BACCALAUREATE SERMON GIVEN AT HIGH SCHOOL

Rev. J. B. Reid Delivered Excellent Address To Graduating Class Last Sunday Evening.

The parents and many friends of the high school graduating class assembled in the high school auditorium Sunday night to hear the baccalaureate sermon preached by Rev. J. B. Reid, pastor of the Methodist church. The program opened with the processional played by Mrs. J. B. Coen, Jr., and to which the members of the class entered the auditorium and took their seats. A choir composed of members of different churches and directed by S. C. Pardee led the singing of three hymns and Rev. Loys Frink of the Baptist church offered prayer. Rev. J. A. McNutt of the Church of Christ pronounced the benediction.

Rev. Reid took for his text, the 13th chapter of Matthew, 45th and 46th verses, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman seeking goodly pearles who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all he had and bought it."

Rev. Reid said in part: "It is evident that Jesus regarded this merchant with whole-hearted approval. He admired his energy, his purposefulness, his clear-eyed good sense. He is fairly fascinated by his decision of character and by the sanity and courage that lay behind it. He is one, he seems to say, that is possessed of a knowledge that is worth possessing. He knows how to use it. And surely this is a knowledge that is all too rare. Aspire to the higher things of life and seek for the best and give earnest attention to this wise merchant. There are four facts about him that it would be well to consider and imitate.

"First, he is possessed of a definite purpose; second, he had the highest purpose; third, he recognized the best when he found it; fourth, having found the pearl he bought it.

"He came to terms with himself and knew what goal he was going to seek. Of course the advantages of this are many. To mention one, it is a primary essential for joyous living. No purposeless soul is ever happy. Life never becomes truly songful till it is tuned and touched by the skillful fingers of a worthy purpose. Much of the prevailing restlessness and wretchedness of our day is born of sheer aimlessness. Purpose makes for simplicity.

"The merchant had not only a good purpose but he had the highest purpose, he was a seeker after the best. The pearl was the priceless jewel in that day and in seeking for pearls he was seeking for values that are supreme. And upon such a high quest you should be bound for the very best within your reach if you are but willing to pay the price. And because you can claim the best it becomes your solemn duty to do so.

"Not was a judge of values. The person who would succeed in any business must be a judge of the values with which he has to deal. Often we are deceived by outward appearance and allow mere glamour to bewitch us. May God grant you an eye for the values that are real."

"This merchant was not confused either by outward appearance or by the crowd. Therefore when he found the priceless pearl he knew it for what it was worth. To his keen eye it dimmed all other pearls as the sunrise hides the stars. At once he knew his long quest was ended.

"Having found the pearl and bought it, this marks the very climax of his wisdom. All his seeking, all his finding, all his keen appreciation of values would have been for nothing but for this and is just here that so many who really seek, fail of final victory. It may be found the failure of great multitude. How many there are, who are frankly disappointed in life. They are weak as they might be strong. They are joyless when they might be rejoicing with joy unspeakable and full of glory. They are all too prone when they might be rich in helpfulness, they are moral and spiritual dwarfs.

"I would ask you not to accept but make sure that you are doing your best all the end of life and of the year."

Former Resident Still Interested In Avon Park

Miss Mattie Tompkins has received a letter from Mrs. Emma M. Crosby of Pennsylvania and widow of the late Oliver M. Crosby, one of the pioneer residents here. Mrs. Crosby is still interested in Avon Park and inquires for news from here. She mentions she heard of the burning of the Hotel Verona, which indicates she has not heard anything of recent date. The Times is sending her a copy of this week's issue.

Fined For Driving Over Fire Hose

It cost G. L. Barnes $25 in city police court Monday morning for driving over the fire hose at the packing house fire Sunday morning. Barnes admitted the offense and claimed he was watching the fire and did not see the hose across the street. Mayor Covington said $25 or 25 days.

Charlie Thomas, colored, was charged with assault and fighting. It was charged he beat up his sister in law. Charlie's wife said he had been drinking and did not know what he had been doing and neighbors testified he had been keeping his sister in law, an invalid, for over a year. The mayor fined him $15.

Coast Line Pays County $10,555

Tax Collector Ruth Bass Hylton received $10,555 this week from the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, the balance of their taxes due the county. The school portion was paid several months ago and this completes the payment with the exception of a small item which is in dispute.

COMPLETION OF ROAD 19 OBJECT O. B. TRAIL BODY

Orange Blossom Trail Association Hold First Annual Meeting In Avon Park Wednesday Afternoon.

The main objective of the Orange Blossom Trail Association for the coming year will be the completion of State Road 19 from Lake City through the Scenic Highlands to Miami, it was decided at the first annual meeting of the Association held at Avon Park Wednesday afternoon.

The objective of the association last year was the erection of sign boards directing traffic through the center of the state and according to reports at the meeting the results were very satisfactory as the records show that while traffic down both coast roads during the season, was less than the previous year, there was an increase of 39 percent in the traffic through the central part of the state.

The purpose of the meeting was the annual election of officers of the association with the result being that all the present officials were unanimously re-elcted, although President A. C. Slaughter of Orlando urged a change be made.

The officers are: President: A. C. Slaughter, Orlando; Wm. Atkinson, Orlando, secretary and treasurer; C. W. Brooking, Gainesville, first vice-president; Geo. E. Sebring, second vice-president.

The meeting was held in conjunction with the regular meeting of the Avon Park Rotary club and was well attended, Gainesville, Ocala, Orlando, Lake Wales, Frostproof, Avon Park, Sebring and Lake Placid being represented.

Dean Johnson of Orlando, was introduced by Mayor Covington of Avon Park, and deuvered an address at the luncheon. The business meeting of the association was held immediately following the luncheon and President Slaughter delivered his report which will be found in another column.

The president urged the cooperation of every community between Lake City and Miami in getting the trail designated and marked by the State Road Department. He stated that all oil companies except one, that publish road maps of Florida, have agreed to show the Orange Blossom Trail on their maps in the future.

Beautification of the highway is of major importance, Mr. Slaughter stated and the help of the Garden Clubs should be solicited in this work.

Treasurer Wm. Atkinson reported that $2,000 was collected last year, each town along the route taking one or more memberships at $50 each to raise this amount, Orlando taking 19 memberships, Sebring, Gainesville and Ocala four each; Avon Park two, and the other cities and towns one each. A balance of over $100 remains in the treasury with all bills paid.

Among those who made short talks at the meeting were, Shorty Davis of Silver Springs, Mayor M. E. Covington of Avon Park, Mayor W. B. Crawford, Sebring; H. F. R. Reck, Avon Park, and Horace L. Smith, secretary of the Ocala Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Reck pointed out that state road 8 was put on the preferential list in 1923 and very little has been done by the state on it since that time and the only way to get anything done is by a concerted effort by all the cities and towns along the route.

Sebring was represented by Geo. E. Sebring, S. T. Peterson, M. F. McGee, C. F. Saunders, F. T. Haskins, J. M. Adams, W. J. Carson, W. B. Crawford, L. H. Alsmeyer, R. N. Durrance, E. W. Gallaher, Allen Altvater and N. A. Broking.

Lake Placid was represented by Ivey E. Futch and Representative Jack Sims.

Presbyterians To Hold Assembly At Highland Lakes

Florida Presbyterians will hold a summer assembly at Highlands Lakes beginning Saturday of this week, lasting about a week. Word has been received by T. W. Graham, who is in charge of the hotel property for the owners, stating that Miss Carelia Marmolts arrived Thursday accompanied by Miss Smith, to arrange for the gathering of ministers and laymen, as well as for the assembly of young people, who are expected to be on hand the latter part of the week.

During the assembly the synod will have the use of the entire building and the casino, suppl, ing their own operating employees for both.

Mrs. J. L. Wells and Mrs. W. M. Carter were visitors in Sebring Monday.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, the home is of supreme importance as the basis of our community life, constituing, as it does, an essential factor in the health and happiness of both present and future generations; and

WHEREAS, the Avon Park Better Housing Program is helping our citizens build new homes and to modernize homes which they now own,--thus putting men back to work, and contributing in a concrete way to industrial and business recovery.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, M. E. Covington, Mayor of Avon Park do set aside and appoint SATURDAY, the fifteenth day of June, 1935, to be known as Avon Park Better Housing Day; and I call upon all our citizens to join with citizens of other communities throughout the land in marking the day with appropriate observances, in order that the benefits of the Better Housing Program may be brought to a still greater number of our people.

Signed: M. E. Covington.

ALLOW 50 PERCENT DISCOUNT COUNTY DELINQUENT TAXES

County Adjustment Board Passes Resolutions Affecting All Delinquent Taxes and Some Previous Rulings.

The Highlands County Tax Adjustment Board unanimously voted to allow no tax adjustment for either 1934 or 1935 taxes and to allow a flat 50 percent discount on all delinquent taxes of prior years, except in those cases. Where the total delinquent tax against a piece of property is more than the property is worth, further adjustment may be made, it was agreed.

Following are the two resolutions passed by the board at their meeting held at the court house Tuesday:

Resolution No. 1.

Be it resolved by the Tax Adjustment Board of Highlands County, Florida, in regular session held at the Court House in Sebring, Florida this the 11th day of June, 1935, that no compromise or adjustment will be allowed for either 1934 or 1935 taxes; that when any compromise or adjustment is made for 1933 or years prior thereto it will be necessary for subsequent and omitted taxes to be paid in cash in full when paying said adjusted or compromised amount.

Resolution No. 2.

Be it resolved by the Tax Adjustment Board, of the County of Highlands in regular session held the 11th day of June, 1935, that it deems it to the best interests of Highlands county that it does hereby adopt the plan of allowing a discount of 50 percent of the principal amount and together with all interest of the amount of taxes due for county purposes where there are tax certificates held by the State of Florida for the tax year 1933 or any prior year thereto, based on the lowest assessed valuation according to law.

Provided further, however, that this board reserves the right to alter said plan of 50 percent discount in cases deserving special consideration, or a greater discount, to be brought before the board and upon proper proof of consideration regarding same.

Be it further resolved that in the event any adjustment or compromise has heretofore been granted, or consumated that they shall be given the opportunity of revising their former offer and may accept the discount herein provided for and the Clerk of Court is directed to carry into effect this plan of adjustment for those that have paid a smaller discount.

Game Warden Again Arrests R. N. Zigler For Seining Fish

Game Warden Cooper last Thursday again caught R. N. Zigler of Okeechobee county seining in Istokpoga creek near where it enters the Kissimmee river. Zigler was arrested some time ago and was out under a $200 bond. H. W. Downes and G. S. Downes were arrested with him.

It is said the three men were caught by Cooper while actually pulling the seine. Their case is set for trial June 24.

RETAIL DEALERS TO GET PERMITS TO DO BUSINESS

So-called Chain Store Tax Applies To All Retail Stores Doing Business In State of Florida.

According to information published by State Comptroller J. M. Lee, state permits for retail businesses will be available on Monday, June 17 at the bank, the tax collector's office and elsewhere. Senate Bill No. 724 requires that all persons who sell anything at retail to secure a permit before July 1 and the state is making available these applications. Under provisions of the act any person selling at retail without a permit after July 1 will be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Senate Bill No. 724 also provides that all persons who sell anything at retail shall pay a license tax of from $10 to $100 plus a percentage of gross receipts ranging from one-half of one percent to five percent, dependent on the number of stores owned by any individual or group of individuals. Only the permit must be secured before July 1 and the application must be accompanied by a permit fee of 50 cents.

The license scale under this Act is as follows:

Subdivision A.

Class 1.—Upon one store, the flat sum of $10.000. Class 2.—Upon chains of more than one but not more than three stores, the flat sum of $50.00 for each said store. Class 3.—Upon chains of more than three but not more than six stores, the flat sum of $100.00 for each said store. Class 4.—Upon chains of more than six but not more than 10 stores, the flat sum of $200.00 for each said store. Class 5.—Upon chains of more than 10 but not more than 15 stores, the flat sum of $300.00 for each said store. Class 5.—Upon chains of more than 15 stores the flat sum of $400.00 for each said store.

Subdivision B.

