon defeat and death always rise again upon a new life, a new struggle, and a new defeat? How long shall we be lured into this endless pain that lends only to a painful end?"

I do not endorse this sentiment; I quote it only that more women may know about its author and hate him.

The human race may go further, and over an easier road; that is all I claim in such reforms as I advocate.

CHAPTER I

—1—

AS THE one-train-a-day pursued its course through a sparsely settled hill country, Janet Mercer was conjecturing why parents should send their boys and girls to school in such a lonely region.

From her bag she had taken more than once the clipping of an advertisement, pinned to the letter which had so greatly aroused her interest and had resulted in her burning her bridges and coming to this unfamiliar region to teach English literature and rhetoric.

The advertisement had first caught her attention because of its odd wording:

"Lostland academy. Famous in its time in the Fingerlake region. It still adheres to classical education; and regards an acquaintance with Horace as a privilege to be sought, not evaded, in the interest of urbanity. A new faculty is being brought together; and the honor of aiding in its composition is open to early applicants. College graduates only need apply. A teacher of English literature and rhetoric is needed; also a teacher of mathematics and chemistry."

The letter, signed Gordon Haskell, was more circumstantial: "My Dear Miss Mercer:

"Your letter of application for the post of teacher of English literature and rhetoric in Lostland academy pleased me greatly. You seem well qualified for the position, and I should judge that you were a young lady not easily disturbed or excited, and fully equipped mentally to earn the generous salary of three hundred a month for the eight teaching months, which is the standard salary for my teachers. I believe that if you desire talent you must be willing to pay for it; and the noble work of educating our future citizens should never be underpaid.

"To reach Lostland academy you must change cars at Otenga and take a branch line. We have but one train a day, which leaves Otenga at 10 a. m. and arrives here at 4. Unfortunately it has neither a pullman nor dining car, so you would do well to bring a station lunch box. You will be met at Blade—perhaps there will be another member of the faculty traveling down at the same time."

Janet had looked her fellow-passengers over several times in the hope of identifying "another member of the faculty"; but, no one fitting in her preconception, she chose a woman about thirty years old, in whose countenance she thought she detected ability to solve mathematical problems.

He, too, had brought a station lunch box; and about noon he examined its contents; ate of them mechanically, and then settled to the examination of a letter. After a time he made a journey down the rocking aisle of the train to the water tank, where he had little difficulty in clawing out a paper cup, then in shaping it and conveying the nicked rim to his lips. With an air of relief and some water on his chin he came down the aisle.

As the train turned a curve, the young man passed Janet's seat, and was nearly precipitated into it. Simultaneously he regained his balance and saw the letter outspread on her lap.

"I'm so sorry," he apologized in a delightful voice. "And will you think me very impertinent? May I inquire if you are on the way to Lostland academy?"

"Yes. I am the teacher of English literature and rhetoric."

"And I'm slated for mathematics and chemistry."

"Won't you—sit down?"

"Thanks." He smiled boyishly as if really grateful for her the invitation. Beneath the smile she read a certain bewilderment, mingled, when his eyes were turned toward her, with frank and friendly admiration. He was thinking that she was very pretty. He liked her blue serge suit and her close little velvet hat from under which her eyes regarded him kindly.

"Rather strange landscape," he ventured. "But it's all strange—my sudden coming—the letter—the large salary—and every one on the same basis. Somehow it all seems rather ideal—the lonely country—a number of people with a common purpose marooned among these hills. I don't like cities. I am looking forward to cross-country walks—skating. Do you skate?"

"Yes—I am very fond of outdoor sports."

"And I suppose you love your subjects; or you would scarcely be teaching them."

"English literature, especially. I feel as if I were a mistress of ceremonies, and should I wave a wand, a blind man with beautiful thoughts and visions would enter; or a melancholy poet with the heart of a child and a great fear about his salvation, or a stern and passionate young woman whose soul, I am sure, still haunts the purple heather in Yorkshire."

"Milton, Cowper, and Emily Bronte," he commented with a smile. "I am a great lover of Dickens. I want to go to London before all his haunts have vanished. I should like to see Dover as David Copperfield did. You remember he imagined his mother coming down the shining road of the sea. Mine died when I was three."

"My mother is dead, too; and my father married again."

"I am so glad—you are to be on the faculty."

His color rose a little and his clear boyish eyes were directed again to the flying hills.

"There was another strange thing," she ventured. "I did not find Lostland academy listed in any of the educational directories."

"I looked for it, too—then I thought it might possibly have a new official name; and unregistered. I wish we were there. I want to have all my questions answered."

"What time is it?"

"Just three. One hour more."

Blade proved to be a flag station. No one but himself and Janet Mercer and a middle-aged woman in black alighted from the train. The three stood uncertainly on the rough unpainted platform; and then a woman in black approached them, a shade of anxiety in her kindly, sensible face.

"I am Mrs. Denver," she said, "the new matron at Lostland academy. I expected to be met, but I do not see anyone. Are you acquainted here?"

"No, we are strangers. This is Mr. Fleming, one of the new teachers; and I am Miss Mercer."

"I am glad you are going there, too!" Mrs. Denver exclaimed with unmistakable relief. "This seems such a lonesome place."

Undeniably it did. The hills, vast and grayish-green in color as if from outcroppings of granite, rose with threatening abruptness immediately back of the little station. From the station roof a rotting sign hung bearing in faded crimson letters the word "Blade."

"What an odd location for an academy," Janet commented, beginning to feel rather homesick and lonely—and thankful that Mrs. Denver was there, with her obvious good balance and her kindly, concerned face. Fleming did not answer her comment, but Janet saw that he was puzzled and that he shared the dismay of his companions.

"I imagine Haskell relies as much on fresh air as on the urbanities of Horace to bring his pupils forward; and considering that he knew three of us were arriving on this one train a day, it seems strange he didn't send some kind of a conveyance for us."

"Here comes a farmer with a load of apples," Mrs. Denver said. "Let's ask him."

The creaking old wagon was still several hundred yards away; and they watched its slow progress with impatience. A wizened old man was hunched in the driver's seat, and the slack reins hung almost to the ground. Behind him was a mound of greenish apples, and his gray hair blew in the mountain wind. As he drew near, Arthur hailed him.

"Can you tell us how to get to Lostland academy, and how far it is from here?"

The slack reins was drawn up, but the inquiries were not answered immediately. The driver stared with a curious expression at them, as if they were in some way marked and identified by their connection with this academy as destined for no ordinary experiences.

"I know the place—ought to—it's been there more'n a hundred years. He'll send for you, all right—mebbe will be easier to get there than to come away."

"Why do you say that?" Arthur demanded. "Is there anything wrong with the place?"

The countryman's manner became secretive, almost shy. "I dunno as there is—I never heard nothin'. 'Twas a big school in Doctor Bracebridge's day. Haskell'll send for you, all right."

The farmer continued gazing at them; then, as if this were none of his business, he chirped to his horses and the wagon moved ponderously forward. At the same moment they heard the distant chug of a motor, and a car swung into view from around a curve.

Behind it, clattering and swaying, appeared an open wagon, drawn by two bony white horses. The poor beasts had evidently been whipped down the mountain, and Janet, now seeing singularity in the most obvious circumstances, felt that even the horses in this wild region looked like the horses in a miracle pageant, lean and scarred and foam-flecked, with long, thin necks protruding toward scenes in which, animal-like, they scented disaster.

The man who drove the car was a septuagenarian in appearance; his companion, directing the white horses, a youngish fellow with a rather sullen air.

"The new teachers?" he asked with a kind of leer toward the imperturbable old man on the front seat.

"Yes—and as you have but one train a day here, it seems to me you ought to be able to meet it promptly," Fleming remarked, conscious that his strictures were not altogether logical.

The man laughed and began putting the baggage in his wagon and adjusting a tarpaulin over it, with the comment that it was likely to rain. The old driver of the car indicated by a wave of the hand that they were to get in; Mrs. Denver and Janet, both secretly rather unhappy and nervous, took their places.

"How far is it?"

"About five miles."

"Is it near a village?"

"It used to be—we're comin' to the ruins—a genuine deserted village. It was called Lostland, too, in the old days."

There was no time for further discussion; for now they were entering a road protected from curious visitors by high iron gates—newly painted, spanned by an iron grille bearing in letters once gilded the words "Lostland Academy."

They now beheld a great mansion looming beyond the immense pines, which were shaking in the wind. Built massively in the shape of a Greek temple, its high porch columns reached to the roof and supported a tympanum on which was bleaching a Latin motto in tall, black, faded letters which Fleming at Janet's request translated as the Biblical text, "Unless the Lord build the house, their labor is in vain that build it."

From the central body of the building, which was of brick, wings and nine-toned and superimposed upon a basement of granite blocks, two wings of the same material jutted out; the whole covered with huge metallic green patches of English ivy carefully cut away in shape of the long, narrow Georgian windows filled with small panes of glass flashing purple and violet iridescence. Lilac bushes almost as tall as trees partially hid some of the ground-floor windows. A strange hush was over the place, so deep, so profoundly unbroken by human voices or sounds, that the three passengers spoke in whispers as if not to introduce a discordant note. An evergreen walk, outlined by enormous, century-old box bushes, stretched to a far perspective. In that walk a tall man was pacing with a cloak over his shoulders. He looked both unhappy and reliable.

The car stopped before a majestic front door with a fan and sidelights filled with delicate iron tracery. Shoe scrapers in ancient iron flanked the stone steps. Down these a man about forty years of age came to greet them; tall, clean shaven, with bright, restless eyes and an over-solicitous manner, he seemed more like a very keen financier than a schoolmaster. He was fastidiously dressed in a nearly new suit of fawn brown. In his buttonhole he wore a gardenia, strangely reminiscent, Janet thought, both of funerals and festivities.

"Ah, my new teacher of English literature! my new teacher of mathematics! my new matron!" he said in a soft, almost paternal voice which filled Janet with a vague resentment. "Welcome! welcome! Down that avenue between the evergreen hedges you see the new professor of psychology — almost like Hamlet in appearance, isn't he? I told him he suited the old academy quite marvelously. Come in! come in!"

"May I Inquire If You Are on the Way to Lostland Academy?"

They followed him into a broad, imposing hall paved with lozenges of black and white marble, which at one place bore an insertion in green stone of a laurel wreath surrounding the letters in black marble, "Lostland Academy."

On the white-paneled side walls hung dark oil paintings of stern and scholarly men in gown and bands, their yellowed hands resting on neat piles of books. Beyond them, one of a much later date represented a man in middle life, clothed in the academic gown, with a crimson hood, and wearing the "mortar board." The gown was flying in the wind indicated by bending treetops and a wild sky of cumulus clouds, and the artist had put an expression in the eyes far removed from academic calm—a searching, hungry, sorrowful look.

"The first three presidents of Lostland," Haskell said, with a wave of the hand toward the older portraits.

"Who is the fourth—the very sad gentleman who seems to be running from this spot?" Arthur asked boldly.

Haskell changed color, flashed a look almost of hatred at his new teacher. "The fourth is Dr. Jethro Bracebridge," he replied curtly.

"I see a lake in the background. Is there a lake near here?" Janet questioned.

"Yes, we have a small but terrifically deep lake almost back of the grounds; and from it recedes one of those wild gorges for which this middle section of New York is justly famous."

"It has a waterfall, of course?" Janet remarked.

Haskell gave her a piercing look. "Are you clairvoyant? Yes, it has a fall—rather a high and terrible fall—a direct sheer drop of two hundred and twenty-five feet from an out-jutting ledge. Above this fall," he continued, his manner becoming more gracious, "the cliffs rise to a height of four hundred feet. Let me show you into the drawing room."

He ushered them into a long apartment filled with old-fashioned green velvet covered chairs and sofa. Over the fireplace hung a painting of the old academy, representing it in the blandness of some forgotten summer, a coach-and-four drawn up before the pillared portico, and little girls in full skirts and pantalettes rolling hoops on the trim walks or playing battledore and shuttlecock on the shaved green lawns. A large photograph album bound in green leather lay on a marble-topped console table. Mechanically Janet raised its cover.

"Don't touch that, please," Haskell said sharply.

She took her hand away—flushing with embarrassment. "I beg your pardon. I really have no special interest in the book."

"No matter, Miss Mercer. I suppose I'm fussy. Perhaps the old things shouldn't be about—but I like to have everything as it was in my stepfather's time—my stepfather, Dr. Jethro Bracebridge. I was very devoted to him. I watched over his last melancholy years when the old place was shut up. We'll have tea here, and then you can go to your rooms. You'll dine upstairs tonight."

Janet was beginning to breathe more freely. She removed her hat, and her soft, burnished brown hair released made a kind of aureole about her face. Her eyes with excitement and fatigue were at once bright and dark, and more deeply blue than Arthur had ever known a woman's eyes. Even Mrs. Denver looked at her with a kind of maternal admiration; and Arthur felt antidepressory jealousy of "Hamlet." They saw him pass the three front windows walking slowly, his cloak blowing in the wind. Then he entered; a young man with old eyes, a very sensitive, slightly repressed mouth, and a rather puzzled, almost apprehensive expression.

"I am Wilton Payne, the new teacher of psychology," he said simply.

Arthur shook hands with him, and introduced him to Janet and Mrs. Denver. Upon Janet his eyes rested with friendly quiet admiration.

"And you, I believe, Miss Mercer, are to bring Crashaw, and Chaucer, Burns and Shelley to this ancient academy?"

"I hope so?"

"In all my life I never knew a place so silent," Mrs. Denver announced in a hushed voice as if she were afraid of some one creeping up behind her. "Where are the scholars?"

Wilton Payne and Arthur exchanged glances, and as if reading each other's thoughts, looked nervously away. The former arose from his seat and stared out of one of the windows.

Author of

"ETIQUETTE," "THE BLUE BOOK OF SOCIAL USAGE," Etc.

MISCELLANEOUS

DEAR Mrs. Post: My young son gesticulates with his knife and fork at table. This habit upsets me terribly but I can't seem to break him of it. Can you suggest any way?

Answer: Would he mind if he saw you do it? If he would, you might copy him—especially if a friend of his is present. If he does not care, then you will either have to deprive him of some small privileges or (and in my opinion better) let him earn a privilege reward by marks of excellence; 100 meals without doing it once, for instance, would earn something he wants.

My dear Mrs. Post: Are cards removed from funeral flowers before the flowers are photographed? Or are the names simply written down for a record to use in writing thank you notes?

Answer: They are taken off and a description of the flowers written on the back of each card, for future thanks.

Dear Mrs. Post: I have a new daughter just three days old. My husband was killed two months ago. Under these tragic circumstances shall I announce my baby's birth by sending out cards as we would have done, or do I simply do nothing about it at all? If any announcement were sent to the newspaper, how would it be worded?

Answer: Sending announcements of a child's birth is entirely a matter of personal inclination. In your case it would be best to telephone or write to your intimate friends; they in turn tell others. I mean, of course, that a member of your family will do this for you. To send a baby card tied to your own black bordered one would emphasize the tragedy very painfully. I wouldn't do it if I were you. The announcement in the newspaper would read: "Daughter of Mrs. John Jones and the late Mr. Jones."

Dear Mrs. Post: When my husband and I happen to be in the room, should we shake hands when a boy friend of my younger sister leaves after having spent the evening in our house? This sister lives with us.

Answer: If your sister's friend is a regular visitor, you would probably look up and, without paying particular attention, say, "Good night, Tom." If he is a stranger, or some one who does not come to the house often, your natural impulse would be to shake hands with him when he leaves.

DINING SERVICE

DEAR Mrs. Post: While dining in the house of a stranger the other night I noticed that her waitress brought in a dessert plate with a fine doily on it and on top of that a finger bowl. The silver for dessert was already at the places. I had never had a finger bowl brought in just this way. My hostess removed it and the doily from the dessert plate and put the bowl down on the doily at the left to the back of the dessert plate. The dessert was a rich fudge cake, which would have soiled the doily miserably. Is it correct to use a doily take the place of a plate which matches the finger bowl and which stands on top of the dessert plate usually without any doily between them?

Answer: I don't think I understand your question. I don't see how the cake could possibly come in contact with the doily. Doilies are not often used, but when they are, you pick your cup with the finger bowl and put both down together on the tablecloth where there is space. Then you put whatever it may be on the plate. You certainly would not put food on the doily, ever!

My dear Mrs. Post: (1) How does one remove watermelon seeds from the mouth at table? (2) A friend told me that tablespoons are not the real serving spoons. I have always used them as such, which must be wrong. (3) Is it ever all right to eat peas with a spoon, incase, or must they be juggled with a fork? (4) Are little side dishes always taboo? (5) In a restaurant, when foods are sometimes served in separate dishes, is it correct to eat them directly from the serving dish or should all food be put from there over on the dinner plate?

Answer: (1) Remove all that you can with the fruit knife and fork, before lifting a piece to the mouth, and any seeds left in the fruit are removed between thumb and finger, or dropped into the cupped hand. They are in either case dried as completely as possible with tongue and between lips. (2) There are slightly larger spoons used for serving, but tablespoons answer perfectly. (3) Spoon absolutely tabu. Mash them slightly with the fork, if you must. But I can't see that there is any difficulty ever. (4) Correctly, yes. (5) You should put them on your plate, but there is no rule because conventionally side dishes are not used.

Susie Balances the Budget

By MABEL L. CLAPP

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

"WHAT this family needs is a budget," said Sam oracularly.

The monthly battle of the bills was over, and Susie in a state of exhaustion reclined on the couch with Sammy on the hearth rug.

"Every one must choose and judge values in money matters," he went on. "It teaches discrimination, trains one in a sense of values, and is good for mental development. It would be good for you."

"Then I won't do it," said Susie stubbornly. "I'm not going to undertake any more things that are good for me, because they just lead to nothing but grief. When I did those setting up exercises I sprained my knee, and it was in that class in home economics that I met that horrid Mrs. Budlong who bought things on my charge account and never paid for them."

"This isn't a geometrical theorem, Honey. You can add, can't you?"

"Not long rows," said Susie firmly. "They never come out twice alike."

The battle of the budget was joined, but in the end, Sammy, who was a diplomat as well as an orator, prevailed, for he had Susie persuaded that budgeting was one of life's rosiest pastimes.

"It really isn't any trouble at all," said Susie, displaying the neat little loose covered book to her mother. "You just keep track of what you spend."

"But what for?" insisted Mrs. Jarvis. "Why bother?"

"Well," said Susie, doubtfully, "Sammy says then you know where your money goes."

"You know where it goes anyway, if you count your change," said Mrs. Jarvis impatiently.

It was with some pride that Susie displayed her book to Sammy at the end of the first month. "Great work, old girl," was his comment as he surveyed the neat work and added totals with what seemed to Susie lightning speed. "You see, you're beginning to get results already. Most of the time before your allowance has been gone at the end of the month, and now you have $2.20 on hand."

"Oh, but I haven't," objected Susie. "I've spent it all and had to borrow $10 from my personal allowance."

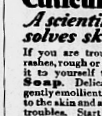

Sammy sighed heavily and settled up his bills for the battle of endeavoring to demonstrate statistically that Susie had failed to keep track of all her expenditures and that it was absolutely necessary to do so.

DAISY FLY KILLER

Tree Transformation Is Puzzle to Scientists

It is one of the puzzles of science why some trees, long buried, turn to coal or oil, as they have done in Pennsylvania, and others change to stone as in the Far West.

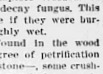

For practical utilization, the oil and coal transformation means the most to the civilization of the United States. For scientific studies, however, the transformation of a tree or plant into several drops of oil ruins any chances of investigating the form or structure.

The remarkable preservation of California trees is accounted for, in part, by the complete freedom of their cells from decay fungus. This would be possible if they were buried while thoroughly wet.

The changes found in the wood were a slight degree of petrification —the turning to stone—, some crushing and a pronounced decrease in the soluble materials, cellulose and fibrous substance. In no case did the wood become coal-like or otherwise unrecognizable in its characteristics. Redwood, pine and cedar of Lebanon were included in the studies made.

Likes and Dislikes

"Do you enjoy freedom of speech?"

"Not always," answered Senator Sorghum. "I can't get along with the kind of man who insists on saying anything he likes in a way that makes everybody dislike him."

There were 522,000 cars sold in the United States for the first four months of 1934. A country that can buy 40,000 cars a day in addition to the millions that are already in use, is not so bad off.

Congratulations to Dr. A. M. Morgan on his election as department vice-commander of the American Legion at the state convention in Gainesville last week. Dr. Morgan won outstanding recognition as commander of Highlands Post two years ago, and has continued to give much time to Legion affairs since. He was recently nominated at a district conference in Wauchula and was elected at the convention without opposition.

Our veterans are winning honors right and left. Word has just been received that Col. Charles R. Head has been elected junior vice-commander of the Department of Florida United Spanish War Veterans in convention in Pensacola this week. Col. Head served as department adjutant last year, and has been active in veterans affairs for many years. His election is a suitable recognition of his fitness, and is richly deserved.

Wauchula's frog jumping contest calls to mind the story of the little boy who had been whipped and given the well-known lecture by his father on "when he was a boy." Afterwards, the little fellow was leaning, with his head hanging low, against the woodshed, thinking things over, when he saw a large frog squatting near his foot. He picked up a board nearby and stuck it under the frog and catapulted him some twenty feet through the air. "Now you can tell your kids what a helluva leap you made when you were a boy," he said.

One of the things that needs debunking in this country is the cigarette ads. A few months ago, one of the companies advised the ladies to smoke cigarettes and grow thin. Now, another tells them to light a fag and restore their energy. One of these days you may expect to see a rival brand heralded as a sure cure for chilblains, corns and fallen arches. And as one paragrapher aptly remarks, now that they have taught the girls to smoke cigarettes, they should try to influence them to buy some.

We have heard of a salesman talking himself out of a sale, and we have seen a candidate talk himself out of votes, but we never knew until recently that you could talk your competitor out of business. In an interview with Jerry Carter, the Winter Haven Chief quotes him as saying that "at no time would he permit the discussionary power vested in the railroad commission to be used for the purpose of regulating one person or corporation out of business for the benefit of another." We don't know just what this "discussionary power" is, but if Jerry Carter entered into the discussion, there wouldn't be a chance for anybody else to get in a word edgeways.

Park Trammell accuses Pepper of spending $100,000 in his race for the Senate, and charges that the fund is being provided by special interests. Trammell offers no proof of his charges, for he has none, and people pay scant attention to such claptrap. To our knowledge, Pepper never spent a dollar in Highlands county except for his traveling expense while here on a speaking tour. What advertising he had was paid for by local supporters. Yet he led the ticket in this county. He was high man in forty of the sixty-seven counties, and showed his greatest strength in the smaller counties, where people generally vote their convictions and little money is ever spent by state candidates. No,—Trammell is wrong. Pepper is not buying his seat in the senate. He is winning it solely on his merits.

Lake Wales and Winter Haven have been having a lively scrap over the route of the new Federal Highway No. 19. Winter Haven interests are attempting to divert the new road from its path down the Ridge from Haines City to Lake Placid, says the Lake Wales Highlander, and if their efforts are successful the sector from Haines City to Avon Park will be left on a side road. Primarily, Avon Park is interested in having the road come through Avon Park, and this much seems assured. However, we believe the route from Haines City, "The Gateway City," straight down the Ridge would be the most logical path for this road, and it is fairly certain that this route will be taken. It would be unthinkable to leave Lake Wales and the Bok Tower off of the route. The Singing Tower is one of the major attractions of Central Florida, and the new highway should come near enough to enable tourists to see it without inconvenience. Certainly this factor will have serious consideration by the state road department when the route is finally selected.

LET THEM REMAIN

A contemporary "views with alarm" a proposed liberalization of the immigration laws, providing that "The Secretary of Labor may, in his discretion allow an alien otherwise deportable under the law to remain in the United States if he is of good moral character and has not been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude, and has not engaged in any subversive political agitation or conduct." Such alien shall have resided in the United States for 10 years, or must be able to find a near relative who is living here.

If properly administered, this law would cover many cases that because of peculiar circumstances require special adjudication. There are men in this country, who retuned to their native lands at the outbreak of the war and joined their armies to fight for their countries and the allied cause. After the war, they were denied re-entrance to this country, because of tightening immigration laws. But many of them found their way back by devious means. Some of them have entered business, bought homes, married and are rearing families. If they have lived here for ten years, and have obeyed our laws, accepted our institutions and are otherwise making good citizens, why deny them the full benefits of citizenship with the protection and security that goes with it?

There are countless others who, through technicalities of the immigration laws have become separated, husband from wife, father from son, brother from sister. Should these be kept apart indefinitely merely through unfortunate force of circumstances brought about largely through their ignorance of the law?

The law does not let down the bars. It would not interfere with the deportation of labor disturbers and agitators. To remain here they must have proven themselves worthy and good citizens.

Your Americanism and ours can be traced back but a few generations at best. This great country was settled by the forbears of these people. The pages of history are studded with the names of foreign-born who have achieved greatness in science, invention, literature and the professions. Who can say that any of these should have been denied the opportunities afforded by this country in the development of those talents?

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

Well, seein' that Mr. Trammell and Mr. Pepper are about to enter the ring for the main bout of the evening, I figured it might be a good idea to do a little checkin' before placin' any bets.

In the free-for-all preliminary Mr. Trammell won a rather doubtful decision. His four opponents had him on the defensive from the start with this guy Pepper crowdin' him against the ropes until it was downright pitiful. Mitchell, Sikes and Wells didn't worry him much but Pepper was "flies in his soup" and if it hadn't been for the others gettin' in the way, he would probably have knocked the title holder colder than a polar bear's nose.

Now, with the two of 'em in the ring and nobody else in the argument it ought to be a sweet little melee. If Trammell insists on wearin' all that hair he can sure count on gettin' plenty of pepper in it before he's through and it might be a good idea if he'd have somebody in his corner who knows how to throw up a sponge just in case.

The Lakelander realizes that he's got his hands full with this boy Pepper, the youngster is fast and a clean snappy fighter. Trammell's handlers have got the big fellow trainin' like nobody's business but the punishment he took in the first go-round didn't do him any good. Trammell followers say their man is alright and predict he will win but the sports-writers and public are plenty skeptical and figure that nothin' but a lucky punch can save him.

While the official decision went to Trammell in the first bout Pepper won a clean newspaper decision and the sports-writers both here and in Washington favor the youngster to win, while the bettin' odds are with him two to one.

Trammell is tryin' to laugh-off the sports-writers by low ratin' 'em and sayin' they are controlled or have been bought, which ought to help him a lot when he climbs into the ring, with these guys he's been callin' names, all sittin' in the press box with plenty of pencils, typewriters and telegraph keys to play on.

Of course I ain't takin' sides myself and I'm not gonna quote "Time" or the "Merry-go-round" or other dope sheets for fear the big fellow will be classin' me as biased, but I figured that if I'd confine myself to the facts as set down officially by such an undisputed authority as Mr. Noah Webster in his book known as the Dictionary I'd be playin' safe.

So I looked up both Trammell and Pepper and here is what Mr. Webster has to say about both of 'em:

TRAMMEL: A kind of a net to catch birds or fish, etc. Something impeding activity or progress. To check, hamper, shackle or restrain.

PEPPER: A hot pungent spice. A seasoning. A climbing shrub.

Now maybe Mr. Webster was controlled or bought when he wrote the above, but if you ask me, I think the gentleman was right, in fact even righter than he thought he was when he wrote it. When it comes to hittin' the well-known nail on the head, all I got to say is that Mr. Noah Webster sure swings a mean hammer.

Alright children the class in English is dismissed, report on Tuesday the 26th and mark an X on your examination paper for whichever definition suits your fancy.

It's no skin off my nose and I'm sure it'll be alright with Mr. Webster, but whatever you do be sure and vote, it'll make it just that much more interestin'.

COUNTY AGENT ISSUES WARNING TO GROWERS

Makes Suggestions About Spraying and Fertilizing of Citrus Groves

By LOUIS ALSMEYER,
County Agent.

Rust mites have shown up in most groves in the county in considerable quantities the past few days and any groves that have not been sprayed or dusted recently should be properly examined and treated. Experiments this past year under the citrus control committee have shown that russet fruit will perhaps not be marketed in years of heavy crops.

* * *

Results secured from the use of poultry manure as a fertilizer for citrus groves has been very satisfactory and this is reflected in large amount of this matter being used this season at the uniform price of $15 per ton at the poultry plant. Most poultrymen are trying the manure with ground phosphate at the rate of about 400 lbs. per ton and this is very beneficial to the manure as it makes the decomposition more uniform and prevents the loss of ammonia or nitrogen. The resulting poultry manure analyses about 2.7 percent ammonia, 3 percent phosphate, and 1 percent potash, and is the best carrier of zine of any of our organic fertilizers. Orders and requests point to the use of over 55 tons of this material in this county this summer.

* * *

With the early summer rains there has been an excellent growth of grass and other type cover crops and many people are wanting to buy crotelaria seed at this time for sowing. Experience has shown that late planting of crotelaria has not been satisfactory and it would seem much better to fertilize the grass and native cover crop with a good application of water soluable ammonia during the next month rather than to try to sow crotelaria at this time. It has been found possible to double the tonnage of grass.

* * *

The heavy production of fall eggs is very important to the successful poultrymen, consequently care should be taken in throwing flocks into an early molt so that the molt is in too early and they will go into regular fall molt again. The most satisfactory results in throwing birds into a forced molt during the summer have been secured by taking the feed away from them for a day and then only feeding them scratch grain for a few days. In the fall it is advisable to use lights so as to lengthen the hours of feeding and this could be done cheaply with either kerosene or gasoline lanterns or electric lights. The use of lights in the fall to decrease the time of molting has proved very satisfactory in this county.

* * *

Crowding of pullets in buildings has proved very harmful and the construction of 8x12 range shelters which are capable of handling 200 birds have proved to be very desirable. The walls and floors of these range shelters are made of wire and the buildings constructed rather lightly so as to facilitate moving on the range and proper cleaning.

75,000 Legionnaires Will Visit Miami

Gainesville, June 13.—(FNS)—Edward A. Hayes, of Decatur, Ill., National Commander of the American Legion, while a guest of the state convention of Legionnaires last week, stated that he believed the attendance at the 1934 national convention in Miami in October will far exceed the previous estimate of 75,000 guests.

"Florida's national appeal, her climatic advantages, her distinctiveness among the states of the nation, Miami's beauty, all offer a peculiar interest to the world at large, and the attendance at the October meeting will compare favorably with the record made last year at Chicago," said the head of almost a million Legionnaires.

"Legionnaires are coming to Florida not only to bask in the sun and listen to what the soft waves whisper, but to do serious work. The Legion has a definite purpose. It loves to play, yes, but is just as serious with its many official problems," Commander Hayes stated.

Mrs. Guthrie, Mrs. Maxwell Have Tea

The home of Mrs. George Guthrie was the scene of a very pretty and entertaining tea, Tuesday afternoon, when Mrs. Guthrie and Mrs. Hayes Maxwell honored Miss Virginia Guthrie, who has recently returned from Orlando, where she attended school. Miss Zonih Bradshaw, of Rome, Ga., sister and guest of Mrs. Maxwell. Miss Marjorie Lacey who will leave the latter part of this month to attend school at Wesley Memorial and Emory University in Atlanta, Miss Selma Hermstead of Louisville, Ky., the guest of Mrs. R. A. Gerrard, and Mrs. Alvin Clouse, of Chattanooga, Tenn., guest of Mrs. Guthrie.

The pastel shades of the rainbow were carried out in the beautiful bouquets of yellow snapdragons, pink rosebuds, orchid dahlias and other summer flowers interspersed with green.

The guests were met at the door by Mrs. Guthrie and Mrs. E. P. Lacey who presented them to the receiving line, which was composed of Mrs. Maxwell and the honor guests.

The table, where Mrs. W. M. Reck and Mrs. W. H. Yates poured Russian tea, was laid with an exquisite lace cloth and four colored tapers burned brightly upon it. The rainbow colors were again carried out in the ribbon sandwiches and mints that were served with the tea.

A most delightful program had been arranged and was presented during the afternoon. Among those on the program and assisting in the dining room were: Mrs. Daisy Gerrald, Misses Virginia Baldwin, Zelda Langford, Carmen Booth, Letta Reck, Marcia and Dorothy Weisheyer, Jane Heubner, Patsy Loomis and Mary Coen. Mrs. Guy Orr and Mrs. R. A. Gerrard also assisted in the dining room.

About one hundred and fifty guests called between the hours of four and six.

Winifred Demorest Celebrates Birthday

Miss Winifred Carol Demorest celebrated her eighth birthday anniversary by entertaining a few of her friends Wednesday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Demorest on Lake Lotela.

The young hostess received a large number of attractive gifts from her guests who were: Betty Chason Sherman, Winifred Hood, Margaret Dilley, Neita Bryant, Mariolyn Holliday, Ruby Tate, Peggy Joe Smith, Dorothy Lawhon, Pattie Round, Fay Luke, Mary Albritton, Edward Sherman, Paul Rounds and Bobby Keller.

Games were played until a late hour in the afternoon when the guests were invited into the dining room where refreshments of ice cream and cake were served from a beautifully decorated table. A color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the refreshments and the birthday cake, which formed the centerpiece of the table, was iced in white with eight pink candles burning brightly upon it and "Happy Birthday" written across the top in pink.

Mrs. Demorest was assisted in entertaining by Miss Alice Davidson.

Mrs. Clark Entertains Club

Mrs. A. R. Clark was hostess to the Wednesday Afternoon Bridge club at her home Thursday afternoon.

Mixed bouquets of summer flowers were used in decorating the party rooms and at the conclusion of the games a delicious salad course was served.

Prizes for the afternoon were won by Mrs. W. E. Dawson and Mrs. E. E. Smith.

Mrs. Clark's guests included Mrs. W. E. Dawson, Mrs. Roland Droit, Mrs. Charles Bell, Mrs. W. W. McFarland, Mrs. J. L. Taylor, Mrs. E. E. Smith, Mrs. Lester Armstrong, Mrs. Phil Abrams and Mrs. J. L. Wells.

Rhymes-Dunn Wedding Saturday

Rufus Rhymes and Miss Mildred Dunn, both of this city, were quietly married Saturday at the office of County Judge M. C. Whitehurst in the court house at Sebring. Only a few friends and relatives of the couple were present.

Library Report for Month of May

By the appointment of the President of the Woman's Club, the Library Committee for the year 1934-35 is composed of:

Mrs. Julia Mason Smith, chairman; Mrs. E. G. Todd, vice chairman; Mrs. G. P. Thayer, secretary and treasurer.

Miss Alice Davidson, Mrs. J. D. Raab, Mrs. Frederic Shepherdson and Mrs. Roy Chapin.

Mrs. R. G. Williams and her assistant, Miss Claire Vanderwende continue the supervision of the library and report registrations for May as follows: adults 1, juvenile 9, circulation 1070.

The committee is indebted to Miss Mabel Lee for Time, the weekly news magazine.

At the monthly meeting in May, in order to stimulate interest in library activity, it was considered advisable for the committee to meet once a month that the librarian might bring before them all subjects necessary for the advancement of her work.

Even though the library is constantly appealing to the public for gifts of books, may we once again ask for donations for the children's shelves. If there are any books in your home that are not being used and are interesting to children, we will be grateful to have them added to our shelves. This being vacation period, there will be more time for reading and if we can offer new books to the children their interest in reading will become stimulated, thus proving to them that reading is a great source of culture.

The committee is grateful to the Baptist Sunday school for a generous donation of books, so perhaps there are others who will find they can aid in a similar way.

Signed, Mrs. G. P. Thayer, secretary and treasurer, Library Committee.

Wells-Morgan Marriage

(Plant City Enterprise)

A quiet marriage but one of interest here and elsewhere was that of Miss Blossym Wells and Irving R. Morgan, both of this city, which was solemnized the evening of Saturday, May 26th, by Rev. A. R. Larrick, pastor of the Presbyterian church, at the manse.

The young bride, who wore a becoming green gown with white trimmings and white accessories, has been here a year and a half, coming here from Avon Park, where she graduated from high school. For some time she has been connected with the local office of Myles L. Greene Produce Company.

Mr. Morgan is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Morgan, Sr., and came here some five years ago from Dothan, Ala., where he attended and graduated from Dothan high school. He has been connected in business here for some time and at present is associated with Myles L. Greene Produce Company. Both he and his bride have wide circles of friends.

Immediately following the ceremony the young couple left for Denmark, S. C., where the Greene Company is dealing during the fruit and vegetable season. They will return here in July to reside.

Dilleys Entertain Bridge Club

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dilley entertained the Thursday Night Bridge club with a "tacky" party at their home last Thursday night.

The rooms were decorated with periwinkles and fern. Prizes for the tackiest couple was won by Mr. and Mrs. Freed Peden. Prize for the tackiest woman by Mrs. J. H. Hood and prize for the tackiest man by Freed Peden.

Sunday School Lesson

FOR JUNE 17, 1934

(Compiled by Moore Haven-Religious-Literary Society).

Subject: The Risen Lord and the Great Commission.

Golden Text: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world, Matthew 28:19-20."

Time and Place: Sunday after the Crucifixion, at Jerusalem, Giving the commission later, in Galilee.

Parallel Accounts of Lesson: Mark 16-1-9, 15 Luke 24:1-8.

Between the crucifixion and the resurrection a part of Friday, the whole of Saturday, and a part of Sunday intervened, which, according to the Jewish mode of reckoning, were counted as three days. Later on Friday Joseph of Arimathaea, a friend of Jesus asked Pilate that he might place Christ's body in the new tomb which was close to the scene of the crucifixion, and the request was granted. The same evening the women from Galilee prepared spices and ointments that they might embalm the body early on Sunday morning, which would be their earliest opportunity after the Jewish Sabbath had passed.

The first part of the lesson is as follows: In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. And behold, there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from Heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment was white as snow: and for fear of him the keepers did shake and became as dead men. And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: For I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; There shall ye see him: lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy: and did run to bring his disciples word. And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethern that they go into Galilee, and there they see me." The appearances of Jesus to his followers after his resurrection are imparted in studying this lesson. Peloubet's work on the lessons says: These appearances counting those to the women as first and second were: (2) to Peter by himself (Luke 24: 34), (4) to the two disciples from Emmaus (Luke 24: 13-31), (5) to all the apostles except Thomas (John 20: 19-25), (6) to the apostles, Thomas being present (John 20: 26-29), (7) to seven disciples on the shore of the Sea of Galilee (John 21: 1-13), (9) to more than five hundred disciples at once, in Galilee (1 Cor. 15:6), (10) to James by himself (1 Cor. 15: 7 and finally (11) to all the apostles, at Christ's ascension (Luke 24: 50, 51; Act 1: 6-12). No 8 in this series, the appearance to the eleven disciples (Judas being dead) on the mountain in Galilee, is that with which Matthew now concludes his Gospel. These eleven appearances extend through forty days. They were gradually farther apart and they came to a decisive close at the ascension, in order that the church might take up the great work of evangelising the world. In today's lesson we are told that the eleven disciples "went into Galilee into a mountain, where Jesus had appointed them." It was there they received the Great Commission, while the fact that later the ascension of Christ occured on Mount Olivet, near Jerusalem, See Luke 24: 50-51. Acts 1: 12. Pleubet says the Great Commission was given on the 8th of Christ's Appearances after his resurrection, while the ascension was at the 11th and last appearance. "And Jesus said, * * "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

Building Permits Increase In State

Jacksonville, June 14.—(FNS)—According to figures compiled by the State Chamber of Commerce, building permits in 32 Florida cities reached a total of $1,557,625 during the month of May. This represents an increase of $657,774 over permits issued for the same period in 1933.

Miami Beach led the state with permits valued at $596,365. The other municipalities ranking as the first 10 were the Palm Beaches, $254,706; Miami $188,916; Jacksonville, $119,221; Tallahassee, $68,827; Tampa, $66,572; St. Petersburg, $61,908; Daytona Beach, $31,835; St. Augustine, $29,525; and Fort Lauderdale, $25,149.

The Miami district also led the state in building permits issued by the state hotel commission during May with a total of $204,050.

"The letter I gave you this morning—did you post it?" asked Mrs. Brown inquiringly.

Brown put his hand in his jacket pocket and drew out the letter.

"I'm afraid not, my dear," he said coolly enough.

"Of course you didn't!" she snapped. "And I told you that it was very important."

"Yes, I remember, dear," he returned.

"How like a man that is!" she continued.

"But, dear—" he stammered.

"Don't 'but' me. I'm angry," she snapped.

"But, dear, be reasonable. Look at the letter; you forgot to address it," he explained.—Stray Stories.

PRINT FROCK THAT IS WORTHY PLACE IN ANY WARDROBE

PATTERN 1776

There's nothing like a print frock to suggest spring—to brighten up our wardrobe—and our spirits! We'd love the model sketched here in one of the colorful all-over designs so popular this season. It has truly flattering, feminine lines—the gracefully flared sleeves, the slim semi-belted waistline and length-giving skirt panel. With the neckline worn open, artificial flowers posed at the neckline add a chic note. For added interest, tiny buttons trim the back bodice. Sleeves may be omitted or may be made of contrast.

Pattern 1776 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 4 yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

FOOTSTEPS

"Are you going to teach your small boy to follow in your footsteps?"

"No," said Senator Sorghum. "Of course, he'll go into politics. Everybody has to. But nobody can go on following footsteps. Emergencies are bound to arise which compel each person of voting age to decide for himself which way he is going to jump."

Encouragement

While the young suitor was waiting to take out his young lady the latter's little sister entered the room.

"Did you know my sister's got three other boy friends?" said the child.

The suitor pricked up his ears at this piece of newgs.

"Really!" he said, in surprise. "I haven't seen any of them."

"Neither have I," returned the child, "but she gave me a quarter to tell you."—Border Cities Star.

The Battle of Adobe Walls

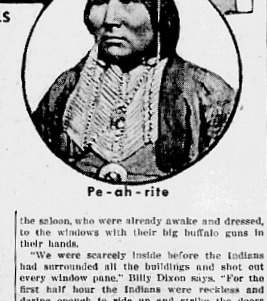

THE CHARGE ON ADOBE WALLS
(From the Painting by J. N. Marchand)

Billy Dixon

Chief Quanah

Pe-ah-rite

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SIXTY years ago this month there occurred a fight, the story of which has become one of the classics of the Western frontier. That was the Battle of Adobe Walls which began on the early morning of June 27, 1874, when a war party of several hundred Comanche, Kiowa, Cheyenne, Arapahoe and Kiowa Apache Indians attacked a buffalo hunters' camp, occupied by 28 men and one woman, located on the south fork of the Canadian river in what is now Hutchinson county in the Texas Panhandle.

Characteristic of its ranking as a frontier classic is the number of men who all one time or another have been called "survivors" of the Adobe Walls fight. Seemingly every old-timer who was ever a buffalo hunter on the Southwestern plains in the '70s has been accorded the distinction of "He fought at Adobe Walls" by amateur historians and imaginative newspaper reporters, and this, despite the fact that there has been in existence for many years an authentic list of the actual participants which might easily disprove the claim advanced in favor of spurious defenders of that outpost of the frontier.

Under the terms of the Medicine Lodge treaty of 1867, the federal government fixed the Arkansas river as the northern boundary of the Indian country for the tribes of the Southwestern plains and guaranteed that white hunters should not cross that stream. But they did.

In 1872 the mushroom town of Dodge City, Kan., sprang into existence and became the outfitting point and center of activity of the hide hunters who, with their big Sharps buffalo guns, were constantly invading the red man's country.

By the spring of 1874 the slaughter had been so great that the buffalo had been virtually wiped out near Dodge City. So A. C. Myers, who was in the general merchandise business in Dodge, organized an expedition to establish a trading post farther south where the hunters could get their supplies and to which they would bring their buffalo hides which Myers would freight back to the Kansas "hide capital." Forming a partnership with Fred Leonard and accompanied by a party of 20-odd frontiersmen, Myers set out for the forbidden Indian country.

Among the members of the party were Jim Hanrahan, an old buffalo hunter who was going along to open a saloon at the new trading post; Thomas O'Keefe, a blacksmith; and two young buffalo hunters destined for future fame—Billy Dixon and Bat Masterson. After a journey of 150 miles the expedition reached a spot on the south fork of the Canadian where stood the ruins of an old trading post, known as Adobe Walls, which had been built by William Bent and Ceran St. Vrain, some time before 1840. A mile or so farther on, in a broad valley where there was a pretty stream called East Adobe Walls creek, Myers and his companions unloaded their wagons and set about establishing the second Adobe Walls which was to become even more famous than the first.

Myers and Leonard built a picket house, 20 by 60 feet in size; Hanrahan put up a sod house, 25 by 60, and O'Keefe opened his blacksmith shop in a picket structure, 15 feet square. Myers and Leonard also built a stockade corral by setting big cottonwood logs on end in the ground. A short time later, Rath and Wright, leading merchants of Dodge City, decided to establish a branch store at Adobe Walls and built a sod house, 16 by 20 feet, leaving James Langton in charge of the new business there. To Adobe Walls also came William Olds and his wife to open a restaurant.

For several years the Indians had been watching with increasing alarm the wasteful slaughter of the buffalo by the white hunters. So when in the spring of 1874 a Comanche medicine man named Isatai announced that he had a new medicine which would enable them to wipe out the white men who were exterminating the buffalo, he found the tribesmen ripe for such a crusade.

The first Indian leader to agree to help in this laudable enterprise was a chief of the Comanches, Quanah, the half-breed son of Cynthia Ann Parker, who as a little girl had been stolen from her home in Texas and had become the wife of the great Chief Peta Noconn. Then the medicine man "carried the pipe" to the Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Kiowas and Kiowa Apaches and they readily agreed to accompany their Comanche brethren.

So a great war party of between 600 and 700 mounted warriors set out for the buffalo hunters' camp and on the night of June 26 they camped about five or six miles from Adobe Walls, began painting themselves and their horses and preparing themselves for the charge against the hated white men. "Those men shall not fire a shot; we shall kill them all," was the promise of Isatai.

That night at Adobe Walls 28 men and one woman slept peacefully, little realizing that a storm of savage wrath was about to be hurled against them. In Hanrahan's saloon were Hanrahan, Bat Masterson, Mike Welch, Hiram Watson, Billy Ogg, James McKinley, "Bermuda" Carlisle, Billy Dixon and a man named Shepherd. In Myers and Leonard's store were Leonard, James Campbell, Edward Trevor, Frank Brown, Harry Armitage, Billy Tyler, "Old Man" Keeler, Mike McCabe, Hehry Lease and two men known only as "Dutch Henry" and "Frenchy." In Rath and Wright's store were James Langton, George Eddy, Thomas O'Keefe, Sam Smith, Andrew Johnson and William Olds and his wife. Just outside the stockade two brothers named Shadler, who bore the nicknames of "Mexico Ike" and "Blue Bill" and who were engaged in freighting hides to Dodge City, were sleeping in their wagons with a big Newfoundland dog at their feet.

About two o'clock in the morning Shepherd and Mike Welch were awakened by a report that sounded like the crack of a rifle. They sprang up and discovered that the big cottonwood ridge pole which supported the dirt roof of Hanrahan's saloon had cracked and was about to allow the roof to collapse. Hastily awakening others in the place, they set to work repairing the roof and this commotion aroused others who fell to and assisted them.

Before going to sleep, Dixon and Hanrahan had prepared themselves for an early start in the morning for the buffalo hunting grounds to the northwest. By the time the repairs to the roof of the saloon were completed, the sky was growing red in the east. So Hanrahan proposed to Dixon that, instead of going back to bed, they get ready to start out as soon as it was light. To this Dixon agreed and as he started to get his horse he looked down the valley and there, through the dim light of the morning, he saw a sight which almost paralyzed him for a moment.

A dark mass of horsemen was moving swiftly up the valley and the next moment it had spread out like a fan and a mighty war-whoop shattered the stillness. Isatai was coming with his host of wild tribesmen to make good his promise to wipe out the buffalo hunters at Adobe Walls. Throwing his rifle to his shoulder, Dixon fired one shot, then turned and sped toward the Hanrahan saloon as the wild charge of the Indians swept down upon him. But this hasty warning was enough to bring the occupants of the saloon, who were already awake and dressed, to the windows with their big buffalo guns in their hands.

"We were scarcely inside before the Indians had surrounded all the buildings and shot out every window pane," Billy Dixon says. "For the first half hour the Indians were reckless and daring enough to ride up and strike the doors with the butts of their guns." And Andrew Johnson has recorded how the savages backed their horses up against the doors of the buildings and tried to push them in, showing a willingness to fight at close quarters almost unparalleled in Indian warfare."

But the steady fire of the buffalo hunters soon discouraged this and after beating off several attacks, the white men had a chance to take stock of their losses. Strange to say, there were only three. The two Shadler boys, asleep in their wagon outside the stockade, had been killed and scalped. Their big Newfoundland dog had evidently put up a fight, for he was also killed and "scalped"—a piece of hide having been cut from his side. Billy Tyler, one of the defenders of the Leonard and Myers store, was killed early in the fighting and except for some minor wounds these were the only casualties.

