SYNOPSIS

Mary Avery, a widow who lives in the harbor town of Satuit, Mass., with two negro maids, Sarah Darbe and Bessie Williams, writes a manuscript describing the famous Second Head murder, which occurred on her estate. Next to Mary live Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stow who every year give a summer masquerade party. One of the guests of this function is murdered. Nearby live Dr. and Mrs. Geary and their married daughter Edith and her husband Alfred Bray; Doctor Myron Marden who has been abroad for 25 years and is visiting the town for the summer, and his step-granddaughter Caro Prentiss, a beautiful young girl who was born in France. Next live Paul and Lora Eames and their daughter Molly. Molly was engaged to the murdered man, Ace Blaikie. She had previously been engaged to Walter Treadwell, who had been Blaikie's secretary, but the engagement was suddenly broken and he had left town. Other neighbors are the Fairweather sisters, Flora, a hopeless invalid, and Margaret. All but the latter two attended the masquerade. Mary's eight-year-old niece, Sylvia Sard, is visiting her for the summer. The wooded part of Mary's estate is called the Spinney. In it is a tiny log cabin, called the Little House. On the day of the masquerade excitement is high.

It was a remark that Sarah Darbe had made several days before which put it into my head to take Sylvia to the masquerade. Of course Sylvia had begged me to take her, as she had begged the preceding year, and of course I had refused her this year as I had then —on the plea that children never went. What Sarah said was, "Wouldn't it be cute if Sylvia could go as your child, Mrs. Avery? I mean dressed exactly like you." Of course I will confess now that I had been racking my brain for an excuse to take her. And instantly I made up on my mind that I would take her—but keep her there only until the unmasking.

The moment I came to this decision Sarah and I rushed up the narrow wooden staircase to the attic and began turning over the things in the huge costume trunk. In fifteen minutes, we had got to work. The long and short of this story is that before that afternoon was over, we had thrown together a costume for Sylvia which, as exactly as possible, followed the lines of mine.

Had I not taken Sylvia to the party—I have often wondered since —how soon, if ever, would we have discovered who killed Ace Blaikie? Perhaps the truth would have come out in time, certainly not so soon.

Nobody in Satuit makes calls on the afternoon of this important day. And so it was with a groan of quite hypocritical self-pity — for I was really conscious of a pleasurable excitement—that I saw Molly Eames's roadster come curving into the driveway about two o'clock. Caro Prentiss was with her.

"We know just how welcome we are, Aunt Mary," Molly announced cheerfully as they came onto the piazza steps, "but we knew it was worse to go home. Everybody is so busy and so snappish the afternoon of the masquerade that I become practically a pariah. Who could bear to watch us peacefully taking a cool drink?"

"You can have all the cool drinks you want," I assured her, "if you'll get them yourself."

"How does it happen, Mrs. Avery," Caro asked me, "that you're not working on your costume? Everybody else in Satuit is —that is except Molly and myself."

"Mine has been finished for many days," I answered.

"So has Molly's," Caro replied. "And I brought mine from Europe. Lucky me! I've not had to put a stitch in anything."

I remember thinking that this was the first time Molly had not worked on her costume until the moment she put it on. Molly's costumes were events. I wondered why she was so fore-handed this year.

Presently Molly returned with a tray loaded with bottles, glasses and ice.

As I sipped my ginger ale, I studied the two types. They presented a marvelous contrast.

Molly Eames is one of the most beautiful girls I have ever seen. A Botticelli, but a robust Botticelli. Flesh white as a gardenia's petal but rich and thick; hair pale gold but thick and deeply waved, stiff like a brilliant pliable wire; eyes pale blue and silken-lashed, but with a strange compelling quality. As she lounged in my great, peacock-backed wicker chair I noticed what carnival the sun was exciting in the big diamond on her left hand—Ace Blaikie's engagement ring. I noticed, above all, that although she did not look tired, she looked wrung—mentally weary I mean. Yet her eyes stormed. Often their gaze set for an instant on the distant view; but they were not studying it; they were watching something that was going on within herself.

Talk went on lazily between us three. I am one of those who is always thrilled by beauty in other women. No more beautiful pair ever sat on my piazza.

Caro was a perfect contrast to Molly. In color she is all brown and reds; reddish brown hair; tiny brown freckles; warm red lips. Her features are piquant but her profile is as perfectly marked off as though drawn with a ruler. I love to follow the straight line of her brow, the tip-tilted line of her nose, culminating in the sculpturesque combination of short upper lip, curved lower one and cleft delicate chin.

I liked our lazy chat. Caro was doing most of the talking. Molly's preoccupation permitted me to study her closely. Molly had, I was sure, power—power of many sorts; above all tremendous willpower. I like to think of the iron interior under the sheath of her pellucid beauty. Caro's talkativeness permitted me to enjoy what was her most fascinating quality—a bounding, abounding vitality.

Caro possessed that understanding and sympathy which makes for tact. I felt that she sensed her friend's preoccupation; that she was trying to cover it up. I helped her.

"You like America, Caro," I drew her out. "You would like to live here always?"

"Oh yes!" Caro exclaimed. "Oh yes! It has opened a whole new world to me and a whole new life.

Caro's quick ears caught before mine the sound of an automobile turning into the drive. "Here comes Ace, Molly!" she exclaimed.

It seemed to me I read into her voice a faint note of warning.

As though Caro herself caught and regretted that involuntary cry, she added in a casual tone, "In Mr. Hexson's car. And my beloved granddad's with them."

"I knew as well as you two girls where to go for a drink," Ace Blaikie threw out of the murmur of greetings. He seated himself between Molly and Caro. Doctor Marden chose a seat beside me.

That was the last time those three men were to sit on my piazza together. All wore the Legion d'Honneur. Doctor Marden, himself a tall man, the shortest of the three, appeared first. He wore his abundant silvery hair straight back from his forehead. On his chin lay an imperial, still black. A thin aquiline nose cut like the blade of a scimitar out of the planes of his face. His black eyes, extremely fine, lighted a long, pallid, pear-shaped face. Those eyes were definitely sad and yet they watched all the time. Watched what? I didn't know then what they watched.

Next came Ace—a noticeably tall man. Though in the late forties, Ace retained his magnificent figure. Although his golden curls were shot with white and his face had developed lines, he was still one of those men you would turn to look at in the street.

Tallest of all was Bruce Hexson. Physically, he differed as widely from Ace as he did in character and personality. He was big with enormous, muscular, stooped shoulders. In some aspects—standing straight—his figure recalled statues of Lincoln; in others—crouching over—he looked like a grizzly bear. His huge head was made huger by the tangled, dark shag of his hair. His hazel eyes—once brilliant, now luminous—lay like lonely lakes in the depths of great hollows.

As usual, when Ace entered a company, he became its center. Instantly our talk focused upon him. Bruce Hexson sat very quiet, a little absent, as one drifting in and out of the conversation. Myron Marden threw in an occasional comment. Occasionally Ace's glance rested on Molly for an instant. I noted a new element in his look and I did not like it—a triumphant possessiveness.

In spite of Ace's vivacity, a constraint had fallen upon us. Caro Prentiss had completely quieted; a veil of reserve seemed to deaden her animation. Bruce Hexson's eyes wandered from Ace's face to the distant marsh and there set in a preoccupied serenity.

I, conscious of conflicting psychological currents in my little party, was beginning to develop social embarrassment when diversion came. I caught the scamper of Sylvia's little feet over the lawn as she came up from the pool. She came racing up the steps, carrying her favorite doll—Dorinda Belle.

"'Who is Sylvia?'" Ace greeted her. "Come here!"

Sylvia went to him unhesitatingly; perched on the high knee to which he invited her. From the precarious height she responded with her shy composure to all their greetings.

"How is Dorinda Belle?" Ace asked.

"She's very well, thank you." Sylvia answered in her prim, conventional little-girl way.

Dorinda Belle had been my doll. Now she is Sylvia's. Sylvia possesses all kinds of dolls—but of them all she loves Dorinda Belle best. Why I don't know. Dorinda Belle possesses a sawdust-filled, cloth body, a china head, china arms, china legs. Her hair is painted on her skull in great jet-black waves which part in the middle and scallop over her forehead. Her blue eyes stare. Her red lips simper. But somehow she is a real doll and subconsciously Sylvia recognizes that. Ace knows Dorinda Belle. Once, during a call which was purely social, Sylvia told Ace that Dorinda Belle was ill. Ace solemnly took her pulse and temperature and wrote out a prescription.

"Are you going to the masquerade tonight?" Ace inquired.

"What a question, Ace!" I came to Sylvia's rescue. "Don't put such ideas into her head!"

Anyone looking at her, should have guessed instantly that Sylvia was the possessor of a great secret. Her eyes sparkled with glee. Of course Ace, who has the intuition of the "called," or the insane, must have guessed at once.

"I wish you were going, Sylvia," he continued artfully. "It would make my evening for me. And if you were going, I should make you tell me what your costume was because of course I would never guess which was you."

"I wouldn't tell you, Doctor Ace," Sylvia asserted firmly, "for don't you see it would be very naughty indeed."

"You wouldn't tell me!" Ace repeated in mock despair.

"No," Sylvia declared, "it wouldn't be right. It would spoil everything."

"Then, I'm very glad you're not going," Ace said with a convincing appearance of being hurt. "You'd spoil my whole evening for me."

"Here Comes Ace, Molly!" She Exclaimed.

At this Sylvia's suppressed secret almost burst its way out.

"Anyway, Sylvia," Ace concluded, "as long as you're not going to the masquerade, will you promise to save me the very first dance of the very first dance you do go to?"

"I'll give you all the dances you want," Sylvia vowed generously.

Molly jumped to her feet. "I must be getting home," she declared abruptly, impatiently, almost rudely.

"I ought to be going too," Caro announced gracefully, "although it is difficult to leave."

"I don't suppose we'll see you tonight, Mr. Hexson," I said as I shook hands with him.

He smiled. "No, my dancing days are over."

"Oh, it seems as though tonight would never come, Aunt Mary!" Sylvia declared the instant they were out of ear-shot.

"It's almost here," I comforted her. "We're going to have an early dinner. Then after a while you're going to take a bath and lie down to see if you can catch a little nap. And then we'll get dressed."

I was as hungry as usual, but of course it was all I could do to get Sylvia to bed. Presently we went upstairs. I undressed and bathed her and put her to bed. By some miracle she slept for an hour. At about eight o'clock, I heard her leap out of her bed. She came pattering in her nightgown and bedroom slippers into my room, where I lay on the chaise longue. As though Sylvia's footsteps had been a signal, Sarah immediately joined us from downstairs. She insisted on dressing me first. "Getting you out of the way, Mrs. Avery," and with a conscious humor—was the way she phrased it.

Mine was a Spanish costume. The Spanish lady — as translated by Satuit—had always seemed a little conventional in type although her shawls—some actually purchased in Madrid—have been extremely colorful. I had determined to do something original—there was no touch of color in the whole effect. The gown was of black lace, a high comb for the hair—as black a tortoise-shell as I could find. And instead of the usual mantilla, I wore a big square of black maline closely dotted with rhinestones.

I am a tall woman. Once I was slim, but perhaps I had better say now that I am thin. My hair is jet black. It has always been abundant and as I have never cut it, I still have a great deal. My eyes are gray. I am forty-six years old. And that, I fancy, is all that is necessary to say about me. However, I myself felt that my costume was becoming and Sarah was enthusiastic.

Sylvia is little, even for her eight years; frail and honey-haired; pearly and freckled. Sarah loosed her hair from its two tight pigtails; combed out its waves; mounded it on her head. Then she drew on the white lace dress. It was so long that it dragged on the floor. I cannot tell you how charming Sylvia looked.

I think I shall never forget what an amusing picture we made as we stood before the long mirror in my room. Reflected back of us was my tall tester bed with its beautiful chintzes in Pompadour blues and pinks; the light here and there in the room, spreading into golden pools on the polished tables or the polished floor; Sarah's warm, dark face above the shining gray poplin of her uniform; Sylvia's tiny fragile silvery figure and my tall, filmy dark one, both of us a-light with sparkles, from our veils. I hated to put Sylvia's mask on.

As I did not want to keep Sylvia up too late, I started early for the party so that she might see the whole show. And to make it the more thrilling to her, I improvised some mystery in our approach to the Stow house. A little before nine, we emerged, hand in hand, from my back door. I took Sylvia down the driveway to the road in front of the house, walked toward the ocean and then up over the Head, passing the Fairweather house, the Eames house, the Marden house, the Geary and the Bray houses to the Stow house. We entered there by the back door.

It was a beautiful night. Many regretted that the moon was to be late. But I did not regret it, for I love the stars. The air was soft and warm. As we walked, Sylvia's trusting little hand in my hand and her chattery little voice in my ear, I could hear the long, slow booming sweep of the incoming waves and the long rattling pull-back of the outgoing ones. I explained to Sylvia that I had started early on her account, so that she could watch everybody appear and that we might be the very first to arrive. I told her that—in order that nobody could guess who they were—the Stows always left their home before their first guest appeared and returned after the party had started.

Three or four times in this brief walk, we met policemen, the first just beyond the park. We greeted them all and they responded with smiling, mystified appreciation.

When we came into the big Stow kitchen, the usual crowd of colored girls filled it; the Stows' Jessie and Caddie, the Eames' Lulu and Lily, sisters by the name of Lamb; the Gearys' Jennie Snow and Winnie Tompkins; Big Hattie Doane and slim little Alice Robinson who were always available for extra work; Bessie and Sarah.

The house looked lovely. Mattie has an exquisite taste in decoration and she is an accomplished gardener.

Several had arrived before us. There was that air of tingling constraint — excited half-suppressed mirth—which always hangs over the beginning of a masked party. Three men, an Indian, a pirate, Sylvia did all the talking. I, did all the listening. I was willing enough to listen. I was conscious that I was going through one of the most curious experiences of a lifetime. It was almost eerie.

I have never had the slightest skill in identifying my friends at the Stow masquerade; for they can always make me believe they are what they are pretending to be. We do not unmask until about eleven; and up to that time, our main endeavor is to make as many correct guesses as possible. Of course, occasionally I do penetrate a disguise, but not often.

Imagine then, my surprise when, almost as fast as they entered the hall, Sylvia began to tell me who the maskers were.

I remember reading somewhere that prestidigitators dread, more than any other, an audience of children, because they are at the same time less suggestible and more suggestible than adults. In other words, the quickness of movement, which deceives the adult eye does not always seduce the childish eye. Flowing robes, strange headgear, darkened skins, wigs, masks were without avail to deceive Sylvia.

CAN WE BE LEADERS?

Well!—at last the high school students are accomplishing things.

Recently a group of students went into a huddle and emerged with an excellent idea. Now plans are being made to organize a student governing body and if these plans are carried through, the high school will become a much better place.

An election will be held among the students to elect the officers of this organization. Each week a certain class will have a portion of the school grounds to supervise. A police patrol will be appointed to direct traffic around the school building, and see that no accidents occur.

If this group of students is willing to make the school one of the best in the state, why should not the rest of the students support them?

In order to have a well organized group, all the members should pull together to accomplish their plans and the students urge all pupils to cooperate.

This organization will teach the students more about voting and how to run a government of their own. It will also teach them to be independent.

When the students start to elect the officers, they should take into consideration the standing of the pupil in his activities in school. Do not vote for a person that is your best friend but a person you consider capable of representing your student body.

USE COMMON SENSE.

As everyone knows, there are new study tables and chairs in the study hall at Avon Park high. The students should be proud of these new chairs and tables.

They have been furnished to the students free and without any obligation except to keep them in good condition.

You should remember this, and when you are in the midst of the operation of carving your initials upon the new furniture, just stop and think who is paying for it. It is your parents who pay for it in the form of taxes.

Also, you should refrain from kicking the chairs around as they will soon become scarred and battered.

Lately, too, pupils have been tipping their chairs back from the tables and a number of them have fallen over backwards. This of course, is not good for the chairs as well as the pupil.

Additional Chairs For New Study Hall

All the additional chairs came in last Thursday for the study hall, making a total amount of 83 and making an all around new study hall.

"We expect the student body to cooperate with us," said Dr. Stanley Reeves, "in keeping the chairs clean and not scratched upon."

The desks that we have in our school are scratched upon and have initials cut in them. The most outstanding initials are C. H. B., which evidently stand for some boy, because in most cases the girls write out their full names to let everybody know they attended Avon Park high.

Red Devils Will Present Stronger Defense Tonight

Coach Bissett says: "Although we have two tough games before the Sebring conflict, I am preparing a defense for use in that game. I feel that our present first line defense is not sufficient to meet the demands that it will be called upon to meet. The defense is an original one suited to meet our own particular conditions. I have combined what I think are the good points of three of four of the better known plans of denfense."

"Our effective methods have proved to be more than successful and with a little re-arranging I will be satisfied with our present method."

FUNDERBURK IS AGAIN ELECTED TO PRESIDENCY

Mr. R. S. Funderburk, assistant principal of Avon Park high school was re-elected president of the high school teachers group of the Peace River District Conference which was held in Wauchula last Friday.

All of the teachers of all schools in the conference met in Wauchula to discuss problems of professional interest.

Col. F. N. K. Bailey, county superintendent of schools and president of Florida Educational Association, made an effective plea for 100 per cent membership in Florida Teachers Association. He also stressed the necessity of cooperation action if schools were to receive the benefits they deserve.

Mr. Colin English, state superintendent of public instruction-elect, outlined a number of changes which should be made in the Florida school system, including a method of selecting state board of education, county school superintendent, and principals. Mr. English stated, however, that in making these changes, it was best to go slowly. The immediate problem is the improvement of the personnel throughout the whole school system.

Dr. Stanley Reeves, supervising principal of Avon Park high school, addressed the elementary teachers on "Influence of Physical Condition on Learning."

Mr. M. M. Ferguson, principal of Sebring schools, spoke to the high school group on "Trends in American Public School Education."

Officers in general who will preside at the meeting in Arcadia next year include: president, R. R. Dugan, vice president; R. M. Brice, and secretary, Mrs. Marion Black.

James S. Rickards, secretary of the Florida Education Association, briefly stressed the importance of the retirement plan bulletin which has been sent to the teachers during the past week.

Red Devils Will Face Tough Foes In Game Tonight

The Avon Park Red Devils will face one of their toughest opponents today when they meet Tampa College High Tigers in a non-conference game.