Class 1.—Upon one store, also an amount equal to one-half of one percent of the gross receipts from all sales as defined in this Act. Class 2.—Upon chains of more than one but not more than three stores, also an amount equal to one percent of the gross receipts from all sales as defined in this Act. Class 3.—Upon chains of more than three but not more than six stores, also an amount equal to two percent of the gross receipts from all sales as defined in this Act. Class 4.—Upon chains of more than six but not more than 10 stores, also an amount equal to three percent of the gross receipts from all sales as defined in this Act. Class 5.—Upon chains of more than 10 but not more than 15 stores, also an amount equal to four percent of the gross receipts from all sales as defined in this Act. Class 6.—Upon chains of more than 15 stores, also an amount equal to five percent of the gross receipts from all sales as defined in this Act.

The Act provides that it shall be unlawful for anvone to sell anything at retail after July 1 unless he has applied for and received from the State Comptroller a permit.

"I am hopeful that those selling at retail will secure application blanks early next week and immediately file same with me by mail," Comptroller J. M. Lee states.

"We will have a tremendous task in passing on 30,000 applications and issuing 30,000 permits between now and July 1 and the only way in which this can be done will be through the whole hearted cooperation of the retailers and this office. I pledge complete and hearty co-operation on my part and I know I can count on those who sell at retail, giving me their full cooperation in making this Act effective."

Dr. Louise Eastman Dies In Cincinnati

Word was received here this week of the death of Dr. Louise Eastman in Cincinnati on Saturday of last week at the home of her son, Mark F. Eastman. Dr. Eastman was well known here, having made her winter home in Avon Park for a number of years following her retirement from the practice of medicine.

Dr. Eastman was born in Cincinnati and was 76 years of age at the time of passing. She graduated from the Eclectic Medical College in 1898 and was one of Cincinnati's first woman physicians. She was the widow of Harry Eastman and is survived by two sons, Mark F. of Cincinnati and Roe of New York City and five grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kanning and Mr. and Mrs. Art Weisbey and children of Lakeland spent the past week end here with Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Houbner.

Dr. Touchton Buys Bank Annex Bldg.; Will Move Offices

The building on South Lake Avenue known as the First National Bank Annex was purchased this week by Dr. W. C. Touchton from the receiver of the defunct bank. The consideration was not made public. Dr. Touchton will remodel and redecorate the building and on completion of the work will move his offices there. The space not occupied by him will be rented, he said. He plans to spend approximately $2,000 in renovating the building.

MAXCY PACKING PLANT DESTROYED BY FIRE

Loss Is Estimated To Be Approximately Seventy-five Thousand

The G. and J. Maxcy packing house situated on the Seaboard Air Line tracks, Avon Park, was completely destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. Figures on the loss involved cannot be obtained but it has been estimated at $75,000, this including the building, machinery, and the canned grapefruit in storage there. The plant was practically new and was complete with modern equipment, it is said.

The alarm was turned in by Glen Luke at 3 a. m. He saw the reflection of the flames from the Verona Service Station where he is employed and phoned the fire department. The entire rear end of the building was then a mass of flames and despite their efforts the department was unable to save any of the building or contents. They had only sufficient hose for three lines and could operate only from one fire hydrant.

The house had been little used the past season. It closed down immediately after the December freeze, and at the time of the fire was being used as a warehouse by the Florida Citrus Canneries, Inc., of Frostproof, to store canned and bottled grapefruit, there being 28,000 cases there at the time. A large number of cans and bottles exploded from the heat but some may be salvaged.

The cause of the fire is undetermined at present. The watchman is reported to have said that he was at the building half an hour before the alarm was turned in and everything was in order.

The Seaboard train, southbound, was held up for a short time, hose being laid across the tracks.

The fire caused much excitement and a large crowd in all stages of dress and undress assembled to watch the blaze.

Lake Byrd Lodge Scene Of Three Episcopal Camps

Lake Byrd Lodge is the scene of much activity these days, Camp St. Mary of the Diocese of South Florida of the Episcopal church being in full swing. This camp is an annual affair and is for girls between the ages of nine and fourteen years. It opened on Monday and will close on June22. From June 24 to July 6 will be Camp Perry for boys from nine to fourteen and this will be followed by Camp Wingmann from July 8 to July 20. This is for boys and girls from 14 to 25 years of age.

All the camps have proved very successful in preceeding years and this is indicated by the large increase in the enrollment of Camp St. Mary. Last year there were 35 girls present and this year there are 58 from all over South Florida from Miami to St. Petersburg, the largest representation being from the latter city.

The staff consists of : Chaplain, Rev. Eldred C. Simkins; Director, Miss Alcesta Tulane, Director of Classes, Miss Annis Tulane; Director of Activities, Mrs. Morton Nace; Director of Recreation, Miss Hattie Hall.

The girls rise at 7 a. m. and then there are setting up exercises, followed by a swim. Then comes breakfast and prayer and then inspection. There are various classes during the day, the subjects including sewing, drawing and basket work. There are games, rest periods, more swimming and other items to make life enjoyable.

The girls have put on a pagent, they have stunts, Bible stories dramatized, a treasure hunt, Bible games, Mother goose and other features are on the program for the camp which will close with a candlelight ceremony.

MEMBERS CLASS 1935 GRADUATE THURSDAY NIGHT

G. B. Knowles of Bradenton Was Principal Speaker Before 15 Graduates Of Avon Park High School.

Six boys and nine girls received their diplomas at the high school auditorium Thursday night, completing their work at the Avon Park schools. They are the graduating class of 1935 and they made an impressive picture, assembled on the stage in caps and gowns, the girls in white and the boys in black. They were Lorey Mae Bachand, Allie Lee Belin, Carlton Blaine Booth, Mary Elizabeth Coen, Brents Durrance, Raleigh Eugene Foster, William Otto Foster, Marie Kinsey Hancock, Ralph William Heim, Emily Patricia Loomis, Mildred Elizabeth Martin, Fred Reddick, Woodson A. Sudler, Sara Lucinda Trent and Martha Louie Wever.

County Superintendent F. N. K. Bailey presented the diplomas, J. B. Coen Sr. presented the Bailey medals, A. McKee Elwell presented the American Legion medal and Mrs. R. H. Lawhon the Legion Auxiliary medal. The Bailey medals were awarded to Lorey Mae Bachand and Raleigh Eugene Foster. The Legion medal went to Ray Garrett and the Auxiliary medal to Thera Geiger. J. L. Greene, the first Eagle scout in Avon Park, was awarded his insignia, Alexander Blair of Lake Placid, making the presentation.

The principal speaker of the evening was G. B. Knowles of Bradenton, president of the Alumni Association of the University of Florida and former department commander of the American Legion. All the presentations of awards were accompanied by short addresses appropriate to the occasion.

Mr. Knowles addressed himself principally to the graduating class and his subject was "An inventory and a challenge." He likened the, class to be a business man taking inventory of his assets and classified their assets under five headings, normal mentality, physical strength, knowledge, time and will power. He elaborated on each item and summarized by saying, "You have a normal mind, physical strength, knowledge, time and will power at your command and as your servants to make your life service worthwhile. Do you want to serve? Are you going to serve or be served? Will you work for the world or will you work the world? I assume that we young people are sincerely desirous of rendering service. All service for others is rendered as the result of a successful battle over self, as an assertion of will power over our natural and selfish inclinations."

He quoted Socrates as saying, "Know thyself" and Marcus Aurelius as saying "Control thyself" and said the world had long since disagreed with Socrates on the moral sufficiency of self knowledge.

"Jesus said 'Deny thyself' and the world does not look for a higher moral law of individual conduct. 'Self denial' is the most perfect description of personal morality and excellence. It is the triumph of tested morality over human and animal instinct."

Turning to the other side of the inventory, Mr. Knowles said they had a debt to pay. "Society has done a lot for you young people, your parents, your teachers, your communities, the taxpayers and all who have gone on before you. They do not ask you to pay them back. Day by day they are leaving you for another world, but they leave you the responsibility and opportunity to carry on. You must pay back the next generation what has been advanced to you by the preceeding."

He challenged the class to live right, to live their lives in a large

Col. and Mrs. Head Honored by U.S.W.V.

Both Col. and Mrs. Charles R. Head were honored by the United Spanish War Veterans at their state convention at Tampa this week. Col. Head was elevated to the office of senior vice commander for the state and Mrs. Head was named chaplin for the state auxiliary organization. They have both been very active in veterans affairs for a number of years.

BRISBANE
THIS WEEK

Goodby, NRA
Wall Street's Dormouse
Good Wages, Short Hours
Lottery Swindles

The Supreme court unanimously declares NRA unconstitutional.

Arthur Brisbane

High judges, whose decision nobody can veto, short of a constitutional amendment, say congress must do its work and cannot abdicate in favor of the Chief Executive.

The most important decision in many years, this probably makes further argument about extension of NRA unnecessary. You can't extend that which is dead. American business men may now resume business not led by the kindly light of professors and others.

Alice's puzzled Dormouse, at the Mad Hatter's tea party, could not understand his watch, that would not keep time, although the Dormouse did everything. He dipped the watch in his tea, put butter in the works. "It was the best butter," he said, "but nothing seems to please it."

The stock exchange is something like that watch—nothing seems to please it, either.

At first, stock broker gentlemen, whose "Kaaba stone" is the stock ticker, began a weird dance of joy when they heard that NRA was dead, and pushed up stock prices.

Then, suddenly, as the day wore on, one broker asked another, and every broker asked every other broker, "How do we know what is coming next?" And then they put prices down.

It is announced, but not by Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, that a great strike will be called in protest against the Supreme court's NRA decision. Mr. Green is too wise to permit, if he can prevent it, a strike against the United States Supreme court. He may, should, and probably will take a wiser course and work, as organized labor has worked successfully for generations, to improve working conditions.

Some union men know that wages, hours and other conditions improved in the old way are more durable than increased pay based on political fiat. It is necessary for some one to provide as well as for some one to take it.

Peddlers of tickets in the Havana lottery send out "come-on" letters, trying to sell tickets to foolish Americans. On one such letter this is printed:

"Arthur Brisbane says large sums of money . . . are won by Americans buying foreign tickets."

What Arthur Brisbane has said, and now repeats, is that through foreign lottery schemes Americans are swindled out of large sums. He who invests in a lottery throws away his money, adding foolishness to incapacity. The Havana lottery is as much of a trap for fools as any other lottery.

Postmaster Farley's plan to hasten air mails allows a crowd of 10,000 to see a whirling autogiro drop down on the roof and deliver mail, another autogiro coming to get mail bags and carry them away.

Mr. Farley's plan is to have the autogiro fly between outlying flying fields, where high-power, fast planes land, and carry mail bags to the roofs of city post offices, saving time lost in slow street travel.

With no sign of smoke, flame, crater—nothing to indicate an extinct volcano—a new and live volcano suddenly begins eruption in an out-of-the-way place in Iceland. A great hole appears in the earth, flames and red-hot lava rise. No overflowing of neighboring farms as yet.

What would natives have thought had this happened in earlier days, when everybody believed that hell, the devil and all his wickedness were just beneath our feet and heaven just over our head?

Postmaster General Farley thinks of printing on all postage stamps, Sursum Corda, which means "Lift up your hearts." He sees a great summer ahead, "a summer of content."

"Car loadings," says the postmaster general, "are up," incomes reported by our taxpayers "are up," "more people are buying automobiles than before."

For some, the big news is that Little, the San Francisco golfer, has defeated Doctor Tweddell, the British challenger.

For Mme. more important news is the killing of 300 Chinese by Japanese troops. The 300 killed are said to have been professional bandits. The killing of 300 armed Chinese bandits cost the lives of only six Japanese, which seems like efficiency.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

SUPREME COURT INVALIDATES NRA AND FRAZIER-LEMKE FARM MORTGAGE ACT.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

THREE unanimous decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States shook the New Deal to its very foundations. In the first and most important, read by Chief Justice Hughes, the heart was cut out of the NRA, for the court ruled that the entire code structure was invalid, the code making provisions being an unconstitutional delegation by congress of its authority to legislate to persons not connected with the government's legislative functions. By the ruling the exercise of congressional powers over commerce was definitely restricted to interstate commerce, or to such activities as have a provable direct connection with interstate commerce. The court held that no economic emergency could justify the breaking down of the limitations upon federal authority as prescribed by the Constitution or of those powers reserved to the state through the failure of the Constitution to place them elsewhere.

Next in importance was the decision read by Justice Brandeis, holding unconstitutional the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act. This act provides for a five year moratorium in the case of collapse of efforts to scale down a farmer's debts to a figure that would enable him to pay off his mortgage. The court held that under the fifth amendment to the Constitution private property could not be taken without just compensation. There has been no previous instance, the court said, where a mortgage was forced to relinquish property to a mortgagor free of lien unless the debt was paid in full.