Time after time the Indians charged, but as their ponies were knocked down by the heavy slugs of lead from the buffalo guns and more and more of their warriors were killed or wounded, it began to dawn upon them that Isatai had been a false prophet. So the charges ceased. During one of these lulls a young Comanche, gorgeously appareled in war bonnet and scalp shirt and mounted on a fine pony, made a lone charge toward the buildings in the face of a hot fire from the hunters. Riding up close to one of the buildings, he leaped from his pony, thrust a six-shooter through a porthole and emptied it. He then attempted to retreat but was shot down. This daring warrior who had hoped to make a great name for himself by his lone charge was Pe-ah-rite, the son of Horseback, one of the leading chiefs of the Comanches.

By late afternoon the Indians had given up hope of wiping out the defenders of Adobe Walls and began to withdraw. After an anxious night of watchfulness the buffalo hunters discovered the next morning that only a few Indians were lingering around the place and they were soon driven off by some long distance shots. During the second day hunters from some of the outlying camps made their way unmolested into Adobe Walls and that night one of them, Henry Lease, was sent to Dodge City for help.

On the third day a party of about 15 Indians appeared on a high bluff east of Adobe Walls, but they were quickly dispersed by a shot from Billy Dixon's rifle which knocked one of the savages from his horse. It is this incident that gave rise to one of the oft-repeated myths about the Adobe Walls affair, different accounts of it placing the distance of the shot all the way from a mile to a mile and a half! By Dixon's own testimony "The distance was not far from three-fourths of a mile. . . . I was admittedly a good marksman, yet this was what might be called a 'scratch' shot."

More hunters came in on the third day and by the sixth day there were fully a hundred men gathered there. It is among these newcomers that so many of the "survivors" of later years were numbered. But by this time the danger from the Indians had passed. The red men had departed for a series of raids in Kansas and Texas which soon brought the military into the field and resulted in their eventual defeat. But before the affair at Adobe Walls ended there was one more tragedy, one which darkened the life of the brave woman defender, Mrs. Olds. On the fifth day her husband was coming down a ladder with a gun in his hand when it went off accidentally, and she rushed from an adjoining room in time to see his body roll from the ladder and crumple at her feet.

Today three monuments stand on the site of Adobe Walls. One is a small slab of granite which marks the grave of William Olds. Another marks the last resting place of the Shadler brothers. The third is a huge red granite monument which tells that "Here on June 27, 1874, about 700 picked warriors from the Comanche, Cheyenne and Kiowa Indian tribes were defeated by 28 brave frontiersmen" and it bears the names of the 28 who truly "fought at Adobe Walls."

Shortage of Food in Early Pasture

Impossible for Dairy Herd to Get Enough to Hold Weight, Strength.

By John A. Arey, Extension Dairy Specialist, North Carolina State College.—WNU Service.

It is false economy to make cattle depend entirely on pasturage for roughage at this season of the year. Yet many dairymen are inclined to do so on account of the usual shortage of rough feeds in the spring. The belief seems prevalent that young grass will supply a sufficient amount of nourishment for the cattle.

Immature grass is about 90 per cent water, and it is physically impossible for cattle to eat enough of it to maintain their bodyweight and strength and produce a profitable milk flow.

Such practices are also liable to result in the cows eating weeds, wild onions, and buds in an effort to get a sufficient ration. When they do this, their milk is unpalatable and not good for drinking or butter making.

Dry roughage provides the bulk feed needed and also much nourishment that is essential to constant and profitable milk production.

Another factor in heavy grazing of young pastures is the damage done to the sod by extensive trampling and grazing before the soil has dried out. The result will be a greatly curtailed yield later in the year.

Temporary grazing can be provided by such grazing and soiling crops as cereals sown in the fall. Later in the summer, when permanent pastures are in good condition, the cows can gradually be introduced to a more substantial green diet. However, a grain ration is needed at all times.

Pasture Seeding for 3-A Contract Acres Suggested

More Illinois land will be seeded to grass during the next two years than ever before in the history of the state, prophesies H. P. Rusk, head of the animal husbandry department of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

This "back-to-grass" movement is spreading throughout the state as a result of the government's corn-hog and wheat adjustment programs in which some 2,000,000 acres of land will be taken out of crop production by co-operating Illinois farmers.

A large percentage of this former wheat and corn land will be seeded to permanent or semi-permanent pastures for live stock and many Illinois producers are wondering what grass seeds or mixtures of seeds should be used.

For early live stock carrying capacity of permanent pastures, all records at the University of Illinois were for a heavy seeding, consisting of 12.3 pounds of bluegrass, 2.5 pounds of red clover, 2.5 pounds of sweet clover, 4.1 pounds of timothy, 1.6 pounds of alsike clover and .4 pounds of white clover. This mixture may be used for seeding contracted acres, without violation of the AAA corn-hog contract, provided it is in addition to the average acreage devoted to pasture in 1932 and 1933 and is not pastured in 1934.

Bees Are in Demand

Were it not that honey producing is profitable enough to induce people to keep bees, it would be necessary to raise some type of insect solely for the purpose of pollenizing, says E. F. Phillips, professor of entomology at Cornell university, in his recent address to the Empire State Honey Producers' association. So necessary is the service that bees render to the fruit growers of New York state that 600 colonies of them were imported last year to aid in pollenization in Niagara county alone, and in other counties throughout the fruit-growing region growers are renting colonies of bees for the purpose. Not only do bees produce a $2,000,000 honey crop annually in New York state but they pollenate more than one-third of the $15,000,000 apple crop as well.

NO HARM IN USE OF "RED MEATS"

Assertion Made by New York Authority.

Anyone who has been a member of a thresher crew and who has acquired the appetite characteristic of a thresher can appreciate the extreme of food fads mentioned by it, it. Hinman of the New York state college of agriculture.

The cook caused dismay when she told the threshing crew that they would have no potatoes since they could get enough nourishment from nuts; she placed five peanuts at each plate. It is possible, Professor Hinman admits, to arrange an edible and complete meal of unusual foods, but it is seldom done. The normal person is likely to get all of the real necessities from a diet in which meat, milk, eggs, and the ordinary vegetables are included.

The American Medical association, he says, maintains that the talk about rheumatism, gout, lumbago, and many similar diseases being caused or even aggravated by meat is not backed by known facts. "Red meats," they say, "have nothing whatever to do with uric acid. Nor have they anything to do with causing gout or rheumatism, because neither of these diseases is due to food or drinks of any sort, but solely to focal infections: small pockets of pus around the roots of the teeth, in the tonsils, nasal passages and sinuses, in ulcers of the stomach and bowels, around an inflamed appendix or bladder, or even an inflamed ingrowing toenail, a bunion or a corn. The present belief is: no pockets of pus, no rheumatism or gout.

"Even in chronic inflammations of the kidneys such as the various forms of bright's disease, moderate amounts of meat do no harm what ever. The worst cases on record in all medical history of hardening and turning to lime of the arteries all over the body, and in the kidneys and intestines particularly, have been found in certain orders of oriental monks, who live almost exclusively upon starch and seeds such as peas, beans, and lentils. They abstain entirely from meat."

With present knowledge of the value of meats disproving many past illusions, Professor Hinman urges families to restore meat in the diet; not the finest cuts available, but the nutritious soups and stews, varied with boiling pieces. When two pounds of boiling meat can be bought for a quarter, the cheap cuts are too healthful and appetizing in the diet to be displaced by any other food.

Farmers can have more meat and avoid the surprise at killing time by curing parts of the carcass that is not "Dodge City" residents who are able to buy a quantity of meat can save money by buying enough to get a lower price and home-cure a portion.

Hatch Pheasant Chicks by Artificial Methods

The state of Pennsylvania, which probably turns out more pheasants than any other state, discarded its hen-hatching system last spring and made a complete change over to artificial hatching and rearing, with the result that out of 27,263 eggs set 20,164 chicks were hatched and 16,600 pheasants were raised. Chicks are hatched in electrically heated machines at 103 degrees and after hatching are kept in the incubator hatcher compartment at 100 degrees for 24 hours.

They are then transferred to the brooder house under lower at 98 degrees. The second week they are given access to a sun porch. The third week they are given access to a ground runway and the brooder temperature is reduced gradually until by the fifth week the artificial heat is turned off completely. The sixth and seventh week the chicks are transferred to a holding field and are released during the eighth to the tenth weeks.

Abundance of Vitamins in Spinach and Chard

Though spinach has been the butt of so many jokes, the fact remains that it is one of the finest of our greens if freshly gathered and well cooked. Spinach and its cousin swiss chard are very easily grown in almost any garden and they provide greens throughout the summer and fall. The seeds should be sown quite thinly and when grown should be thinned out to six inches apart. The young plants that are thinned make good greens and by this method there is no waste. The leaves may be pulled off the plants, leaving the roots in the ground to produce more leaves.

Chard is usually used only for the leafy parts, but the thick white stems may be used separately cooked in the same way as asparagus and served with cream sauce or butter.

"Tums" Builds a Home

St. Louis, Mo.—The palatial new building being erected by A. H. Lewis Medicine Co., is a fitting exemplification of the enthusiastic sentiment of millions of users of Tums.

It will present a striking appearance in its contrast of blue-black terra cotta base with mottled cream above the second floor and glittering gold finish on high vertical mullions. Upper windows, fifty feet high, will have gold effect strips between them and furnish abundant light, while lower portion will have etched windows and stainless steel decorations.

The building, machinery and equipment will cost between $100,000 and $150,000 and is to be used exclusively for the manufacture of Tums.—Adv.

Best Pictures of Month at Avon Theatre Next Week

The management of the Avon theatre announces for the coming week and month a list of feature pictures that Avon Park movie fans will certainly enjoy.

Damon Runyon's famous story, "Little Miss Marker," starts off the parade on Sunday and Monday. Every critic, every movie fan who has seen this picture labels it as one of the best pictures produced this year.

The story is a sentimental yarn of a little girl left as security for a racing bet. The girl's father never does return, and she is taken over by a shabby, grouchy, tight-fisted bookmaker, who tries to get advice from his gang of Broadway mugs. The girl takes a liking to her new environment and before long she is talking their lingo and acting their rough, slangy ways.

With a crooked racing deal and a romance on the side, the film reaches a heart-touching climax.

In the cast which is headed by five year old Shirley Temple, are Dorothy Dell who so recently was accidently killed in California, Adophe Menjou, Charles Bickford and Sam Hardy.

A comedy drama that will keep everyone laughing from start to finish is "City Limits" which features Frank Craven, Ray Walker and Sally Blane. This picture is billed for Tuesday and Wednesday as the guest night attraction. There are enough laughs and enough excitement in this picture to please anyone.

Everyone reads comic strips in the daily newspapers and elsewhere and most everybody follows the adventures of Harold, Lillums, Pop and Growing Pains in "Harold Teen." The motion picture version of this famous comic will be shown at the Avon theatre on Thursday and Friday with Hal LeRoy in the leading role. Aiding and abetting Hal are Rochelle Hudson, Guy Kibbie, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert and others. For real honest to goodness entertainment this picture cannot be beat.

As a special added attraction on Friday night only, Manager H. M. Johnson has arranged an amateur night vaudeville performance. He has quaintly labeled it "Home Folks Vaudeville." A number of the most talented performers of Avon Park will compete on the stage of the Avon theatre Friday night for the prizes. The prizes will be awarded according to applause received by the performer, so if one of your friends has entered you should be there to appauld and help win the prizes. Among those entered at this writing are Francis Browne, Thelma Perry, Braxton Hardee, J. C. Stills and T. L. Williams. The regular picture program will be shown in connection with the vaudeville.

The management also announces that as a tryout policy commencing Saturday, June 23, the Saturday program will consist of a double feature program consisting of a fast action western and another type of picture together with the serial and cartoon. Watch for next week's ad to see the titles of the attraction to be shown then.

To Paint Traffic Line On Highways

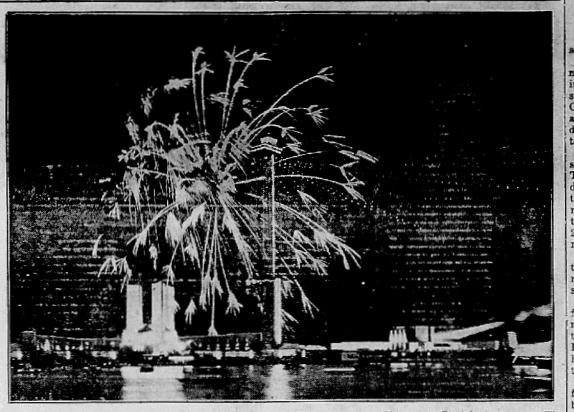

Tallahassee, June 14.—(FNS)—The state road department will shortly begin the work of painting state highways with center stripes for the guidance of motorists.

Ashpalt highways will be marked with an orange colored stripe and concrete highways will have a stripe of black painted down the center.

"The department is making every effort to follow the principles of governor Sholtz' safety campaign by affording automobile and truck drivers the maximum of safety on curves by this method. The general idea is that these stripes are being placed for the guidance of motorists driving at night. This is for the most part true, but it is also true that the day-time driver, rounding a curve at the present day rate of speed, finds considerable comfort in aligning his car by the aid of the center-road stripe," C. B. Treadway, chairman of the road department stated.

Painting of the stripes will involve an expenditure of about $30,000 according to Chairman Treadway.

Fireworks Thrill World's Fair Crowds

NEWS AND VIEWS ON ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

Weekly Presentation of Happenings and Problems Affecting Prosperity

The taxpayer will find a certain amount of encouragement in recent treasury figures concerning emergency expenditures for the eleven months ending May 31.

The deficit, after subtracting public debt retirements, was $3,287,466,000. Mr. Roosevelt's estimate of the deficit, made some months ago, was $7,300,000,000—more than twice the present deficit, with only a month of the fiscal year left to go.

Reason is that emergency spending was much less than anticipated. Where the budget authorized total spending of about $11,000,000,000, only $6,370,000,000 was spent, of which emergency payments came to $5,580,000,000. Routine governmental costs were $2,790,000,000, as compared with $3,477,000,000 a year ago, so the Administration's promises of economy in that field have, to a substantial degree, been fulfilled. Treasury income was well over the preceding comparable period—$2,700,000,000, as against $1,700,000,000.

The unspent emergency money, however, has been appropriated and may still be used. It is generally believed that Mr. Roosevelt will use it during the coming fiscal year, in which the Administration will make its strongest drive against the forces of depression.

The new drive will require money—and plenty of it. By the time this is read, Democratic leaders will have pushed the last of the big money bills through the House, where all appropriations' legislation must, under the Constitution, originate. It was the President's wish that the money be appropriated without specific instructions as to how it is to be spent, leaving it entirely up to him. Representatives weren't quite willing to do that, and under the new bills a percentage of the funds have been specifically allocated. Some of the principal allocations are: $100,000,000 for highway construction; $65,000,000 for public buildings; a maximum of $500,000,000 for PWA work. In actual cash, the President will have something over $899,000,000 for relief purposes. It is said that the President will ask for an additional $150,000,000 or so for drought relief.

Many more millions will likewise be available, if Mr. Roosevelt wants them. The deficiency bill empowers him to divert for relief all money repaid the RFC. The bill likewise gives the RFC authority to buy bonds of political subdivisions which have received PWA construction funds.

Thus, the Administration will face few financial difficulties in the immediate future. It will, however, meet strong opposition from taxpayers' groups which think the magnitude of appropriations reflected in higher taxes, are delaying, rather than helping, the trend toward recovery.

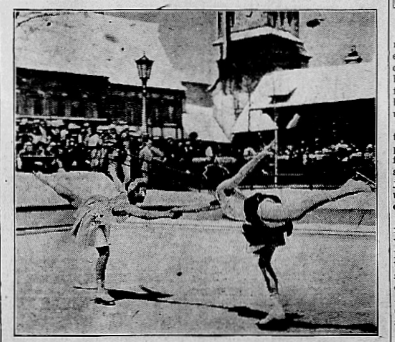

o o o

The silver bloc in Congress has at last made itself felt in legislation—a mixed achievement of both success and failure. It has succeeded to the extent that it has obtained a law empowering the American government to rehabilitate silver values. It has failed insamuch as future activities will be dependent on the attitude of the President—he is forced to do nothing, unless he wants to.

A few weeks ago, Mr. Roosevelt started his silver program. It has two phases: The domestic phase calls for the gradual purchase by the treasury of 1,800,000,000 ounces of silver against which currency will be issued. The foreign phase lies in efforts to obtain world agreement on silver as a monetary metal. The great question, which is now unanswered, is: "Will other powers join in bringing silver back?

What the silver advocates want is bimetalism. Their stand has not varied greatly since Bryan carried their banner—and went down to defeat before McKinley, upholder of the gold standard. Many observers are of the opinion that bimetalism, carefully developed, can be made to work—if all the great financial powers pursue such a policy together. The Administration will seek an accord on this, and there will be a great many conferences, a great deal of talking across the seas, before anything definite is agreed upon. Practically every government knows something should be done about money—but there is a vast amount of disagreement as to what.

Summer Ice Skating at Fair

Winter weather all summer long is the novelty that is attracting thousands daily to the German Black Forest village in the new World's Fair at Chicago. Crowds are flocking to the new Street of Villages, for a "tour of the world" in a single day.

Many Florida Scouts Expected to Attend Fair in August

More than 200 Florida Boy Scouts will go to the World's Fair in Chicago over the Dixie Flyer Route during the week of August 12, Frank Dix, scout executive of the Lakeland council, announced yesterday.

The scouts will travel in a special coach train for which arrangements were made by A. Rice King, Florida passenger agent, Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway, in cooperation with W. M. Wharton, assistant general passenger agent, Atlantic Coast Line, and H. B. Bretney, Florida passenger agent, Louisville and Nashville railroad.

Full approval of the organized scout party has been given by the National Boy Scout Council through Kenneth C. Bents, Atlanta, regional scout executive.

In organizing the scout party, Mr. Dix has been assisted by A. S. Macfarlane, Miami executive; H. N. Brown, Orlando executive, and John B. Hackney, Tampa executive, and Weaver Marr, Jacksonville executive.

The scout tour is open to all scouts and to non-scouts who agree to conform to the rules governing the party.

In announcing plans for the scout special, Mr. Dix declared that it offered an undsual opportunity to Florida boys. Many scouts who went to Chicago on last year's scout special over the Dixie Flyer Route will want to return this year to see the new features and enlarged exhibits of the fair, he said.

Of the 200 or more scouts expected to make the trip, about 73 will be from Jacksonville and a like number from Miami. The others will come from the Orlando, Tampa and St. Petersburg sections.

Special rates have been granted for the scout tour. The various groups will assemble in Jacksonville on the morning of August 12 to depart for Chicago at 8 a. m. The tour will arrive in Chicago at 11:30 o'clock next morning.

The program in Chicago calls for five days stay with daily visits to the Fair grounds. The first day will include a lecture tour over the entire exposition. Other special features will be visits to the Field Museum, the Shedd Aquarium, the great Marshall Field store and a 50-mile lecture of Chicago.

Citrus Shipments Ahead of Last Year

Tampa, June 12.—(Special)—In spite of the devastating storm of last September more citrus fruit and higher quality fruit was shipped from the state of Florida during the season just closed and at several million dollars increase in income to the state, according to the annual report of C. C. Commander, general manager of the Florida Citrus Exchange. "Much of the credit for price improvement this season goes to the Citrus Marketing Agreement. Other factors helping to improve the Florida Citrus season were, the better quality of fruit, marked improvement in economic conditions and credit facilities and strenuous sales effort," Mr. Commander's report stated.

"The past season will go down in citrus history as a turning point in many ways. It has also been a season of marked fluctuation in prices giving a wide opportunity for speculation.

Total shipments of citrus fruit from Florida, rail, boat and truck as of May 15th, were 60,278 cars of which 36,695 cars were oranges, 18,969 cars were grapefruit, and 4,714 cars were tangerines. Exchange shipments amounted to 7,751 cars of oranges, 4,218 cars of grapefruit and 1,131 cars of tangerines, or a total of 13,095 cars.

soon as possible."

R. T. Dewell, Haines City attorney, pointed to the importance of immediate action on the road by stating that the mayor of Haines City had declared the meeting day a public holiday in order that residents might join in the motorcade to Sebring.

"A central state highway is essential at this time," Chairman Treadway stated in assuring the delegation that action would be taken toward building the new road as soon as possible. "I want to urge all of you, however, to get 200 foot rights of way for the road."

He reported that recent efforts of the department to secure the wider rights of way have met with signal success throughout the state.

The chairman told a delegation from Polk county that there will be no opportunity in 1934 for the state to improve Road No. 2 between Polk City and Auburndale, which has suffered from heavy truck traffic.

"The matter was not brought before us when the 1934 budget was being considered," he said, "and it would be illegal for us to alter the provisions of the budget."

MANGO RECIPES.

The number of ways in which mangoes may be used is almost endless, and not sufficiently appreciated in Florida. The following brief recipes have been adapted from various sources, but all have been tried in Florida and found useful:

Mango Jelly: For jelly making the green fruit before it softens is preferred. Peel and slice the pulp from the seed. Cook until tender and strain. To each cup of boiling juice add one cup of sugar and boil until jelly is formed when juice is dropped from a spoon.

Mango Marmalade: Use ripe fruit. Peel and put in a pan with water enough to half cover. The pulp may or may not be cut from the seed (the latter makes a smoother marmalade). When tender rub through a granite colander. Add a cup of sugar to each quart of pulp and boil 30 minutes. Seal at once.

Mango Ice Cream. Use plain ice cream custard made by any favorite recipe as a basis. To each quart add one pint of mango pulp and freeze.

Mango Sundae: Have the fruit well iced. Cut in halves and remove the seed. Fill the cavity with cream, and serve at once.

COUNTY ASKED TO FORECLOSE ON LAND FOR TAXES

Community Canning Centers Suggested to Care for Surplus Crops

At the meeting of the county commissioners Tuesday, Capt. W. R. Maynard of Lake Istokpoga asked that the county foreclose on all tracts of land in the county on which the taxes are delinquent. He claimed it had been done in Osceola county but this was later denied, County Clerk W. Z. Carson stating he understood the Osceola commissioners had requested their county attorney to investigate and see if such action were legal and practical.

Capt. Maynard claimed there are large tracts in district three amounting to over 135,000 acres on which the taxes have not been paid but which are being rented for grazing purposes at five cents per acre and the county not getting any benefit. He suggested the county could obtain this rental if the lands were foreclosed.

Commissioner J. H. Twitty conferred with Capt. Maynard and said the county is the goat in this business. Chairman John Hood said a similar proposal had been made before and pointed out that if the county should foreclose title to the lands would be placed in the Internal Improvement Board who could sell the lands for any price they wish and the county would have no voice in the matter. The question was taken under advisement, the county attorney being requested to investigate and get the legal aspects of the case.

The question of community canning centers was broached by County Agent Louis Alsmeyer who told what is being done in Hardee county to take care of surplus crops of beans and similar vegetables. He estimated the cost to the county at $200 for each plant with relief labor being used on the buildings. No action was taken although the matter was discussed to some extent.

The county agent also mentioned the county booth and exhibit at the South Florida Fair at Tampa next year and suggested additional space be used. He said an extra good display featuring sub-tropical fruits would be a good follow up of the Florida exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago this summer. Displays of sub-tropical fruits from this section are in demand at the World's Fair he said. The county agent has been asked to take charge of the Scenic Highlands exhibit at the Fair in August and the commissioners thought it would be a good thing for him to accept the invitation.

C. A. Skipper was in conference with the board regarding a road he is alleged to have closed around Lake Josephine. He claimed to have received permission from L. C. Pearce who was the commissioner from district three at the time the fence was built on condition that Mr. Hammar, who lived in that territory was satisfied. Mr. Skipper said the road in question was not used and he had surveyed and graded another road for Mr. Hammar which was satisfactory. Commissioner Twitty said the road is used and it being closed is a hardship and demanded the road be opened and cattle guards built. No agreement was arrived at and the matter may come into the courts in the form of a test case.

The commissioners authorized the change of the polling place at Brighton from the packing house to the community house.

Standard Oil Station Entered and Robbed

The Standard Oil Station on West Main street was entered and robbed some time after midnight Wednesday. Entrance was obtained by breaking a pane of glass in the front door. Ten dollars in cash and a revolver was taken and few clues were left by the thief or thieves.

Notice to Members of the Eastern Star

Leigh chapter Order of the Eastern Star, has received an invitation from the Lake Wales chapter to attend their meeting on Monday June 28th, at eight p. m. This meeting will be held in honor of all Grand Instructors, in part and present.

Those who plan to go please get in touch with Mrs. Lucille Daly, matron.

School of Tarpon Seen on Big Charley

With the recent heavy rains and high waters Tarpon fishing has been available close to Avon Park although the majority of the local followers of Isaac Walton have been unaware of the fact. Oscar Wolff reports that early this week a school of Tarpon was seen in Big Charley creek west of town. They refused to be attracted or strike on any of the usual lures but one finally took a piece of white rag used as bait and was landed. They averaged from 18 to 24 inches in length, Mr. Wolff says.

It is presumed the fish came up the Peace river from the Gulf and then made their way up the Big Charley and as the waters recede they will return to their usual habitat in the Gulf.

Rev. Johnson Will Preach

To Deliver Commencement Sermon Sunday; Closing Exercises Friday

Rev. Harcourt Johnson of the Episcopal church will deliver the commencement sermon for the 1934 graduating class of the Avon Park high school Sunday night at the school auditorium at eight o'clock. The music will be in charge of the Episcopal choir and an excellent program has been arranged, including a male quartette, and selections by the Jun-Junior Music club.

Pastors of the other churches of the community will also have a part and a large attendance is expected.

On Friday evening, June 29, the closing exercises for the school term of the high school will be held in the auditorium at eight o'clock. There will be no out of town speaker for this occasion as in previous years. The diplomas will be presented to the graduates by Col. F. N. K. Bailey and the Bailey and the American Legion and Auxiliary medals will be awarded.

The valedictorian for the Senior class is Miss Evelyn Clements, and Miss Virginia Baldwin is salutatorian. Miss Marcia Weisneyer is class historian. A. B. Wells will give the class will and Miss Dorothy Schweigart will read the class prophecy. The president of the graduating class is Clyde Clark; vice president, Eddie Flowers; secretary, Virginia Baldwin and treasurer, A. B. Wells.

The marshals for both the sermon and closing exercises are: Mary Coen, chief, assisted by Lorey Mae Bachand, Patsy Loomis, Carmen Booth, Allie Mae Belin, and Ralph Heim.

CCC Enrolling Unemployed War Vets

Unemployed veterans in Avon Park and vicinity, who wish to enroll in the Civilian Conservation Corps may do so by filing application with the Veterans Administration Facility at St. Petersburg.

The second veteran enrollment will start July 1, 1934 and continue through July 31, 1934. Service in the CCC for each veteran will be limited to twelve or fifteen months. The only requirements are: The applicant must be a veteran of a war, in good physical condition, able to perform an ordinary days work, and a willingness to learn and work with others.

Regulations require that three-quarters of the base pay— which is $30.00 per month—be allotted to the veteran's dependent or dependents. A veteran is not barred, however, because of no dependents.

The government provides all necessary clothing and an abundance of good, wholesome food, served in clean and pleasant dining rooms. Living conditions in the camps are excellent. Workers are granted leaves of absence from camps upon requests to the proper authority.

Applications from veterans will be considered in the order they are received. When approved he is instructed to report to an Army Recruiting Officer for physical examination. If for any reason, he is not accepted, he will be furnished transportation by the government to return home.

Any veteran wishing to file an application may secure the necessary form and assistance from A. McKee Elwell, Service Officer, Highlands Post No. 69, American Legion.

RUST NAMED TO HEAD EXCHANGE ACTIVITIES HERE

Bartow Man to Manage Citrus Work for Southern District

John B. Rust, prominent citrus leader of Bartow, was today reappointed manager of the southern district in the State of Florida, according to announcement from the Florida Citrus Exchange. The southern district includes the following 15 citrus growers associations and special shippers: Alturas, Avon Park, Bowling Green, Wauchula, Frostproof, Lake Byrd, Ft. Myers, Lake Garfield, Lake Placid, Sebring, Arcadia, Ft. Ogden, Nocatee, Owanita, and Lilly citrus growers associations at Limestone, Fla.

This district includes the territory from Bartow to Frostproof and south to Ft. Myers the counties are: DeSoto, Lee, Highlands, and the southern half of Polk, all prominent citrus territory from which is shipped a large volume of oranges, grapefruit and tangerines. The district manager plan of the Florida Citrus Exchange, it was stated, is but one of the Exchange policies in behalf of greater efficiency and economies for grower-members, the Sub-Exchange charges have been done away with entirely, and the cost of operating the district office is paid by the Exchange out of the selling retain of 10c per box, which it is announced is the lowest selling retain in all Exchange history.

Mr. Rust was Polk county Sub-Exchange manager for many years, before that time he was assistant Sub-Exchange manager first with C. H. Walker and later with C. C. Commander. He is probably known as one of the best practical citrus men in the state.

District headquarters will be continued at Bartow, according to the Exchange announcement.

Presbyterian Young People in Conference at Highland Lakes

The Presbyterian Young People's Summer Conference for the state of Florida is now in session at Highland Lakes hotel. The affair opened Monday night with a dinner and a large attendance which is expected to reach 200 during the week.

Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd, president of Maryville College, Tenn., is dean of the conference and Miss Lena A. Smith, field worker for the church in Florida is in charge of the conference. The faculty of about 12 is composed of ministers and workers in the church.

Classes are held every morning from 8 to 12, the Bible, Missions, and methods being studied. The afternoons are given over to sports and other diversions. There are also interesting groups in dramatics, photography, Bible pageantry and hymnology.

Included in the faculty is Miss Mary Miles, a missionary home from Japan on furlough, who teaches a mission course, using as a text book, "Typhoon Days."

Evening vespers are held everf evening at 7 o'clock, followed by special programs. The young people attending the conference range in age from 15 to 24 years and are reported to being enjoying themselves to the utmost.

Alleged Burglars Caught In Wauchula

The arrest in Wauchula, Monday night of Hamp Anglin and J. T. Anglin is thought by officers to have solved the mystery of several safe cracking jobs in this section. The men were arrested on a charge of having robbed a safe at Zolfo and are said to have had in their possession articles taken from the depot at Hicoria when the safe was robbed there a few nights ago.

It is thought that the same men burglarized the safe of O. C. Wilkes at Avon Park and the depot in Moore Haven.

They are said to have had in their possession at the time of arrest some nitroglycerine and other equipment used in "cracking" safes. They will probably be tried for the robbery at Zolfo first and then brought to Highlands county for trial in the Hicoria case.

Special agents of the Atlantic Coast Line made the investigation and assisted Sheriff DeShong of Hardee county in making the arrest.

Series Bible Lectures At Baptist Church Starting Sunday

A series of Bible lectures is scheduled to start Sunday morning at the First Baptist church and will be continued every night at eight o'clock except Sunday, the following week up to and including Friday night. The lectures will be delivered by Rev. J. R. Wells of Lakeland, father of J. L. and Ray Wells of this city and will be illustrated with slides.

Rev. Wells has spent his life since he was 18 years of age, in studying the prophecies and everyone, including the children, is invited to attend these lectures. They are non-sectarian and the Bible is the only text book. There will be a question box which will be opened and the questions answered each evening.

Six thrilling, inspiring and uplifting evenings are promised and the following subjects have been announced:

Sunday, Seven Dispensations.

Monday, Times of the Gentiles.

Tuesday, Anti-Christ and the Great Tribulation.

Wednesday, Second Coming of Christ.

Thursday, Millenium.

Friday, Final Judgment.

The lectures are being sponsored by the Brotherhood of the First Baptist Church and the Rev. Wells will teach the Men's Bible class at the church on Sunday morning.

Church Camp At Lake Byrd

Young Episcopalians Enjoy Themselves at Series of Camps

Lake Byrd Lodge is the scene of great activity at the present time, the South Florida Diocese of he Episcopal church holding its annual camp for young people there. Camp Perry is now in full swing with 50 boys between the ages of 10 and 14 years. It opened on June 14 and will close on June 28. Morton Nace of Tampa is in charge and there is a large and competent staff of instructors for both the physical and spiritual activities.

The staff includes Rev. H. I. Louttit, rector of Holy Trinity church, West Palm Beach; Rev. M. J. Bram, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, Sanford; Rev. W. L. Hargrove, rector of St. Mark's church, Cocoa; Rev. Harry G. Walker, rector of St. Mary's church, Daytona Beach; and the latter is also acting steward for all the camps.

On June 28 Camp Wingmann opens with 90 boys and girls ranging from 14 to 25. Rev. Louttit will be director and besides the staff already mentioned will be assisted by Rev: M. F. Williams, chaplain of the University of Florida, Rev. W. F. Moses, rector of All Saints church, Lakeland and the Misses Annis and Alcesta Tulane of St. Petersburg. On July 11, the last day of this camp, the Young People's Service League will hold its annual convention.

The younger girls will have their camp beginning July 12 and ending July 26. This is Camp St. Mary of which Miss Alcesta Tulane will be director, assisted by her sister, Miss Annis Tulane, Rev. H. F. Bache, rector of All Saints Church, Fort Lauderdale and Mrs. Morton Nace.

Mr. Nace says they have been having difficulty in getting sufficient boats for use during the camps and would appreciate the loan of several more if anyone has them to spare at this time.

Presbyterian Pastor Speaker at Rotary Lunch Wednesday

Rev. L. E. Brubaker, pastor of the St. Augustine Presbyterian church, was the speaker at the Rotary club luncheon Wednesday noon at the Jacaranda hotel. He is a former district governor of Rotary and spoke on Rotary subjects and gave a very interesting talk which was much enjoyed by all present.

Visitors for the luncheon were Prof. P. J. Gustat, of Sebring, Rev. M. J. Bram of Sanford and Rev. H. I. Louttit of West Palm Beach.

PEPPER MAKES MANY SPEECHES IN FINAL WEEK

Denies Many Allegations, Including Slush Fund Charges

Entering on the final week of the second campaign for the United States Senate nomination, Claued Pepper had nearly fifty platform appearances before him by Saturday night, when he speaks again from Bayfront Park in Miami.

The neck-and-neck June 5th runner-up to the veteran Park Trammell had campaigned from Pensacola to Miami and Tampa in the preceding week, during which he spoke in home counties of two of the eliminated candidates.

Pepper spoke Saturday afternoon at Vero Beach, where Charles Mitchell resides. Mitchell introduced Pepper to his home audience, paying him high tribute for his clean and courageous campaign. Mitchell characterized Pepper as "my friend and your friend."

The Tallahassecan also spoke at Tampa, the home of Hortense Wells, who has also indicated her personal support of Pepper.

Pepper is carrying his campaign to the people alone, no other speakers having appeared in his behalf up to the present, though it is possible that in the final nights of the contest speakers in various counties will address rallies in their own counties in his behalf.

In closing speeches, Pepper is expressing regret that misrepresentations and falsehoods have been injected into the campaign by Senator Trammell in a "desperate effort to perpetuate himself in office for another six years to complete a record of nearly forty years on the public pay-roll." He branded as false and dispicable the Junior Senator's statements on the so-called DePriest resolution and the use of the fact that he is a graduate of Harvard University, as President Roosevelt is, to suggest that he is favorable to social equality between the races.

Pepper stated that Senator Trammell also knew he was stating a falsehood of purest fabrication when he charges he has already spent $100,000 and has another $100,000 to spend if necessary. Pepper's answer is that he has never seen $100,000 in his life, much less having spent it, and that he has no paid workers anywhere except his headquarters personnel.

Pepper's final message to the people is that Trammell's campaign of desperation is a trick of professional politics, and he cautions the public to be on guard against eleventh hour scurrilous propaganda which he brands in advance as false.

Pepper will close his campaign at Tampa next Monday night. His headquarters predicts that he will carry no less than 45 counties June 26th.

Boy Scout Camp Extended Week for Avon Park Boys

Camp Flaming Arrow, which is now in its fourth week of the season will close on Sunday morning, June 24th, after the most successful season in its history. From the angle of attendance, morale, advancement and health. The camp has been entirely satisfactory. Some 240 different scouts have had the privilege of spending at least a week at the camp under the leadership of men who are trained in the principle of boy leadership. The camp as well as the boy scout movement has as its sole objective to develop men of character trained for better citizenship. According to Dr. Charles A. Raymond, chairman of the camp committee, the camp has met responsibility effectively more than ever before in its long history.

A request has come from scouts and scout leaders at Avon Park for an additional week of camp to open on Sunday, July 21. This additional week will be open to all scouts of the council as well as to the Avon Park boys. Scouts and scout leaders are urged to take advantage of this opportunity.

The camp rates wil be the same as during the regular camp period and reservations may be made by writing the boy scout office in the city hall at Lakeland.

Grammar school: Sadie M. Brown, Alice O. Sherman, Alma Harrell, Virginia E. Cloud, Louise Houck, Mildred Myers, Hettie Hundertmark, Mary C. Myers, Pearl D. Holland and Mrs. Charles H. Shepherd.

Other appointments will be announced later, Col. Bailey said.

Campaign Is Nearing End

Interest Centers in Contests for Commissioner and Senator

With the second primary only a few days away interest in the several contests is attaining hot proportions. In Avon Park the interest centers on the race for county commissioner, both candidates, J. L. Wells and Frank (Hot Shot) Armistead having a number of friends working for them. They are both good men and the race is expected to be close.

The interest in the race for representative would seem to have died down although both candidates, J. E. Sims and Dr. A. T. Eide are reported to be active as are their numerous friends and supporters.

The race between Park Trammell and Claude Pepper for the state senatorship is full of interest with Pepper seeming to have the edge on his opponent. Both men have numerous workers and adherents who predict victory for their candidate.

The other races are between Eugene S. Matthews and Lester Wells and Herbert P. Caro and Jerry W. Carter for railroad commissioner. The first two are opponents in group one and the second couple are in group two.

All voters are urged to turn out Tuesday and cast their vote for the men of their choice. The polls open at 8 a. m., and close at sundown. The polling places will be the same as in the first primary, the Jacaranda hotel building and the First National Bank annex on Lake avenue.

Three Men Accused of Grand Larceny Held For Grand Jury

The apparent systematic theft of plumbing fixtures from vacant houses in Sebring and nearby towns has been a source of constant irritation to the police and sheriff's force for many months and it was stated at the sheriff's office Tuesday that it is probable that the thefts will stop for a while at least because of the arrest last Thursday of Otto Blackburn, Joe Hammond and E. T. Hess, all of Tampa, on a charge of grand larceny in connection with the removal of some plumbing fixtures from a vacant house in Lakewood Terrace near Harder Hall.

The three men were brought before County Judge M. C. Whithurst for preliminary trial Tuesday and bound over for the grand jury and their bond placed at $1,000 each. Hess was released early Wednesday morning on a bond signed by M. D. Fountain and E. M. Flinn of Tampa.

Sheriff Schumacher and his men had been watching the house for several nights and arrested the three men after they had parked a truck near the house and were seen to go near the plumbing fixtures which had been removed from the house and concealed in the weeds near the house, it was stated by witnesses in the preliminary trial.

Two pistols were exhibited at the trial said to have been taken from two of the men. There were no plumbing fixtures in the truck but several pipe wrenches and other tools were said to have been found in the truck some of which were said to belong to Hess, who, according to evidence given at the trial is a plumber and dealer in second-hand plumbing fixtures with headquarters at Tampa.

EGG ORDINANCE IS SUGGESTED TO CITY COUNCIL

Would Establish Grades; Taxes and Assessments Are Discussed

Eggs and an ordinance to regulate their sale, taxes and assessments, insurance for city employees and a city owned light and water system all had their innings at the council meeting Tuesday night. Mayor M. E. Covington was also authorized to attend the meeting of mayors of Florida cities being held in Jacksonville today, the city paying the expenses of the trip.

The egg question came up with F. C. Payne of Sebring and W. H. Kempton, Avon Park, members of the Highlands County Poultry Association, proposing the enactment of an egg ordinance similar to one in other cities of the state. This ordinance would define the standards and grades of eggs and improve conditions for the producers and insure the consumer getting the grade of egg paid for, he said but would not increase the price to the housewife. The ordinance would conform to the state law and strengthen its enforcement here. No action was taken, the council taking the matter under consideration.

J. H. Hood appeared regarding an adjustment of taxes on certain lots facing Lake Verona on East Main street. After some discussion the remittance of some of the interest on delinquent taxes was approved.

Insurance for city employees was approved, the council placing its OK on the plan presented by Gerald Bee, representing the Prudential Insurance Co., at a previous meeting. Under the plan, group insurance would be taken out for the employees, each of whom would pay 75 cents a month for each $1,000 protection and the city pay the balance. A proposal for accident insurance for the police officers was tabled. W. B. Archer presented the plan.

A letter from Dr. W. C. Touchton was read in which he objected to assessments on certain pieces of his property. He claimed the assessment was not in line with other property in the neighborhood. A committee was named to view the property in question and make recommendations.

The feasibility of the city buying electrical energy from Sebring and retailing it was discussed briefly but nothing definite was done. The mayor reported he had received complaints as to minors being served beer and playing punch boards. The law prohibiting this would be rigidly enforced, he said.

Wiley Clark Passed Away Wednesday

Wiley Clark, 44, passed away at his home on the south side Wednesday evening following an illness of several weeks. The remains were taken to Brooksville Thursday for burial, with Rev. J. H. McClelland, pastor of the South Side Baptist church in charge of the services.

Wiley Clark was born in Citrus county and had been a resident of Avon Park for the past 11 years. He was a deacon of the South Side Baptist church. There survive the widow and one brother, Ellis, and a sister, Mrs. Larkus Harden, residing here and one sister in Inverness and another in Brooksville.

Conservation Move Proving Popular

Orlando, June 21.—(FNS)—The move of the Junior Chamber of Commerce to stop the sale and shipment of Black Bass in this state is meeting with widespread approval and public acceptance.

The plan gains momentum daily and when so many people and organizations show interest in an issue, during the short time the black bass campaign has been under way, there is every reason to believe that the campaign will be a successful one.

The object of the Junior Chamber of Commerce is to obtain proper legislation at the next session of the legislature to conserve and protect Florida's asset, the game black bass. It is hoped to have legislation enacted to prevent the commercial sale and shipment of this fish with no exception and regardless of where caught.

CODE PRINTING PRICES

Are Now in Effect

Minimum prices for printing as set by the Graphic Arts Code Authority and approved by President Franklin D. Roosevelt are now being used by the printing trade.

The prices are fair to the printer and to the buyer of printing. They are in line with prices charged by us in the past for Quality Printing.

COUNTY ASKED TO FORECLOSE ON LAND FOR TAXES

Community Canning Centers Suggested to Care for Surplus Crops

At the meeting of the county commissioners Tuesday, Capt. W. R. Maynard of Lake Istokpoga asked that the county foreclose on all tracts of land in the county on which the taxes are delinquent. He claimed it had been done in Osceola county but this was later denied, County Clerk W. Z. Carson stating he understood the Osceola commissioners had requested their county attorney to investigate and see if such action were legal and practical.

Capt. Maynard claimed there are large tracts in district three amounting to over 135,000 acres on which the taxes have not been paid but which are being rented for grazing purposes at five cents per acre and the county not getting any benefit. He suggested the county could obtain this rental if the lands were foreclosed.

Commissioner J. H. Twitty conferred with Capt. Maynard and said the county is the goat in this business. Chairman John Hood said a similar proposal had been made before and pointed out that if the county should foreclose title to the lands would be placed in the Internal Improvement Board who could sell the lands for any price they wish and the county would have no voice in the matter. The question was taken under advisement, the county attorney being requested to investigate and get the legal aspects of the case.

The question of community canning centers was broached by County Agent Louis Alsmeyer who told what is being done in Hardee county to take care of surplus crops of beans and similar vegetables. He estimated the cost to the county at $900 for each plant with relief labor being used on the buildings. No action was taken although the matter was discussed to some extent.

The county agent also mentioned the county booth and exhibit at the South Florida Fair at Tampa next year and suggested additional space be used. He said an extra good display featuring sub-tropical fruits should be a good follow up of the Florida exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago this summer. Displays of sub-tropical fruits from this section are in demand at the World's Fair he said. The county agent has been asked to take charge of the Scenic Highlands exhibit at the Fair in August and the commissioners thought it would be a good thing for him to accept the invitation.

C. A. Skipper was in conference with the board regarding a road he is alleged to have closed around Lake Josephine. He claimed to have received permission from L. C. Pearce who was the commissioner from district three at the time the fence was built on condition that Mr. Hammar, who lived in that territory was satisfied. Mr. Skipper said the road in question was not used and he had grubbed and graded another road for Mr. Hammer which was satisfactory. Commissioner Twitty said the road is used and it being closed is a hardship and demanded the road be opened and cattle guards built. No agreement was arrived at and the matter may come into the courts in the form of a test case.

The commissioners authorized the change of the polling place at Brighton from the packing house to the community house.

Standard Oil Station Entered and Robbed

The Standard Oil Station on West Main street was entered and robbed some time after midnight Wednesday. Entrance was obtained by breaking a pane of glass in the front door. Ten dollars in cash and a revolver was taken and few clues were left by the thief or thieves.

Notice to Members of the Eastern Star

Leigh chapter Order of the Eastern Star, has received an invitation from the Lake Wales chapter to attend their meeting on Monday June 28th, at eight p. m. This meeting will be held in honor of all Grand Instructors, both past and present.

Those who plan to go please get in touch with Mrs. Lucille Daly, matron.

School of Tarpon Seen on Big Charley

With the recent heavy rains and high waters Tarpon fishing has been available close to Avon Park although the majority of the local followers of Isaac Walton have been unaware of the fact. Oscar Wolff reports that early this week a school of Tarpon was seen in Big Charley creek west of town. They refused to be attracted or strike on any of the usual lures but one finally took a piece of white rag used as bait and was landed. They averaged from 18 to 24 inches in length, Mr. Wolff says.

It is presumed the fish came up the Peace river from the Gulf and then made their way up the Big Charley and as the waters recede they will return to their usual habitat in the Gulf.

Rev. Johnson Will Preach

To Deliver Commencement Sermon Sunday; Closing Exercises Friday

Rev. Harcourt Johnson of the Episcopal church will deliver the commencement sermon for the 1934 graduating class of the Avon Park high school Sunday night at the school auditorium at eight o'clock. The music will be in charge of the Episcopal choir and an excellent program has been arranged, including a male quartette, and selections by the Jun-Junior Music club.

Pastors of the other churches of the community will also have a part and a large attendance is expected.

On Friday evening, June 29, the closing exercises for the school term of the high school will be held in the auditorium at eight o'clock. There will be no out of town speaker for this occasion as in previous years. The diplomas will be presented to the graduates by Col. F. N. K. Bailey and the Bailey and the American Legion and Auxiliary medals will be awarded.

The valedictorian for the Senior class is Miss Evelyn Clements, and Miss Virginia Baldwin is salutatorian. Miss Marcia Weisheyer is class historian. A. B. Wells will give the class will and Miss Dorothy Schwigart will read the class prophecy. The president of the graduating class is Clyde Clark; vice president, Eddie Flowers; secretary, Virginia Baldwin and treasurer, A. B. Wells.

The marshals for both the sermon and closing exercises are: Mary Coen, chief, assisted by Lorey Mae Bachand, Patsy Loomis, Carmen Booth, Allie Mae Belin, and Ralph Heim.

CCC Enrolling Unemployed War Vets

Unemployed veterans in Avon Park and vicinity, who wish to enroll in the Civilian Conservation Corps may do so by filing application with the Veterans Administration Facility at St. Petersburg.

The second veteran enrollment will start July 1, 1934 and continue through July 31, 1934. Service in the CCC for each veteran will be limited to twelve or fifteen months. The only requirements are: The applicant must be a veteran of a war, in good physical condition, able to perform an ordinary days work, and a willingness to learn and work with others.

Regulations require that three-quarters of the base pay— which is $30.00 per month—be allotted to the veteran's dependent or dependents. A veteran is not barred, however, because of no dependents.

The government provides all necessary clothing and an abundance of good, wholesome food, served in clean and pleasant dining rooms. Living conditions in the camps are excellent. Workers are granted leaves of absence from camps upon requests to the proper authority.

Applications from veterans will be considered in the order they are received. When approved he is instructed to report to an Army Recruiting Officer for physical examination. If for any reason, he is not accepted, he will be furnished transportation by the government to return home.

Any veteran wishing to file an application may secure the necessary form and assistance from A. McKee Elwell, Service Officer, Highlands Post No. 69, American Legion.

RUST NAMED TO HEAD EXCHANGE ACTIVITIES HERE

Bartow Man to Manage Citrus Work for Southern District

John B. Rust, prominent citrus leader of Bartow, was today reappointed manager of the southern district in the State of Florida, according to announcement from the Florida Citrus Exchange. The southern district includes the following 15 citrus growers associations and special shippers: Alturas, Avon Park, Bowling Green, Wauchula, Frostproof, Lake Byrd, Ft. Myers, Lake Garfield, Lake Placid, Sebring, Arcadia, Ft. Ogden, Nocatee, Owanita, and Lily citrus growers associations at Limestone, Fla.

