LIVELY FRAGAS AT 'LITTLE CUBA' YESTERDAY A.M.

Attempt to Kidnap and Murder Charged In Warrants

What was apparently a lively fight while it lasted occurred at "Little Cuba" on road eight between here and Frostproof yesterday morning. Being in Polk county officials of that county handled the affair and warrants were sworn out in Bartow by the Rabold brothers, who operate the place, against their alleged attackers. Only meager details could be obtained here and a visit to the place this morning found it closed and locked. Dr. I. W. Chandler was called yesterday afternoon to give medical attention to Frank Rabold, who was shot in the affray, and says he was shot in the shoulder, neck, arm and face and may lose the sight of one eye.

A detailed account of the fracas, under a Bartow dateline, appeared in the Lakeland Evening Ledger of yesterday and reads as follows:

Bartow, March 1.—(Special).—One man was charged with assault with intent to murder and four others were charged with an attempt to kidnap in warrants sworn out here today by Herbert Rabold, who related an action-packed story of a fracas in which his brother, Frank Rabold, was shot and he himself was attacked by several men shortly after 9 o'clock this morning. The affair took place, he said, at "Little Cuba," a filling station and roadside operation by the Rabolds about half-way between Frostproof and Avon Park.

The Rabold brothers appeared at the courthouse shortly before noon and Herbert charged Richard, Earl, Cushing, John, Doe Cushing, Grady Cushing and Charlie Cotton with attempted kidnapping, and Packard Coleman with assault with intent to murder. Frank, slightly wounded in the right arm and shoulder and on the right side of his face reported that a shotgun was fired by Coleman was responsible for his injuries.

Herbert, in the office of County Judge C. M. Wiggins to read out the warrants, told a Ledger and Star-Telegram reporter that he was in the filling station at about 9 o'clock this morning when two trucks carrying about 25 men drove into the yard, and several of them came inside the station.

Calls Brother

He related how they attacked him and tried to kidnap him, but he struggled as they attempted to carry him out and called for Frank, who was sleeping upstairs. Herbert said he recognized the three Cushings and Cotton among his attackers. "Frank came down the back stairs, Herbert stated, and as he stepped out of the back door was felled by a charge from Coleman's gun. The wounded man fixed his shotgun as he fell and said that he believed the scatter-shot had struck the legs of two or three men on one of the trucks.

As the shooting started, Herbert said that the men who were wrestling with him fled to the trucks and drove away.

Bad Blood

It was understood that there has been bad blood between the Rabolds and Cushings for some time, and there were indications that today's affair might have been the aftermath of a first fight between the two families.

Retorters Show Their Skill In Arithmetic

A contest in addition was one of the features of the Rotary club luncheon Wednesday noon. The winner was a visitor, State Airport Engineer W. G. Reich with W. T. Coates second. There was also a round table discussion on the various CWA projects.

CWA PROJECTS BEING WORKED IN THIS COUNTY

Officials at Sebring Issue Report on Various Activities

Reports on CWA projects now under way in Highlands county were released this week by CWA headquarters at Sebring. The report includes the man hours and estimated cost to complete each project. The largest project is that of the court house which is estimated to cost $6,000.25 and for which $300 worth of material has been purchased and is on the job. The report follows:

Proj.	Descrip.	Man- hours	Est. Cost
28-35	Cot House	6729	$295.25
28-12	Janitor	330	140.75
28-A-1	Adm't's Project	6720	568.11

28-32	Airport	6010	2506.05
Total			$18,333.89

The district five, which contemplates much needed repairs to the county courthouse is underway. The repairs, which it is hoped to complete, will cost over $6,000.00 in labor and material.

The Junior Service project supplies a janitor for the third floor of the courthouse, the entire floor is occupied by the CWA and CWS and Emergency Relief Offices and of the surplus Food Distribution staff.

The Administrative project takes care of all personnel needed to run the entire CWA and CWS body at Sebring and Avon Park offices.

The Tool & Sundry project is mandatory, as tools required for all projects in the county are purchased through this project and the employees needed to care for these tools are paid through this project.

The Venus School Bus Road, a very necessary piece of road work under the CWA and CWS body, is in so far as possible. This project is also retained on the working list due to the fact it is not practical to transfer registered CWA workers who live in Venus, to other distant projects in the county.

The final improvements to the Sebring Airport are contained in the reubmission which contemplates the expenditure of $2,000.00 on this project and 6,910 man hours. Airports were classed as essential projects by the Federal CWA in Washington and are much it was mandatory upon the local Administration to push the Sebring airport to completion.

The fifteen Highlands county school projects which remain to be completed are as follows:

Citrus Prices On Increase

Northern Advertising Given Credit for Upward Trend

Better prices for Florida grapefruit are already evident in the larger markets as a result of the grapefruit advertising now appearing in newspapers and going out over the radio, according to W. C. Daniels, president and C. W. Lyons, vice president of the Florida Citrus Advertising Association.

"A daily bombardment of ads was started in New York February 12th," said Mr. J. C. Morton, secretary of the Advertising Association. "A steady gain in grapefruit prices has been noticed in New York from the very start of this advertising. Newspapers there have generously told their readers about the campaign, and prominent doctors have already been made. The weight of all this advertising will be felt throughout this market."

Mr. Daniels also stated that the grapefruit advertising is to be carried on into Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. This means a bolster up grapefruit prices throughout those trading areas.

The campaign will last about four weeks. Funds are provided by shippers who have voluntarily contracted to supply three cents on every box of grapefruit shipped after February 15th. This means a considerable budget which is being judiciously expended for very best results in sales and prices. Grapefruit growers can take heart now that their product is being advertised. I hope that the same arrangement can be perfected for the Valencia orange crop."

Northern Cleric Hammock Speaker

Monsignore J. J. Curran of Wilkes Barre, Pa., will be the speaker at Highlands Hammock Sunday at 3:30 p. m. He is in his home state as an excellent mediator in labor troubles. Monsignore has had a rich experience of life and is the late President Theodore Roosevelt's friend.

Lecturer Sunday Tells of Founding and Biblical Application

Christian Science—The Kingdom of God Within Us—was the subject of a lecture delivered Sunday afternoon at the high school auditorium by A. Harvey Bathurst, C. S. B., of London, England. The lecture was given under the auspices of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Winter Haven and an interested audience of over 500 were in attendance.

The lecturer quoted Christ Jesus' instructions "Behold the Kingdom of God is within you," and stressed the necessity of watching our thinking for "as a man thinketh so he is."

Mr. Bathurst who is a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., left immediately to lecture in Leesburg Monday night.

The lecturer said in part: "It is inspiring to see how many people today are turning to Christian Science, for they are beginning to see that the 'curial,' or so-called mortal mind, is not reliable."

Mr. Bathurst said he is a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., left immediately to lecture in Leesburg Monday night.

Jacobi Muller of Toledo, Ohio, was killed and other passengers in the car were badly shaken up when the car he was driving struck a ditch, five miles this side of Brighton, Sunday afternoon.

The accident was caused by a tire giving way as the car was traveling at a high rate of speed, it was stated.

Sheriff Schumacher examined the wreck and a coroner's jury was convened by Coroner Jack Williams, composed of Tom Mayo, T. S. Lumpkin, Forest Howard, John Bozeman, Milt Skipper and Homer Cobb, who rendered a verdict of accidental death, after viewing the body and visiting the scene of the wreck.

ILLUMINATING FIGURES ON CWA WORK IN COUNTY

Administrative Personnel Takes Up Large Number Of Available Labor

Some illuminating figures covering Federal expenditures in Highlands county were revealed at the meeting of the county council at the court house Monday afternoon. Funds distributed in each district in the county for FERA and CWA projects for work up to February 15 and were said to have been audited by a state auditor. The number of administrative personnel and the number of men available for work were also given these figures showing a total of 76 on the personnel staff and 361 available for work on CWA projects. It is understood that these figures have been out to a still lower figure by instructions received from the Federal Treasury and that several projects that are being worked on have been eliminated as a consequence.

Some new projects were presented at the meeting that about $900 in attendance and by a state road engineer. The projects were accepted for consideration by the county council after the council had so voted and over the protests of County Administrator Jack E. Barton. A project for the Avon Park school was accepted on motion of Col. F. N. K. Bailey.