In the third decision President Roosevelt's dismissal of the late William E. Humphrey from the federal trade commission was held illegal because the President did not remove Mr. Humphrey for the statutory grounds of inefficiency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office, but, as the President stated, because their minds did not meet upon the policy of administration of the commission. The court held that trade commissioners' terms are fixed by law and that their removal must be for the grounds stated in the act.

THERE was consternation and confusion among the administration forces in Washington, and no one could say immediately just how much the New Deal had been damaged or what could be done to repair the damage to its structure. Donald Richberg, chairman of the national industrial recovery board, after a White House conference, issued a statement saying that "all methods of compulsory enforcement of the codes will be immediately suspended." He added that the administration now faced the problem of "maintaining the gains which have been made in the last two years," and expressed the hope that employers would voluntarily maintain "fair standards of commercial and labor relations."

Senator Pat Harrison said he believed congress should act promptly and rapidly with the enactment of appropriate legislation to continue NRA in some form, and Senator Robinson thought it would not be difficult to provide for new codes to prevent unfair trade practices.

The question of the constitutionality of the Wagner labor disputes bill, passed by the senate, was raised by the NRA decision. The opinion was widely expressed that collective bargaining now cannot be enforced by federal statute.

In the senate demands were voiced to recommit to the committee on agriculture the amendments strengthening the AAA. Senator W. E. Borah said that the NRA decision clearly raises the question of the validity of much AAA procedure. In particular the court disapproved government regulation of costs of business enterprise such as Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is seeking in the AAA amendments.

gram is not so important as had been expected, and probably by the end of the year or earlier he will be able to delegate his duties to others. Then, according to current rumors, he will enter the President's cabinet as postmaster general, to succeed Jim Farley.

Mr. Farley has definitely decided to retire from the cabinet—voluntarily, it is said—so that he can devote all his time and energy to directing the campaign of Mr. Roosevelt for renomination and re-election. He expects to remain not only as chairman of the national Democratic committee but also as chairman of the New York state committee. In order that he may have an income he plans to make a business connection with an important organization that will not interfere with his political activities.

There has been a lot of talk about Mr. Farley's alleged ambition to be governor of New York. Melvin C. Eaton, Republican state chairman, dares him to run for that position. In a speech at Syracuse, Mr. Eaton said:

"For years, now, Mr. Farley has fancied himself as a candidate for governor of New York. He has repeatedly told his very close associates that he will run when the time is ripe.' I challenge Mr. Farley to be the Democratic candidate for governor in 1936. I challenge him to run on his record. I know a great many Democrats who are ready and willing to contribute lavishly to a Farley-for-governor campaign fund, for no other reason than to get a crack at him through the polls."

ONLY nine states of the Central West will send delegates to the "Grass Roots" convention of the Republican party which opens June

A. M. Hyde

10 in Springfield, Ill., but the meeting will nevertheless be rather national in scope, for it will be attended by unofficial delegates from other states and by national leaders of the party. It was believed that Harrison E. Spangler, national committeeman from Iowa, would be made temporary chairman and as such would deliver the keynote address. Others on the tentative program for speeches are Arthur M. Hyde, former governor of Missouri and secretary of agriculture in the Hoover cabinet, and Edward Hayes of Decatur, Ill., former national commander of the American Legion.

The keynote address, according to reports, will take inventory of American affairs under the Roosevelt New Deal and indicate the trend of the party in opposition. Mr. Hyde is to talk on the Great Emancipator at the Lincoln tomb in Oak Ridge cemetery, and Hayes is expected to deal with the theories of the Republican party on constitutional government.

IN THE May survey published by the American Federation of Labor industry is charged with withholding 4,000,000 jobs in a "strike" against New Deal legislative proposals. The survey referred to powerful lobbies against the Wagner labor disputes and 30-hour week bills; holding company control and the banking act; NRA and economic security legislation. The opposition grew into "open revolt" in resolutions passed early in May by the United States Chamber of Commerce, the labor federation said.

On the other hand, President Green of the federation has been openly threatening a general strike of organized labor if the measures mentioned above are not enacted. How many jobs a general strike would take away from workers now employed has not been closely estimated. There seems to be a lack of consistency somewhere.

SETTING a new precedent, President Roosevelt "acted as his own messenger" and personally returned to Speaker Byrne the Pat-man bonus measure with his disapproval. Before a joint session of the house and senate and crowded galleries the Chief Executive read his veto message, an able and well ordered document in which he set forth his conviction that "the welfare of the nation as well as the future welfare of the veterans wholly justifies my disapproval of this measure." Asserting that an able-bodied citizen, even though he wore a uniform, should not be accorded treatment different from that of other citizens, he said:

"The veteran who is disabled owes his condition to the war. The healthy veteran who is unemployed owes his troubles to the depression. Any attempt to mingle the two problems is to confuse our efforts."

Mr. Roosevelt's stern warning against the dangers of inflation inherent in the measure was listened to in silence, though there was mild applause at other times. All his argument was in vain so far as the house was concerned, for as he left the chamber there were quick demands for a vote and by the time he had reached the White House the representatives had overridden his veto and again passed the bill by a vote of 322 to 98. In the affirmative were 248 Democrats, 64 Republicans, 9 Progressives and 1 Farmer-Laborites. Those voting to sustain the veto were 60 Democrats and 38 Republicans.

The debate in the senate was long and perfervid, and quite unnecessary because the result of the vote had been a certainty for several days. Fifty-four senators voted to override the veto; but 40 supported the President, and only 32 were needed to kill the measure.

HAWAII was treated to a magnificent display of American naval power in the Pacific that continued through two days. First the 40 planes that had taken part in the mid-Pacific maneuvers returned and the entire armada of 220 planes participated in an aerial review. Then the vessels of the fleet returned to Pearl Harbor, the great naval base, which they all entered in a crucial test of the harbor's capacity as an anchorage. The navy's largest submarines were with the battleships and cruisers, and there were 700 marines on the target ship Utah.

The personnel of the underwater fleet had some strange tales to tell, for the submarines had just completed the longest cruise ever undertaken by fighting craft of that kind—nearly a month at sea.

Navy Memorial day in Japan, the thirtieth anniversary of Admiral Togo's destruction of the Russian fleet, brought forth a pamphlet from the navy's propaganda bureau which made significant allusions to the United States. It said:

"Then Russia was the rival and the danger. Today that is changed. We have had to face in another direction. We are confronting another great sea power which is increasing its navy with Japan as the target.

"We need a navy sufficient to protect our sea routes to the continent of Asia and to face the menace in the direction of the great ocean. That is why Japan demands parity with the greatest navies. If Japan's just and reasonable demands are rejected by the powers, causing failure of the efforts to reach a new naval agreement and leading to a naval construction race, the responsibility will not be ours. In such case the only thing for Japan to do is to resort to resolute measures for self-protection."

THOUGH the League of Nations council ended its session in Geneva with the hope that it had arranged matters so that war between Italy and Ethiopia would be averted, the prospects for such a settlement are not bright. Under pressure from Great Britain and France, Mussolini consented to recognize the league's jurisdiction over the quarrel and agreed to arbitration. But immediately thereafter Il Duce told the chamber of deputies in Rome he would not allow Germany to make of Ethiopia "a pistol perennially pointed at us in case of trouble in Europe" and asserted he was ready to take the supreme responsibility to sustain by every means Italy's position in East Africa. He alluded bitterly to Britain and France, and indicated that he believed that Ethiopia was perfecting its army with the help of European powers inimical to Italy.

Il Duce admitted the problem of defense was one involving great difficulties in strategy in employing troops. He accused those "who can pretend to be stupefied or simulate protests against the military measures which we have taken or those which we will take" of being enemies of Fascist Italy.

Following this address, Mussolini ordered the mobilization of thousands of officers and technical experts of the class of 1912.

In addition to the action on the African question, the league council unanimously approved what was described as a settlement of the Jugoslav-Hungarian dispute growing out of the assassination of King Alexander last October. Hungary's promise that vigorous measures would be taken against terrorists was considered satisfactory.

SECRETARY HULL signed a reciprocal tariff bargain with Sweden, the fifth to be completed under his program which he has been promoting for about a year. The results of his efforts have been seemingly small and consequently the unemployed people are paying more attention to the alternative plan advocated by George N. Peek, special adviser to the President on foreign trade. The Peek proposals embody a system of trade restrictions such as have been adopted by most other nations, and he warmly argued in their behalf before the Mississippi Valley foreign trade conference at St. Louis, only a few hours before Mr. Hull signed the pact with Sweden.

LAWSON LITTLE, the brawny young Californian, won the British amateur golf championship for the second consecutive year, being the first American to accomplish that feat. His final match with Dr. William Tweddell ended only on the thirty-sixth green, and he decided to take a month's rest before competing in the British open.

THREE world's records were smashed and another tied by Jesse Owens, the wonderful colored athlete of Ohio State university, in the Western Conference meet at Ann Arbor. The new marks he set were: 220 yard dash, 0:20.3; 220 yard low hurdles, 0:22.6; and running broad jump, 26 feet, 8¼ inches. He won the 100 yard dash in 0:09.4, which equals the world record set by Frank Wykoff in 1930. The meet was won by Michigan.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building — Washington, D. C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt announced a year ago that the Tennessee Valley authority and the government production of electric power on a huge scale was to serve as a yardstick on electric rates charged by private power companies.

Probing the TVA

Lately, J. R. McCarl, comptroller general of the United States, has had his bookkeeping sleuths at work on the records of the Tennessee Valley authority, it being a government corporation. Mr. McCarl was not concerned about the yardstick for power rates nor was he interested in experiments designed to prove the value of government ownership in the power field. His job was to determine what had happened to all of the money that had been taken from the treasury and spent in the effort to transform the Tennessee valley into a modern Garden of Eden.

It happened that Mr. McCarl's report on the audit of TVA affairs was made public coincidentally with a movement by the TVA directors for new legislation—amendments to their basic law which would give them additional authority. This circumstance resulted in the TVA and its yardstick being examined by a congressional committee under the strong lens of a magnifying glass. I believe it is generally agreed that TVA suffered in prestige, and government ownership advocates came off second best because disclosures before the committee were of such a nature as to convince most sound thinking observers that there is a colored gentleman in the TVA woodpile.

For instance, Mr. McCarl showed in his report that the federal government had expended a total of $132,792,000 in development of the power facilities, equipment and necessary appurtenances. This property was transferred by the federal government to the Tennessee Valley authority, a corporation, and is carried on the corporation books at $51,000,000. This is 38 per cent of the actual cost to the taxpayers of the property transferred.

Disclosures of this fact brought many charges in the course of the committee hearing and led to the conclusion by several house members that no electric rate based on but 38 per cent of the cost of the production facilities could be considered honest. In other words, the thought was that a yardstick based on such a method of calculating investment necessarily would have to be made of rubber.

Mr. McCarl told the committee also that he had found various haphazard and "trick" methods of bookkeeping and that he had found it necessary to disallow expenditures of something over two million dollars which he said were illegal. The comptroller general is not using the valuation basis for depreciation but instead is basing depreciation on the earnings from the sale of power by charging 10 per cent of the gross revenue to operations as depreciation and accumulating the amount of such charged as a reserve for depreciation.

"Trick" Bookkeeping

"Assuming a very conservative rate of valuation consumption for example, 2 per cent, the amount of depreciation, based upon the value at which the properties in question were capitalized by the authority, would be approximately $1,000,000 per annum.

"A larger revenue will proportionately increase the reserve for depreciation at the present 10 per cent method of amortization, but to accumulate a reserve on the 10 per cent plan equivalent to the amount that would be charged to depreciation at a valuation basis of 2 per cent, the gross revenue would have to be more than ten times the present amount of about $10,000,000 per annum.

"There is very little basis for assuming that revenues will ever reach such a figure."

The comptroller's report touched on many other phases of TVA affairs which he found subject to criticism and it made mention of a factor that, it seems to me, ought to be of vital importance to communities throughout the country. That factor is taxation. It is to be remembered that government agencies, federal, national, state or local, pay no taxes into the treasury of its jurisdiction. Consequently, the government which fosters a municipally owned power plant simply must forget, for taxation purposes, that such property exists within its domain. Likewise, such a plant is not required to consider interests on the investment in the shape of dividends to the stockholders who, in turn, pay taxes on their income.