The Tigers have shown up as a first rate team so far and although they were beaten 19-0 by the Sarasota Sailors last Friday, they are foes not to be reckoned with lightly. The Red Devils should beat the heavier team but it they do not have more outside support than they did last week, they can not.

The Tigers won both of their first games, the first with Tarpon Springs by a 19-0 score. The second game they trounced Brooksville 20-0, but went down to defeat under the high-stepping Sarasota team.

Tampa College is a Catholic school and rather large. It is for boys only. It used to rate as one of the best in the state and the team is being built up rapidly once again.

The probable lineup for the Tigers will be: Herald and Garcia, ends; Ceconi and Alchediak, tackles; Felita and Favata, guards; Jones, center; Roig, quarterback; Lopen and either Lounders or "Babe" Garcia at halfback; and Alexander, fullback. "Babe" Garcia was out last week because of an injury in the game with Sarasota, received in scrimmage, but he will probably see some service Friday night.

High Percentage In Enrollment

The enrollment and the attendance percentage of Avon Park high school and grammar school are considerably higher than they were last year at this time.

The number of pupils enrolled in the first six grades is 423. From the seventh through the ninth there are 177. The tenth, eleventh and twelth grades have 113 students. This makes a sum total of 713 students in Avon Park schools.

The percentage of attendance reached the high mark of 98.8 for the high school. The grammar school also exceeded the usual mark with 97.55 percent.

The Crate Mill school has a total enrollment of 50 students.

Queen's Own Scouts

Honolulu has a Boy Scout troop No. 5, called "The Queen's Own," which was organized more then 25 years ago. It was the first troop of Hawaiian scouts in those American Isles.

Billie Martin Is Honored By Tampa University F'men

Billie Martin, former graduate of Avon Park high school was elected president of the freshman class of the University of Tampa for the coming year.

Martin graduated here last year and was one of the best students in his class. He began here in the first grade but was forced to drop out the middle of the year for an operation on his leg. It was two years later that he again started back to school in the first grade.

Billie was liked by all his fellow students and everyone who knew him for his outstanding qualities. Sports of all kinds were his weakness. Despite his physical handicap he was one of the best baseball players on the Avon Park nine last year. He was a heavy hitter and a good second baseman. Because of his leg he was unable to play football, but he was made manager and assistant coach to H. L. Bissett regular coach. Coach Bissett said, "I never knew of a high school boy that could perform the duties that he rendered to me and the football team." A large letter 'A" with a little "M" in it was presented to him at the football banquet last year to show how much the players and coach appreciated him.

Being elected president at the university of Tampa his first year shows that Billie makes friends easily and is outstanding even among strangers.

During his Snior year here at Avon Park high school Martin served in two of the important offices of the school; editor of the school paper, "The Red and White," and president of the Avon Park high school band.

His mother and father live here near Skipper Lake. Evelyn, his sister is a Junior in school this year. All of his friends in Avon Park and other towns will be watching with interest the progress Martin makes throughout the year at the University of Tampa.

Student Government Planned For School

The proposal for Avon Park high school to have student government was presented to the student body at chapel period on Wednesday morning by Lauretta Reed and John Vilkaitis.

After an explanation of student government and its functions by Dr. Stanley E. Reeves, principal, the discussion has been carried on in the home rooms to get the reaction of the entire student body.

Dr. Reeves stated that if at least 25 percent of the high school will sign a petition for the school to have a student governing group, the faculty will call an election which will be held sometime in the near future after the students have worked out the procedure which they wish to follow.

Beautification, chapel programs, regulation of traffic and any other student activities will some under the supervision of the student governing group if it is formed.

If the students decide that they would like to elect officers of the student body, it will be a means of definite development of leadership, service, and loyalty to the school, say some of the leaders of the movement.

At the suggestion of Mr. R. S. Funderburk, assistant principal, if the election is held, it will be held at the same time as the national presidential election and under the same type of election rules.

Hicks - Bissett On The Sick List

Miss Hicks had an attack of tonsilitis and was unable to attend school the first of this week.

"Short Stuff," Bissett got so excited over the fact that his team of Red Devils were winning a third straight game that he became careless and left his rain coat on the bench during the halt and caught a terrific cold. We are glad to see them both back in school the last half of the week.

Plan Dance For A. P.-Sebring Game

Plans are being made for a dance after the Avon Park-Sebring football game. The junior and senior classes of Avon Park Hi have suggested to the junior and senior classes of Sebring that the loser of the game give a dance in honor of the winner. It is not known if Sebring will accept this plan or not.

HISTORY CLASS HELD DEBATES ON PUBLIC ISSUES

Debates upon public issues have been carried on for some time in Mr. R. S. Funderburk's 10th and 11th grade history class and also the ninth grade citizenship class.

These debates deal with campaign issues of the forth-coming presidential election.

Leading the Democratic side in the tenth grade history class are: Cleland Belin. Cecil Clements, and Max Mathis. Leading the Republican side, three small boys, but size does not matter as Jim Chaddock, Odel and Francis Skipper proved as they almost convinced the staid Democrats in the tenth grade that the Republicans have a good side.

James Jordon was the only one who stood for the Democratic cause in the 11th grade. Leading the Republicans were Margaret Bailey and Blen Sheumaker.

Some of the issues discussed in these debates were the relief issues, the rising national debt, minimum wage regulation, social security regulation and regulation of industry and agriculture.

The citizenship class is continuing their study of presidential elections and upon the scrapbook of the presidential election. They contain matter as follows: Pictures of presidential candidates platform of parties, pictures of campaign managers, pictures of party leaders, clippings of candidate's speeches, system by which the president is elected. This includes a map of the United States drawn by the students and his or her prediction as how the presidential election will turn out.

Home Ec Class Is Studying Designs

The girls enjoyed doing this work which followed up their study of the principle elements of design, later they will apply this knowledge to the designing of their dresses.

The first class is studying housing. Avon Park has housing problems, which could be improved with a small expenditure of money and time. Many of the girls have decided to try to improve the looks of their homes by cleaning up the yards and planting flowers

Sixth Grade Joins Junior Red Cross

Miss Louise Pittman's section of the sixth grade has applied for membership to the "Junior Red Cross."

They are the second class to make this move. Billy Heim, class librarian, has set aside next week as "Book Week." During the week they will try to get as many new books for the class library as they can. They have thirty excellent books in the library now.

Class Play Dates Have Been Chosen

The juniors will have their play December 11, so that it will be over in the first semester, and they will be free during the second semester to make arrangements for the annual junior-senior banquet.

The seniors plan to start practicing immediately upon their return to school after the Christmas holidays, for the play will be presented February 19. Miss Erress Arant and Mrs. Wilma Peden will be sponsors of the seniors.

AAA Announces Price Paid For Grapefruit

veloping markets. The government is merely agreeing to take up the slack so as to assure the success of these efforts. It cannot be expected to do the whole job itself.

"The average price received by growers for all crops should be higher than that offered by the government. Fruit of the best grades will, of course, bring a greater return. The effect of the government price will merely be to establish a sound bottom for the market.

"Grapefruit can be bought with confidence by buyers in northern markets, and canners in Florida, when they know it will not be available at prices below the government offer. Our advertising and sales promotion activities will produce more profitable results under these conditions.

"Another effect of the government purchases will be to provide an additional outlet for grades and sizes which cannot be shipped under prorates recommended by the Control Committee. As fruit bought by the government will be distributed through its relief agencies, and not sold in primary channels of trade, prorates will not apply to it.

"In establishing its price the government has had to consider the situation in other grapefruit producing states, which also have larger crops this season. To accomplish its purposes the government must purchase surplus supplies in all of these states. A price considerably higher than one which markets might reasonably be expected to pay for grapefruit from all states could not possibly be maintained.

"If the government bought fruit at a higher price now and lowered it later, the trade would lose confidence and the whole program would fail. The governments wants grapefruit for its relief agencies, because it recognizes that those dependent upon it for food must have a balanced diet. Should market prices be stabilized at a higher level, as a result of the activities of the Commission and the Control Committee, the government will have to raise its price to get fruit.

"The cost of picking, hauling, grading and loading fruit in cars is higher than that allowed to shippers by the government. Growers should know that shippers handling fruit for them which is sold to the government are rendering these services at less than their usual charges. Shippers will benefit, however, because without this outlet they might have to dispose of some fruit with no payment for their services."

Avon Park Will Get Avalanche Of Publicity

This week this column is written by W. M. Hetherington, who is acting in the capacity of Guest Columnist for the occasion. Mr. Hetherington has a style of his own and says:

This town and county are going to get advertising—and what I mean great, luscious gobs of it.

A big scale campaign that dwarfs anything ever attempted in these environs is scheduled to start immediately with the use of folders, special newspaper editions, road signs, bill boards, northern newspapers, radio, lectures and any other media that might have been skipped in the foregoing enumeration.

What's it all about? Don't say you haven't heard.

Helen Randle has come to our town, and she has the place standing on its ears. This human dynamo came to Avon Park three weeks ago, and she not only "woke us up," but nobody has had a chance to sleep, eat or visit with the home folks since her arrival. Political enemies, business rivals and all and sundry have buried the hatchet, taken off their coats and gone to bat for their dear old Alma Mater in the greatest revival of public spirited support this town has ever seen.

Listen to this lay-out:

100,000 copies of a special combined edition of the Sun and Times, possibly 200,000, depending upon final figures and estimates and the amount of cash that is raised.

60,000 two-color folders of the swankiest type, featuring all attractions and advantages of this great little town, with plenty of pictures and art that is art.

$1000 for advertising in northern newspapers.

In addition, lectures in the leading cities of the north and east, radio broadcasts and invaluable publicity by Mrs. Randle in a national lecture tour, featuring Avon Park and Highlands County as the home of the Sun and Diet Health Resort and the health center of the nation. In addition, Mrs. Randle is placing orders for quantities of literature of her own printing for distribution on her tour to acquaint people with the Sun and Diet Health Resort, and to bring them to Avon Park, either as health-seekers or home-seekers, — and either way they land here, the entire populace of Avon Park will reap the benefit.

This pretentious program has been made possible through the appropriation of $5000 by the city for advertising purposes, a contribution of $1,000 by the county, and large appropriations by interested corporations, and business firms that are joining hands in a campaign of publicity heretofore unheard of in these parts.

Arriving in Avon Park three weeks ago, Mrs. Randle has bought a large hotel and put her health system in operation with a complete staff of nurses and other assistants. In the deal, she has brought to Avon Park a wealthy Eastern manufacturer, who has made a substantial investment here and has plans for greater things in the immediate future.

She has secured the whole-hearted co-operation of the chamber of commerce and the business interests generally, in a whirl-wind, fast-stepping sequence of events that seems destined to put this town on the map. She has contacted other prominent people and has them interested. There seems no limit to the possibilities, when the campaign gets in full swing.

Mrs. Randle appeared before the county commissioners Tuesday and sold them on the advertising campaign, not only for Avon Park but as a county-wide proposition. She had previously sold the city council on the plan, and secured that body's appropriation. None of this money is for her publicity. It is to be spent under direction of the chamber of commerce. She has agreed to match the city's outlay with her own publicity, and stated that she expects to spend even more than that.

Special photographers have been making pictures, both aerial and ground shots, lay-out men have been preparing copy, and the city council Thursday night gave its order for 60,000 folders for immediate delivery.

Copy and pictures are being prepared for the special editions of both newspapers. As soon as some details can be ironed out, presses will start rolling out the papers, and people will begin to hear of Avon Park—the town that has awakened to its great opportunity, and will soon find its place in the sun.

Aims and Objects of Newly Organized Commerce Body Listed

Following the organization of board of directors and the election of officers of the chamber of commerce Monday night, a membership drive under the direction of W. M. Reck is getting under way and everyone interested in the growth and advancement of Avon Park is urged to participate and pay their dues either to Mr. Reck or to A. McKee Elwell, temporary secretary.

In connection with the membership drive, a mass meeting is planned for the near future at the high school auditorium at which every citizen in Avon Park is urged to be present. It is hoped that Mrs. Helen G. Randle of the Sun and Diet Health Resort will be present and speak and there will also be musical selections by the high school band under the direction of Prof. E. L. Roberts. This meeting will be preceeded by a dinner meeting of the directors.

At the organization meeting, C. E. Crabtree was named president, Walter S. Betts, first vice president, W. T. Contes, second vice president, W. W. McFarland, treasurer and A. It was pointed out that even before organization the chamber obtained the Sun and Diet Health Resort for Avon Park and with the cooperation of the citizens, greater advancement can be gained than ever before for the Metropolis of the Ridge.

The objectives as set forth by the directors are:

1. To sell Avon Park to its own citizens.

2. To cooperate with and promote all local businesses and industries.

3. To attract and promote more industries.

4. To encourage tourists to visit and stay in Avon Park. This will include entertainment features and a trailer park.

5. Secure vocational training for the students in the public schools.

6. Advertise the attractions of Avon Park.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS PUSHING CAMPAIGN

Making Effort To Get Out Complete Democratic Vote

Jacksonville, Oct. 22.—(FNS)—Campaign for the election of Democratic State and National tickets in Florida, from constable to president, will be brought to a close with a barrage of publicity through the co-operation of the state's Young Democratic Clubs. This drive will take the form of full-page advertisements to appear in most, if not all, of the Democratic newspapers of the state.

The Young Democrats are taking the initiative in raising funds to finance the advertising campaign. Their plan is to solicit contributions to be used in publication of the series of ads. Names of the contributions to be used in publication of the series of ads. Names of the contributors are listed in the advertisements, a two-column space in each advertisement being left for that purpose.

De Vane Williams, of the Young Democratic organization, and Don Lochner of the Clermont Press, connected with the state campaign headquarters, have been put into the field to speed up solicitation. It is expected that at least 100 full-page advertisements will be run this week and at least 150 full-page ads during the final week of the campaign. The last of the series of ads will be an appeal to Democratic voters to go to the polls in full force on Nov. 3.

With but a little more than a week to go, all indications are that the Democracy of Florida is becoming fully aroused and that it will rally to the colors almost one hundred percent strong, according to Clayton C. Codrington, state campaign manager.

"The Republican menace — and it is the real one — is being met," Codrington said. "Party leaders the state over and party workers, from Escambia to Monroe, are on their toes. Even West Florida, where apathy was feared because of the local lack of opposition, is aroused as never before, and I am advised that it will poll a full Democratic vote."

To keep enthusiasm at high pitch, a hundred or more speakers will be turned loose on October 31, the last Saturday before election. C. P. Helfenstein, Live Oak publisher in charge of the speakers' bureau at headquarters, is urging a final rally that night in every county. Among speakers available for duty at any time, he has listed such party leaders as former governor Doyle E. Carlton, Judge W. Raleigh Petteway, Dr. Fons A. Hathaway, Grady Burton, Mrs. Hortense K. Wells, Judge Hal Adams, Col. J. B. Hodges, Charles E. Mitchell, and scores of others of equal calibre.

In addition, Senator Richard B. (Dick) Russell of Georgia, has been billed for addresses at West Palm Beach and Miami in the Fourth District.

Stamp Collectors Meet.

The stamp collectors held a meeting last Sunday afternoon at the Jacaranda Hotel. Mayor M. E. Covington was a guest of the club and displayed his race collection of Confederate stamps.

Members present were: George Elwell, Billy Helm, Earl Pabor, Alberta Garrett, James Jordon, Alean Shuemaker, Tommy Bryant, and Nancy Betts.

Wells Tells Of Trip Thru West With Camp Car

Makes Interesting Talk At Rotary Club Luncheon Wednesday Noon

"Seeing the West with a trailer house car," would have been an appropriate title for the talk J. Lawler Wells gave at the Rotary Club luncheon at the Jarananda Hotel Wednesday noon. Mr. and Mrs. Wells and family made an intensive tour of the west the past summer and he gave a very interesting account of their travels. During his talk, pictures taken at interesting points were passed around among the Rotarians present.

Mr. Wells was introduced by R. S. Funderburk who had charge of the program and he made mention of the fact that three local Rotarians had toured the west this summer and two of them had returned already and the other is expected in the near future.

Mr. Wells said he had always desired to see the Yellowstone National Park and as he had traded for a house car trailer decided to make the trip. He remarked on the extreme southern hospitality evidenced on the route through Texas to California and compared it with experiences encountered in the north last summer.

The first important stop was made at Dallas where they spent three days, two of them at the Texas Centennial Exhibition which compared very favorably with the Chicago Century of Progress and was better in many respects with regard to the lighting and air-conditioning of the buildings. Fort Worth was the next stop and from there to New Mexico where they visited Carlsbad Caverns, the largest in the world and 4,400 feet above sea level.

Mr. Wells went into detail regarding this natural wonder and said they had been discovered by a filling station owner nearby who noticed a great number of bats emerge from a hole in the ground. With a Mexican he explored them and discovered their extent. They are now lighted and a modern elevator takes the sightseers down to the bottom level.

One of the first things the discoverer found was the skeleton of a very large man. The bones had crystallized through the action of minerals in the water and when touched they disolved into dust.

From there the travelers went to El Paso in which they were much disappointed and they crossed the international bridge and spent a few hours in Mexico. Phoenix, Arizona next claimed their attention together with a side trip to the Grand Canyon where one day was spent. Then on the Boulder Dam in the Black Canyon of the Colorado River, the largest dam in the world and forming the largest lake in the world, all of which generates electricity which is whole-saled to the City of Los Angeles at ¼ cent a kilowatt besides conserving water for irrigation purposes.

Los Angeles and Hollywood proved of great interest. Being a pilot, the airport interested Mr. Wells, who stated that at one airport at Los Angeles, 47 airships arrive and leave every 24 hours. California is way ahead in aviation and 50 percent of the airplanes built in this country are made there and factories are three months behind on government contract orders.

San Francisco was next visited together with the two immense bridges. Then on to Salt Lake City, where they saw people swimming in the great salt lake. Yellowstone National Park with its 3,000 geysers and hot springs including Old Faithful and the Giantess despite which Mr. Wells said this section is the coldest place in the U. S. A. in the winter time.

Visitors at this luncheon were: Neal Trent of the Sebring club, A. Gilbert Lester and John Miller of Winter Haven and J. H. Saunders and C. B. Owens of Frostproof.

Neal Trent Out For Clerk Circuit Court, Election Nov. 3rd

Neal Trent, popular Avon Park citizen, announces this week his candidacy for the office of clerk of the circuit court, the position now held by W. Z. Carson. Mr. Trent is running as an Independent Democrat at the solicitation of a large number of friends and is confident of victory.