This district includes the territory from Bartow to Frostproof and south to Ft. Myers the counties are: DeSoto, Lee, Highlands, and the southern half of Polk, all prominent citrus territory from which is shipped a large volume of oranges, grapefruit and tangerines. The district manager plan of the Florida Citrus Exchange, it was stated, is but one of the Exchange policies in behalf of greater efficiency and economics for grower-members, the Sub-Exchange charges have been done away with entirely, and the cost of operating the district office is paid by the Exchange out of the selling retain of 10c per box, which it is announced is the lowest selling retain in all Exchange history.

Mr. Rust was Polk county Sub-Exchange manager for many years, before that time he was assistant Sub-Exchange manager first with C. H. Walker and later with C. C. Commander. He is probably known as one of the best practical citrus men in the state.

District headquarters will be continued at Bartow, according to the Exchange announcement.

Presbyterian Young People in Conference at Highland Lakes

The Presbyterian Young People's Summer Conference for the state of Florida is now in session at Highland Lakes hotel. The affair opened Monday night with a dinner and a large attendance which is expected to reach 200 during the week.

Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd, president of Maryville College, Tenn., is dean of the conference and Miss Lena A. Smith, field worker for the church in Florida is in charge of the conference. The faculty of about 12 is composed of ministers and workers in the church.

Classes are held every morning from 8 to 12, the Bible, Missions, and methods being studied. The afternoons are given over to sports and other diversions. There are also interesting groups in dramatics, photography, Bible pageantry and hymnology.

Included in the faculty is Miss Mary Miles, a missionary home from Japan on furlough, who teaches a mission course, using as a text book, "Typhoon Days."

Evening vespers are held everf evening at 7 o'clock, followed by special programs. The young people attending the conference range in age from 15 to 24 years and are reported to being enjoying themselves to the utmost.

Alleged Burglars Caught In Wauchula

The arrest in Wauchula, Monday night of Hamp Anglin and J. T. Anglin is thought by officers to have solved the mystery of several safe cracking jobs in this section. The men were arrested on a charge of having robbed a safe at Zolfo and are said to have had in their possession articles taken from the depot at Hicoria when the safe was robbed there a few nights ago.

It is thought that the same men burglarized the safe of O. C. Wilkes at Avon Park and the depot in Moore Haven.

They are said to have had in their possession at the time of arrest some nitroglycerine and other equipment used in "cracking" safes. They will probably be tried for the robbery at Zolfo first and then brought to Highlands county for trial in the Hicoria case.

Special agents of the Atlantic Coast Line made the investigation and assisted Sheriff DeShong of Hardee county in making the arrest.

Series Bible Lectures At Baptist Church Starting Sunday

A series of Bible lectures is scheduled to start Sunday morning at the First Baptist church and will be continued every night at eight o'clock except Sunday, the following week up to and including Friday night. The lectures will be delivered by Rev. J. R. Wells of Lakeland, father of J. L. and Ray Wells of this city and will be illustrated with slides.

Rev. Wells has spent his life since he was 18 years of age, in studying the prophecies and everyone, including the children, is invited to attend these lectures. They are non-sectarian and the Bible is the only text book. There will be a question box which will be opened and the questions answered each evening.

Six thrilling, inspiring and uplifting evenings are promised and the following subjects have been announced:

Sunday, Seven Dispensations.
Monday, Times of the Gentiles.
Tuesday, Anti-Christ and the Great Tribulation.
Wednesday, Second Coming of Christ.
Thursday, Millenium.
Friday, Final Judgment.

The lectures are being sponsored by the Brotherhood of the First Baptist Church and the Rev. Wells will teach the Men's Bible class at the church on Sunday morning.

Church Camp At Lake Byrd

Young Episcopalians Enjoy Themselves at Series of Camps

Lake Byrd Lodge is the scene of great activity at the present time, the South Florida Diocese of he Episcopal church holding its annual camp for young people there. Camp Perry is now in full swing with 50 boys between the ages of 10 and 14 years. It opened on June 14 and will close on June 28. Morton Nace of Tampa is in charge and there is a large and competent staff of instructors for both the physical and spiritual activities.

The staff includes Rev. H. I. Louttit, rector of Holy Trinity church, West Palm Beach; Rev. M. J. Bram, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, Sanford; Rev. W. L. Hargrove, rector of St. Mark's church, Cocoa; Rev. Harry G. Walker, rector of St. Mary's church, Daytona Beach; and the latter is also acting steward for all the camps.

On June 28 Camp Wingmann opens with 90 boys and girls ranging from 14 to 25. Rev. Louttit will be director and besides the staff already mentioned will be assisted by Rev. M. F. Williams, chaplain of the University of Florida, Rev. W. F. Moses, rector of All Saints church, Lakeland and the Misses Annis and Alcesta Tulane of St. Petersburg. On July 11, the last day of this camp, the Young People's Service League will hold its annual convention.

The younger girls will have their camp beginning July 12 and ending July 26. This is Camp St. Mary of which Miss Alcesta Tulane will be director, assisted by her sister, Miss Annis Tulane, Rev. H. F. Bache, rector of All Saints Church, Fort Lauderdale and Mrs. Morton Nace.

Mr. Nace says they have been having difficulty in getting sufficient boats for use during the camps and would appreciate the loan of several more if anyone has them to spare at this time.

Presbyterian Pastor Speaker at Rotary Lunch Wednesday

Rev. L. E. Brubaker, pastor of the St. Augustine Presbyterian church, was the speaker at the Rotary club luncheon Wednesday noon at the Jacaranda hotel. He is a former district governor of Rotary and spoke on Rotary subjects and gave a very interesting talk which was much enjoyed by all present.

Visitors for the luncheon were Prof. P. J. Gustat of Sebring, Rev. M. J. Bram of Sanford and Rev. H. I. Louttit of West Palm Beach.

PEPPER MAKES MANY SPEECKES IN FINAL WEEK

Denies Many Allegations, Including Slush Fund Charges

Entering on the final week of the second campaign for the United States Senate nomination, Claued Pepper had nearly fifty platform appearances before him by Saturday night, when he speaks again from Bayfront Park in Miami.

The neck-and-neck June 5th runner-up to the veteran Park Trammell had campaigned from Pensacola to Miami and Tampa in the preceding week, during which he spoke in home counties of two of the eliminated candidates.

Pepper spoke Saturday afternoon at Vero Beach, where Charles Mitchell resides. Mitchell introduced Pepper to his home audience, paying him high tribute for his clean and courageous campaign. Mitchell characterized Pepper as "my friend and your friend."

The Tallahasseean also spoke at Tampa, the home of Hortense Wells, who has also indicated her personal support of Pepper.

Pepper is carrying his campaign to the people alone, no other speakers having appeared in his behalf up to the present, though it is possible that in the final nights of the contest speakers in various counties will address rallies in their own counties in his behalf.

GENERAL JOHNSON, administrator of the NRA, evidently must be given credit for a skillful piece of work in negotiating the agreement which forestalled the threatened strike of some 400,000 workers in the cotton textile industry. The immediate peril was to the workers themselves, for the cotton mill owners, embarrassed by over-production, would be willing to shut down their plants for a considerable time. Of course, the New Deal would have suffered a black eye, so General Johnson tackled the problem energetically and persuaded Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, and George Sloan, head of the Cotton Textile institute, to accept a compromise, and the call for the strike was revoked.

M. F. Tighe

The employers are permitted to go ahead with their program of curtailing production 25 per cent, and the laborers have the promise of an NRA investigation into the matter of higher wages and other points of difference. The union also is assured of increased representation on the industrial relations board of the cotton textile code authority and on the NRA advisory board.

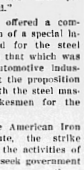

The next great labor trouble, the dispute between the steel masters and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, promised to be more difficult for General Johnson to handle, and it seemed that prompt action by President Roosevelt would be necessary to avert the threatened strike. The men demand the right of collective bargaining through the union agents. Michael F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated, declared it was up to Mr. Roosevelt to provide "prompt and unqualified enforcement of the law" on this point. He said the government had failed the steel workers and "their patience is exhausted."

General Johnson offered a compromise in the form of a special labor relations board for the steel industry, similar to that which was created for the automotive industry in March. But the proposition was rejected by both the steel masters and the spokesmen for the union.

According to the American Iron and Steel Institute, the strike threats are due to the activities of union leaders who seek government intervention "to maneuver themselves into positions of power and domination over the steel workers of the nation." In a formal statement, the institute asserted relations of steel companies and a great mass of their employees are "peaceful," and that the whole difficulty lies with the Amalgamated association.

The "closed shop" is the one point at issue, the statement says, and for the employers to "accede to such a request would be rank treachery."

ROUSED to action by the drouth, which is the worst the country has ever experienced, President Roosevelt telephoned from Groton, Conn., to the federal relief administration, directing that a special relief work program be put into operation immediately in the middle western states. On his return to Washington he called a council of war to expand his plans and hear proposals from various government officials. It was stated by Mr. Roosevelt that farmers should be given cash income from work and also employment on projects so that their immediate distress might be alleviated.

H. L. Hopkins

Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, at once allocated $6,500,000 to 13 states so that the work could start. The states receiving allotments are: Wisconsin, $2,100,000; Minnesota, $1,000,000; South Dakota, $1,050,000; Idaho, $250,000; Kansas, $200,000; Montana, $350,000; Nebraska, $276,000; New Mexico, $160,000; North Dakota, $500,000; Utah, $000,000; Wyoming, $150,000.

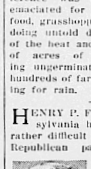

Work projects, Mr. Hopkins said, will be put speedily under way to employ the heads of farm families in need. The projects will include the development of additional water supply through digging wells and through impounding or diverting water from rivers and lakes.

Projects employing men and women in the canning of meat, fruits and vegetables also will be used to conserve food resources of the area and furnish cash income for the families. Road work as well, will provide considerable emergency employment.

A congressional appropriation that may exceed $500,000,000 was the paramount proposal before the drought conference. Some congressmen felt $1,000,000,000 would be necessary.

The picture presented to the conference was one of live stock emaciated for want of water and food, grasshoppers and chinch bugs doing untold damage in the wake of the heat and dryness, thousands of acres of plants' grain lying ungerminated or blighted and hundreds of farm communities praying for rain.

HENRY P. FLETCHER of Pennsylvania has been handed the rather difficult job of managing the Republican party. The national committee at its session in Chicago elected him chairman to succeed Everett Sanders. This would seem to be a wise choice, for Mr. Fletcher is an able and energetic man, notable for his diplomacy and tact and also for ready wit. In 1808 he abandoned law practice to become one of Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders, and after the campaign in Cuba he transferred to the infantry and served through the Philippine insurrection. He entered the diplomatic service in 1902 and after valuable service in Cuba, China, Portugal and again in China, he was successively ambassador to Chile, Mexico, Belgium and Italy. For a time during the Harding administration he was undersecretary of state, and after his retirement from the embassy in Rome he was chairman of the federal tariff commission.

H. P. Fletcher

The national committee adopted a statement of principles for the party in the fall campaign which in temperate but firm language condemned the doings of the Democratic administration, without any personalities, and more specifically set forth what the Republican party thinks should be done to restore the nation to prosperity. Opening with the statement that "American institutions and American civilization are in greater danger today than at any time since the foundation of the Republic," the statement plunges immediately into discussion of the needs for social legislation.

There was assurance of liberal treatment of these problems in this paragraph:

"Our nation is beset with problems of infinite perplexity—the problems of recovery; of unemployment, with its unending tale of human suffering; of agriculture, with its lost markets and relatively low prices; of forever checking abuses and excesses that have become all too apparent, and thereafter the problems of a wider spread of prosperity, of relieving the hardships of unemployment and old age, and of avoiding these tragic depressions. These problems must be approached in a broad, liberal and progressive spirit, unhampered by dull formulas or too obstinately clinging to the past."

Solution of the problems, however, said the statement, should be "within the framework of American institutions in accordance with the spirit and principles of the founders of the Republic."

Further on the platform, said: "We are opposed to revolutionary change without popular mandate—and all 'change by usurpation,' the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed.

"We believe that the present emergency laws vesting dictatorial powers in the President must never be permitted to become a permanent part of our governmental system."

During its sessions the committee raised more than enough money to pay all its debts.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR HAROLD ICKES journeyed to Chicago and testified in the disbarment proceedings brought by him against two Chicago lawyers, C. W. Larsen and J. M. Malmin, the latter once a federal judge in the Virgin Islands. Mr. Ickes asserted the defendants had tried to blackmail him in order to obtain for Malmin the position of governor of the Virgin Islands and a federal job for Larsen. He said their "conspiracy" was based on "trumped-up charges" growing out of a Probate court case he handled as an attorney.

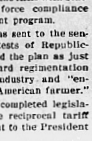

The secretary's charges were later flatly denied by the defendants. The case was being heard by the grievance committee of the Chicago Bar association.

CARRYING forward the program of arbitrary federal acreage control which began with the passage of the Bankhead cotton bill, the house voted, 206 to 144, for passage of the so-called Kerr tobacco bill vesting the AAA with statutory power to force compliance with its adjustment program.

The measure was sent to the senate over the protests of Republicans who denounced the plan as just another step toward regimentation of the farming industry and "enslavement of the American farmer."

The house also completed legislative action on the reciprocal tariff bill and it was sent to the President for his signature.

MUCH interesting information was given the special house committee that is investigating "un-American" activities in the United States, these being especially the activities of the Nazis. Facts and figures were presented showing officials of the German government had spent money for the dissemination of pro-German information in this country, the German ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther, and the German consul general in New York, Dr. Otto Kiep, both figuring in the testimony.

Dr. Hans Luther

Doctor Kiep was said to have paid $4,000 to a New York city publicity and business promotion firm to "obtain publicity in this country" of anti-Semitic statements. He was said, also, to have contributed, unofficially and in behalf of a third person, $300 in $50 bills for the publication of a pro-German pamphlet. Doctor Luther was described as the financial backer and sponsor of the pamphlet.

Under examination, Carl Dickey, partner of the New York firm of Carl Byoir and Associates, said his firm has a contract with the German tourist information office, receiving $6,000 a month "giving advice, counsel, and getting together material for travel information."

About twice a month, too, he testified, a sheet entitled "German-American Economic Bulletin" is prepared and mailed to a "list of about 3,000 newspapers and some few business institutions."

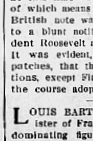

One witness, Rev. Francis Gross of Perth Amboy, N. J., linked Ambassador Luther with alleged pro-German propaganda in a letter which he read to the committee. Father Gross, a retired Catholic priest, told how he had published a pamphlet entitled, "Justice to Hungary, Germany and Austria."

Later the committee heard a story of the nation-wide distribution of Nazi "propaganda"—some of it allegedly brought into the United States without customs inspection. Evidence was presented to show that German consuls had encouraged organization of German clubs to which the "propaganda" was sent.

Representatives of the State, Post Office and Labor departments were interested listeners to the testimony produced, and there were hints of later deportation proceedings.

GREAT BRITAIN formally notified the United States that it would not pay anything on the war debt installment due June 15; that it would make no more payments until the United States consents to a downward revision of the debt, and that any discussion of revision at this time would be useless. All of which means plain default. The British note was sent in response to a blunt notification from President Roosevelt as to the sums due. It was evident, from foreign dispatches, that the other debtor nations, except Finland, would follow the course adopted by the British.

LOUIS BARTHOU, foreign minister of France, appears as the dominating figure in the negotiations that may dispel the war clouds hanging over Europe. The most important thing he already has accomplished is the engineering of an accord between Soviet Russia and Germany on conditions for the Saar plebiscite and setting the date for that vote on January 13, 1935. The agreement gives assurance that France, under the pretext of preserving order, will not use force to prevent the return of the Saar basin to Germany. It also means that the Germans now have everything to lose and nothing to gain from a putsch in the Saar, so the possibility of a clash in the near future is virtually eliminated.

Louis Barthou

In the disarmament conference in Geneva, M. Barthou has been equally forceful though not so peaceful in his doings. He has stood out firmly against the German demands for arms equality and has greatly angered Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary. In connection with Counsellor Rosenberg of the Soviet embassy in Paris, Barthou has been forming what is called an eastern Locarno pact to be signed by Russia, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Lithuania, Latvia and Esthonia, with France as its moral guarantor.

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—Congress did a lot of wrestling, in its closing hours, with new legislation designed to encourage the building of more homes by individuals, and in connection with this debate there developed what I believe to be one of the outstanding questions of the times. The housing bill, as it was called, would make borrowing easier for those who want to own their own homes. In other words, it is a program that will put more people into debt if they take advantage of the bill's provisions. And that is the question: After the conditions that have obtained through the last four years, is it or is it not sound economy to encourage individuals to contract new debts?

Senate on the housing bill, therefore, centered attention on one phase of the whole New Deal program that has caused concern in the back of many heads. Up to this time, however, apparently few of the legislators had paused to think of the trend of the course upon which the administration had embarked.

FearTooMuch New Debt

I noted in the committee hearings in the house that a number of the representatives exhibited a fear of too much new debt. Such stolid men as Luce of Massachusetts, Busby of Mississippi, and Hollister of Ohio, and some who are inclined to the inflationary side, like Goldsborough of Maryland, questioned whether the proposal was sound. Mr. Luce, for example, called attention to the old-time theory about debts, and the horror in which debt used to be held. Mr. Luce, of course, reflected the wholesome New England feeling and the attitude of New Englanders on savings. Mr. Busby, a southern Democrat, however, made observations that were of much the same tenor. To them, he added that a recent visit to his home bailiwick had indicated to him the need of watching the government's step in encouraging debt. He suggested further that where the government has extended help in the South, things continued to hum until that aid was eliminated. Thereafter, there was another tailspin insofar as recovery was concerned.

Whatever one's conclusion about going into debt may be, the fact is unchanged that the federal government has put out approximately $7,000,000,000 in the last year in various types of loans. The individuals and corporations to which this money was loaned are in debt to Uncle Sam, therefore, in a corresponding amount. President Roosevelt and his associates and advisers defend their course with the argument that by making the loans they have enabled all of those folks to weather the storm. He argues that the economic casualty list would have been much higher had the loans not been made. He holds that those who borrowed from the federal government were actually unable to get money elsewhere and that the government was merely looking after its own folks. To those who criticize the use of taxpayers' money in this manner, Mr. Roosevelt has said repeatedly that these loans will be repaid and that the government will suffer no loss in the end.

But, after all, there are the debts, debts on top of debts. They must either be repaid or repudiated. If they are paid, the borrowers must pay them out of future earnings. That condition, according to the latest line of argument that developed under the housing bill debate, means the borrowers can create little or no reserve for the future.

Debts on Top of Debts

It is being said that the recovery program and the New Deal generally contemplates planning for the future in such a manner as to ward off a recurrence of the calamity of depression. But I have asked in a good many places: what if the theories of economic planning fail to work at all, or work only in part? The answers I obtained depended somewhat on the slant of the person questioned. If they are following the professors blindly, they said to me that the plans could not fail because they were sound by every theory under which they are drawn. If the person to whom the inquiry was directed examined the problem on a practical basis and studied it with the background of history in mind, I believe without exception the answer was: "Well, it will be just too bad."

My own feeling coincides with the latter view. If the New Deal program for economic planning, for adjusting production to consumption, for controlling crop planting and distribution, and the other items that enter into the plan fail to operate according to the theories upon which they are based, there can be no doubt of the result. It will be just too bad. There will be millions of persons more debt ridden than now, and there will be no way out. The government will be holding the bag.

On this question of debt, there is that troublesome international phase. The United States loaned something like eleven billion dollars to foreign governments to aid in prosecution of the World war against Germany. For a long time after the money was loaned, the United States got nothing at all. In the meanwhile, there was a terrific bombardment of propaganda from the borrowing nations and from some of the misguided folks in our own country calling for absolute cancellation. But cancellation could not win. It was impossible. So there followed a lot of negotiations in which commissions from foreign governments came here and conferred at length with our debt funding commission.

May Stir Up a Stink

Settlements were eventually worked out. The debts were funded. That is, the debtor nations were given a long time in which to pay. They were given enormous concessions by our debt commission in order to get some agreement for repayment of the various loans. I know whereof I speak regarding those concessions because it happens that I am the only newspaper correspondent in Washington who reported every one of the debt conferences, and I say unequivocally that those funding settlements represented on the average a reduction of more than one-third in the total amount which the debtors contracted originally to pay.

Dodge Repayment

Now, again we are in the midst of new efforts to get something done in the way of repayments. The foreign nations are not going to pay if it can be avoided. They put up the very natural argument that obtains with every one who is in debt and who has been hit on the chin by depression conditions. They cannot raise the money, so they say. To avoid defaults, some of the foreign nations made what they called token payments a year ago at this time. Some of them have offered token payments again. But token payments amount to just about nothing as when your friend eats the apple and hands you the core. It was a nice apple to begin with, and the funding settlements were nice settlements when they were signed.

Frankly, I suspect that the United States is never going to get more than about 10 per cent of the total now due. There will be plenty of arguments, propositions and counter-propositions, negotiations and hauling and filling, and after awhile some of the foreign governments will have succeeded in creating enough public sentiment among their home people to cause a national action of the same character as that taken by France a year ago.

The conditions as regards the foreign debts owing the United States, I am afraid, will be paralleled right here at home by individual and corporation and bank debts owing the federal government. Many borrowers will run into hard luck, as they always have done, and they will appeal to the politicians to save them.

When those debts become a political issue, it will be an issue too strong for politicians to withstand. They will arise on the floors of congress and weep about the plight of "those poor people."

The special senate committee is getting under way with its inquiry into the various activities of munitions manufacture materials for war, and it appears now that it is headed into an investigation that will disclose plenty of things that will cause a stink to arise when the investigators have laid their findings before the committee headed by Senator Nye of North Dakota. I spent a couple of hours the other day with one of the wheelhorses commanding the investigating force and it was certainly his opinion that there are things awaiting revelation that will cause surprise.

The evening I was in the chief investigator's office eight men were receiving their credentials and money with which to start out on the trail. They were headed for what amounts to a raid on the files and books of some factory which the investigators believed had been engaged in the manufacture of war materials and which they thought also had been engaged in propagating information that would cause a couple of foreign nations to look with suspicion upon each other. Suspicion between two nations is obviously a prelude to more serious differences, and eventually war is the result. The committee has started out to expose such conditions, if they exist, and the investigators are convinced that things of that sort are being practiced by some of the makers of munitions.

I have no way of knowing where the investigators are going in their continuing effort, but from all indications they have orders to dig deep into files and records to see what they can find.

Howe About:

Sentiment Manufactured Roar Ford's Philosophy

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

THE gross sentimentality Americans have long practiced in their public affairs, and do not privately believed in, has done them great harm. No one can doubt it was our foolishly sentimental cast of making the world safe for democracy that landed us in the World war, at an expense which bankrupted us, and harmed instead of promoted democracy; it gave the politicians their present terrible power.

Gross sentimentality (too much sympathy for evil doers) ruined our courts, and built up a legal system that is the astonishment of the intelligent world; it has corrupted our youth, our women and our religion —everything we are now in almost universal revolt against had its inception in gross sentimentality.

The writers and leaders known as the Sob Squad have taken advantage of our smiling, hypocritical acquiescence in sentimental folly until we are the laughing stock of sane foreigners. Our present groaning because of self-inflicted wounds will make a page in future histories that will disgrace the once brave word American.

I have just been reading another African book, and encountering two well-behaved maidenly ladies who went everywhere. They had no ambition beyond seeing the country; no reforms to introduce. So they were welcomed by all the whites, and the natives found them so unusual they were all delighted to see them. The author thus dismisses them finally: "They had been everywhere in the world that one would like to go, and experienced nothing that in their eyes amounted to risk or discomfort. But they will never write a travel book, their observation is too accurate, their views too sane, to command attention."

I have lived so long, and heard so many tales, only a very unusual one interests me. Today I gave a little attention to this: A twenty-year-old girl of the best set in a small town is taking a liquor cure.

The writing between the lines here is that publishers will print nothing about Africa, or anything else, not absurdly exaggerated. In everything in print publishers insist that lions roar menacingly, maul hunters, and carry off women and children.

In all you read, look out for the manufactured roar, and discount it, or your reading will add to your confusion.

Henry Ford recently wrote: "A man has no divine right to a job, but must work to find work. Charity undermines character; self-help is the only road to economic salvation. I do not believe in routine charity; I think it a shameful thing that any man should have to stoop to take it or give it. It is neither helpful nor human. The charity of our cities is the most barbarous thing in our system. True charity is a much more costly effort than money giving. Unemployment has become one of the most dreadful words in the language." . . . This philosopher spent a large amount of money in getting this sound thinking before the people, but they paid not the slightest attention to it.

I was once in the company of a mother and daughter, and especially admired the daughter. "She deserves all you say of her now," the mother said, "but as a child she was terrible; I was busy half the time returning things she stole from the neighbors. And she was a tyrant with the other children and with her parents. In her babyhood it is sincerely regretted she ever was born as I now rejoice in it, for she is an unusually creditable woman; she frequently shames me with her ladylike manners." . . .

I admired the young woman the more because she so successfully overcame the natural bad habits of youth. Success in life is realization as we grow up that if we are to enjoy the comforts of civilization, we must acquire civilized habits.

I rarely read without encountering a statement that capitalism has failed. . . . Every such statement is silly, but no one can be convinced of it. Capitalism is nothing more than the least troublesome way demonstrated by long experience, of handling necessary barter. It has no more failed than has marriage, or law, or philosophy; not nearly as much as religion or democracy. . . .

What do these men mean when they say capitalism has failed? Are they declaring that when we wish to buy a railroad ticket it is better to pay for it with corn on the ear or pigs on the hoof than with money?

If a man is born a fool, must he remain one forever? . . . At least one philosopher holds out the hope that the brain may be improved by proper exercise, as may the muscles. BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Yes, We Get No Money Einstein Says Naughty Two Pigeons, Hatching Silver Limps Back

Britain, owing to the United States $4,713,000,000, has decided that the best plan for this spring's installment is to pay nothing at all. They would have gladly handed in a "token," something for Uncle Sam to play with, perhaps a few silver dollars, but President Roosevelt had said: "Pay the amount due this spring, or consider yourselves in default."

The British do not like to be in default. Refusing to pay what they owe this nation would justify other nations in refusing to pay them. On the other hand, the British feel that, if they buy our dollars to pay us, they might increase the value of the dollar and diminish that of the pound.

The upshot is that our British friends decide to pay nothing, explaining with words well chosen that we ought to be grateful that Britain did not allow Germany to destroy the United States in the big war. And, anyhow, it is all our fault.

The super-learned Doctor Einstein, of relativity fame, warns the United States that "America is not innocent of Europe's misery," and in demanding payment of her debt becomes "an accomplice in the ruin of political morality and the cultivation of a revenge spirit encouraged by despair." So says an Associated Press dispatch from Paris.

It should not annoy Professor Einstein to be told that the people of the United States, delighted to receive and provide him with congenial employment when Germany put him out, feel able to form their own opinions concerning the debts. Opinions of one, however wise in mathematics, who will take no part in paying the debt and bought none of the "Liberty bonds" when the debts were contracted, do not interest the American taxpayer.

If the highly esteemed Doctor Einstein will read the foolish book that his greater predecessor, Newton, wrote, elucidating the Apocalypse, he will learn that it is possible for a scientist to make mistakes when he wanders away from science. There is no demand for a fourth dimension in international honesty.

At Morrison, Ill., two pigeons take turns trying to hatch a dock egg left in an open lane. The pigeons find it hard to cover the entire egg, but do their best, and the egg may be hatched. Farmers watch and wonder what the pigeons will do with their child after they have hatched the duckling, and what they will think when it takes to the water.

At Washington there is mamma government that may be even more surprised than those pigeons as it watches the unfolding careers of social and economic "ducklings" that it is now hatching.

We are going on a partial, limping semi-silver basis, which means having back of our money $25 worth of silver, at the nominal imaginary rate of $1.29 per ounce, for every $100 worth of gold.

The government must purchase some thirteen or fourteen hundred million ounces of silver, that will give its silver purchases probably rising, between seven hundred and one thousand million dollars.

Interesting question: How will the government pay for this new silver? Will it pay with more interest-bearing bonds, on the assumption that the silver is really worth nothing? Or will the government issue nice new green money, saying, "There is good silver back of this"? How long is the most dangerous kind of "inflation" through interest-bearing bonds going to continue?

The British government orders Lloyd's to cease writing insurance on the life of President Roosevelt. A special list of rates had been prepared for those wishing to insure the President's life. 5 per cent for insurance against assassination or accident, 7½ per cent against death from ordinary causes, 12½ per cent against the President's being incapacitated.

By special request, and wisely, this system of gambling on the President's life has been discontinued.

The most expensive thing in the world is carelessness. In New York state alone last year accidents to workers cost one hundred million dollars. Twenty-five million dollars were paid in compensation. The entire loss of $100,000,000 in the long run is paid by the public.

The important thing is the loss to workers and their physical suffering. There is no remedy, except greater care on the part of workers, who become careless; men that handle dynamite, for instance, often throwing the sticks about as they would throw sticks of wood.

SYNOPSIS

On her way to a position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer, young professor of English literature and rhetoric, meets on the train a young man, Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy, as professor of mathematics and chemistry. At the railroad station they meet Mrs. Denver, engaged as matron of the Academy. The group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the school building. Haskell, the proprietor, welcomes them. Wilton Payne, teacher of psychology, completes the faculty.

"I wonder if houses possess mental and emotional states approximating those of a long line of occupants. This place seems absolutely vibrant to me; as if people were hurrying through the corridors, and yet I haven't seen a soul since I arrived an hour ago."

A rather obtuse-looking country woman entered with a tea tray and put it down on the marble-topped table which occupied the center of the room.

"How good it looks," Mrs. Denver said frankly. "This mountain air makes me hungry."

"Are we to wait for Mr.—Haskell?"

"I think we ought to," Mrs. Denver said.

The servitor turned at the door on hearing these words. "Don't wait for him! Don't look for him until you see him."

The quintette laughed a little nervously, and drew up their chairs. Mrs. Denver, at Janet's request, poured the tea, and they all drank it with the slight constraint of people only just beginning to know each other.

"I love the region," Payne remarked. "I think homesickness drew me to this spot; how intensely quiet it is!"

"Intensely quiet. I wonder where the scholars are."

"Of course, they may all be in the class rooms," Arthur ventured. "Or else out at hare-and-hounds—or in the gymnasium."

Mrs. Denver was carefully putting some dropped crumbs on the edge of the tray. "I want to get right into work—see where the linen closets are, and the mending room; and how the servants will be directly under my supervision—there's so much detail in a house as big as this; and I am eager to know the rules and requirements."

"I am going into the hall for a minute," Arthur said, rising, "to look again at those old portraits." He returned in a little while with an air of relief. "Well, I glanced through a glass door and discovered a handful of scholars bending over their desks; but of all absorbed students, and in such fading light, too! Not one stirred or looked up while I was standing there. Then I examined those great maps in the rear hall. They are dated back in the fifties—queer to keep obsolete maps in a modern academy! The desks were very clumsy looking, too—an ancient type. I should think parents would make a row about such archaic furnishings. I hope the school books are more modern than the maps."

"Queer that one hears no bells," said Mrs. Denver. "I'd feel sort of at home if I heard a bell."

What they did hear was a long, low laugh—like the laughter of a very sophisticated, crafty, but not very friendly person. It was repeated after a moment's interval, then seemed to die away on the staircase. Twilight was setting in, but no one came to light the lamps. At last Haskell appeared, smiling, bending down his handsome, sensitive face to smell his gardenia.

The four rose with alacrity, and he led them down the hall past the glass door. The newcomers glanced through it.

"There are some real students!" Janet remarked. "How intensely absorbed they seem."

Haskell, at the head of the little procession, turned sharply around, glanced through the door, and for an instant his face became deathly white. But he recovered himself almost at once. "Ah, the lights should be on there. This way, my pedagogues. I ask your admiration of the curve of this staircase; is it not beautiful?"

He went on before them with a light, almost jaunty step. Mrs. Denver sniffed the air suspiciously, thinking she smelled must. "This place needs a thorough overhauling," she thought. "How glad I'll be to get started—to settle down—to know just what I have to do."

"This is your room," Haskell said to Janet, throwing open a door with the number 90 on it. "And yours is just next," addressing Mrs. Denver. "You will find matches on the table. Unfortunately we have to use lamps here. The bathroom is just opposite. Now, Wilton, Fleming."

The two men followed him down the corridor, disappeared around a corner.

Janet put a hand on Mrs. Denver's arm. "I am glad to be next door to you. It's all so strange."

"You feel strange here, too?"

"Very strange."

"He must be rather stern or those young people wouldn't sit so still."

They seemed almost like dead people," Janet remarked. "Let us light the lamp. We'll feel better when we've been introduced to the other teachers and know our duties."

"Are there other teachers?"

Their blank faces confronted each other. "It would be a very small faculty—three people," Janet ventured in a weak voice.

"My dear, you look pale. Sit down a minute. Let's keep quite still and listen—maybe those children, who were straining their eyes, will be rushing out soon."

Janet sat down nervously, telling herself she was very foolish. But she kept silent, her eyes on the bit of black braiding on Mrs. Denver's gown. She thought of Wilton Payne, and was glad Arthur Fleming had a man to companion him as she had a woman. They sat very still. Outside the wind moaned in the pine trees, and there was a splash of rain against the window. Within the house profound silence reigned.

A heavy knock on the door made them both start. But it was only the man with their baggage. He entered and departed silently.

"Really I don't want to unpack my trunks," Janet remarked. "I wonder if there is hot water in the bathroom?"

She found the bathroom as antiquated as the rest of the house, with a built-in copper tub—a basin highly ornamented with colored flowers and gold scroll work, with big clumsy taps. But there was hot water.

Curiously was getting the better of fatigue and fear. She went to the head of the staircase. As she stood there a hand was laid on her shoulder. She started violently, turned and saw Haskell's bright, restless eyes fixed upon her.

"Don't go down, Miss Mercer," he commanded.

"The quiet of the house oppresses me."

"I fear you are over-excited, over-tired. Go back to your room and rest."

Only too glad to get away from him, she returned to her bedroom. At the door stood Mrs. Denver, who by way of dressing for dinner had assumed a neat lace collar.

"Have you heard anything yet?"

"Not a thing. I was starting to go downstairs when Mr. Haskell

As She Stood There a Hand Was Laid on Her Shoulder.

met me—and—really—commanded me to go back to my room."

"I've only unpacked a few things—I feel so strange here. I've not even heard a bell, and you always hear bells in schools."

"I suppose he will be sending for us—soon—unless—"

Mrs. Denver's eyes were fixed on hers with apprehension. "Unless what?" she whispered.

"Unless he doesn't want those very quiet students to be disturbed."

"Poor children! I wonder if Mr. Payne's and Mr. Fleming's rooms are near us? Somehow I'd feel safer if they were to call."

"Why, we act as if this wasn't a big house full of people. Listen, the wind is rising again. There must be heavy draughts. See the lamp flicker!"

Another knock on the door. This time it was the stolid maidservant.

"Dinner's ready," she announced.

Janet put out her lamp. Instead of turning toward the stairs, the young woman led them down the corridor; ahead of them they saw an oblong of light cutting the darkhall from an open door.

Arthur and Wilton Payne were standing just inside this door, looking with an air of bewilderment at a table set for four which occupied the center of what seemed to be an upstairs sitting room.

"Sit down and I'll bring the soup," the servant said.

They looked at each other, then silently took their places. When Arthur was sure that the waitress was out of hearing, he leaned across the table and spoke to Janet.

"Mr. Payne and I haven't seen one scholar yet—barring those in the classroom."

Their dinner was excellent—plain food, but well cooked. At the salad course, Haskell suddenly appeared in the doorway.

"Everything right?" he asked cheerfully. "I believe that a good table in a school is more than half the education."

"Where is the general dining room?" Mrs. Denver inquired boldly.

"Downstairs in the west wing."

"Your pupils are certainly well trained," Arthur remarked. "Are you always so intensely quiet here?"

Haskell twisted a seal ring on his finger. "Mr. Payne, what are the psychological bases of fear?"

"Danger—mystery—the unknown; the untried."

"Precisely. What are the manifestations of fear? Intense silence or wild raucous sound? Oh, I am jesting, of course—but I do prefer deep silence to shrill noises. Miss Mercer, will you have Russian or Russian dressing on your salad?"

"May we see the establishment after dinner, sir?"

Well, really, I'd much prefer your pupils should think of you as far-off Olympians."

"At ease on Parnassus' slopes," Payne remarked with a lifting of his eyebrows.

Haskell had drawn up a chair near Janet's. She looked lovely, Arthur thought. In his heart he had already constituted himself her protector, and he resented with all the ardor of a fiery nature the cold, creeping courtesy of this strange schoolmaster guarding so jealously the almost inhuman discipline of his establishment.

"Miss Mercer, your pupils will love you," Haskell was saying in his soft, purring voice.

"I think it is so much more important that they should love the subjects I teach," she answered crisply, shrinking back from his too close proximity.

"They will love both." He rose, fixed them with a queer, intense glare of a glance. "I recommend you all to go to your rooms. The work will begin in earnest tomorrow."

They heard his footsteps echoing down an apparently endless corridor. Mrs. Denver folded up her napkin, and taking a pin from her dress pinned it carefully. Payne was staring at the tablecloth. Janet's fair face seemed like a gleam of summer in the soft light of the candles and her eyes, wistful, half fearful, drew Arthur's heart to that shadowy region where love begins. He stepped to the door. "They keep this place very dark."

"Come in out of that corridor, Mr. Fleming," Payne commanded, "and let's—talk."

Arthur turned back. The two women were sitting in a listening attitude. "I thought I heard a voice," Mrs. Denver said.

"So did I," Janet echoed.

"I want to make a pact," Payne announced. "One doesn't have to teach psychology to know when a situation rings strange. Let us hold together here, whatever happens."

They looked in each other's faces solemnly. Janet reached out her left hand, and Arthur took it. They made a ring. Far off a bell struck.

"There, at last I've heard a bell," Mrs. Denver sighed. "I don't think I could have slept tonight if I hadn't heard just one bell."

CHAPTER II

WHEN Janet had said good night to Mrs. Denver, she bolted her door and wondered whether she would be able to sleep. Ready for bed, she put out her light, and raising the shades at her windows saw that the rain was over, and the moon, a little past the full, had risen and was illuminating the gardens, casting long ragged shadows of the pines across the unkempt lawns. While she looked and mused over the strange situation, two figures emerged from the gloom of the trees—in one of them she recognized the principal of the school; but the other was a man fully six feet three inches tall; and with long arms like a gorilla. His broad, whitish face was bored into by black eyes, and slashed rather than featured by a great, red mouth. His appearance was so terrifying she sank on her knees and drew the lace window curtains between her face and the window. Who was he? A man-of-all-work?

Whatever he was, he was in the confidence of his master. They advanced slowly, in earnest conversation. At last they paused beneath her window, ceased talking, and gazed up steadily for about two minutes.

Her heart beat so violently that she felt they must hear it. All at once the moon went under a cloud, and their scrutiny ceased. She stole into bed, and, in spite of her fears, was soon asleep.

How long she had slept she did not know when she found herself all at once wide awake, sitting up in bed, and wondering if a far-off sound of feet had been actual or part of a dream. Not hearing it again, she lay back on her pillow and went over the events of the day, her mind now alert and active. Fear gave way to curiosity. Why had Haskell segregated his four teachers on this floor? Why had he wished to keep them away from the scholars?

Her curiosity strengthening with every moment, she resolved at last on a bold move. This strange principal had probably gone to bed. She would creep down and explore the ground floor of the academy and probably find some clue to the mystery. Acting at once on this resolve, she put on her clothes, and softly stepped out into the corridor and made her way down the curved staircase to the central hall.

There she stood for a moment in uncertainty, but started at last toward a door, to reach which she had to pass the glass door of the study room where the scholars had been so industriously bent over their books. As she went by she instinctively glanced in. The room was flooded with moonlight. And to her horror she saw the four forms still bending their heads over their desks, absolutely motionless.

For a moment she wanted to scream; to run in terror from this house. Were they still forms of the dead or were they dummies—put there—for what purpose?

Very softly she tried the door; it was unlocked; and she entered, closing the door behind her and calculating the amount of courage she would require to approach the nearest figure, which was that of a young boy. His head, covered with thick brown hair, was supported in hands which had a waxy look; and he was hunched in a lifelike manner over his books. Very softly she stole toward him, when sounds came from the hall which sent a chill to her heart. She dropped down behind one of the big desks and close to the figure, which she now saw was a wax dummy. Peering out of her shadow she perceived two heads close together, their white faces staring steadily through the glass door into the schoolroom. She recognized the immense gorilla-like man she had seen on the campus, and Gordon Haskell.

She shook like a leaf in her hiding place, praying fervently that they would not enter the room. To her intense relief, they turned away, and she heard their retreating footsteps. A faintness had nearly overcome her; but a rush of the old fighting spirit, when she found herself again comparatively safe, brought her to full consciousness.

The waxen boy drew her eyes again, half fearfully, half curiously she crept nearer. Whoever had made these figures had been a true artist. They were as far beyond waxwork as a Leonardo drawing is beyond the efforts of a schoolgirl: grief, amazement, exquisite tenderness, seemed by turn to have guided their composition. The two girls—a little younger than their "brothers"—were of a workmanship as subtly calculated to envisage beauty and innocence as was possible. Their lovely eyes in the moonlight were bent upon their books; their curls fell thick about their slender necks—columns fit to adorn some little circular temple of Eros.

Church Built of Bones

Malta has the ugliest church in the world, the Chapel of Bones, in Strada Mercanti, Valletta. The architecture in this gruesome chapel is comprised of the bleached remains of those originally buried in the adjoining burial ground. The altar has a background of human skulls and crossbones and the arch above it is rendered in semicircular rows of skulls.

Natalie Clamps On the Lid

DICK NEWTON'S heels came down on the pavement with the staccato clip of a man either in haste or suffering from some mental disturbance. From the forbidding scowl on his usually too serene, handsome face it was obviously anger that was driving him along the street. He had felt that something was wrong the minute he had entered his fiance's apartment that evening. Tired out from a hard day at the office and looking forward for a pleasant restful evening, he had found Natalie with her blue eyes still dewy from recently shed tears.

"Dearest, what's the matter?" he asked, kissing her eyelids gently.

"Oh, Dick, it's mother," she wailed. "I'm so worried about her."

"Is she worse?"

"N-no. No, but she isn't getting strong as she should and the doctor said today she needed a complete change and that she must not attempt to spend the long severe winter here. She suggested Florida."

"Haven't you—have you enough money to manage it?"

In reply Natalie burst into tears. His brain was working rapidly as he comforted her. He had had no idea that his fiancee and her mother were in such straitened circumstances.

"Sh-hhh, Natalie. We must do something. Don't cry. It breaks my heart. I can't bear to see you so miserable. Of course we can't let her stay here if there's any danger—to her health. But, oh, Natalie darling, I haven't saved a cent toward our little home yet. Lord knows where the money goes, and this will mean that I'll have to wait that much longer for you."

"Dick, would you really be willing to help? You're an angel—you're too good!" She was clinging to him now in an ecstasy of joy.

"I've been so worried. If I could only get out and work, it would be different, but that would mean hiring a trained nurse and it would cost more in the end than I could ever earn. I'm no good."

"Hush, Natalie, don't let me hear you say that again. How much will it take?"

"If only she could go along, but there'll be two of us, you see."

"You're going away—leave me?" he asked alarmed. It was the first time he had really taken in the situation.

"But it'll only be a few months and I'll write every day and besides it'll be just as hard on me. One good thing, you won't have me near to spend so much money on all the time in your dear generous way.

"But I love to spend it on you. You don't seem to understand," he said, his voice breaking. "I can't let you go, Natalie."

When he left that evening and went furiously down the street it had all been settled. He was to send on every cent he could and they would leave right out of it. He laughed harshly as the irony of the situation came more and more clearly to him. He was to work like the devil and deny himself every little comfort in order to keep his fiancee and her mother.

The following Saturday he stood under the trainshed and watched the train crawl out of the station with Natalie and her mother on board. Then he hurried back to the office and worked over a plan for increasing his sales so that his commissions would help meet the added expense. He would not have his future mother-in-law thinking he wasn't able to provide, so he worked night and day until he could double the amount Dorothy had said they would need.

At last a bright spring day brought them back to him.

"I can't believe you're here," he said at the train. "Let's take your mother home, then have a little spin."

Out on the highway together at last Natalie said excitedly:

"Dick, darling, will you be very mad if I tell you something?"

"Good lord," he thought, "I guess she wants to take her mother to Europe this time," but he merely answered:

"You couldn't make me mad if you tried."

She took a slip of paper out of her bag and held it toward him.

"A certified check for $2,200!" he exclaimed. "Natalie, how'd you make it? Real estate?"

"I didn't. You did," she laughed. "You see, Dick, I thought you were spending too much and hadn't saved a cent in the six months we'd been engaged, so I practiced a little deception by pretending we needed the money. Mother was furious, but she finally consented to help me carry it through."

"You little imp," he said, putting his arm about her. "Why—we can get married right away, can't we?"

"Any time," she answered shyly. "Mother and I made my trousseau in Florida."

"Natalie, you're the most satisfactory little person I ever knew. I never saved so much in my life before," he laughed. "You'll certainly have to do our banking in the future."

"I will, but I promise never to clamp on the lid quite so tight again," she replied happily.

By EMILY POST

Author of "ETIQUETTE," "THE BLUE BOOK OF SOCIAL USAGE," Etc.

INTRODUCTIONS

DEAR Mrs. Post: How should my young son, aged ten, be introduced to our friends?

Answer: "Mrs. Jones, this is my son Bobby" or "Ethel, this is Bobby," then to Bobby, "—Miss Blake." Bobby then says, "How do you do, Mrs. Jones" (or "Miss Blake").

Dear Mrs. Post: Is there any way that would be correct to meet the young people in the next apartment house? Her father is a professional associate of my father, but outside of the hospital at which both are attending physicians, they never meet. We are really the newcomers in the neighborhood so neighborhood courtesy cannot be used as a means.

Answer: The strictly proper thing to do is to wait until a friend in common introduces you. But since very few people take strict proprieties of this sort very seriously, you might perhaps write her a note, tell her her father knows your father and that you would like very much to meet her, and ask if she will name an hour when you may go to see her. This is of course not at all according to rule, and if she does not answer your note you will feel humiliated, and there will be nothing that you can do except forget that you ever wanted to see her. On the other hand, there is no reason to suppose she will not be delighted to know you.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am secretary to the president of a large dress manufacturing company and am often introduced to customers. Is it proper, whether the buyer is a man or woman, for me to rise and shake hands?

Answer: This depends upon the particular circumstances of your own position. If you have had any amount of personal correspondence with these buyers, you would rise and greet them. If they are strangers, you would probably follow the conventional impersonal behavior of an office employee.

Dear Mr. Post: I am having a party for a friend who is staying with me. Do I mention her name first, or those of my guests (all women) when introducing them?

Answer: Name of older person usually said first. But unless the formal "may I present" is used, which name is said first is of no real importance.

AGAIN, INTRODUCTIONS

DEAR Mrs. Post: My son calls all young people, those newly met as well as old friends, by their first name always, and says that after they are introduced, and he takes it for granted that he is expected to start using their first names immediately. Just how far is the use of first names carried without offense to propriety?

Answer: If by propriety you mean that approved by the young and modern, I should say that all our bright young people, within what they consider their own circle, discard Mr., Mrs. and Miss. And all up to sixty, who optimistically think they can be mistaken for twenty, follow suit. I am merely reporting—not recommending this practice—accepting among friends. The never relaxing Miss and Mister of the 00s went to the other extremes. Somewhere between the two would, I think, be admirable.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am planning to give a tea (at which my engagement will be announced) at the home of a newspaper society woman who has recently opened her large house and manages teas, luncheons and dinners as a means of swelling a depleted income. I am having my invitations engraved but I am not sure how I am to tell people that the tea is not at my home. (2) Must I introduce my guests to this professional hostess, who is a cultured person but not a friend of mine at all? (3) In the newspaper account of the announcement party, must I explain where I had the tea?

Answer: Put the address of the tea-room on the invitation. Then in the lower left corner engrave: R. s. v. p. 2 Park Place (your own address. (2) No. She is on this occasion a professional caterer. (3) Where a party is given is usually included. If you do not want to mention it, you can say instead that Mrs. Jones of 2 Park Place gave a tea to announce the engagement of her daughter, etc. Or, if you are living alone, that Miss Jones, of 2 Park Place, gave a tea, etc.

Dear Mrs. Post: My aunt is having a reception for an important stranger. She wants me to open the door for the guests. Please tell me just what I do because I have never been to a reception.

Answer: You would not do anything further than tell the man where to leave their hats and coats and say "good evening" to your friends.

Wallpaper Great Aid in "Remaking" Rooms

Wallpaper is a great aid for barnlike rooms with high ceilings. Here's one recipe for "bringing the ceiling down" and making the total area of the room seem less. Choose a paper having a design in which horizontal lines or patterns predominate and do not cover the walls from the baseboard to the ceiling, but to a point about two feet below the ceiling. Use your molding here, or a wallpaper border.

Then, extend the ceiling paper down to meet the side walls. Thus, you will appear to lower the ceiling. Also, your eyes will follow the horizontal lines in the paper and the room will seem less "tall" to you.