Doctor Morgan and other directors of the TVA were subjected to questioning of a type about as severe as any witnesses before a house committee in recent months. They had friends on the committee who attempted continuously to shield them from the fire of TVA opponents, but apparently Chairman McSwain was unable to choke off the attack much men as Representative McLean of New Jersey and others who doubt the advisability of the federal government engaging to power production.

There appeared just no way at all in which friendly members of the house committee could justify the action of the TVA board in its attempts to block private power development. It was shown in the course of the hearing that the TVA had gone far away from its base of operations to buy two small parcels of land—one not much larger than a city block and the other only a few acres in extent. Under questioning, TVA directors admitted this land lay in the middle of a proposed reservoir planned by a private power corporation. In acquiring the parcels of land the TVA made it impossible for the private interests to proceed with their power development because the land in question would have been in the middle of the reservoir 300 feet under water. The private interests could not force the TVA to sell and without that land the whole reservoir program was destroyed.

ways. If better proof be needed, it seems to me the demonstration over immediate payment of the cash bonus to war veterans will suffice. The bonus has been licked in the last session of congress but all indications point to a belief that the country may not be so lucky in the next session of congress which is not far ahead of the 1936 elections.

An organized minority — the World war veterans—were very close to success in forcing congress to appropriate $2,000,000,000 and pay it over to them. They failed because President Roosevelt—like three Presidents before him—had to view the problem from the standpoint of the country's welfare and not the welfare of this minority. Credit is due the President for the stand he took just as credit was due President Hoover, Coolidge and Harding. He will be criticized and attacked by this local minority just as the others were criticized and attacked.

I am informed that the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and various and sundry other organizations of former soldiers, sailors and marines are prepared for a bitter fight next year against those representatives and senators who dared to oppose cash payment of the bonus now when it is not due until 1945. The soldiers' lobby is the greatest and most expensive lobby in Washington now. It knows its power and it does not hesitate to characterize opponents of the cash bonus as traitors. The lobbyists are certain to go into every state and congressional district next summer and seek to defeat those who dared to follow their own conscience and vote against this raid on the treasury.

As a result of the vote on the bonus and the subsequent Presidential veto some keen political observers have begun to calculate in their own minds what the view of the country is. It was pointed out, for example, that a maximum of four million would be entitled to a bonus. At the same time attention was called to the fact that new voters are arriving at the age of franchise at the rate of approximately two million a year or almost thirty-six million since the end of World war. These observers contend that the new voters and those who are not entitled to the bonus constitute a majority. Thus, they seek to show that there is a great majority of the voters of the country unwilling to see such a sum of money voted to a minority, especially at a time when the government is taxing its citizens and borrowing to the limit to pay for relief and whether they fought for their country or not. The question is then whether the politicians will wake up in time to represent the majority or be fooled by the power of a highly organized minority.

Dental Hygiene

The Road to Health

By DR. R. ALLEN GRIFFITH

CHEW YOUR FOOD

WHAT are your teeth for? They are placed in the mouth as the first aid in digestion. Their loss throws an additional burden upon the balance of the alimentary apparatus, which is frequently unable to stand the strain.

Thorough mastication can only be accomplished by proper and sufficient teeth. Modern man lives largely on a herbivorous diet. The more herbivorous an animal the greater the necessity for thorough chewing of the food. It has been proved by scientific experiments that those who bolt their food, those who have insufficient teeth or no teeth, lose 20 per cent of their vegetable food, three-fourths of their entire nourishment and 70 to 80 per cent of their food fill.

Food which is appetizing and pleasant to the palate is not completely nutritious unless thoroughly chewed. Mastication grinds and mixes the food with the saliva which starts the necessary chemical changes in the starches and sugars. It also excites the secretions of the gastric juice. Thoroughly chewed food reaches the stomach in which a sufficient amount of pepsin, rennin and hydrochloric acid awaits it. The transformation of food into nourishing body stuff begins here.

Most of us eat too much. This is due to haste, nervousness, bolting, the inability to chew food properly, and because many foods are prepared so they may be eaten without chewing.

This in turn causes stagnation of the cells that produce the digestive fluids. Sufficient hydrochloric acid is not secreted to prevent fermentation. Fermentation manufactures gases. Micro-organisms, mixed with food under these conditions, produce ptomaine and other poisons. Food poisons, the result of incomplete digestion, together with micro-organisms from dirty mouths, produce the symptoms covered by the term auto-intoxication.

The certain cure for eating too much food is careful and proper chewing. This can only be accomplished by an efficient masticating apparatus.

FORTY TO FORTY-FIVE

SOMEWHERE between these ages a man has usually reached the highest point of his efficiency, and from then on it is a question of continued vigilance to keep from sliding rapidly down the grade that has only one end for us all.

You don't need to be a health fanatic, but it is well to ask yourself when you reach this age, if you are really 100 per cent well. Don't you occasionally have a headache, little attacks of indigestion, constipation, or sleepless nights once in a while? These are apparently little insignificant things, but are really nature's warnings that it is time to look after yourself.

Not many of us will follow this out even when we know it is for our own good, but simple cleanliness will accomplish wonders, and we should all take time to keep clean, especially our mouths.

Decay may get up into the forties. It becomes more and more common to hear that some one of our friends has been stricken. The older we get the oftener we lose some good old friend that was apparently in good health only a few days or weeks before. Perhaps the last time you saw him you remarked how good he looked. Don't these things ever make you think? Could you, too?

Death which is not accidental is due to the effects of the action of micro-organisms, a result that might be acute and sudden, or chronic and slow, in its termination. These micro-organisms usually have some small focus of existence and growth, and that point is usually where everything enters the system, the mouth. These micro-organisms are found at the apex of a dead tooth, is reported, around unsanitary dental work, etc.

There can be no doubt that these causes are responsible for most deaths and misery than war and whisky combined. The only reason we don't try to eliminate it is that it comes so slowly, while war and whisky create a lot of noise and are more or less spectacular.

Even diseases that are not caused directly by unsanitary mouth conditions are greatly aggravated by them, through a lowering of the resistance. When you feel below par and have lost your pep, some little bug is getting in its work. When the blood stream is constantly poisoned by pus pockets continuously pouring into the system, some time when the resistance is broken down and you give added life to automobile on a few cylinders.

When you are past forty it is well to have the dentist go through you, where there has been gum trouble, almost sure to get you if you don't stop them out.

Amelia Adds Another Decoration

Flyer Receives Balbo Medal From Italy

Amelia Earhart Putnam, America's most famous feminine flier, has added another decoration to her collection. She recently journeyed to Chicago where she received the Balbo medal, a gift from the Italian government. Giuseppe Castruccio, Italian consul in Chicago, delivered the award.

Miss Earhart's most recent achievement was the record-breaking nonstop flight from Mexico City to the Newark (N. J.) airport. She bettered the time made by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh between Mexico City and Washington by nearly 14 hours.

Her only regret voiced on landing was:

"I would like to have made it in better time."

Looks Like Big Blaze; Only Garbage

World's Champion Butter Producer

Sets New Production Record

Femco Johanna Bess Fayne, nine-year-old registered Holstein cow, has just completed an official test which establishes her as the highest record-holding cow alive. Her record is 1,525.5 pounds of butter in 365 days, churned from 32,727.1 pounds of milk.

Only five cows in the United States have ever produced more than 1,500 pounds of butter in a year, and Bess Fayne is the only cow in the world to have passed that mark twice.

She is owned by F. E. Murphy, prominent Minneapolis publisher.

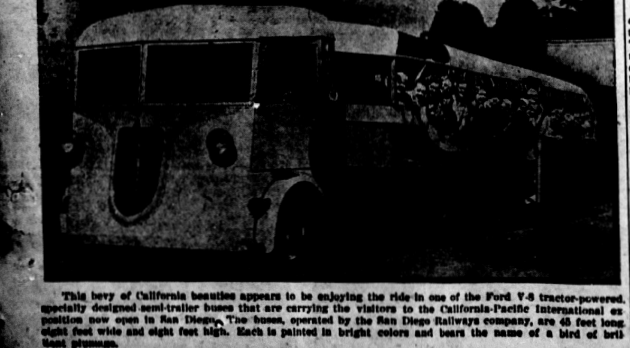
How They Ride at the San Diego Exposition



This bevy of California beauties appears to be enjoying the ride in one of the Ford V-8 tractor-powered, specially designed semi-trailer buses that are carrying the visitors to the California-Pacific International exposition now open in San Diego. The buses, operated by the San Diego Railways company, are 45 feet long, eight feet wide and eight feet high. Each is painted in bright colors and bears the name of a bird of brilliant plumage.

POULTRY

TOO MUCH HEAT IS FATAL TO CHICKS

Warmth of Brooder Must Be Closely Guarded.

By H. H. Alp, Poultry Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Dead or unhealthy chicks always mean financial losses for the poultryman, but they mean greater losses when feed prices are high and the outlook for poultry raising is favorable.

One of the common causes of unhealthy chicks is the overheated brooder house. It often leads to death of chicks through cannibalism, and lowers the vigor and health of the birds. The effect of a hot, stuffy room will be reflected in unthrifty chicks with poor appetites and ruffled feathers.

A general hover temperature of between 90 and 100 degrees Fahrenheit is recommended. However, the room temperature outside the hover should be about 70 degrees. Crowding of the chicks near the stove indicates too low a temperature, while their hovering at some distance indicates too much heat.

Not only is it important to handle the chicks so that they will utilize high-priced feeds to the best advantage, but it is also necessary to protect the feed to prevent losses before feeding.

Dampness reduces the value of feeds and, in some cases, introduces sickness among the birds. A waterproof covering should be spread over the poultry feeds while they are being transported from one place to another in the rain, and they should be stored in a dry, clean room.

Poultry diseases are often spread by feed that has been stored in the chicken house or brooder. If no separate room is available for storage, large-sized garbage cans with close fitting covers make good storage bins.

Darkened Nests Advised to Fool the Egg Eaters

Egg eating is a habit usually brought on by a lack of something in the diet, particularly the lack of shell forming material, says an authority in the Montreal Herald. Egg shells should not be given to hens unless they are dried and broken up fine. They should not assemble an egg in any way, shape or form. To offset this before it becomes a habit, the only thing to do is to arrange that the hens should lay in darkened nests. This can be arranged by having the hens go in at the end of the nest, and entering the laying compartment from the back. If they cannot see the eggs they will be less inclined to eat them, and care should be taken to have the eggs gathered three or four times daily, or oftener if convenient, until such time as the trouble has passed away.

Meat Spots in Eggs

Meat spots in eggs which later may develop into rots, are something over which the poultryman has little, if any, control. It is simply the rupture of a blood vessel somewhere from the time the egg leaves the ovary until it comes down the oviduct. It does not necessarily mean that the hen which laid them will repeat the laying of eggs with meat, or blood spots, and the only method of controlling the output is to have eggs candled before sending them to market.

Feeding Goslings

Use a covered coop—goslings cannot stand cold rain, and especially not the hot glaring sunshine. Sunstroke is a frequent cause of death in summer. Have coops so constructed that fronts close up at night, and open them in the morning if weather is fair. Feed plenty of greens—this is fully 50 per cent of their feed. They'll live on grass alone and grow, but chick starter should be before them exactly same as for chicks. Earthen water fountains keep water cool.

Time to Fight Lice

During warm weather, one can easily rid the laying flock of lice by the use of sodium fluoride as a dip. The usual recommendation is to mix one ounce of sodium fluoride in one gallon of water. The dip should be lukewarm. The bird should be held in the solution until the water reaches the skin. Just before releasing the hen the head should be dipped. Allowing the bird to drain conserves the liquid. The solution should not remain in metal containers overnight.

Cheap Chicks Prove Loss

Chicks sold for less than the cost of producing them should be looked upon with suspicion, asserts a writer in Capper's Weekly. Certainly one loses much more than the cost of the chicks when he feeds a bunch of weak ones that finally turn up their toes. Its loses time, feed, and the opportunity to get early chicks started. That period of growing is something one cannot estimate as to worth.

Flower-Adorned Gowns of Silk

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION is recapturing the elegancies and enchantments which bespeak a truly feminine season. This message of a return to the exquisite, the aesthetic, the lovely and alluring in matters of dress is being told in countless beguiling trends.

A most happy evidence of increasing sentiment expressed for the sweetly feminine in dress, is the revival of that charming custom of wearing flowers, carrying flowers and trimming prettiest gowns with flowers. No need to tell you the fascinating things designers are doing with flowers, the illustration here with speaks for itself.