The Avon Park projects included the Donaldson Park recreation project, the playing and sodding of the Mall and the completion of cactus park opposite the city hall. The projects to be built later, but this did not meet with the general approval of the council.

Regarding the court house project it was stated that about $900 worth of material had been purchased and was on the job but due to curtailment of man hours the project could not find the men to complete the project. This was given as one of the reasons why no new projects should be accepted for consideration.

On the distribution of the administrative personnel and the available men and man-hours for project the following statement was read:

Man Allotment for Highlands County

Number of persons assigned by State Administrator, 457.
Number of persons required for essential projects, 361.

Administrative personnel—17.
Social Service and CWS—48.
Tool and Survey Project—2.
National Employment offices—4.

Total—76.

Each number of persons available for all positions on CWA projects after deducting essential persons—361.

It was stated that 20 percent of the total number of men working will work on projects located within the city of Sebring and Avon Park and will therefore be permitted to work a maximum of 24 hours per week for ten weeks, 20 percent of 361 equals 72, the number of men to work on 24 hour projects, these 72 men will be permitted to work 240 hours if there are no further cuts between now and the first of May, or a total of (man hours) 17,280.

Estimating that 80 percent of the total number of men working will work on projects located outside of the city limits of Sebring and Avon Park in which case they will be permitted only 15 hours of work per week, the number of man hours they can work will be 33,550.

Both groups will then be allowed a maximum of 50,830.

The total of 50,830 man hours is subject to any and all further cuts that may be made in the quota now allotted this county. It is expected by this administration that some further cuts will be made toward the end of the program.

Expenditures by Districts
The figures covering the Federal funds said to have been spent in the county by districts and towns were given as follows:
Total expenditures of Federal Funds in Highlands County to February 15, 1934:
District One—$30,760.28.
District Two—$37,410.45.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Bloody Socialist Revolt in Austria Imperiling All Europe—Senate Sentences MacCracken to Jail—Permanent PWA Program Tacking Shape.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IS AUSTRIA again to be the starting point of a great European war? That was the question that was worrying the nations of the world as the civil war between the Austrian government and the Socialists proceeded.

On the side lines, watching events closely and hiding their true feelings, were Nazi Germany, France just recovering from its own internal war, and the United States.

View Chancellor Engel and Prince Ernst von Starhemberg. Austria were determined that the Socialists should be driven out or exterminated and the country made wholly Fascist, and Chancellor Engel was going along with them.

The revolt of the Socialists was evidently carefully planned and the rebels were well armed and equipped. But at this writing they had won no victory of moment and their stronghold in Vienna, the huge commercial apartment buildings, had been smashed by the government artillery.

In Linz, Graz, Styria and other centers the results were the same. After several days of fighting, in which two or three thousand persons were killed and many more wounded, Dollfus gave the Socialists five hours in which to lay down their arms on promise of pardon except for the chief leaders.

This brought insufficient response, and the government troops went into action again in the suburbs to which the rebels had been driven. The latter met the attack stoutly, especially in the section just across the great Reichsbrücke where there were occupying big buildings and trenches.

Major Fay was in charge of the operations in and about Vienna, and Prince von Starhemberg was in command at Linz and Styria. Though the German government was not openly taking sides, the official Nazi newspapers were egging on the Austrian Socialists.

ed. He was given time by the senate to perfect an appeal from his verdict.

The army went ahead rapidly in its preparations for carrying the armistice after the cancellation of contracts by Postmaster General Farley to the extent of $183,000 in the letting and operation of all mail contracts.

SECRETARIES ICKES, WALLACE, LERN and Perkins were named by the President as a committee to draw up definite plans for his permanent public works program. This is intended to effect great economic and social changes and will cost probably about half a billion dollars a year.

Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers take it for granted that after business has achieved recovery there will be from three to five million persons still unemployed and that they must be cared for by something like the Civil Works Administration.

This new project as now conceived includes these major undertakings: Methodical development of waterways, water power, flood control, erosion prevention, reforestation, and other public works.

Decentralization of industry through establishment of small industries in rural regions to enable the farmer to diversify his income by farming and partly by factory employment. A start in this direction is now being made in the subsistence homesteads for which twenty-five millions of recovery funds have been allocated.

Government purchase of submarginal lands for cultivation, which would be added to the public domain and devoted to forest development. For this purpose twenty-five millions already have been allotted.

THE Civil Works Administration obtained from congress an appropriation of $100,000,000 for immediate uses and its workers, numbering 3,800,000, are receiving $100,000,000 in their pay. But at the same time Administrator Harry Hopkins began the work of cutting down the forces, reducing the number of employees about 10 per cent a week, the CWA army will be virtually out of existence by May 1.

THE Largest force affected by the nonpublic property order is in the public health service. Hopkins ordered it to stop malaria control in forces employing 25,070 men, rural sanitation using 32,710 and the seal of mites by domestic workers to prevent water acidity in the Ohio valley.

Mr. Traylor was born in a log cabin in Kentucky 55 years ago and made his way to leadership in business by sheer ability. He also became prominent enough in politics to be considered favorably for the Democratic nomination for President in 1932. Chicago and the country sustained a considerable loss in his death.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

It may now be taken as definitely proved that one way of contracting infantile paralysis, perhaps the most usual way, is through the nose. Nothing happens to the mucous membrane of the nose. The olfactory nerve cells, which lie in the membrane and which constitute the smelling mechanism are attacked. Passing along the nerve fibers the virus reaches the olfactory lobe or smelling region of the brain and ultimately passes to other parts of the brain and thence to the spinal cord. Thus another way has been taken in conquering a disease to which children are an especial prey.

Daily stories of airplane disasters make us more and more enamored of the dear old terra firma.

Federal Farm Administrator in charge of this section is named Meal—first name probably Square.

A. von Parker, speaking of that "Animated Magazine" at Rollins College, says he wonders why they didn't ask his girl up there—she would have made the ideal cover.

One of the best signs of the times is the fact that the big city dailies are carrying some "Help Wanted" advertisements—some of them not calling for canvassers or commission sellers, but offering real jobs.

We always thought very highly of German intelligence until we see the German people permitting themselves to be so thoroughly dominated by a man of the Hitler caliber.

The only thing that would induce us to indulge in airplane travel would be if we were living in the North during a winter like this season's, with no other means of getting South. But we'd get out of that kind of weather if we had to travel foot-back.

Sorry to discourage a good man, but P. E. B. will never be a great modern poet. He writes clever verse at times, but it has one fatal defect—almost any one can understand what he writes. He should study more closely the style of some of his contributors.

Sherman Rogers, noted lecturer visiting Florida, declares that people are tired of synthetic orange juice, the only kind that is generally available in the North. Some thing ought to be done about this. Florida growers will wonder what cheaper thing than oranges can be used to make orange juice.

Great Britain is worrying because she thinks Byrd is "discovering" and claiming for the United States some lands supposed already to be under British sovereignty. We can't get "her up" over lands of that sort. There is plenty of ice and snow down there for everybody without quarrelling over it.

There is considerable to be said in favor of the plan for pensioning the aged. Yet there are many who if they felt they would be cared for after they reached a certain age would do little more than mark time until then. The economic problem would be a weighty one, too. Nothing contributes to longevity like a pension.

When the Honorable Park Trammell says "good morning" to you, you feel that you have been blessed and anointed. And when he presses your hand you feel that he is your best friend and that you would be an ingrate, indeed, if you didn't get right out and pull for him. And when a man can make you feel like that he's got something that makes him mighty hard to beat.

Every other person you see at this time—provided you look in the right places and direction—is a visitor to the state, or as they say up in the mountains, "a furrier." That is, our population right now consists about fifty-fifty of year-round residents and visitors from outside the state—in round numbers about 1,500,000 each. It is Florida's greatest tourist season, and the revenue brought into the state from this source is estimated at $250,000,000. We have always contended that the tourist crop is one of the most valuable to the state, and the easiest and most pleasant to cultivate. Every community should work to get its share of the harvest, through the methods of kindness, courtesy, good service and reasonable charges.