On the other hand, if you are papering a small room with a low ceiling, choose a wallpaper having vertical stripes or patterns to carry the eye up and to add to the apparent height of the walls. And do not "drop" the ceiling, of course.

The best papers for small rooms are those having tiny patterns in light colors. Also, a scenic design will do a lot for the room, lending depth because of its perspective.

When you feel inclined to be a bit hopeless about the architectural drawbacks of your home—don't! Wallpaper can correct myriads of faults if you will give it a chance.—Chicago Tribune.

TRAMMELL NOT A SOUTH FLORIDIAN

Senator Trammell, searching in desperation for some claim to influence the voters, has attempted to inject the sectional issue in the campaign. Because Pepper lives in Tallahassee, and Trammell is supposedly from Lakeland, he makes the claim that South Florida should stand by a South Florida man.

Which might be interesting if true. But such is not the case. It is true that Trammell came from Lakeland—or to put it correctly went from Lakeland—25 years ago when he was elected Attorney General of this state. He went to Tallahassee and lived there four years as attorney general. He was then elected governor and remained in Tallahassee another four years. Immediately thereafter, he was elected to the United States Senate and has lived in Washington for the past 17 years. During all of that time he has not maintained a home of any kind in Lakeland. When he visits Lakeland, he goes to a hotel as any other tourist would, and he has about as much in common with the people of Lakeland as the average casual visitor has.

A Lakeland man, O. W. Foxworth, writing in the Tampa Tribune states the facts correctly, when he says:

"We have kept Park Trammell in the Senate for 17 years. He has been selected from and as a citizen of Polk county. One would assume that he is a representative, property owning citizen of Polk County. One would err sadly in such an assumption, for he pays no taxes in this county.

"He claims Lakeland as his 'home.' This claim is bogus. It is not his home. He neither owns nor rents a home here. On election years he spends a few days at our most palatial hotel, tells the people that they now have the opportunity of extending his racket for another six-year period; and has hitherto been getting away with it."

The undeniable fact is that Trammell has lost touch with Lakeland, Polk County and the State as a whole. He spends little time in the state—and that principally at election time, when he devotes his entire interest to ballyhooing for "another term."

At any rate, we do not look upon our Senators as sectional representatives. They must be big enough to represent the whole state. We believe Claude Pepper measures up to that requirement, as well as in every other respect.

State apportionments of a hundred million dollar fund for new highway construction, announced this week, shows that Florida received a very modest amount compared with other states. Texas received the largest fund—more than 12 millions, and New York got 11 millions. California got nearly 8 million, Alabama received over 4 million, while Georgia was awarded 5 million. Meanwhile, Florida received only $2,661,343. In a recent speech here Senator Trammell, claiming credit for federal appropriations for roads, said he was able to do so much for Florida because of his seniority. We are just wondering if his "seniority" didn't have a bad day when Brain Truster Tugwell was dividing the spoils.

PEPPER IS OVERWHELMING CHOICE

The newspapers of Florida have interpreted the vote in the first primary to indicate that the people of the state want a change in the senatorial representation. Basing their opinion on the vote and expressions of voters in their respective communities, the newspapers are overwhelmingly of the opinion that Claude Pepper will defeat Park Trammell in the run-off next Tuesday. At least 90 percent of the papers favor Pepper. The amount of editorial comment over the state is so voluminous that it is possible to give only brief excerpts from a few of the many expressions. Here is what they are saying:

Titusville Star-Advocate: Pepper waged a determined campaign, although a clean one, for the nomination, and now has placed himself in a most enviable position and one which almost certainly will mean his nomination by a comfortable majority on June 26th.

Palatka News: Pepper's strength indicated clearly from the outset was proven by the ballot box, and Trammell's boast of never having lost an election since he entered politics to seek the mayoralty of his home town of Lakeland in 1900 received a severe jolt. During the next three weeks Pepper will easily pick up enough votes to assure his election.

Orlando Sentinel: Trammell, of course, should concede his defeat and retire from the field * * * The people have spoken. Their voice is clear. There is no doubt about their dissatisfaction over Mr. Trammell's stewardship.

Hollywood News: Senator Trammell, representing Florida in the upper house for 17 years, is nearer defeat than in any previous campaign.

Tallahassee Daily Democrat: Election of Claude Pepper over Senator Trammell in the second primary is conceded by all but the most optimistic supporters of the junior senator.

Sarasota Herald: Pepper stands for a new spirit of aggressiveness. His program is positively constructive. Ordinarily Trammell would have a sure thing of it, but with Pepper in the field, popular and magnetic, it looks very much as though there would be a change in Florida's senatorial representation in Washington.

Jacksonville Journal: Senator Trammell himself declares that he is running for re-election upon the basis of his record in the senate. Upon that basis, The Journal submits, he should be retired.

Cocoa Tribune: The day is past when because of the good memory a candidate has for names—the personal touch—he can continue to think the people will pension him for life in a position that should produce something for the state in legislative halls where other Senators are doing things for their states.

Winter Haven Herald: Feeling seems to be general that the time has come for a change in Florida's representation in the United States Senate and in casting about for the right man to replace the incumbent it is apparent that Claude Pepper will be the popular choice.

Fort Myers News-Press: We would like to see Park Trammell replaced in the senate with a new man, and we believe Claude Pepper is the man who should replace him.

Tampa Tribune: The inevitable conclusion is that Tampa would have much more to expect and much more prospect and assurance of substantial results from young, energetic, purposeful Claude Pepper in the Senate, a man who would be intent on making a record and reputation for good service, rather than supinely resting on laurels claimed already to have been won—a man looking to and striving for a resultful future, not living in and boasting of an unproductive past.

Jacksonville Journal: After such a pronounced display of dissatisfaction with the present senator, there is little doubt left as to the result of the second primary. * * * Florida has learned from bitter experience that this state needs energy and action, rather than stuffed shirts in Washington.

Ocala Banner: Pepper, an able speaker and an intelligent lawyer, is also a hard worker. His campaign proves that. And his friends know that he would turn this same tireless energy to legislative matters if elected.

Brooksville Journal: He (Pepper) is a go-getter and will get things done in Washington if given a chance.

Miami Daily News: Senator Trammell's record of loyalty to the Roosevelt administration, it will be recalled, has not been spotless. * * * The verdict at the polls seems to point a pubic preference for more active representation in the upper house by one who is thoroughly in sympathy with the New Deal and the Roosevelt leadership.

Melbourne Times: Trammell received just about one-third of all the votes cast which is proof enough that two-thirds of the people want a change in senators.

Gadsden County Herald: Claude Pepper carried Gadsden county in a handsome way * * * and will enter the second primary with Trammell, an almost certain winner.

St. Cloud Tribune: It has been the opinion of the editor of the Tribune, from personal knowledge of both candidates, that Claude Pepper was the man possessing the necessary qualifications to end the almost unprecedented political career of Park Trammell.

Orlando Reporter-Star: Trammell is on the defensive and this puts him to a disadvantage with so powerful an antagonist as Claude Pepper.

Okaloosa Messenger: An old friend of Claude Pepper told us more about Claude Pepper the other day than we have been able to find out before * * but most of all, we like the spirit of the man who supports his father and mother and who sends his sister and little brother through school. That kind of a man "will do to tie to."

12,000 FINGERLINGS PUT IN LOCAL LAKES

State Conservation Dept. Co-operates With Local Fish and Game Association

Johnny Dobos, employee of the State Board of Conservation, of which the Honorable George W. Davis is commissioner, was in Avon Park last Friday afternoon and placed 12,000 large mouth black bass fingerlings in lakes Glenada, Damon, Viola and Lotela. The fish were obtained through the efforts of the Highlands County Fish and Game Protective Association and were furnished by the state hatchery near Winter Haven.

The bass being distributed this season are all of the fingerling size, that is two to four inches in length, are six to eight weeks old and will weigh a pound when one year old. By restocking with fingerlings instead of the "fry" size, which are only a few days old, much better results will be obtained as the fingerlings are large enough to take care of themselves and have a much better chance of reaching maturity.

The hatchery at Winter Haven is in charge of R. G. Garrett and it is said they are producing an exceptionally good supply of fish for restocking purposes.

It is the policy of Commissioner Davis to make an equitable distribution of these fish throughout the various counties and his program calls for a large number of this splendid game fish to be placed in suitable waters so that the best results may be obtained in order to keep Florida in the forefront as a game fishing Paradise.

Production control appears to have been practiced on a compulsory basis in the agriculture of the Indians inhabiting Florida when the white settlers arrived. Surplus output was kept from becoming a problem in respect to any commodity largely by requirements of diversity and growing of food and feed for "living-at-home."

Wells' Statement To the Voters

The campaign for the selection of the candidate for County Commissioner from this district, is now drawing to a climax, and certain false rumors and misunderstandings have arisen. I am therefore taking this means of again stating my position to the people of this district.

I am running without commitment to any political faction or individual.

The fact that my name has appeared on the same ballots and in letters put out by one or more local factions has caused me no little embarrassment, in that my friends of different political factions have inferred that I am committed to such faction. This is not true. I am committed to no one and if elected will be entirely free to use my own discretion and judgment and to act without regard to any consideration other than the welfare of Highlands County and my district.

I am being accused of having committed the patronage of my district to a certain oil company and to an owner of several trucks. This is equally untrue and I will not use a truck of my own under an circumstances. I would not stoop to such tactics. If elected I will do everything possible to patronize and employ citizens of this district who actually need patronage and employment. I believe every public official should support the relief policies of our National Administration along this line.

The question has arisen in the minds of many as to why I am being supported by many people prominent in both political factions.

The people of Avon Park have been asking for an unattached, open minded candidate and my offering for election is on that basis. I believe that there lies the reason for the support which I am enjoying from all political factions.

I announced for this office through a desire to serve my district and county. We all realize it is one of the most, if not the most, responsible county position. Your Board of Commissioners constitutes a board of directors of Highlands County—a four million dollar corporation. This board is charged with the responsibility of running the business and finances of the county. I believe I am qualified both through training and experience for this office and on that basis solicit your support.

Entertaining Films Coming to Avon

A week of the finest in screen entertainment is scheduled for showing at the Avon theatre during the coming week. On Saturday, tomorrow, a double feature program is billed. It will consist of a roaring western film—Tom Tyler in "Tracey Rides" and a mystery thriller, "Mystery Liner" featuring Noah Berry and Astrid Allyn. In addition to these two features chapter 10 of "The Musketeers" and a Popeye, The Sailor cartoon will be shown.

Warner Brothers comes through with another smashing musical film in "20 Million Sweethearts" starring Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Pat O'Brien, Four Mills Brothers, Ted Fiorito and his Orchestra and other radio personalities. This excellent film-musical is billed for Sunday and Monday at the Avon theatre. The management assures us that it equals any of the musical films released during the last 12 months.

A thrilling, mystery hair raiser is "The Witching Hour," billed as the guest night attraction, Tuesday and Wednesday. Sir Guy Standing, Judith Allen, John Halliday and Tom Brown are featured in this creepy, freaky thriller of murder and mysterious powers.

Katherine Hepburn comes to the Avon theatre on Thursday and Friday of next week in her first picture since "Little Women." It is entitled "Spitfire" and is taken from the story, "Trigger." The story deals with a mountain girl in North Carolina who stands her ground against all comers. This film is said to be one of the best of its kind since "Tol'able David." Robert Young, Ralph Bellamy and Martha Sleeper are featured.

PATTERN SUITED TO FROCKS OF VARIOUS TYPES AND FABRICS

PATTERN 1782

You'll soon be needing one of these completely new morning dresses, as warm days are well on the way. The design of this little frock is so adaptable to ideas of your own, you can use the same pattern to make several different dresses. Make it all of a printed wash silk or of solid-colored pale blue, green or rose cotton fabric. Or you can make the wing-like sleeve effect of a harmonizing or contrasting material—and you'll have still another new and very exciting dress. Really as lovely for afternoons as for mornings, and expresses gaiety in no small way!

WRIGLEY'S GUM

"THE WORLD'S GREATEST ENGINEERING PROJECT"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SOME time late in 1936 or early in 1937 Uncle Sam will be able to say to the other nations: "If you want to see one of the modern wonders of the world, come down into the southwestern part of my country and take a look at a job that I've just finished on the Colorado river." And in saying that he won't be uttering any idle boast. For the completion of the Hoover dam will mark the conclusion of one of the greatest engineering feats of all time, greater even than another of the triumphs of Uncle Sam, engineer, —that of digging the Panama canal—and when this gigantic mass of steel and concrete is finished it will be the biggest structure of its kind in the whole world.

Not the least part of Uncle Sam's triumph will be the fact that the dam and its appurtenant works will be completed in record time. When the contractors began work on April 30, 1931, they were to be allowed seven years in which to finish the job. That would have meant its completion by April 29, 1938. Right now they are nearly two years ahead of schedule and it is estimated that at the present rate of progress the whole thing will have been done in six years or less.

Impressive as are the statistical data connected with the Hoover dam, the average person cannot get an adequate idea of the immensity of the project from abstract figures alone. Most of us are poor judges of distance so it would mean little to say that the dam will have a maximum height of 730 feet above the foundation rock, that the top of it will be approximately 600 feet above the level of the river and that it will raise the water surface of the river 584 feet.

But let's get at it this way: If the Washington monument were set up alongside the dam and you stood on top of that monument, some one standing on top of the dam would have to let down nearly 60 yards of rope in order to pull you up to where he stood.

Can you visualize 4,400,000 cubic yards of concrete? Probably not. But if some one told you about a tower that was 100 feet square and rose two and a half miles in the air, you could get some idea of the amount of concrete that's going into the Hoover dam, the power plant nearby and the appurtenant works. That amount of concrete would build a standard paved highway, 16 feet wide, which would extend all the way from Seattle, Wash., to Miami, Fla.

You'll admit that 10,000,000,000,000 gallons of water is a considerable amount of moisture. That means 80,000 gallons for every man, woman and child in the United States. That 10,000,000,000,000 gallons is the amount of water which the reservoir created by the Hoover dam will hold. They also figure it in acre-feet, an acre-foot being the amount of water that will cover one acre one foot deep. When this reservoir is full it will contain 30,000,000 acre-feet—enough water to cover the whole state of New York to the depth of a foot.

But enough of statistics for a moment in favor of some more general information about this gigantic project. The Hoover dam is being built in the upper Black canyon on the Colorado river about 25 miles southeast of Las Vegas, Nev., where the river forms part of the Arizona-Nevada boundary. The purposes of the project are flood control and general river regulation (for the Colorado has long been one of the most unruly and destructive of all the rivers in America), irrigation, silt control, domestic water supply and power development. For these purposes the project calls not only for the construction of the huge dam and power plant in Black canyon but also the construction of the All-American canal in southern California.

The total cost of the project is placed at approximately $165,000,000 divided up as follows: dam and reservoir, $70,000,000; All-American canal, $38,500,000; power development, $38,200,000; and interest during construction, $17,700,000. But lest anyone think, since this is a federal project, that its construction means that many millions out of the pockets of American taxpayers, let it be stated at once that Uncle Sam's investment in it (in the form of congressional appropriations) will be repaid in full within the next 50 years from the income derived from supplying irrigation water and from the sale of power generated in the power plant, a huge structure of steel and concrete, 1,200 feet long, which will stand just below the dam.

Although power development was a secondary consideration in planning this project, it promises to become a very important one in the future because of the effect which cheap power will have upon modernizing community and civic life in the Southwest. The plans for this power plant call for the installation of 15 turbines of 115,000 horse power each and two turbines of 55,000 horse power each with 16 generators of 82,500 kilovolt-amperes capacity each and two generators of 40,000 kilovolt-ampere capacity each. The larger units exceed in size the largest yet manufactured, the 83,000 horse power turbines and 76,500 kilovolt-ampere generators in the world-famous Dnieprostroy plant in Russia. One of these mammoth generators will weigh over 2,000,000 pounds, will measure 40 feet 10 diameter and stand 32 feet high.

This power plant will have a total capacity of 1,835,000 horse power, or four times the amount developed on the American side of Niagara Falls and nearly double the amount developed both at Niagara Falls and Muscle Shoals, even when the latter reaches the peak of its capacity. It will be operated and maintained by the city of Los Angeles and the Southern California Edison company, under the general supervision of a director appointed by the secretary of the interior. The city will generate power for the states of Arizona and Nevada, a large number of southern California municipalities and for the Metropolitan Water district, and the Southern California Edison company will generate power for company purchasers.

An essential part of the project is the construction of the All-American canal, so-called because it is entirely within the United States. It will begin about 15 miles northeast of Yuma, Ariz., where the new Imperial diversion dam will be built, and will connect with the present system of irrigation ditches in the Imperial valley, a distance of about 80 miles. At the same time, a 130-mile extension of this canal will pass east of the Salton sea and carry water to the adjacent Coachella valley.

From the beginning of the All-American canal near Yuma it will pass through a ridge of shifting sand and there the deepest cut will be about 100 feet deep. Huge siphons or culverts will be needed in many instances to carry the canal under numerous washes.

Plans call for ten of these on the main line and 70 on the Coachella branch. Siphons will also be used to carry the water under the Alamo and New rivers. The canal is expected to cost at least $37,000,000 and bids will be asked soon by the bureau. Plans contemplate a maximum canal capacity of 15,000 second-feet.

The Imperial dam, to be of the floating type, will be 1,700 feet long and will raise the river level 22 feet. The canal will provide irrigation water for 850,000 acres in the Imperial valley and an additional 150,000 acres will be brought under cultivation by the Coachella extension.

Some distance up the Colorado river will be located the Parker dam, intended both as a power plant and as a diversion dam. Designs for this hydroelectric plant are rapidly nearing completion. There, 295 miles directly across the state from Los Angeles, will originate the water supply for the Metropolitan Water district.

The Parker reservoir will be located approximately 150 miles downstream from the Hoover dam and is a natural site for a diversion barrier.

The first 113 miles extending west to Shaver's Summit will require heavy expenditure for construction and operation, as the line will make an ascent of 1,500 feet. Power from the Hoover dam will be used to operate pumping lifts.

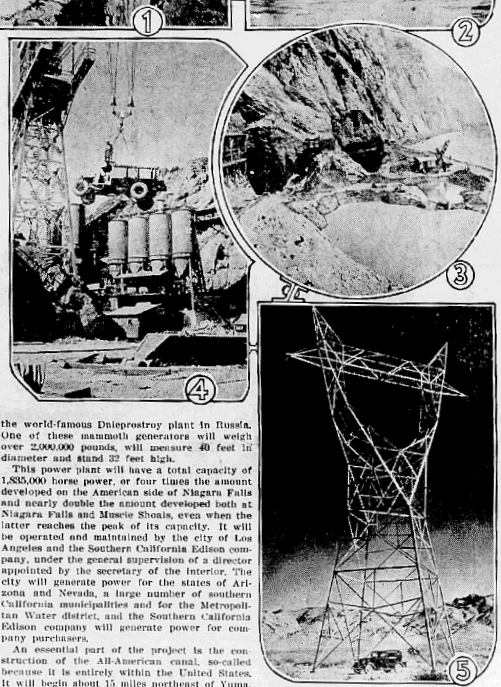

Although the Metropolitan Water district is paying for the construction of the Parker dam by the reclamation bureau, the project will be of immense importance to the Southwest. Ultimately, it is proposed to build a power plant at the dam and then to extend transmission lines on down the river to the Imperial dam, using the power thus delivered to pump water for irrigation purposes in the vast undeveloped area in Arizona. This project will be known as the Gila development.

One unique and interesting phase of the gigantic Hoover dam project was the tremendous job of diverting the flow of the Colorado river before the construction of the dam could be started. To do this it was necessary to drive four tunnels, 50 feet in diameter, through the rock of the canyon walls, two on each side of the river and build a temporary earth and rock fill cofter dam to send 200,000 second-feet of water rushing through the tunnels which have a total length of 15,934 feet or three miles.

After their use for river diversion, these tunnels will be utilized in the project scheme as follows: After being plugged with concrete at locations approximately one-third their length below the inlet ends of the inner tunnels and about midway in the outer tunnels, the two inner tunnels will contain 30-foot steel pipes connecting intake towers in the reservoir with the penstocks to the power plant and the canyon will outlet works and the lower portions of the two outer tunnels will be used for spillway outlets.

And these 30-foot steel pipes bring up again the phrase "world's largest" which must be used so often in connection with the Hoover dam. For they are the largest pipes ever constructed in the history of manufacturing. They are made by an Ohio company and because they are too big to be shipped by railroad from the company's plant in the Buckeye state, it had to build a fabricating plant near the dam. One length of this pipe, 12 feet long and 30 feet in diameter, is made from three steel plates, so heavy that only two plates can be shipped from the steel mill in Ohio to the fabricating plant near the dam on one railroad car. Two such lengths of pipe welded together comprise one erection section weighing 150 tons, which is heavier than many types of railroad locomotives.

And this is typical of the scale upon which everything is being done at the Hoover dam. To tell of any detail of the work there is to deal in superlatives, for it is there that Uncle Sam, the greatest engineer in the world, is working day and night, rushing to completion "the world's greatest engineering project."

1. A recent view of the dam, taken from a point downstream.

2. Showing the site of the dam before construction began. Its height of 600 feet is more than twice the height of any concrete dam now in existence.

3. This picture was taken before tons of water began rushing through these diversion tunnels.

4. This is how they "pick 'em up and lay 'em down" at the dam. A motor truck is lifted like a child's toy by the 150-ton crane, the biggest in the world.

5. The first completed tower for transmission of power from the dam. It is 109 feet high and stands near Kingston camp.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Natural Defenses of the Body

ALTHOUGH man has a wonderful brain, there are a number of things done by the body to protect him that are not directed by man's will.

Something irritates the nose and a sneeze removes it. Something irritates the throat or bronchial tubes and a cough sends it up and out of the body.

Some food or other substance, placed in the mouth, is irritant (acid) or likely to interfere with free movement of the parts and immediately there is a great flow of saliva or the mouth digestive juice. This dilutes the substance so as to be less irritant, or if it disturbs movements it is washed away.

If an offending substance gets down into the stomach, it is usually quickly thrown upward and outward by the walls of the stomach.

Similarly with the eye. Although it is set in a bony socket, and has a quick acting curtain (the eyelid) to shield it from harm, little substances do get into the eye. When this happens the tears flow abundantly to wash the substance out.

However, as Dr. Walter B. Cannon, Harvard, points out, there are other processes going on in the body which, while they do not act as quickly as sneezing, coughing, vomiting, and the flow of tears, are protecting you all the time from various troubles.

Something rough rubs or presses the skin and a callous is formed which serves both as a cushion and as a shield.

If the skin is broken, little blood vessels appear in the clot which fills the gap, and the surrounding skin reaches out and fills the gap, with only a whitish scar remaining.

In a person living at or about sea level the number of red corpuscles is about 5,000,000 to the cubic millimeter, whereas if they go to live in high mountains, 14,000 feet, the number slowly increases to 7,000,000, thus providing more oxygen which is now needed.

If the need continues, the blood forming organs in the marrow of the long bones become more active and the blood is thus enriched until the individual comes down to the lower altitude again.

Then there are the white corpuscles of the blood which attack and kill harmful organisms that enter the body.

The above are just a few of the natural defenses of the body.

Surely we are fearfully and wonderfully made.

Lessening the Distress in Hay Fever

YOU are a hay fever victim.

You have tried the pollen extracts and find yourself one of the number not helped by them.

You have heard about the air chambers or air rooms where victims may spend a number of hours a day free from the irritation of the pollen that is in the air, but there is none of these chambers in your vicinity or you are unable to afford the time and money even if there were.

What can you do to lessen the irritation from hay fever?

There is no question but that some of the preparations sold by your druggist will give you some relief. Most of them contain adrenalin, and some have some pain killing preparations mixed with the adrenalin.

Is there anything else you can do to help carry you through this trying time until the frost brings relief?

Hay fever sufferers have found that if they keep themselves in good condition physically, paying strict attention to their diet and to intestinal movement, they get a great measure of relief from the hay fever symptoms.

Diet is most important. It has been found that an acid diet aggravates the symptoms in a great many cases, so that while acid foods must be eaten they should be eaten in smaller quantities during the hay fever season.

This means that cereals, meat, eggs, fish, coffee and tea must be cut down; butter and sugar kept at their usual amounts; and vegetables, fruits and milk increased.

The bowels must be kept active by the use of fruits and rough or coarse vegetables. In some cases very small doses of epsom salts—a half teaspoonful—every morning has been found helpful.

No one knows the cause of hay fever but it is a very miserable ailment during the weeks it exists, and until a cure is found for each case, following the above suggestions may be of some help.

Four-Point Blankets

The term, four-point, in reference to a blanket, means weight. A point is a Canadian unit of weight slightly more than a pound. A Hudson Bay blanket is a very heavy all-woolen blanket used by trappers and traders—like an army blanket, except that it is even heavier. It may be gray, tan or patterned, but a favorite color is red.

POULTRY

LOW GRADE FEEDS CAUSE FLOCK LOSS

Access to Fertilized Fields Dangerous Practice.

By R. S. Dearstyne, Head of Poultry Department, North Carolina State College.—WNU Service

Most of the dangers of food poisoning of chickens can be attributed to the use of low grade materials in home-mixed feeds or allowing mashes to become damp and decompose.

Feeds mixed from the best materials, particularly ingredients known to be good chicken food, will not poison the birds.

Birds, however, may be poisoned by eating fertilizers or feeds which have come into contact with fertilizers. Hence a warning is issued against permitting chickens access to freshly fertilized fields or to buildings where fertilizer is stored.

Many causes of high mortality are found in chilling, overheating, crowding, poor sanitation, and germ diseases, and not so frequently in poisonous foods as some poultrymen seem to think.

When bothered by a heavy loss of birds, the poultryman should check every possible cause for the high death rate. Then if he cannot determine the cause, he should send several specimens of his flock to the poultry disease laboratory at the state college. With the birds should be a careful description of the trouble and the way he has been managing his flock.

There is little use for a poultryman to send a ready-mixed mash to the state laboratory for testing to see whether it has a detrimental influence on chicks. In the mixture the various elements lose their identity and it would be almost impossible to tell which element, if any, is causing trouble.

The only practical way to test a feed is to give it to chickens for some period of time. This is rather slow, and when done in the laboratory it is also expensive.

Healthy Pullets Will Be Worth Poultryman's Time

A successful poultryman made the following statement: "The success of a poultryman is determined largely by his ability to grow thrifty, healthy, vigorous, and efficient producing pullets."

If pullets are not thrifty and healthy, says a correspondent in the Wisconsin Agriculturist, the percentage of mortality is going to be high.

Every time a hen dies in a poultry flock she raises the cost of producing a dozen eggs. In some cases the cost per dozen has been as high as 4 to 7 cents from mortality in laying flocks. This cost can now be reduced by producing thrifty, healthy pullets with greater vigor and greater vitality. Clean ground seems to be a very important factor in producing pullets.

If pullets can be grown upon good blue grass sod they will be growing under what seems to be the most desirable conditions.

This is particularly an opportune time for the farmer and poultryman to give thought to a definite plan of range rotation for the growing of his pullets.

Chickens Need Water

Plenty of clean, fresh water should be available for chickens at all times. Chickens don't swim but they do get thirsty as well as hungry, and a chicken is always hungry, no matter how much it is fed. For a flock of 75 to 100 hens there should be a 10 or 12 quart pail or trough. For larger flocks larger containers are necessary. Even baby chicks need water. They should be provided with a place to get a drink without the danger of falling in and drowning.

POULTRY NOTES

Provide one nest for each six hens in the flock.

There are five standard varieties of domesticated turkeys.

• • •

Avoid strong odors, such as from onions, kerosene, disinfectants, etc., in the egg cooling room.

• • •

A novice in poultry raising with limited quarters for his birds often tries to keep too many breeds.

• • •

The old idea that it is best to allow turkey hens to "steal their nests" has passed into the discard.

• • •

The greater part of the cost of keeping a hen goes on day by day throughout the year, whether she is laying well or poorly or not at all.

• • •

The large combs characteristic of fowls of the Mediterranean class are believed to have been developed by the Romans as a result of a fad for eating cock's combs.

Pure Natural Mineral Water May Help

MILLIONS FIND IT VERY BENEFICIAL

For over 2,000 years the great mineral waters of the World, given to us by Mother Nature, have proven themselves very beneficial in the treatment of "rheumatic" aches and pains, arthritis, sluggishness, certain stomach disorders and other chronic ailments.

It has been estimated that America alone have spent $100,000,000 a year in going to the mineral wells and health resorts of Europe. Over $1,000,000 of these foreign mineral waters are imported annually into this country to help suffering humanity.

But it isn't necessary to go to Europe to find fine natural mineral water. We have many marvelous mineral waters in our own country—many excellent health resorts to which you can go for the mineral water treatment for "rheumatic" aches and pains.

Most surprising of all, however, is the fact that today you can make a fine mineral water in your own home at a tremendous saving in expense. For Crazy Water Crystals bring you, in crystal form, healthful minerals taken from one of the world's fine mineral waters. Just the natural minerals. Nothing is added.

All you do is add Crazy Water Crystals to your drinking water, and you have a great mineral water that has helped millions to better health and greater happiness.

A standard size box of Crazy Water Crystals costs only $1.50 and is sufficient for several weeks thorough treatment for rheumatic pains. Crazy Water Co., Mineral Wells, Texas.

RAILROADS PAY TAXES TO STATE IN FULL

Coast Line Delivers Check Today For $96,873 To Comptroller

Tallahassee, June 21.—(FNS)—Completing payment of state taxes in full, the Atlantic Coast Line's check for $96,873.00 was received by Comptroller J. M. Lee today. The Seaboard paid sometime ago.

Meanwhile, the two railroads "taking up the bat" for taxpayers in general are refusing to pay various county tax levies which they claim were made to "carry" the tax-dodger and have withheld more than a quarter million dollars according to reports made to the state comptroller by the county tax collectors and figures cited in the injunction suit filed against the comptroller recently.

The railroads hope to secure court decisions which will require county commissioners to anticipate a full 95 percent of tax collections and thus reduce taxes for those who pay from 10 to 40 percent in the various counties.

The Seaboard paid, last fall, all taxes but $110,000 which it claimed were levies to pay for the tax dodger and tax collection authorities are helpless because that road is in receivership, which prevents the comptroller from ordering sheriffs to seize property for delinquencies.

Then late in May the Atlantic Coast Line, against which the present comptroller while attorney for Highlands county levied in 1930, filed an injunction suit alleging "the defendant (Lee) has announced his intention of issuing warrants . . . commanding sheriffs to collect by levy and sale" and brought the issue before the courts again.

State taxes are not being contested by any of the railroads but officials agree that if the present suits of the roads are upheld by the courts it will reduce county and district taxes next year by hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Sanitarium, Sanatorium

A sanitarium is distinguished from a sanatorium by the fact that it is an establishment where the treatment of its patients is wholly or almost wholly prophylactic; whereas a sanatorium is one which is favorable to preserving the health of its patients.

FRANK HUGHES TELLS OF FLORIDA EXHIBIT

Representative of Scenic Highlanders Writes His Impressions of Florida Exhibit

"The Florida exhibit here at the world's fair in Chicago is simply marvelous. I saw it last year and thought it great but this year it is bigger and better in every way and I can't find words in my limited vocabulary to describe it as it should be described. I'll leave that for George Clements and even he will be at a loss for the right words," Frank Hughes, representative of Scenic Highlands at the World's Fair stated in a communication to The News, this week.

"The attendance has been enormous since I have been here. No matter how large or how small the attendance at the exposition may be, Florida Hall and the Florida Garden always seem to be crowded with men and women who are intensely interested and who ask questions about the various exhibits which are new or strange to them. That makes it easy for me and for the representatives of other chambers of commerce or communities to make valuable personal contacts, though from the very nature of things, we can meet and talk with but a very small percentage of all who visit the exhibit," Mr. Hughes writes.

Regarding following up inquiries Mr. Hughes says, "I want to suggest to the secretaries of those chambers of commerce throughout the Scenic Highlands that they watch the lists of prospects who sign cards at the registration desk asking for literature regarding Florida and do the best they can to send booklets to those who want to know about our section of the state. The lists will be much larger than any which possibly can be compiled by any single chamber of commerce representative."

The writer closed his communication by stating: "But to get back to the Florida exhibit: I do wish every man, woman and child in Florida could see this beautiful picture. It would make them proud of the state they call home. It must be seen to be appreciated as it should be. It is the best advertisement of the state and its resources and attractions that could be thought of and it should be liberally supported by every well wisher of Florida."

Turner Is For Wells and Sims

To My Friends in Avon Park:

In the recent primaries, I advocated and voted for Mr. Harper for county commissioner, for the reason that, among other qaulifications, he had the educational training and construction experience not generally found available for this office. Mr. Harper was eliminated from the necessary run-off.

In these trying days of meager county funds, it becomes particularly necessary to make the best use of what we have and what we can get. During the past few years, when all the business men of the locality have seemed hardpressed to even keep going, Mr. Wells has built up the most noticeably successful business in sight, and has expressed not only a willingness, but a desire that his growing business share his abilities with the general community. I think we should accept the offer.

One other outstanding county problem is our representative at Tallahassee, where again funds are scarce. It becomes necessary that we get our share, allotted to the best advantage. In such a body a new man is most certainly handicapped by lack of prestige, and until the time comes when such an official shows lack of ability to grow, and perhaps begins to consider his office as a divine right, I think we should not make a change. In other words, why this continued endeavor to throw a man out as soon as we get him in?

My acquaintance with Mr. Wells and Mr. Sims convinces me that both have the ability and honesty of purpose to give us what we want in their respective offices.

Neither of the candidates knows anything about the issuing of this statement.

Avon Park, Fla., June 21, 1934.

Bailey Approves Sholtz Program

In a conversation this week, County Superintendent F. N. Bailey said he is very well pleased with Gov. Dave Sholtz' plan for transferring the one cent gas tax from the general fund of the state to the school fund next year. If this is carried out Col. Bailey believes it will provide ample money for the schools. Col. Bailey also expressed the appreciation of the school officials and the teachers for the good work done by the Governor and C. B. Treadway in obtaining Federal aid for the schools.

Years ago one of the shrewdest merchants the state ever had said that any community in Florida enjoying a heavy cash crop production could recover from a financial depression within a six months period, if yields and prices were satisfactory. Returns from winter and spring vegetables during the current season have made several shipping areas examples of the truth expressed in the remark.

There is a vast literature on color and coloration in the animal kingdom.

Keep Matthews There

Eugent Matthews, the most experienced and efficient member of the State Railroad Commission, is running for renomination in the second primary. His opponent is Lester Wells, of Tallahassee.

For the other membership of the Commission, Jerry W. Carter and Herbert P. Caro are candidates. Neither has had previous service on the Commission. If Matthews is defeated, the Commission will have two inexperienced men.

Eugene Matthews has given the state excellent service on the Commission. He has been particularly alert to the transportation interests of South Florida.

We have nothing to say against Mr. Wells; but, since either Mr. Carter or Mr. Caro will be a member of the Commission, we think the state would be wise to keep Mr. Matthews there, for the benefit of his experience and ability if nothing more.—Tampa Tribune, June 15th.

In addition to what the Tribune has said of Mr. Matthews it may be mentioned that he is the only candidate for Railroad Commissioner who lives in Peninsular Florida. If the people of the great producing and shipping section of the state think it is important to retain their representation on the Commission they should vote for him.—Paid political adv.

Gray Squirrel's Habits

The gray squirrel is the only animal which migrates in just the way he does. Others come and go with the seasons, but Mr. Squirrel stays and stays in one place, sometimes for years, until he sees a hard winter ahead. Then, off he goes.

Wonderful RELIEF

Here's good news for you people whose nerves are so jangled, you can't eat, sleep, or rest; who worry over trifles, start at sudden noises, have Nervous Indigestion, Nervous Headache.

DR. MILES NERVINE WILL RELIEVE YOU QUICKLY. It was originated by a Nerve Specialist especially for people in your condition. It has been making good for more than fifty years.

SAFEST TIRE FIRESTONE EVER BUILT

THE New Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 was built to give you the same dependable service it provided for the 33 drivers who started in the torturous 500-mile grind at Indianapolis May 30.

This new tire has a wider tread of flatter contour, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

Besides being Safety Protected on the outside it is Safety Protected on the inside. Eight additional pounds of pure rubber are absorbed by every one hundred pounds of cords.

This additional rubber is so placed that it surrounds every cotton fiber inside every cord in every ply. This is accomplished by soaking the cords in liquid rubber by a Firestone patented process. This patented process, Gum-Dipping, is not used in any other tire built.

Heat caused by internal friction of cotton fibers destroys tires—causes separation and blowouts.

Gum-Dipping counteracts friction and heat—provides greater adhesion and binds the cotton and rubber together into one cohesive unit of greater strength, assuring car owners of the greatest Safety, Protection and Economy that it is possible for human ingenuity to build into a tire.

The most amazing proof of this extra strength, safety and dependability is the fact that everyone of the 33 drivers at Indianapolis chose and bought Firestone High Speed Tires. Race drivers KNOW tire construction—they will not risk their lives or chance of victory on any other than Firestone.

At terrific speeds the cars plunge into the treacherous turns—tires are braced against the scorching brick track—so hot the tires fairly smoke at times—they give—yield and stretch—every conceivable force works to tear the tire to pieces, yet Firestone High Speed Tires "come back" on the straightaways. Not once during the entire race did a tire fail.

Surely this is the most amazing proof ever known of Extra Strength, SAFETY and dependability. Call on the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store nearest you TODAY. Equip your car with New Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934.

Broadening One's Vision

We believe, like many others, that there has been too much mysticism connected with banking.

We are fully convinced that the banking public, for the most part, are fairminded and if they can understand more fully the details and many complicated angles of the banking business, they will cooperate with their community bank.

Your bank, like other privately owned corporations, faces certain expenses that are absolutely necessary if the bank is to function properly. We have explained from time to time why certain service charges are necessary.

Now that the Depositor understands, he has shown greater inclination to cooperate and the result has been beneficial to the entire community.

CODE PRINTING PRICES

Are Now in Effect

Minimum prices for printing as set by the Graphic Arts Code Authority and approved by President Franklin D. Roosevelt are now being used by the printing trade.

The prices are fair to the printer and to the buyer of printing. They are in line with prices charged by us in the past for Quality Printing.

Code Prices and high grade work will prevail at all times at our plant.

ESCROW SYSTEM FOR FERA CLIENTS IS EXPLAINED

Would Insure All Work at One Time With Wages Spread Over a Month

SARASOTA, June 28 (Special) —Believing that a thorough understanding of the escrow system being inaugurated by the FERA all over the state of Florida, would eliminate whatever objection there might be voiced to the plan, C. K. Dodd, regional administrator, with headquarters here, today issued a statement explaining the system, and a request that FERA clients and others interested study the situation thoroughly.

In the first place the inauguration of the escrow system is considered of benefit to the client because it allows him to complete his prescribed employment in any one month in an uninterrupted span, allowing him to seek other employment during the time he is not working on an FERA assignment, Mr. Dodd said.

"The client merely signs a blank authorizing us to hold the amount of money he has earned in his monthly work period and to pay it to him in four equal installments over the month, giving him a steady income," he explained.

"For example, if a man is entitled to 48 hours of work in one month to complete his budgetary requirements, he works this 48 hours in one six-day week, eight hours a day. He has earned, for example $14.40. Then we pay him this $14.40 at the rate of $3.60 per week. He has lost nothing—in fact, he has gained, because he is allowed and we urge him to seek other work which will give him more money.

"In this escrow system no man signs away any of his rights. He merely places his monthly income in trust with our disbursing officer and is paid weekly. He then can count on having so much money each week.

"It is merely a device allowing uninterrupted work for the client, allowing us to better plan our work and eliminate the necessity of changing crews in the middle of the week. There is no change in the method of allowing work to relief clients. This will be handled in the same approved manner.

"When the client's credit under the escrow agreement is exhausted—when he has drawn out all his money—he then is eligible for work again.

"When it is determined by investigation that a client needs more in any one week than he has signed up to withdraw, the addition will be paid as an advance on future wages.

"We presume that every man and woman receiving FERA relief is entitled to it, and we want to do everything that we can to spread our available funds over the eight counties in this region. To do this we must have the cooperation of clients to the extent that they will allow us to put into effect this escrow system.

"No man or woman is compelled to go under the escrow system. It is to be voluntary on the part of the worker and the plan was designed for his especial benefit. It is therefore hoped that all workers will cooperate to the extent of signing the escrow agreement.

Mr. Dodd also expressed the desire that every community in region eight would lend all possible cooperation towards providing extra work for relief clients. "Since the relief administration has not had sufficient funds to meet budgets, any extra work is to be sought and accepted by clients. Chambers of commerce and other organizations should make surveys to determine what work can be provided" he concluded.

Clients and others interested were urged by Mr. Dodd to consult FERA officials in the various counties for a personal explanation of the program.

O. B. Trail Meeting In Orlando Monday

Everybody interested is invited to attend a meeting to promote the Orange Blossom Trail movement which will be held at Orlando next Monday at 1:30 p. m., at the chamber of commerce building. Cooperation between all towns on the proposed route is being sought. It is proposed to have Avon Park about 11 a. m., and those planning to attend are asked to contact E. G. Todd.

Summer Schedule Church of Redeemer

At a vestry meeting held at the rectory on Monday night it was decided to change the schedule of services at the Church of the Redeemer during the summer months. There will be only one Sunday service and the hour is changed to 9:30 a. m., instead of 11 a. m. This service will also provide the worship period for the church school and the children will receive their regular instruction in the Parish house while the sermon is being preached in the church.

Week day services will be held at 7 a. m., on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, and on All Saints days.

Holiday Fun At Daytona

Fine Program for Independence Day Arranged at Coast Resort

(Special) The well balanced program for The Frolics is expected to result in Daytona Beach being the Mecca of many thousands of visitors from all parts of Florida and many sections of Georgia and Alabama, Director Ray Clancey announced today upon his return from Atlanta. The program will range from artistic musicales for those who favor this class of program to the death-defying stunts of the Hell - Divers for those who like their thrills over the holidays.

The program for this year's fun spectacle will get underway officially at 7:30 p. m., July 3rd with the staging of a series of amateur boxing bouts. A number of dances with outstanding orchestras furnishing music will make up the remainder of the night's program.

July 4th will be one continuous round of varied activities. The patriotic celebration honoring newly franchised citizens will usher in the Independence day program. The morning's calendar of events will include a concert on the broadwalk and delayed parachute jump into the Atlantic ocean.

The most sensational exhibition of the day will take place at 2 p. m., when the Hell Divers will stage their hazardous stunts which include the wrecking of cars with drivers strapped to the seats, and while traveling at over a mile a minute. This will be followed by the Pageant of Pulchritude in which beauties from all over Florida will be seeking the coveted title of "Miss Frolics of 1934" and the valuable prizes. The Coronational Ball, brilliant fireworks display and the usual nightly dances will follow.

On July 5th there will be a concert, bridge and tea program for visiting adies at the Peninsula Club, musical hour observance and a number of dances. A water carnival, baby parade, concert, and Lions Minstrel will be among the features for July 6th. The Shrine Day program for July 7th will include the appearance of representatives of the Mahi Temple of Miami and the Morocco Temple of Jacksonville in a parade and ceremonial. The Shriners will also sponsor a beauty revue and dance.

Following the staging of a union interdenominational church service at 7:30 p. m., on Sunday, July 8th there will be a concert on the Broadwalk to write finis upon this year's colorful presentations.

Fish Hatchery At Welaka Approved

Palatka, June 27.—(FNS)—When Charles E. Jackson, a deputy commissioner of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, inspected the fish hatchery at Welaka recently accompanied by George W. Davis, State commissioner of conservation, the federal officer was so well pleased with the project that he requested pictures of the hatchery to take back to Washington as models for use at the Bureau of Fisheries. Jackson stated that in all his travels in the country no finer or more ambitious program had come to his attention.

The Federal Department of Fisheries now has 89 hatcheries operating in 39 states in a program of conservation that is hoped will increase the propagation of various kinds of game fish by 35 percent.

Fr. Johnson Spoke Sunday

High School Graduates Hear Commencement Address Sunday Evening

The high school auditorium was filled Sunday night to hear Fr. Harcourt Johnson of the Episcopal church deliver the commencement sermon to the graduating class. A very excellent program had been arranged which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. There were hymns by members of the Junior Glee Club and the congregation. Rev. W. K. McClure of the Baptist church offered the prayer and Dr. A. P. Vaughn of the Congregational church pronounced the benediction.

Fr. Johnson took as his text the words from St. Paul's Epistle to Timothy "Endure Hardness." He pointed out that we were all inclined to pamper ourselves and that one of the foundations of the truly Christian character was the ability and willingness to endure hardness in order to achieve life's ambitions.

Developing this theme, Fr. Johnson went on to say that the beginning of a real education is "self-knowledge." He told the graduating class that the world is badly in need of a new vigor, a renewed ideal, and the uplift which youth could bring in the rehabilitation of our country. These, he said could only be accomplished through true knowledge of self and the endurance of the hard things of life in the spirit and character of Jesus Christ.

Former Residents Here Buy Property At Daytona Beach

Of interest to the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Meadows, former residents of Avon Park, will be the news item from a recent issue of a Daytona Beach paper. The article follows:

Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Meadows and Mrs. Meadows' sister, Mrs. Lessie Byrd, owners of Patsy Ann grill 819 Main street, today announced the purchase of the building occupied by that eating place. The property, a brick structure, faces 20 feet on Main street and occupies a lot 160 feet in depth.

The building was formerly owned by Orange City Mineral Springs company, 706 Main street. The deal was handled through H. D. Shaw. The new owners plan to make several improvements later on, including redecorating the interior and possibly adding a second apartment for their own use.

Mr. and Mrs. Meadows and Mrs. Byrd came here a year ago from Avon Park. They originally are from Opp, Alabama. Although they operate only a popular price establishment, a net profit since January 1 of $1,000 has made it possible for them to purchase the property, Mrs. Meadows said. At present Mrs. Byrd is on a visit to relatives in Alabama but will return here soon to resume her work at the grill.

Coates Installed Rotary President

W. T. Coates was inducted as the new president of the Avon Park Rotary club at the luncheon at the Jacaranda hotel Wednesday noon. Mr. Coates succeeds Dr. D. G. Perry who has successfully piloted the club for the past term. In turning over the gavel Dr. Perry mentioned the highlights of his term of office. They included an increase of membership, a better bank balance, twenty-six 100 per cent meetings and a revival of the Boy Scout movement.

The only visitor for the occasion was Prof. P. J. Gustat of Sebring.

Mrs. Smith Died Friday

Pioneer Resident Buried In Bougainvillea With O. E. S. Rites

Mrs. Othelia Emma Smith, one of Avon Park's pioneer citizens and widow of the late George F. Smith, was laid at rest Sunday afternoon in Bougainvillea cemetery beside her husband. Mrs. Smith had been in failing health for some time but her death came suddenly Friday night. Services were held at the funeral parlors of Stephenson and Blythe with Elder J. B. Lochen of the Lakeland Seventh Day Adventist Church preaching the sermon.

Services at the grave were in charge of Leigh Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, assisted by Rev. Harcourt Johnson of the Episcopal Church. Members of the order officiating at the cemetery were Mrs. Lucille Daly, worthy matron, Grover Daly, worthy patron, Mrs. Charlotte Leigh, Mrs. Cora Canfield, Mrs. Florence Elwell, Mrs. Erma Shepherd and Mrs. Furlow Anderson, star points, Mrs. Ola Head, chaplain, Mrs. Docs Stuckey, marshall, Mrs. Margaret Mandis, assistant matron, Mrs. R. M. McCabe, warder, Mrs. Jennie Gribble, sentinel, Mrs. M. K. Radcliffe, conductress and Mrs. Anna Johnston, assistant conductress.

Pallbearers were Mayor M. E. Covington, Col. Charles R. Head, C. W. Pabor, Henry Myers, D. F. Canfield, W. Hauptmann and L. M. Marsh.

Mrs. Smith was born in Watertown, Wisc., on October 29, 1862 and came to Avon Park with her family on September 8, 1898. There survive two sons, Fred and Victor, both residents of Avon Park, a brother, O. F. Wernicke of Brooksville and two sisters, Mrs. Fred Martin of West Bend, Wisc., and Mrs. W. F. Livingston of Milwaukee, Wisc., and several nephews and nieces including Mr. and Mrs. Richard Singer and Mrs. Raymond Wernicke of Brooksville.

Card of Thanks

We wish to sincerely thank our many friends for the many kindnesses and expressions of sympathy shown during the illness and death of our mother, Mrs. Othelia Emma Smith. We also appreciate the members of the Eastern Star conducting the services at the grave.

Class of 1934 Graduates

Members of Class to Receive Diplomas Tonight at High School

Twenty-one young men and women will graduate from the Avon Park high school tonight. They will be leaving the halls of learning they have attended for some years, some to make their way in life and some to enter college. The commencement exercises will be brief and there will be no long speeches. The diplomas will be presented by County Superintendent F. N. K. Bailey, and the presentation of the Bailey, American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary medals will also be made. The program is scheduled to start at eight o'clock.