Another evidence of the dawn of a new era of exquisitely feminine fashions is the re-enthronement of silk, real genuine "all-silk," mind you.

This call for real silk from those of discriminating taste is not a mere passing fancy, but rather a sense of fabric identification which is developing among the fair sex We are coming to know that such terms as crepe, satin, taffeta, and the like, are not necessarily called silk crepe, silk satin, silk taffeta and so on.

The duo theme of flowers and real silk sounds enticing—and is it? For answer, please refer to the trio of adorable evening creations in the accompanying picture. It adds a glamorous note to these distinguished and exquisite modes that they were selected for illustration from among a collection of costumes entered exclusively by society women shop owners in the metropolitan silk showing held recently in New York.

A deep lilac silk crepe (quality-kind pure silk) fashions the stately evening gown to the left, which bears out word from Paris that deep lilac and violet tones are outstanding this season. The wide bordering of silk violets which outlines the graceful cape speaks eloquently of the fascinating and ingenious play which designers are making with flowers.

The costume centered in the picture reflects a very ecstasy of beauty. This most alluring dinner ensemble is in gray (a very high-style color for evening) pure-silk taffeta. Its cunning jacket with quaint flowing-from-the-elbow sleeves is graced with a youthful collar faced with lilacs in delectable coloring. To complete the picture milady carries an intriguing muff done in lilacs to match.

Vaporous, elusively sheer and floating, muchly-draped and shirred chiffon is the idol of the hour for evening wear. The "darling of a gown" with "red riding hood" cape to the right in the group is of exquisite white silk chiffon. The evening hood is one of the outstanding features of the formal mode. Young girls adore them. As artful as fancy can picture is the shirring on this gown which occurs at shoulder cuffs and on the skirt. The very latest gesture in silhouettes is interpreted via the elaborate draping at the side of the slender fitted skirt. Lilacs on the hood and worn as a corsage sing a song of springtime youth and beauty for this dream of a midsummer night chiffon ensemble.

SILK NET JACKET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This exotic silk print evening gown is white with green florals widely spaced. The silk net "butcher boy" capelike jacket is in the same shade of green. Front, back and the sleeves are pleated. This very beautiful twosome is worn by Gladys Swarthout, the lovely opera and movie star who was recently chosen as one of the ten best dressed women in America.

Formal Swagger Coat

The formal swagger coat is a piquant newcomer. Done in woolens that vary from black to palest blue, with full sleeves and soft collars, they flare and swing above the most elegant of afternoon dresses.

REGENCY TREATMENT FOR SPRING COATS

"Draped bows," butterfly revers," "front fullness in the bodice"—call it what you will—each phrase describes the treatment that persists through the Vionet adaptations that are shown. The coat and wrap designers give this detail an impressive position in the second spring collections.

The "pouf" at front, which gives a pleasant Regency quality to the otherwise modern coat or frock, lends itself to a variety of interpretations—suitable for taffeta or flat fur for the coat and varied from ripping revers to double jabot in crisp formal wraps. Also important as a detail that promises to be heard from are the butterfly collars that are placed high across the shoulder rather than at jabot.

Knit Suit Styles Inspire You to Do One Yourself

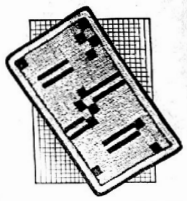
You know how important the suit is to be. But had you thought of knitting one for yourself? You'd be inspired to make the effort after taking one look at a three-piece which includes a British looking short jacket, with skirt and sweater blouse. The jacket has all the airs of the high-powered English tailored suits of the season, with its high notched lapels, its semi-fitted lines and its casual one-button closing. Skirt and jacket are done in diagonal ribbing, with the same effectiveness of the smartest diagonal woolens.

Tweed knit coat designs are nothing short of superb.

Floating Gowns

The newest evening gowns float in clouds—of tulle. Sequins, satins and metal cloths are giving way to fabrics considered "utterly feminine and charming."

Crocheted Rug Uses New Modern Design



This crocheted rug called "Conventional" rug is made in solid colors. The design and border are in black and the background in green and lavender. When finished it measures about 21x36 inches and approximately three pounds of rug strips are used in the making. The colors suggested are only one combination, many combinations can be worked out to match the colors in the room in which it is to be used. This rug will prove a practical as well as beautiful rug in any room in the house.

Full instructions for this rug and 25 others are included in rug book No. 25. Both braided and crocheted rugs are found in this book.

When Will It Happen?

One prosaic night O. Henry, the universally beloved short story teller, was pushing forward through a drizzling rain with his coat collar turned up about his neck, says the Los Angeles Times. He was accosted by a ne'er-do-well, who asked him for aid to buy food. O. Henry handed him a coin and continued on his way. In a moment he was overtaken by the man whom he had helped, who said:

"Say, mister, you gave me a 20-dollar gold piece a minute ago!"

"Well, it was all I had!" replied O. Henry.

THE END OF THE NRA

It is doubtful if any law ever passed in this country stirred up so much discussion and dissent as the act creating the NRA.

Now, a year and a half after its birth, the argument has finally ended—and all the voices which fought about its legality are stilled.

The Supreme Court has decided that the NRA violates the Constitution. The decision is unanimous, all nine justices agreeing with the opinion read by Mr. Hughes.

Briefly, the court has ruled that Congress exceeded its authority when it delegated the power to promulgate codes of fair competition to the President; that the Federal government lacks the power to regulate hours and wages in transactions affecting intrastate commerce; that the NRA is, therefore invalid.

A newspaper report on the day of the decision says that lawyers close to the Administration believed that the opinion doomed the NRA to complete and permanent extinction; that it would be impossible to redraw the act so as to make it constitutional in the light of the high court's lucidly expressed views.

It is possible that elimination of NRA will cause a certain amount of hardship in some industries. But, without criticizing the splendid intentions of those responsible for the act, the court's decision will be of great benefit to the country. It shows that the constitution is not dead—and that constitutional freedom stills exists, and cannot be negated by legislative fiat. The NRA tended to set up government as a dictator over all business—and it is not difficult to believe that the founders of the country would be the first to approve of the Supreme Court's history-making decision.

TVA COWS AND CASH REGISTERS

Comptroller-General J. R. McCarl, who is often and justly termed the "Watchdog of the Treasury" has sent a report on the Tennessee Valley Authority to the President.

According to the Chicago Tribune News Bureau, the report shows TVA has spent more than $2,000,000 in an outright illegal or questionable way, incurring deficits in everything from power plants to cafeterias and tossing thousands of dollars around in an offhand manner. It enumerates among other things:

That TVA purchased cattle it had been previously offered for $200 per head, for as much as $950 per head, and later sold them for less than $200;

That each TVA's directors overdrew his salary by more than $1,000;

That, in defiance of the law, TVA set up its main offices in a rented building costing $36,000 a year, in Knoxville, after reconditioning the administration building at Muscle Shoals, and then hired and bought a fleet of airplanes and cars to carry employees back and forth between the two towns;

That the TVA passed off shortages of hundreds of dollars occurring in its commissaries by saying that children had played with the cash registers;

That, while TVA is designed as a rate yardstick for private utilities and should lay aside $1,000,000 a year for depreciation, it has actually laid aside less than $83,000.

The report is in the President's hands. He will doubtless order a full investigation. Then the taxpayers will have an interesting insight into the efficiency of government in business, and learn where their money goes when public officials are given complete and unqualified control of hundreds of millions of public dollars.

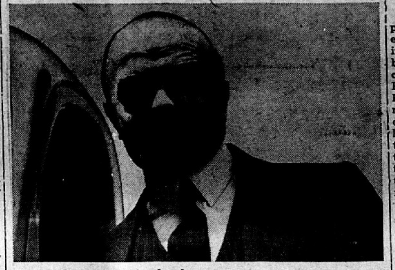
Victor Moore Says: "It's the Top in Motor Cars"



Victor Moore, now starring in Broadway's biggest musical hit, "Anything Goes", says: "I bought my new Dodge because of its striking looks . . . and was delighted to find that it gave me amazing gas and oil economy."

And Mrs. Gertrude Regal, 2953 Decatur Ave., Bedford Parkway, N. Y., N. Y., says: "I've got plenty of friends who own small cars, but none of them save money the way my new Dodge does. I get from 3 to 5 more miles per gallon of gas than they do, and my oil costs are as much as 20% less."

Wherever you go, the story is the same. Owners are simply amazed at Dodge economy. And yet that's only one of its advantages. You, too, can enjoy the extra roominess, comfort and luxury of this big, sturdy Dodge—for a trifling few dollars more than the lowest-priced cars. List price now only $645 and up at factory, Detroit.

Huge Cash Prize For Invention To Aid Aviation

A $10,000 cash prize for the perfection of a device which will eliminate the air hazards of flying in fog was announced today by the National Aeronautic Association. Mr. Godfrey L. Cabot of Boston, Massachusetts, Vice-President of the Federation Aeronautique International, is the donor of the prize and he has stipulated that all designs entered in the competition must be submitted to the N. A. A. The personel of the committee which is to select the winning design will be announced within a few days.

Regulations for the competition specify that the solution must be one which will enable an airplane pilot, independent of any radio station on the ground and independent of any assistance from ground personel or equipment, to land his plane safely through 100 feet of fog in any part of the world, where in the absence of fog it could ordinarily be landed with safety. It is not required that provision be enabled to penetrate through 100 feet of fog, but only that a device be created whereby an impression of the earth may be conveyed to the pilot's senses by some appartus contained entirely within the airplane.

"Mr. Cabot's offer is a noteworthy contribution to the cause of making flying safe," stated President William G. McAdoo of the N. A. A. today. "The perfection of a fog flying device would undoubtedly substantially reduce the number of flying accidents reported annually, and would certainly increase the frequency of airline schedules on our national airway systems."

Change Telephone Low Toll Hours

Tallahassee, June 12.—(FNS)—All telephone companies operating under the jurisdiction of the Florida Railroad Commission have been notified to eliminate the evening rate on long distance toll charges and place their reduced night rates in effect at 7 p. m. instead of 8:30 p. m.

This ruling permits telephone subscribers to enjoy the lowest toll rate one hour and a half earlier than heretofore.

In its order, the commission said, "the extension of the night toll rate will afford a better service and will make the use of the service more convenient and relieve the heavy traffic that has occurred in the later hour."

Important Citrus Meeting To Be Held In Lakeland Monday

The annual meeting of the Associated Citrus Growers and Shippers of Florida will be held next Monday in Lakeland with several Highlands county growers in attendance.

The meeting will be open to all growers in the state and others interested in the industry and many problems of the industry will be discussed by speakers well versed in their subjects.

The effect of the recently enacted citrus laws on the possible returns of the coming season will be discussed by Senator S. L. Holland, a well-known attorney and an able speaker.

Federal financing for citrus growers will be discussed by A. E. Pickard, and Marvin H. Walker, editor of the "Florida Grower," will discuss the proposed cross state canal and the effect it would have on the citrus industry by changing the water level in the state.

The meeting will be held at the City Auditorium, June 17, at two o'clock.

Auto Tag Transfer Fee Eliminated

According to a letter received this week by Tax Collector Ruth Bass Hylton from Acting Motor Vehicle Commissioner, George H. Wilder, the tag transfer fee has been eliminated by a law passed by the recent legislature. Mrs. Hylton was instrumental in getting this law passed and which save money for Buyers of second hand cars.

Mr. Wilder said: "House bill No. 651, eliminating the tag transfer fee, became a law today and you may, therefore, discontinue collecting the $1.00 tag transfer fee. Continue to collect the regular $1.00 fee on each title certificate transfer."

State Health Inspector Visited Here Wednesday

R. B. DuBois of Jacksonville, inspector for the State Board of Health was in Avon Park on Wednesday, conferring with Dr. Geo. Scott McKnight, City Health Officer, and also making an inspection of the local dairies.

Mr. DuBois stated that he found the larger dairies of the city complying with all requirements of the State Board, but that in several instances he had found it necessary to issue peremptory orders to discontinue the sale of milk where the State's regulations were being entirely disregarded. In a few cases dairymen were given ten days in which to make alterations to bring their equipment up to the standard. Mr. DuBois stated that he would return to Avon Park in ten days to make an additional check up.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly to the public, the importance of using milk only which is produced by dairies licensed and inspected by the State Board of Health," said Mr. DuBois. "Outbreaks of typhoid fever in Tampa and Lakeland have caused the Board to double its efforts to protect the public health, and the dairymen who produces milk without taking the necessary sanitary precautions is a menace to the public welfare. I have been assured of the co-operation of the local health officer, Dr. McKnight, in seeing to it that the State's regulations are being complied with."