Mr. Trent's name will not appear on the ballot and will have to be written with a cross mark before it. His advertisement showing how this is done appears on another page of this issue and his supporters urge everyone to study this carefully so there will be no mistake on election day, Tuesday, November 3.

Mr. Trent has held the position of deputy clerk for the past three years and nine months and has held important positions in the business world before this and is eminently qualified for the office. He promises, if elected, to give a square deal to everyone who has business to transact with him together with efficient and courteous conduct of the office.

EDITORS PREFER F.D.R. FOR PRESIDENT

Editors of Nation Express Choice In Liberty Magazine Poll

New York, Oct. 21.—Franklin D. Roosevelt will most likely be re-elected to the Presidency, according to results of the third annual political poll taken among 5,145 newspaper editors by Liberty Magazine.

Liberty asked each editor who he thought would be elected President. About 400 editors turned this question down, leaving some 4,600 lined up as follows:

Franklin D. Roosevelt	2,875
Alfred M. Landon	1,814
William Lemke	18
Earl Browder	0

The votes predicted as follows:

1. Mr. Roosevelt will receive a minimum of 269 electorial votes—three more than he needs to win, and a number that may be increased by Roosevelt victories in any one of four doubtful states.

2. The Democrats will win 266 seats in the House of Representatives to 159 for the Republicans, seven for the Progressives, and three for the Farmer-Laborites.

3. The Democrats will win 20 of the fall's 36 senatorial elections—giving them 67 seats in the Senate, to 27 for the Republicans and one each for the Progressive and Farmer-Labor parties.

O. B. Trail Ass'n. Held Meeting of Directors Here

Meeting of the board of directors of the Orange Blossom Trail Association was held at the Jacaranda Hotel Thursday at noon.

The directors were guests of the Jacaranda Hotel at a luncheon. The following towns were represented: Avon Park, Mt. Dora, Orlando, Kissimmee, Lake Placid and Gainesville.

President A. C. Slaughter presided at the meeting and a budget of $3,000 was adopted by the Association. The money is to be spent for re-conditioning about 20 billboards for the association which they now own, and approximately $1200 to be used for a historical map and booklet. Mr. Slaughter, who is also secretary of the Greater Orlando Chamber of Commerce, agreed that he would personally see that these booklets were distributed thru the "Ask Mr. Foster" service, throughout the United States.

The Orange Blossom Trail Association has been in existance for 3 years and the beginning of the Trail is at Lake City, coming down thru Gainesville, Leesburg, Ocala, and Mount Dora and into Orlando, then south thru the Ridge Section. According to a check made by the American Automobile Association, there was 37 per cent more traffic thru Central Florida last year than any year before and this proves that the Orange Blossom Trail Association has done a lot of good.

The Trail Association also expects to have a representative in Miami during the heavy tourist season to attempt to send people back thru the Ridge Section.

Next meeting of the Orange Blossom Trail Association will be held at Kissimmee, on Monday, November 16th at 10 a. m.

To The Youth of Avon Park:—

MY DEAR FRIENDS:

I should like to express publicly as Mayor of Avon Park, my appreciation of your attitude and actions during the last Hallowe'en season. On all sides I have heard a similar expression of appreciation.

We are proud to know that the youth of our city can have a good time without damaging property, endangering life and acting as hoodlums.

Knowing what has happened here in years past, and reading with alarm of what happens in some Florida towns at Hallowe'en, I took the precaution of adding extra police to the force and providing guards for the Mall, but am glad to state that they were not needed.

Please do not soap the bodies of automobiles as there might be grit in the soap that will ruin the finish of an expensive car. As long as you do not destroy or molest public or private property, go ahead and have fun.

M. E. COVINGTON,
Mayor.

Yes, a Queer World
Supply and Demand
If All Worked Hard
The Biggest Brain

How Queer is our world! Fascists, led by Sir Oswald Mosley of the English Blackshirts, who think they ought to change the British government, learned from a mob that fascism does not suit England—yet. The Blackshirts were driven home.

Arthur Brisbane

Next day, bands of the Fascists invaded the London Jewish quarter, smashing windows. In the first day's rioting between Fascists and the crowd that does not want fascism, hundreds were hurt.

England is becoming modernized. One of her race track gambling-gangsters, murdered "American fashion" in the course of gangster business, was honored with a funeral that would make Chicago or New York stare.

Mussolini does not believe that old "supply and demand" is necessarily omnipotent. While cutting four per cent from the value of Italian money, he forbids any increase in prices, any rent increase for two years. That experiment will be watched with interest. The word "money," most important in the world to many, has less real meaning than any other word in the dictionary, nobody knowing anything about it.

A new law in Paraguay compels every able-bodied man to work, whether he wants to or not. Here men that want jobs can't get them. There men can get jobs, but don't want them.

The general idea is good, but if all able-bodied men had been compelled to work always the human race would still be far back in the dark ages. One of the greatest Greeks said truly that bodily slavery was necessary, because it gave leisure to a few, leisure made thought possible and thought created progress.

If all men had worked hard, by compulsion, there would have been no deliberate thinking. Slavery would be necessary now for the world's progress had not machines taken the place of slaves.

Scientists of the Smithsonian Institution announce discovery by Dr. Hrdlicka in the Aleutian islands, off the coast of Alaska, of a skull that once held the biggest brain on record, excepting that of the Russian novelist Turgenieff, who had a brain cavity of 2,030 cubic centimeters. The biggest American brain belonged to Daniel Webster, 2,000 cubic centimeters.

But brain size and weight are not everything. Beethoven, with a 1,750 cubic centimeter skull, will outlive in importance Webster, the French naturalist Cuvier, and other "big brains."

Adaptation to usefulness is the important thing. It is said that the eye of the eagle is twice as heavy as the eagle's brain.

Wine bottled in Germany hereafter will have, instead of a cork, a plug of German wood.

To help make Germany independent of the outside world, the use of cork, that does not grow in Germany, is forbidden. This will save 10,000,000 marks a year, spent abroad for cork.

German wood, according to authorities, is cheaper, better, resists breakage, acid, alkali, and eliminates cork taste.

One question is, will the wooden cork swell up at the lower end sufficiently to overcome the pressure of gas in a champagne bottle?

At Jonesville, Va., Rev. T. Anderson, in a demonstration of faith, allowed poisonous serpents to bite him three times, assuring his congregation that they could not harm him.

We go up and down quickly in the United States, particularly in new enterprises. William Fox, once one of the most energetic, successful of moving picture men, now a bankrupt, tells the court that in 1930 he was worth one hundred million dollars; now he has only "odds and ends," meaning only a few hundred thousands, here and there.

Our South American neighbor, Nicaragua, forbids all slot machines and other gambling devices in that country. All must be destroyed.

Nicaragua's government says such machines teach children to gamble, and their owners are parasites of the worst kind, making a profit of 65 cents on every dollar

Six Men, Six Views

Washington.—Some time ago I reported in these columns that Mr. Roosevelt had sent a commission to Europe to study consumer co-operatives. I said at that time that the commission was likely to find itself unable to reach an agreement concerning a report to the President on the consumer co-operatives and that in the event they were able to reach an agreement, the publication of their findings would be delayed until after the election.

The commission has returned to this country and has gone through its labor pains to the end that there are six different views, an opinion by each of the six different commissioners concerning the value or lack of it that consumer co-operatives have.

But it is important to know developments concerning this commission because it appears that by engaging in an investigation of the consumer co-operatives, the President has awakened a number of different interests in our own country to the fact that there are some kinds of co-operatives which are not helpful. The fuss stirred up by failure of the six commissioners to reach an agreement makes it seem unlikely that there will be any unanimity of opinion in congress if and when Mr. Roosevelt attempts to gain action in a legislative way to encourage creation of these co-operatives. In other words, if a move is made in congress, or if the Chief Executive attempts to force congress to enact legislation favorable to consumer co-operatives, we are likely to see a vigorous legislative battle. Personally, I hope that happens. Unless that end materializes, there is every likelihood that the average person who has not access to full information will be inclined to favor consumer co-operatives, without realizing he is lending his influence, whatever it may be, to fostering institutions that in the end are certain to cause heartaches and financial losses.

I am in a position to say that the one thing upon which the President's commissioners were able to agree was that consumer co-operatives in Europe constitute the focal point for radicalism. Not a single consumer co-operative was found, I am told, that was not controlled, managed or inspired by radicals of one breed or another, mainly, communists. These hotbeds of radicalism constitute "pressure groups" that have been able to impress governments in the various countries of an ability and an influence that do not actually exist with them. That is to say, these groups, like minority groups everywhere, are cohesively organized and they are vocal, in addition. The result is they have been able to force upon peoples in many countries restrictions over private and independent initiative, or to gain for themselves exemptions and privileges not accorded to others. The result is an obvious alignment of peoples into fresh factions, the tendencies of which are dangerous.

Tugwell's Activities

It may be news to many persons that we have consumer co-operatives in this country and that these agencies or units already are being fostered by the United States government. I refer to the activities of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell, who has installed in the resettlement colonies various and sundry consumer co-operatives. It may be news as well to many to learn that Mr. Tugwell has spent almost two million dollars in financing these co-operatives to get them started. And the third bit of news respecting this circumstance is that a book written by James Peter Warbasse is being used as a guide for the creation of these consumer co-operatives in federal resettlement projects.

Now, the name of James Peter Warbasse may not seem important. Many persons have written books, but there are not many volumes extant in the United States that advocate changes in the form of our government. Yet, there are propositions in the volume to which I have referred which do just that and these books, as I have said, are serving more or less as a guide for the people whom Professor Tugwell has "resettled."

With this brief presentation of the facts, it seems to me it does not take much imagination to see the basis upon which the promoters of the consumer co-operatives are building their structure in this country. Taking these facts into consideration with the information brought back by those who made the study for Mr. Roosevelt, it is made to appear at least that a foreign link is somehow or other being forged, and that link, I believe, is designed as a fundamental unit in the general radical program to change the form of our government as well as the form of our national life. I can arrive at no other conclusion.

There is still another phase of this general proposition of consumer co-operatives that ought to be of interest to every producer in this country. Let us assume, for example, that they were perfect in organization and management; that they prospered and expanded in numbers and that they were rendering genuine service to the people. If that condition were to obtain, does it not occur as a natural question that with so much strength, the consumer co-operatives would eventually establish a class alignment between producer and consumer? It seems to me that the natural course of events would lead to this end, and if it did lead to this end I am afraid that because there are more consumers than there are producers, the producers would get the dirty end of the deal. They would be short-changed because they would be outnumbered.

Another Phase

This phase seems the more important because the food stores, food fields generally, are the sectors in which these consumer co-operatives operate best. As a matter of fact, the food del is the most fertile field for experiments anyway and here is quite apparently another experiment that has fastened, or is fastening itself as a parasite upon the agricultural industry of this country.

I know there has been some argument that the consumer co-operatives are the answer to the effort to destroy chain stores. That is not so. Chain stores in foreign countries have licked the co-operatives. They have virtually destroyed them where the co-operatives attempted to drive the chain stores out of business. It becomes important then to recognize that while the United States has many chain stores, it has not now and never will have as many chain stores as it has independents.

Again, here is a threat to independent business men, particularly to the small shop owner, whether he be in a large city or in the thousands of small towns and villages where the owners of such stores are important to their communities and pillars of strength in our national society. If the consumer co-operatives get going. I predict a further decline in the number of independent merchandise houses throughout the United States. For that reason, if for none of the others that I have outlined, it does seem important that the consumer co-operatives move in this country should be stopped in its tracks and that those responsible in an official way for encouraging this sort of thing should be shorn of power.

There's Beer

It may seem a far cry from the farm field to the price of beer as a working man finds it, but there is a direct connection and recent developments again demonstrate the fact that our whole economic structure is quite closely related. There is an increase coming in the price of beer. Either the working man and others who like beer are going to pay more for it, or else they will get a smaller glass. The answer is that ingredients entering into the production of beer have increased in price to such an extent that, according to official figures, the brewers are now paying about $1.50 more for the things that enter into the production of one barrel of beer than they did when the sale of beer again was legalized.

This circumstance is significant for the reason that it shows conclusively how tampering with the currency upsets the general balance within our economic structure and results sometimes in displacement of markets and sometimes in diminution of sales. In the case of beer it probably will resul in a displacement of markets, rather than any decline in the amount of beer consumed, despite the fact that the ultimate consumer will be paying more.

This condition is of interest to agriculture generally because it has always been contended by the proponents of open sale of beer and whiskey that a substantial new outlet for farm crops was made available by the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Rather, it was a restoration of an old outlet that existed before the Eighteenth amendment was adopted. But there has been a combination of circumstances, largely the result of governmental meaning, that has militated against the farmers obtaining full benefit from repeal. These may be enumerated as follows: Devaluation of the dollar crop restriction under the Agricultural Adjustment act, higher taxes, and a tendency on the part of the Roosevelt administration to increase imports from abroad.

In the case of the devaluation of the currency, the main purpose, as announced by the Roosevelt administration, was to increase prices. It has had that effect and has made the brewers pay more for the hops they must import from abroad and they must import hops because our own production is insufficient.

By JOHN THOMAS WILSON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Voters, one million, thirty-nine thousand, six hundred and thirty-five of them, residing in small towns and rural America, have registered a straw vote preference for President, with this result:

A majority of them, 57.1%, favor Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, the Republican party candidate. The second choice is Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democrate canddate, with 36.8% of the vote. Congressman Wm. Lemke, Unon party, is a distant third with 4.6%; the other three candidates trailing far in the ruck in the order named, Thomas, Socialist; Browder, Communist, and Colvin, Prohibitionist, last

In political terms more readily understood, Landon with 594,183 votes leads Roosevelt with 382,842 votes on the ratio of about 5 to 3 in 40 states. Landon leads in 27 states to 13 for Roosevelt. In the cold terms of electoral votes Landon has 378 to 110 for Roosevelt in these 40 states on the basis of the small town and country vote only as recorded at the close of this poll.

Herewith is a table of the final total vote for all candidates:

Landon	594,183	57.1%
Roosevelt	382,842	36.8
Lemke	46,848	04.6
Thomas	7,544	0.8
Colvin	3,580	0.3
Browder	4,638	0.4
	1,039,635	100%

As between the three leading candidates:

Landon	594,183	58.0%
Roosevelt	382,842	37.4
Lemke	46,848	4.6
	1,023,873	100%

And, as between Landon and Roosevelt only:

Landon	594,183	60.8%
Roosevelt	382,842	39.2
	977,025	100%

The above standings are the final results in a nation-wide Presidential straw vote poll conducted by some 3,000 weekly newspapers located in states throughout the country. Publishers Autocaster Service and The American Press, located here, served in the capacity of national straw vote headquarters to tabulate the nation-wide vote of state by state returns.

This poll of small town and country voters is made up of returns from 40 states. The states that are not included in this poll are omitted only because the vote was so small or so scattered that in the opinion of those tabulating the vote, such returns were of no informative or speculative value.

Fourth Nation-Wide Poll.

Small town and country voters have been registering their Presidential preference in these polls, conducted by country weekly newspapers, each national election year since 1924. Each succeeding poll has shown an increase in the number of ballots cast and the accuracy of the forecast.

In 1932 this small town and country poll was correct within one state, giving Hoover 7 states against Roosevelt, whereas Hoover carried only 6 states in the November election. In popular-vote totals, the Hoover-Roosevelt vote in the 1932 poll was within 1% of the distribution of the popular vote between those two when the official November count was completed.

Balloting in the 1936 poll was conducted over a period of nine weeks, from late July until October 10th. Only actual individual ballots as sent in by newspapers from subscribers and readers were included in the national state-by-state tabulations.

Lodge, organization or group voting was not counted. Newspapers of all political faiths and complexions were invited to join in the poll.

How States Voted.

One new state, Nevada, was added in the final week of balloting. It went into the Roosevelt column by the narrow margin of 648 votes to 615 for Landon.

The 13 states wherein Roosevelt leads at the conclusion of the poll are: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Texas and Utah.

Taste-Blind People

There are taste-blind people who cannot distinguish bitter from sour, just as there are color-blind people who cannot tell red from green, according to an official of the Carnegie Institution.

First to Write for Piano

It is said that Beethoven was the first to write music for the piano. His "Moonlight Sonata" was written for the harpsichord, but his last sonatas were composed for the piano.

Grantland Rice's Guide Finds Passless Plays In High Favor

Outstanding among line plays featured by Rice is Tiny Thornhill's fake reverse pass which won Stanford the Rose Bowl game against Southern Methodist. It is illustrated here. Other coaches reporting successful ground strategy are Hunk Anderson, Ted Cox, Dutch Meyer and Bernie Bierman. On the aerial side Dana Bible, Elmer Layden,

Hunting Laws In Condensed Form

Tallahassee, Oct. 22.—When the 1936 sportsman picks up his gun on November 20th, and follows his dog into the field, he will find a good supply of quail and, in suitable habitats, of wild turkeys in those areas in Florida where seed stock had not been shot down too low, says the Commission of Game and Fresh Water Fish. This it is claimed is due in part to better protection, in part to the favorable breeding season of the present year which these birds have had with the exception of few counties in the lower part of the State where rains in midsummer reached flood proportions. Collier, Lee, Hendry and Glades were the four counties where heaviest loss was suffered. The supply of game in these four counties is sufficient only for a short season. All hunting for the present season, in the four counties named, will come to an end on December 31st.

The sportsmen are urged to bear in mind daily bag limits on all game; quail 15, ducks 20, turkeys 2, squirrels 15, deer (buck only) 1, and to strongly adhere to the same. The fact that a man may plan to hunt but once or twice a season is no reason or excuse for over-shooting a day's bag limit. It is against the law.

The general hunting season in Florida opening November 20th closes on deer December 31; does January 31; and other species of native game February 15.

Special attention is called to the following exceptions to the general hunting season:

Quail, Squirrel, Wild Turkey.

Collier, Glades, Hendry, Lee — Closed to all hunting after Dec. 31 (for season 1936-37).

Citrus — Nov. 20-Dec. 1, each day; Dec. 1-Feb. 1, unlawful to hunt Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays; Feb. 1-Feb. 15, each day.

Marion — Nov. 20-Jan. 31 Unlawful to hunt on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

Okaloosa — Squirrel, Oct. 1-Dec. 31, in certain sections of county.

Union — No hunting on Saturdays and Sundays.

Walton — Closed on wild turkey.

Exceptions in Following Counties.

Citrus — Nov. 20-Dec. 1, each day; Dec. 1-Dec. 31, unlawful on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays.