The graduates are Helen Virginia Baldwin, Virginia Evelyn Clements, Martha Thomas Flowers, Josephine Folsom, Zula Maude Ford, Jane Marguerite Huebner, Lou Cille Langford, Marie Lucile McFarland, Letta Olga Reck, Sara Lucille Saggus, Dorothy Louise Schwelgart, Marcia Jane Weisheyer, Mildred Elouise Wray and Elmer Clyde Clark, Edward Egbert Flowers, George Dzialynski Godwin, Jr., John Arthur Johnston, Emmanuel Wesley Mercer, Horace Lamar Stewart, Augustus B. Wells and Charles Kempton.

The class colors are red, white and blue; the class flower, red and white roses and the class motto, "We do our part."

Mrs. Anna Miller Dies As Result of Smelling a Flower

Death came to Mrs. Anna Miller, wife of Harry R. P. Miller of Eustis, on Thursday of last week as a result of smelling a rose. Fungi from the flower lodged in her lungs, grew in spite of all medical attention and finally resulted in her death.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller are noted throughout the state for their magnanimous gift of the Harry Ann Memorial Home for Crippled Children to the Elks of Florida. This beautiful home, located at Umatilla, was originally designed for a tourist hotel but when the boom was over it was turned to the more humaritarian purpose. It also lodges the Lake county hospital.—Leesburg Commercial.

Opens Real Estate Office

A new real estate and insurance office is being opened next week by G. A. Harper in the Jacaranda Arcade. Besides the regular real estate and insurance business Mr. Harper says he will install an exchange for rents, sales and property maintenance to serve all property owners.

Tree planting in the national forests were nearly trebled last year, the United States Forest Service reports. The regular forces planted 13,236 acres, Civilian Conservation Corps plantings amounted to 45,843 acres, and N.I.R.A. plantings crews accounted for 10,136 acres.

Have you joined the Chamber of Commerce?

Name More Teachers to Avon Park Schools

Further appointments of teachers to the Avon Park schools have been made by the county board of public instruction on recommendation of the Avon Park trustees. Guy Smith, Joe Bass and Miss Elizabeth Atchley have been named on the high school faculty, the latter two dividing their time with the Sebring school.

On the grammar school staff Miss Dorothy Hodil and Miss Mary Lou Adams have been named. They are both graduates of the Sebring high school and have just completed college courses with honors.

Miss Genevieve McClelland was appointed teacher for the crate mill school.

Fruit Man is Electrocuted

Wilbur Woodham Comes In Contact With Hot Wire Near Lakemont

Wilbur Woodham, picking crew foreman, was electrocuted and burned near Lakemont at about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. He was alone at the time and apparently came in contact with a short circuited ground wire on one of the high line poles of the Florida Public Service Company. The cause of the short circuiting has not been ascertained nor the reason for Woodham coming in contact with the wire.

Members of the picking crew of which Woodham was foreman heard the noise made when he came in contact with the wire and investigated and found his body. G. F. Shuman, a member of the crew ran to the nearest telephone, two miles away, and phoned the power plant here to cut off the current between here and Lake Placid. This was done immediately. As the line carries 33,000 volts, the deceased must have died immediately he touched the wire.

Sheriff Doyle Schumacher, Justice of the Peace A. I. Young and Dr. H. V. Weems of Sebring investigated and Justice Young pronounced it a case of accidental death. The body remained where found until the arrival of a brother, George Woodham of Bowling Green, who is a foreman in the employ of the Florida Public Service Co. The remains were then removed to the undertaking parlors of Stephenson and Blythe.

Mr. Woodham lived in Frostproof and is survived by his widow and two children who were visiting in Georgia at the time, his mother and several brothers and sisters. He was 27 years old when killed. Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at Frostproof with interment at Silver Lake cemetery at that place.

Two Guilty Pleas In Police Court Monday Morning

Two dusky sons of the south side appeared in police court Monday morning, both having been arrested the previous day by Police Officer James Cravey. John Bell was charged with keeping a gambling house. He denied the charge but said the boys were just playing a little skin there. His honor, the mayor, replied with $25 or 25 days. And that was that.

The next case involved the mayor's cook, Ida Myers, and the mayor disqualified himself as he feared he might be prejudiced and so S. J. Pendleton, president of the council, heard the charges. Mack Freeman was charged with assault and battery on Ida. He did not argue or quibble but promptly plead guilty to the deed and he got the same sentence, $25 or 25 days.

By the number of spectators present some interesting evidence was expected but none materialized and the session was very tame.

Beer Consumption Increases In State

Tallahassee, June 28.—(FNS)—The report of the State Beverage Department for the period from May 15 to June 1, reveals that beer consumption in the state has increased with the advent of real summer weather.

Florida counties sold 2,053,185 bottles of beer and 95,418 gallons of draught beer during the two-week period.

WELLS HIGH FOR COMMISSIONER IN DISTRICT ONE

Led by 85 Votes; Sims Defeats Eide and Trammell Beats Pepper

After a strenuous campaign J. L. Wells received the Democratic nomination for county commissioner from this district at the second primary held Tuesday. He received a majority of 85 votes in both precincts over his opponent, Frank (Hot Shot) Armistead. In precinct one, Wells received 177 votes and Armistead 149 and in precinct 1-A Wells got 230 votes and Armistead 173.

In the race for representative, J. E. Sims polled 392 votes in Avon Park and Dr. A. T. Eide 320 votes. Sims carried the county by 295, polling a total of 1147 votes to 852 for his opponent.

The senatorial race developed into a spirited contest with Claude Pepper carrying the county against Park Trammell but losing the state as a whole. Pepper polled 382 votes in Avon Park and Trammell 336. In the county Pepper totalled 1101 to 884 for Trammell. The final returns from the state gave Pepper 96,446 votes and Trammell 100,806.

In DeSoto City, district three, a sharp tussle developed in the county commissioner's race and L. C. Pearce won over J. H. Twitty by 41 votes. Pearce rolled up 153 votes in the three precincts of the district and Twitty garnered 11...

In precinct three O. S. Bowles won over E. J. Etheredge for the office of precinct committeeman. The former gathered 83 votes and the latter only 63. In precinct six, the name of Broward Coker was written in for the same office, and nine tallies were recorded.

In the railroad commissioners' contest Eugene Matthews led in group one in both county and state. In this county he totalled 1229 votes to 616 for Lester Wells. In group two Jerry Carter won hands down in both county and state. In Highlands he had 1012 votes to Senator Caro's 655.

L. C. Pearce is well versed in county affairs, having held the office of county commissioner for several terms previously, serving generally as chairman of the board.

Secretary Roper of Roosevelt's Cabinet Lauds Florida Show

"A most interesting and instructive exhibit," was the verdict of Daniel C. Roper, secretary of commerce in President Roosevelt's cabinet, after he and his party had concluded a very complete tour of investigation through Florida Hall and Florida Garden, to which Mrs. Roper added, "It is very beautiful as well as interesting and instructive."

Secretary and Mrs. Roper accompanied by his assistant secretary Chester H. McCall and Mrs. McCall, under the guidance of U. S. Commissioner Edward G. Dunne, following the military reception in the Court of Honor, came to Florida Hall in the Court of States and made a very close study of the dioramas and other exhibits before passing into the exotic garden. While inspecting the latter Morley Martin of the botanical staff, presented the members of the party with gardenias and permitted them to enjoy the fragrance of orange blossoms. He even offered to clip bouquets of those from the blooming trees in the garden but the ladies protested that they should be left for others to enjoy.

Secretary Roper took occasion to compliment General Manager Brown and the state of Florida on the splendid exhibit, so artistically displayed."

Cars for the party, escorted by a troop, of the Black Horse cavalry, waited at the gates of the garden. Following the inspection of the Florida exhibit, Secretary Roper and party were driven to the mainland for a general view of the exposition.

NOTICE

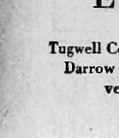

All relief clients in Highlands County who have not already signed Escrow Agreements are requested by the FERA officials to come to the office in the Court House, third floor, Sebring, or to the FERA office on the second floor of the Brickell building, Avon Park, to have this system explained to them.

Tugwell Confirmed by Senate Despite Bitter Attacks—Darrow Board Assails Johnson—President Roosevelt's Plans for Social Regeneration.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

REXFORD GUY TUGWELL'S appearance before the senate agriculture committee to be quizzed as to his fitness for the position of undersecretary of agriculture was rather farcical, even though it brought on some heated encounters among the members of the committee. The senators aired their own views freely, but learned almost nothing concerning those of Mr. Tugwell. He did tell them he believed the Constitution was flexible enough to take care of any necessary economic changes; that he was opposed to the adoption of Soviet planning by America, and that he thought his experience on his father's farm and his research qualified him for the position to which the President had appointed him. Finally the committee reported the nomination favorably, the only two votes against being those of "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina and Henry D. Hatfield of West Virginia.

R. G. Tugwell

The action of the committee assured Tugwell's confirmation by the senate, but the debate on the floor was unexpectedly long and the attacks on Tugwell were outspoken. Senator Schall of Minnesota, for instance, said:

"Agriculture demands and already has experiment stations dealing in actual crops, live stock, and markets. It wants no 'bold experiments in collectivism' by a self-styled philosopher who functions like a three-card monte sharp who jumps upon a box with three shells and a pea and who entertains the public with his cry, 'Now you see it and now you don't.' Who is the next goat?"

"Tugwell's general denial, and his specific denials, in the light of his associates in the field of political writing, are absolutely worthless. They are an insult to an intelligent jury. He insults the United States senate in order to gain a high office from which he can preach 'collectivism' as a substitute for American institutions and the Constitution."

WHILE the delegates of the steel workers' union were gathering in Pittsburgh to vote on the threatened strike, President Roosevelt and his advisers brought forward a plan for an emergency law designed to avert the walkout. It was admittedly a temporary expedient to give the President an effective agency for the consideration of industrial disputes arising during the life of the NRA.

Under the new bill's terms, boards selected by the President would be empowered to order and conduct an election, by a secret ballot, to determine "by what person or persons or organizations" employees may desire to be represented in negotiations under the collective bargaining features of the national recovery act.

The proposed board also would have the authority to order production of pertinent documents and witnesses to give testimony under oath, and their orders would be enforceable by any United States court of competent jurisdiction, similar to like privileges enjoyed by the federal trade commission. Vested with authority to prescribe their own rules and regulations, the boards would be armed with a penalty clause in the new law, setting $1,000 fine or a year imprisonment, or both, for violation of their decrees.

IN ITS second report to the President the national recovery review board, headed by Clarence Darrow, loosed another blast at Administrator Johnson and in effect recommended his removal as head of the NRA. The board said Johnson had given the recovery program an un-American and aristocratic tinge that handicapped it in the war on depression; that he has arbitrarily decreed life and death for industries, and that by arbitrary modifications of code he has helped big business concerns to oppress their smaller competitors.

"The rule of the military commander is totally unsuited to the genius, habits, traditions, or psychology of the American people, and wholly ineffectual in meeting the present national crisis," the board concluded.

The second Darrow report covered the retail dry goods, warehousing, lumber, cement, retail food, boot and shoe, electrical manufacturing, bedding, petroleum, coffee, plumbing fixtures, embroidery, and lead pencil codes. Complaints against the warehousing, electrical manufacturing, and embroidery codes were dismissed as without foundation. But in the other codes the board claimed to find oppression of small businesses or consumers.

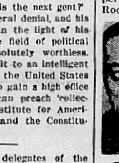

Besides suggesting the removal of Johnson, the board demanded outright that two other officials of the NRA be fired for misconduct. One is an assistant deputy administrator and the other is an employee of the lumber code authority, but the report suppressed both their names.

SENATOR ARTHUR ROBINSON of Indiana, who was renominated by the Republicans, will be opposed at the polls next fall by Sherman Minton, the selection of the Democratic state convention. Mr. Minton, a World war veteran, is now public counselor for the public service commission of the state. His nomination was a victory for Governor McNutt over the faction led by R. Earl Peters, former state chairman, who sought the nomination for himself.

IN THE Democratic run-off primary in Alabama former Gov. Bibb Graves won the nomination for governor and goes back to the executive office which he held from January, 1927, to January, 1928.

Judge James E. Horton, who presided in the second trial of Heywood Patterson, one of the nine negro defendants in the "Scottsboro case," and then set aside a jury verdict of death, ran more than 2,500 behind A. A. Griffith of Cullman. George Huddleston of Birmingham retained his seat as congressman from the Ninth district, but Congressman Miles C. Allgood of the Fifth district was beaten by Maj. Joe Starnes.

IMMEDIATE relief from distress and recovery of business prosperity fall far short of President Roosevelt's plan for regeneration of the nation. This was revealed in his special message to congress which told of the plans and recommendation in a he would submit to the next congress. He asked for no present legislation, but gave notice of the social experiments he proposes to begin next winter.

President Roosevelt

The message discussed the three factors of housing, land and resources planning and old age and unemployment insurance.

Expressing satisfaction over progress in relieving industry, agriculture, and unemployment, the President, asserting his right to chart social reforms, declared, "It is childish to speak of recovery first and reconstruction afterward."

Taking up the housing problem, he said millions of dollars had already been provided to improve living conditions, and voiced the hope that with passage of his housing program private capital would be stimulated to widen the scope of home building.

Discussing planned control of the land, he declared that hundreds of thousands of families now live "where there is no reasonable prospect of a living in the years to come."

Sounding the failure of the government thus far to create a "national policy" for the development of land and water resources, Mr. Roosevelt indicated his intention of providing such a policy, and for the transferring to new lands of "those people who cannot make a living in their present positions."

Outlining his view on providing security against unemployment and old age, Mr. Roosevelt said he was seeking a "sound means" which he could recommend to provide an immediate safeguard against these "hazards and vicissitudes of life."

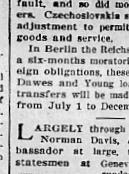

MAX BAER of California brought the world's heavyweight title back to America by soundly whipping Primo Carnera, the huge Italian, in New York. The fight was the most exciting one seen in this country for a long time. Scheduled for fifteen rounds, it ended in the eleventh when the referee declared a technical knockout and awarded the victory to Baer. Carnera was game to the end. Thirteen times he went to the canvas, yet he was advancing against the retreating Baer during the greater part of the contest.

SEVEN persons met a tragic death when an American Air Lines plane, flying from Newark to Buffalo, crashed in the Catskills, 12 miles north of Livingston Manor and was burned. The victims were H. H. Pinsley of New York, W. A. Bader, W. A. Cass and H. G. Coppins, all of Buffalo, passengers; Clyde Holbrook and John Barron, Jr., pilots, and Miss Margaret Huckeby, stewardess, all of Chicago.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL sent to Great Britain another note concerning the war debt, bluntly refuting the arguments of the British government, saying it was up to the debtor to offer propositions in such cases, and intimating that an arrangement for part payment in goods might be possible. However, when June 15, the day for installments, came, Uncle Sam received only $160,538, which was the full sum due from Finland. The larger debtors all gave notice of default, and so did most of the others. Czechoslovakia suggested a readjustment to permit it to pay in goods and service.

In Berlin the Reichsbank declared a six-months moratorium on its foreign obligations, then including the Dawes and Young loans. No cash transfers will be made by the bank from July 1 to December 31, 1934.

LARGELY through the efforts of Norman Davis, American ambassador at large, the European statesmen at Geneva were persuaded to drop their quarrel and to adopt a mild compromise resolution that prolonged the life of the disarmament conference. Great Britain and France agreed upon a plan, based on the return of Germany to the conference, and the aid of Italy was enlisted. It was arranged that Chancellor Hitler should go to Venice and that Premier Mussolini should fly to Berlin to confer with his fellow dictator, whom he had never met. Later Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, is expected to go to Rome for a talk with Mussolini in which the misunderstandings between their countries may be ironed out.

Premier Mussolini

Mussolini and Hitler were to discuss European policies generally, and, specifically, the German claims to full armament and the Austrian question, involving Nazi propaganda in the latter country.

This Anglo-French compromise was a diplomatic setback for Russia, but the Soviet republic countered with the announcement that it had been recognized by Czechoslovakia and Rumania. Recognition by Jugoslavia was expected to follow shortly. Maxim Litvinov's announcement was taken to mean that the Russians intend to go ahead with their policy of encircling Germany.

German papers agree a new chapter in relations between Soviet Russia and the powers of southeastern Europe has been opened. It is expected the next step probably will be the conclusion of a commercial agreement between the little entente and Moscow, one of the purposes being to minimize the effect of Soviet dumping of lumber and cereals in the entente nations. Nonaggressions and mutual assistance pacts are said to be in the background.

A committee of the disarmament conference had under consideration the matter of guarantees for any convention which may be agreed upon; but when the question was submitted to the Japanese delegate he said his government could not consent to guarantees without reservations. Thereupon the Russian delegate said the Soviet government would not accept any such agreement that was not signed by Japan.

NRA celebrated its first birthday at a dinner given by Administrator Johnson for the original employees of the organization who were at work before the recovery act was passed. Besides stenographers and office boys, these included a number of Ignatius Donnelly's kin.

General Johnson also invited Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Senator Robert F. Wagner.

CONGRESS completed action on the communications bill and it was handed to the President for his signature. This new law puts an end to the federal radio commission and creates a new board of seven members known as the federal communications commission that not only takes over the duties of the radio board but also all control that has been exercised by the interstate commerce commission over telegraphic and telephonic communications.

A significant new provision which the bill carries into law is the assertion of full control over all wire and radio communications in time of war or "public peril." Under this section the President has authority to take over all wire and radio offices and stations with just compensation to persons entitled thereto.

EVEN the Democrats in congress are not boasting openly of their success in passing the bill for a census of the unemployed, and many of them voted against it or were absent when it came up for final passage. That it was designed mainly to give jobs for the faithful at the expense of the national treasury was clear, for the census takers are not to get their jobs until after the November congressional elections. Then they will receive $2 a day for a long period, obtaining answers to an elaborate questionnaire. No one knows of what use this will be except to their bosses.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—President Roosevelt's broad conception of reform in the country's social structure has now been given the country. In it, he has presented the embryonic propositions which he intends to submit to the congress that convenes in January, 1935. Everywhere around the Capital city, I believe, it is accepted as a statement upon which he expects that Democratic representatives and senators will seek to be re-elected in the November elections.

Social Reform Program

Disregarding for a moment the views obtainable as to the merits of the projects which he laid down in his message to congress outlining his social reform programs, I find that most leaders look upon the Roosevelt statement as one from which he can determine his future policy. It will work out this way, I am informed: If the voters elect a preponderance of Roosevelt supporters for the house and senate again this fall, the President will consider that the country approves of his plans. If, on the other hand, there should be a sharp loss of Democrats in the house, I am told that Mr. Roosevelt would be likely to consider that as a mandate to slow up somewhat on the program upon which he has embarked.

As I reported to you several weeks ago, Mr. Roosevelt has now rounded out the picture of recovery and reform as he conceives it to be necessary, or rather as he and his advisers think the course should be. At that time, I predicted he would find it opportune just before congress quit for the session to toss his ideas into the hopper for magistication during the summer months. It can now be said that he has elected to go into battle with the opposition without quarter, for his message made it clear he felt the critics had offered nothing as an alternative. He declared they were unable to present any plans for human happiness and that they proposed to go back to the "old order" which had broken down completely in the panic.

The President asserted that he proposed to make the "security of the citizen and his family" the first consideration of government. And to accomplish that, he explained, it was necessary to toss aside much of the traditions and practices to which we long have adhered.

"People," he said, "want decent homes to live in; they want to locate them where they can engage in productive work; and they want some safeguard against misfortunes which cannot be wholly eliminated in this man-made world of ours."

Mr. Roosevelt's message was decidedly general in tone. He avoided specifications. But the general thoughts were certainly clear to all and sundry, and it is upon these general thoughts that the issues are to be drawn. Indeed, they have already been drawn.

So, it cannot be doubted that throughout the coming campaigns, we will hear much of the New Deal's new social structure as presented by Mr. Roosevelt. The Roosevelt supporters will swear by all that is holy that it is the only road to happiness. Republicans and anti-Roosevelt spellbinders will shout all of the invectives that may be used to inform the country that it is headed for government ownership of everything, government management, destruction of property rights, etc.

Some observers here thought there might be some link between the delivery of the President's message at the particular time selected, and the threats of strikes. They professed to see a clever move by the Chief Executive to satisfy many citizens as to his intention to guarantee work and food throughout the future. I am in a position to say, however, that there was no connection between the unsettled labor situation and the time at which the message was delivered to congress. It was ready at that time and was sent along in regular course. If it has had, or is to have, any effect on the threats of strikes and the leaders in those movements, it will be wholly a coincidence.

No Link With Labor Disputes

The strikes have been bred of different causes than the things about which Mr. Roosevelt talked in his message. He is proposing such things as old-age insurance, additional government money for loans to persons who want to buy homes, the transfer of those living in barren spots (insofar as jobs are concerned) to sections and communities where work is obtainable, and a general paternalism on the part of the national government. In other words, Mr. Roosevelt's plans contemplate a long-range development and have no reference to NRA schemes, its codes or what have you. It does relate directly to the movements undertaken by the Agricultural Adjustment administration which have gone a long way—and it wants to go much farther—in regulating the production of farms and in controlling what farmers do with their land.

With reference to this phase, it can be said that Mr. Roosevelt is willing to abandon millions of acres of land and to have the people who own and live upon land that is worn out transferred to good land. It is a proposition that will involve the use of untold millions of dollars, and it is to be assumed that it will be money paid into the treasury by taxpayers, supplied the transferred peoples on long-time credit. I have not learned yet how the added production resulting from these transfers will be handled, but it certainly will add to the surplus about which the Agricultural Adjustment administration has been complaining.

Now that we have a new law that provides the federal government with authority to control the exchanges where stocks and bonds are sold, as well as a law by which the government controls the issuance and sale of such securities, it seems to be a good time for examination of the new agency that is going to run that show. It may seem a far cry from the stock exchange of Wall Street to the little country school house, but this new law is so far-reaching in its effect and in its scope of jurisdiction that it touches that little country school and the lives of all of us. I judge from the expressions I have picked up that passage of the exchange control law has brought us to a turning point in the matter of what we do with the extra few dollars that we can save and invest with expectation of getting a return of interest.

Touches All Our Lives

The consensus seems to be that whether anything is accomplished under the combination control of security issues of stock exchanges will depend entirely on administration of the laws. That is to say, if good is to come, there must be reasonable interpretation of the provision of those laws, according to the general view of those directly affected. The stock exchange control law underwent a major operation in congress from the manner in which the professors of the brain trust had drawn it originally, until those objectionable features were eliminated, there was a battle royal in house and senate. Since the features omitted were deemed to be radical by congress, it is to be assumed there was merit in the claims of brokers and investors in stocks that the bill would have dammed up money that otherwise would have been put to work and used by commerce and industry which necessarily has to operate to a great extent on borrowed funds, credit.

But I hear many expressions around here that there is still a serious problem ahead in the matter of keeping the channels open for investment funds. It is asserted by many that "the professorial type of mind" should not be chosen to serve as members of the five-man commission that is set up to rule this phase of commerce.

Numerous Democrats continued right up to the dying gasp of the Seventy-third congress to seek political pie for their constituents. They are still pie hungry now, insofar as one attempted raid on government jobs is concerned. A second pie raid was attempted in the house to place several hundred extra workers in the general accounting office for the purpose of auditing the expenditures of the several dozen Roosevelt agencies that are denominated by their critics as the "alphabetical soup." Up to this time, J. R. McCarl, the comptroller general of the United States, has had little chance to find out what the alphabetical agencies have been doing with the vast sums appropriated them by the President from the various huge appropriations. He has to, and does, pass on the expenditures of the regularly established government agencies, but none of the new ones were put under his watchful eye.

Still Pie Hungry

Mr. Roosevelt ordered the audit. To do the job, however, required additional help for Mr. McCarl, and about $1,000,000 was included in a deficiency appropriation bill. The pie-hunters saw a fine chance, and they never overlook any chance. So they slipped a line into the appropriation bill that said the extra workers were to be chosen without regard for the civil service. What a huge piece of pie, in fact, many pieces of pie!

But something happened to the well-laid plan. Somewhere the language got changed to read that the comptroller general "may appoint" the extra workers without regard for the civil service instead of the command that he "shall appoint." And, in this case, the change is of vast importance to maintenance of the civil service as a government method of employment.

By ED HOWE

NO REASONABLY honest or intelligent man can refuse considerable respect to the Christian church. It has always taught morality with its religious doctrine. In the home, in the nation, it has been, in a way, the custodian of good behavior. Parents, especially mothers, are its sincerest advocates, and mainly for moral reasons.

But no intelligent man may honestly say as much of Communism. At least, the founder of Christianity is called the Prince of Peace; in his book may be found the moral teaching found in every other book of enduring fame. In it is found the simple admonition to give unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. The Bible advises us to do unto others as we would have others do unto us, and the advice is found in a much older book, indicating that in all times it has been found a dependable and necessary human regulation for the greatest good of the greatest number.

But it is certainly true that Communism is a doctrine of violence, of war; of defiance of morality.

In my long life I have found nothing to substantiate the truth of the Christian dogma, but have never denied that millions of its followers are good people. Most of them only know of their doctrine that it teaches morals; of the rest of it they know little. Their faith is in the necessity of good behavior, but I have never known a Communist of whom it might be truthfully said he was an honest man.

The next time you sit down to your newspaper, note the many mentions of policewomen, actresses, club women, social workers, society women, and the like, and the few mentions of women who are good cooks. Fame in private life it is almost equal to "starting a story" on a woman to say she is a good cook.

One of the best things to be said about a woman is that she is a good cook; the great scandal is the meals that are prepared by the ordinary hired girl.

H. L. Mencken has expressed regret that no one since Huxley has ably defended himself against the sneers of religious sentimentalists.

Why does not Mencken himself do it? Why did he twice make the attempt, and then drift off into the usual timidity? Mencken is a better writer than Huxley; not a greater man or thinker, but he is better able to present a case in simple words easier understood by the ordinary people. Mencken's best book is long known, and possibly out of print: "The Philosophy of Frederick Nelzsche." No other man, living or dead, has more simply, powerfully or intelligently presented a summary of truth, hidden away in important books written by a great intellectual. It is the misfortune of the world today that H. L. Mencken has not done as much for Huxley and a dozen others of equal note. It is a very easy task for an average reader to wade through all of Neitzsche's books, important as they are: a joy to read one such book as Mencken's "Neitzsche."

But in summarizing his own religious opinions, Mencken is cowardly; he seems to be as much under the control of his mother as Mark Twain was under the control of his wife.

When he attempted to speak for himself about religion, Mencken even expressed the belief there "might be a good deal in it," to satisfy his mother, but Huxley didn't talk that way in his controversy with Gladstone.

What I miss in Mencken's own religious books is not his wit or wisdom, but his great ability as a writer to present the case truthfully, fairly and candidly for the benefit of confused and hurried readers. Nothing is so awkwardly, so confusingly or dishonestly written, talked, sung or shouted about as religion. Everybody is afraid of the subject, although there is nothing whatever to be afraid of in discussing it, except ignorance and cowardice.

Except in the case of the late Thomas A. Edison I do not at the moment recall another American who became widely popular, and really deserved it. Mr. Edison was quiet, well-behaved, and a great worker; what little he said was proper for both young and old to remember, but somehow he attracted the popular fancy. . . . It is a very rare case. Millions of other people have been unworthy of popularity, as they have acted badly, and taught bad lessons. Look at Jean Jacques Rousseau. He was scarcely a respectable man, yet his popularity is growing a long time after his death. Millions of people in all parts of the world regard him as almost a saint, and his teaching as very important. Rousseau was even "feted" by a woman, whom she threw him over, he took up with a kitchen wench, and sent her children to orphan asylums; he never later saw one of them.

You Have Inflation But Don't Worry
Flying Too Low
New Way to Travel

A law will presently become the "law of the land" compelling the nation to buy fourteen hundred million ounces of silver. It is announced that the President will issue fifteen hundred million dollars of paper money to buy the silver. Conservative old fogyism yells "inflation," although it is not inflation, since the money will have silver back of it.

It will have more back of it than the government's bonds on which the nation pays interest. Back of those bonds there is nothing but a paper mill, and the government's name. There are no longer any gold bonds; you can't get any gold.

Back of the silver money issued to buy silver will at least be silver, and you can always buy something with that—in China, Mexico, India or elsewhere as well as here at home.

Conservative old fogyism may as well realize that we have left the gold basis, and that a government bond is worth exactly as much as a piece of green paper with the government name on it, no more, no less. All you will get for any United States government bond is pieces of green paper, when you come to sell it.

For your comfort remember that this nation, which has actually lost, according to careful statistics, more than one hundred thousand millions of dollars since the depression began, can well afford another hundred thousand millions to get out of the depression, if that amount is necessary.

This isn't any little country, or any poor country.

One hundred thousand millions to the United States is less than ten millions would be to John D. Rockefeller, and you know or you can imagine how much that would be to him.

An airplane of the "American Air Lines" was wrecked and burned in the Catskill mountains, with all on board, seven—four passengers, two pilots and the "stewardess"—dead. The government is careful about inspecting planes and testing pilots. Is it sufficiently careful about stipulating the height at which passenger-carrying planes must fly and what pilots must do in dangerous weather?

A seagoing vessel sails in "deep water." It does not skim along the tops of rocks near the surface. There is plenty of "deep water" in the atmosphere above this earth. In there any reason why airplanes should skim as near as possible to the surface of the earth, frequently colliding with mountainsides and hills?

Mr. Ben Smith's traveling methods show what flying machines can do. He recently started around the world with his family by floating steamer, the way, in Java, he thought he would like to see the grand national steeplechase, and flew back to England from that point, saw the race and flew back to his family and their ship at an African port. Landing in New York, he flew to California, took another plane to British Columbia, flew back via San Francisco to New York. He thus saves months of old-fashioned "high-speed travel."

The most important document since the Civil war, more important than any act of government in the big war, is the message that President Roosevelt sends to congress, outlining plans of his administration. The government pledges itself to enable citizens to live "as Americans should live," to provide jobs for those that want to work or, failing jobs, unemployment insurance, and to guarantee "the security of the home."

Dr. James Bryant Conant, youthful and intelligent new president of Harvard university, tells graduates of the Stevens Institute of Technology that no matter what "social and economic order lies ahead of us, society will demand the luxuries and conveniences afforded by modern technology." Therefore, two professions will survive any troubles—"the engineers and the doctors." Engineers will be needed to provide the people want, and doctors to repair human machinery.

When Doctor Conant says "society will want" he means human society, the whole race, not the silly by-product commonly described as "society."

Sailors with friends on the big ship Leviathan are worried because that boat went to sea with no cat on board. To sail without a cat, according to sailors, is "the worst possible luck."

And, most curiously, the same sailors consider it bad luck to sail with a clergyman on board. Only the presence of a clergyman or the absence of a cat should be dangerous to a ship is a puzzle.

SYNOPSIS

On her way to a position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer, young professor of English literature and rhetoric, meets on the train a young man, Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy, as professor of mathematics and chemistry. At the railroad station they meet Mrs. Denver, enraged as matron of the Academy. The group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the school building. Haskell, the proprietor, welcomes them. Wilton Payne, teacher of psychology, completes the family. Janet witnesses from her window a meeting between Haskell and a man of unprepossessing appearance, but evidently high in Haskell's confidence. In the schoolroom she finds a group which she teachers had supposed were scholars, are really highly artistic wax figures.

Terror of these figures began to stir in Janet—terror of them in their immobile beauty; their everlasting pursuit of an education that would never be finished; their half wistful, secretive smiles as over some inexplicable memory. She began to move from them, dragging her feet as in a nightmare, and turning her head constantly to look at them lest one of them should rise and follow her and try to detain her. The horrid fancy faded; and as she neared the door a great pity and gentleness replaced the fear. It was foolish! They knew nothing, yet she must step softly not to awaken them from their trance of study.

She peered through the glass door into the hall. No one there! But some one might be watching and waiting for her exit—to spring upon her, or to follow her with their eyes up the curved staircase. To be seen and not to see was dreadful. She crossed the hall as if great weights were on each foot and the pursuers would soon be upon her. Up she climbed, and for a moment stood in the moonlight that streamed through a window at the head of the stairs. Then realizing that this was a conspicuous position, she moved on to the shadow—just as voices reached her from below. One of them was Haskell's, and he was saying in a sharp whisper: "Take those terrible figures down in the basement, Balder. If you ever dare play a trick like that again, I'll horsewhip you."

Peering over the banisters she saw the "gorilla man" enter the schoolroom. Haskell stood guard, but he seemed to shrink back against the wall as his servitor emerged with one of the wax figures under his arms. He carried it nonchalantly, as Janet had seen such figures in department stores carried about, and returned after a time for the others.

She did not whit to see these transfers, but went quickly down the corridor, and, seeing a light under Mrs. Denver's door, she spoke her name softly, and was at once admitted.

"I've been downstairs. I felt I must know what kind of a place we are in."

"Did you see anything?"

"Those four scholars were still in the schoolroom studying!"

"Oh, the cruel man!"

"No, they are wax figures."

"Wax figures! Why, that's dread-ful! Do you think he means to murder us?" she added inconsequentially.

"What object would he have in murdering strangers? No! there's something here less simple than killing innocent people."

"Then there are no scholars?"

"Only four wax ones—so far. Mrs. Denver, are you willing to see it through? After all, we really know nothing; it's strange—but strange things are not always criminal. Let's see it through."

"I agree with you. I was never one for running away. My dear, you had better try to get some sleep."

"I intend to."

She stole back to her room. The house lay now in profound silence, but still she had the uncanny sensation that the quiet veiled a sinister activity. Speculating on this, she fell asleep.

She was awakened next morning by a faint tap at her door; then a voice: "Miss Mercer, may I see you as soon as possible?"

She recognized it as Arthur Fleming's. "Yes, in about a quarter of an hour."

"I'll be waiting at the end of the passage."

When she joined him he stood by a window in the morning light with "Hamlet," who seemed deep in his musings. He and Arthur both looked at her curiously.

"Well—how do you feel about it now?" Arthur asked.

"Why do you ask?"

"Payne and I are wondering if we ought to let you stay on here."

"You really think there's danger?"

"Yes."

"What kind?"

"That's just it," Payne remarked; "we don't know. I hate to use a misused word, but I am what is called psychic; or at least I am sensitive enough to scent a sort of menace in this house."

"The gods of destiny are here," she said. "Listen to my adventure." She told them the story of her visit to the schoolroom.

"Ah, you shouldn't have gone down there—it was dangerous," Payne said gravely. "You should have asked me—I saw at once that the figures were wax."

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"Why alarm you?—but Fleming and I talked half the night about it."

"Do you remember what the old farmer said—that it would be easier to come here than get away! What did he mean?"

Payne shook his head. "There's something queer about the place that he knows and we don't."

"We'll have to talk this over later," Arthur said, looking at his watch. "Let us stop at Mrs. Denver's door, and, if she's ready, go downstairs together."

Janet knocked. "Mrs. Denver," she said gently. There was no answer. They knocked louder—a couple from the window perhaps swung the door; it softly opened. The occupant of the room was not there.

"Let us go down, too," Payne said. "It's a quarter to eight. I should think hungry pupils would be waiting breakfast."

The silence reigning over the great house was profound.

"Really," Arthur remarked, "this is getting on my nerves."

They descended the main staircase and stood uncertainly in the hall; then Janet looked through the glass door of the study room. The figures were absent.

"Ah, breakfast!"

Turning, they saw their principal, with a fresh flower in his buttonhole and an air of amiable concern for their health. "Did you sleep well? The first night in a new place is always trying. Miss Mercer, you look somewhat pale. A cup of coffee I prescribe for you—at once."

He led them to a really bright and pretty breakfast room flooded with the morning sunshine. The white paneled walls and bright chintzes were like a guarantee of normality. Even Wilton began to wonder if they had not been overexcited.

Midway of the meal, Janet put down her fork with a sudden realization. "Oh, where is Mrs. Denver—has she breakfasted?"

"Long ago! She is a very solid, that little woman; I foresee trouble at six, cups at nine. Mr. Wilton Payne, more coffee? Have you in your psychology studies tabulated the effects of caffeine and other drugs upon human conduct—for example, the actions of the same person begun on a day without coffee? Personally I should not be responsible for my actions on a day initiated without this wonderful coffee bean! More eggs, Miss Mercer?"

They were all feeling better; half ashamed of their suspicions.

"Are all new teachers favored with breakfast with the principal on the first morning?" Janet ventured to ask. "Where is the general dining room of the faculty?"

"Oh, Miss Mercer, we are the faculty—we cozy four. I am a linguist, a historian, I've delved deep into the ancient ramifications of the unfolding spirit of man. You teach English literature and rhetoric; my good friend Wilton Payne, psychology; Arthur Fleming, mathematics and chemistry. Are not all the arts and sciences, at least by proxy, represented?"

"Of course with receptive pupils four teachers can do wonders," Arthur commented. "But we are very anxious to meet our pupils!"

"You speak of pupils, Mr. Fleming. In this respect also the academy is ahead of the times. What would you consider the most important element in education?"

Arthur reflected for a moment, quite intent on the honesty of his own answer regardless of consequences. "I should say, sir, development of character—the making of splendid citizens."

"And you, Miss Mercer?"

Her smile had the fleeting, lovely quality of a wood nymph pausing to answer an intruder from a dead and settled world. "I should say all education should make people more enchanting and—enchanted."

As she uttered the words her eyes met Arthur's in one of those glances between two young people which are like a dissolving scene in the theater. Almost they held their breath with the wonder of it. They were to be here together through the long autumn days, hidden from the world with an extraordinary chief, and education turned perhaps into real magic—the education of the heart—as well as the head.

"Enchanting—and enchanted," the schoolmaster repeated. "Ah! you show your own theory in yourself, Miss Mercer. Now Payne?"

"Education—a drawing forth of the soul—educe; lead forth. How shy souls are!"

"I congratulate myself on my discernment in choosing three young people of such advanced views in education. Now, has anyone any objection to teaching a handful of shy scholars who come from the neighboring farms? It is a most beautiful charity, I assure you; for the young things belong, as a rule, to families too poor to send them to high school or colleges; and they are avidly eager for an education."

"Certainly we would be only too glad," Payne answered, quite sure that he spoke for all of them. "To have students eager for education smooths a teacher's mind."

"Exactly. But there is one pupil of—of another class, Berenice Bracebridge, the youngest daughter of the late Doctor Jethro Bracebridge."

He paused impressively, as if the announcement must change their entire conception of the state of affairs in Lostland academy. "It is chiefly for her that this whole arrangement exists; I am her guardian and the sole trustee of the estate, and under the terms of her father's will she is to receive her education at Lostland academy until she comes into control of her own fortune at twenty-one. I have undertaken much of her education myself, with the aid of various governesses—to comply with the spirit of the will, if not the letter; but lately she has demanded certain subjects on which, I have no hesitancy in saying, I am not an authority.

"Now you see the reason for your high salaries. I couldn't really, could I, ask specialists on these subjects to bury themselves in these hills for the sake of one young girl

"It's Good to Make Things Live."

—lovely and intelligent as she is? And since you are in Lostland, I wanted the farmers' children to share the advantages which you are bringing to Berenice."

Janet felt acute remorse that she had so misjudged this man, who could throw open the doors of the old academy to boys and girls stranded on these hills. "I think that is most kind and generous of you."

He waved his hand to indicate that it did not signify. "You will not find Berenice difficult, though, of course, she has had very little of the usual life of young girls."

"May I ask a question, sir?"—this from Arthur.

"As many as you like!"

"Are you a relative of Miss Bracebridge?"

"No, the fact is, I was the adopted son of Mrs. Henry Haskell, of California, and I took her name. When I was about twenty-seven my adopted mother became the second wife of Doctor Jethro Bracebridge and stepmother to his five children, of whom Berenice was the youngest, and then four years old. I was an instructor in a western college, but my adopted mother's marriage led to my taking a position as teacher of foreign languages in this academy, which thirteen years ago was in a very flourishing condition—" He paused and looked about the circle with his keen, restless eyes.

"I—I presume there were then—a number of deaths?" Payne said.

"Yes, Doctor Bracebridge's long illness—and a number of deaths. Doctor Bracebridge did me the honor to rely on me, to trust me, hence," he smiled rather wearily, "this strange situation! A rather lonely girl to be educated in a great academy to comply with the terms of a rather singular will; though, of course, all wills are singular to some ext. As trustee I do not receive enough to keep this great place in order—"

"But couldn't you turn it into what it was in the days of its glory?"

"No—there's an obstacle," he said, stubbornly. He looked at his watch. "Well, any more questions?"

"Do your pupils ever study by moonlight, sir?"

He turned quite pale. "Oh, I'll explain that circumstance—very slight—very odd, yet it has held up the whole situation here. Not now. It's after nine, and I think I heard the day pupils coming in the side entrance. As they cannot pay much, they tend the vegetable garden in the summer; and two are told off to look after the two furnaces, and to bring coal up to the cook in winter."

"Now it is nine; and we begin work at nine," he continued. "You take the study with the glass door, Miss Mercer; and Mr. Payne, you will turn down the hall to the right as you face the staircase; and the first door you come to will be your schoolroom; and next Mr. Fleming's. We have thirty pupils. Each of you will have ten for one hour; and teach three hours at a stretch. At noon you will have recreation until one, and the students a study hour. At one, lunch will be served here for the three of you. At two, the students, who have their lunch in another dining room, will begin three forty-five minute shifts of reciting back to you what you taught them in the morning; and you will give out tasks to be done in the evening in their homes; and by Berenice here. That will bring us to about 3:45 in the afternoon; or, allowing for inevitable delays, four o'clock; making about five teaching hours a day. From four o'clock on your time is your own."

"Where is the library?" asked Payne.

"Across the hall from here. I'll show you."

He led the way to a room which Janet thought gloomy in the extreme; but it was well stocked with books, which Payne examined eagerly. Then they went to their respective classrooms.

In hers, Janet found a number of boys and girls at the clumsy desks, and among them a girl she was most eager to behold—Berenice Bracebridge—who would, Janet thought, have arrested anyone's attention anywhere by her singular type of beauty. She seemed to be of those who look proudly out on life—but are not proud; a slender, aloof creature. Her features—where had Janet seen the upper lip, the thick lashes, the delicate skin, the abundant fair hair, the eyes with their expression of wanting to understand something which they could not understand? She rose gracefully as Janet entered, and looked about on her fellow students. They seemed to be nice boys and girls; and they rose rather uncertainly, following Miss Bracebridge's example.

"I think we're all here—and we are very glad to see you," she said half shyly.

Janet was unaccountably nervous, and she felt a certain uneasiness in her pupils. Their eyes wandered to the corridor, even when she was sure they were not absent. In a rather shaky voice she opened her subject, a kind of prologue of the glories of English literature from Chaucer down.

The hour came to an end quickly. As Berenice passed her desk she held out her hand. "Thank you! You made things live. It's good to make things live."

Janet felt relieved, grateful, almost happy again. She left her platform and went to raise a window higher. When she returned other pupils were entering her room, and on her desk lay a folded note addressed simply "The Teacher." She slipped it into her bag, for Gordon Haskell was approaching in his quiet way which reminded her of a leopard's movements. His sleek, shining hair, his dark eyes, and rather elongated rounded nose emphasized his appearance.

"Well, how did you get along?"

"Very well—thank you!"

"I am glad you are not nervous. Some of my governesses have been very nervous."

His face had a cruel expression; and she recalled an old painting she had once seen of the burning of a witch in Salem, and of the pale, intense Puritan countenances lit up by the flames of the bonfire in the midst of which a woman writhed. The thought crossed her mind that she would be glad when Berenice ceased to be the ward of this man.

No Eggs Alike

The guillemot stands alone among birds for the variety of coloration it achieves in its eggs. No two birds produce eggs alike, it is said. They may be almost any color from white, cream, brown, claret and red to any shade of blue or green and may be marked with spots or blotches in one or more different colors.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

First Symptom of Heart Failure

AS STUDENTS it was our custom to listen to as many cases of heart disease as possible, and try to tell whether the murmur came with the first beat, with the second beat, just before the first beat, and the quality of the murmur.

Then with this worked out in our minds we tried to tell just which valves were affected and gave the disease its particular name. What do we find our instructors in medicine teaching the students now about heart disease?

While they have not done away with the names of the diseases affecting the heart, they attach very little importance to them, because they have or try to have all heart ailments down to a practical working basis.

What are the practical points?

First, has the heart enough power to do the work of the body when the body is at rest? Second, what amount of reserve has the heart when work, extra work, is demanded of it?

If the heart cannot do the ordinary work demanded, and cannot do a little extra work at times, then that heart is "failing" in its ability to work, and we have what is called "heart failure."

What are the signs that the heart is not doing its work properly, or is not strong enough to fulfill the usual demands on it?

If the failure is severe or has existed for some time the heart will be dilated, and there may be dropsy.

But before the heart becomes such a complete failure what is the first sign that is noted by the patient himself?

Breathlessness on effort.

Remember everybody gets out of breath if they work or exercise hard or long enough. But if work or that they have ordinarily been able to do without getting out of breath, now makes them breathless, the first thought should be to have the family doctor examine the heart thoroughly; that is lying down sitting up, standing up, exercising, immediately after exercising, two minutes after exercising, by breath holding tests, and other methods.

However, an obstructed nose, a heavy meal, or being already tired, may cause breathlessness after effort, even when the heart is normal.

Remember, then, that the first symptom of heart failure is breathlessness on slight effort.

Insanity

A CRIME has been committed and the law seeks to punish the criminal. Immediately the defense makes the claim that the prisoner is insane and therefore cannot be punished by the law but should be placed in an institution for mental patients.

Fairminded people have no desire to see an insane man or woman punished by hanging or imprisonment, nor, on the other hand, do they want to see a prisoner who is not insane escape the just punishment of his crime because a clever lawyer is able to bolster up a defense by various circumstances, illustrations and comparisons.

What is insanity anyway?

When we think of how judges, lawyers and juries wrestle with the problem of what is and what is not insanity, it is not easy to give a full or complete definition of just what must be found about an individual before he should be called insane.

However in a general way it may be said that every one of us is born with certain instincts, principal or first instincts they are called, such as love, hate, fear, joy. Those are a part of us, ourselves in fact.

If, then, you love, hate, fear anybody, or anything, that is your own business; but that is what one would usually think. And if this love, hate or fear does no harm to anyone else, no one but yourself knows that you possess it.

If, however, this love, hate, or fear so affects you that you want to do things that are not considered right by the community and by the laws of the land, then a fight goes on within you, a "conflict" as it is called. Between these primal instincts are forcing you, on the one hand, to do these "wrong" things, and your moral training and the laws of the land are, on the other hand, fighting back these instincts.

If we think about some cases we know who have become mentally unbalanced, we find that they didn't want to mix much with others, wanted to do things differently, weren't much interested in other people, even friends or family; in fact, didn't want to be bothered or "hemmed in" by regulations.

What are our mental specialists trying to do about this type of mental unbalance or imbalance?

These physicians recognize that human beings will always be born with these primal instincts—love, hate, fear—so that to prevent insanity, every boy, girl, man and woman must be taught that the good of the community should always be the first thought.

Good Taste Today

Author of "ETIQUETTE," "THE BLUE BOOK OF SOCIAL USAGE," Etc.

PROPRIETIES

DEAR Mrs. Post: What do you think of a lined envelope in stationery used by men? It seems impossible to find an unlined envelope, which does not permit the writing to show through.

Answer: They are perhaps not objectionable, if plain, but they are really more suitable for women. If you do not write on the back page the ink can't show through!

My Dear Mrs. Post: I know a young man (and his family) very well. This person has asked me to go as his guest to the World's fair in Chicago with him and his twenty-two-year-old sister. Is his sister a sufficient chaperon to keep people from talking about us?

Answer: You cannot properly let him pay your railway fare and your hotel bill. Aside from this, you might perfectly well go to Chicago when they go, and of course go to see the fair with them and take as many meals with them and go to whatever places of amusement they invite you.

Dear Mrs. Post: I have been taking a girl out for the greater part of two years. We always have to take her mother and sister (or both) with us, no matter whether it is to the movies or for a ride in my car —and I might add at my expense. I have complained to the girl and she says if I like her as much as I pretend, I won't mind. What, if anything, is there left for me to do?

Answer: Thirty years ago her behavior would have been conventional. Today it is so unreasonable as to suggest that she likes your car and the movies more than she does you. In your place, I would tell her frankly that one man, two girls and an older woman is not your idea of a pleasant party. If she still insists on including her whole family, I would transfer my attentions to another girl.

Dear Mrs. Post: I received a postcard from a friend who is away on her vacation. The card has no salutation and close, and I felt hurt about this coldness, until some one told me that none were intended for postcards. Is this true?

Answer: Cards, like telegrams, are public messages. Therefore, they never have a beginning, nor do they have more than the most abbrevinted signature possible at the close.

WHO IS A "LADY"?

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is the word "lady" more correct than "woman" when telling some one that "there is a (thank) calling on the telephone?" The word doesn't seem to have any real significance any longer if I am to judge by the many females who are called "lady" and who don't know any more about following "the code of a lady (or gentleman)" than I know about building skyscrapers, when my business is to design draperies for their many windows. Is any woman a "lady" nowadays?