Mr. DuBois furnished the Times with a copy of the state law which provides for a fine of not less than $5.00 or more than $50.00 upon conviction or failure to comply with the regulations, or suspension from operating of the dairy, and each violation shall be deemed a separate offense and carry the same penalty.

Son Of Rex Reed Badly Hurt In An Auto Collision

Zurr Reed, son of Rex Reed, of Avon Park, was a victim of an automobile collision near Clarence City, Michigan, last week, according to a letter received by his father.

Young Reed sustained a fracture of the right leg and several painful lacerations and body bruises. He was taken to the hospital in Clarence City, where he is reported to be improving. Zurr was a member of the first class to receive graduating honors in the new high school building of Avon Park, 1925, and is well known to many of the younger folks here.

Ship Pre-leased

This week the newsreels are screen casting the glories of the Normandie, and the radio has proclaimed its wonders. Meanwhile what a remarkable dither of activities it involved. We are sometimes told that the motion picture is hectic. Consider the Normandie, racing over seas, an unfinished ship with scores of carpenters and fitters, concealed from the passengers, working away in breathless haste, with the ship the while approaching a great pier in New York that is hardly more than a scaffold skeleton yet. It seems then nothing was completed for the maiden voyage but the passenger list and the publicity releases. It was pre-release voyage. —Motion Picture Herald.

Stands of Pine Lower Damage by Cold to Groves

An order was recently received by the Florida Forest Service Nursery at Olustee for a quantity of slash and longleaf pine seedlings for planting in citrus groves near Deland, Florida, states C. H. Schneffer, Assistant State Forester.

A number of citrus growers have found that natural windbreaks on the north-western or eastern side of groves provide protection from freezes. Dentler Brothers of Deland, Florida, have just purchased one thousand slash and one thousand longleaf pine seedlings for planting diagonally across their groves from northeast to southwest. These wind-breaks will consist of trees planted four feet apart in several rows and each break will possibly be one hundred fifty feet from the adjacent break.

It has been reported that during previous freezes citrus groves located among pines in many cases suffered little or no damage when elsewhere it was quite extensive. It is anticipated that other grove owners will take similar action to protect their trees and special efforts will be made by them to maintain natural wind-breaks on land adjoining groves. This last is also important from the insect control viewpoint inasmuch as neighboring protected woodlands encourage bird life which usually keeps insects life in a state of equilibrium.

Miss Pearson Is Honored at Shower.

The senior class honored their sponsor, Miss Millie Pearson, with a handkerchief shower Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Sara Lucy Trent.

The house was decorated with beautiful zinnias and the honoree received many beautiful handkerchiefs from the members of her class. They were presented to her by little Blue Head.

The guests were served peppermint ice cream and cookies. Present were: Miss Lorey Mae Bachand, Miss Mary Coen, Miss Patsy Loomis, Miss Mildred Martin, Miss Carmen Booth, Miss Sara Lucy Trent, Miss Eleanor Bryant, Miss Millie Pearson, Woodson Sadler, Raleigh Foster, Otto Foster and Fred Reddick. After the shower the party was joined at nine thirty by a few friends of the class who were: Billie Martin, Nelson Smith, Lusby Rawlings, G. D. Godwin, Walton Touchton, Marcus Covington, Sport Mercer, Bill Morrison, Ralph Heim, Miss Dorothy Roberts, Miss Virginia Baldwin, Miss Emily Harpster, Miss Carol Karel, Miss Eleanor Harpster, Miss Verna Heim, Miss Charlsie Crabtree, Miss Elizabeth Rawlings and Miss Marjorie Warn.

Miss Warn Hostess At Farewell Party.

Miss Marjorie Warn entertained a few of her friends Thursday evening last week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Warn on Highlands Avenue.

The party was in the form of a farewell for the Warn family who are moving this week to Haines City where they will make their future home.

Proms and dancing were enjoyed during the evening after which light refreshments were served to the guests who were: Miss Hilda Reddick, Miss Josephine Langford, Miss Johnnie Saggus, Miss Hazel Reddick, Miss Gladys Helms, Sport Mercer and Fred Reddick. Those from Sebring were: Gordon Waldron, George Crawford, Ellis Lynn and from Haines City were: "Skippy" Lawhon and "Wimpie" Shaw.

Woman's Club Discussed New Club House at Meeting Last Friday.

A special meeting of the Womans Club was held last Friday at the club rooms.

The call was to consider taking advantage of the present Federal Housing offers and securing property to remodel for a club house.

W. S. Betts, chairman of Avon Park's Federal Housing Committee, was summoned and gave a very clear and comprehensive idea of the way the Federal Government assists in obtaining funds for this purpose, plainly stating that placing the club under such an obligation might be spur to greater effort on the part of the members or if it proved too much of an undertaking, it might react the other way. At the close of his talk, Mr. Betts answered numerous questions, asked by the ladies present.

After Mr. Betts withdrew, Mrs. Covington reported for a committee appointed by the Board earlier in the week to investigate places available. She listed a number of places and lots that might be secured at reasonable rates, but the committee had not obtained any estimates from property owners, so could not quote prices of any of these.

A lengthy discussion followed, all the pros and cons were brought out by the different members called upon by the president, including members of the Junior Womans Club, who meet in the club rooms and are equally interested in this subject.

The club decided to continue the committee, requesting it to go into the subject more definitely.

The club voted to meet any requirements of the Girl Scout Headquarters relating to sponsoring associations, to enable the girls to take the awards they have earned.

A committee of five is obligatory. The president appointed Mesdames Kempton, Betts, McNicholas, Earl Hartt and Dorminey.

Mrs. Todd reported that seventeen children of members would be enrolled for this summer's "Story Hour," and other have signified a desire to send their children. Mrs. Ten Eyck Girouard who has proved herself so efficient in the past, has consented to conduct it again.

There is no charge for this, the club paying any expenses.

The club announces the requirements of applicants for loans from its educational fund:

Good school credits.
Recommendations of Teachers.
Attending a school in Florida.
Regular payments arranged.
Notes endorsed by others than parents.
Acceptable security.

The club will meet this summer on call.

Variety of Films Offered Patrons Of Avon Theatre

The current week of film attractions at the Avon Theatre runs the scale of film entertainment. No two attractions are of the same type.

The Sunday and Monday attraction is a Musical Comedy with a melodramatic background, "Stolen Harmony" starring George Raft and Ben Bernie (and all his Lads). The story concerns a traveling orchertra that is kidnapped. There's comedy, drama and lots of excellent music in this delightful film. In addition to the stars, the following are featured in the cast: Grace Bradley, Iris Adrian, Paul Gerrits and others. It can best be described as a "Melodramatic Musical Yow."

Tuesday, (Legion Night), the attraction swings to fast action comedy with Robert Armstrong, William Cagney, (Brother of James), and Edgar Kennedy featured in "Flirting With Danger." The three stars are just a trio of practical jokers who get mixed up in a Central American revolution. There are laughts a-plenty in this fast moving comedy drama.

The scene changes on Wednesday and Thursday to straight drama with the feature attraction, "Mills of The Gods," starring that delightful "First Lady of the Screen," May Robson. The story is of a mother's love and the romance of two youngsters. Victor Jory and Fay Wray supply the love interest.

Philo Vance returns to the screen on Friday in the newest S. S. Van Dine story, "The Casino Murder Case." Paul Lukas carries the role of Vance in this film with Allison Skipworth, Donald Cook, Ted Healy and Louise Fazenda supporting. Movie fans have learned that when better mystery stories are written, they will be written by S. S. Van Dine.

PATTERN 9321

Quite the neatest trick we've observed for a long time is this cleverly arranged, yet delightfully simple, home frock. Especially nice for those of us who gain and lose weight or who just naturally love a smart looking wrap-around for sheer comfort and convenience. And, of course, a boon to expectant mothers. Note how the belt slips through a slit and may be simply adjusted to fit the figure. Meanwhile, one has stepped right into it as into a coat. No petticoat needed. Nice shoulders and back, aren't they? Most attractive in solid color cotton broadcloth or printed or plaid cotton of any sort.

Pattern 9321 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48. Size 38 requires 4¾ yards 36 inch fabric.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

When, bewilderingly, came the swish of a silken shawl—a patter of feet—a soft, terrified cry . . . and Eileen's sweet arms were about his neck!

"Billy—Billy dear! Oh, my G—d! you're covered with blood! What is it? What is it?"

"My dear!" he said—"It's nothing. I'm safe—and no one must know—"

She was staring into his face eagerly, her own raised in a sort of agony of apprehension. Haig began to tremble. Gone was every resolution he so recently had made—useless—hopeless.

He held her so close that she thought, "He will break me in half," and exulted. He kissed her until she was breathless, helpless.

"Oh, my darling," he whispered.

He had so little to offer this wonder girl, locked, happy, in his arms—so much to tell her—so much to explain. Yet somehow all he could say over and over again, was:

"Oh, my darling. . . ."

* * * * * * *

A few moments after the Wallaroo dropped her anchor off Port Said, the British consul came aboard. There was a conference in the captain's cabin.

Haig had deliberately failed to reveal the fact that there was a man overboard. The first news was given by a steward entering the missing man's room in the morning. The conclusion was come to that the morose Chinese passenger had committed suicide during the night by jumping overboard.

Now, in the closed cabin of the commander, Dawson Haig revealed the truth to Captain Peterson and the British consul.

"I take full responsibility," he said; "you can see for yourselves the sort of gang I have to deal with. First, the Limehouse outrage, and now this murderous attack on me. I got off lightly, with a cut scalp and a torn sleeve!"

The commander scratched his grizzled head.

"What do you wish me to do, Inspector?" the consul asked. "In my opinion, the persons whom you suspect of being associated with the missing assassin should be detained."

Dawson Haig stood up, grinning savagely, and shaking his head.

"Upon what evidence?" he demanded. "I assure you that except for a scrap of paper providentially discovered by Miss Kearney, there's nothing to associate Doctor Oestler, for instance, with any conspiracy directed against me. And even that is far from conclusive. I mean, he could explain it in all sorts of ways. He doesn't appear to be acquainted either with Miss Valerie Edman or with Mr. Chow; and certainly not with the German, Hartog, on the lower deck. And what have I against these three people which would justify detaining? I assure you"—he shook his head emphatically—"absolutely nothing."

"Then what are we to do?" said the consul. "Of course, I could detain them here, for a time—"

"No, no. Nothing official," was Haig's reply.

With the coming of daylight, the babel of the curious port rose to full blast. Sellers of all kinds of wares—carpets, lace, jewelry, Birmingham antiques, and the rest—set up their shops on deck, turning the ship into a miniature bazaar.

Dawson Haig, very reluctantly, had agreed to allow Eileen to pursue her inquiries in her own way; but he didn't realize that she had scarcely left the ship until she had been gone some time. He was watching Lan Chow, who, having collected his baggage, was now following a porter toward the ladder. Hartog had quietly gone ashore an hour before.

Just before Mr. Chow reached the gangway he passed a fortune teller, an oddly handsome fellow, wearing shabby European clothes and a turban—not an Egyptian, Arab or Syrian turban, but possibly a Greek or an Armenian.

Words were exchanged rapidly, although Haig was too far away to overhear them. The Chinaman pointed shoreward. Haig looked and saw a native boat . . . in this boat sat Eileen with two Arabs. Dawson Haig's heart leaped as her escorted by Doctor Oestler and the ship's surgeon!

Dawson Haig became acutely uncomfortable. The girl had played her part admirably, even to the extent of pretending to be a friendship with Lan Chow; but neither the Chinese nor from the Armenian fortune teller had she gleaned anything in the nature of a clue. She overlooked, and had escaped Haig of the fact, that they knew she was watching them.

Hurrying down the ladder, the dark-eyed fortune teller was pulled away in a boat which waited. Len Chow followed in another. There was nothing to show that the pair were associated. But why had the Chinaman pointed out Eileen's party?

Haig stood there watching, and trying to make up his mind which of several courses to adopt. Eileen! At all costs he must keep Eileen in sight. . . .

He was up against a closely and cleverly organized group, he alone holding all available threads in his hands.