There is something to that motto of Georgia's Governor Talmadge: "Keep the government poor and you will keep it honest." Also economical. Where there is not so much money to spend there will not be so much extravagant spending. There should be little margin, if any, between the actual cost of government activities, trimmed of all unnecessary frills, and the amount of taxes levied. That should apply to all governmental units—local, state and national.

It is difficult for people in other parts of the country to realize the vast area of Florida, and particularly its extent from north to south, and the consequent variety of weather that may exist in different parts of the state. It may be freezing in North Florida while almost summer heat is prevailing in the southern peninsula. Then, again, there may be a storm of considerable force in one part of the State while residents of other sections know nothing about it until they read of it in the papers. But newspapers throughout the country do not discriminate, and any variation of temperature or atmospheric disturbance within the State's boundaries is heralded as Florida weather. It might help to appreciate the inaccuracy of such a description by remembering that the distance between some South Florida points and Pensacola is as great as that between Pensacola and Cincinnati.

It looks almost inconceivable that a man with sense enough to accumulate $27,500 would place that amount in cash and government bonds in the hands of two absolute strangers pretending to allow him to join them in a sure-thing stock market transaction. Yet that happened at St. Petersburg the other day. The game is an old one, and has been exposed by the newspapers innumerable times, but it seems utterly impossible to protect some people from their own folly. All parties to the transaction were from out of the state, yet there will be newspaper comment about a visitor being "fleece in Florida." Among the million and a half transients now here there is a goodly proportion of crooks, confidence men and plain thieves. Everybody should be on the look-out for such gentry and at the first overtone toward being made a party to an easy money scheme a quiet call to the police should be made. Better still, chance acquaintance should not be allowed to get so chummy on short notice as to broach such a proposition.

State Press Comment

DAY OF ANCIENT POLITICIAN OVER.

There have been three distinct republics born since the landing of our Pilgrim fathers. The first came with the Declaration of Independence. An overtaxed and harassed Colonial citizenry freed themselves from the fetters that obstructed their thought and action. Consequently a democratic government was instituted destined to effect the attitude of government of the people, by the people, for the people. The second republic of this nation was given birth as the result of our horrible Civil War with its attendant circumstances. While the people of both North and South paid dearly for this catastrophe, lessons were garnered that changed the outlook of the entire population. Students of each succeeding generation of inventive genius, and industry perceived the light of unparallel strides. Today we are witnessing the birth of the third republic of the United States. An economic dilemma, the like of which history has never before recorded, is ordering making its way into the vortex of American life. Old ideas and obsolete customs are being scrapped, while vastly changing

GRABBING PENNIES AND LOSING DOLLARS. From all over the state come reports that the sale of automobile tags has greatly increased over that of a year ago, due very largely to the lowered prices. Some of the increase is no doubt due to the fact that last year many auto owners bought their tags in Georgia and other states where the licenses were much less than in Florida, and took a chance of getting by in Florida through the courtesy exchange extended to visitors with foreign licenses. But many cars are being operated this year that were "laid up" last year, and as many more have a full year's license who got by last year on a fractional year's license.

The state could well afford to make the license still lower, because every additional car in use returns many dollars to the state in high gasoline taxes. In fact, the state loses both ways by maintaining a high auto license, and it is a short-sighted policy to do so with such a high gasoline tax that returns them more than they would lose by cutting license prices.

In addition to the loss to the state through gasoline tax money due to prohibitive high tax rates, the automobile mechanics and all others getting a share of the auto drivers' money, are also losers—Inversely Chiroline.

CWA Committee Made First Projects for Consideration in Future

The Project Committee of the Highlands County Civil Works Administration designated as preference projects from this time on, recreational and community house projects, airports and landing fields, and school repairs, at a regular public hearing held Tuesday night at the county courthouse.

The motion to designate the above group of projects was made by J. E. Sims of Lake Placid and was seconded by Col. F. M. K. Bailey. It passed unanimously.

Following a report on the local CWA situation made by Administrator Thomas P. Denham, Jr., the committee agreed it was useless to consider any new projects until some increase in the present program was ordered.

A suggestion made by Mr. Denham, the committee placed its OK on plans to finish certain projects which have been started in the county and are not as yet completed. They then gave blanket approval of all new projects submitted, these include the new Lake Placid Canal project, Avon Park Community House and recreation project, Avon Park and Lake Placid Airport projects and others. The committee pointed out that although approval of the project was given, it did not necessarily follow that they would even be started unless some drastic changes in the number of men allotted Highlands County are made, as the program has been so curtailed as to preclude the possibility of finishing more than half the projects on which work was begun.

County Agent Alameyer addressed the body with reference to a stenographic project which furnishes him with the services of a stenographer. This has been done for the past 10 weeks and Alameyer asked continuation of the service as added work caused by government farm and grove loans took the entire time of the extra clerical help.

J. E. Etheredge spoke on behalf of the Itzokoga Canal project, under which work was started but later stopped. The work is located in the Itzokoga Consolidated Sub-drainage District, of which Etheredge is president.

H. E. Galloway on behalf of the Town of DeSoto City presented a project, which called for the erection of a municipal fire station and city hall at DeSoto City. It is planned to build the station out of cement blocks, the building on the premises and the blacksmith machine being donated, thus reducing the cost, Galloway stated.

Major R. E. Barton, chairman of the local councils and of the committee, presided at the meeting.

"THE NAME IS SMITH" SPIDERS-

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

UNCLE SAM should ever call the roll of all his children, the chances are that more people would respond to "Smith" than any other family name. They'd outnumber the profligate Browns and Williamses by about two to one and the only slightly less prolific Joneses and Johnsons by about three to one.

Now, since Smith is such a very common name, it naturally follows that one who bears it has to be considerably above the average to stand distinction to it and to be outstanding among his fellowmen. The fact is that there have been plenty of just such men, as witness the fact that one standard encyclopedia of American biography contains the names of no less than 292 Smiths who have been famous enough to be included in its list of notables and another contains 230 such names.

From the earliest days of American history the Smiths have played an important part in making that history. For it was the doughty Capt. John Smith, an English adventurer, who led the little band of colonists to the shores of Virginia in 1607 and who, in 1624, founded the first permanent English settlement in America, a settlement destined to grow into a colony that was to give a new nation its first President.

Although we think of Smith primarily as a soldier, and indeed among his books was a treatise on seamanship that is a model of its kind, that was "A Sea-man's Grammar, or, An Account, The Pathway to Experience necessary for all young sea-men, or those that desire to go to Sea, published in 1626. It was not only the first printed book on seamanship, naval gunnery and nautical terms published in England but it also served as the backbone of practically every book on seamanship published in the next two years.

Just as a Smith was the founder and ruler of the first permanent English settlement in America, so it is appropriate that a Smith should be one of the 56 Immortals who signed the Declaration of Independence and that because of it.

He was James Smith, born in Ireland about 1729, then an emigrant to Pennsylvania where he grew up to become a leader in the agitation for freedom from British rule. He wrote an essay "On the Political Power of Great Britain over the Colonies in America" which is said to have given "the first strong impulse to the political cause in the colony of Pennsylvania."

America's official national anthem, as everyone knows, is the "Star-Spangled Banner." But there is another song, an unofficial "national hymn," which is sung on patriotic occasions quite as much as is Key's stirring composition and it was written by a Smith. Samuel Francis Smith was his name and he was born in Boston in 1808. While a student at Andover, then a Unitarian, he wrote the words of the song beginning "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" and on July 4, 1852, this song, which has been given the simple title of "America," was sung for the first time at a children's celebration in the Park Street Church in Boston.

Before attending the Andover seminary to prepare himself for his future as a Baptist minister, Smith had been graduated from Harvard in 1829, in the same class with Oliver Wendell Holmes. And it was Holmes who, in a poem of 1830, told these words which Smith had lent distinction to that common place name.

"And there's a name younger of excellent pitch than Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith! But he chanted a song for the brave and the free, Just read on his medal, 'My country, of thee!'"