Answer: The term, which once denoted a person of breeding and cultivation, long ago deteriorated into meaning nothing more than a female of respectable appearance. Consequently those who have clearest right to the little speak of themselves and their friends as women. One should, however, always say "a lady on the telephone." You would also say, "I am making curtains for a lady in Chicago."

Dear Mrs. Post: Our neighbors are very inconsiderate. My husband works every evening until eleven o'clock and would enjoy sleeping until eight o'clock next morning. But it is next to impossible to get any sleep after six o'clock because their small children are not disciplined at all, and their mother never tells them to be quiet, or keeps them from climbing into our yard. In fact, she herself slams doors and yells. Isn't there anything we can do to mend their habits and yet keep the neighborhood in an amiable state? We can't move, so don't advise that.

Answer: When neighbors are inconsiderate nothing can be done except to call on the board of health (or whatever local official deals with such matters). I have a friend who owns a New York apartment, the sale of which in this city is impossible. Overhead five two boys practice only diversions seem to be jumping contests and chopstick piano duets. The misery of my friend, who is an invalid, can hardly be exaggerated. In this case each note of protest brings a note of apology from the mother or the father, and then the noise goes on unabated. Perhaps a visit from a representative of the board of health might be effective — depending, of course, upon the efficiency of this particular representative.

Scientists Find Relics of Long-Gone Peoples

Far back among the mystic shrines of Monument valley, in northern Arizona and southern Utah, there are untold proofs of civilization existing as early as 500 A. D., yet untouched by archeologists, says T. H. Kelley, field director of a group of Arizona and California scientists, who recently explored the 2,000-mile square area.

Robert Branstead, a member of Kelley's party, risked death by sliding down a 40-foot rope from the crest to a cave. It was located deep in the solitude of Monument valley, into which no white man has dared to wander.

There he found what Kelley believes were two pieces of pottery of the basketmaker type, known to have been made about 500 A. D. The room he discovered had been dug out of almost solid rock, much in the manner known to have been used at that prehistoric date. No tools or implements were found, however. The entrance to the cave was partly blocked by great boulders that had dropped into position and wedged tightly.

The cave evidently had been the resting place for animals during past centuries. Many bones littered the floor, and here and there was scattered evidence of a death battle between great beasts.

Eczema on Hands Skin Peeled Off in Pieces

Cuticura Healed

"I was troubled with eczema on my hands for ever so long. I could not put my hands in much water because after I got through I could just peel the skin off in pieces. It would form like a rash and bothered me terribly, burning and itching. My hands were sights and I was ashamed.

"I tried a lot of different remedies that did not help. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it helped a lot. I bought more and now my hands are completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. H. S. Hammond, 10 Pleasant St., Hollliston, Mass., Jan. 18, 1933.

Camels

The Bactrian camel is much more stoutly built and shorter of leg than the Arabian camel. Because of this the Bactrian is able to cope with the rough character of much of Central Asia, its native home, as well as with desert territory, but the Arabian camel can travel with safety only on the desert. It is very likely to break its legs on uneven ground.

CONGRATULATIONS

We wish to extend congratulations to Lawler Wells, the successful candidate for county commissioner for this district, and to Jack Sims upon his re-election as representative to the legislature for Highlands county.

Mr. Wells is a new-comer to county politics, but the creditable manner in which he came through the baptism of ballots shows that he "can take it." Except for a factional fight foisted upon him through the activities of overzealous supporters, he would have had much less opposition. In making this statement it is not our intention to intimate that he had a run-away race. Far from it. Frank (Hot Shot) Armistead, another new-comer in local politics, gave him a close race and the outcome was in doubt every step of the way. Now, that the election is over, we trust that the factional issue—at least in so far as it affects his office—will be forgotten. We are convinced that Mr. Wells will make the district an efficient and able commissioner.

Mr. Sims is an old-timer in county politics. Running for re-election on his past record, he had an able opponent in Dr. Eide. An unusual circumstance of the race was the fact that both candidates—residents of Lake Placid in the lower end of the county—disposed of their two opponents in the first primary. Mr. Sims made a very creditable showing in the last legislature, we are informed by those who were in close touch with his work, and we have every reason to believe that his work in the coming session will measure up to the expectations of his friends and admirers.

TRAMMELL AGAIN VICTOR

Park Trammell has again been returned victoriously to the United States Senate by the people of Florida, this time over the opposition of a highly favored and extremely capable young man, who gave the Senator the race of his long political career.

While no evidence has been produced to justify the suspicion, nevertheless the suspicion persists to the observing that everything was not on the up and up in those West Tampa and Ybor City precincts which gave Trammell an overwhelming vote and ran up a majority for him of ten thousand votes, which offset Pepper majorities elsewhere and gave Trammell the victory.

The vote in the Latin precincts gave Trammell majorities of from 10 to 1 all the way to 446 to 1. The average was about 20 to 1. This could have been an honest vote, but we doubt that it was.

Claude Pepper probably feels the same way about it, but if he does, he never referred to it in his statement to the press. Evidently, he will accept the verdict as an honest one, and without contest. If Pepper feels that is the best course, then there is nothing to be done about it. Just the same we cannot refrain from asking, where was Mr. Pepper's "$100,000 slush fund," while Ybor was voting 20 to 1 against him?

THE ESCROW AGREEMENT

The escrow system which is being put into effect throughout the state by the FERA seems to be the logical manner of handling the relief problem, and should work out to the general benefit of relief clients.

The agreement simply means that a client who has an allotment of a certain number of hours per month may work on consecutive days until he "makes his time" allowed for that month. His time is then entered on the books as a credit for him, and he draws his pay in weekly installments until he has used up the amount allotted to him for that month.

The advantage of this arrangement for the relief worker is that he will have a better opportunity of getting other work. For instance, if he has a 48-hour allottment for the month, he may put in his time by working one full week, instead of working only a day and a half each week for a month. Thus he will have three full weeks in which to work on other jobs, provided of course, that he can find other work to do. This seems to be a sensible and practical plan and a decided improvement over the previous arrangement.

NEED MONEY FOR EXHIBIT

The people of Florida are being called upon by Governor David Sholtz to raise $30,000 in cash immediately to continue the Florida exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair. Otherwise, the exhibit will be closed on August 1st for lack of funds. In addition to the $30,000, it will be necessary that unpaid subscriptions made by various counties be turned into cash immediately.

Highlands county, always to be depended upon in doing its part, has already paid over $580 in cash as a subscription to the Florida exhibit. This donation—or more properly put, investment— was made through the board of county commissioners.

The call is now being made for Avon Park to do its part. Mayor Covington has been appointed by Governor Sholtz as chairman for Avon Park. July 10th has been set aside by proclamation as the day designated for citizens "to meet the challenge of this emergency."

Avon Park has never failed in the past. We raised over a hundred dollars for President Roosevelt in his Warm Springs Foundation campaign. All citizens who are interested in keeping the exhibit open, are invited to get in touch with Mayor Covington and assist in devising ways and means of raising at least $100 as Avon Park's part of the money needed.

Governor Sholtz concludes a letter to this paper by saying, "To lose our exhibit now would be a blot on the name and reputation of Florida, and would seriously handicap our plan for a greater season this fall and winter than the state has ever experienced."

—o—

Since Ybor City saved the chairmanship of the Naval Affairs committee for Florida, we look for the announcement most any day now, that the Atlantic fleet will be ordered to Six Mile Creek for summer maneuvers.

—o—

In a community where such unanimity of opinion prevails, as was exhibited in the Ybor City precincts, a great deal of trouble and expense could be saved by instructing the secretary "to cast a unanimous ballot" —for the highest and best bidder.

—o—

Some people laugh and joke about buying votes, but something is going to happen in this country some day to put a stop to it. The ballot must be purified, or else we are in danger of losing it, altogether.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

If somebody were to ask me to prepare a list of things we could get along without, I would head it with the Official State Campaign Book, issued according to law by Secretary Gray.

The booklet is supposed to be published and mailed to all registered voters, to acquaint them with the candidates, but instead of impartially listing all candidates with the data concerning them that voters might be interested in, it only carries advertisements of those candidates who are simple enough to pay money for them.

A check-up shows that not many of 'em pay and the only guy who enjoys the thrill of feedin' the kitty is old John Taxpayer who is soaked ten or fifteen thousand dollars for each issue.

From the standpoint of utter uselessness, I'd call it the world's best example. If some member of the next legislature really wants to do something worthwhile he might introduce a bill to abolish this bit of nonsense and save all that dough.

* * *

That "after-the-election" headache may be cured, according to a letter I just received from a friend at Daytona Beach, by attending the Volusia County Summer Frolics to be held there July 3-4-5.

An elaborate program has been arranged which includes a bathing beauty pageant, baby parade, base ball, boxing, auto races, fireworks and what have you.

I've attended several similar events in the past and am here to tell you that those folks over there sure know how to pull a swell party.

There is one other attraction which the letter didn't mention but which appeals to me even more than the bathing beauties and the fireworks.

A few miles down the beach is a place called Mosquito Inlet where a guy can toss a fishing plug in the water and get himself tankled up in the darndest argument imaginable with anything from a leapin' tarpon to a lady fish. It's no place for a Scotchman because those doggone fish will smash your rod, tear up your line and walk off with your best minnow before you know what's happened.

I've been behind in my fishin' for a long time and now that the excitement of election is over, 'Im goin' to do my best to catch up.

I've got a new minnow that wiggles along the surface like nobody's business and keeps sayin' "Come up an' see me sometime." I'm countin' on it plenty. The first HE fish I catch, I'm gonna take a picture of it and send it to Avery Powell and see if I can't break his heart.

While I don't know who we're gonna send to Washington, I do know one guy who is goin' to Daytona Beach to fish and attend the frolic. I'll be lookin' for you.

COUNTY AGENT REPORTS IMPROVED LIVE STOCK

Highlands County Said To Be Practically Free of the Fever Tick

By LOUIS ALSMEYER,
County Agent.

The trip which was made with several cattlemen to Osceola county showed very clearly the value of good blooded live stock and improved range conditions. We found that they had secured increased size in their young stock and a better quality as the result of these improvements. The half bred Devons and Herefords look very promising and another trip to that area is planned within the next month.

Cattlemen there were using the "salt sick" remedy and reported very satisfactory results. They have found that the addition of bone meal and ground oyster shells to the mixture has been profitable. Some of the cattlemen are placing steam bone meal in one half of the box and the salt sick mixture in the other half. Because of the effect of rains and excessive moisture on these materials, best results are secured when they are placed under a shelter. The bone meal is very attractive to the cattle and helps in teaching them to like the salt sick mixture.

Announcement by Dr. Peck, of the fever tick eradication forces, that most of the area of this county has been declared free of the cattle fever tick is received with considerable satisfaction by cattlemen and growers in this county. With the eradication of this parasite it is to be expected that better beef and livestock can be produced in this county and importation of livestock from other tick free areas will be less hazardous.

The pineapples growing on the J. C. Dazey place at Venus are attracting much attention and this certainly is a beautiful field of red Spanish pineapples. Highlands county was formerly a big producer of this fruit and the progress of the return of the culture of this fruit is very encouraging.

A tropical fruit which is very luscious and is cultivated extensively in China, is the litchii and the fruit is in season at this time. Fruiting trees will be found at the homes of C. R. Tyson at DeSoto City, C. S. Donaldson at Avon Park, D. D. Lewis, Sr., and at the Kenilworth Lodge at Sebring.

Federal Courts Are Upholding the Codes

Washington, June 27.—Prosecution of alleged code violators is proceeding vigorously throughout the country in Federal courts. Typical cases reported to the litigation division of NRA were as follows: In Philadelphia Harry Sley, operating a chain of 30 garages was indicted by a Federal grand jury on 58 counts for alleged failure to post labor provisions of NIRA, working employees 80 hours a week instead of 54, and paying wages of $9 instead of $15. A jury trial was set for June 25. In this case, trade-practice provisions had been suspended by the President but not the labor provisions. United States District Judge Harry B. Anderson, by consent of the defendant, issued a permanent injunction against the Automobile Sales Co., of Memphis, against further violation of the retail auto code. United States District Judge Ira Lloyd Letts, at Wilmington, fined the Clyde Mills, of Westerly, R. I., $100 for violating labor provisions of the cotton textile code. The company agreed to strict future compliance and made satisfactory settlement with its workers. United States District Judge James A. Donohoe, at Omaha, enjoined the Sutherland Lumber Co. from further violation of the retail-lumber code and continued to July 25 restraining orders against the Canfield and Micklin Lumber Cos. The Heilig Bros. Co., of York, Pa., agreed to permit their books to be audited at their expense, to post a $4,000 bond to insure payment of any back wages and to comply with the code for the fabricated-metals code. In Providence the Clover Bead & Novelty Co. made a similar settlement of its alleged violations of the medium and low-priced jewelry code. The Blue Eagle was restored to the Mann Overall Co., El Paso, Tex., on submitting proof of restitution of back wages amounting to $1,400.

Mrs. McNicholas Hostess to Club

The Wednesday Afternoon contract club was delightfully entertained Wednesday by Mrs. T. A. McNicholas at her home on Palm avenue.

The party rooms were effectively arranged with roses and colorful garden flowers. Several interesting progressions were enjoyed after which a dainty salad course was served by the hostess.

Mrs. E. E. Keller received the award for holding high score and Mrs. S. E. Booth second high.

Guests present were Mesdames C. E. Lanier, E. W. Hartt, H. F. R. Reck, S. E. Booth, P. L. Rumpsa, Jack Head, H. E. Keller, and Paul Jones. Mrs. H. E. Godwin joined the party for tea.

Legion Auxiliary Holds Meeting

The regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary was held Monday evening at the home of Mrs. R. T. Fairey, with the president, Mrs. R. Lawhon in the chair. Mrs. Fairey and Mrs. Lawhon were co-hostesses for the evening.

After the routine business was disposed of, Mrs. L. Marlin gave a most interesting report of the convention in Gainesville to which she was a delegate from Highlands unit. Mrs. Marlin brought back many new ideas that might be applied to this unit and told of many things that should be accomplished here. After her talk she presented Highlands unit with the Sixth District Membership prize of $2, which was presented to Mrs. Marlin in Gainesville by Mrs. Edith Petrey.

The president, assisted by other officers, very impressively initiated the following new members: Mrs. R. T. Fairey, Mrs. A. R. Clark and Mrs. David Stuckey.

Announcement was made by Mrs. Lawhon that the Auxiliary medal to be given to the most outstanding girl in the eighth grade, would be presented Friday night at the commencement exercises by Mrs. Rupert Smith of Arcadia.

A social hour was enjoyed with light refreshments being served by the hostesses to the following members: Mrs. T. H. Hughs, Mrs. L. Marlin, Mrs. Virginia Cloud, Mrs. D. G. Perry, Mrs. A. R. Clark, Mrs. Walter Martin, Mrs. Robert McCabe, Mrs. John Hood, Mrs. David Stuckey, Mrs. W. M. Hetherington and Miss Frances Hargrove.

Mrs. Stevens Compliments Niece

Mrs. Fred Stevens entertained a few of the younger set at her home, Saturday afternoon, complimenting her niece Miss Ruth Lee Kipp, of Pittsburg, Pa.

Roses and gladioli brightened the spacious living room where games and music contributed to the enjoyment of the young ladies.

You're The Loser

WHEN you allow Headache, Neuralgia, Muscular, Rheumatic, Sciatic or Periodic Pains to keep you from work or pleasure.

You can't go places and do things when you are suffering—and the work or good times won't wait for you.

Why allow Pain to rob you of Health, Friends, Happiness, Money?

DR. MILES ANTI-PAIN PILLS have been used for the relief of pain for more than forty years. They taste good, act quickly, do not upset the stomach, nor cause constipation, leave no dull, depressed feeling.

Thousands have used them for twenty, thirty, forty years, and still find that nothing else relieves pain so promptly and effectively.

Why don't you try them? Once you know how pleasant they are to take, how quickly and effectively they relieve, you won't want to go back to disagreeable, slow acting medicines.

I have been using Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills for thirty years. No matter what kind of pain I have, they stop it almost instantly. Never without them in the house.
Mrs. Chas. W. Webb, Indio, Calif.

You too may find quick relief. Why wait forty minutes for relief when Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills will relieve you in ten to twenty minutes?

As a household remedy I have never found anything that equalled Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. Mrs. Silas D. Keller, Penfield, Pa.

I never found anything that was so good to stop pain as Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. I have told many about them and I find they are all using them. Mrs. Martha Lacy, Davenport, Iowa

I have been using Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills for years. I keep them on hand all the time. I can certainly recommend them for pain. Miss Audra Seybold, 2417 W. 2nd St., Dayton, Ohio

Your Anti-Pain Pills have been a wonderful help to me. I have used them for three years and always keep them on hand. Mrs. E. Pierce, Lapwai, Idaho

I have used quite a lot of Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. They are fine pills to stop pain. Mrs. J. L. Kester, Shickshinny, Pa.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A very dilapidated old man presented himself at a hospital for dogs and cats and asked the porter to take him in.

"You can't come in here," said the porter brusquely.

"Oh, yes, I can," said the old fellow, "I'm an old soldier."

"But that don't make any difference," said the porter, "this is a veterinary hospital."

"That's right," said the old soldier serenely, "I'm a veteran."

Foxy Idea

SIMPLE FROCK THAT ACCENTS SMARTNESS

PATTERN 9069

A simple frock is just a simple frock unless it is cleverly cut—and then it becomes one of the smartest things a woman can wear in summer. Put clever your design with the greatest care—remember it will have no help from frills or furbelows. To be dead certain of getting something chic, you cannot do better than this model with its smart and becoming neck and its well fitting panels. It is, by the way, a wonderful style for slimming the figure. Use cotton or linen for chic results.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Pattern 9069 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 34, 36, 30 and 40. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for the pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER AND SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York City.

WE KNOW THEM, TOO

Smart was looking rather puzzled.

"Tell me, old fellow," he said to a friend, "have you ever heard of such a thing as cold embers?"

The friend shook his head vigorously.

"Never," he replied. "There can't be such a thing."

Smart smiled artfully.

"Oh, yes, there is," he replied. "November and December—they're cold enough, aren't they?"

Behind the Times

Uncle is coming to lunch and the bride provides asparagus, an unwonted luxury in February. Uncle eats it as if it is nothing.

Bride—But, uncle, what do you think of asparagus in February?

Uncle—Um, that is nothing. Why, way out in Little Slowcombe we had it eight months ago.—Fliegende Blaetter (Munich).

Another Arms Row

Jane—I understand now why these disarm movements don't make much of a hit.

Wayne—What put you wise?

Jane—My parents called me into a conference last night to discuss the idea of my permitting fewer arms around me—and that one broke up in a row, too.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Tips

"Can the stock market be regulated?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax, "but you'll never stop speculation. You can't keep lambs from taking tips any more than you can hotel waiters."

More Important

THEY SOWED THE SEEDS OF LIBERTY

KING HENDRICK

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

FRANKLIN'S SNAKE CARTOON

SIR WILLIAM JOHNSON

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON JULY 4 the American people will celebrate the one hundred sixty-eighth anniversary of the event which won them their liberty—the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. On that day, officially called Independence day, but better known as the "Fourth of July," they will honor the memory of those "99 immortals" who signed the document in which they held certain "truths to be self-evident," in which they did "solemnly publish and declare that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states" and in which "for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence," they did "mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

We know the names of most of them—the men who took the first decisive step toward winning independence and forming a new nation. But how many Americans know the names of other men who, many years before, had sowed the seeds of that liberty and of that new nation? How many of us know of Robert Livingston who, as early as 1701, was proposing colonial co-operation and a colonial union? And to how many of us does the name of Teoniahagarawe, or King Hendrick, a chief of the Mohawk Indians, have any significance in the struggle for liberty? It is with these two men, but more particularly with King Hendrick, and with the events which foreshadowed the Declaration that this article deals.

Although the British Crown encouraged the idea of a colonial union to aid in its struggle with France for mastery of North America, the colonies paid little heed to such an idea coming from the Mother country and either disregarded or evaded directly her appeals to them to contribute to the conduct of the wars. So it seemed that the only possibility for co-operative effort lay in voluntary action on the part of the colonies. Sensing this fact, Robert Livingston, a leading merchant of New York who was much interested in opening up the rich resources of the back country, came forward with a plan of colonial union in 1701.

Livingston realized that the colony of New York alone could not carry out his ambitious scheme of development so in a long letter, dated May 13, 1701, he laid before the British Council of Trade and Plantations his scheme for uniting the colonies in "one form of government," divided into three groups, a New England, a central and a northern. Each year there was to be raised from this government a certain sum of money which would be administered from Albany by a board of commissioners selected from each of the groups.

The Crown was to send troops and equipment and the three groups were to supply labor, under a quota arrangement, for building and garrisoning forts which were to be built in the wilderness to protect settlers who were to be encouraged to take up lands in the West. Every two years the British government was to send out "two hundred youths" as replacements for 200 of the soldiers who were to be mustered out of service but who, if they would remain in the country, were to receive free land.

It was an excellent scheme and the British Crown was quick to realize its advantages. But, as usual, a lack of co-operation among the colonies prevailed and nothing came of Livingston's plan. For another half century they went their separate ways. By the middle of the Eighteenth century the menace of French expansion in the West and the tightening of their alliance with the Indians began to alarm the colonies seriously. In 1753 young George Washington, sent by Virginia to the Ohio country to warn the French away from this region claimed by the British, returned with their flat refusal to go.

Then Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia sent Captain Trent and his backwoodsmen to build a fort at the forks of the Monongahela, but before they could finish their work the French drove Trent away.

On May 9, 1754, the Pennsylvania Gazette of Philadelphia contained an account of Trent's surrender of the fort and predicted that unless something were done, the French would "kill, take and imprison our Traders and confiscate their Effects at Pleasure (as they have done for several Years past), murder and scalp our Farmers, with their Wives and Children, and take an easy Possession of such parts of the better Territory as they find most convenient for them: which if they are permitted to do, must end in the Destruction of the British Interest, Trade and Plantations in America."

Along with this appeal for concerted action there appeared in the Gazette the first real cartoon ever published in the Colonies, by Benjamin Franklin. It showed a dismembered snake each part labeled with the initials of one of the colonies, and under it the motto "Join, or Die."

Later Franklin's graphic portrayal of the urgent necessity for colonial union was reprinted in other papers throughout the colonies, who soon had an opportunity to put into practical effect the lesson which it taught but who, as usual, muffed the chance. That was at the famous Albany congress of 1754. For as George M. Wrong, author of the volume "The Conquest of New France" in "The Chronicles of America" series, says: "The English colonists showed a political blindness that amounted to imbecility. Albany was the central point from which the dangers on all sides might best be surveyed. Here came together in the summer of 1754 delegates from seven of the colonies to consider the common peril. The French were busy in winning, as they did, the support of the many Indian tribes of the West; and the old allies of the English, the Iroquois, were nervous for their own safety.

"The delegates to Albany, tied and bound by instructions from their assemblies, had to listen to plain words from the savages. The one Englishman who, in dealing with the Indians, had tact and skill equal to that of Frontenac of old was an Irishman, Sir William Johnson. To him the Iroquois made indignant protests that the English were as ready as the French to rob them of their lands. . . ."

Outstanding among these native orators who spoke such plain words to the delegates was Teoniahgarawe or King Hendrick of the Mohawks. Although he is not so well known to most Americans as that other Mohawk leader, Thayendanegen or Joseph Brant, Hendrick was one of the most important Indian figures in colonial history. He was born about 1672 near the present site of Westfield, Mass. Although he was the son of a Mohegan of the Wolf clan, his mother was a Mohawk woman, so he became a member of the latter tribe. Some time between 1690 and 1692 Teoniahgarawe was converted to Christianity by a Dutch preacher named Godefridus Dellius and given the name of Hendrick Peters, later shortened to Hendrick.

As a Christian preacher and a natural leader, Hendrick rapidly rose to a position of prominence among the Mohawks as an orator and a councillor. After the failure of General Nicholson's expedition against Canada during Queen Anne's war, the provincial authorities of New York became fearful that the Iroquois might join forces with the French. To prevent this and to gain more active support from the Mother country in carrying on the war, Col. Peter Schuyler decided to make a journey to England and to take with him several Iroquois leaders. Hendrick was one of the five chosen to go and in April, 1710, Schuyler and his Iroquois delegation arrived in London where they were received with great ceremony as "native kings" of the Five Nations of the Iroquois confederacy.

Upon their return to America King Hendrick took an active part in the preparations for the campaign against the French, but the Treaty of Utrecht ended the war before any important results were accomplished. From that time on Hendrick was much in the limelight as a war leader of his people but more as an orator and a frequent speaker at councils with the provincial authorities in Albany. For a time he was swayed toward the cause of the French, but the influence of Sir William Johnson, with whom he later became such a firm friend, kept him loyal to the English.

During the negotiations with the Iroquois, at the Albany congress Hendrick was the chief speaker for the Indians. In answer to charges that the Iroquois were leaning to the French, he replied hotly: "You have asked us the reason of our being driven like leaves before the wind. The reason is because of your neglect of us these three years past. You have thrown us behind your back and disregarded us, whereas the French are always turning this way and that, with their eyes ever upon the trail, ever using their utmost endeavors every day, walking softly like the wolf in winter to seduce and bring our people over to them. 'Tis your fault, brethren, that we are not strengthened by conquest, for we would have gone and taken Crown Point but you hindered us. We had concluded to go and take it, but we were told it was too late and that the ice would not bear us; instead of this, you burnt your own forts at Seraghtoga and run away from it, which was a shame and a scandal to you. Look about your country and see. You have no fortifications about you, no, not even to this city. Look at the French. They are men. They are fortifying everywhere. But we are ashamed to say it, you are all like women—weak and defenseless."

But this stinging indictment of the faltering military policy of the English was overshadowed in importance by another of Hendrick's speeches at the congress. It was delivered on July 4, 1754, and in it he anticipated by 22 years to the day some of the ideas expressed in the Declaration of Independence. He said:

"Brethren, it is very true, as you told us, that the clouds hang heavy over us and it is not very pleasant to look up; but we give this belt to clear away all the clouds, that we may all live in bright sunlight, and keep together in strict union and friendship. Then we shall become strong and nothing can hurt us.

"Brethren! I will just tell you what a people we were formerly. If any enemies arose against us, we had no occasion to lift up our whole hand against them, for our little finger was sufficient; and as we have now made a strong confederacy if we are truly in earnest therein, we may retrieve the ancient glory of the Five Nations."

It is easy to imagine how attentively one delegate to that congress listened to the words of the Mohawk chieftain as he told of the ancient power of the Iroquois confederacy, a power gained so many years before because these "savages" realized that "in union there is strength" and put that realization into practical effect. That delegate was Benjamin Franklin of Pennsylvania, who had in his pocket a plan for a union of the colonies which he had brought from Philadelphia with him.

His plan provided for the appointment of a president-general for the colonies, appointed by the Crown, and the election by the various colonial assemblies of a legislative body to be called the grand council. The powers which they were to exercise resembled in many ways those conferred upon the President and congress by our federal Constitution. The delegates to the Albany congress unanimously adopted Franklin's plan, but it was defeated when brought to a vote in the colonial assemblies.

So the colonies and the Mother country turned deaf ears to the wisdom that came from the lips of such men as King Hendrick of the Mohawks and Benjamin Franklin of Pennsylvania and went back to their policy of "blundering through." They blundered seriously several times in the campaign against Crown Point the next year. One of their blunders was in disregarding the advice of King Hendrick who had led his Mohawks to aid his friend, Sir William Johnson, who commanded the expedition.

When it was proposed to send a detachment of 1,000 troops and 300 Indians to the aid of besieged Fort Edward, the Mohawk chief objected. "If they are to fight, they are too few," he said, "if they are to die, they are too many." But the council of war overrode him. Then when it was proposed to send the detachment against the enemy in three parties, Hendrick again preached his message of "in union there is strength." Picking up three sticks from the ground, he said: "Put these together and you cannot break them; take them one by one and you will do it easily."

But again his advice was disregarded and the detachment started against the gallant and able commander, Dieskau. The result was the ambush at Bloody Pond, the defeat of the colonials with the loss of 100 men, including the leader of the detachment, Col. Ephraim Williams, and stout old Hendrick. His horse was shot down at the first volley and before he could extricate himself a French bayonet pierced his heart.

So the great Mohawk died before he could see his English allies blunder through the French and Indian war to a successful conclusion. But he had repeated "in union there is strength" was not utterly lost. Another man who had preached the same message at the Albany congress continued to preach it—through his snake cartoon, through his writings and in his speeches in the Continental congress. So Benjamin Franklin lived to see it become an accomplished fact. He helped write a pledge to such a union in the Declaration of Independence and even though during the dark days of the Revolution the bonds of that union seemed about to be broken, they survived long enough to win American liberty. But before he died he saw that union imperishably preserved in the Constitution of the United States of America.

Nothing Short of Murder

By J. T. BARBER

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

FOR the seventh time, Marcella Kensington was on the point of asking the hand of Lieut. Michael Faraday, but she was interrupted, as usual, by some police business and she was modest enough to be glad of it. It was b—l to be in love with a big handsome slow-witted Adonis who did not seem to know that as a woman you require more than polite attention.

"What in the world makes you think that you're a good policeman, my dear? Why, Michael, you never see anything." It wasn't the most gentle of hints.

But Michael only laughed at such nonsense. He said to her, "Rats, I can tell you everything you have on." And with that he swung about with his back to her.

"You're wearing," he said, "a bright blue velvet turban—and a scarf to match. And you have a blue and yellow coat with diagonal stripes. Now then—there are blue gloves and blue kid sandals. And your red hair's just been barbered. There! How's that?"

"Huh," Marcella almost snarled. "What's observation to a man like you but the knack of selling superficialities? I thought policemen had to see inside of people to get the real truth of things."

"You're telling me!" said Lieutenant Faraday. "Say, it's the heart that tells the story. Look at their hearts, if you can, every time."

"Using brass knuckles or a piece of rubber hose?" Marcella asked, looking at him hopelessly.

Lieutenant Faraday merely smiled at her. "That reminds me," he said (that was where the police business interrupted them), "I've a bit of a third degree to give a guy. Understand we're not calling it that, but I guess that's what it is. So you'll have to excuse me now," said Michael rising from his office chair.

"Is it," asked Marcella timidly, ignoring the braggart in him, "that cold little man they brought in as I came up?"

Michael nodded generously. "Yes," he said. "They think he's implicated in the killing of an old roadstand keeper. But we haven't anything on him at all."

"Then why," Marcella was puzzled, "are you holding him?"

"Observation," said Michael professionally. "We'll hold him awhile and maybe we'll get a clew. You see, right now I'm going to take him out to the old man's place and have him look at the—ah, the victim."

Marcella had too good sense to interfere with Michael's business and so she didn't ask to go along. She just stood for ten and minutes on the police station steps and he hadn't the heart to desert her. He took her with him.

The dead man and his slayer faced each other in the engulfing silence of the death chamber.

Marcella looked at Michael for strength, but he was staring at the cold little man as if trying to remember what he looked like.

Michael never moved, just stood there in the same position, watching. Marcella inspected the little man more closely, more alertly as she seemed to notice a movement on his neck like the flickering of a shadow—only, it was too regular and far too fast to be a shadow. There, where the veins and chords stood out on his scrawny neck, Marcella saw a pulse beating wildly.

Convulsively she squeezed the lieutenant's arm. Michael merely nodded and held up a warning finger. Silently he watched the pulse beat faster, faster. Then quite abruptly he said in a normal tone, "You're a cool one, Burton!" And he waited for the man to start his crooked, confident smile. "But what's the matter with your neck?" Michael said rapidly. "Your heart's beating too fast, Burton. Your heart is giving you away, killer!"

The cool little man was trying frantically off-guard, to close his collar and there was a mad stucato of questions from a half dozen detectives who suddenly stampeded into the room. Then came the little man's confession.

• • • • • • •

In the car and headed for home, Marcella felt quite well enough to talk about how Lieutenant Faraday had discovered that pulse beat and had known how to interpret it.

"It was swell," she said, putting her hand into one of his and trusting that—the police chauffeur would continue to mind his own business. "See," she added, "if you can feel my pulse and discover what my deepest secret is." And she looked at him with eyes that had all faith in them.

Lieutenant Faraday accepted the hand professionally. And he gave it some thought, too. But suddenly embarrassed, for no apparent reason, he handed it back to her and, too forcibly, Marcella stood her ground and refused to accept it.

"I can't make anything out of it," he said in a most unpoliceman-like tone.

Marcella held her hand firmly, not too firmly, where it was. And then she had a happy thought.

"Well," she said, smiling up at him encouragingly, "just hold it awhile, maybe you'll get a clew."

Time Worth Only What It Confers

Those Moments of Leisure Not to Be Counted as Wasted.

"Is there no time you can reclaim from pleasure that really does not give you much pleasure, from empty talk at the club, from inferior plays, from doubtfully enjoyable week-ends or not very profitable trips? Do you realize the value of minutes? A man had a wife who always kept him waiting a few minutes before dinner. After a time it occurred to him that eight or ten lines could be written during this interval and he had a paper and ink laid in a convenient place."

One of the most deeply appreciated of our American women writers, to whose attention the foregoing was called, sees the matter from another angle. She says:

"This dopiorer of 'wasted time' goes on to tell all this man accomplished, over a period of years, in those few minutes a day. A readerent me the quotation with the remark that all young people ought to read it, that they would get so much more out of life if they did not waste so much time.

"At the risk of being misunderstood, I am not going to agree. I think we have already heard so much about the value of time, the dangers of wasting it, the benefits of conserving it, and what can be accomplished by salvaging those few minutes here and there—so much that we are in danger of forgetting that time was made for living, not life to save time.

"Time, like money, is only worth what we get out of it. And I see so many people in this hectic day so preoccupied with the matter of getting the most out of their time that they are not living at all.

"It is right that young people should be taught the pity of waste in time as in anything else—the folly of not taking advantage of the opportunities open to them in their formative years for mental and bodily growth, of heedlessly for some foolish pleasures, turning their backs on the benefits that are open to them.

"But there is a time for work and a time for play. And the constant preoccupation with snatching for profit every leisure moment begrudging time given to real leisure, is, to my mind, the source of many nervous and physical ills. I have seen high-strung young people who had been impressed with the idea of accounting for every minute, restless and nervous at wholesome recreations. I have seen them unable to really rest, because their minds, always on the minutes, could not be attuned to relaxation. They had been taught that rest can be achieved merely by a change of occupation. The thing to be avoided as the plague was to do nothing!

"Knowing full well the condemnation I may be bringing upon my head, I must say sincerely that one of the lessons I have learned from many years which never lost sight of the value of a minute, is that one of the most wholesome, healthful and constructive things we can do with some leisure minutes, is just doing nothing!"

Japanese Nation Not Guided by Aristocrats

Japan today, says Current History, present the phenomenon of a staunchly monarchist country with its leadership drawn from the ranks of the humble. Of the six or more men who now dominate the scene, only one—Prince Kimmochi Saionji, the elder statesman—was born an aristocrat.

Premier Makoto Saito, son of a retainer of a feudal lord, was once a page in a government office. Gen. Sadao Araki, the war minister, began at a little soybean sauce factory. The finance minister, Viscount Korekiyo Takahashi, born of a poor court artist and a parlor maid, first worked as a cupbearer at a Buddhist temple and then as an indentured farm laborer in California. ... stoncutter was the father of Koki Hirota, foreign minister, while Mitsuru Toyama, the leader of the most notorious of the reactionary ronin bands, was still poorer.

No less remarkable is the fact that most of these active leaders of a youthfully vigorous people are advanced in age. Only Araki and Hirota are younger than three-score and ten.

FORMER RESIDENTS OF FLORIDA ENTERTAINED

Guests Partake of Rattlesnake Meat and Declare It Good

The members of the Rattling Reptile Revelers club, connected with the Florida exhibit at the Century of Progress, recently entertained a score or more members of the club living in Chicago, or who are here attending the World's Fair, with a "Snake-Snack" dinner in one of the private dining rooms on the roof of the Wilson concession in the Foods Building.

The hosts of the occasion were, E. J. Bugg, Miss Myrabeth Reece, daughter of Nate Reece, editor of the Arcadia Arcadian, Mackey W. White, Miss Harriette Whiddon, Charles Kimble, Miss Kae Gafney, John Colvard and Miss Elizabeth Brown.

While the meat course consisted of some of Wilson & Company's well known products the piece de resistance of the dinner, as the French would say, was a rattlesnake salad with datil dressing.

The first course of the dinner was a fruit salad made up of mangoes, avocadoes, gunnabanas, sapotes, sapodillos and monsterios deliciosas, all from the tropical fruit display at the Florida exhibit. The dessert was papaya ice cream, also from the juice bar of the Florida exhibit.

The rattlesnake salad with datil dressing was pronounced a great delicacy by the guests of the evening, all of whom have been winter visitors in Florida and have spent some time in Arcadia, the town which made rattlesnake meat famous as a national delicacy.

MANY FAIR VISITORS INQUIRE ABOUT RIDGE

First Results of Scenic Highlanders Advertising Campaign Are Obtained

The first results obtained by the Scenic Highlanders in their effort to advertise this section of the state at the Chicago fair was realized this week when a list of names, was received in Sebring, of fair visitors who have expressed themselves as being especially interested in the ridge section of the state.

The list is compiled by Mr. Hughes, the representative of the Scenic Highlanders, who is on duty at the fair every day answering inquiries about this section and compiling a list of names and addresses of real prospective future residents or visitors.

The list received this week contains the names and addresses of 28 persons who requested information about hotels and general information that the average tourist wishes to know. The list also contains the names of 16 people who are interested in a home in the Scenic Highlands, which is one family for each community along the ridge and two to spare.

Citizens of the Ridge who have stressed the importance of the unexcelled fishing possibilities of our lakes and streams and their attraction to visitors and permanent residents will be gratified to learn that 15 of those especially inquiring about the Scenic Highlands were primarily interested in fishing.

Of the 11 remaining names on the list three were interested in grove property, two in business opportunities, others in poultry farm, truck farming, dairying, resort property and general farming.

The list will be on file at the Chamber of Commerce for those wishing to use it and as other lists come in they will also be filed with the Chamber of Commerce for the benefit of members, it has been stated.

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION MAY NOT BE VOTED ON

Court Action Brought In Attempt To Block Passage of Amendment

Tallahassee, June 28.—(FNS)—At the present time the inclusion of the Homestead Tax Exemption Amendment to the Constitution on the November general election ballot, seems uncertain.

Last week an injunction suit was brought to restrain Secretary of State Robert A. Gray from publishing the proposed Amendment in newspapers as required by law. The suit contended that the proposed Amendment would be unconstitutional and that publication of it would be an unnecessary expenditure of public funds. The state argued that the injunction application was premature.

Circuit Judge J. B. Johnson granted the injunction forbidding the spending of state funds in advertising the proposed amendment, after counsel arguments lasting three hours.

Immediately after Judge Johnson granted the injunction the attorney general's office made application for a supersedeas order withholding the injunction from effectiveness pending a decision by the Supreme Court.

If the Supreme Court upholds the ruling of Judge Johnson, the proposed Amendment will not be voted on in the general election. The hearing is set for this week.

Proponents of the resolution, which was adopted by the 1933 Legislature to exempt homesteads up to a valuation of $5,000 from all taxation other than special assessments for benefits, are confident it will survive court attacks and be placed before the voters in November for their adoption or rejection.

Avon Park Scouts In Camp Next Week Near Auburndale

Members of Avon Park's Boy Scout Troop No. 57 will spend next week at Camp Flaming Arrow at Auburndale. The boys will leave Sunday for a week of recreation and instruction at one of the best equipped Boy Scout camps in the country. Scoutmaster George Hayes will be in charge of the contingent.

Those planning to make the trip include: Ed Touchton, James Tuten, Buddy Trent, Vernon Lanier, Herbert Reck, Ryland Reck, Billie Engelmann, Jorge Elwell, Donald Todd, Thomas Hobbs, J. L. Greene, J. H. Bryant, Peyton Covington, Herman Bowman and Ed Greene.

Flaming Arrow camp will offer its usual full program of activity. The water front will provide opportunity for boys to learn how to swim and to pass their junior red cross life saving. There are sufficient boats and canoes to make it possible for those boys who are qualified to make trips through the series of lakes, upon which the camp is located. Both canoeing and rowing merit badges may be earned. There will be a swimming meet as well as boat and canoe races on Thursday afternoon.

Under the direction of M. Moran, there will be a study of the natural life in and about the camp. There will be bird study classes every morning, and it is hoped that those boys who are interested will work to develop the nature trailed, which has already been laid out. Scouts may advance in merit, badge and other work during the week under the direction of the experienced counselors and scouts.

The camp has been recently inspected both by the state board of health, by the National Council, the Boy Scouts of America and by Mr. Kenneth Guernsey of Orlando, who is a member of the Regional Committee of Boy Scouts. All of these officials have not only approved of the camp site, its equipment, and its program and sanitation, but they have all been highly complimentary.

"Vanities" Lavish Musical Extravaganza at Avon

There have been many musical and backstage pictures; and there have been equally as many films dealing with the diabolical designs of fiendish murderers; but Paramount brings to the screen the first picture combining the two.

"Murder at the Vanities," the film version of Earl Carroll's successful current-season stage hit, coming to the Avon theatre Sunday and Monday mixes music and mystery for the first time.

With eleven of Earl Carroll's beauties, Carl Brisson, noted continental and English screen and stage star, Victor McLaglen, Jack Oakie, Kitty Carlisle, and Duke Ellington and his former orchestra, "Murder at the Vanities" tells of the premiere of a brand new musical show. The two stars, Brisson and Miss Carlisiie, late in arriving bring news that they are to be married.

Gertrude Michael, jealous, vows to get even with Brisson. Later when the wardrobe mistress meets Brisson, it is evident she is his mother. No one knows this but Miss Michael. Once a famous opera star, his mother is wanted in Vienna for murder. The jealous girl know this too.

To prevent further trouble from her, a hired detective is detailed to watch her. Then, while the orchestra is gaily playing and the girls are dancing and singing to a throng of first-nighters, the sinister hand of a murderer stalks backstage.

Two crimes are committed. McLaglen, sure-shot detective is called, and the manner in which he solves the unique situation while the musical show goes on is both thrilling and entertaining.

$100,000 FOR SCHOOLS AVAILABLE ON JULY 1ST

Total State Aid For Schools Past Fiscal Year $5,003,187

Tallahassee, June 28.—(FNS)—Another promise has been fulfilled and Florida's schools will get their promised $5,000,000 state-aid for the fiscal year closing Saturday, Governor Sholtz announced today, upon receipt of Comptroller Lee's report that funds are available for another distribution to the schools totaling over $100,000.

Checks will be sent out Friday or Saturday, Comptroller Lee advised. Even if no more school funds roll in from his tax collection drive the distribution will bring the total of state aid to the schools to $5,003,187. It probably will be some higher, as every day sees tax collectors reporting an almost unprecedented response to the comptroller's appeal to the taxpayers.

Comptroller Lee also advised that the prospects are exceedingly bright for balancing the state's budget, though it will require the collections for the remainder of this month, which will be mailed by all tax collectors Saturday night.

Up to June 5, when the last distribution of state school funds was sent to the various counties, the state had contributed $4,897,665, according to figures in the comptroller's office.

Of this total $395,128 came from the one-mill advalorem tax on real estate, $133,903 from the common school interest fund, $3,968,548 from automobile license tags, $395,162 from the beverage tax, and $1,022 from an old time levy of a quarter mill.

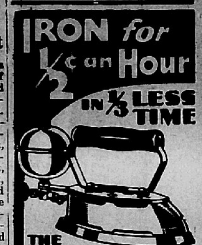

At the time Comptroller Lee issued his appeal to tax payers, Governor Sholtz called upon the auto tag and beverage tax departments to join the drive to bring in tax payments before the close of the year and both have piled up their share of the "pot" necessary to put the school appropriation "over the top."

Continued Gains In Re-employment

Washington, June 27.—Additions to factory forces and reopening of long-closed plants mark decided improvement in re-employment, especially in the summer season. Typical of reopenings are the following: Bushnell Tile & Manufacturing Co.'s Massena, N. Y., plant, closed since 1932, with several hundred workmen; Lukens Steel plant, Coatsville, Pa., closed in April 1932, with initial force of 130; Norad Mill, Brynthorville, Mass., idle since 1930, started up with 150 employees. A number of large cotton-textile mills, North and South, and many small lumber and other industrial plants, have resumed operations in widely scattered sections. The Pennsylvania Railroad recalled 8,500 furloughed employees in mid-June. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.'s Winston-Salem factory added 725 new workers. Madison, Wis., reported factory pay-roll increase of 30.9 percent over 1933, and 120.2 percent over corresponding period in 1932. Youngstown, Ohio, mills ordered $8,000,000 worth of equipment which will keep 2,000 machinists in Pittsburgh busy 14 months. The Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. launched $5,000,000 shipbuilding program estimated to require 2,100 busy a year. Toledo, Ohio, reported May employment gain 5.1 percent above April. Pennsylvania Labor Department announced increased employment in 40 of 66 industries in State during May. Virginia Industrial Commission reported improved employment in that State for 13 consecutive months.

Beef cattle strains bred at the Florida Experiment Station have produced meat surpassing in quality much of the product brought in from elsewhere, thus forecasting a tremendously enlarged local output when the ticks have been driven out.

Every Conceivable Force
WORKED TO TEAR THESE TIRES TO PIECES

But NOT ONE CORD LOOSENED! NOT ONE TREAD SEPARATED! Not one Blowout!

As thirty-three speed demons careened and slid around the steep banked curves of the hot brick track, tires shrieked and smoked . . . break-neck speeds, 150 miles and more down the straightaway — tremendous centrifugal force tugging to rip the tread from the body of the tire. In fact, every conceivable force worked to tear the tire to pieces, but not one cord loosened —not one tread separated —and not a single blowout. What amazing proof of Tire Strength—Safety—Quality and Dependability!

Every one of the thirty-three drivers at the Indianapolis 500-mile sweepstakes chose and bought Firestone High Speed Tires. The fact that not one of the 132 tires failed is your greatest guarantee of the Extra Safety — Strength — and Dependability built into Firestone Tires.

The New Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 is Safety-Protected on the outside by a wider tread of flatter contour, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage — Safety-Protected on the inside by eight additional pounds of pure rubber absorbed by every 100 pounds of cords. This additional rubber surrounds every cotton fiber inside every cord in every ply. This is accomplished by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping.

FERA TO MAKE SURVEY OF NEEDY FARMERS HERE

Laying Plans for "Back to Land" Movement For All Interested

SARASOTA, July 5. (Special)—Preliminary survey to determine the number of experienced farmers available for work on rehabilitation projects—men who are either now on farms or have the experience and desire to return to the soil—will get under way in region eight of the Florida Emergency Relief Administration this week.

This announcement was made here today by C. K. Dodd, regional administrator, who said that W. A. Manning, regional agricultural agent, and his assistants in each of the eight counties in this region would interview those relief clients who have listed farming as their occupation.

Those clients who have previously indicated experience in farming will be interviewed and will be notified when and where to report for such interviews. Relief clients who might have the training but who have not listed it with the county FERA office and are not notified to report for an interview are asked to request an appointment through the local FERA office, Dodd said.

Dodd made it plain that he was making no promise of any rehabilitation program for this region, but was merely making a survey to determine just what the possibilities were so that he could make definite recommendations to the state headquarters. This survey will be followed up by an actual physical survey of the farms to determine an estimate of the total cost of putting on the rehabilitation program in this region, he said. The final survey will not be restricted to relief clients.

This movement is another step in the program of the FERA to make clients self-sustaining and remove them from the relief rolls as fast as possible. When a farm is rehabilitated and the farmer and his family given a start they will be expected to do their share in this "back to the land" movement. Expert advice on soil, planting, cultivation, harvesting, processing, preserving, and treatment of the products will be available for those who might need such training.

Any man in region eight who might be interested in the program is urged by Dodd to immediately call upon the county agricultural agent at the local FERA offices for an interview, it was said.

Unidentified Man Buried Wednesday

Monday afternoon Probation Officer Sam Dimberline received a call from here that a destitute man who had registered at a hotel here as O. N. Poffin was in a serious condition and needed hospitilization. Mr. Dimberline had the man moved to the Martin hospital. He was unconscious when he arrived and never regained consciousness, dying of complications at four o'clock Wednesday morning. He was buried by the county in the afternoon of the 4th.

The deceased had nothing on his person to indicate where he was from or his identity.

He had a round scar on his left arm about one inch below the elbow thought to have been caused by a gun shot wound, a scar on left eyebrow also thought to have been caused by a bullet and a small hole over pelvic cavity which had not healed which Mr. Dimberline stated was also probably caused by a bullet.

The deceased was about 35 years of age, had dark brown eyes, black hair, three teeth in upper jaw, a full set of teeth in lower jaw, was about six feet tall and weighed about 140 pounds.

Mr. Dimberline had pictures made of the deceased before burial was made.

Dr. Judah to Preach

Dr. J. A. Judah of Bowling Green and formerly pastor of the Avondale Baptist church at Jacksville, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church here Sunday at both the morning and evening services. Dr. Judah is a very forceful speaker and a large congregation is expected to hear him.