Marion — Nov. 20-Dec. 31, unlawful on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays. Mandatory that hunter report deer killed to County Judge, Sheriff, Deputy Sheriff, or Conservation Officer and obtain receipt for same.

Nassau — Summer season only (June 15-Aug. 15, Friday and Saturday of each week).

Osceola — Nov. 20-Jan. 31.

Attention is also called to the fact that possession of native game at any time is limited to a two day's bag; of migaroty game to a one day's bag; and that possession of both native and migratory game is permitted through five days immediately following the close of the hunting season. Sale of game is prohibited. Common carriers cannot receive or ship game. Transportation as baggage by those in possession of valid hunting license is limited as to license.

Florida Will Ship 37,500,000 Boxes of Fruit This Season

Lakeland, Oct. 22.—Florida will ship 37,500,000 boxes of citrus by rail, boat and truck (including fruit used for relief purposes and put into cans) A. M. Pratt, secretary-manager for Associated Citrus Growers & Shippers of Florida, states in his Annual Fall Citrus Estimate. Pratt's figures call for movement of 18,000,000 boxes of oranges; 17,000,000 boxes of grapefruit; and 2,500,000 boxes of tangerines — total 37,500,000. Mr. Pratt prepared his figures and made his calculations before the recent government estimate which calls for a total citrus production of 37,500,000 boxes.

"I understand Mr. Marks and Mr. Rhodes usually figure about 2,500,000 boxes as consumed within the state, outside of canneries," Mr. Pratt comments. Mr. Pratt's 37,500,000 box estimate does not include this home consumption by Floridians, but the Marks government estimate does.

Shippers here were interested in noting that the two estimates—prepared by two leading statisticians of the citrus industry—were so nearly alike, though each estimate was prepared specially without any knowledge of what the other one would show.

British Navy Uses Ford V-8 Engines For Picket Boats

A fleet of 45-foot high-speed picket boats, each powered with four Ford V-8 engines adapted for marine use, to patrol the coast of Great Britian has been ordered by the British Admiralty from Vosper & Company, Limited, of Portsmouth, England.

On a trial run of 260 nautical miles from Portsmouth to Plymouth and return, the first of these craft to be completed averaged 21 knots, running through heavy seas and in a stiff wind.

The engines, as adapted for marine use by Vesper, develop 75 brake horsepower each and are set side by side. They give the boat a maxium speed of 25 knots. The machinery occupies only one-third the space required for machinery in 45-foot steam-driven picket boats now used, and the service speed is approximately three times as great.

The boats are fitted for mounting a machine gun forward, with depth-bomb dropping gear amidships and mine tweeping gear aft. Each is capable of carrying more than 100 men in an emergency. They have full fire-fighting equipment and four watertight compartments.

The same company is also delivering 17 25-foot flotilla type fast launches, each equipped with a single Vosper-adapted Ford V-8 engine, giving a cruising of 18 and a maxium speed of 23 knots. It expected these boats will be standardised for use in connection with the latest classes of cruisers, destroyers and sloops throughout the British Navy.

The Coast Guard

The Coast Guard was formed by an act of congress approved on January 28, 1915, from the revenue cutter service and the life saving service, established, respectively, in 1790 and 1871. It is under the administration of the secretary of the treasury in times of peace, of the secretary of the navy in times of war. It takes care of the saving of life and property along the coast and at sea, the enforcement of maritime law, the prevention of smuggling, the removal of obstructions to navigation, etc. It is commanded by a captain commandant, ranking with a navy captain.

Falconry Requires Patience

Falconry is a sport which requires a great deal of time and the utmost of patience. The falconer also must study the habits and diet of his hawks because unless they are kept in perfect physical condition they are unfit for the hunt.

CHECK YOUR VOTE CAREFULLY.

Election time is here! Now is the time for all good students to come to the aid of the party.

For the first time in the history of the Avon Park high school an election will be held to determine the officers of the newly established student governing body.

Much enthusiasm was shown among the different groups in chapel Friday, and quite often a group of students were heard saying, "You nominate him," "No, you nominate him," but after all there emerged two outstanding candidates for the presidency.

Already the candidates have picked campaign leaders and are well on their way to one of the greatest elections ever to be held.

There is developing in the school a great amount of controversy which at times seems to become almost "hot" enough to consume these loyal supporters.

This idea of student government has all of our praise in spite of the bitter arguments which some students are stirring up. Government by the students has many good points and in numerous ways is beneficial to the students. We think that they are made to feel more responsible. That is, they are made to feel that they are something in the school. That they are a deciding factor when some question that effects the whole student body arises.

Each student will be called upon to do his duty, voting for his candidate and in doing this will hold upon his shoulders a great responsibility because the candidate which he selects will determine what kind of a student group the high school will have.

Dr. Stanley K. Reeves, principal, announced in chapel Friday that this organization will be to raise the standards in this school and also provide the students with a necessary factor that will appear later in life.

When a student finishes the hard grind and receives his diploma, and goes out in the world, he will be glad that he had the good luck to participate in student government because it will be great aid to him in the business world where executive ability is desirable. As we have said before, his ability may go all the way back to the high school days when he was president of the student government.

Class cooperation has shown itself in a big way lately, because these different groups are anxious to have their candidates elected. Lack of enthusiasm is out of the question because every time you walk down the hall you hear someone voicing some outstanding points of his candidate.

We must urge the candidates in this student government, if elected, to fill their office to the best of their ability in such a way as to represent our school at its best.

HEALTH CLINIC CONTINUES EYE EXAMINATIONS

Clinic For Teeth Will Be Held In Near Future

Furthering the health clinic sponsored by the Parent-Teachers' Association, Mrs. G. O. Brewster and Miss Florence Etheridge, county nurse, are going to make more examinations of the rest of the students of Avon Park high school.

Monday, October 19th, there were 46 examined in the eye clinic. Zarada Culpepper, who is in the eighth grade, had the best eye sight in this group of 46.

Mrs. G. O. Brewster, who is a nurse, and Miss Florence Etheridge made a superficial examination of the eyes. Anyone who has any kind of imperfect vision will be recommended to their parents for further examination. Dr. G. O. Brewster will make these examinations on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. in his office in the Jacaranda Arcade.

A committee of four, Mrs. A. M. Morgan, Mrs. T. A. McNicholas, Mrs. W. T. Coates and Mrs. W. S. Betts will do the follow up work with the results of the clinic.

Check up cards are going to be mailed to the parents of these children who have any defects.

The clinic for the teeth will be started sometime this week.

Girls Finish Tests In Swimming Class Early This Week

All girls that are taking swimming instructions with Miss Dorothy Hicks will have the beginning and intermediate test completed by today.

Martha McNicholas of the seventh grade and June Gough of the eighth grade did something Tuesday that is very uncommon for junior high school girls. Both girls completed the beginners and intermediate swimming tests in one afternoon.

Nancy Betts of the ninth grade completed the intermediate test and began on the advance test which is usually passed only by college girls. Alberta Garrett of the eighth grade completed the beginners test and started on the intermediate.

In order to pass the tests each girl must make a score of 90. The girls that have almost the required score of 90 are: Shirley Coates, Elmira Sadler, Helen Cogdill, Juanita Hunt, Janice Halliday, Bessie Hartzog, Dorothy Welch, Viola Assimopoulos, Vera Mae Inman, Doris Reddick and Claire Vanderwende.

Maps of Political Parties Figured Out In History Classes

Maps on the forthcoming presidential election are being worked on by the students of the history department this week, according to Mr. R. S. Funderburk, instructor.

These maps, besides showing how many electorial votes each state has, also show the students' opinions as to how the electorial votes will be cast. When all predictions are made, they are added up to show the winner of the presidential campaign.

The citizenship class is now completing work on the scrap book of the presidential campaign. Next week the class time will be devoted to issues of the presidential campaign. After November 3, the class will start work on auto accident prevention. The material for this campaign is being gathered from many and varied sources.

School Will Issue First Report Cards Wednesday, 4 P. M.

Report cards will be given out next Wednesday at the close of school to let the students know how they stand for the first six weeks period, announces Dr. Stanley Reeves, principal of Avon Park high school.

The distinguished group will be composed of students having nothing but "A's" on their cards. All those who have an average of "B" or above will be rewarded by seeing their names on the honor roll.

Will Need Homes For Belton Boys On Nov. 12 and 13

Belton, South Carolina boys will be visitors in Avon Park November 12th and 13th.

Places for 20 boys and coaches will have to be secured in private homes. If anyone has a place in his home for one or more of these boys, please get in touch with Coach Herbert Bissett.

Belton will return the courtesy next year when the Avon Park players go there to play. "If you can take one of these boys into your home for this period, it would be highly appreciated," says Coach Bissett.

State Supervisor Here On Inspection

Miss Frojen attended the Peace River Teacher's Conference in Wauchula October 9, as a part of the tri-county meeting.

It's some different story now. In 1906 there were 103 students attending the University of Florida. Now there are nearly 3,000.

Glee Club Working Hard To Master New Selections

"The Galway Piper," is the only piece of music that has come out of the several pieces that Mr. E. L. Roberts, glee club director, has ordered.

According to the students they all like the new number and have been working very hard to try to learn the parts. Approximately $45.00 is in the treasury.

Avon Park Rates With First Two Teams On Ridge

The football teams of the Ridge Conference are now in full swing with Avon Park tied for the lead with two other teams, Mulberry and Fort Meade.

The outside rating of the Red Devils is probably better than any other team in the conference since they held the highly-ballyhooed Tampa College high to a score of only 7-6 in the Tigers favor. Two weeks before the Tampa College game, the Devils beat Lake Wales on the Highlanders own field by a score of 7-0.

Ridge games to be played this week are Haines City at Avon Park, which is Haines City's first conference game; next comes the game between Fort Meade and Brewster at Brewster's home stomping grounds. The Sebring Blue Streaks meet Mulberry at Sebring.

The week after Avon Park meet Haines City, the Devils meet Sebring in their annual grudge game. It is expected to be one of the toughest battles in the history of either.

Team	W.	L.	T.	Pct.
Avon Park	2	0	0	1.000
Ft. Meade	2	0	0	1.000
Mulberry	2	0	0	1.000
Sebring	1	1	0	.500
Lake Wales	1	2	0	.333
Haines City	0	0	0	.000
Frostproof	0	2	0	.000
Brewster	0	3	0	.000

Drink Stand Makes Money For Classes And Athletic Ass'n.

The cold drink stand at Head Athletic field is helping pay for uniforms and lights this year.

There was a clause in the petition which was presented to Dr. Stanley Reeves, principal, that gave the senior class the privilege to operate a concession at all football games here, if they divided the profits with the High School Athletic Association. There are six boys and girls in the stand every Friday night to serve the public.

"Approximately seven dollars has been cleared so far which is as well as could be expected under the circumstances," said the chairman of the committee. "We want to thank the persons that patronized the stand and will be out there next Friday night when the boys play Haines City."

RED DEVILS LOST TO TAMPA HIGH IN TORRID GAME

First Setback Handed Red Devils This Season Last Friday

Avon Park lost to Tampa College High in a hard fought game last Friday night by a score of 7-6.

In the opening quarter Avon Park kicked to Tampa who returned the ball to their own 40 yard line. Roig then heaved a pass to Joe Garcia which brought the ball within 11 yards of Avon's goal line. Another pass by the same boys gave Tampa the first score of the game in the first eight or ten minutes of play. The try point was good.

Second quarter: The second quarter opened with the local eleven in possession of the ball.

After seven or eight hard line drives that netted our team ten or 12 yards each, our team marched steadily down the field and crossed goal line of Tampa College High in about four minutes of play. The try for point was unsuccessful.

Tampa then received the ball and returned the ball to midfield. Both teams were in possession of the ball before the end of the half but it seemed to be a case of an irresistable force meeting an immovable object when those two impregnable lines met. Tampa resorted to passing but most of them were incomplete.

Third quarter: Tampa kicked to Avon Park at the beginning of the third quarter.

McClelland got his hands on the ball and brought it up to his own 40 yard line. Avon Park then lost the ball on downs and Tampa began a passing campaign but lost the ball through Cecil Clements intercepting Roig's pass. Clements was nailed rather hard and received a bruised kidney.

Fourth quarter: Tampa was in possession of the pigskin at the opening of the fourth quarter. Avon Park then received the ball on downs and made a determined march down the field but were stopped within 20 yards of the goal line.

Tampa then got the ball and started receiving penalties which amounted to a total of 180 yards before the ending whistle blew. The fourth quarter was devoted to an exchange of punts between C. W. Merriweather, Avon Park back, and Joe Garcia, Tampa end.

Haines City Meets Red Devils Tonight Head Field, 8 P.M.

As the Haines City team meets the Red Devils on a well lighted, well prepared field at 8:00 o'clock tonight, the game will probably decide which will take the Ridge Conference, since Haines City is one of the toughest foes that the Red Devils will meet.

The Red Devils suffered a few minor injuries from the Tampa team but will be in A-1 condition for the Haines City Hornets.

The Hornets lost to Winter Haven last Friday by a score of 34-0. What will the Devils do to this team with such a score put on them.

When the Haines City team defeated the Red Devils by a large score last year, it made the Red Devils feel inferior, so they are out to avenge the defeat by defeating the Hornets by a large margin.

"Although we had hard luck with the Tampa game," said Coach Herbert Bissett, "I think we will make a successful comeback and win from Haines City and all the rest of the teams, if we have plenty of support."

After the Haines City game, the Red Devils will have a duel with the Sebring Blue Streaks, to see which is the better team.

School Will Have 22 New Books Monday To Replace Others

Twenty-two books will be placed in the library by Monday, which were donated by Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Loomis.

The following is a list of these book: "The Westminister Mystery," by Elaine Hamilton, "Monsieur Le Cog," by Emile Gaborian; "The Three Musketeers," by Alexander Dumas; "Among the Humorists and After Dinner Speeches," "Mirage," by Edgar Lee Masters; land," by H. More Nominations For Office Made During This Week

JUNIOR - SENIOR CLASSES SELECT CANDIDATES

Vilkaitis and Sherman Rival Nominees For President

John Vilkaitis, senior, and Charles Sherman, junior, were nominated for the office of president of the student body of Avon Park high school during the chapel program Friday morning.

Bill Windham, senior, and Barbara Betts, junior, were nominated for vice president. The nominations for secretary were: Nelle Williford, senior, and Jane Hartt, junior.

In nominating John Vilkaitis for the office of president from the senior class, Morris McCord said, "I think—as everyone that is well acquainted with him knows—that he is the only student in this school who is fully capable of realizing the responsibility that goes with his office.

"Vilkaitis has attended this school for ten years. During that time he has always upheld his school's spirit to the best of his ability, he has made good in all scholastic enterprises he has entered into, has a good class record, and been admired and respected for his personal ability by both the faculty and the students.

"John was not able to continue as football captain this year because of a physical disability, therefore, he can devote all of his time to the work of the government. For all that John Vilkaitis has done for this school, gratis, don't you think you owe him the honor of this office? And if your confidence is placed in him, I am sure that he will carry on to the best of his ability."

Archie Bryant nominated Charles Sherman from the junior class also for the office of president. In stating Charles' qualifications for this office, Archie said, "Charles Sherman has been attending school in Avon Park for eleven years. He has a very high scholastic record and a good athletic record also. Charles is well liked, not only by his class-mates but by all of the faculty as well. I know he is capable of holding this office and I feel sure he will work for the good of the school if he is elected."

When Fay Gordon nominated Barbara Betts from the junior class for the office of vice president, she pointed out. "In view of her standing among her classmates, and because of her reputation as one of the most honorable students of the school, I am sure that she will fill this position with excellent ability. She has held positions of both president and secretary of her classes during her high school career. She was secretary of the Girl's Athletic Association last year. She is the accompanist for the school glee club, and a member of the rookie band, which shows that she has school spirit.

"A person for this position should have high grades; much school spirit; love of high ideals; and willingness to do everything in his power to further the progress of Avon Park high school.

"We, the friends of Miss Betts believe that she is fully capable of filling the position of vice president."

In favor of Bill Windham, from the senior class, Lauretta Reed stated: "I wish to nominate Bill Windham for vice president of the Avon Park high school student body.

"He has been president of several classes in high school, and has always been a leader. I believe if he is elected to this office he will fill it to the best of his ability."

Early Lynn nominated Jane Hartt, junior, as secretary, stating that she has a high scholastic record, that she is competent, and that she has the needed school spirit to fill the office.

In nominating Nelle Williford, senior, as secretary, Morris McCord brought out the facts that in view of her good record, her efficiency, and her loyalty, she should have the office.

Clements, Greene and Gordon Are New Candidates Who Seek Office In New Student Government.

Additions to the list of nominations of last week for the offices of the high school student body were made Wednesday in chapel with Cecil Clements, senior, nominated for president Faye Gordon, junior, vice president; and Tommy Lou Greene, sophomore, secretary.

Chester Gibbons took the platform in behalf of Cecil Clements, and nominated him for president of the student body. Chester made a forceful speech, giving the following platform:

"I nominate Cecil Clements for president of the student body. Cecil has attended Avon Park school for 11 years. He has taken an active part in all athletic and school activities. Cecil has one of the highest averages in school, and I know he can fulfill the duties as president of the student body."

Charles Sherman, in nominating Faye Gordon for vice president of the student body, brought out the following facts: "I think Faye has everything one could desire in a vice president. She has a high scholastic average, and is one of the school's most loyal supporters in athletics. When you hear of anything that is done for the good of the school, you may be sure that she is among the foremost in promoting that thing. She possesses that quality of being able to get along with everyone, and this has made her one of the most respected and admired girls in school. I am sure she will fill this position to the utmost of her ability."

James Jordon in his speech nominating Tommy Lou Greene for the office of secretary, brough out these points. "I believe the sophomores ought to be represented in student government because of large enrollment. Therefore, I wish to nominate Tommy Lou Greene for the office of secretary. She is well known, well liked and respected by all her classmates. I know that she will fill the office to the best of her ability. Your support and vote will be greatly appreciated."

After the nomination of Tommy Lou Greene, John Edwin Wilkes seconded the nomination by telling the students that a good secretary must be a clear thinker, a good penman, and be able to state what is meant by the minutes she writes. He stated that Tommy Lou would fit the position and also give the sophomores a representative.

Caroline Sundstrom, freshman, also seconded the nomination of Tommy Lou Green saying, "I second this nomination because I think one officer of this organization should be from the sophomore class, and I can't think of a better person than Tommy Lou Greene for the position."