A Smith was the founder of the first permanent English colony in America; a Smith was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; a Smith wrote our "national hymn." In line with those facts, it would be surprising if a Smith were not elected President of the United States. But so far, no one of that name ever has been Chief Executive. But that doesn't mean that a Smith never has applied to the Presidency. On the contrary, no less than four of them have. Perhaps you think that Alfred Emanuel Smith, who won the Democratic nomination but lost the election in 1928, was the first and only one of our name who ever made a bid for occupancy of the White House. But he wasn't. This time it was a candidate for the high office.

He was Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon religion in England in 1830, who was driven by persecution first to Ohio, then to Missouri, and finally to Illinois, where the "City of Saints" was established at Nauvoo. Soon he had such a large following that both the Whigs and the Democrats began bidding for Mormon support and Smith began having delusions of grandeur as to his political power. In 1844 he took the bold step of condemning publicly both parties and announcing his candidacy for the Presidency of the United States.

At an expiring trip, through the many pages devoted to the Smiths in any encyclopedia of biography reveals any number of interesting men and women of this family name. There was Charles Henry Smith, the Georgian, who made his pen name of "Bill Arp" famous in his humorous stories of the Confederacy. There was that earlier humorist, Seth Smith, a Yankee from Maine, who, as "Major Jack Downing of Downingville" was self-appointed adviser to President Andrew Jackson, and added in making some political history with his satirical letters.

Julia Evalina Smith and her sister, Abigail H. Smith, of Connecticut, were active and early women suffragists. Julia becoming known throughout the country as one of the five "Glasgow sisters," who resisted the payment of taxes because they were denied suffrage and submitted to the sale of their property by the town authorities rather than obey the law. That was nearly a century ago. In the days when woman's place was definitely "in the home," and long before there were "suffragettes."

Most of the present generation of Americans know F. Hopkinson Smith as a novelist and author of "Caleb West," "Colonel Carter of Carterville," "The Riders of Harcourt," etc., but how many know that he also was distinguished as an artist and an engineer, and that, in the latter role, he was the man who built the foundation for the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor? And how many know that the same man named Smith added the word "telegram" to the English language? He was Erasmus Poole Smith, a New York journalist, editor, and jurist, who, through the Albany Evening Journal, suggested the word "telegram" as a substitute for the cumbersome "telegraphic dispatch," current in those times.

The Smith family includes a number of great heroes and also some great rogues. He it remembered that Joshua Hett Smith was the Arnold treason plot during the Revolution, and it was largely due to Smith's "falling down on the job" that the young British officer was captured and the plot exposed. John Smith, a United States senator from Ohio, was involved in the Erie conspiracy and an effort made to expel him from the senate for it missed by just one vote. Down in the Texas Panhandle is a county named "Deaf Smith," a vast expanse of territory which perpetuates the fame of Reustus Smith, a native of New York, who lived in Mississippi as a boy, then went to Texas where it was still the Lone Star republic, and became one of the heroes of the Battle of San Jacinto. It was he who, upon the Lone Star flag, designed the Lone Star bridge, the only avenue of escape for the vanquished in that battle, who, after the battle, dashed up on a foam-crowned horse shouting, "I have cut down Vince's bridge. Now fight for your lives and remember!"

There is no more memorial (although there should be) for Jedediah Strong Smith, a New Yorker who was much more deserving of the title of "The Pathfinder" than was Gen. John C. Fremont. A member of the famous Ashley-Henry expedition in 1823, he was one of the founders of the Rocky Mountain Fur company, he was not only the first American to pass over what later became the Oregon Trail, but his wanderings and his trail-blazing exploits in the western wilderness made him truly one of the greatest explorers of his day.

High up in the pine-clad hills of South Dakota stands a shaft of white stone which marks the grave of Henry Westley Smith ("Preacher Smith" they called him), the Methodist circuit rider, who, in 1870 because he shirked his duty, as he saw it, above personal safety, a native of Connecticut, "Preacher Smith" served in the Union army during the Civil war, then went West, and arrived in Cheyenne, Wyo., at the height of the Black Hills gold rush. He held the first church services ever held in the hills and became an outstanding figure in its early history as the "Sly Pilot of Deadwood," a career cut short by his death at the hands of the Indians while on his way to preach in Creek City, ten miles away. Another memorial to him stands over his grave in Deadwood, a life-size statue of him carved from the red stone characteristic of that region.

Up in Alaska among the rocky cliffs overlooking Skagway is a unique memorial to another Smith. It is a rocky profile of heroic size, naturally shaped and painted white to resemble a skull and bearing the words "Soapy Smith's Skull." Thus does Skagway memorialize Jefferson Randolph Smith, a mayor and boss in the roaring days of the Klondike gold rush, and one of the most pitifully villainous figures in frontier history. A native of Georgia, Smith was a gambler in various Colorado mining towns. A "wet man" of the first water (his nickname of "Soapy" coming from one of his schemes of fleeing the "suckers" with casks of soap wrapped in $20 bills), and later the king of the Denver underworld.

When he went to Alaska he became the big man of Skagway, but his high-handed methods soon got him into trouble. There was talk of vigilante methods to rid the town of him, but Preacher Smith, an old glazier, saved them the trouble. "Soapy" tried to bluff Reid, but Reid could be bluffed. A bullet from his gun put an end to that most famous bad man of the last frontier.

Another Smith, but very different from Soapy's kind, lost his life in the wild days of the old frontier. He was Thomas J. Smith, known as "Green River Tom" Smith, a quiet, middle-aged young man, but one of the bravest who ever upheld the law in the West. He first made a reputation for himself as marshal of the town of Kit Carson, Colo., when it was "end of steel" on the Kansas Pacific. Then he was called to the roaring cattle town of Abilene, Kan., which he "tamed" not with his gun but with his fists. In eleven W. Smith set a record in making of Cigar-abiding place which was "Coke" pressor, the famous P. E. Mack and his gang, 2-9-16-23-30. Smith was last seen by the Circuit Court, and full Highlands County, deputy Chancery.

One of Florida's citrus king, one of the great growers of oranges in the early days of Alachua as a dealer and land speculator, but the thing which most distinguished him was the way in which he lent distinction to that name. He realized that the name of his family was in danger, so in order to make his different from the rest, he began signing himself John Smith T. and John Smith T. he was known to the day of his death.

As to other Smiths who lent distinction to the name, there are several hundred of them. In the encyclopedias of biography to which the reader of this article is respectfully referred.

Little did the more mention of spiders to most laymen gives them the "creeps," the insect has been the subject of interesting scientific study for entomologists.

For the spider enthusiast, solomons in the country, whether in the United States or in any other land of temperate climate, the dawn of a late-summer day in a marshy meadow holds promise of delight. It is spider season, the time when the fairy spinners are to be observed at their best, when small, dainty webs, usually overlooked, stand out in perfect design against the green of leaf and grass, the filmy silk glistening with dew.

Webs, webs everywhere—hundreds of them, thousands of them—blow a possessor sea in the morning light.

There are fanned webs, sheet webs, hammock webs, webs of intricate design, and those of the near edge of the woods, the beautiful orb webs, bejeweled in their radiant symmetry.

Spiders are unassuming spinners. From the many microscopic spiders at the tips of their heavy beak-like mandibles, and those of the exquisite design and beauty. They make snares for their prey, save for their eggs, shelters for protection from enemies, draftiness for security in movement, balloons for navigating the skies, and many other things for service in their varied and romantic lives.

Although the silken webs are of many different designs, the fine of the individual spider does not change with the passing seasons. Each species has its own style of web, to which all its members adhere so long as environment remains unaltered by geological progress.

Evolution of the Web.

Students believe the first web, a simple tube, evolved from the drag of the web to its spinning in and out of a hole in the ground. Its first retreat. These threads of silk finely lined the web, and radiated from the entrance, striking against the lines, victims would be detected and seized by the spider.

By extending the sheet about the entrance to the tube and bringing the latter out of the ground, the spider developed the funnel web. The axis of the web was shifted in the course of this change until the tube of the funnel became almost horizontal, and later the lower part was expanded into a net. These changes give us the typical funnel web, such as is spun by the common grass spider, Argiope aurantia.

Inside the tube of the funnel, especially when the tube leads backward among tangled blades of grasses, the spider still has protection from its enemies. The place of the web above the ground and the expansion of the lower part of it into a sheet increased its efficiency as an insect snare.