Eileen had some shopping to do at Simon Arzt, and so to this store the party made their way. Doctor Oestler, it appeared, had purchases to make also. The ship's surgeon, Heatherley, went along. Dawson Haig, who had been in Port Said twice previously and, oddly enough, upon the same business which saw him there now, having satisfied himself that this was the destination of the party, became interested in the movements of Mr. Len Chow.

This gentleman, depositing his baggage at the Eastern exchange, had strolled out, like a man with nothing better to do than kill time. The fortune teller had entered a shop nearly opposite.

Dawson Haig, wearing the tinted glasses of "Mr. Smith," sat down at some distance from the door and ordered a cool drink. He was doing some hard thinking.

At about this time, Eileen had completed her purchases. Her companions—excluding Doctor Heatherley—had allowed themselves to be lured by wonderful shawls, scarfs, and other pitfalls which await unwary travelers in Eastern shops.

Doctor Oestler was inspecting a handsome casket of inlaid wood. Eileen, covertly, was watching him.

THE STORY FROM THE BEGINNING

Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-by to his sister Eileen, on board the Wallaroo. The ship is conveying £1,000,000 in gold to Australia. On his way home Kearney meets Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, very much in love with Eileen. Haig is on the trail of opium, which he is convinced is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, Haig delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich to visit the place and find out what he can. While in the warehouse Kearney picks up and carries away a notebook, which he turns over to Haig. Yu'an Hee Sea, leader of a band of international thieves, is at Jo Lung's. He sends two of his followers after Norwich and Kearney, one of whom he realizes must have picked up the notebook. Haig is puzzled over cryptic notes in the book, referring to the Wallaroo. Soon after leaving Kearney Norwich is murdered, but Kearney is not overtaken. While Haig is poring over the book, a monstrous creature enters, seizes it, and escapes. At Cairo Yu'an confers with his lieutenant, Aswami Pasha, over a mysterious coup they are planning. Haig boards the Wallaroo at Marseilles, disguised. From radio messages he decodes, he realizes that members of Yu'an's gang are on board, and that they have recognized him. A Chinaman tries to throw Haig overboard but goes over himself in a desperate struggle.

That this man was an associate of criminals, murderers, she could not doubt; yet he was a most entertaining companion, and in spite of his marked ugliness, possessed the rare quality of soothing without boring.

Eileen was enjoying that sense of martyrdom so dear to woman's nature. Her spirit was seeking Dawson Haig all the time. Where was he? Was he safe? Did he appreciate what she was doing? With it all, she was so happy that she was frightened.

Doctor Oestler had stepped to the open doorway to examine the casket by daylight; and:

"My gentleman," said a soft voice. The doctor started through his glasses at the speaker. It was the Armenian fortune teller.

"I did not wish to buy anything, ha!" said the doctor good humoredly. "I do not wish my palm to be read—no! And I do not wish to know my future. Is it so?"

"It is not so, my gentleman," the soft voice continued. "It is that I know where there are boxes such as this, but ever so much better—and cheaper."

"You know this—ha!" said Doctor Oestler, smiling at Eileen.

"You think perhaps I don't know this?"

"I think—ha!—you may. I say I do not wish to buy ever such a box."

"I make with you a bargain," the man went on earnestly. "I charge you nothing—nothing—unless you buy from the shop I take you to. This is my bargain."

Eileen began to laugh. "My lady laughs," said the Armenian earnestly. "But I will show her." He took her hand, as Doctor Oestler returned and joined the circle on the pavement (from which he had risen) to listen. The doctor rejoined them.

"If I tell this lady true," said the man, still holding Eileen's hand, "something I cannot know except from the palm, will you come with me to the shop I show you?"

Eileen agreed. "But he'll fall down on it and expect half-a-crown all the same."

"We shall see—ha? Proceed, my good fellow."

"You belong," said the man, staring into her hand, "not to England —not, I think, to Europe, but to some country far west of Europe—perhaps it is America."

"Detected my accent," was Eileen's mental comment.

"You come not to Egypt, but to somewhere farther—to India, I think. And in India some one is waiting for you—some one you love and who loves you. No!" He stared closer. "It is not so. Yet there is some one who waits. There is some one I have spoken of—who is now on his way to India, or to some place very near to India. And there he will meet you. . . . Ah, but still I am not right! He is here, this one—here, in Port Said!"

Eileen betrayed herself by a sudden start.

"For him there are many dangers . . . and for you, too, lady. I read it in your palm. But you will be married, and be very happy. There will be—"

"That's enough," said Eileen, startled by the man's reading.

"Then we must stick to our bargain—yes?" said Doctor Oestler. The man smiled triumphantly. "Please follow, my lady, my gentleman," he said. "It is not far. Please follow."

Eileen was conscious of a sudden vague uneasiness. It was very difficult to appreciate the fact that she was in the company of a criminal, but it remained a fact, nevertheless, a fact that the man's strange charm of manner invariably made her forget.

"Perhaps the others would like to come?" she suggested.

Doctor Oester nodded, returned to the shop, and presently came back. "The ladies are still absorbed with silk wear," he said, smiling, "silk undies—ha! So I have left Doctor Heatherley to take care of them, and I arrange that we shall meet at the Eastern exchange in half an hour."

The Armenian led them into the native quarter. Eileen's brain began working rapidly. The question repeated itself over and over again: "Should I go? Should I go?"

Perhaps even at the last moment she would have conjured up some excuse. But suddenly she saw a sight which reassured her . . . made her heart sing. Dawson Haig had followed Len Chow, when the Chinaman, apparently aimlessly, had set out, and had temporarily lost sight of him at a corner. Almost at the same moment he had seen Eileen—alone with Doctor Oestler—accompanied by the fortune teller.

And so Eileen, glancing back apprehensively along the narrow street, recognized the glitter of "Mr. Smith's" smoked glasses. Dawson Haig followed, twenty paces behind! Doctor Oestler was talking to the palmist-guide and could not possibly have noticed her backward glance. . . .

On they went into several streets. Presently, in a street native from end to end, they paused. A dingy little shop on the left was evidently their objective. Eileen glanced back.

Dawson Haig was still only twenty paces behind!

The shop was purely Arab in appearance. They went down two steps into the interior, and from a dim corner the proprietor, whom the guide addressed as Mohammed, appeared.

Mohammed bowed low, opened a door hidden in the dark recess from which he had emerged, and stood aside. Eileen glanced back in the direction of the street. . . .

Dawson Haig was outside.

Confidently, now, she stepped through into a big room—to pause breathless with astonishment. The fortune teller had not exaggerated. This was, indeed, a wonder house, a treasury of beautiful things! And there were other rooms beyond. . . .

"You see, my lady," said the palmist softly, "what I tell you true."

It was indeed true, since this, and not the establishment in Stamboul, was the principal warehouse of that great and mysterious industry controlled by Yu'an Hee Sea. Here, in Port Said, came the choicest pieces, to be distributed for sale.

Some even found their buyers in Turkey, some in France, and some in England. . . .

Eileen experienced a sense of bewilderment. It was amazing, in fact, terrifying . . . opening as it did out of that tawdry little shop—what did it mean? What could it mean? She looked around that Aladdin's cave, and surely the realization came to her that only a Rockefeller could have bid for the contents.

CHAPTER VII

DAWSON HAIG pulled up before the shop of Mohammed.

Further consideration had convinced him that his earlier fears for Eileen were groundless. His own life hung upon a thread. This he recognized. And he scrupulously avoided overhanging windows and watched warily anyone who walked too closely behind him. But he had no intention of leaving Eileen alone in the company of Doctor Oestler.

He entered the shop, and looked about him. The place was empty. Haig clapped his hands—and a moment later the aged proprietor appeared, bowing low.

"What can I do for you, my gentleman?" he croaked.

"I came to join my friends, who arrived here just ahead of me," Haig replied.

"Ah!" Mohammed nodded. "Yes, yes. Wait but one moment."

The door of the treasure house was opened, and he had a glimpse of a long, low room lined with shelves and cases. The sound of Mohammed's shuffling slippers grew faint—died away.

Some Words Were Exchanged Rapidly.

A blank wall faced the shop, and there were no passers-by. It was a queer backwater, and Haig wondered what had induced Eileen to visit it. He stared again through the open door. Then he moved forward and looked along the room.

Like a flash of summer lightning revelation came. . . . This was a branch—or perhaps the parent establishment—of Jo Lung's Limehouse emporium.

Came the sound of shuffling footsteps returning. The aged Arab reappeared.

"My gentleman," he said, "I am sorry to keep you waiting, but your friends have gone."

"Gone!"

"By the other door."

Haig stared through dimness, seeking for the expression in those sunken eyes. "They didn't stay long!" he snapped.

The old Arab spread his palms eloquently. "They buy nothing, sir."

"Show me the way to this other door," Dawson Haig directed. "I shall overtake them more quickly by going out that way."

Mohammed bowed. "Please follow," he said.

Haig entered, his hand upon the butt of an automatic. Yes, the very arrangement of the place told him now that this was the receiving house. Jo Lung's was merely a salesroom. But—Eileen. "This way, my gentleman." The Arab, mounting three steps, indicated a further room beyond.

Dawson Haig followed. A second treasure cave stretched before him. There was a sort of narrow passage connecting this room with another beyond. Through this corridor the aged Arab was hurrying. Haig increased his stride, entered the passage almost on the heels of Mohammed—and . . .

The floor collapsed beneath his feet . . . a stifling drug-like smell swept up to meet, to envelop him, as he fell.

"My G—d!"

Too late he knew . . . to what "other door" this old fiend had led him . . . the "Bath of Feathers!"

* * * * * * * *

Doctor Heatherley, and the two women passengers from the Wallaroo sat at a table outside the Eastern exchange, long drinks with straws before them. Presently Doctor Heatherley glanced at his watch.

"Our friends are late," said he. "They must have found the Mystery shop. There's supposed to be a store here compared with which Simon Arzt's is merely Woolworth's. I've never found anybody to lead me to the Mystery shop, but I believe there is such a shop. Doctor Oestler may know where it is."

Even as he spoke, Doctor Oestler, smiling broadly, bore down upon them.

Undisciplined to Work

"My neighbor Hi Hat is a good enough fellow," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "but he is afflicted by ancestors so distinguished that he fears it would be undignified for him to work."

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service

It has been a long time since parents believed that it was the duty of a school teacher, entrusted with the education of young people to "lick 'em, an' larn 'em."

I am told that corporal punishment is nonexistent in the schools today.

In my time it was pretty prevalent, too much so for the happiness of myself and my fellow pupils.

But I do not believe it ever did any good.

Today, the teachers' profession, while still not paid as highly as it should be, is the most important calling in any civilized country.

The teachers themselves have been taught scientifically. They know better how to gain and hold the attention of their pupils.

They are more tolerant with dullards, who, from no fault of their own, are slow to learn.

School teaching is a highly important business.

It is important because it arouses in the minds of young people a desire for knowledge.

* * * * * * *

Convince a youngster that the more he knows, the happier, and, probably, the more successful he will be, and more than half the battle is accomplished.

The teachers in this country are very well paid, according to the old standards.

But they are not as well paid as chauffeurs, or horse trainers, or baseball players, whose value to the world is very much less than their own.

Today, fortunately in this country, education is compulsory.

But compulsory or voluntary, you must want it, or you will not get it.

You must be interested and ambitious, and determined to get out of yourself the best results possible.

Otherwise the time you have spent in learning will be of no possible use to you.

* * * * * * *

In these days of colleges and educational institutions of all kinds it is getting harder and harder for a half-taught boy or girl to get any position at all.

This has been especially evident in the last year or so.

But those who suffer the least from the conditions out of which we are now passing are those who have used their opportunities to stock their minds.

* * * * * * *

If every young man or woman, starting out to life knew exactly in what direction to go, there would not be nearly so many failures in life. But unfortunately, what one wants to do, and what one can do best, are not always the same.

What Women Do

If you asked the average high school girl today what her chosen walk in life would be, she would probably tell you that she would rather be a motion picture actress than anything else.

And one time out of a hundred, a motion picture actress' life might be open to her if she worked hard.

In the other ninety-nine cases, if she persisted and got as far as Hollywood, the result would only be disappointment, perhaps tragedy.

The people who do not know what they want to do are still in a majority, and they are to be pitied.

They may have real intelligence and ability, sometimes actual talent.

But if they try this thing and that, and are hoping that some new opportunity will turn up to give them a chance, their whole life may be wrecked.