The first campaign speech, which lasted about three minutes, was given by Morris McCord, campaign manager for John Vilkaitis, who is a candidate for the office of president of the student body.

Morris began his speech by saying that student government was something important that we should not let slip out of our grasp. "We are getting a new deal," explained Morris, "and with a little effort on the part of the students we should be able to rise out of the school depression from which we have been suffering."

Morris explained that this required a president who carried a good school record, who must have good character, and who is well liked by his schoolmates. "Johnnie Vilkaitis is the man for this job," said Morris. "He thoroughly lives up to all of these qualifications." Here Morris paused in his speech to ask Lloyd Gribble his opinion of Johnnie while he was on the football team.

Lloyd state, "John Vilkaitis was elected captain of our team this year because of his strong morale and good nature. Although John might not have been the best player on the team, he is respected by the boys because he sticks to training rules. I believe John would be a good president because he is honest and hard working."

RED DEVILS READY FOR VICTORY AGAINST SEBRING NEXT FRIDAY

The time is almost here, folks, for which Avon Park has been waiting for so long.

One week from today Avon Park will play Sebring in the annual football tilt. Everyone wants to know, "When do we play Sebring?" "You had better beat Sebring." "We don't care whether you win any games, if you beat the Blue Streaks."

These and a thousand other remarks have been repeated time after time. Next Friday all the questions of whether Avon Park can take the Sebring lads in or not will be answered.

The game will probably be one of the best games played on the local gridiron this year and will be far more interesting because of the strong rivalry between the two schools. Until last year Avon Park has always played Sebring on Thanksgiving. Sebring signed a three year contract to play Punta Gorda on that date. For this reason, the game has been shifted near the opening schedule.

Of nine games Avon Park has played Sebring, the Red Devils won 4 and lost 5. The last year the Red Devils were victorious was in 1928. After that Avon Park's mighty football team began to decline. In 1929 Avon Park lost by a score of 14-0; 1930 by 13-7 score; in 1932, 6-0; and again in 1934, 30 to 7—that was the worst the Red Devils were ever beaten by the Blue Streaks. Still this score is not in compariaon with the years when Avon Park trampled Sebring by such margins as 64 to 0, and 86 to 0. That was in the days of Rodney Durrance who is now playing fullback for Stetson; Jimmie Davis, coach at Frostproof; Roscoe Bass, Zonie Reeves, C. B. Martin, and many more great stars.

This game should be the turning point for Avon Park in their losing streak to Sebring. The Red Devils boast one of the best teams on the Ridge. It has won 3 games and lost one so far this season. While the Blue Streaks have tied one, won one and lost two. Avon Park has scored a total of 55 points and have had 13 points scored against them. Sebring has scorpd 33 points against their opponents, while that team has 21 points marked against them.

Next Friday night's game will also have bearing on the Ridge Conference championship. If Sebring loses, it will knock the Blue Streaks completely out of the running and a setback would not help the local boys, but they would still have a chance for the championship.

Several of the Red Devil players will graduate this year and it is every player's ambition to beat Sebring. They know that in the four years they have been playing the Blue Streaks have always been victorious.

Avon Park will probably use a driving offense and will have a strong defense, while the visitors will more likely take to the air in an attempt to defeat the Devils.

"If you want to see your home town win against Sebring, come out and help them by yelling and making all the noise you can. Let's pack the stadium as it has never been before. With everyone doing his share we will have a "hot time in the old town," next Friday night, voices the sentiment of the entire squad.

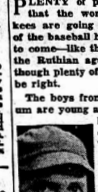
Yanks Are Tops But Giants Rate Medal for Valor

PLENTY of people will tell you that the world champion Yankees are going to stay on the top of the baseball heap for some years to come—like their predecessors of the Ruthian age. And it looks as though plenty of people are going to be right.

The boys from the Yankee stadium are young and healthy. There's hardly a creak in a carload of them. The only spot where age insurance might be in order for Joe McCarthy is at second base and even the supposedly fading Tony Lazzeri drove in 111 runs during the American league season and had a batting average of .287. In the World Series he handled 30 fielding chances without a bobble. While his series batting average was a pallid .250, he can grin when he remembers that baseloaded homer.



Joe McCarthy

Only Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey among the other regulars are older than twenty-eight. Dickey is a year under thirty, while Lou tops that age by three years. Of the pitchers, Ruffing and Hadley are thirty-two; Pearson twenty-seven, Gomez twenty-six and Fordham Johnny Murphy whose pitching stopped the Giants in the last game and who should be a 20 game winner in '37 is twenty-eight.

So the Yanks can give Old Man Time a race for his maxums for a few years at least. Incidentally Marse Joe doesn't have to be ashamed of the trades he made last winter when he decided to strengthen his club. He picked up Jake Powell and Bump Hadley from the Washington club and Monte Pearson from Cleveland. How would the Yanks have looked in the World Series without them?

But on the other hand, the vanquished Giants need a lot of overhauling. Last June owner Stoneham said they wouldn't do. But the rest of the league by being woefully weak made a liar out of him. He can't take a chance with the truth another year, though.

Some so-called prognosticators go so far as to say that in their present condition the Giants will be lucky to finish in the first division next year. That five-run Yankee blast off Fitzsimmons in the final game proved he needs plenty of rest between starts. He'll be thirty-six next year and Hubbel thirty-four. Manager Bill Terry is playing on borrowed time. So is Travis Jackson. Sam Leslie's future is a question. The club will need more secondary pitching and some additional extra base punch somewhere in the lineup.

Bill Terry

While the praise for the World Series is being handed out, though, don't overlook the Giants. They did a magnificent job considering what they had to work with. Colonel Bill Terry battled as desperately for a lost cause as did that ancestor who fought for the Confederacy.

On paper the Giants were woefully outclassed by the Yankees, just as they were supposedly outclassed by two clubs in their own league—the Cubs and Cardinals. But they made a daring start by winning the opening game behind Hubbell's pitching. Then in the next they were treated to a drubbing the like of which has never before been seen in a World Series. Almost any other club would have given up. But what happened? The Giants came up with a swell pitched game by Fred Fitzsimmons and were outlucked in hitting. The third game found McCarthy starting his best bet, Monte Pearson.

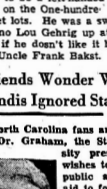
That left one game to go for the Yanks to sweep the series. Even that didn't stop the Giants. Terry rallied his veterans and behind the lion-hearted pitching of Hal Schumacher, won the fifth game. The Yanks couldn't figure out how they did it. In the sixth and final game, for seven innings the Giants withstood an early display of Yank power, which would have been enough to stop almost any one else cold. They were right in the thick of the argument. In the interests of efficiency, Terry made all the shifts the book called for, but in the pinch the Giants were stopped by Fordham Johnny Murphy.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: ON PHILADELPHIA'S Sansom street the gossip is that Coach Harvey Harman will get the gate in his Christmas sock no matter what happens to Penn's football team this fall. Lou Young will return to the Alma Mommie as athletic director and Bert Bell will be the new H. C., they say . . . Mrs. Carl Hubbell was the most tensely nervous of the Giants' wives no matter who was pitching. She always looked as if she wanted to rout out loud but just couldn't . . . Mrs. Gabler was the smartest dressed of the ladies who gathered by themselves in the stands when the club was in town and who visited one another's apartments to listen when the National league champions played in a town where games were broadcast. .

Jock Whitney won $8,000 from the Guests (Winston and Ray) when his Greentree team won the National Open polo title. He made one $1,000 wager while riding down the field three goals behind in the fifth period . . . Dave West of the Rutgers Targum now does a column called Not in the Box Score . . . Ike Gellis, the eminent writer and promotion expert, is the voice with the smile announcing events at Bill O'Brien's new sports club in White Plains . . . Before his hair had turned to silver Walter Winchell used to be a left-handed first baseman on the One-hundred and Tenth street lots. He was a sweet fielder but no Lou Gehrig up at the plate and if he doesn't like it he can sue his Uncle Frank Bakst.

Friends Wonder Why Landis Ignored Stark

North Carolina fans are so vexed at Dr. Graham, the State university president who wishes to give free, public and liberal aid to football players, that they may ask the legislature to investigate him. The reason is that down yonder where so many good elevens come from recently there are some things (such as proselyting) which you just don't speak about in public . . . Starter George Cassidy is one of the most nonchalant of turf officials. The other day he was gnawing on a fried leg of chicken while preparing to dispatch a Belmont field . . . Friends are wondering how Judge Landis happened to forget a very honest and capable former ballplayer and umpire named Dolly Stark when he put the okay on World Series broadcasters.



Judge Landis

Rutgers players (who performed in a practice affair against the Lions) say that Columbia's football team is being overrated in the papers . . . Dorothy Snyder brought her pretty sixteen-year-old self all the way from San Antonio to see her daddy do the Giants' third base coaching . . . Walters, who's a high-class Boston hotel already have presented Gus Uhlmann with a bottle of champagne and may wind up by painting his name all over the Bunker Hill monument. The reason is that when the celebrated cartoonist was visiting the town recently he gave the garcons a tip on Eli Yale who then proceeded th win at Belmont at 30 to 1.

Three-year-old Skipp- Bartell was the most energetic of Giants' rooters. He was always fighting to get out there on the field and help the old man play shortstop . . . Horsemen are balking at the starting gate okayed for New York next year. It is a six-strand rope affair and they claim it is the gallows for a rider if the barrier slips . . . Four generations of the Kevin family (their boy Dave is a wrestling champ) have been in the butcher business . . . Note to the numerous clients who want to know three reasons why Joe Louis' highly publicized suit against that wealthy mag probably will never go very far in court—Ask Messrs. Black, Roxborough and Blackburn.

His booking agent shortly will announce that Jesse Owens has changed his mind again and really will turn pro . . . A bit of sentiment does not hurt in sports. For instance there is Emilen, which belonged to Bill Knebelkamp, Louisville baseball magnate. After Bill died there were folks who said the colt was no account and should be disposed of. But, out of respect for brother Bill, Mr. Knebelkamp would not let the traders send the thoroughbred down the river. Now Emilen is stepping so fast he seems likely to be another King Saxon . . . Golf pros, irked with the present P. G. A. administration, are plotting a new organization to be labeled the North American P. G. A.

Germany is building four giant airships to transport the Olympic team to Japan in 1940 in three days instead of three weeks, the best schedule . . . The eight pitchers who have won three games in a World Series were right handers. . . . Lou Gehrig took a few aspirin tablets before each of the Yankees' games in the closing weeks of the campaign.

The toughest position to play in football . . . "Center," says Bert Metzger, Notre Dame's watch charm guard of a few years back, who for his size was the greatest lineman of the last decade. "He takes a mauling all through the game, but he has to hang in there and keep passing that ball." . . .

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

"Animal Man"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

WELL, sir, I am pleased to note that Old Lady Adventure is still busy initiating new members in this club of ours. The newest is Distinguished Adventurer Edwin da Costa of New Haven, Conn.. And Ed writes: "Many times while reading the stories in your column I have wished I might have some weird experience. Well, by Jove, Floyd, read this one."

You see, Ed is back from South America with the tale of just the sort of experience he'd always wished he could have. And now it's his turn in the story-tellers' circle, and he's going to dish it out to us.

Ed went to South America last November. Cold weather doesn't agree with him and he'd heard it sometimes got a little warmish down near the Equator. He landed in Brazil, hung around the coast for a while, and then took a six-week trip up the Amazon with some English explorers. Did Ed get into an adventure with those explorers? He did not. Explorers like quiet, peaceful lives compared with us folk who live in civilized parts of the world. Ed got into that adventure AT A HOTEL.

Hotel Whose Guests Lived in Stucco Huts.

After he left his explorer friends, Ed landed in Pernambuco and put up at the Derby hotel. "The hotel," Ed says, "was located about five miles outside the city limits, in an isolated section. Why they ever built it there, I don't know. Like all the other hotel buildings in mountain sections of Brazil, this one contained only an office, dining room and dance hall. The guests lived in individual stucco huts, called chalets, located away from the main building near the jungle's edge. The space between the main building and the chalets was filled with hibiscus shrubs, swaying palms, and other tropical plants of rare beauty, but at night one felt very lonely, all alone in one's stucco hut, and I was pleased to make acquaintance of another American who was also stopping at the hotel."

The other fellow was a man named Kellmer—a South American representative of a Texas oil concern. He and Ed struck up quite a friendship, and together they spent the long evenings strolling through the gardens, smoking and talking.

One evening at dinner, Kellmer told Ed about the Becho—or animal man. He was a strange creature whom the natives were all talking about—a lone robber who used as animal pelt for a disguise. HE HID IN DARK PLACES TO POUNCE OUT ON HIS VICTIMS. HE CARRIED A BIG REVOLVER AND HE WASN'T AT ALL SLOW ABOUT SHOOTING PEOPLE WHO DIDN'T DO WHAT HE TOLD THEM.

Decided They'd Better Have Revolvers.

It all sounded like a native's tall story of Ed and Kellmer. At first they laughed about it. But as the days went by and each one brought a new tale of some atrocity by the Becho, they began to wonder. And one day when the rumor was going around that the Becho had killed another man, Kellmer bought two revolvers and presented one to Ed.

A few more days rolled by. Then, one night while Ed was sitting in his chalet, he heard a knock on the door—heard Kellmer outside calling, "For Pete's sake, Ed, let me in!" Kellmer stood there, clad in a black-and-white zebra-striped bathrobe, his revolver in his hand. "THE BECHO IS ON THE GROUNDS," HE GASPED. "I HEARD VOICES AND FOOTSTEPS. LET'S TRY TO NAB HIM!"

It Looked Like Taps for Kellmer.

Ed got his own gun. He and Kellmer started a search of the hotel grounds. Says Ed: "The palms swished spookily in the breeze. The night was pitch dark, and before long both of us began to shake like hula dancers. Presently the sound of hoofbeats came to my ears. Then they faded. We secreted ourselves near the great iron gate by the roadside and waited. Suddenly, a shot rang out, shattering the stillness of the night. All at once we found that we were in no mood to be shot at by bandits. Separating we ran like deer, Kellmer for his' chalet and I for mine."

Safe inside his hut, Ed nervously lit a cigar and awaited developments. They weren't long in coming. Somewhere outside he heard a loud jabbering in the native Spanish and Portuguese dialect. He looked out of the window and saw a crowd of people and half a dozen horsemen of the Guardia Civil grouped around Kellmer's chalet. He dashed over to see what was wrong and arrived just in time to see the native policeman dragging Kellmer forcibly from his chale. Kellmer saw Ed. "ED," HE HOWLED, "TELL THESE NITWITS WHO I AM. THEY WANT TO STRING ME UP!"

Ed accosted the captain of the guard. "What do you want with this man?" he asked.

"Senor," replied the captain, "we have caught the Becho."

Ed's eyes opened wider. "Why that's not the Becho," he protested. "That man is a guest at the hotel!"

"Becho in a Black and White Skin."

The captain shook his head. "Senor," he said, "the hotel watchman positively saw the Becho at the gate in a balck and white skin. He fired a shot in the air, and the Becho ran into this chalet. He is the only man in the place, and if he is not the Becho, where did the Becho disappear to?"

For a moment, Ed was puzzled. Then he remembered Kellmer's black-and-white striped bathrobe and started to laugh. "I'LL SHOW YOU THE ANIMAL SKIN THAT WATCHMAN SAW," he told the captain. And he went in and got the robe. "Senor Kellmer was with me," he explained. We were hunting the Becho too, when the watchman saw him and took the bathrobe for an animal skin."

Kellmer was released then, and the police rode away with as much pomp and dignity as they could muster. "And the next day," says Ed, "I saw Kellmer coaxing a bonfire near his chalet and asked him what he was doing. He said, 'I'm burning that bathrobe—that's all.'"

Strange Sea Fish

One of the strangest fishes ever taken out of the sea was a hundred-pound bass-shaped animal caught by rod and line off Tahiti in 1928. With the exception of the teeth, every part of it—scales, eyes, flesh, bones and even its blood—was as green as grass.—Collier's Weekly.

Used Fans, Fancy Kerchiefs

Everybody carried a fan or an embroidered handkerchief in the left hand during the first French republic. The women, however, would no longer use either paint or powder, due to the revolution. Powder they considered unnecessary and paint ridiculous.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Paul Was Not Afraid.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Courage in the Night.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Law of Life.

By way of Athens the apostle Paul and his co-workers came to Corinth, one of the great commercial and social centers of Greece. It was a city known for its magnificent architecture and its patronage of the fine arts, but even more widely known for its abandonment to vice and wickedness. Here Paul, the apostle of faith, demonstrated that his faith was rooted in love, and it was to the Christians who were dwelling in this infamous spot of corruption that he addressed his supremely pure and beautiful discourse on love.

The first portion of our lesson finds Paul at Corinth, and provides an introduction to the study of the love chapter from I Corinthians by showing from his experience that

I. Love Is a Fact, Not a Theory (Acts 18:1-4).

The man whom we now recognize as perhaps the greatest preacher and teacher of Christian truth who ever followed the Lord Jesus Christ "came to Corinth." That great and busy city in all probability knew nothing of his arrival and cared nothing for his message. No one met the distinguished messenger of God and received him into a home of comfort and honor.

But God had not forgotten him. For we read that Paul "found a certain Jew"—a convert to Christ, and his noble wife, and "abode with them." Persecution had sent Aquila to Corinth, and he was there for Paul to find.

And the humility of loving service expresses itself further in the fact that the one who was to bring Corinth the glorious message of the gospel did so at his own cost. He labored with his hands at the trade which he, as every Jewish boy, had been taught by his father. Christianity does not ask, "What will ye give me?" but "How much can I give?"

In his first letter to the church which grew up at Corinth we find the enexhaustibly rich chapter in which Paul so fittingly describes true Christian love. It is impossible in any short discussion of this passage to make a complete study of it, but we note

II. Four Truths About Love (I Cor. 13:1-13).

1. Love is superior to the other graces (vv. 1-3).

Life has many excellent gifts and men seek after them. How do they compare with love? Glowing eloquence, the far-seeing eye of the prophet, mountain-moving faith, self-sacrifice—without love they all lose their worth; in fact they are nothing. All the attainments of men apart from Christ are vain and empty.

2. Love is necessary to the other graces (vv. 4-7).

There is a sense in which love is not so much a grace in itself as the underlying and motivating power which shows in every fine and noble expression of Christian character. Study these verses to see how patiently and unselfishly love works.