The tube which leads away from the sheet part of a funnel web, becomes an inconvenience when webs are placed in exposed positions above the ground; hence the sheet, whenever it is exposed, is pulled down to increase their catch of flying insects.

Bowl and Dome Webs.

Spiders commonly modify sheet webs in two ways. They may bring the sides of the sheet upward to produce a hammock or bowl, or downward to form a dome.

The advantage of the bowl type is easily noted by observing the droll and dolly spider, Linyphia linyphioides. It places its hammock like small web well below the tops of small shrubs or large herbaceous plants and directly under the favorite feeding places of such insects as plant lice and leaf hoppers. Naturally, every disturbance of the twigs and leaves shakes a shower of little into the snare. The dome-shaped web is better suited for catching insects rising from the ground in flight, as many do about dusk or in the morning.

Irregular net webs, haphazard tangles of threads of all lengths, are spun by that manner of housewife in all temperate climates, the common house spider, and by many other species. Once considered primitive, such webs now are regarded as degenerate. They probably represent an evolution from the sheet type, altered to decrease resistance to the wind, and to facilitate mending. As flytraps, they are effective and, in addition, usually serve well for rearing the brood of spiderlings.

Like human fishermen, many spider species have found that the plan of two dimensions is not only economical of weight and materials but ideal for landing a catch. The web is exposed in places, where prey is most plentiful, since with its open construction it offers little resistance to the wind.

Suspended from a framework of stout silken lines and carefully spaced with freedom of movement in spinning its threads form a wheel-like design of maximum strength with minimum of material. The spider sits at the hub, ready instantly to detect a snared victim and pounce upon it. In the net-spread spider, the web, prey the only web is the spider's last word. Few, if any, other animals, human or subhuman, have equaled it.

Although the most symmetrical web ever made by a spider is not really perfect, according to human standards, scientists marvel at the accuracy with which angles and distances are "measured."

Method of Construction.

The spider starts her geometrical web with perimeter lines connecting points around a space large enough for her purpose. From these lines she suspends a few threads which converge at the center of the future web. Now begins the process of spacing the radii. She attaches the end of a new radius at the center and runs along a spoke already laid down, spinning out the silk for the new one as she goes. When she reaches the perimeter she also takes a fixed number of steps along it and attaches the new thread. This process is repeated until all the desired radii are in place.

If the foundation lines should chance to form a wheel rim accurately circular, the distance between spokes would be equal; but, since the perimeter is usually an irregular quadrangle and never a circle, the spacing varies somewhat. The spiral turns of silk, which complete the net, are more accurately spaced than the radii, since they are laid down each new turn with her foreleg touching the last one. Thus the length of the foreleg and the size of the spider determine these distances.

"Scout stepping" and the use of the "leg ruler" are functions in spiders. Even when isolated from its kind from the moment of its birth a spiderling will produce exactly the same web design as its mother and in exactly the same manner.

Spiders constitute a large class of some 25,000 described species, although most abundant and diversified in the tropics, they range far and wide in the temperate regions and are found almost anywhere that earthy conditions will sustain life. Far up on Mount Everest, above the highest plant life, at an elevation of 22,000 feet, spiders have been found living among the wind-swept snow-covered rocks. Thus they are the loftiest permanent inhabitants of the earth.

Some spiders, such as the trap-door makers, occupy only a restricted area; while others, such as our common house spider, are found in many lands and all the continents.

The Ingenious Trapdoor Spider.

CLINCHING THE DIAGNOSIS

The eminent alienist recognized the thug who was holding him up. "Look here," he protested, "I'm your benefactor. Don't you recall that I once saved you from a life sentence by plying you crazy?"

"Sure, I remember you now," the thug said as he continued his work. "And ain't holdin' you for benefactor a crazy thing to do?"—Boston Transcript.

The Long Talk

"After I got through with my remarks," said the orator, "the people applauded loudly."

"I joined in that applause," replied Miss Cayenne.

"You were interested?"

"Yes, and grateful. I was afraid for awhile that you had grown absent-minded and thought you were filibustering."—Washington Star.

The Sage Speaks

He was about to be married, and was listening to advice from his various friends.

"What do you call a man who runs an automobile?"

"Depending on how near he comes to hitting me."

Enlightenment

An army officer was showing his fair young guest round the barracks. Presently a bugle sounded.

"What's that for, Tom?" she asked the young man.

"That's the tattoo," he replied. She smiled her eyebrows understandingly.

"Oh, I see," she said. "I've often seen it on soldiers' arms, but I didn't know they had a special time for it."

Distance Relative

"Don't speak evil of him. He is your relative."

"Yes, but a distant one."

"I thought he was your brother."

FIRST OF RED
BIRDS ARRIVES
NEXT WEEK

Club Secretary and President to Reach Avon Park
As Advance Guard

Columbus, O., Mar. 1.—Heading
the invasion of the Columbus
Baseball club that will culminate
in some two score Red Birds assembling at Avon Park March 15th for a month of spring training
to complete final preparations for the coming of the American Association and Little World's Series champion, Mr. Beach will inspect the training diamond and
serve as advance guard for the Birds.

President George W. Trautman
will follow shortly after his club secretary while a few of the Red Bird players will make the trip by automobile and arrive before the regular workouts are due
to get under way.

Developments in the past few days have greatly strengthened
the Columbus team which was riddled at the close of the 1933 season
by the graduation of several players to the majors. President Trautman has bolstered his pitching staff by the acquisition of a pair of hurlers of proven
ability in the persons of Glenn Spencer and Kenneth Ash. Ash
has worn a Columbus uniform in
the past, having been secured
from the Cincinnati Reds in 1930.

My of last season he was sent to Elkhart and has just been returned to his old camping
grounds.

Spencer was the property of the New York Giants last year
but saw little service because he was signed after the Giants had
their pitching staff well organized for the year. At the close of the season, he was sold to Cincinnati and when the Reds
traded with the St. Louis Cardinals for Bob O'Farrell as manager, Spencer went to the Cards.
He is under option from the Cardinals at present but is expected to stick with the Red Birds unless
St. Louis is forced to recall him
for service there.

In the outfield, president
Trautman has added Walter
"Glow" Christensen to his roster.
Christensen is almost as famous
as baseball as Nick Altrock and Al Schacht as a comedian and is a fine baseball player as well. Last year with Milwaukee, he hit over 300 and was near the top in the American Association in fielding.
Catcher Renss of the Birds was traded for him.

Pitchers James Lindsay and Fred "Sheriff" Blake, it has been announced, are to be sold from Columbus to Cincinnati on a "conditional" sale that will give
each of them another chance to make good in the majors. The Reds have until May 1st to complete the deal.

Reports from Columbus indicate that the Columbus team will have quite a following when it leaves for Florida. The trip south
has attracted many local sports
followers who are planning to make proposed trips coincide with the club's invasion of Avon Park.

No More Savages;
They Wear Clothes

Despite tourist posters showing Hawaiians wearing grass skirts as national costume, Cecil B. De-Mille and his troupe found them
just as fully clothed as people on the mainland.

DeMille, however, hired a number of the natives for scenes in
his latest Paramount picture,
"Four Frightened People," which
he filmed in Hawaii, and which comes Thursday and Friday to the Avon theatre. He used them as Malay natives clad only in loincloths.

As one chippier native remarked
to the director:
"This is the first time we have gone around without any clothes
since the missionaries arrived."
The picture, a story of the Malay jungles, has for its leading players: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Mary Boland, William Cagney and Leo Carrillo.

Race Tracks Bring
State One Million

St. Petersburg, March 1.—(FNS)— Walter Donovan, Secretary of the state racing commission has prepared figures showing that more than $750,000 passed through the pari-mutuel windows of six greyhound racing tracks in Florida during one week early in February.
These figures support the proposition of the racing commission that
the total pay for the season will exceed $2,000,000, the seven million campaign sponsored by prominent Florida shippers in a statewide effort to build up bigger sales and better prices for horses.

of the Bible and so on day during the talk, she turned to the Bible, as she was accustomed to do, and read in the ninth chapter
of Matthew's Gospel that beautiful promise of the healing of the man who was the palsy.