William Dart Passed Away Thursday Morning; Burial in North

William H. Dart, 84, passed away at his residence here on Thursday morning at 4:30 o'clock. He owned and operated Dart's Camp near Big Moose, N. Y., for a number of years and was a celebrated hunter and guide in his home state. He and his wife came to Avon Park in 1894 and spent their winters here up to about 12 years ago when they resided here permanently. He was an extensive property owner here, being interested in several excellent groves.

Mrs. Dart passed away on March 16, 1932. There survive one daughter, Mrs. Emma J. Lesure of Dart's Camp, N. Y., three grandsons, a sister, Mrs. E. J. Rawlings of Rupert, Idaho and two brothers, Leroy and Lowe Dart, both of Los Angeles, Calif.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at four o'clock at the funeral parlors of Stephenson & Blythe. The body will be shipped north that evening for interment in the cemetery at Big Moose, N. Y.

Casket bearers will be Col. C. R. Head, D. F. Canfield, Fred M. Smith, D. G. Ferry, K. J. Bailey, and Demos Mandis.

Make Survey Of Citrus Crop

FERA To Furnish Men To Estimate Possible Citrus Production

Orlando, July 5.—Work on the state-wide citrus survey will get under way in St. Lucie and Indian River counties during the latter part of this week, Secretary O. G. Strauss of the Florida Control committee announced at his Orlando office.

The survey will be carried out by FERA personnell and with FERA funds, but will be supervised jointly by the control board and the crop estimate bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Soon after work is started in the two lower east coast counties, workers will be sent to other parts of the citrus belt. There will be one supervisor to eight enumerators. Every grove in the state will be included in the survey.

Those workers who will find jobs in the citrus survey are those who are now listed on relief rolls.

Growers are expected to give full co-operation to the survey forces for the reason that the check up will result in a fairer and more equitable prorate of citrus shipments for the 1934-35 season, according to Secretary Strauss, who termed the coming changes in prorating arrangements a "new deal" for the growers of Florida.

Crop estimators of the department of Agriculture will use the figures amassed in the survey in making individual estimates of the citrus crop in individual groves. This final estimate will be made in October. Growers will be issued certificates, showing the amount of fruit they have in their groves.

Eventually these certificates will be transferred to shippers and will form the basis of the whole prorate on citrus this coming season. With these grower certificates each shipper can show exactly how much fruit he has under control.

It is expected the information gathered in the big survey will be of great worth for years to come. Each owner will be listed, manager of the grove, etc., together with information regarding acreage of each grove, number of trees, varieties and similar data.

The survey has been worked out by a sub-committee of the Florida Control committee, consisting of A. W. Young, Vero Beach, chairman; I. A. Yarnell, Lake Wales; Francis P. Whitehair, Deland; and Secretary O. G. Strauss, Orlando. It is expected work will be finished in August.

Expects to Enter Business Here Soon

L. A. Boulay of Columbus, Ohio who was visiting here the past week end plans to become connected here in business in the near future, it was learned Thursday. Mr. Boulay is an engineer of note and a veteran of both the Spanish American and World wars. He has travelled the entire state and prefers the ridge section. He was director of highways and public works in his home state for six years and has also been engaged in engineering work in the Phillipines, China and other foreign countries.

Avon Pioneer Passes Away

E. O. Williams Died Monday; Masonic Rites Held at Grave

After three months of confining illness and severe suffering at the last, E. O. Williams passed away soon after midnight July 2nd, in his 81st year, at his home on Lake Lotela. The memorial service was held in the Union Congregational church at 4 p. m., conducted by the pastor, Dr. A. P. Vaughn. The old hymns that he had especially loved, "Nearer My God To Thee," "Abide With Me" and "Crossing the Bar," were sung by members of the church choir. The Leigh Chapter of O. E. S. and the Masonic orders attended in a body, the Commandery furnishing an escort and the Blue Lodge conducting the interment at Bougainvillea cemetery. The pall bearers, his personal friends, were D. F. Canfield, Chas. Shepherd, Dr. A. H. Able, Harry Dilley, J. R. Bennett and Max Wild. The presence of a large representation of the community at the service, and the many gifts of flowers from organizations and individuals, attested the respect in which he was held by all.

Edwin Osman Williams was born August 4, 1853 at Franklin, Mass., living in that vicinity until his 24th year. He was married to Abbie J. Ripley of Medway, Mass., May 23, 1877, the couple making their home in Taunton, Mass., he being engaged in machine design. In 1886 he organized the New Process Twist Drill Co., and three years later went with the Campbell Press Co., as draughtsman. In 1893 he began work with the Altham Motor Co., in experimental construction of steam turbine and automobile engines. In 1902 he organized the Lincoln & Williams Twist Drill Co., and for 15 years developed and managed it as an important and successful manufacturing enterprise.

In August, 1906, Mrs. Williams passed away, and on Sept. 8, 1908, he married Blanche G. Cooper, who with an adopted daughter and a step son, survives him.

He retired from business in 1917 and with Mrs. Williams moved to Avon Park Oct. 16, 1918. Here he made considerable investments in grove and other properties, was a stockholder and director in one of the local banks, and in other business enterprises. Partially disabled in body for the few years past, and with his marvelous vitality failing at last during the final illness, he passed away July 2nd, aged 80 years, 10 months and 28 days.

He was past master of Alfred Baylier Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Taunton, Mass.; member of the Royal Arch Masons, and of Holyrood Commandery, Avon Park; past patron of Rose Croix Chapter No. 79, O. E. S., Taunton and past patron Leigh Chapter No. 85 O. E. S., Avon Park. During the time of his residence at Avon Park he was an active member and officer of the Union Congregational church.

Through the early years in the community, and as long as his his strength permitted, he took great interest and a large part in public and civic affairs. Material losses, when they came, did not cloud his good cheer, or shatter his courage or daunt his spirit, nor did physical helplessness that lately struck him down again and again. He patiently, persistently fought to regain command of paralyzed limbs and carry on the common duties and useful tasks of his home. He kept his friends, and welcomed and enjoyed them. He never complained. He never surrendered. He endured hardness with a high spirit and faith. Faith, says Josiah Royce, "Is the soul's discovery of a Reality that enables a man to stand anything that can happen to him in the universe. God can match our courage to our sorrow, can overflow our cup of pain with His mercy." In large measure Mr. Williams had this treasure, this victory of life, this crown of life.—Contributed.

Two Fined in Police Court Monday Morn

Additional funds to help pay for the new city jail were obtained Monday in police court. Two colored boys, Sam Green and Charlie Patterrsall, contributed. Sam plead guilty to a fighting and assault charge and was fined $15 and Charlie entered the same plea to a charge of being drunk. He contributed $10.

Mrs. Burch Home.

Mrs. F. P. Burch, past president of the U. S. W. V. Auxiliary, who has been seriously ill in a Sebring hospital has been removed to her home at DeSoto City.

Citrus Meeting To Be Held on Mall Tuesday Afternoon

W. B. Coarsey, president of the Florida Citrus Growers league and Walter Martin, a representative of the federal government, will address a meeting of citrus growers and all others interested here Tuesday afternoon. The meeting has been called for the band stand in the mall at 2 p. m., and all business men as well as those interested in citrus are invited and a large attendance is urged. Mr. Martin is an excellent and convincing speaker and an interesting meeting is assured. He will speak also at the court house in Sebring the same evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The aims and objects of the Growers League will be explained, one of which is to set and maintain a minimum price of fruit to the grower, thereby assuring him a reasonable profit.

C. E. Lanier Renews Ford Franchise; Moves to Lake Ave.

Announcement was made Thursday by Charles Lanier that he has renewed his contract for the Ford franchise in Avon Park and would be fully equipped to take care of all Ford work in the immediate future. The location of the Ford agency will be moved from the present building on East Main street to South Lake avenue and the building formerly occupied by Avon Motors company at present by J. L. Masters will be used, Mr. Lanier said. The building will be remodeled and a complete stock of parts carried. The equipment of both buildings will be consolidated, giving Ford users and other motorists an uptodate service.

The new location is more central and the motoring public will find it more convenient in every way. Jack Head will continue with Mr. Lanier and the same mechanical force as heretofore will be on the job.

Miss Lillian Webster, Former Resident, Dies at DeLand

Miss Lillian Webster, aged 73, former resident of Avon Park, died at DeLand on Thursday, June 28th, after an illness of several months. She passed away at the home of her brother, F. D. Webster in Forest Hills, suburb of DeLand.

Miss Webster resided in Avon Park during the winter for several years prior to 1931, and since that time has been living chiefly in DeLand.

She was born in Western New York in 1861. After completing her high school course, she spent many years as a teacher, chiefly in or near New York City. Several years ago her length of service enabled her to retire as a pensioned teacher. Since that time her efficient helpfulness has been at the disposal of her kin. Funeral services were held last Friday afternoon and interment was made in the DeLand cemetery beside her mother, who died in Avon Park in 1923. Miss Webster was a cousin of Frank Richardson of Avon Park.

Commissioners O. K. Bond Purchase; Sit As Equalization Board

Highlands county commissioners approved the purchase of a number of district bonds under the Kanner Bill at their meeting Tuesday and passed a resolution requesting the state board to purchase the bonds offered at a substantial discount. If the state board approves the offers made on bonds and complies with the resolution, Highlands county will be saved a considerable sum of money.

The commissioners also received the assessment roll for 1934 and sat as an equalization board. No complaints were received as to assessments, Tax Assessor Cyril Baldwin stating that he had satisfied the few complaints that had been made. The total assessment for Highlands county for 1934 is $4,158,606 as against $4,276,697 for 1933.

The board also made up a jury list to fill the jury box for the county judge's court and made a regular inspection of the court house offices as required by the statutes. They recessed until Friday morning when they will again sit as an equalization board.

History repeats itself—when you least expect it.

Metros Beat Fort Ogden

Win Two Games With New Players Showing to Good Advantage

The Metros defeated the Fort Ogden ball team in a very nicely played game at Head field last Sunday, to the score of 5 to 4.

Lefty Merriweather, doing mound duty for Avon Park and pitching a nice game, allowed only six hits. Bud Clark relieving him in the ninth on account of a soreness of the side developed by Lefty, retired a threatened rally by Fort Ogden.

Johnson, pitching for Fort Ogden was invincible to the Metros until the 8th, not allowing a Metro to reach first base until that inning. However, they got to him for four runs in that inning, tying the score. M. Landress did the honors with a three bagger with the bases full, and Leghart in the ninth laced out a three bagger and scored the winning run on Lefty Meriweather's double.

The score:

In a return game at Fort Ogden Thursday, the Metros won handily with a score of nine to six. Bud Clark pitched a good game allowing the home team but six hits while his team mates garnered 14 bingles off the Fort Ogden offerings. Both teams were credited with three errors.

The management has lined up two games each with the following teams: Sebring, Lake Placid and the CCC camp at Sebring and possibly a team from Tampa. The Metros will play Sebring there next Tuesday afternoon with a return game here the following Tuesday. Dates for the other games will be announced later.

It has been the aim of Manager Jimmie Spencer of the Metros to develop new material this year in order that we may have a team capable of going into better class of baseball next year. However, due to the absence of both Durrh Martin and J. B. Martin the team has been handicapped, and especially misses their work at the bat. Both will be due back in camp with this week to strengthen the team. Both boys were hitting well above the 600 mark before they left.

"It has been a pleasure," said Manager Spencer "to note the improvement of four new comers on the line up. Lefty Merriweather and Bud Clark, pitchers, M. Landress, 3rd base and Strawn, catcher are improving right along and should make fine ball players by next season."

The manager expressed disappointment at the small attendance at the games, and said the boys would appreciate better patronage by the public, which would "give the boys a boost."

Large 4-H Club Camp Starts Next Week

The largest 4-H district club ever to be held in this section of the state will open Monday afternoon at the Hotel DeSoto at DeSoto City, County Agent Louis Almeyer announced this week. Nearly 175 reservations have been made to date with boys and girls coming from Highlands, Okeechobee and Hardee counties and boys from DeSoto and Manatee counties.

Prof. W. T. Nettles and Wilmur Bassett of the University of Florida will have charge of recreational and educational activities, County Agent J. H. Logan will assist with baseball, County Agent C. A. Fulford will have charge of fishing and Miss Tootle will take charge of the girls' swimming. County Agents Baggott, Hueck and Almeyer will have charge of other phases of the camp life.

Miss Lillian Wooten and Mrs. J. H. Twitty will be chaperones.

On Thursday, July 11 an escorted trip through Highlands Hammock has been planned.

An excellent week is assured all who attend at the nominal cost of $1.50 for board for the five days the camp will be in session. Full particulars can be obtained from County Agent Almeyer at his office in the court house.

Lanier Goes to Chicago

Charles Lanier will leave Jacksonville Sunday for Chicago aboard the Ford special train which will carry Ford dealers from all over the state to attend the Century of Progress exposition including the Ford show there.

Drive For Funds To Keep Florida Exhibit Open at World's Fair

Terminating an intensive drive for funds to help keep the Florida exhibit open at the Century of Progress at Chicago, a Cake Walk will be held at the bandstand on the mall on Saturday evening, July 14. The drive is being headed by Mayor M. E. Covington and a committee from the chamber of commerce and the cake walk will be sponsored by the Woman's club.

Avon Park's quota of the state wide drive is $300 and subscriptions of 50 cents each are being sold. It is thought that the majority of citizens can contribute cents without being any hardship. Prizes will be given those selling the most tickets and there will be other awards.

Unless $30,000 is raised immediately the Florida exhibit will be forced to close. The state has not made any contribuion, the exhibit being financed by private contributions and donations from the various counties. The exhibit is bringing much favorable comment, being the most outstanding at the exposition, and is of great advertising value to Florida.

Graduation Held Friday

Many Present to See High School Students Receive Diplomas

The high school auditorium was well filled Friday night of last week when the parents and friends of the 1934 graduates gathered to witness the presentation of the diplomas and other awards. The high school band and the Junior Glee club had parts in the program.

Following the overture by the band, Rev. J. B. Reid asked the invocation. Then came Virginia Baldwin, salutatorian and Marcia Weisheyer read the class history. The class prophecy was read by Clyde Clark and the class will by A. B. Wells and Evelyn Clements was valedictorian.

The diplomas were presented by County Superintendent F. N. K. Bailey and Rev. W. K. McClure presented the Bailey medals, the recipients being Arthur Johnston and Mildred Wray. Dr. A. M. Morgan, district vice commander, gave the American Legion medal to Cyril Baldwin, Jr., and Mrs. Rupert Smith of Arcadia, past department president of the American Legion Auxiliary, presented the Auxiliary medal to Eloise Dickinson. Zula Maude Ford received an award for her musical ability.

Those receiving their diplomas were:

E. Clyde Clark, Edward Egbert Flowers, G. D. Godwin, Jr., J. Arthur Johnston, Charles Kempson, Emmanuel Mercer, Horace Lamar Stewart, A. B. Wells, Helen Virginia Baldwin, Virginia Evelyn Clements, Martha Thomas Flowers, Josephine Folsom, Zula Maude Ford, Jane Marguerite Huebner, Lou Cille Langford, Marie Lucile McFarland, Letia Olga Reck, Sara Lucile Saggus, Dorothy Louise Schweigart, Marcia Jane Weisheyer, Mildred Elouise Wray.

The class officers were: Clyde Clark, president; Eddie Flowers, vice president; Virginia Baldwin, secretary and A. B. Wells, treasurer.

The marshals for the evening were: Mary Coen, chief, assisted by Lorey Mae Buchand, Carmen Booth, Patsy Loomis, and Allie Lee Belin.

Camp Wingmann to Attend Church of Redeemer Sunday

With the hour of service changed from 9:30 to 10:30 on Sunday morning, members of Camp Wingmann of the Young People's Service League of the Diocese of South Florida will be present at the Church of the Redeemer. Members of the camp will augment the regular choir and a special program of music will be rendered. The Rector will preach. The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

Mrs. M. V. Pilcher and daughter, Madge, returned to their home here, Tuesday, after an extended visit in Sarasota with Mrs. Pilcher's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cardwell.

FLORIDA EXHIBIT AT WORLD'S FAIR ATTRACTS MANY

Ridge Representative Writes of Thousands Commenting on State Exhibit

(By FRANK HUGHES)

CHICAGO, July 5.—I have been on the job as the representative of the Scenic Highlands for more than two weeks now and the longer I stay the more the Florida exhibit, in its glamorous beauty, grows on me. It has been said that when a street car conductor has a day off he takes a car ride for recreation and that when a letter carrier has a moment to himself he takes a walk. They haven't anything on me—when I start out to see something of the World's Fair I always find myself wandering back to the Court of States and through Florida Hall or the Florida Garden where I always find something new and interesting.

Then there are always interesting people going through the Florida exhibit—men and women from everywhere on earth and all anxious to know more about the state which has staged such a wonderful exhibit of its resources and attractions. Those of us who are here in the interests of any particular section of the state are never at a loss for an interested listener.

Only the other day, Secretary of Commerce Roper, accompanied by his wife and his secretary and his wife, escorted by Federal Commissioner Dunne and his military escort, Major Fordney, visited the Florida exhibit—the only state exhibit visited by the party, by the way—and they stopped at the chamber of commerce booth, giving me a wonderful opportunity to tell them about the Scenic Highlands. We have had Japanese, Chinese, East Indians, Turks, Egyptians, South Africans and other foreign dignitaries of high rank as well as representatives of every European and South American country to pass our booth and many of them to stop to ask questions.

All of this demonstrates that the Florida exhibit is a high powered magnet which draws people to it. Its charm and beauty are the talk of not only the fair grounds but of the homes, hotels and streets of Chicago and thousands, not to say tens of thousands, of visitors come to see who others have told them should be seen.

The Florida exhibit does not depend upon its many very fine features within Florida Hall and the Florida Garden to attract attention. It always is in the newspapers or on the air with a view toward influencing men and women to want to see it before they come to Chicago and that there has been a measure of success along that line, is indicated by the number of letters received from radio listeners asking the Florida Harmony Four to sing favorite songs at some future broadcast.

In another respect the Florida exhibit seems to have it over not only other state exhibits, but over many of the big displays I have visited. I refer to the courteous treatment accorded every visitor by the 35 to 40 young men and women composing the personnel who, under the direction of Earl Brown, general manager, or George Clements, director of promotion, look after the comfort of visitors whether in Florida Hall, Florida Garden, the Florida Home or the several concessions maintained under their general direction.

Getting Money Illegally, Charged

Posey Lightfoot, a dark complexioned gent, has been arrested by Constable W. A. Roberts on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences. Posey is alleged to have collected money among the white folks on the understanding it was for a free barbecue for his colored brethren on July 4. He plead guilty when arraigned and was bound over to the grand jury.

Bishop Wing Visits Avon Park

The Rt. Rev. John D. Wing, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of South Florida was a visitor at Camp Wingmann on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Congress Quits, Having Done Most Things the President Asked—Steel Strike Postponed—Roosevelt's Daughter in Nevada, Presumably for Divorce.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

AFTER several days of hectic work, pushing through the last measures labeled "must" by the administration and a host of other bills demanded by various members, the Seventy-third congress closed its second session. The measures passed during this session include some of the basic laws of the New Deal and considerable elaboration and modification of laws passed last year in addition to the regular appropriation bills and a normal amount of necessary routine legislation.

As in the first session, President Roosevelt was in full control, though the legislators displayed a more critical attitude and a tendency to give proposed legislation closer scrutiny before giving it their approval. This could not be attributed to a lessening of the President's influence or of the confidence in him, but rather to the fact that the members of congress didn't wish longer to be labeled as "yes men." On the whole Mr. Roosevelt succeeded in getting what he asked and in preventing what he did not want.

Several measures that had the backing of the administration failed of passage. These included the oil bill, ardently desired by Secretary Ickes; the pure food and drug bill, which never came to a vote; the ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty; and a series of amendments amplifying and clarifying the powers of the AAA.

In its closing hours the congress spent money like water, indulging in what Congressman Britten of Chicago called "an orgy of spending such as never has been known in the history of the world during peace times." The last of the major bills disposed of were:

The deficiency appropriation bill, allotting the President more than two billion three hundred million dollars for relief and other emergency purposes.

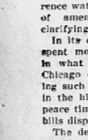

The one billion dollar housing bill to promote the revival of the building trades and of the durable goods industries.

The Frazier bill for relief of farm mortgagors.

The bill amending banking legislation.

The railway labor bill.

WILLIAM GREEN, president of the American Federation of Labor, conferred with President Roosevelt. Administrator Johnson and all others had failed. He appeared before the delegates of the steel workers' unions at Pittsburgh and persuaded them at least to postpone their threatened strike. The plan which he offered, and which may lead to a permanent settlement of the controversy, in brief provides:

Earl J. Forbeck

Establishment of a three-man board by the President to adjudicate and mediate all violations of code on matters of discrimination against employees.

To insure the right of workers to organize, empowering the board to hold and supervise industrial elections for collective bargaining representatives.

All grievances or complaints would be referred to the board for final decision.

If acceptable to labor, capital, and the federal government, the strike would be called off permanently.

This was a modification of the plan offered by the administration and violently opposed by the more radical delegates.

Leaders of the "rank and file" steel workers, including Earl J. Forbeck and other chiefs of local unions, were especially bitter in their attitude toward General Johnson, and were still eager for a strike, but they were outnumbered and the Green plan was adopted as a basis for further negotiations. The union leaders went to Washington for a final decision. They carried authority to call the strike if the peace plan were rejected by the government or the steel operators.

IN A formal letter, accompanied by a long explanation, the code authority of the cleaners and dyers has notified the President that it has withdrawn its consent to the code. The reason assigned for this action is that Administrator Johnson, acting by authority of the President, suspended the minimum price and other fair trade practice provisions of the code while leaving in effect all other provisions, including those establishing minimum wages and maximum hours of labor.

The cleaners and dyers say that with operating costs greatly increased by the labor provisions it is impossible to make a profit unless a minimum price is established and enforced.

In its flippended explanation the code authority challenged the validity of this action by General Johnson, continuing:

"We cannot believe that you would knowingly countenance a reckless disregard of repeated promises and assurances given to authorized representatives of the trade by the administrator personally within two weeks of the date on which he played a major role in their breach."

The code was consented to, says the memorandum, "on the express understanding" that the minimum price and other trade practice provisions "were absolutely necessary if members of the trade were to comply with other provisions of the code, including the limitations on maximum hours and minimum wages of labor." The suspension of the minimum price provision is pronounced "a deprivation of the primary benefit of the code to members of the trade, leaving them only the burdens."

The memorandum states that 97 per cent of the 11,000 plant owners and 175,000 to 200,000 retail shops are able and willing to comply with the price and other trade practice provisions if there is "reasonable co-operation on the part of the government in enforcing compliance on the other 3 per cent. There is virtually complete compliance in 132 of the 312 districts."

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN and President Roosevelt have received a unanimous report from a house investigating committee demanding that Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois be removed as chief of the army air crops "without delay." The report accused the general of "dishonesty," "gross misconduct," "inefficiency," "unreliability," "incompetency," and "mismanagement."

Gen. Foulois

After praising the "young men" who fly army planes under Foulois' direction, the report concluded:

"We find it necessary to report that we are most firmly convinced, from the evidence and records submitted, that before any substantial progress in the upbuilding of the morale and material of the army air corps can be attained, Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois must be relieved from his position as chief of the air corps."

The report referred to "certain violations and evasions of law and army regulations by, also the gross misconduct and inefficiency of," General Foulois "and other executive officers under his command." Particular exception was taken to the fact that army airplanes had been bought by negotiation instead of after competitive bidding.

Scoffing back at the committee for its secret hearings, Foulois challenged his accusers to a meeting in open court.

"I consider that the accusations are most unfair and unjust," he said in a statement, "and I am ready and willing at any time to meet my accusers in open court."

ANOTHER divorce in the Roosevelt family is impending. Mrs. Anna Dall, the daughter of the President, has taken up residence in Nevada with the evident though not yet declared purpose of seeking legal separation from her husband, Curtis Dall, New York broker. The news was no surprise to friends of the family. The Dalls have not been living together for a year, Anna and their two children, "Sistie" and "Buzzie," residing in the White House.

Mrs. Anna Dall

For the six months she must remain in Nevada Mrs. Dall has selected a log cabin on the shore of Lake Tahoe, some fifteen miles from the house where her brother, Elliott, lived a year ago, when he and the former Elizabeth Donner of Philadelphia were divorced.

LADY ASTOR, the American-born member of the British parliament, has done a lot of bright things and some stupid ones. In the latter category comes her action in Plymouth at a ceremony in memory of Sir Francis Drake. She grabbed from a midshipman of the American battleship Wyoming a wine-filled goblet and threw the wine into the river, saying: "I cannot understand why men will leave home for this beastly stuff."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT went up to New Haven, Conn., for the Yale commencement and was presented with the highest honor the university can bestow, the degree of doctor of laws. After the ceremony he attended a luncheon of alumni and took occasion to challenge the critics of his New Deal and especially those who make fun of the "brain trust."

"It is true," he told his hearers, "and there was obvious in his voice a note of defiance, "that today, more than ever before in our public life, we are calling on the teaching profession for assistance in our government. There have been certain ribald comments and some laughter about the use of brains in the national government, but it seems to me a pretty good practice.

"It is a practice that will continue," he added firmly. And the professors around him started the vigorous applause which followed.

Later on he evoked further applause when he said: "I couldn't tell you the party affiliations of the majority of people holding responsible positions in Washington, and it is a mighty good thing I cannot."

That evening Mr. Roosevelt boarded the presidential yacht Sequoia and proceeded slowly to New London, Conn., to witness the boat races between Harvard and Yale. His son, Franklin, Jr., was one of the Harvard freshman crew. After the regatta the President motored to the family home at Hyde Park, N. Y., to remain over the week end.

CHANCELLOR HITLER has been receiving some hard knocks recently. Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen delivered himself of a vigorous criticism of the terror and experiments of the Nazi regime, and its "excesses and arrogance." Alluding to the pagan revival, Von Papen said: "Germans must not exclude themselves from the society of Christian nations." The speech, delivered at Marburg, was kept out of the German press but the German people read it in Swiss papers, and then learned that President Paul von Hindenburg had sent Von Papen a telegram of congratulation.

Count Nadolny

Immediately after this incident Count Rudolf Nadolny announced his resignation as German ambassador to Russia. This was the first defection from Nazi government ranks since Dr. Alfred Hugenberg resigned as minister of agriculture and economics in June, 1933. Nadolny's resignation is attributed to his failure to persuade Chancellor Hitler to accept Russia's proposal for a non-aggression pact. The count is a close personal friend of President Von Hindenburg.

Late dispatches from Berlin say Hitler has rejected Von Papen's offer to resign and has made a temporary truce with him. Both of them arranged to confer with the President at Neudeck, but not at the same time.

COLLUSIVE bids on city supplies and contracts are evidently the exception, not the rule, in NRA administration, that NRA code regulations are unworkable in dealings with municipal and other governmental agencies. An executive order has been issued to protect contractors, manufacturers and merchants from the most important of the code restrictions in all transactions with federal, state or city or other subdivisions of government. Protests by thousands of cities had protested against increases in operating costs occasioned by the NRA.

JAPAN was obviously pleased recently when the American fleet was moved from the Pacific to the Atlantic, but it will not be so glad to hear that the fleet is to return to the Pacific about November 1, when all its maneuvers have been completed. Presumably there will be an attempt, in passing through the Panama canal, to break the 47-hour record made in the spring.

Secretary Swanson says the navy's construction program will be pushed ahead with $40,000,000 obtained from the public works administration. Six new submarines and fourteen destroyers will use up most of this sum. About $5,500,000 will be spent on airplanes.

A TERRIBLE marine tragedy was narrowly averted when the German liner Dresden, carrying 1,000 holiday passengers, struck a rock in a Norwegian fjord and was run aground. Fortunately only four persons were drowned, though a hundred of the panic stricken passengers leaped overboard.

HENRIK SHIPSTEAD won renomination in Minnesota as the Farmer-Labor candidate for the United States senate. He will be opposed at the polls by Congressman Elmer Holdale, Democrat, and N. J. Holmberg, Republican. The Farmer-Laborites also renominated Gov. Floyd B. Olson.

BEGINNING July 1, the air mail postage will be six cents an ounce, flat. The old rate was eight cents the first ounce and 15 cents for each additional ounce. The reduction was announced by the Post Office department.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—Prior to and since adjournment of the second session of the Roosevelt congress, I have tried to collect for these columns a composite picture of opinion among our law-makers as to where this New Deal in government is headed. Ofttimes I have reported here that I was unable to comprehend many phases of the New Deal because there has been so much confusion. It has been kaleidoscopic in its character from the start, but there have been indications that a second session of congress and Presidential messages would serve to clarify the situation. Such, however, has not been the case, insofar as my humble ability to understand it is concerned.

Where Is New Deal Headed?

To demonstrate more clearly what I mean, let me relate that I have sought the views of a great many members of congress and, with one or two exceptions, the replies to my questions were divided into two classes. If the representative or senator was a devout administration supporter, the answer was that we are headed for greater human happiness on the basis of a planned national life. If the one to whom the questions were directed were a Republican or a Democrat who is unwilling to swallow academic theories in accordance with the doctor's prescription, the answer almost invariably was: "I don't know." Many of them expressed the belief that there was merit in much of the New Deal program, but its ultimate end was a matter which they declare they could not now foresee.

I also have examined again many of the letters that I have received from readers of these columns since the New Deal came into operation, but they fail to provide a consensus as to whether the writers of them have formed conclusions as to direction.

It is to be recalled further that Mr. Roosevelt, in submitting legislative proposals to either of the two sessions of congress, has said with absolute frankness that his program, then being offered, contained experimental features with equal frankness and courage, he stated that if the experiments failed, he would be among the first to admit the fact. Such was his attitude regarding the gigantic agricultural adjustment program with its various policies for limitation of production and enforced control of surplus. But since the President has not said yet that any of these have failed, it can only be concluded that he is satisfied with the progress being made.

Opponents of the New Deal and doubting Thomases are pointing the finger of scorn more and more to these experiments, and I am informed by observers who have been visiting various sections of the country that there is dissatisfaction in considerable volume concerning the results thus far accomplished.

From industrial communities and the areas where the bulk of the income taxes are collected by the government I hear the question: "Who is going to pay for all this?"

There can be no doubt that this question of "who is going to pay" will become paramount at a later date than it is now. But the leaders of the New Deal have gone so further to this date than to say that a restored prosperity will make the payments easy. And the truth of this statement, of course, cannot be disputed.

Fail to Pin Tugwell

Many observers in Washington had thought when the President insisted on senate confirmation of his nomination of Professor Tugwell to be under-secretary of agriculture, there would be an exposition of the New Deal objectives. Such, however, was not the case. If course, the senate committee hearing where Professor Tugwell was questioned turned out to be an abortive thing, but still it had been expected there would be something that would add to the sum of public understanding of the destination sought. Senator Smith of South Carolina, Democratic chairman of the committee and a staunch opponent of Professor Tugwell, tried to pin the professor down to statements that would indicate what the so-called head of the brain trust thought the government is doing respecting agriculture. So did Senator Byrd, a Virginia Democrat. Neither succeeded.

Professor Tugwell was surprised at the questions asked him. He thought the committee ought to take the "word" without reservation. He assured the senators of his unqualified support of the Constitution of the United States, but afterward observers here voiced their inability to reconcile that assertion with the professor's earlier writings to the effect that he could not understand "the unreasoning, almost hysterical attachment of some Americans for the Constitution." Notwithstanding this, the committee went right ahead and voted a favorable report to the senate on the professor's nomination. Several Washington correspondents asserted in dispatches to their newspapers, however, that administration whips had been cracking close to the backs of numerous senators.

It was quite apparent throughout the hearing on the professor's nomination that many of the Democrats and, of course, all of the Republicans were anxious to gain a better understanding of the New Deal objective. In that effort, they failed to get to first base. Mr. Tugwell advocated a planned national economy on a certain point, but I was told by senators after the hearing that they did not know what that point was.

Ignores Critics

Another trend, or some think it is a trend, that is evident in the management of affairs by President Roosevelt is an apparent willingness on the part of the White House to pay less and less attention to critics. That is, many observers lately have called attention to an indication that Mr. Roosevelt is willing to ignore more and more of the attacks on his administration. He is not the type, of course, who will make a face at his critics. He is a master politician, and keen politicians never do such things. But when one examines the statements and information that is passed out from the White House in these days and those forthcoming, say, six months ago, the present-day grist is much more, if not entirely, free from "answers" to critics. And this is happening in a period when there is obviously very much more criticism than in the earlier days of the administration.

Let me supply a basis of comparison: When the airmail contracts were cancelled, Col. Charles Lindbergh sent a telegram to the President, complaining about the act. The colonel's air transportation company made the message public before it was laid on the President's desk, or so Stephen Early, one of the President's secretaries, said. After the message appeared in the newspapers, Mr. Early spoke at length to the newspaper correspondents about the colonel's "discourtesy" in making the message public. Some six months later, Clarence Darrow, the Chicago attorney, had the board's review of NRA affairs which he headed, let loose a blast on NRA that constituted a most vitriolic criticism of this phase of the New Deal. The President himself has said almost nothing about the Darrow board criticism. True, General Johnson replied in his usual boastful way, but that was General Johnson and not the White House.

Criticism has been heard in congress of the Agricultural Adjustment administration. Attacks on this have come also from the outside. But there has been no reply from the President, the top of the administration. Moses' policies have been under attack, as have been some of the relief measures which seem to some to hint of government-owned factories soon. These attacks have been allowed, however, to spend themselves in the thin air.

Writers Left Out

The President is going to Hawaii for vacation. That fact, of course, is generally known. But there is one feature of the trip that has not been generally circulated. Arrangements for the trip call for virtual elimination of the correspondents from the picture of the President's vacation. That is almost without precedent. Washington correspondents are wailing and gnashing teeth all over the place, because that would be a gorgeous trip for those assigned to write news about the President. Usually, fifteen or twenty writers accompany the President everywhere he travels. It irks the correspondents, personally, but it seems to be irking some of the great newspapers more because they are taking the view that it constitutes censorship by the President.

The arrangements for the Hawaiian trip are a little hard to understand. They appear to be a right-about-face on the part of the administration. This writer has been in Washington almost twenty years and never in that time have the facilities made available for the correspondents at the White House been greater than under Mr. Roosevelt's direction. He has courted a friendly press at all times. Everything that was necessary for the newspaper writers was theirs to command.

Now, however, the President is traveling on a naval cruiser, and he does not even have his own secretaries with him. He has permitted only three correspondents to accompany him on the trip, and they must remain on another naval boat which has been ordered to stay at least three miles away from his ship.

In defense of the action, it can be said officially that Mr. Roosevelt would not obtain complete rest in any other manner.

Howe About:

Lincoln Cause of Humiliations Genius

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

ABRAHAM LINCOLN was President during a critical time, and worried a good deal. He once said: "If to be the head of h—) is as hard as what I have had to undergo, I could find it in my heart to pity Satan himself."

Still Lincoln was far better off than millions of his fellow citizens during the Civil war. Think of the thousands of good Union men starved in Libby and Andersonville prisons; of the hundreds of thousands who were targets for enemy bullets; of the millions who suffered war privations. Lincoln was at least occupying a public office paying $50,000 a year, and lived in a palace provided at public expense. Whether his judgment was good or bad, his salary went on, and all the time he was accumulating great fame. The war hopelessly ruined many millions, but made Lincoln rich and famous.

We have heard of the poverty of his widow; I read the other day she was a rich woman when she died; and how little she deserved!

I have no sympathy for the woes of statesmen on the public payroll. From 1800 to 1864 millions of Americans had had luck that Abraham Lincoln might have their share of good luck. During his four years in the White House, Lincoln should have daily thanked the gods, instead of complaining. I had an uncle George, with a young wife and baby at home, who had hard luck at Pittsburgh Landing that Abraham Lincoln might get $50,000 a year and endless fame.

Let any man think of the greatest degradations and humiliations throughout his life, and I believe he must decide sex was at the bottom of most of them. It is the one thing we should endeavor to subdue and regulate, yet it is the thing we regulate least; and let run wild. Our social system, our literature, encourage wildness in sex rather than regulation. The man bull is forever permitted to bellow his lust, instead of locking him up until his services are needed. And instead of trying to keep him quiet, the owners of his bellowing aggravate him all they can.

An envious dull man once said genius is insanity, and other dull men have made the saying famous. It was never true, for genius has always meant special ability. There are millions of geniuses; thousands climbing to distinction, hundreds to great distinction. I have known several promising candidates in small towns where I have lived. Among cats, dogs, cattle, and the lower animals generally, a scrub never won a blue ribbon, but it is characteristic in the human family that scrubs oftener achieve great distinction than thoroughbreds. Probably this comes about because there is no stud book among men. Goethe had fourteen mistresses and no great progeny.

Mozart attracted attention all over Europe as a musician when six years old. Before he died at thirty-five he had written symphonies and operas now performed somewhere every week in the year.

He never sat down to display his genius, that he was not disturbed by a bill collector, by the screaming of a woman in labor, a row with relatives, or some other incident of love affairs. Had he been free to devote his time to music as "Heigh Count" was to devote his time to winning races, there is no telling what heights Mozart might have easily reached. Many pampered race horses have won a quarter of a million dollars in two years.

Mozart received less than a thousand dollars from "Figaro," "Don Giovanni," and the Requiem, and, when he died, was so poor his funeral cost under five dollars.

Writing of the late Frank Harris, a biographer says: "He transgressed all the inflexible rules of the righteous. He wronged friends, betrayed everyone and violated every decency. And yet he was one of the noblest men of his day. If this be paradox, it is also very near the truth. Championing the helpless and fighting oppression, Harris was magnificent; at his worst, he was far too close to rascality for the comfort of his admirers."

This is mere literary piffle. A man who violated every decency, and betrayed every friend, could not have been one of the noblest men of his time; to say so, or think so, is silly.

Half the people are creditable, considering the slime in which they originated. One-quarter are dull but amenable to sound teaching and have good instincts. Another quarter are hopeless; dead beats, disturbers, thieves, killers. And this disreputable one-quarter sits up nine-tenths of the trouble. A plain matter of justice, those in the great majority are at fault because they do not force the small minority to behave better. But all our laws are keyed to treat the disreputable gently and kindly, and the respectable majority harshly.

BRISBANE

THIS WEEK

In the Age of Billions Old Bill Did Not Know More Land? What For? If Suddenly Rich, What?

Congress number seventy-three goes home after appropriating for variegated spending between six thousand eight hundred million and seven thousand million dollars.

No congress ever appropriated so much in peace times.

In addition to spending about seven thousand million dollars, this congress guaranteed approximately seven thousand millions more in home mortgages and farm bonds and set up a two thousand million "stabilization fund."

We are living in the era of "billions."

With congress gone home, President Roosevelt is lord of all he surveys, which is no great change. He was pretty much that before the adjournment. We have no dictator in the United States, and shall not have one unless something strange and unusual happens, but the President has as much of a dictator's power as is chosen to use.

Congress, with unimportant exceptions, obeyed orders while in session, and the country will look to the President now to initiate and put through whatever he chooses. That situation probably does not suit him. It involves great responsibility.

"Old Bill," dead in London, was a carrier pigeon. He carried messages during the first year of the big war from British army and air forces in France and Belgium back to London, and lost a leg. Brought back to England by an invalid soldier, he enjoyed life for many years, and now has laudatory "obituary notices" in English papers.

"Old Bill" flew back and forth in the big war and lost a leg without ever knowing why he was flying or why he had to lose that leg.

But "Old Bill" was no more ignorant than a majority of the soldiers over whose heads he flew on errands that he did not understand.

A member of the British house of commons suggests that, falling cash payment, we might accept something in the way of territory. The British will not give up any territory if they can hold on to it, which they can easily do if they choose.

And apart from that, what good would it do us to acquire more territory and have some foolish congressman insist on giving it away? We could not possibly get from the British anything as valuable as the Philippines, and we are doing our best to get rid of them.

What would you do if you suddenly found yourself quite rich, with a prospect of "easy riches" to come? Mr. Max Baer, new holder of the heavyweight prize-fighting championship, according to the New York Evening Journal, bought himself thirty-five new suits of clothes, "in tan, gray and pastel shades." There was a great crowd waiting outside the tailor shop to cheer him, and he wrote his autograph on a one-dollar bill for a young girl. Fame is a wonderful thing.

The young "Count of Paris," who might be king of France if the French people suddenly lost their wits, believes that he, so far as he knows, is a direct descendant of Hugh Capet, will soon be called to the French throne. He says:

"You would be astonished if you could know how weary France is of the present regime."

The young pretender to the throne might be surprised if he could know how weary France was of her kings before she got rid of them, and how fortunate he is that the common sense of the French will keep him talking, not reigning.

President Roosevelt, in a letter sent to West Virginia, expresses satisfaction with the achievements of NRA.

"We have spread employment, we have raised pay, and we are not through yet.

"It is a notable record of recovery. It has led the way for other nations, and has produced widespread and, I believe, permanent results. Certainly we have a right to celebrate this anniversary."

Washington Singer, whose father invented a sewing machine, left a fortune of $5,584,800 in England, where he raced his horses. The British government takes an "estate duty" of about two million dollars from the heirs. At that rate, it does not take long for vast accumulations to melt away, especially as "the bigger the estate, the higher the percentage taken." Our government has borrowed the idea, made necessary by a strange facility for spending developed by politicians.

The big, dangerous steel strike is for the time averted; thanks to the President's wise unobtrusive mediations, and thanks especially to the wise advice given to the men by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

SYNOPSIS

On her way to a teaching position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer meets on the train a young man, Prof. Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy. At the railroad station in Mrs. Denver, engaged as matron. The group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the school building. Gordon Haskell, proprietor, welcomes them. Wilton Payne, teacher of psychology, completes the faculty. Janet witnesses a meeting between Haskell and a man of unprepossessing appearance, but evidently high in Haskell's confidence. In the schoolroom she finds a group, which she had supposed were scholars, are really highly artistic wax figures. Haskell explains the unusual circumstances connected with the conduct of the Academy. Among Janet's pupils is Berenice Bracebridge, daughter of the late owner of the Academy and Janet is attracted by her.

Meanwhile the object of this wish sat in the third schoolroom and listened to Wilton Payne's introduction of his subject. He had been expecting her all the morning, but she did not come until the third hour; a radiant creature, he thought, in her rather gay little mountain suit of copper-colored corduroy, the coat worn over a plain white silk blouse.

She spoke at last—asked him some simple question. Her voice thrilled him, and its quality brought to him misty memories, as the spiritual essence of a sound or a fragrance can always do. He had not heard such a voice outside of Europe, and then only echoes of it—the soprano notes of singing boys, gondoliers in Venice—the gentle voices of girls going like a flock of white doves to their first communion.

He began to speak of psychology in an introductory way, his mind still in foreign countries. "And you understand," he said after some preliminary explanations, "that it must always be a relative subject; for the human imagination is plastic, takes impressions from places. The incalculable sadness of pine-hemmed Ravenna with its lost churches and forgotten graves might well enchant Lord Byron but leave the fever-ridden peasant only with a great weariness of marshes from which he could not escape. The old, old half lights of London with the fog rolling from the Thames, and the black beliés of St. Paul's riding airily—think of their influence on a mind like Charles Lamb's; or the sea caves of Guernsey on Victor Hugo's, and the wind-swept gorgeous heights of Spain on the haughty personality of its grandees."

But he wanted to hear her voice again, and he asked the class questions for no other purpose than to hear her speak.

His heart beat rapidly with a new, enchanting excitement. He had worked so hard all his life that to turn aside into romance would have seemed as futile to him as an excursion into a lovely wood road would be to a traveler hastening to a city. In which he had important business.

He rose and put away his books. In the corridor he met Arthur.

"How did you get on?"

"Very well—and you?"

"Miss Bracebridge rather led the psychology class—she is very pretty, very interesting, don't you think?"

"Not as pretty as Janet Mercer."

Payne breathed a sigh of relief. As if evoked by the words of her name, Janet was coming down the corridor.

"Isn't it quite thrilling to teach in such a school?"

"It is, indeed," Payne said fervently.

"I noticed something rather odd," Arthur began. "My pupils watched the corridor a good deal—kept looking toward the dark hall, and rather apprehensively. And I overheard a conversation between two of them as they were collecting their books. It ran something like this: 'Where does he keep the dummies?'

"'Balder told father they were in the basement.'

"'I bet you wouldn't go into the room where they are?'

"'I bet I would.'

"'Balder says he's afraid of them —she isn't!'

"'She ought to be afraid of 'em.'

"'She never knew 'em—she was only six.'

"Of course I pricked up my ears, but they saw I was listening in, and stopped. They're nice, hearty youngsters—rather fussy about their mathematical attainments."

"I am rather worried about Mrs. Denver," Janet said. "I went to her room again, but she is not there. I hope Mr. Haskell will not overwork her."

He was waiting for them in the lunch room, and his bright, restless eyes searched their faces keenly. "Ah, here you are! Alive, I see!"

The words were trivial, but they jarred upon Arthur. "Why shouldn't we be?"

"Well, I thought the strain of teaching under these rather novel conditions might be hard. Your pupils are most enthusiastic—you will go far with them."

Again the curious note in his voice. As the lunch proceeded the talk drifted to religion. "I often think," he said, "of the old idea that religion and politics must not be mentioned in society—whereas, as I heard a famous man say once, they are the only subjects worth talking about. There must be a religion that swallows up all others; and a policy that dominates all other policies of government. What an extraordinary privilege to be the initiator either of that religion or that policy!"

"Not being Olympians, I am afraid we will none of us have such a privilege."

When lunch was finished, Haskell rose and stood like a brown shadow against the white door of the room. "One would give children an eternal playtime," he said wistfully. "But that they only have when they die. You will be free at four. In your walks you will observe that the east wing, once Doctor Bracebridge's family quarters, is guarded off by a high iron fence. I live there now, and Berenice and her old nurse have the top floor. It is not necessary to visit that part of the academy," he added significantly.

"I hope we may some day see Miss Bracebridge out of study hours," Payne said boldly. The simple words seemed to arouse Haskell's anger, but he said casually, "There's not the slightest objection—if she cares to see you."

To cover up Payne's silence, Janet asked: "May I see Mrs. Denver for a moment?"

"Certainly. If you will go to your room I will send her to you."

Five minutes later she came in—pale, amazed, utterly unlike the little, confident woman who had arrived at Glade. She gathered Janet into her arms hungrily. "Oh, my dear, what kind of a place are we in? I've had such a morning—heaps of linen—but not a soul have I seen. He has the ordering of the meals! He keeps the keys of everything."

"I was worried about you."

"And I about you. Oh, my dear, such gloomy kitchens!"

"Where are they?"

"In the basement at the east wing. He lives on the first floor; Miss Bracebridge and an old country woman named Martha on the top floor. Everything's very damp and dark and silent. The cook's an old woman, the wife of the man who drove us up. The sulky young man assists her; and that great, tall creature is called Balder."

"Did you speak of the wax figures?"

"No, but I heard the young fellow say to the cook, 'The dummies is back again. Master was mad as a mad bull.'"

"Better not speak of them, Mrs. Denver. Now I must go back to the school room. It is almost two."

CHAPTER III

FOUR o'clock came quickly. At ten minutes after, Arthur was waiting for her in the hall. She had arrayed herself in a short tweed skirt, an orange jersey and knitted cap. "Now to explore this wild land."

They made their way around the west wing and skirted the vegetable garden, which stretched toward a grove of oaks; beyond these they saw the gleaming waters of Midnight lake.

A small dock was found; and to one of its posts two rowboats with locked oars were tied. Both bore the lettering, "Property of the Academy."

"Shall we row across to the ravine side?"

"That would be the quickest way to reach the falls."

On the lake, quietly rowing, their perturbed spirits became stilled by the intense and wild loveliness of the scene. Arthur said little, only too thankful to be away with Janet Mercer—away from that sinister house.

"Look, there's an eagle." She pointed to the great bird winging its flight northward. "He doesn't have to teach in Lostland academy."

"Are you beginning to feel nervous again?"

"Yes—but I intend to put it through."

"Of course we'll put it through." She liked the plural pronoun. He glanced at her, thinking her beauty was like some happy adventure of the spirit. He could not imagine her growing old or tired or discouraged. Always there would be the light touch, the smile over the irrevocable, the happy confidence of that rare minority who walk the world as if it were an enchanted place. She had dignity, too—that attribute rare in modern women.

"I am very lucky," he said abruptly.

"Aren't we really always in luck if we only knew it?"

"I wonder if Gordon Haskell is lucky."

"I am sure he wants to be. Were your scholars as exemplary as mine?"

"Ah, that reminds me. I have a note in my purse, addressed simply 'The Teacher.' I think this is a good time to read it."

She unfolded it and as she read it gave a little startled gesture and passed the bit of paper to him. On it were the cryptic words, "Gordon Haskell is afraid of nothing but the four wax figures."

Arthur rested on his oars a moment and gazed back at the vast pile of the old academy. "That comes in very pat with the conversation I overheard. I believe those four wax figures are the crux of the whole mystery. Do you believe his story about Miss Bracebridge?"

"It sounds reasonable enough. And she is certainly like her father's portrait; in fact, she reminds me—ah, I know. She is like the four wax figures—startlingly like them; it's a curious beauty; almost shy and elusive."