3. Love is permanent; other graces fail (vv. 8-12).

Some gifts will cease, for there will no longer be any need for them. They are temporary in their value or simply a means to an end. But love—it began with God in eternity and will go on with him through eternity. Why then do we labor and seek after these other graces so diligently and neglect the one grace which is above them all, for

4. Love is supreme (v. 13).

Even over those other graces which with love will abide, namely, faith and hope, love stands supreme. It is the fundamental of all fundamentals. Without it all else is empty and futile. And let us remember, this is not pious theory; it is fact and to be translated into daily life.

The Meaning of Love

Love means charity, humility, forgiveness, self-forgetfulness, kindliness. To think kind thoughts of others and never to think unkind thoughts of them, for me, the summit of righteousness, the secret of happiness and the only gateway to any success worth calling success. The oftener I read the Sermon on the Mount the more deeply am I convinced that here is the final practical wisdom. I disagree with the view that Christ's moral teaching will not stand the test of modern conditions. I think it will.—Arnold Bennett, in "Things that Interested Me."

Nature Is Painting

WHO can paint like Nature? Can imagination boast,
Amid its grey creation hues like hers?
Or can mix them with that matchless skill,
And lose them in each other, as appears
In every leaf that turns?
—J. Thomson.

Performance of Duty

SO NIGH is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man,
When duty whispers low, Thou must,
The youth replies, I can.

State Press Comment

IT MAY NOT BE WORTH IT.

By Frank R. Kent,
Staff Political Commentator of the Democratic Newspaper Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Among their other gifts the New Deal managers and Mr. Roosevelt himself are reputed to be exceedingly smart in politics. There is nothing some of the President's intimates like to dwell upon more than his amazing astuteness as a politician. One of his most ardent journalistic admirers constantly refers to his as the "supreme artist."

Probably this praise is well deserved. None the less, it may not turn out clever to have permitted the campaign to become so clearly one between conservatives and radicals, with the radicals massed on the Roosevelt side. That they are so massed no one disputes and that is the main reason the division this time between the big cities and the small towns and villages is so much more pronounced than before. This phase of the fight worries the Roosevelt management more than any other, despite the vigor of the President's repudiation of his Communist support, which, it may be said, unaffected by the repudiation, he still has.

There is a pretty well-founded belief that most of the people of this country are conservative at heart and the feeling is that the undue prominence of the radical Roosevelt following is calculated to solidify them on the other side.

Those who hold this view do not think now it was smart to have picked for Roosevelt electors in New York the three following foreign-born gentlemen, all of whom have exceedingly radical records—Mr. David Dubinsky, Mr. Max Zaritski and Mr. Sidney Hillman.

Particularly, it does not seem smart to have put these men on the New Deal ticket as presidential electors in up-state districts many miles from their actual homes in New York City. If Mr. Farley sanctioned and sponsored that, he is not very farsighted.

Naturally, the Republican, anxious to drive home the point that behind Mr. Roosevelt are all the dangerous and un-American elements—naturally, they make the most of it. Republican papers and orators in all sections are dwelling upon the presence on the New Deal ticket of the Messrs. Dubinsky, Zaritski and Hillman.

They point out that these men were born in Russia and Poland, which is hardly a crime but certainly not a political asset. They charge that Mr. Dubinsky recently collected $5,000 which was sent to the Communists in Spain, and that the Messrs. Hillman and Zaritski are prominent Socialists, which isn't a crime either but makes a rather good talking point.

And the Republicans repeat almost daily that to repudiate Communist support and still retain these three men on the ticket as electors is an affront to the intelligence of the people.

Altogether the Republicans in their somewhat inept way are having a grand time with the Messrs. Dubinsky, Zaritski and Hillman. They air to make their names well but not favorably known in the country towns, villages and farms.

Their efforts to do this have been stimulated no little by the recent Minnesota development, whereby, with Roosevelt-Farley knowledge, consent and support, the Democratic Party in that state was deliberately extinguished so as to give the Farmer-Labor Party, certainly one of the most radical groups in the country and pledged to Mr. Roosevelt, a free swing.

It may be that the selection of the Messrs. Dubinsky, Zaritski and Hillman means a large number of labor votes for Mr. Roosevelt in the big cities, and it may be that the Farmer-Labor deal in Minnesota means the eight electoral votes from that state. But if, as a result of these things, the conservative sentiment of the nation is still further strengthened against Mr. Roosevelt, it may turn out not to have been worth it.

WEARS CLOAK OF COMMUNISM.

A warning to American citizens against organizations which covertly support Communistic principles, without open avowal of Communism has been given by Rev. Edward L. Curran, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

At a meeting of the Trinity League he urged his audience not to be hoodwinked into joining the American League Against War and Fascism, which, he charged, is sponsored by Communists.

This is timely warning against a subversive movement masquerading under a name which does not reveal its true purposes. Citizens who may in all sincerity affiliate with it, believing they are thus supporting the principles the name implies, are victims of a palpable fraud.

The Communist background of this misnamed American League is easily established.

The best authority is the report of the central committee to the ninth annual convention of the Communist Party in America, delivered by Earl Browder, now the Presidential candidate of the party.

Of the league itself, the report says:

The same report contains eulogies of the league's chairman, Dr. Harry F. Ward, saying:

"Such selfless and consistent service to a progressive cause as Dr. Ward has givenWILL ALWAYS RECEIVE THE UNSTINTED RECOGNITION AND SUPPORT OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY."

The league has the aims and purposes of Communism at heart, as the testimony of this Communist report fully proves. It wears the cloak of Communism without the candor to bear its name.—Atlanta American.

BUY AMERICAN.

The Rhode Island Textile Association, in an appeal directed to organize labor and the country as well because of the steady importation of low-priced Japanese goods, warns:

"FACE THE FACTS BEFORE IT BECOMES TOO LATE."

These are the facts:

It is proof, as the Textile Association claims, of the "determined efforts being made by Japanese textile manufacturers to capture the American market."

Suppose YOU buy this lower-priced Japanese fabric. It means the profit goes to Japanese industry to employ still more Japanese laborers at their low living standard.

It means American industry and labor lose your patronage and if the tendency is multiplied, jobs here are forfeit.

No sensible American believes it is worth the price.

"Buy American" is a national necessity to offset foreign dumping and protect American industry and labor.—Atlanta Georgian.

But Not Delivered.

Comptroller Lee will auction off a bunch of slot machines confiscated by the state. There won't be much demand, most people having already bought one.—Fort Myers News-Press.

National Champion Will Chop Here Soon

Peter McLaren, who claims the wood chopping Championship of America will stage a log cutting contest and demonstration here on Tuesday, October 27, at 2:00p. m.

This contest has been arranged by Smith Hardware Co. and R. F. Sappington who are to be congratulated for arranging for the visit of this colorful champion, McLaren, whose wizardry with an axe has carried him from a poor farm lad in Australia, to the peak of his profession.

In chopping tours covering a score of years, he has chopped before hundreds of thousands, both here and abroad. McLaren who is nearly 50 years old, claims that outdoor chopping is a great physical developer. His own condition bears out this claim.

The contest is open to any local man who has not previously competed against McLaren. A prize of fifty dollars will be paid to any contestant if McLaren fails to chop through a log in two thirds of the time the contestant takes.

The handicap gives all good choppers a sporting chance to win the prize money, as it is just like giving 33 yards in a hundred yard dash.

The only restriction made is that no contestant be permitted to use a Plumb Axe. This is the only axe which McLaren ever uses, and he refuses to chop against a Plumb Axe and also allow the handicap.

Every one is cordially invited to attend the demonstration. Choppers wishing to compete should bring their axes with them. It costs nothing to enter the contest.

REFLECTIONS

In Life's Mirror

By...The Old Counselor

UNDISCOVERED COUNTRIES

Dare delve into the depths of your innermost thoughts! Analyze them! There you may find some new idea that might enlighten the world — you may journey to undiscovered countries, as it were, and discover a realm of riches that later you can leave as a heritage to the world. How do you know that you do not possess some latent talent that lies dormant, needing only the spirit of adventure to guide you to its treasure trove.

What are your aspirations? You are never too old to succeed!

Most of the shining lights of success did not attain their goals until their ages reached far into maturity. Keeping ever-lasting at IT, meeting defeats and disappointments, doggedly determined to achieve, never waving the flag of surrender, carried them on and beyond the heights of fame and glory.

Never let the flame of adventure die! Don't ever neglect the call of conquest. It isn't necessary to journey far to find undiscovered countries, for they dwell in your mind. Explore them! Seek the treasured thoughts that inspire you, and you'll find them like the shining faces of some rare jewel displayed in the sunlight of discovery. Once you see the sparkle of brilliance in your thoughts, you will have stepped upon the shore of that undiscovered, unknown country, which exists in your mind — strange at first — lovely to dwell in.

We need never to sail the seven seas seeking undiscovered countries; for there are multitudes of magnificent adventures awaiting us if we will but explore those undiscovered countries of our mind.

Babcock Speaks In West Florida

Orlando, Oct. 20.—Continuing his march to fulfill a promise to "give the people of Florida a real campaign," Howard C. Babcock, Senatorial nominee appeared this week in West Florida. Previous to this militant citrus grower, has made a whirlwind trip down both coasts and through the Ridge section and Central Florida. Everywhere he has spoken, Bagcock has convinced voters by the sincereity of his speeches.

This week he makes three speeches a day, and appears at Panama City, Pensacola, Tallahassee, Gainesville, ending the week at Ocala. Plans now under consideration at his headquarters office, Orlando, Florida, indicate a last minute trip around the state, probably by air, continuing a strong fight, right up to Tuesday morning, November 3.

Babcock, running under the Republican banner for the Senatorial post left open by the death of Park Trammel, offers a business man's administration, on a sane basis, and asks that Florida voters consider not individual merit, but the possibility for Florida under two-party representation at the nations capitol. A huge support is developing in the citrus section, as well as in many of the nominally Democratic communities. His demonstrated ability and the four-square way in which he has met and answered every vital campaign question has won for him regard of many voters. In many localities, citizens urging his election have shown the necessity of listening to both sides, with the possibility of Florida becoming a pivotal state in the Solid South. In the event of a Republican President, it behooves Florida to have a man who can reach the ear of the other side at Washington.

Garden Club Met Friday.

One of the most delightful meetings of the Garden Club was held Friday of last week at 2:30 p. m. in the west section of No. 17 of the Mall, when members were seated in the shade of the spreading Jacarandas and amidst the waving plumes of the Pampas Grass, an ideal setting with a perfect sky, all of which lent atmosphere and interest in the subjects discussed.

After the usual business preliminaries, Mr. Currie with his profound knowledge of all that pertains to the Mall, was present and led a very comprehensive study of this particular section. Tyewritten descriptions of the plantings of the section were furnished and will be kept on file, as well as that of other sections, as they are studied, thus making a valuable reference book.

The interest was so keen that it was unanimously voted to hold all meetings when possible under similar surroundings and the next meeting, the 3rd Friday in November will be similarly conducted in Section 16.

The members feel that a knowledge of the plants and trees of our Mall which is proving so attractive to outsiders is to be a great asset and a most pleasant study.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was Mr. Currie's exhibit of a large variety of small plants of annuals, including petunias, calendulas, marigolds, etc., for planting at this time. This created an unusual interest in fall flower gardens and members availed themselves of the opportunity of procuring these choice varieties.

The Garden Club is a meeting ground for all plant lovers where all phases of flower culture are discussed and to which are brought many interesting ideas. Anyone with a trend along this line is most cordially invited to attend and participate.

NOTE: It is reported that Burpees have developed a new sweet scented marigold which will be very popular.

BUY
CHRISTMAS SEALS

Walter Sasse, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has submitted several other designs for Christmas Seals, is a representative of the younger school of thought in art circles. He is a graduate of Pratt Institute and has been exceptionally fortunate in his work as a commercial artist in New York City. His experience includes employment with an art service, with an advertising agency, and a lithographing firm, as well as a great deal of free lance work.

Mr. Sasse submitted his first Christmas Seal sketch in 1929 while he was tsill in school. He has been eager to see a wholly new type of Christmas Seal and in this year's Santa Claus we believe his wish and that of many others is being fulfilled.

State Press Comment

IT MAY NOT BE WORTH IT.

By Frank R. Kent,
Staff Political Commentator of the Democratic Newspaper Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Among their other gifts the New Deal managers and Mr. Roosevelt himself are reputed to be exceedingly smart in politics. There is nothing some of the President's intimates like to dwell upon more than his amazing astuteness as a politician. One of his most ardent journalistic admirers constantly refers to his as the "supreme artist."

Probably this praise is well deserved. None the less, it may not turn out clever to have permitted the campaign to become so clearly one between conservatives and radicals, with the radicals massed on the Roosevelt side. That they are so massed no one disputes and that is the main reason the division this time between the big cities and the small towns and villages is so much more pronounced than before. This phase of the fight worries the Roosevelt management more than any other, despite the vigor of the President's repudiation of his Communist support, which, it may be said, unaffected by the repudiation, he still has.

There is a pretty well-founded belief that most of the people of this country are conservative at heart and the feeling is that the undue prominence of the radical Roosevelt following is calculated to solidify them on the other side.

Those who hold this view do not think now it was smart to have picked for Roosevelt electors in New York the three following foreign-born gentlemen, all of whom have exceedingly radical records—Mr. David Dubinsky, Mr. Max Zaritski and Mr. Sidney Hillman.

Particularly, it does not seem smart to have put these men on the New Deal ticket as presidential electors in up-state districts many miles from their actual homes in New York City. If Mr. Farley sanctioned and sponsored that, he is not very farsighted.

Naturally, the Republican, anxious to drive home the point that behind Mr. Roosevelt are all the dangerous and un-American elements—naturally, they make the most of it. Republican papers and orators in all sections are dwelling upon the presence on the New Deal ticket of the Messrs. Dubinsky, Zaritski and Hillman.

They point out that these men were born in Russia and Poland, which is hardly a crime but certainly not a political asset. They charge that Mr. Dubinsky recently collected $5,000 which was sent to the Communists in Spain, and that the Messrs. Hillman and Zaritski are prominent Socialists, which isn't a crime either but makes a rather good talking point.

And the Republicans repeat almost daily that to repudiate Communist support and still retain these three men on the ticket as electors is an affront to the intelligence of the people.

Altogether the Republicans in their somewhat inept way are having a grand time with the Messrs. Dubinsky, Zaritski and Hillman. They air to make their names well but not favorably known in the country towns, villages and farms.

Their efforts to do this have been stimulated no little by the recent Minnesota development, whereby, with Roosevelt-Farley knowledge, consent and support, the Democratic Party in that state was deliberately extinguished so as to give the Farmer-Labor Party, certainly one of the most radical groups in the country and pledged to Mr. Roosevelt, a free swing.

It may be that the selection of the Messrs. Dubinsky, Zaritski and Hillman means a large number of labor votes for Mr. Roosevelt in the big cities, and it may be that the Farmer-Labor deal in Minnesota means the eight electoral votes from that state. But if, as a result of these things, the conservative sentiment of the nation is still further strengthened against Mr. Roosevelt, it may turn out not to have been worth it.

WEARS CLOAK OF COMMUNISM.

A warning to American citizens against organizations which covertly support Communistic principles, without open avowal of Communism has been given by Rev. Edward L. Curran, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

At a meeting of the Trinity League he urged his audience not to be hoodwinked into joining the American League Against War and Fascism, which, he charged, is sponsored by Communists.

This is timely warning against a subversive movement masquerading under a name which does not reveal its true purposes. Citizens who may in all sincerity affiliate with it, believing they are thus supporting the principles the name implies, are victims of a palpable fraud.

The Communist background of this misnamed American League is easily established.

The best authority is the report of the central committee to the ninth annual convention of the Communist Party in America, delivered by Earl Browder, now the Presidential candidate of the party.

Of the league itself, the report says:

"The American League Against War and Fascism is one of the outstanding examples of a broad PEOPLE'S FRONT."

The same report contains eulogies of the league's chairman, Dr. Harry F. Ward, saying:

"Such selfless and consistent service to a progressive cause as Dr. Ward has given WILL ALWAYS RECEIVE THE UNSTINTED RECOGNITION AND SUPPORT OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY."

The league has the aims and purposes of Communism at heart, as the testimony of this Communist report fully proves. It wears the cloak of Communism without the candor to bear its name.—Atlanta American.

BUY AMERICAN.

The Rhode Island Textile Association, in an appeal directed to organize labor and the country as well because of the steady importation of low-priced Japanese goods, warns:

"FACE THE FACTS BEFORE IT BECOMES TOO LATE."

These are the facts:

It is proof, as the Textile Association claims, of the "determined efforts being made by Japanese textile manufacturers to capture the American market."

Suppose YOU buy this lower-priced Japanese fabric. It means the profit goes to Japanese industry to employ still more Japanese laborers at their low living standard.

It means American industry and labor lose your patronage and if the tendency is multiplied, jobs here are forfeit.

No sensible American believes it is worth the price.

"Buy American" is a national necessity to offset foreign dumping and protect American industry and labor.—Atlanta Georgian.

But Not Delivered.

Comptroller Lee will auction off a bunch of slot machines confiscated by the state. There won't be much demand, most people having already bought one.—Fort Myers News-Press.

National Champion Will Chop Here Soon

Peter McLaren, who claims the wood chopping Championship of America will stage a log cutting contest and demonstration here on Tuesday, October 27, at 2:00-p. m.

This contest has been arranged by Smith Hardware Co. and R. F. Sappington who are to be congratulated for arranging for the visit of this colorful champion, McLaren. whose wizardry with an axe has carried him from a poor farm lad in Australia, to the peak of his profession.

In chopping tours covering a score of years, he has chopped before hundreds of thousands, both here and abroad. McLaren who is nearly 50 years old, claims that outdoor chopping is a great physical developer. His own condition bears out this claim.

The contest is open to any local man who has not previously competed against McLaren. A prize of fifty dollars will be paid to any contestant if McLaren fails to chop through a log in two thirds of the time the contestant takes.

The handicap gives all good choppers a sporting chance to win the prize money, as it is just like giving 33 yards in a hundred yard dash.

The only restriction made is that no contestant be permitted to use a Plumb Axe. This is the only axe which McLaren ever uses, and he refuses to chop against a Plumb Axe and also allow the handicap.

Every one is cordially invited to attend the demonstration. Choppers wishing to compete should bring their axes with them. It costs nothing to enter the contest.