"Let us visualize that scene. The man suffering from the palsy was carried on a mat to the feet of Jesus. You recall how the Master
said to him with what have been
best words of comfort, such have been, and at the same time, with authority and power, "Arise, take up thy bed, and go into thine house." I should like to point out that that man did not hesitate or doubt.
He did not say to the Master that he had been suffering a long time
and could not possibly work or walk without being first healed.
No! He surely demonstrated that recovery almost instantaneously, and obeyed promptly, with
the results we know so well.

"This afternoon we are going to
see how we, too, can demonstrate our God-given healing
freedom and dominion over all the earth, that is, over all material conditions. We are going to see how we, too, can take up those beds of sickness which seem to hold us, and not only beds of sickness, but beds of other descriptions—whether of lack, unemployment, sorrow, domestic trouble, or fear. We are going to see how we, too, can take up
those beds and go into our own
homes—into the conscious realization, therefore, demonstration, of that which is, namely, the omni-
presence and omnipotence of God, our God.

"When Mrs. Eddy read the Master's statement already quoted
she, too, discerned what the Master really meant, and she arose immediately from her sick bed, referring to this experience Mrs.
Eddy writes in "Retrospection and Inspiration" (p. 24): "I immediately recovered from the effects of an injury caused by an accident. An injury that neither myself nor anyone could heal, but
was the falling away that led me
to the discovery how to be well
myself, and how to make others
well."

"This afternoon we are going to see how this healing is within
the reach of, or can be made known to, every man, woman, and child willing to accept it. Did not Jesus say in that clear, simple yet
powerful language of his, "Ye shall know the truth," and then
continued, "and the truth shall make you free?" Is any man or woman free who is fettered by fear, shackled by sickness, or limited by lack, or submerged in sorrow? Then what is the remedy?
To know the truth.

"I would ask you, What is it
that tells us of discord of any descriptions? Surely not spiritual discernment. It is the five physical senses, which are cognizant only
of unintelligent matter.

"Once more, let us turn to the teaching of the Master. You will recall how one day he was speaking to the public, or the multitudes, and not addressing merely
a select few, or his disciples, and said to them, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." How can we seek the kingdom of God except in thought? And surely the kingdom of God is the place where good, or God, is supreme—all. Is not that recognize or demonstrate the omnipotence or omnipresence of God, good?

"In order, however, to recognize or demonstrate the omnipresence of God, we have to be willing to silence the arguments or suggestions of the five physical
senses, to learn to think rightly,
to reason correctly from cause to effect; in other words, to give God
the honor and glory we say is due to his holy name, or really to acknowledge Him as the one and only cause or creator—not just as a beautiful theory, but as a divine fact.

"God, it is generally agreed, is
in heaven, and we admit that God
is infinite, without beginning and without end; therefore, God, or good, is everywhere, and surely
here is manifested in everywhere.
In fact, it matters not where you
may go, you are always somewhere; and since Spirit, God, is omnipresent, you can never get away from the omnipresence of good, which is a divine fact. You need not, therefore, be frightened
when you hear that God is far
off—it is in your own heart
and in the heart of every man and woman. It does not matter where our physical bodies may be, and we are only where we are thinking. Jesus indicated that in that glorious statement of his,
"The kingdom of God is within
you."

Man
"Here arises the question, What is man? As stated in the first chapter of Genesis, verses 26 and 27, man was made in the image
and likeness of God. That is the exact reflection of his Father-Mother God. The term God has,
however, been all too feebly understood. Let us see what Mrs.
Eddy writes about God on page

587 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": "God.
The great I AM; the All-knowing,
all-seeing, all-hearing, all-wise,
all-loving, and eternal; Principle;
Mind; Spirit; Life; Truth;
Love; all substance; Intelligence.
This God is the one and only
Cause of creation, and made all
that was made, as the Bible states.
Since, therefore, there is but one Cause or creator, there can be only one effect or creation. Consequently, we are not dealing with a material creation which has to be transformed into a spiritual
creation, but we are gradually
gaining an improved concept of
that perfect, spiritual creation
which always has been, is, and
ever will be the only creation.

"Man is the reflection of his Father-Mother God, but that does not mean that man is here reflecting a God somewhere else, that God in whom we live and in whom
we move, and in whom we have our being. How wonderfully Christian Science does away with
that limited concept of a God
somewhere else.

"How glorious to discern
through Christian Science the unity,
the inseparability, or at-one-
ment of God and man! 'Ye shall
see the truth, and the truth
shall make you free.'—free, that
is, from all the limited, erroneous
conceptions of God, man and the universe."

Comedy, action, beauty and
braveness are offered in a deli-

theatre, Saturday and Sunday.

In addition to an excellent cast,
the picture features the world
finalists in Paramount's thirty-sixth annual beauty contest, and
in which 175,000 contestants in every English speaking country of the world participated.

The last three comedy honors goes to James Gleason and Robert Armstrong, united again as

Lupino a Bit
Ida Lupino, charming blond importation from England, scores in this her first American picture,
and excellent portrayals are given
by Gertrude Michael, Larry "Buster" Crabbe and Tolly Wing.

Chronicling in laughs the mis-
adventures of crooked promoters
in their efforts to use Olympic champion Crabbie and Tolly Wing
and Beauty racket, the picture
abounds in comedy situations from start to finish.

Search for Beauty

Gleason, Armstrong and Miss
Michael play the promoters, while Lupino and Crabbe are the Olympic champions. When Crabbe
objects to cheap, flashy articles in the health magazine which he and Miss Lupino have been placed to "edit," he is shunted off to a
world-wide quest for perfect specimens of health and beauty.

Witty comic-strip following quickly after Crabbe brings his winning contestants to the health-
farm where he has been given in exchange for his interest in the magazine, love paves the way for a riotous climax in which the promoters finally get their come-
off from their anticipated racket.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The First Great Fur Trader

AMERICANS not only have good reason to remember Manuel Lisa as the first great fur trader in the trans-Mississippi West, but they also have good reason to remember him also for his patriotic service in the War of 1812.

Born in New Orleans about 1770, the son of a Spanish official, at the age of twenty he owned a boat in which he engaged in commerce on the Mississippi. By the beginning of the Nineteenth century he was a large land owner near St. Louis, where he opened a store for supplying Indian traders. This led naturally to his going into the fur business himself, at first with the Osage Indians on the Missouri, under a grant from the Spanish authorities.

Then Lewis and Clark made their historic exploring trip through the newly acquired Louisiana territory, and Lisa was quick to see the opportunity offered on the Upper Missouri. He formed a partnership with William Morrison and Pierre Menard of Kaskaskia, Ill., under the name of Lisa, Menard & Morrison, and in 1807 set out with a party of traders.

That winter they spent on the Yellowstone hunting, trapping and trading with the Crow, and the following summer found Lisa back in St. Louis, proud of the success of his first venture, and dreaming of even greater enterprises. The result was the organization of the Missouri Fur company.

During the next five years the Missouri Fur company prospered and Manuel Lisa rose to a commanding position in it. Meanwhile during many journeys up and down the Big Muddy, he had won the confidence and esteem of nearly all the Indian tribes along the river. So when the War of 1812 broke out and the British tried to lure the Indians of that region against the United States, it was only natural that Gov. William Clark should appoint Lisa a subject to these tribes to counteract the British influence.

The Spaniard did his job well. He not only organized war parties against some of the tribes who were allies of the British, but he secured pledges of friendship and peace from nearly all the Missouri tribes which kept them out of the war. If it had not been for Manuel Lisa's efforts, the War of 1812 might have had a far different ending. "Now I feel in my bones," said one of his days he dominated the Missouri Fur company and, so long as he did, no other fur company was able to secure a foothold on the Upper Missouri.

Seth Bullock, Sheriff

WHEN Seth Bullock, died at Deadwood, S. D., in 1919, it was recalled that he had not only been a lifelong personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt but that he had also been perhaps the most typical old-time sheriff of the West. As such, he became a figure of myth and legend which he, more than once, dispelled in laconic fashion. Once an enterprising referred to him as a "man killer." When they told Seth Bullock that, his only reply was: "They say I've killed 47 men. Now, I'll tell you what, I never killed but two, and I didn't kill them soon enough."