* * * * * * *

Today conditions of this kind are not so serious as they used to be.

There are wider opportunities for women. Indeed, in many cases women are doing the same kind of work that men are and gaining fame and fortune.

But these are exceptions.

What the average girl ought to do is to get married and have a family of her own.

And that is what she usually does, if she has the chance.

But if the chance doesn't come along, and it often doesn't, the future looks very dark.

But the conditions are not so menacing as they were.

* * * * * * *

You find shops of all kinds, once operated only by men, with women at their head, often the owners of the place.

One of the largest chain of restaurants in New York is run by a woman, with great success.

Women have wide opportunities when they go to work in big department stores, and often earn salaries that would put some of their male workers in the shade.

And all this has been accomplished within the last twenty or thirty years.

And as a result men is beginning to find out that the words "superior sex" are an anachronism.

Women at last are quite able to look out for themselves, and many do.

System in Reducing Weight

Can Never Be Considered an Easy Matter, and to "Get Anywhere" a Definite Program Must Be Mapped Out and Adhered To Faithfully.

Although styles change and the standard for figures with them—at the moment an extra pound or two is sponsored by Paris—I find that there is still an interest in weight reduction. Unfortunately, pounds seem to be much harder to lose than they are to gain, especially if overweight has existed a number of years.

It is still a mystery why some people gain weight on a comparatively low diet, while others seem to be unable to put on even a few extra pounds. There is probably some glandular reason, which, however, is difficult to locate. Under a doctor's supervision, it is safe to experiment with certain glandular preparations, which, however, are dangerous to take except under his direction. The specialists on overweight state that in general overweight is a question of too many calories. They cite case after case where persons, enormously overweight, have been reduced to somewhere near normal by reducing food to a minimum. They also state that this is very difficult to accomplish unless the person is in a hospital where every bit of food can be supervised. They are speaking, of course, of really obese persons, who may be fifty to two hundred pounds overweight.

I find that most of the persons who wish to reduce are little over average weight for height and age. It has been found, however, that average weight is not the best criterion. If we choose for our standard the average weight for thirty, we will have a good check on our individual weight. This is only a check, because bones differ in size and shape. I have known a number of persons who wear the same size clothes and yet who differ ten to fifteen pounds in weight. Perhaps our ideal should be size instead of weight.

Any reducing diet should contain a fairly large amount of protein, which we get in the form of meat, fish, eggs and milk. It should contain plenty of fruits and vegetables. Milk should never be entirely omitted, as it is difficult to find calcium from any other sources; at least one cup of milk a day should be a rule for every one. The things which we may omit without harm are fats, bread, cereals and sweets, which provide us with calories and little else that is necessary for a maintenance diet. The most important thing in a reducing program, it seems to me, is to make out your program for a week at a time and stick to it. This is the hardest part.

Mineral Mayonnaise.

½ teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon salt
Cayenne
½ teaspoon sugar
1 egg yolk
Lemon juice
Vinegar
1 cup mineral oil

Mix the dry ingredients and add the yolk of egg. Mix well and add one-half teaspoon of vinegar. Add the oil gradually, drop by drop at first, then more quickly, beating with an egg beater. As the mixture thickens thin with lemon juice or vinegar and continue adding oil.

Vegetable Jelly Salad.

2 tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water
¼ cup vinegar
2 cups boiling water
1½ teaspoons salt
1 chopped onion
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup diced celery
2 tablespoons chopped pimientoes
2 tablespoons chopped olives
½ cup shredded cabbage

Soak the gelatin in the cold water and the vinegar. Add the boiling water, sugar and salt, and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Stand in cold water, and when mixture begins to thicken pour into a cold mold in alternate layers with the vegetables. Chill and when ready to serve dip the mold into hot water for a moment to loosen the jelly. Serve on a bed of lettuce.

Coffee Jelly.

2 tablespoons granulated gelatin
½ cup cold water
2½ cups hot strong coffee
¾ cup sugar

Soak gelatin in cold water, add fresh hot coffee and the sugar. Stir until dissolved and pour into molds to set.

An Odd Revenge

People living in the American town of Danville have to make a journey of three miles to the nearest railway station—as punishment because a local citizen once made a rude remark!

Sixty odd years ago, when plans were being made for the railway to be brought to Danville, the president of the railway company went to stay at a hotel in the town. He was allotted an attic room, and when he protested the reception clerk, who had not recognized him, said testily: "That room is good enough for the likes of you."

The infuriated railway magnate thereupon picked up a pen, and wrote across the hotel register: "Surveyors! Lay the line just far enough from Danville so that its citizens can barely hear the whistles blow."

O. B. TRAIL ASSO'N ANNUAL REPORT

Following is the full report of A. C. Slaughter, president of the Orange Blossom Trail Association as made at the annual meeting held in Avon Park Wednesday afternoon:

First Annual Report.

The Orange Blossom Trail is the culmination of a vision of Central Florida as the State's most representative highway route which came to your President as a result of his desire to bring to this section the National recognition it so justly deserves.

The idea was discussed with leaders in civic plans, and then presented to the directorate of the Greater Orlando Chamber of Commerce, where it met instant approval. After that it developed on its merits, until now it has not only reached the proportions of State-wide importance, but reaches out into long-established routes as one of natural sequence.

As soon as a definite objective was visioned, your President contacted Chambers of Commerce Secretaries in each center which would naturally come within the proposed Trail, and very soon leaders in each city were designated to meet with the Orlando group.

The first meeting was held on July 2nd, in Orlando, with a large representation, which made it possible to get underway without delay. Just one week later, on July 9th, a meeting was held at Silver Springs. With a splendid set-up of officers and directors elected at the Orlando meeting, no time was lost in completing the work of adoption of a set of by-laws, at this second meeting, in Silver Springs.

On Labor Day a mass meeting was held at Silver Springs for the purpose of completing the work of organization and making plans to incorporate the body into an association. A bit of antagonism was encountered at this meeting: First, Vero Beach protested that the proposed Trail should branch off at Lake Wales and travel on 30 Highway from that point to Vero Beach and thence down the East Coast. Second, for some reason never understood, it developed that several individuals in Orlando were fighting the securing of a charter by the Trail Association. However, both these difficulties were thoroughly overcome to the entire satisfaction of all concerned, and we wish to record at this point that Vero Beach is fully one hundred percent wholehearted in its cooperation with the association, and the charter was secured and is a matter of record today, having been filed also with the State.

Immediately after official organization, a program of publicity was mapped out, and very effectively covered through the medium of billboard advertising and newspaper publicity.

Early in November there was released from the Orlando office of your President, through the publicity department of the Greater Orlando Chamber of Commerce, an article announcing the opening of the Trail. This story appeared in 31 different newspapers through the North and Middlewest. Again, in December, an article was released through the same medium, and again in January a publicity story, the third of the series, appeared in these same key publications.

Billboard advertising was just as effective, with the following set-up: One road sign at Perry, Ga., on Highway 41; a second at a point North of Jacksonville, on Highway 1, and a third at a point just outside of Jacksonville, on Highway 17, each diverting traffic into the Northern terminus of the Trail, Lake City. A signboard at Waco, on Highway 13, another at High Springs and a third at Wilder, to divert traffic from the East and West Coast to the Trail. A signboard had been erected just South of West Palm Beach, and at Fort Pierce, one at Melbourne, one at Vero Beach, and one at Indian River City, diverting traffic from the East Coast to the Trail at those respective points. A board outside of St. Petersburg diverts traffic from the West Coast to the Trail, and in addition to this a large board has been erected at Lake City, showing the route South, and one at Haines City and another at Lake Wales further route the traveling public over the Trail.

In addition to this publicity, strip maps depicting the route were printed and distributed at all filling stations and at the information booth in Miami.

An actual check-up an traffic coming into the State via various gateways establishes the fact that in the past year the East Coast has suffered a loss of 33⅓ of its traffic, the West Coast shows a loss of six percent, while Central Florida records a gain of 39.2 percent.

The expense of putting over this program has been borne by the officers personally, and traveling expenses also have been borne by those who found it necessary to make trips from city to city in connection with the furthering of this work. The Trail association has contributed only to actual erection of billboards and newspaper advertising.

The Orange Blossom Trail is a definite and completed organization today, and we hope the newly elected officers will map out a program that will carry the plan along the lines followed during the past year. It has been proven that benefits have come as a result of this Trail to the Central Florida, both from additional traffic and extended trade activity.

Avon Florida Citrus Corporation, a Florida Corporation, Complainant, vs. William Nevarre Cromwell and Mary A. Cromwell, his wife, Defendants. —Bill to Foreclose.

Process By Publication

In the name of the State of Florida to: William Nevarre Cromwell and Mary A. Cromwell, his wife, herein called defendants.

Whereas it appears from the sworn Bill of Complaint filed in the above cause by the Avon Florida Citrus Corporation as complainant, that said defendants, William Nevarre Cromwell and Mary A. Cromwell, his wife, are not residents of the State of Florida and that their address is First National Bank Building, Chicago, Illinois and place of residence of in the City of Chicago, County of Cook, State of Illinois.

Now Therefore you, William Nevarre Cromwell and Mary A. Cromwell, his wife, are commanded to be and appear before the Judge of the Circuit Court in and for Highlands County, Florida at the Court House on July 1st, 1935 the same being a Rule Day of this Court, and there to appear and to answer the complainant's Bill of Complaint filed in the above cause which seeks to foreclose Operation Contracts upon the following described property in Highlands County, Florida, to-wit:

Grove Two Hundred Eighty Two (282) in Lakewood Villa, a subdivision of part of Section Nine (9), Township Thirty Three (33) South, Range Twenty Eight (28) East, according to map or plat thereof duly recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of said County and State, together with the tenements and hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and Grove Forty Seven (47) in Section Sixteen (16), Township Thirty Three (33) South, Range Twenty Eight (28) East, according to map or plat thereof duly recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of said County and State, together with the tenements and hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and said Bill of Complaint further prays for an accounting between the complainant and defendants and that failure to pay any indebtedness found to be due by the defendants upon said Operation Contracts than the property be sold by order of this court and the proceeds from said sale applied to the payment of said indebtedness and that the defendants after said sale be made barred and enjoined from claiming any right, title and interest in and to said property or any part thereof, and that a receiver be appointed to care for, preserve and protect said property pending the outcome of said litigation, and that the court will enter such other and further orders and decrees as this court may deem proper in this cause, and this you, said defendants, are no in wise to omit under penalty of the Bill of Complaint being taken as confessed against you.

Witness the Honorable W. J. Barker, Judge of said Court and W. Z. Carson, Clerk of said Court and the seal of said Court at Sebring, Florida, this the 31st day of May, A. D. 1935.

WHOSE WORD WILL YOU TAKE FOR BLOWOUT PROTECTION?

Low wheels, larger tires, and the high speeds of today make blowout protection in your tires vital to your safety as never before. Are you accepting exaggerated and unsupported advertising and sales claims —or are you accepting the judgment of men who risk their lives on their tires and know from experience the tire that gives them the greatest blowout protection?

Thirty-three race drivers and their mechanics lined up for the dangerous, gruelling grind of the 500-Mile Race at the Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. Firestone Tires were purchased and used on every one of the thirty-three cars.

Kelly Petillo won the race at an average speed of 106 miles per hour. Wilbur Shaw was second, flashing across the finish line just behind the winner. Both drivers broke the track record without tire trouble. In fact, not one of the thirty-three drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Gum-Dipping is one of the outstanding reasons why Firestone Tires give such amazing performance. By this process every cotton cord is soaked and every strand is insulated with pure liquid rubber, preventing internal friction and heat, the main cause of blowouts. Gum-Dipping is a patented extra process not used in any other make of tire.

When you consider that there were 882,000 automobile accidents in the United States last year, and of these, 43,000 were caused by blowouts, punctures, and skidding, you will more fully realize how very important it is for you to protect your life and the lives of others by equipping your car with Firestone Gum-Dipped High Speed Tires—the safest tires built.

It will be worth your time to read these three questions and their answers:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of other popular makes of tires.

QUESTION 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

ANSWER—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Thousands of car owners report unequaled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

1 University tests show Firestone tires stop 15 to 25% quicker.
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 10% longer non-skid wear.

Volume—Direct Purchasing—Straight Line Manufacturing and Efficient and Economical System of Distributing to 500 Stores and to 20,000 Dealers, enables Firestone to give greater values at lowest prices