New 5 and 10 Manager.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ward and two children of Johnstown, Pa arrived in Avon Park this week for future residence. They have rented the home formerly occupied by Prof. and Mrs. R. T. Fairey and will take possession when their furniture arrives. Mr. Ward has assumed the management of the Tarbutton 5, 10 and 25 cent store and predicts a very bright future for Avon Park. Mr. Tarbutton left Saturday for Frederick, Md., on account of the serious illness of his mother.

UNDISCOVERED COUNTRIES

Dare delve into the depths of your innermost thoughts! Analyze them! There you may find some new idea that might enlighten the world — you may journey to undiscovered countries, as it were, and discover a realm of riches that later you can leave as a heritage to the world. How do you know that you do not possess some latent talent that lies dormant, needing only the spirit of adventure to guide you to its treasure trove.

What are your aspirations? You are never too old to succeed!

Most of the shining lights of success did not attain their goals until their ages reached far into maturity. Keeping ever-lasting at IT, meeting defeats and disappointments, doggedly determined to achieve, never waving the flag of surrender, carried them on and beyond the heights of fame and glory.

Never let the flame of adventure die! Don't ever neglect the call of aonquest. It isn't necessary to journey far to find undiscovered countries, for they dwell in your mind. Explore them! Seek the treasured thoughts that inspire you, and you'll find them like the shining faces of some rare jewel displayed in the sunlight of discovery. Once you see the sparkle of brilliance in your thoughts, you will have stepped upon the shore of that undiscovered, unknown country, which exists in your mind — strange at first — lovely to dwell in.

We need never to sail the seven seas seeking undiscovered countries; for there are multitudes of magnificent adventures awaiting us if we will but explore those undiscovered countries of our mind.

Babcock Speaks In West Florida

Orlando, Oct. 20.—Continuing his march to fulfill a promise to "give the people of Florida a real campaign," Howard C. Babcock, Senatorial nominee appeared this week in West Florida. Previous to this militant citrus grower, has made a whirlwind trip down both coasts and through the Ridge section and Central Florida. Everywhere he has spoken, Bagcock has convinced voters by the sincerity of his speeches.

This week he makes three speeches a day, and appears at Panama City, Pensacola, Tallahassee, Gainesville, ending the week at Ocala. Plans now under consideration at his headquarters office, Orlando, Florida, indicate a last minute trip around the state, probably by air, continuing a strong fight, right up to Tuesday morning, November 3.

Babcock, running under the Republican banner for the Senatorial post left open by the death of Park Trammel, offers a business man's administration, on a sane basis, and asks that Florida voters consider not individual merit, but the possibility for Florida under two-party representation at the nations capitol. A huge support is developing in the citrus section, as well as in many of the nominally Democratic communities. His demonstrated ability and the four-square way in which he has met and answered every vital campaign question has won for him regard of many voters. In many localities, citizens urging his election have shown the necessity of listening to both sides, with the possibility of Florida becoming a pivotal state in the Solid South. In the event of a Republican President, it behooves Florida to have a man who can reach the ear of the other side at Washington.

Garden Club Met Friday.

One of the most delightful meetings of the Garden Club was held Friday of last week at 2:30 p. m. in the west section of No. 17 of the Mall, when members were seated in the shade of the spreading Jacarandas and amidst the waving plumes of the Pampas Grass, an ideal setting with a perfect sky, all of which lent atmosphere and interest in the subjects discussed.

After the usual business preliminaries, Mr. Currie with his profound knowledge of all that pertains to the Mall, was present and led a very comprehensive study of this particular section. Tyewritten descriptions of the plantings of the section were furnished and will be kept on file, as well as that of other sections, as they are studied, thus making a valuable reference book.

The interest was so keen that it was unanimously voted to hold all meetings when possible under similar surroundings and the next meeting, the 3rd Friday in November will be similarly conducted in Section 16.

The members feel that a knowledge of the plants and trees of our Mall which is proving so attractive to outsiders is to be a great asset and a most pleasant study.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was Mr. Currie's exhibit of a large variety of small plants of annuals, including petunias, calendulas, marigolds, etc., for planting at this time. This created an unusual interest in fall flower gardens and members availed themselves of the opportunity of procuring these choice varieties.

The Garden Club is a meeting ground for all plant lovers where all phases of flower culture are discussed and to which are brought many interesting ideas. Anyone with a trend along this line is most cordially invited to attend and participate.

NOTE: It is reported that Burpees have developed a new sweet scented marigold which will be very popular.

CHRISTMAS SEALS

Above is a prevue of the 1936 Christmas Seal. On it Santa Claus has gone modern. The popular old gentleman has had his jovial face on ten previous Christmas Seals. This thirtieth Seal featuring the twinkling, button-nosed countenance, the candles, symbolic of the religious spirit of Christmas, the double-barred cross, emblem of the tuberculosis battle, in brilliant red, green and yellow, fairly shouts "Holiday Greetings." Artists say the 1936 Seal has simplicity, humor, novelty, and cheerfulness. The color scheme will satisfy the many requests for the use of Christmas colors.

Walter Sasse, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has submitted several other designs for Christmas Seals, is a representative of the younger school of thought in art circles. He is a graduate of Pratt Institute and has been exceptionally fortunate in his work as a commercial artist in New York City. His experience includes employment with an art service, with an advertising agency, and a lithographing firm, as well as a great deal of free lance work.

Mr. Sasse submitted his first Christmas Seal sketch in 1929 while he was tsill in school. He has been enger to see a wholly new type of Christmas Seal and in this year's Santa Claus we believe his wish and that of many others is being fulfilled.

MURDER MASQUERADE

BY INEZ HAYNES IRWIN

SYNOPSIS

Mary Avery, a widow who lives in the harbor town of Satuit, Mass., with two negro maids, Sarah Darbe and Bessie Williams, writes a manuscript describing the famous Second Head murder, which occurred on her estate. Next to Mary live Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stow who every year give a summer masquerade party. One of the guests at this function is murdered. Nearby live Dr. and Mrs. Geary and their married daughter Edith and her husband Alfred Bray; Doctor Myron Marden who has been abroad for 25 years and is visiting the town for the summer, and his stepgranddaughter Caro Prentiss, a beautiful young girl who was born in France. Next live Paul and Lora Eames and their daughter Molly. Molly was engaged to the murdered man, Ace Blaikie. She had previously been engaged to Walter Treadwell, who had been Blaikie's secretary, but the engagement was suddenly broken and he had left town. Other neighbors are the Fairweather sisters, Flora, a hopeless invalid, and Margaret. All but the latter two attended the masquerade. Mary's eight-year-old niece, Sylvia Sard, is visiting her for the summer. The wooded part of Mary's estate is called the Spinney. In it is a tiny log cabin, called the Little House. On the day of the masquerade excitement is high. Mary decided to take Sylvia, who is an unusually observant child. Caro Prentiss and Molly Eames drop in during the afternoon. Molly wearing Doctor Ace Blaikie's engagement ring. She seems pre-occupied. Soon a car arrives and Blaikie, Doctor Marden and Bruce Hexson, a friend of Ace's, alight. Hexson is a big man with a brooding look. Molly is impatient to leave and they all excuse themselves. At the party Sylvia identifies each of the masked guests as they arrive.

It began almost immediately. "Mrs. Burton" she whispered as a magnificent Elizabethen court lady—in stiff distended skirt, stomacher and ruff—entered the room. Immediately I saw under this brocaded panoply the graceful swanlike gait of Leda Burton. When presently there passed an East Indian rajah in a flowing robe, a coiled, jeweled turban of golden tissue, a belt bristling with knives, "Mr. Burton," her little voice whispered.

Presently appeared a great potentate—I took him to be an Arabian. Before him, walking backward and wielding an enormous long-handled jade green feathered fan, came his slave; a slim brown-fleshed fellow with sleek, straight jet-black locks and a tiny black mustache, his trousers and shirt of embroidered orange linen. "Who can they be?" I was helplessly thinking when Sylvia's whisper came in my ear, "Uncle Peter and Aunt Mattie!"

From where I sat I could see the tall grandfather clock. It was nearly ten o'clock. People were pouring in now, but Sylvia's steady, accurate observation constantly clicked names to me. Of course she did not identify every mask. Unlike me, she did not know everybody in Satuit. And naturally there were some who were strangers to both of us or, as always, people brought house guests. But my intimates she recognized instantly. It was a fairly magical performance.

The room had, of course, filled up. Between dances, people spilled out on the wide piazzas. The protective silence which had produced the vacuum of that first half hour had broken into laughter and talk. People were still disguising their voices however, as I, who was now on the inside of so many secrets, realized. I was enjoying myself immensely. Several strange masks asked me to dance, but I declined all invitations. I did not particularly want to dance. I did not want to leave Sylvia, and especially I wanted to enjoy the scene.

Three times during the evening of the Stow party, I saw groups which delighted me to the tingling point. Once it was a trio; a slender golden-haired Psyche in white Greek draperies; a cavalier in a great gray-feathered hat, gray velvet small clothes with slashings of ruby; a tall slender dark girl in a balloon-like skirt of white muslin, dappled with big orange dots; bands of brown fur about her wrists; a man's silk hat on the black hair which curled at the neck. Another time a white-clad Botticelli angel, carrying a golden lyre, hobnobbed with an Indian in a magnificent flamingo-pink war bonnet and a flaxen-bobbed ballet dancer in many skirts of pale blue tarletan.

I kept calling Sylvia's attention to these pictures. When she turned her face up to mine, I could see her eyes shining as though stars were boiling up from the depths of their blueness.

Once she said to me, "Oh, how I wish I had brought Dorinda Belle!"

Fortunately however, the right reassuring idea occurred to me. "Oh we couldn't have brought Dorinda Belle," I declared in a shocked tone. "Don't you see, Sylvia, everybody would have known Dorinda Belle. And then they would have guessed who we are!"

"That would be dreadful." Sylvia whispered. "Perfickly dreadfull But I'll tell Dorinda Belle all about it—every word of it!"

There strode into the room a magnificent male figure, a Roman warrior of the period of Julius Caesar. He wore a short white military tunic, overlaid with long strips of gilded leather; a golden helmet; golden shoes. At his belt, hung the short sword—as became an officer, on the left side. The costume was superb. The man himself was equally superb with his height, his shapeliness and the bold, free carriage of his splendid body. Only one man in Satuit could have carried off that costume. Even my imaginatively-led mind registered his identity before Sylvia said, "Doctor Ace!" And then the sword caught my eye. I recognized it. The first time Ace visited Rome, he had had a Roman short sword made for him.

Doctor Ace stood on that ruffle of applause, calmly surveyed the room. His eyes stopped on Sylvia and me. The music started up. Instantly he came over to our corner, bowed before Sylvia. "May I have the pleasure of this dance, senorita?" he asked. Sylvia arose and stood before the gigantic Roman warrior; a thrilled, trembling little figure—like a little silvery fountain which had burst through the floor.

They danced.

When the music stopped, Ace brought her back to my side. He bowed low before he left. "Thank you, senorita!" he said.

"Did you enjoy the dance, lamb?" I asked Sylvia.

"Oh, Aunt Mary——"

"Sh-sh-sh." I hushed her with a conscious touch of melodrama. "Don't speak my name."

"Oh, I won't do it again," Sylvia whispered, looking hastily about her, her eyes dancing with importance. "He tried and he tried and he tried to find out who I was," she went on importantly. "But I would not tell him. He asked me if I was Mrs. Broome." Sylvia's sparkles burst through the importance which had quieted her look.

Nina Broome was the tallest woman in Satuit—a little over six feet.

"I told him I wasn't," Sylvia went on. "And at first he wouldn't believe me. Then he asked me—" Here Sylvia burst into a series of silvery giggles. "—if I was Ellie Dent."

Ellie Dent was the fattest woman in Satuit—three hundred pounds the conservative among us had guessed.

"I told him I wasn't Ellie Dent! And at first he wouldn't believe me. And then he asked me—" Again she burst into giggles. "—if I was Tom Boylan."

Entrance music interrupted this conversation.

There appeared in the frame of the doorway the loveliest figure that had yet entered the room. A tall, lithe creature, young! Yes with that slimness she must have been young; dressed as—mentally I dubbed her—Snow Queen. She wore a gown of a frail silvery lace trimmed with broad bands of white fur.

Quick as a flash came Sylvia's identifying whisper, "Molly Eames!" And there she was, at once revealed to me, my precious Molly.

"She looks like a Snow Queen!" I said.

Almost immediately on Molly's entrance appeared another noticeable figure—a man in armor. Obviously young, obviously athletic, he was in his medieval way, almost as striking as Ace in his Roman way. I am no authority on armor, although I suppose I have seen hundreds of specimens in the galleries of Europe.

I hadn't the remotest idea who he was. He was superb, though! Yet the combination of black mail and black mask made him a little sinister. Even Sylvia did not at first identify him. He fascinated her, however, as he fascinated me. We both watched him. And then suddenly, with a little ecstatic start of recognition, Sylvia whispered, "Oh I know now who it is! It's Walter Treadway!"

My first sensation was of thrill, romantic thrill, delightful thrill. But when I saw him making for the direction of the Snow Queen, swing off into dance with her, I became conscious—I don't even now know why exactly—of a sense of unease. Molly and Walter had not, I believed, spoken, had not seen each other, since they broke their engagement. Did they recognize each other now?

I whispered close to Sylvia's ear, "Remember, darling, that you are not to tell anybody but me who these people are."

"Oh, of course!" Sylvia declared with emphasis, "I won't tell anybody. I wouldn't like anybody to tell who I was. I don't believe anybody will guess who I am."

"Nancy and I Are Going to Play Down at the Merry Mere."

and Walter Treadway. How beautifully they danced together! And what a contrast they made—Molly, a-sparkle and almost a-melt in her silvery lace and crystals; Walter as one carved out of jet in his black cape and his shining chainmail. Walter danced continuously with Molly—except for two dances she gave Ace Blaikie. I continued to watch them and with varying emotions. Molly Eames—with all her golden gayety—was not a person of whom you asked personal questions. There was one question that all Satuit would have liked to ask her. Why had she thrown Walter over? They had seemed to be passionately in love. They had seemed to be perfectly matched. And yet, suddenly—and apparently for no reason—she had broken with him, and Walter had immediately left town. A few months later she announced her engagement to Ace Blaikie. Ace Blaikie who was my contemporary, who was, in age, more than twice her twenty-two years! Ace Blaikie who had started, before she was born, flirting with all the pretty women in the county and who had never, except for his absence during the World war, ceased to flirt with them. Walter had never entered Satuit since his departure a year before. I had not known that he had returned.

There was one more notable entrance before the unmasking; this time a pair—man and woman. They wore costumes of the Revolutionary period; the woman in a full-skirted gown of the palest yellow satin, trimmed with lace; a wig of high-piled yellow hair, from which fell onto her neck two long curls. The man wore lilac satin. Being something of a connoisseur both of old lace and old paste, I noticed the likeness of the Chantilly ruffles which trimmed her gown and the old rose-point which fell from his neck and wrists; the antique preciousness of their paste —her necklace and earrings; his ruffle-pin and shoe buckles.

I should have guessed at once; I should have recognized a certain trained quality in the movements of the woman, a certain courtliness in the bearing of the man. Yet it was not until Sylvia said, "Doctor Marden and Carol" that I knew.

The party went on. I noticed with a resigned amusement how gradually, as is inevitable at all parties—I have watched the process a hundred times in my own place—Mattie's house lost its look of freshness and orderliness.

Sylvia complained that she was thirsty and I sent her out into the kitchen for a drink. She did not come back until the unmasking. I did not bother her. I knew she was having a good time with the maids.

The unmasking came some time after eleven. Three of the people for whom I looked particularly had apparently left the house—Molly Eames, Walter Treadway, Ace Blaikie. We knew the next day that Ace Blaikie left it to walk to his death.

When the clock struck twelve, I sent Sylvia home with Bessie. At midnight, the Stows put on one of the delightful divertissements which are always a feature of their annual party. This time it was a modernistic quadrille danced by four couples dressed in cubistic black and white.

Presently came the delicious supper and dancing had begun again. Sarah and I left a little after two. Molly and Walter had not returned to the party; neither of course had Ace Blaikie.

SATURDAY

I have often recalled how hard, long and dreamlessly I slept that night.

Not much more than a stone's throw from my house, a horrible tragedy had enacted itself. But my psychology, untouched by the horror in the atmosphere, stayed static. A rest, as thick, as soft, as soundless as a vast white cloud, enveloped me.

I waked about noon. I lay for a moment struggling with that cloud of sleep, half trying to pull out of it. Presently I heard Sylvia's voice, "Oh I do wish Aunt Mary'd get up!" and I bounced wide awake. "Sylvia," I called, "come in here, dear!"

Sylvia, very slim in her little blue gingham dress, her blue-bowed pig-tails snapping upwards at the end, perched herself on my bed, and contemplated me in her most friendly manner. Of course she was carrying Dorinda Belle.

"Have you had your breakfast, Sylvia?" I asked sleepily.

"Yes, Aunt Mary."

"Did you sleep well?"

"I did, but Dorinda Belle didn't. A terrible thing happened, Aunt Mary,. I feel perfectly dreadful about it. You see I let Dorinda—"

Sarah Darbe interrupted, entering with my breakast tray. "We let her sleep as long as she could, Mrs. Avery," she took up the conversation. "She must have waked up about eleven. She had her breakfast a little over a half hour ago."

Sylvia watched me pour my coffee. "How I wish I could have some, Aunt Mary!" she exclaimed wistully.

"I'll be glad when you can," I temporized. "Because then you and I can have our coffee together. But you'll have to be a big girl before that happens. What are you going to do this afternoon?" I changed the subject.

"Nancy and I are going to play down at the Merry Mere. We are making a little village. There's my doll house and that birdhouse that's been in the garage so long and a lot of boxes that sort of look like houses. Nancy and I made up our minds that there was going to be kings and queen in the village and so Dorinda Belle is going to be queen and Nancy's boy-doll's going to be king. They're to be crowned today."

"Oh that's why Dorinda Belle is wearing that gorgeous dress!" I said.

"Yes, Aunt Mary. I made it myself." Sylvia held Dorinda Belle up so that I could get the entire effect of lanky draperies wrapped around her.

"Beautiful!" I fibbed tactfully. Sylvia chattered on, adding other opulent details of the day's plans, but I was not listening.

"Which of the ladies did you think looked the prettiest last night?" I asked.

"Oh, the Snow Queen!" Sylvia answered promptly and with enthusiasm. "I thought she was perfickly wonderful. Molly is the most beautiful lady I ever saw!"

"Which of the men did you like most?" I asked.