Although he became famous as an American frontier type, Bullock was not a native of the United States. Born in Ontario, Canada, in 1847, he came to Montana at the age of twenty and established himself as a dealer in mining supplies in Helena. By that time the famous Vigilantes had wiped out most of the crooks. But there were still lawless men there and young Bullock, allying himself with the forces of law and order, learned many things which were to stand him in good stead in his future career in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

He was among the first to reach the gold camps in 1876. When a provisional government was established in Deadwood he was made sheriff, and when Lawrence county was organized he was elected its first sheriff.

His biggest problem was the road agents who infested the trails and preyed upon the stage coaches with their shipments of gold dust out of the hills, and it was his relentless pursuit of these which gave him his greatest reputation as a man-hunter. In one case he followed a fleeing road agent clear across Dakota, down through Nebraska and into Iowa, where he "got him."

It was during Bullock's career as sheriff that his friendship with Theodore Roosevelt, then a young ranchman in North Dakota, began. So, at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he was one of the first to organize a company for Roosevelt's regiment of Rough Riders, although he never got any nearer Cuba than Chickamauga park in Tennessee. Bullock was responsible for the erection of a monument to T. H. north of Deadwood, and as he lay dying in 1919, he asked to be buried at White Rock where that monument would look down upon his grave.

Tung Tree Now "American"

Its Propagation in This Country Deprives China of a Monopoly Which That Country Has Long Held; Oil's Valuable Properties.

Before many years have passed American manufacturers may be independent of the seeds by hand; in China has long held in the tung oil industry. About 30,000 acres of tung trees now are thriving in our southern states. Some experts aver that it would take only slightly more than three times as many acres of producing trees to make America independent of the Oriental product.

"Tung oil, sometimes called Chinese wood oil, is extracted from the seeds of the tung tree of central and western China. It is almost unknown in its natural state to the average layman, but, being a good mixer, it hides in many products with which he frequently comes in contact," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Long before western shipping navigated the Yangtze river, Chinese river men waterproofed their boats with tung oil. They also burned the oil in lamps, accumulated tung oil soot to make Indian ink, and with other materials made a caulking compound.

"Although tung oil-soaked junks frequently sidestepped western craft in Oriental harbors and rivers, it was not until about 1920 the Westerners awoke to the fact that tung oil was an amazing quality. Chemical laboratories discovered that the oil, added to varnish, makes the varnish shed water like a duck's back; thus the origin of the demonstrator in the hardware store window who awes shoppers when he pours hot water on a table top without marring the polish.

"From the Chinese success in waterproofing silk with tung oil, westerners learned that other fabrics could be rendered waterproof in much the same manner. Now tung oil is widely used by manufacturers of raincoats, bath curtains and oil cloth. Well-board manufacturers have discovered that the oil makes a good binder; while the manufacturers of linoleum, steam pipe gaskets, wire insulation, and automobile emulsions, have become customers of Chinese tung oil producers.

"The United States normally imports about 100,000,000 pounds more than $10,000,000 worth of tung oil annually. China's internal unrest has been one of the leading factors in the development of American tung tree plantations. When the value of the oil was discovered, the demand of the American manufacturers grew rapidly. Normally he could obtain sufficient tung oil, but brigands often delayed or destroyed shipments, or producers were coerced by their workers who then felt the urge to fight, thus diminishing the supply.

"The first tung seeds from China were planted in the United States by the Department of Agriculture in 1905 at Chico, Calif. A year later, the resulting seedlings were sent to experimental stations throughout the southern and Pacific coast regions. They thrived in portions of Florida, California, Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi, where the frost is not sufficiently severe to nip the tree's sensitive blossoms.

"Tung trees grow to about 25 feet in height. With their white to pink blossoms in the spring they resemble apple trees. The tung fruit is about the size of a small apple. Its five seeds are no larger than robin's eggs. In China the trees grow wild, but in this country growers have operated their plantations with the modern system of American orchardist. When the tung fruit

Cat Seared Orphan

With the tearing down of a house at 22 Vasterland street, Stockholm, Sweden, which bore over its entrance door the effigy of a cat, has been recalled the story of how the tabby found the relatives of an orphan girl. While returning from Hayti to Stockholm with his wife and three-year-old daughter, the captain of a Swedish sailing vessel died. Soon afterward his wife succumbed. The nurse, who had been engaged during the voyage, did not know whether the daughter had any relatives, nor how to trace friends. The ship cat, which was from Stockholm, started at sea on the boat landed, to guide its nurse up one street and down another until she reached 22 Vasterland street. There it stopped, and in the house was found the child's grandmother. Many old people in Stockholm still remember the cat and its search.

EARLY DAYS OF AUTO

New York state's farmers, from the first, were active in fighting automobile speeders. In December, 1908, the Onondaga grange adopted a resolution urging enforcement of the 20-mile speed law and asking that motorists be required to slow down to four miles an hour when passing teams. The resolution said speeders were ruining the roads and likewise endangering life and property.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the earliest, most effective laxatives may be more than ten years old.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscle and even affect the liver and kidney. Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. Ask druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Members.

dog's eyes of such unmitigat-

able hatred, so intense, so personal

that it carried a direct challenge.

Again a rush, but this time the

animal fell, went into the swinging club and slashed at Steve's

face as he passed. The fangs

were inches from his eyes. But the time the club found its mark, blood

sloshed from the dog's lip and he

heaved off slowly, grudgingly until

Drake saw shadows of a light-gray

chain, checked his retreat.

Steve walked that chain

while the creature lay on the

walker, keeping his full weight always on the dog, digging his

feet into the sand, straining

backward, with all his strength,

throwing his head from side to side

as he sought to free.

The animal was bely down, now,

and Drake raised the club high.

One fair blow on the skull and all

would be done, he said.

"Let me take him," said a voice

close behind.

LaFane was looking at the great

beast, face unperished, but he was breathing quickly and when he

turned his gaze to the others an expression lay in the eyes such as

Drake had never seen.

"What you were going to do

would spoil this chance," he said

quietly.

"Chance?" Steve demanded incredulously. "Chance for what?"

"To save myself in the event of my killing him, perhaps. Let him go," he pleaded.

Amazed, Drake hesitated; then

looked his world from the chain.

The dog turned to stalk away, clink-

ing his chops.

LaFane spoke: "Dirke." The word

was crisp and snarl, not loud.

"Come in!"

The animal hesitated, stopped;

the fall dropped from his legs,

he lowered his head in shame or fear.

"Come in!" his owner insisted

and he came. He stood, stiffly,

stuck toward him.

"Good Lord, man, are you going to let that thing stand around

what almost happened?"

"Yes," said LaFane. And because of what almost happened?

The creature's face and his mouth twitched. "If I killed him I

would make him safe for them,

what would my children think of

me?"

Steve scratched his head.

"Well, that's one way to look at

it," he muttered. "But what..."

LaFane, evidently, was not interested in what Drake had been about

the dog.

"Heel!" he said and started for

the store, dog close behind him.

"Well, that's one way to look at

it," he muttered. "But what..."

LaFane, evidently, was not interested in what Drake had been about

the dog.

"Heel!" he said and started for

the store, dog close behind him.

"Well, that's one way to look at

it," he muttered. "But what..."

LaFane, evidently, was not interested in what Drake had been about

the dog.

"Heel!" he said and started for

the store, dog close behind him.

it," he muttered. "But what..."

LaFane, evidently, was not interested in what Drake had been about

the dog.

"Heel!" he said and started for

the store, dog close behind him.

Then LaFane said, "This is the Laird's line."

Steve was wondering about the

owner and how he might be approached when they shot around a

sharp bend, coming from strong current to a quiet, velvet pool.

It was a surprise to see another

cane there, and a sort of shock

to observe Franz in the stern, holding it in the shallows by a middle against boat. A decided shock,

however, to meet the peculiarly angular figure of the old kindly ex-

a rock basked by the frost and

rain, far up, fell and was killed.

His son sorrowfully walked behind

his father's coffin; his widow murmur-

ed over and over, "You rest fine—"

LaFane. The older son takes his father's place and all is finished.