"You said the girl figures were beautiful."

"Quite lovely!"

"Did Haskell say there were five children?"

"Yes."

"She is the only remaining one—perhaps. He said! . . . many deaths; yes, many deaths?"

"But if he is afraid of them,"

"But I Thought I Saw a Face Down There—in the Lake."

she queried, "why not have them out of the way?"

"Do you think he is actually afraid of them—or of an idea back of them?"

She mused on this. "How could there be an idea back of them?"

"I should like to see them closer. Were they well made?"

"Startlingly well made; the work of a genuine artist, I should say. The faces of the two young girls were very lovely; sweet, frustrated faces, if one can speak so of a wax figure; the young boys are handsome fellows—very! If they came to life! Why, what is the matter?"

His arm had jerked an oar until the boat fairly spun round. He laughed nervously. "I suppose that great barrack of a building has made me jumpy; but I thought I saw a face down there—in the lake." He pointed to the dark surface covering incalculable depths. "It seemed rising up to meet me, as drowned faces rise. There! the foolish fancy is over! I'm sorry I jerked the boat. Please don't think me superstitious!"

"I don't. Whatever do you gather from this note?"

"That he has a secret enemy in the establishment, who wants to warn us against something."

"Against what?"

He gazed at her solemnly. "I think we are in danger of no ordinary kind. I've followed the advertisements of educational institutions for several years, and I've forgotten nearly all of them because they rang true. You know in reading them that their achievements were a matter of open and honorable history. Any parent or guardian could feel reasonably satisfied that his ward was on the right track; but Haskell's advertisement stood out startlingly. From the first it seemed strange to me. But because he wanted teachers, not pupils, I answered it."

They made their way with some difficulty up the magnificent bed of the creek. After off they heard a steady roaring which they knew preceded from the great fall. Janet came on after him, sure-footed and graceful.

"Be careful," he warned her. "The stream is not very deep, but the current is terrific. It would sweep you off your feet in an instant. Don't get too close."

A well-defined little footpath skirted the stream between its wild waters and the great immobile rocks. The ravine narrowed steadily, the cliffs rising higher and higher, and drawing closer together until they seemed almost ready to close out the sky. Then the cliffs departed from their straight line, became concave, forming a vast aperture something of an ellipse in shape. At its further end a sheet of water, thick and straight as a section of Niagara, dropped a sheer two hundred feet from an out-jutting rock and with a wild roar filled a funnel-shaped aperture at the foot of the cliff with a mad whirl of water.

"How lovely! How terrifying!"

"Even nature is terrifying in this region. Oh, don't go too near."

She had gone lightly on ahead of him to a vast, slippery black rock which overhung the whirl; and was gazing as if fascinated.

"Don't—don't go too near!" he roared, making a megaphone of his fist. "Nothing on earth could get you out of there if once you fell in. I'm a strong swimmer—but we'd both be drowned.

"I think," he went on, "that there must be a subterranean current at the bottom of that funnel, which, meeting the water of the fall, creates this whirl. But, see. Isn't this fall is also interesting a great many people, but fortunately it is not likely to cause any serious trouble.

While it must be admitted that the enzymes or ferments in the digestive juices which break up or digest foods, act differently from one another in that one acts on starches, another on proteids, and another on fats, nevertheless as they all flow together at the sight and smell of food there is always enough of them to digest a "mixed" meal.

Will this system of not eating meat or eggs with bread or potatoes help certain individuals?

Dr. Ruth P. Wadsworth, in Collier's, says that while this new system is unnecessary for the average well individual, nevertheless anyone following it really gets a good all-round mixed diet. "If you won't eat starches with your meat you can't eat meat alone so you add vegetables, fresh fruits and salads. And if you can't eat meat and eggs with the other two meals you are bound by variety to have stewed raw fruits with your cereals and more salads and vegetables. Consequently you are getting more variety, more vitamins, more bulk than you ever thought you had time for before."

Now there are a number of young people who have difficulty in digesting starches, and some older people who have difficulty in digesting fats. It is in these cases that this method of talking food might be helpful.

* For the vast majority of people this method is not necessary or even desirable as it is quite "unbalanced" too much on the food, and upsets the usual household arrangements.

However, it makes sure of a good all-round diet and can't hurt you if you want to try it. In fact, it may really help you.

Hay Fever Sufferers

IT IS a mystery to many that one member of a family will be attacked regularly by hay fever and the rest of the family, living in the same household, breathing the same air, never have an attack.

You will admit that this is definite proof that there is something about this hay fever sufferer, some thing about the general condition of his body, or part or parts of his body, that gives him this tendency towards attacks of hay fever.

Dr. M. J. Gutman, Munich, states that the fact that pollen from plants put into the nose of normal persons is removed from the body unchanged, whereas in a hay fever patient sensitive to this particular type of pollen, the pollen is changed, some of it having burst, Payne said: "Get in—but we won't row over yet. After telling me their tale, he led me to the family burial ground—on a knoll to the northwest of the house—and sure enough there were the four graves among several others all with the same date of death—the whirl gave up the bodies at last, it seemed. Then I mustered my courage. He had been talking tenderly of those lost children, for he had tutored them, and an idea had flashed through my brain. I asked him boldly about the dummies. I said, 'Even in that fading light, sir, I could see they were wax figures.'

"He turned a kind of bluish wax color himself. 'Ah,' he cried, 'I'll dine with my staff tonight and tell you the whole queer story; and you'll know then why I cannot run this place as a normal boarding school is run.'

They looked at each other; then at the wild scene about them. The sun was nearing its setting and long streamers of light pierced the titanic clouds, their edges bright vermillion and gold, caught high elevations in a lavish outpouring of color which enveloped at last the huge brick pile on the farther side of the lake, so that it seemed like a monument of ruby floating on blue. Each window gave back the sun, and the trunks of the pines turned red and copper.

On the other side Arthur left them rather abruptly. "I'm not going in just yet. I'll see you at dinner." He strolled around awhile, visited the little graveyard, finally leaned up against a tree and regarded the old academy, from whose cupola high above the eaves it was probable that no bell would sound again.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

The "New" Diet System

YOU are hearing something of a "new" system of diet whereby you do not eat meat when you eat potatoes, or you do not eat bread when you eat meat.

The reason seriously advocated by those who use this diet is that your digestive apparatus should not be asked to do too much work at one time; thus if it is digesting starch it shouldn't be required to digest proteid also.

As a matter of fact there is nothing "new" about this system; every doctor has heard or read about it for a great many years, but there never was a time when it was so much discussed or used.

You may remember how the 18 day diet swept over the country leaving many invalids and causing many deaths. It would appear that this fad is also interesting a great many people, but fortunately it is not likely to cause any serious trouble.

While it must be admitted that the enzymes or ferments in the digestive juices which break up or digest foods, act differently from one another in that one acts on starches, another on proteids, and another on fats, nevertheless as they all flow together at the sight and smell of food there is always enough of them to digest a "mixed" meal.

Will this system of not eating meat or eggs with bread or potatoes help certain individuals?

Dr. Ruth P. Wadsworth, in Collier's, says that while this new system is unnecessary for the average well individual, nevertheless anyone following it really gets a good all-round mixed diet. "If you won't eat starches with your meat you can't eat meat alone so you add vegetables, fresh fruits and salads. And if you can't eat meat and eggs with the other two meals you are bound by variety to have stewed raw fruits with your cereals and more salads and vegetables. Consequently you are getting more variety, more vitamins, more bulk than you ever thought you had time for before."

Now there are a number of young people who have difficulty in digesting starches, and some older people who have difficulty in digesting fats. It is in these cases that this method of talking food might be helpful.

* For the vast majority of people this method is not necessary or even desirable as it is quite "unbalanced" too much on the food, and upsets the usual household arrangements.

However, it makes sure of a good all-round diet and can't hurt you if you want to try it. In fact, it may really help you.

Hay Fever Sufferers

IT IS a mystery to many that one member of a family will be attacked regularly by hay fever and the rest of the family, living in the same household, breathing the same air, never have an attack.

You will admit that this is definite proof that there is something about this hay fever sufferer, some thing about the general condition of his body, or part or parts of his body, that gives him this tendency towards attacks of hay fever.

Dr. M. J. Gutman, Munich, states that the fact that pollen from plants put into the nose of normal persons is removed from the body unchanged, whereas in a hay fever patient sensitive to this particular type of pollen, the pollen is changed, some of it having burst, shows that the mucous lining of the nose, or the mucous (the liquid on the lining of the nose) differs from that of a normal person.

As you know the hay fever patient suffers with an inflammation of the eyes, nose, throat and bronchial tubes.

It is unfortunate that so many school teachers are afflicted with it, as it not only tires them but makes them very irritable. In addition to the symptoms in the eyes, nose, throat and chest, in a number of cases there are skin eruptions such as hives (urticaria), intestinal disturbances and nervous symptoms.

Manufacturers of dust proof and noise proof windows are now quite widely advertising the use of these windows in relieving hay fever symptoms.

Naturally, for a sleeping room, equipped with one of these devices, doors and key hole would have to be plugged, but certainly the patient should get relief during the hours of sleep, which might enable him to be fairly comfortable the rest of the time.

The treatment of hay fever continues the same, that is injections of serum, beginning two to three months before the usual attack occurs.

While this has definitely helped a great number, it has not helped others, and so other measures are necessary—going away to a district where there is little or no pollen in the air, living in chambers or rooms a number of hours a day the air of which is kept free of pollen.

For a great number of sufferers the use of various remedies containing adrenalin gives considerable relief.

THEY started up the long walk, Morris between Horowitz and Gould. Behind them, below the hill upon which the house stood, was a million-eyed winking vista—Hollywood.

Suddenly Morris halted. He stole a quick sidewise glance at Gould, made a throat-clearing noise, and said: "Say, listen; maybe we oughtn't to gang in on him like this without warning. Suppose he's—well, that he doesn't want visitors tonight. You know what I mean."

Gould puffed out his breath impatiently. Horowitz pointed toward the house ahead, demanding:

"Look—does a guy meek private phenaglings wit' de sheds opp end all de light on, once? Besides, who ever hoid of S. J. fooling around, hah?"

"You're talking," Morris persisted, "about when his wife's here. What he'll do with her gone to Europe for six months is something else, maybe."

As they moved on, mounting ten steps to the broad veranda, Gould stated with finality:

"Well, however that may be, it doesn't appear that he's cutting any didos this evening."

Just then the row of windows to their right went dark. Morris drew back as if encountering high voltage.

"There!" he gutturaled. "What does that look like? Let's beat it!"

Over his head Horowitz and Gould exchanged glances of amused contempt. Horowitz punched the bell button.

An overhead lantern lit up and the door opened on a tall thin fellow in outsavay and wing collar.

"Ah, good evening, Graves," said Gould. "Is Mr. Farreges at home?"

"Uh—no, sir, he's not." The butler seemed ill at ease. Looking past him into the room still illuminated, Gould saw a tea wagon that held bottles, glasses, and what looked like a plate of small cakes.

He stepped forward, deftly crowding aside the reluctant Graves.

"Quite all right. I see you're expecting him back shortly. We'll wait. Come along, Jake—Frank."

Curiosity conquered Morris' hesitance. He sidled around to get a look inside. When he saw what Gould had seen, he muttered something, shook his head once more, then scudded in behind the other two.

"Come on—let's blow," he urged; "the old boy's liable to pop in any minute now and catch us here."

"Catch us!" Gould's echo was an explosion of scorn. "Say, that's certainly rare! I thought it was rather the other way around. And I've decided not to leave. I'll stay, and when he comes I'll denounce him as he deserves to be denounced. Think of his poor, trusting wife, only two days on her way and with never a suspicion that he's a moral leper!"

"Horowitz, silent since their entrance, now leaned near Gould with a perceptibly gleaming eye to exclaim:

"Veil, I don't knowing so much ubber dis moral leopard stuff, but I got it a idea: Here's our chance to pot de screws on S. J. end mek sure from vhat ve hoped ve could talk him into tonight—ain't it?"

A thin smile creased the other's mouth.

"Jake, either you're smart, too, or good at mental telepathy. That's one of the chief reasons I'm staying. A man like that should be made to pay."

"Well," Morris interjected unhappily, "I think we ought to scram."

Gould put on his most impressive manner.

"Now, see here, Frank," he commenced; "we're three decently married men ourselves and—"

There were steps on the porch outside; a key scraped into the lock. Morris reached up and clutched Gould's shoulder.

"Listen!" he begged in a swift whisper. "There he comes! Let's run for it and get out the back way."

Without reply, Gould jerked free and dropped hastily into a chair, assuming a careless pose.

From the vestibule sounded chatting voices as the outer door closed. They came nearer; one masculine, the other two figures appeared in the archway, and stopped short. A split second of dead silence, then Gould sprang up and began loudly:

"Why, Mr. Farreges—really, I don't know what to say—I—"

The woman shrank back and in a choked voice cried:

"George—!"

Body gone suddenly rigid, Gould peered strickenly through the half shadows, gasped:

"Edna! What in God's name—?"

Again one instant of utter stillness. Farreges had turned his back to them all and stood motionless, with sagging shoulders. At last from the corner came Morris' sorrowful wail:

"See, I said you should have left. I couldn't tell you it was because your wife was with him, or you'd've smacked me. But I knew it; she told me about this date when I was out with her last night, and I just remembered it when we saw the lights go out."

Steady Filtration of Japanese Into Brazil

Japanese colonists in Brazil now number about 140,000, according to an investigation made recently with the assistance of the bureau of international research of Harvard university and Radcliffe college. They are there as the result of a varying stream of emigration which began about 1907.

These colonists own about 1,225,000 acres, and the greater part of them are settled in the state of Sao Paulo—where they number 125,000—and the adjoining state of Minas Geraes. A few thousand live in the northern part of the country.

The first Japanese colony was established in 1912, in Iguape, Sao Paulo, where the Overseas Enterprise Joint Stock company of Japan owns at present a plantation of more than 154,000 acres. The immigration began with contract laborers, needed because the coffee industry was suffering from a shortage of labor. Practically all the Japanese in this region are engaged in agriculture.

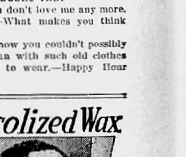

The government-subsidized Yokohama-Buenos Aires line of the Osaka Shosen Kaisha brings the emigrant to his new home and the supervision of the Overseas company continues in Brazil.

Support the ball team. Some good games are scheduled for the next few days. Show your appreciation to the boys by turning out to the games. You may be surprised at the brand of ball they are playing.

Before another year rolls around, the business people of Avon Park should get together and plan a celebration for the next Fourth. The last one held here seven or eight years ago was a tremendous success, we are told. But it is about time for another one. Let's keep this in mind, make an early start and bring the crowds to Avon Park next year.

Judging from recent happenings, the German people are about fed up with Hitler's dictatorship. True, the Nazis have an effective way of suppressing opposition, but ten thousand will spring up to take the place of each one shot down, as history teaches us. Hitler can no more get away with it than President Roosevelt could have every man in this country executed who disagrees with him on the New Deal. When rulers lose their leadership, they lose their power over their people, and oftentimes lose their heads in the bargain.

Lake Byrd Lodge, site of Camp Wingmann, is perhaps the most ideally situated camp site in this part of the state. A commodious log-style club house, set amid spacious grounds on sparkling Lake Byrd to afford swimming, boating and fishing offers every requisite for the ideal summer camp. Tennis courts, woods trails for hiking, good roads, and all within a short distance of town leaves nothing to be desired. With proper exploitation this place could be operated all summer long as a camp to provide outings for various organizations over the state.

Our Columbus Red Birds have at last landed at the top of the heap in the American Association, and it looks like they are good to repeat last season's performance by winning another pennant. These Avon Park trained boys have been putting up a determined fight since the opening of the season, and it looks now like they will continue to "go places." But they have stiff competition in Indianapolis and Minneapolis, who are still battling for first place, with only a game or two separating the three leaders, while Louisville trails a few points behind them for fourth place. So close is the race that only fourteen games separate the league-leading Red Birds from the last-place Toledo club.

One of the most successful Fourth of July celebrations held in this section in recent years was staged in Wauchula Wednesday. A frog jumping contest was a novel feature, in which a Bowling Green frog established a new world's record by leaping 13 feet and seven inches. Between three and four thousand people were fed at a free fish fry provided by the chamber of commerce at noon. A baseball game in the afternoon, followed by horse racing, a wrestling match and dancing at night rounded out a full day and night program. The streets were jammed with visitors from miles around. Congressman Peterson was among the notables attending. It was a gala day for Wauchula and one that will be remembered for many days to come.

The Relief administration announces a survey to determine the number of relief clients available for farm work, and has hopes of starting a "back to the land" movement to alleviate conditions among the unemployed. If the FERA will confine its efforts in this respect strictly to farmers and those who have first hand knowledge of farming, there is hope of eventually placing many of our unemployed back on the farm where they can make a living for themselves and families. But to place on the farm townspeople of all walks of life—grocery clerks, office men, factory hands and any others who might apply for a farm—would not be helping the situation but would eventually result in greater misery for these than if they toughed it out in town. There is nothing so pitiable as a city man—physically and temperamentally unfit for the rigors of farm life—attempting to farm. Abandoned shacks dot the landscape in certain sections of Florida, stark evidence of the failure of "white collar" farmers, induced to come to this state through alluring advertisements of "ten acres and plenty." Let's have no more of that.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By RUSSELL KAY

CHICAGO: Honest there ought to be a law against sendin' a guy to the World's Fair and expectin' him to gather his wits, while here, sufficiently to write a connected yarn. It just can't be done.

I was up here last year you remember and I thought I'd seen the Fair, but they've made so many changes and improvements that I hardly recognized it.

In company with a group of Florida newshawks, I arrived here last Monday. Good old George Clements and head-man Earl Brown gave us a hand of welcome that would make a King's reception look like a flop.

We have been wined and dined, escorted and fussed over like we were a flock of diplomats. While we've only been here four days we have seen more than the average person sees in a life time.

Our first stop, of course, was at the Florida Exhibit and I'm tellin' you it is a WOW. I didn't see how they could improve on last year's, but I'm a grandfathers clock if they haven't done so.

The main exhibit is a knock out. No other state can touch it. Personally I think California comes nearest, but they aren't even close enough to see our dust.

Florida gets about three times the play of any other state exhibit on the grounds and is presenting the state's charms and advantages to millions who will eventually come to Florida to invest and make their home.

If you take all the advertising Florida has done in the past and roll it up in a ball it still won't stack up with what has been, and is being, accomplished by this exhibit and don't let any Chamber of Commerce Secretary or so-called publicity hound tell you otherwise.

Florida's participation at the Century of Progress last year brought more people to Florida than all other advertising combined and it will do as much for us again this year.

I stood in the Florida Exotic Gardens, which adjoin the main building, and watched the folks walk through with their eyes popping out, and their tongues more than waggin'. I'm telling you it leaves all visitors simply agog.

The folks they've got up here on this job are the biggest gluttons for work I ever saw. They put in about 14 hours a day and are talking Florida to thousands.

Just to find out what it was like I tried standin' at the information desk and answerin' questions. Boy from the amount of interest these visitors are showing in real estate, small farms, groves, water front homes and the like, I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see another boom a darn sight sooner than a lot of us have been expectin' it.

The type of folks making these inquiries are high class. A lot of them know what they want and they've got the money to pay for it. Not one out of ten that I had the pleasure of talking to, had been to Florida but every one of them wanted to come and a lot of them are plannin' to get down next winter.

There's just no use my tryin' to tell you the whole story in one column. It can't be done, so we'll have another chapter next week.

State Press Comment

THE FLORIDA EXHIBIT AT CHICAGO.

To try describe the Florida exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair would be on a par with an attempt to paint a lily, a rose or a Florida flame vine or hibiscus in bloom. It can't be done with justice to the masterpiece in showmanship which Florida presents for the entertainment and edification of the thousands from all parts of the United States and the world, who pass through the exotic garden and Florida Hall, every day. Col. H. F. Miller, director of Federal and State's Relations perhaps came nearer a good description in a few words when he said the other day: "The Florida exhibit is not only the best exhibit at A Century of Progress but the best and most beautiful exhibit ever made at any world's fair held anywhere," and that is high praise from high quarters.

A garden without birds is lacking in something but the Florida garden at the world's fair is not lacking on that score. As a matter of fact its showing of macaws, cockatoos, parrots, of several varieties, and other tropical birds, as well as canaries which really sing, is one of the reasons for the popularity of the exhibit. The space in front of the giant aviary in which many of the tropical birds are housed are crowded with interested men, women, and children at all times, while the parrots which are permitted to wander about the garden at will always can be depended upon to have galleries of interested spactators.—Ft. Myers Floridan.

NEEDY GET HELP.

Honest and sincere efforts are being made to relieve the needy people of this country today. An extensive program of relief which has been under way for many months is being broadened and improved so that every available assistance is being given.

From such activities as the Civilian Conservation Corps, which is rebuilding young men into strong, healthy individuals and providing an income for their dependents, on down through the various FERA programs which include care of the sick, health and sanitation measures, work for unemployed and numerous other activities, America's unfortunates are being cared for on a much broader scale than ever before in history.

Then, the various loan departments and organizations operating through the national government, the federal bank deposit measures and the various other governmental activities along these lines are designed to help pull us out of the depression and put us back on the road to good times.

A wise and generous government is doing everything possible for the relief and care of its citizens in this time of great stress. Its success depends upon the support and co-operation of every citizen.—Wauchula Advocate.

NOTES OF THE FAIR

By GEORGE H. CLEMENTS

Freckle Face Day—the day when any boy or girl having 25 or more sun spots on their mugs, were admitted free, brought another tremendous crowd of youngsters to the exposition and they literally swarmed all over the place, the Florida Exotic Garden and Florida Hall included. However, they were an orderly lot and there were few reports of mischievous vandalism. The macaws, cockatoos, parrots, toucans and other tropical birds in the big aviary, with their constant chattering, proved a magnet for the holiday crowd and Exhibit attendants were kept busy keeping the kids moving to avoid dangerous congestion.

o o o

The visiting Florida newspapermen had a crowded four days on the occasion of their recent trip to the World's Fair, beginning with a dinner in the Cafe Francaise in the French concession, Monday evening. The speech of the evening was made by Rufus C. Dawes, president of the exposition. Talks were also made by E. Ross Bartley of the Publicity department of the World's Fair and by Mr. Brown. Under the guidance of Harry Illion, the entire party was taken through the Midway and visited every concession on that street of mirth.

o o o

Tuesday the visitors began the day by having their pictures taken for the newspapers, followed by a luncheon in the director's room of the administration building. Then came a tour of the grounds by bus; a view of the grounds from boats through the lagoons, a visit to the house of Magic and the Wings of a Century, the afternoon closing with a dinner given by George H. Clements, director of Promotion for the Florida exhibit, at Old Heidelberg. German eatables and drinkables marked the meal. After dinner, the evening was spent in a tour of the several foreign concessions including the Streets of Paris and several villages where glimpses of life in foreign lands were given.

o o o

The Armour concession employs several hundred young women and every last one of them is a redhead. In fact none but titian tinted girls need apply for work there as the possession of red hair is the first requisite, good looks and ability to do the work coming as after considerations. The first impression gained by those who enter the place to see how meat products are handled is that a rainbow of an aurora borealis has just burst in the place, the lights being so placed as to accentrate the brightness of the red tops of the girls. It is some show, to be made by so prosaic a thing as a packing house.

o o o

Among recent visitors at the Florida exhibit, was Dr. L. Lee Kraus of San Diego, Cal., president of the Bureau of Moral and Hygienic Education. He was very loud in his praise and charm of Florida Hall and the tropical garden so filled with specimens of tropical plant life. He expressed the belief that thousands would be moved by the exhibit as his being moved, to visit Florida next winter to see the real thing at first hand. "It is a marvelous creation," said Dr. Kraus as he left the building.

o o o

Dr. Kraus is not the only Californian to visit the Florida exhibit. They have been here by hundreds and scores of them have registered with requests that they be sent descriptive literature which will enable them to plan tours of the state next winter. Two groups of four each, who came to the fair shortly after the formal opening already have driven to Florida and have returned to tell the management that the picture presented in Florida Hall and the Exotic garden have not been overdrawn.

WHEN you are suffering, you want relief—not tomorrow—not next week—but right away. DR. MILES ANTI-PAIN PILLS relieve in just a few minutes—less than half the time required for many other pain-relieving medicines to act.

Next time you have a Headache, or Neuralgia, or Muscular, Sciatic, Rheumatic, or Periodic Pains, just take an Anti-Pain Pill. Learn for yourself how prompt and effective these little pain relievers are. You will never again want to use slower, less effective, less palatable medicines, after you have used Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills.

I am much pleased with your Anti-Pain Pills. They sure are wonderful for a headache and for functional pains. I have tried every kind of pills for headache, but none satisfied me as your Anti-Pain Pills have.

Lakeland Man Will Advertise Florida

Lakeland, July 5.—(FNS)—Another Florida salesman, Judge E. E. Calloway of Lakeland, left this week on a three months' tour through New England and the middle west states to deliver lectures on the advantages and attractions of Florida. The speaker, one of Florida's outstanding orators, will extend to the people of other states an invitation to visit Florida not only during the winter months but during the summer.

Under the auspices of the Florida Bureau of Publicity, one of the Henry L. Doherty organizations, the addresses will be made to audiences in all the centers in the territory to be covered. In addition to the lectures included in the itinerary, the messages will be broadcast by nationwide radio each week.

Those having property in Florida which they have all but abandoned will be contacted, wherever possible, in an endeavor to revive their interest in their holdings and to join in the promotion and development of the state.

Per capita consumption of milk and cream in the cities and towns of the United States last year was 38.8 gallons compared with 40 gallons in 1931 and 1932, 40.7 gallons in 1930, and a peak of 40.8 gallons in 1929, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"Simply Marvelous"

This is the way Frank Hughes, representative of Scenic Highlands, describes the Florida Exhibit at Chicago Fair.

We Floridians have sold the outside world on our State, let us sell ourselves more thoroughly.

Those of us who can make the trip, should visit the Fair. Those who cannot should find satisfaction in helping to make it a success by cooperating more fully with the Commission in charge.

Let us all boost together for Florida.

District Meeting of Woodmen of World

Members of District Three of the Woodmen of the World spent a most enjoyable day Wednesday, July Fourth, in Avon Park.

Guests arrived throughout the morning and at noon a bountiful picnic lunch was spread on the shores of Highland Lakes. The afternoon was spent in the usual picnic fashion, with races and contests being enjoyed in the water and on land. A most entertaining feature of the afternoon was the concert given by the Woodmen's Boys' Band of Tampa.

In the evening a meeting was held in the Woodmen of the World lodge hall, with George W. Pitts, of Tampa, district superintendent, presiding. The speaker for this occasion was Mr. Beers, of St. Petersburg, who delivered a very interesting address.

Drill teams from Lakeland, Tampa and the Victory Guards of Avon Park demonstrated their ability for fancy drilling in a number of beautiful drills.

During the day there were about 250 present, representing Tampa, Bartow, Sebring, St. Petersburg, Frostproof, Leesburg, Avon Park and other towns.

Mrs. Anderson Entertains Club

Mrs. C. Parke Anderson was a charming hostess Monday afternoon when she entertained her bridge club.

Bouquets of summer flowers were placed about the solarium of the Anchamel apartments, where two tables were in play. At the conclusion of the games, the high score prize was awarded to Mrs. Harcourt Johnson.

A delicious sweet course was served by the hostess to the following guests: Mrs. M. E. Covington, Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. Harcourt Johnson, Mrs. E. F. Carmichael, Mrs. E. W. Hartt, Mrs. D. G. Perry and Mrs. E. E. Melton.

DETACHABLE CAPES MAKE FOR VARIETY

PATTERN 9943

Detachable capes are so fascinating and so smart! This is a lovely dress for town wear, and it is adaptable to all sorts of occasions. It's especially attractive if made of a dotted print, as shown in the picture; but any of the checks, stripes or figured fabrics are nice for it. The dress is uniquely fashionable in that it combines tall slenderness with well-planned curves. The curved hip line is repeated by the curve of the yoke, collar and cape. Very becoming to every one!

Pattern 9943 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 6 yards 39-inch fabric and ¼ yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York, N. Y.

Bedtime Story by Thornton W. Burgess

PETER GETS ANOTHER SURPRISE

"DID you hear my cousin, Brownie the Thrasher, sing?" asked Jenny Wren of Peter Rabbit.

"Did I hear him sing?" replied Peter, his eyes shining at the memory. "He sang especially for me. He has a wonderful voice, has Brownie, and when he is singing he acts as if he enjoys it himself and knows what a good singer he is. I noticed that that long tail of his hung straight down, the same way Mr. Wren's does when he sings."

Peter Blinked and Stared, for He Was a Very Much Surprised Rabbit.

"Of course it did," retorted Jenny promptly. "That's a family trait. The tails of both my other big cousins do the same thing."

"Wha—wha—what's that? Have you got more big cousins?" cried Peter, staring up at Jenny Wren as if she were some strange person he had never seen before.

"Certainly," retorted Jenny. "Mocker the Mocking-bird and Kitty the Cat-bird belong to Thrasher's family, and that makes them second cousins to me."

Such a funny expression as there was on Peter's face! He felt that Jenny Wren was telling the truth, but it was surprising news to him, and so hard to believe that for a few minutes, he couldn't find his tongue to ask another question. Finally he ventured to ask very timidly, "Does Brownie imitate the songs of other birds the way Mocker and Kitty do?"

Jenny Wren shook her head very decidedly. "No," said she; "he's perfectly satisfied with his own song."

"He ought to be," declared Peter. "Anyone who can sing as he can should be quite contented."

Before another word could be said, the clear whistle of Glory the Cardinal sounded from a tree just a little way off. Instantly Peter forgot all about Jenny Wren's relatives and scampered over to that tree. You see, Glory is so beautiful that Peter never loses a chance to see him.

As Peter sat staring up into the tree trying to get a glimpse of Glory's red coat, the clear, sweet whistle sounded once more. It drew Peter's eyes to one of the upper branches, but instead of the beautiful brilliant coat of Glory the Cardinal, he saw a bird about the size of Welcome Robin, dressed in ashy gray with two white bars on his wings and white feathers on the outer edges of his tail. He was very trim and neat and his tail hung straight down after the manner of Brownie's when he was singing. It was a long tail, but not as long as Brownie's, Peter blinked and stared, for he was a very much surprised rabbit.

Question Box
By ED WYNN
The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have just written a song. The lyrics are very sad. They are about a young man telling how he made love to a young girl and of her promise to marry him, then on the day before the wedding she tells him she will not marry him because she found out he didn't have any money. Will you please give me a suitable title for my song?

Yours truly,
ART ISTIC.

Answer—The best title for your song (according to the above description) would be "She Looked Me Up in Bradstreet's, Now I'm Dun."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Is it true that a Scotchman "loves HIS whisky?"

Sincerely,
JACK KNIFE.

Answer—It is true that he loves whisky, but not "his." He loves someone else's.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a young lady 22 years of age and considered very pretty. I am keeping company with three young men about my own age. Is it all right for me to go with three different fellows?

Yours truly,
I. M. A. FLIRT.

Answer—It is not all right if the other two find it out.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

In the government income tax notice, mention is always made of "A Full Return." What do you think that means?

Sincerely,
D. LINQUENT.

Answer—To me "A Full Return" always means when a man comes back home drunk.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I hear a great deal of talk about "Mermaids." I don't believe there are such things, do you? If so, maybe you are smart enough to tell me where they sleep?

Sincerely,
C. BEAST.

Answer—My dear child, "Mermaids" when they are little babies sleep in "the cradle of the deep," and when they grow up, "in the bed of the ocean."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have heard several authors of books referred to as "chemists." I know some authors have different degrees conferred on them, but never "chemist." Can you tell me what makes an author a "chemist?"

Truly yours,
L. REED ALOTT.

Answer—An author is called a "chemist" when his book becomes a drag on the market.

Model Farm House of the Future

ILLUSTRATING the changes in American living conditions, this model farm house, erected by The Country Home, a national farm magazine, attracts much attention at the World's Fair in Chicago. It is in a beautifully landscaped lot adjoining the dairy exhibits. New ideas are embodied in its construction, which is of brick, steel and concrete. The lower floor contains living room, kitchen, wash room, laundry, farm office, work shop and two-car garage. The upper floor has four bedrooms and bath, plus a "roof deck" over the entire garage. The brick used is reinforced with steel rods, precast in panels, and set in place much as the so-called fabricated houses are built. The house is fireproof and can be built for less than $5,000. As shown at the World's Fair, it is completely equipped with all modern improvements. The house has no cellar, its architects maintaining that a cellar is obsolete and expensive.

A ROOM IN A HOSPITAL

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SEEN in the morning light, the creamy walls
Are tinged with the faint luster of the dawn.
Outside my room, a rustle in the halls
Whispers another night has come and gone.

The rattle of the trays proclaims the hours,
As steadily the day moves into night. . . .
There may be visitors, new books, bright flowers
To touch the heart with exquisite delight.

There are good thoughts to share in spite of pain,
New friends to make, old friends to greet once more;
A slow advance toward health and strength again
To meet that strange old world outside my door.

But in the meantime, my affection holds
One world alone. . . . The sunlight speeds the gloom,
As I lie here, while all my love enfolds
My world . . . the narrow walls of one small room. . . .

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

"WE'RE ALL HAVING A DREADFUL TIME"

"LET'S be pleasant to each other. We are all having a dreadful time."

That was the inscription on a flag carried through the streets of London by a man described as "a forlorn outcast struggling with the wind-blown banner which he was barely able to carry."

"Let's be pleasant to each other. We are all having a dreadful time."

Was the man who carried that flag a striking workman? Was he a hunger marcher? Was he a Democrat, Fascist, Communist? When people carry banners they are usually campaigning for something. What did this man want?

I should say he was as close to a modern Messiah, as we shall see. And that what he wanted would not be any particular "thing"; it would not be the success of a certain party over any other party. It would be the happiness of the human race. "Peace on earth, good will to men."

If the man who carried that banner could implant his message in the hearts of every man, woman and child, he would certainly get what he wanted. If this modern Messiah, who wanted nothing for himself, had the power of leaders not so wise or disinterested to line up men and women behind him, there need be no more marching, no "cause," no strife.

If all the various factions in the world today who are trying to achieve something or to get somewhere by destroying some one else would say in their hearts, "Let's be pleasant to each other. We are all having a dreadful time"—I need not tell my readers what would happen. The millenium of peace and happiness would be here for all of us.

Mother's Cook Book

FOR WARM DAYS

ICED coffee prepared as usual, served with ice, sugar and cream, according to taste, makes a most refreshing drink for a warm day, served at luncheon. Here is a treasured recipe which it will be well to prepare and have ready for any emergency.

Lemon Soup.

Add the juice and grated peel of a lemon to four cupfuls of water, bring to a boil and thicken slightly with three teaspoonfuls of arrow root mixed with a little cold water. It is better to add the juice of the lemon without cooking, just as it is served.

Lemon Sirup.

Grate the rind from one lemon, add the juice of six lemons with four cupfuls of sugar and two cupfuls of water. Boil together for ten minutes; cool and put into a bottle in the ice chest. When serving pour a tablespoonful or two of the sirup into a glass, add chipped ice with cold water and serve at once. This is so good and is always ready to serve at a moment's notice.

Good Taste Today

By EMILY POST

Author of "ETIQUETTE," "THE BLUE BOOK OF SOCIAL USAGE," Etc.

MAN AND GIRL

DEAR Mrs. Post: How far may a girl run after a man?

Answer: Catlike, she may do a little stalking! But "run?" Not a step. The freedom of today allows her to go to meet him halfway, but the girl who runs, runs after a man who runs faster.

To be sure, she can invite him to any sort of party, so long as it is not just a sit-at-home party of two. She can say even to one who has been lately introduced to her: "Come and see me sometime! I'm almost always at home after five." Or whenever she likes to be at home.

She may also say to one she knows at all well: "I'll answer, if you write me." She may also buy tickets, but not often, for an entertainment and telephone him, "I have two tickets for the game (or theater), would you like to go with me?"

It isn't so much what she does, as the way she does it. A girl who is apparently impersonal, who is "cat-like" in disguising her intent, may pursue quite actually and with success, where one who bounds in pursuit, like a puppy that has slipped his collar, has lost the prize at the start. All of which is mere common sense.

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you say something about the behavior of the young on the street who seem to live in chattering, giggling groups?

Answer: School girls, factory girls, or any other young women, who troop into the street together, should avoid walking abreast in interlocking giggling and chattering groups, which prevent other pedestrians from getting by, attract the attention of others, and invite the flirtation of any man who may stroll into view. If you must stand and talk on the sidewalk, at least leave a little room for people to pass, and don't shout or "rough-house" or giggle. The place for "rough-house" is a gymnasium. If you must shout, do it at a baseball game. And if you feel like giggling, say your multiplication table or take a course in impulse control! But whatever you do—don't self consciously let your nerves get the best of good sense.

Spontaneous laughter is the most delicious, the most contagious sound in the world, but forced giggling is as annoying and as inexcusable as the continued flapping of a shutter.

AN EAR FOR PURITY OF SPEECH

DEAR Mrs. Post: Although I graduated from the University of X—with honors—and have excellent letters of personal recommendation from members of the faculty, I am unable to qualify for the position of instructor in an eastern college because of my voice and pronunciation. Both, I am told, are typical of the X section of our country, and seemingly displeasing to eastern prejudices. As a devoted reader of your column may I ask if you can possibly tell me what to do to acquire an attractive voice and pronunciation? I am intelligent, I think, and I am willing to go through any amount of intensive study if I only knew how to go about it.

Answer: The best advice I can give is to try to develop an acute ear for spoken sound. Every one knows what is meant by an ear for music, but very rarely does anyone emphasize the much greater importance of an ear for intonation, or the purity of the spoken vowel sounds. It seems to me that just as such naturalists and entomologists as William Hamilton Gibson and Henri Fabre have proved that not one pair of eyes in a million behold the romance and drama of insect life along every foot of country roadside, it is equally true that not one pair of ears in a million hear with precision the scale of spoken sound. And yet every child in the world has this exquisite sensitiveness, which grows each year less acute. Of course, I don't know whether we are so uncaringly deaf (as we are uncaringly blind to the insect life of the hedgerows) or whether at the end of babyhood our ears fail to hear clearly, just as our eyes at the end of middle age fail to see clearly.

As I have said, I can't think of better advice to give you than to try to HEAR. If you can hear the difference between a thin flat tone and a full round one, between a voice that comes down to rest on the dominant note and one that hangs in the air; if you can hear the entire range of vowel sounds as clearly as a violinist hears musical notes, the chances are that your tongue will produce without effort what your ear exacts.

Cave Fish Lose Eyes

When fishes live confined to the dark waters of caves their eyes nearly or completely disappear. There are a few species of fish whose habitat is practically limited to cave waters, but most of them are of species to be found in outside water; the loss of sight is a matter of individuals and not of species.

Literary Output Shows Falling Off Since 1931

Last year 1,272 fewer books were published in this country than in 1931, the exact total of books published being 9,035, according to statistics in the Publishers' Weekly. There was a slight increase in the number of books of fiction—there were 1,088 last year as compared with 1,042 in 1932—but juvenile titles dropped sharply from 1,018 in 1931 last year.

There was a considerable drop also in what is called "general literature," 387 as compared to 404, and poetry and drama were cut from 711 to 573.

Ninety-nine fewer titles were issued fitting the classification "Religion, Theology," and there are 99 fewer books in "Geography, Travel." A biennial census of manufacturers made by the government shows a 25 per cent drop in the number of volumes manufactured in 1931 as compared to 1929. The total for 1929 was 211,853,000 volumes printed. The total in 1931 was 154,235,000.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM NEURITIS?

American and European Scientists Agree That Mineral Water Is Beneficial

TRY THIS NATURAL WAY

People spend hundreds of millions of dollars every year going to the great mineral water health resorts of Europe and America.

Many of these people have to travel thousands of miles. Many of them were suffering untold pain from "rheumatic" aches, from arthritis, from neuritis, from gout. Others suffered from certain stomach ailments or excess acid or sluggishness or a general run-down condition.

The scientific and medical records of Europe and America show that a very large percentage of these people gained blessed relief and help by these natural mineral water treatments.

Today, however, you do not have to travel long distances to partake of the healthful qualities of fine natural mineral water. You do not even have to pay the excessive cost of having it shipped to you in quart or gallon containers. For Crazy Water Crystals bring to your own home the precious minerals of one of the world's fine mineral waters in crystal form at a great saving in expense.

To Crazy Water Crystals absolutely nothing is added. All you do is add Crazy Water Crystals to your drinking water and you have a great mineral water which has benefited millions.

If you, or any of your friends, suffer from "rheumatic" aches or pains we suggest you investigate Crazy Water Crystals at once. Just ask any of the millions of people who have given them a full and fair trial and you will realize how beneficial they have been to so many sufferers.

The standard size box costs only $1.50 and makes enough mineral water for several weeks treatment. Crazy Water Co., Mineral Wells, Texas.

School Bus Bodies Must Be of Steel

Tallahassee, July 5.—(FNS)—State Superintendent of Public Schools W. S. Cawthon stated that the State Board of Education would not modify its recent order requiring steel bodies for all school buses. Present buses must be replaced with steel-body equipment on and after July 1, 1935, according to instructions issued to all county school boards.

Governor Sholtz stated that the rule was adopted as a means of increased safety for school children. About 15 children were killed in school bus accidents during the past year.

U.S.W.V. Auxiliary Meeting Postponed

The regular meeting of the Richmond P. Hobson Auxiliary No. 16, U. S. W. V., scheduled for Thursday, July 5, has been postponed until Thursday, July 12. The meeting will be held at the home of Norton T. Smith, Avon Park, and following an afternoon session a covered dish supper will be served.

Important Decision In Phone Rate Case

Jacksonville, July 5.—(FNS)—A three-judge federal court Monday denied an interlocutory injunction of the Peninsular Telephone company to restrain the State Railroad Commission from enforcing reductions in the exchange rate in the city of St. Petersburg.

The denial was based on the hearing of a supplemental bill to an original which was filed in December and upon which a denial was issued at a hearing in April.

The railroad commission contended the company made a profit of 15 percent while the company claimed its profit was only three percent.

Judge Nathan P. Bryan said an act passed by congress in May took away the power of federal three-judge courts of granting injunctions in rate cases and that this was an important consideration in denying the application.

Enlistments Open In CCC From County

Applicants for enlistment in the Civilian Conservation Corps from Highlands county will leave Friday, July 13 for the camp at Lakeland, according to information given out this week by Mrs. Willimon, local director of the FERA.

Star Attractions At Avon Theatre

A week of what appears to be excellent entertainment is billed for showing at the Avon theatre during the current week. On Saturday a western feature, "Battling Buckaroo" starring Lane Chandler is scheduled. On the same program will be shown the final chapter of "The Three Musketeers" and the opening sequences of "Gordon of Ghost City" the new serial picture starring Buck Jones and Madge Bellamy.

Kay Francis brings her superb acting to the screen on Sunday and Monday in her latest picture, "Dr. Monica." Supporting Miss Francis in this film are such able players as Warren William, Jean Muir and Verree Teasdale. The film is rated as one of the best pictures of the current season. Walt Disney's "Three Little Pigs" will be shown on the same program.

A mystery thriller that held Broadway spellbound for months is "Double Door" which comes to the screen of the Avon theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday. The picture is made by Paramount who purchased the screen rights to it after its successful run as a stage play. Mary Morris who starred in the stage version plays the leading role in the film. Others in the cast are Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor and Sir Guy Standing.

Marie Dressler will appear in her last picture before her recent illness, "Her Sweetheart (Christopher Bean)" on Thursday and Friday. It can truthfully be said that Miss Dressler is the outstanding feminine personality of the screen. Thousands daily hopefully scan the newspapers for news of this great star in her fight with death. Her fans will undoubtedly throng to the theatre on Thursday and Friday to see this her latest picture. Lionel Barrymore is featured.

Tank Truck Hero Gets Thanks From Grateful Housewife

He wears no medals. He labors not to the strains of martial music. Yet he is a hero. At least, one housewife thinks so.

One wintry afternoon in January, an anxious housewife glanced out of the living-room window and observed with apprehensive eyes the snow clouds piling up again from the north. It had snowed almost constantly for two days and the earth was far hidden beneath its white blanket. A guilty conscience reminded the woman that she had not ordered the fuel oil which her husband had asked her to telephone for, three days previously. From upstairs came the cough of a child.

Hastily the housewife repaired to the telephone and called a number. "I need some furnace oil right away," she said. "All our trucks are out, madam," was the reply. "But I'm afraid that our tank is practically empty and I have a sick child in the house," she wailed. "We'll do everything we can," the promise came.

At the window again, she almost moaned as the first huge snow flakes floated down. Her eyes went to the thermometer outside and saw the temperature dropping, dropping. A moan of the wind, and the snowfall became a veritable blizzard. Perhaps her imagination was becoming supersensitive; but she could feel the house becoming chilly.

Twilight began to fall, and the snow increased its furious beating down. Her hopes were almost dead when the telephone jangled. "We've been able to locate one of our trucks. But it's 20 miles away. Our driver promises to get to your house if the huge snowdrifts don't stop him."

Night drew on. Hubby arrived home, eyebrows a fleecy white. "Whew," he exclaimed, stamping his feet, "I thought I'd never be able to walk the three blocks. Sure would hate to be out on a night like this." Sick at heart, his wife had not the courage to confess. Already she had abandoned hopes of the truck.

Of course the story has a happy ending. Within two hours' time, the orange truck arrived, its delivery man almost frozen to his high perch. Taking only a few minutes to warm his numb fingers at the kitchen stove, he soon had filled the oil tank. And then — "Funny thing, ma'am," he said, "I thought I might not be able to get my truck through the storm, but the only mishap I had was a broken shovel. I broke it, digging my truck out of snowdrifts in reaching here." It was the only mention he made of any difficulty in delivering his important cargo.

As a matter of fact, he didn't even bother to tell his boss. The complete story was known only a few days ago when the Gulf Refining Company received a letter from the housewife, relating the facts and enclosing a contract for next heating season's supply.

500-Mile Record Largely Due to Safer Tires

When you consider that tires are made largely of vegetable compounds— namely, rubber and cotton—it seems almost beyond belief that for all of the 33 entries in the Indianapolis 500-mile race there was not a single tire failure.

Although many of the thousands of spectators noticed that the tires looked unusually large as the cars hurtled past the grandstands, few would have thought that centrifugal force at such speeds increases the size of the tire at least ten percent. This action of the tires is an indication of the terrific forces that are straining and pulling at them, and it was only the advanced engineering by Firestone—that provided the necessary strength and safety for such a tire ordeal. All the cars that qualified were equipped with Firestone tires.

Hour after hour the powerful machines roared down the straightaways and pounded around the curves on the blistering brick track, while the thermometer threatened to set new records for race day temperatures. Record speeds combined with the sun to impose the ultimate of grueling tire tests—for heat and speed are the greatest enemies of tire life. The first ten laps over the hot bricks averaged more than 115 miles per hour. The new world record of 104.865 miles per hour for the 500 miles meant 150 miles per hour on the straightaways.

Cars made fewer pit stops than ever before and tires showed 30 per cent less wear in spite of the high speeds and intense heat. Only 8 of the 33 drivers made even a precautionary tire change, although such changes can be made at the pits without any lost time while the car is being refueled.

In racing and motoring, the two chief causes of premature tire failure are tread separation and internal friction. These two difficulties are overcome by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping by which the high stretch cords are saturated and coated with liquid rubber so that the tread and body of the tire can be welded into one cohesive unit. This means that the cords and fibers of the tire are insulated against the heat of internal friction.

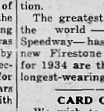

The greatest proving ground in the world — the Indianapolis Speedway— has proved that the new Firestone High Speed tires for 1934 are the safest, strongest, longest-wearing tires ever made.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks and heartfelt appreciation to our friends, and especially to the Masonic fraternity and Order of the Eastern Star, for their kindness and sympathy during the last illness and the death of our husband and father, Edward Osman Williams.

The TIRE SENSATION of '34
THE NEW Firestone
CENTURY PROGRESS TIRE
Beyond Comparison
IN QUALITY AND PRICE
WITH ANY FIRST QUALITY TIRE MADE

As millions of World's Fair visitors saw tires made in the Firestone Factory and Exhibition Building, we asked thousands this question: "What do you value most in a tire?" Car owners from every state in the Union were interviewed —drivers of automobiles, trucks, busses, and tractors—and out of it all came one composite answer: "Give us Blowout Protection, Non-Skid Safety, and Long Wear, at moderate price."

Firestone engineers used every conceivable resource in developing a tire embodying all these qualifications and selling to the public at a price within the reach of every car owner. The answer is the new Firestone Century Progress Tire.

COMPARE
QUALITY—CONSTRUCTION—PRICE

This rugged new tire is in EVERY way the equal or superior of any other first quality tire built, regardless of brand—name—or by whom manufactured or at what price offered for sale. Call on the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store and examine it. We know you will be sold on the rugged quality and you will want to equip your car with these marvelous new tires.

REMEMBER — you save money buying today, as rubber is up 442% and cotton 190% and tire prices cannot remain at these low levels.