It may be true, as Mussolini, Hitler

and Kemal agree, that human beings, in their republics and democ-

racies, have shown inability to govern themselves. But government by kings has failed also. Whether a king lives or dies makes little difference except that sometimes the

change from one king to another

may excite Communists and other

"reds," causing unpleasant demonstrations.

France, needing Belgium as a buffer state, so useful in delaying

the German in the big war, was a little about Belgian Communists.

Otherwise, the death of the good-natured, friendly Belgian king

means nothing.

Mr. Richard H. Grant, who understands business, having distributed many hundreds of millions of

valuable merchandise, believes that

"America is due for three or four years of depression, induced by the

stimulus of government spending."

At the end of the three or four years, the government will have

artificially provided, Mr. Grant thinks,

"the natural world recovery will come itself and I think the government will have government spending

stopped."

Nine out of ten business men feel

as Mr. Grant feels, but they are less

sure when you change a patient

from strong medicines, stimulants,

drugs to drive the life morphia to

driven out, etc., you must do it carefully.

The change from Uncle Sam's

policy to that of the new government will have its difficulties.

Henry Ford has dismissed the depression from his mind. "It is ended," said he, "not for this or that one of a hundred reasons, but because I believe we are going to have

it. When they get tired of a thing, they go to work and end it."

If every man did only thing he thought was right, the world would be a better place to live in, as well

as it is. The American dollar will always be a good dollar and a real

dollar, not a dollar of paper, either.

You can no more compare our money

with other money than you can compare our country with other countries.

what it will buy. The dollar will always buy anything."

ligning, rushing in here when we

Mr. Dillinger's upping and leaving that pretty Indiana sheriff was no way to treat a lady.

Men like Huey Long attain prominence in public life because the public love to be fed on hokey.

The odor of the orange blossom is abroad in the land. No earthly scent is sweeter or more pleasant.

Hard to believe that a Mississippi jury would convict a good looking woman as Dr. Dean. Is Southern chivalry on the wane?

All those Florida aspirants for the incumbent's place in the United States Senate will find themselves very much Trammelled.

For the next three months Florida will be at her best and loveliest. A good part of that time the States to the North winter will still be lingering in the lap of spring.

The man who is fore-handed—industrious, thrifty and resourceful—will be the one who will get his share of the prosperity which is gradually but surely returning.

One does not think of strawberries as a crop of great importance down here, and yet it helps to swell Florida's income from products of the soil to the extent of from three and one-half to four million dollars a year.

If you don't keep your wits about you some of these candidates for constable or United States Senator will get the promise of your vote by swapping a promise of $3 tags for all cars. That would be a winning slogan.

The real estate situation in Florida is improving. Reports of sales come from various parts of the State. Boom prices are not being paid, of course, but there is every reason to expect a steady, if gradual, rise in prices.

A. von Parker says, about this, now, "call money," concerning which he sees so much in the financial articles, he would like to know where to call to get some—or, if it involves something similar to a hog-calling contest, he'd like to show how loud he can call.

Too many young people get their ideas of life from the movies. Older people know that life is not as it is depicted upon the screen; but impressive youth often gets most distorted conceptions of right and wrong from the melodramatic and exaggerated scenes of this make-believe world.

The government has done much to help those who were down and out, expecting them thereby to get beyond the need of further assistance. But some of them are like the chap referred to in Hambleton's Meditations: "You can't help a man git on his feet when he jes natchly ruther set down."

Avon Park should make determined and persistent efforts to build up her tourist business. This city and section has much to offer in beauty and natural advantages. There is no place in Florida where people looking for pleasant, restful surroundings with all the comforts of modern life, can be better suited.

We never could get the exact significance it is sought to express by burning a cross. The cross is a holy emblem, revered by all Christians, and why burning it on some one's premises should be made the means of conveying a threat or a reproach is a mystery. It always strikes us as an action irrelevant, if not profane. These reflections are prompted by reading of the burning of a cross in Tampa a few nights ago on the lawn of a man who was accused of some violation of the code adopted by those engaged in his line of work. Silly work, to say the least.

We had expected that by this time there would be so many canals across Florida that we would have challenged the interest of Mars, which heretofore seems to have been a leader in canal production. Still, we cannot believe that the State has lost much through failure of any of these projects to materialize.

Every thoughtful citizen, while approving the measures taken to accomplish recovery, will be happy when there will be jobs for those who want them in private industry. Except in extreme emergencies such as we have been passing through, providing employment for the people is not a proper governmental function.

There will be no more honest or conscientious administration of State relief than that given by Marcus Fagg. He made a mistake, however, in temporarily leaving his great work with the Children's Home Society for a job into which more or less politics was bound to creep. His friends are happy to see him "back home" with the work which he loves and for which he is so well fitted.

A Chamber of Commerce is an institution through which the important affairs of a community which is everybody's business, and therefore nobody's business, are given the attention they should have. No other agency has quite the same mission or can accomplish the same desired results. Not only every active business man should be a member of such an organization, but it should be supported by everyone who has even a modest investment in the community.

It was a great day for Senator Fletcher when last Sunday he rounded out twenty-five years in the United States Senate. At a dinner honoring him on the occasion he had the pleasure of listening to such plaudits as reward few men in this life—expressions of admiration and approval from his colleagues and many other distinguished personages, and letters and telegrams of the same tenor from a thousand or more Floridians representing every walk and station in life. Vice-President Garner summed up the sentiment prevalent at this notable occasion, and endorsed almost unanimously by Floridians, in these words: "He's an honor to Florida and the nation. As long as the States send such men to the Senate the nation is safe. You Floridians keep him here as long as he lives."

State Press Comment

BUSINESS IMPROVED IN FLORIDA.

Something that cannot be doubted as proof that business is good in Florida and evidently improving all the time, is the statement from Tallahassee which tells of reduction in the payrolls of the civil works administration, says the Florida Times-Union. Of course that statement might be taken as bad news under some conditions, but as it appears there is only one way to feel about it—that is, pleased. For it means that about ten thousand persons who have been on the government payrolls are now working elsewhere; their regular work for more people in Florida and they are pleased to leave the emergency army and sign up with private enterprises and help entertain our winter visitors and harvest and market our big citrus and vegetable crops.

From the capital city the facts are indicated as satisfactory. With employment furnished by the emergency CWA plan, 85,000 persons in Florida were given employment on many projects. It was of course understood that these payrolls were set up principally for the purpose of giving jobs to those who were probably to be given relief from federal funds if not employed. Naturally Florida was glad to get help from the government, and the work done by the persons on the CWA lists was in the main desirable and of value. But it was never looked upon as a permanent project—it was expected at first that this work would be terminated February 1. The CWA activities have been extended to May, but it is understood that there will be a steady reduction in the numbers on the payrolls, bringing down the lists as the time for discontinuance of this branch of recovery.

In the states, Florida's original quota was 85,000. For the whole country, 4,000,000 of the unemployed were to be given work on civil works, and now there has already been a great reduction. But it is likely that there has been no great change in the number of women employed in civil works service projects. It is stated that the payroll for February 8 was $747,639.98. The high mark was made December and January, when the government handed over more than a million a week, for this purpose. It is announced that another ten thousand will be paid within a week, and there may be only a few people on the government list when the time comes for discontinuing the civil works administration.

Mention was made in the report from Tallahassee that there has been no great change in the number of women employed in civil works service projects, the payrolls showing 10,626 were engaged during the week ending February 8. There has been complaint in some Florida cities that the government jobs furnished have taken up an appreciable part of workers, and that some, especially those usually in domestic employment, prefer the easier and perhaps better paid jobs under the CWA. Probably these will be again working "regular" after a while; for there is much work being done and more to be available as the state enters full recovery from the depression.—P. Puretest Mineral Oil is a perfectly refined product for medicinal use.

First, because it is Anthracene free, being made from crude oil that do not contain Anthracene at the source.

Second, because it is highly refined by a special process which completely removes all organic or other irritant matter.

Recent clinical research has shown that "Puretest" Mineral Oil absorbs and removes the products of protein decomposition (INDOL, SKATOL, HISTAMINE) which cause the headache and associated disturbance commonly known as auto-intoxication.

This explains the great advantage of "Puretest" Mineral Oil over other laxatives in preventing the absorption of intestinal toxins.