"Doctor Ace!" Sylvia's small freckled nose wrinkled with her elfin mirth; she distilled her tinkling laughter. "Oh, Doctor Ace was so funny asking me if I was Mrs. Broome and Ellie Dent and Tom Boylan. Wouldn't you have thought, Aunt Mary, that he'd have known I wasn't any of them? He did not take his mask off. He went away before that. Oh I'm so sorry he went away."

"You love Doctor Ace, Sylvia?"

"Yes, he gives me nice medicines. I don't like Doctor Spellman. Doctor Spellman gives me horrid medicins. Doctor Ace tells me stories too. I love him."

Gumotton is prepared from ordinary cotton-wool which is boiled in a solution of sodium carbonate. After the boiling, the cotton is washed and dried, following which it is dipped for 10 minutes in a mixture of nitric and sulphuric acids and water. It is again washed and dried and is ready for employment in the various compound explosives in which it finds use.

Cover small delphinium plants with excelsior or pine boughs before putting on dried leaves. They do not pack or stay damp as leaves do.

It is better to water evergreens and shrubs well a few days before transplanting. They will be transplanted more successfully if full of moisture.

FATHER FEEDING THE BABY By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

Puttering Around the House—

Time-Wasting Work of Putting Away Things Others Have Used

WHEN a family is orderly, no one has to do much puttering about. When the members are not particular where they put their things, it becomes the undesirable duty of some person to spend much time in just this very thing, puttering. Hours are wasted daily in such trivialities as gathering up newspapers spread about, picking up and putting away gloves, hats, scissors, thimbles, pencils, etc. Whatever it may be that has been in use, and not put away by the user, or has been put in the wrong place, must be placed where it belongs or the house would reflect poor housekeeping.

Nondescript Tasks.

The time given to these nondescript jobs should be given by those who leave the work to others. Putting things away is part of the job connected with using the things, just as much as getting the things out, is part of it. The work is regular and legitimate and only becomes an annoyance when left for the wrong person to do.

Left-Over Jobs.

No person wants her time frittered away doing the left-over jobs of others. Nobody enjoys having a person puttering around, either. It is distracting to attention, and disturbing to the nerves. From both the angle of the person who putters about and those who have to endure the annoyance of such activity, there should be some remedy found.

Remedies Suggested.

Mothers can teach their children to put their playthings away when through with them. This is the first step to take. Then she can instruct the little folk to put their outside things away when they come in from outdoors. Children can get into the habit of orderliness by being made to realize that what they don't do, has to be done by mother who is very busy and often too tired to do the extra tasks. Affection will gain the day.

Breaking the Habit.

Adults should consider how to break themselves of the reprehensible habit of leaving work they should do, to be completed by others. If they really determine to stop this bothersome fault, they will decrease the necessity of puttering about by the person who heartily dislikes the work, but who, for the sake of order prefers to do it rather than have disorder around.

months during the World War and was in the army at home for one year.

Mrs. M. C. Milling, who has been a nurse for Mrs. Randle in the Hendersonville institution since opening of same.

Miss Mary Wood, of Brooksville, Florida, a graduate nurse of West Virginia and also registered with the State of Florida.

Mrs. Alice M. Sampson, of Tampa, Florida.

Marvin Smith, in charge of transportation facilities.

One of the greatest features of the entire Resort program will be the raising of mineralized foods at its Plant. A complete mineralized garden will be planted covering one hundred acres. These mineralized vegetables will be used in the daily diets of the patients. Only mineralized citrus fruits will be used and every food used by the patients will be tested in the laboratory before being served.

The Sun-Diet Health Resort offers to the public the largest health institution in the State of Florida, where men and women with or without families may come and enjoy health vacations.

"The Sun and Diet Health Resort of Avon Park, Florida is not a hospital, Mrs. Randle said. "It is to be conducted as a beautiful health resort offering perfect nutrition to suit the individual and his needs, with the most perfect system of combination of foods and principles of feeding to be had anywhere in America. The institution does not cater to contagious diseases of any kind, as its primary purpose is to provide a health school resort where those seeking proper feeding, relaxation, physical culture, balmy air and other natural principles can find every comfort and convenience that they do not find in the modern hotel or in the famous health resorts of Europe.

"All world known health methods will be used in addition to the famous Swiss methods of corrective feeding and proper nutrition. It is the present plan to make the kitchen of the Sun and Diet Health Resort the most perfect kitchen in the South where hundreds of visitors can inspect the model kitchen for the ideal American family seeking health.

"The Sun and Diet Resort School of Dietetics will also teach dietetics to individuals as has been the custom in Asheville, where pupils from all over the United States have come and enrolled as students to learn the subject of dietetics. It is very gratifying to the officials of the institution to know that all of the graduates of this institution are sought after for their dietetic knowledge and the principles of relaxation, etc. It is the present plan to accommodate fifty dietetic students who will study the remarkable work of diet for the guests who come to the resort for longer life and more vivalty through foods.

"Local physicians will be employed for all diagnosis and all medical care and medical education", it was said.

"The public is cordially invited to visit the health resort at any time. Here will be on display the most complete health library perhaps ever gathered in the United States on corrective feeding", according to officials of the institution. "The books in this library will be available to all of the guests and all of the people in Avon Park and surrounding Florida cities. In addition to this, the public will have an opportunity to see the books written by Mrs. Randle.

The institution is now open and reservations are being made. It will be open summer and winter and will cater to all types of individuals, Mrs. Randle said.

It is a plan of the staff, she added, to build in the immediate future a beauty and youth camp along the latest ideals of camp life and fashioned after Elizabeth Arden's Camp of Maine, noted as a siesta for beauty, charm, relaxation, youth etc. Mrs. Randle said she believes that there are hundreds of women and men throughout America who will seek the wonderful climate of Avon Park, as a means of revitalization, and it is her purpose to send the literature on Florida throughout the United States and foreign countries, as well as to advertise and extol the attractions of beautiful Avon Park in her educational lectures throughout America.

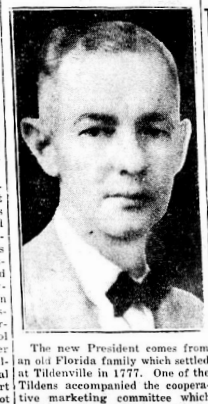
Tilden Named New Head Fla. Citrus Exch.

Orlando Attorney Chosen By Directors at Meeting Last Friday

Tampa, October 22.—(Special)—Judge Wilbur L. Tilden of Orlando was chosen Friday by Directors of the Florida Citrus Exchange to succeed the late John S. Taylor of Largo as Board Chairman and Exchange President. Judge Tilden is a director of the Exchange Association at Tildenville but has never been a member of the Citrus Exchange Board.



The new President comes from an old Florida family which settled at Tildenville in 1777. One of the Tildens accompanied the cooperative marketing committee which went to California twenty-seven years ago and which later organized the Florida Citrus Exchange cooperative marketing organization in Tampa.

The village of Tildenville near Winter Garden has long been the home of the Tilden Family, whose large citrus interests are managed by the new Exchange President, who is a thorough believer in cooperative endenvor.

Judge Tilden is the head of a prominent law firm in the city of Orlando but will devote much of his time to Citrus Exchange affairs even though he was elected to serve without salary.

The new President was named by a nominating committee consisting of A. W. Hurley, Winter Garden; D. A. Hunt, Lake Wales; L. L. Lowry, Winter Haven; John S. Taylor, Jr., Largo and W. C. VanClief, Winter Haven. There were no other nominations and the election at the regular monthly meeting of the Exchange Directors in addition to reports of Department heads were the discussion of a State Citrus Auction Market, licening the trade name Sealdsweet to a group of honey producers, agreement with Florida Citrus Canners of Lake Wales, whereby they may use the trade name Sealdsweet, and finally the matter of presenting prorating restrictions on shipments as it relates to Exchange grower memberships.

A committee consisting of C. B. Hipson, T. S. Carperter, Jr., and J. C. Palmer, working with Exchange executives proposed a citrus auction market for Jacksonville but requested further time in which to investigate possible locations, cost of operation and the probable volume of business. It was stated that California now has such a state auction market at Los Angeles and that this market has been in successful operation for many years. No definite action was taken upon this proposal towas taken upon this proposal Friday.

Florida Citrus Canners Cooperative of Lake Wales was granted the privilege of using the trade name Sealdsweet upon their canned products by the contract also stipulated that Sealdsweet was a trade name belonging to all the growers of the Exchange and that other Exchange groups could also have the privilege of using this trade name under certain restrictions in the future. Possible organization of a cooperative sales agency for promoting the sale of canned citrus products was also discussed.

C. C. Commander, General Manager of the Exchange, cautioned Exchange associations against the acceptance of any large volume of fruit at this time because of present prorate restrict which would necessitate the curtailment of shipping volume by present members, stating that there was only so much shipping volume "to go around" among Exchange members at the present time. "It would be decidedly unfair to Association members to admit a large volume of fruit into any. Association where such volume would reduce the shipping possibilities of present members," said Commander.

E. E. Patterson, General Sales Manager, reported small shipments only from Texas up-to-date, a lesser volume of early California Navels than the estimates of a month ago, and a small volume of scarcely 400 cars of Alabama Satsumas which start to market next week.

"The state has shipped up to and including October 12th, exclusive of trucks, a total of 2285 carloads of Exchange grapefruit as compared with 777 this time last season. Prices today are slightly higher in a few markets, lower in others. A sharp decline in Florida shipments during the week has helped the grapefruit situation materially.

"Our weekly review today shows 83 cars of oranges moved out of the state, 70 by rail and 13 by boat. Grapefruit shipments total 476 cars, 348 by rail and 128 by boat.

Florida sales in all auction markets during the week were 297 cars. Oranges declined in price, 107 cars sold averaging $3.39 per box. Last week at this time oranges were bringing $3.19 per box, two years ago, $3.15.

"The grapefruit auction sales for the week were 190 cars, standard boxes averaging $2.23, which is 9 cents above last week and 67 cents below last year's prices at this time."

TO LAY CORNERSTONE OF T. B. SANATORIUM

State Hospital Scheduled To Be Completed Before May First

Jacksonville, Oct. 21.—Governor Dave Sholtz will be the principal speaker at the placing of the cornerstone at Woodsmere, near Orlando, on November 2 of the first public tuberculosis sanatorium in Florida.

This was announced here today by W. T. Edwards of Jacksonville, chairman of the State Tuberculosis Board, in making public preliminary details of the ceremonies at the institution, which will cost $609,000 and which is being financed chiefly through PWA funds. Construction was started on July 7, this year, and is expected to be completed next April.

The institution will accommodate 350 patients, including 90 Negroes, who will be housed in a separate wing connected with the main building by an arcade. The sanatorium is on a plot of 160 acres donated by the City of Orlando and will be accessible by highways provided by the Orange County Board of Commissioners, which also is assisting in the beautification of the property.

The building will be three stories high and will have a frontage of 350 feet. There will be two end wings each 150 feet long, with a center service wing 50 feet long to house kitchens, pantries, storage rooms and other facilities.

The second floor will contain large recreation rooms. The third will be given over to the operating rooms, which will be euipped with the latest scientific equipment for surgical care.

The Board, which was created by an act of the Florida Legislature in 1927, but which did not take office because of the lack of funds to carry out its work until designated by Governor Sholtz in 1934, will finance the operation of the hospital through co-operation of the counties of the state.

Charity patients must obtain the recommendation of the county commissions in the counties in which they live. Provision also has been made for pay and part-pay patients.

Grapefruit Market Prospects Improve

Lakeland, Oct. 22—Although the grapefruit situation lately "has not been exactly encouraging," due to the largest combined crop on record, prospects for the 1936-37 season as a whole "give no cause for alarm," according to A. M. Pratt, secretary-manager for the Associated Citrus Growers and Shippers of Florida, after a statistical survey, in which he points out that Florida actually may ship no more grapefruit than last season-that is, as "fresh fruit in interstate commerce."

The possibility is seen that Fla. this season will market approximately 17,500 cars of fresh grapefruit, comparing with total shipments of 17,616 carloads in 1935-36, he said.

This is how Mr. Pratt figures it: "The attitude as to this year's prospects for grapefruit has become encouraging lately, regardless of both Texas and Florida having large crops. As I shall presently show, it looks like the two states may not have to ship in interstate commerce more than 10,000,000 boxes in fresh condition," Mr. Pratt points out.

Continuing he says: "Of this fresh fruit it looks like 7,000,000 boxes would be coming from Florida and 3,000,000 boxes from Texas.

"About 20% of Texas total crop was canned last year, while 20% moved within the state and was eaten by Texans. If the national government uses around 1,300,000 boxes of Texas grapefruit for relief purposes (as now seems likely) this leaves only 3,000,000 boxes for interstate commerce, according to present crop estimates.

"Now, here in Florida, to arrive at the probable volume that will move interstate, as fresh fruit, let us assume that of the estimated 17,000,000 box crop, a total of 7,000,000 boxes will go into cans.

"Around 3,000,000 boxes of Florida grapefruit should be taken by the federal government for relief purposes, leaving only 7,000,000 boxes to be shipped in interstate commerce, fresh!

"This would mean an estimated car movement of 17,500 cars from Florida this season comparing with 17,616 cars last year. From both states we can estimate 25,000 cars will be shipped as fresh fruit in regular interstate commerce, compared with 21,824 cars last season," Mr. Pratt continued.

"This makes the grapefruit picture more encouraging than many have painted it. Let us not be discouraged over our fine crop of unusually good grapefruit so early in the season. The foregoing figures indicate that Florida's growers and shippers have excellent chances of coming out of the grapefruit deal in fairly good shape," Mr. Pratt concluded.

Ford Dealers' Used Car Sale Definite Guide To Quality

"Ford 'R & G' used cars and trucks, now being offered to the public through the nation-wide Ford dealers' Used Car Clearance Sale, furnish a definite guide to buying quality," according to C. E. Lanier, head of the Avon Park Motor Co., local Ford dealers.

"This merchandising policy means that every used car and truck offered at our clearance sale under the 'R & G' emblem has been renewed and bears our guarantee," said Mr. Lanier.

"The policy is recognition of the fact that few used car buyers consider themselves sufficiently expert to judge the mechanical condition of a car offered for sale. Our plan provides a reliable guide to quality backed by the integrity of our organization. The emblem is permitted to be affixed only to cars which are guaranteed to meet definite specifications. The emblem means that the car has passed a rigid inspection and measures up to standards set by the Ford Motor Company."

Neal Trent.

Everything in the current political arena is overshadowed by the race being made by Neal Trent for the office of clerk of the circuit court. He is running like a woods fire before a gale but we would caution him and his supporters against being over confident. It is a fault which sometimes brings disaster. There is no use in enumerating the reasons as to why Neal is running, everyone knows them. We have had many dealings with him and we have always found him an honorable, upright gentleman and we are for him to the limit. His name will have to be written in, but it has been done before and can be done again. We know his host of friends all over the county will do this and give him a handsome majority. So good luck Neal, go to it and win!

The Chamber of Commerce.

If the meeting Wednesday night at the high school auditorium does not bring results nothing will for the chamber of commerce. It was a meeting the like of which has never been held before in Avon Park. Mrs. Randle, given a rising ovation when introduced by President C. E. Crabtree, told Avon Park citizens some fine truths which should have far reaching results. It takes a woman like Mrs. Randle to come to town and "take the lead out of our shoes" and with the able assistance of Mr. E. H. Bristol, Sr., Avon Park is going places. Like the old song, "We don't know where we're going, but we're on our way." So folks, join the chamber of commerce, pay your dues to Mr. W. M. Reck or Secretary McKee Elwell and help the good work along. Avon Park has woke up and must never go to sleep again.

Football.

The football classic of the season between Avon Park and Sebring is on tonight. As in the past, the rivalry is keen and we expect it will reach the limit at Head Field tonight. This is a fine spirit but we might suggest that physical violence and property damage be eliminated. It does not do any good and only promotes hard feelings and animosity. Let there be rivalry, yes, but let it be friendly and in good spirit and let the teams battle to the last breath but confine the combat to the playing field and after the game is over let's all be friends.

Marshall Jordon Is Honored at School

Marshall Jordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Jordon of this city, was recently honored at the Northern College of Optometry at Chicago, where he is a student. At the beginning of the present term all students were closely observed by the doctors supervising the clinic and later they were given an examination. After this examination eight of the 96 students were promoted to acting interne and Marshall was one of these eight. These students have the advantage of practicing in the clinic for nearly a full year, giving them plenty of practical experience.

Democratic Nominee Was Visitor Here

Mrs. Clara Pearce of DeSoto City, Democratic nominee for the office of county commissioner for district three, was a visitor here this week in the interest of her candidacy. Friends of Mrs. Pearce believe she has made a successful commissioner during her past term of office and feel she should have little difficulty in being re-elected next Tuesday.

PLANE FINDS BODY OF MAN LOST FOR DAYS

Remains of Guerdon Smith Buried Here Thursday Morning

Funeral services for Guerdon Smith, 77, whose body was found Wednesday morning about 16 miles east of Avon Park, were held Thursday morning at the chapel of Stephenson and Blythe, Fr. George Shilling of the Church of the Redeemer, officiating. Interment was in Bouganvillea Cemetery. Pallbearers were: Demos Mandis, W. H. McCarthy, Ed. Welch, Dave Stuckey, A. McKee Elwell, D. G. Perry, J. C. Ragsdale and Will Bennett, all members of Highlands Post of the American Legion, who instigated the search when the deceased was reported missing Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Smith was reported missing Saturday afternoon when other members of a fishing party of which he was a member, returned to town. The party had gone fishing to Morgan's Hole Wednesday and camped there that night. On Thursday morning others in the party went fishing and when they returned Smith was not there. They thought nothing of it as he had mentioned returning to town and they though he had obtained a ride in. It was when they reached Avon Park they found he had not arrived.

Search parties were sent out immediately but no trace was found of the missing man. Airplanes piloted by J. L. Wells and Jack Stephenson aided in the search but to no avail. On Monday Commander Will Bennett of Highlands Post, American Legion requested aid from Governor Dave Sholtz and he obtained the services of a Coast Guard plane from St. Petersburg, which arrived Tuesday morning. It was piloted by Chief Aviation Pilot C. H. Condrey.

This plane was up all day Tuesday with Glenn Lake of Avon Park in the observer's seat but with no result. Then Wednesday at 8:50 a. m. they found the missing man nearly two miles south of Morgan's Hole in a cypress swamp. The plane dipped and circled to attract the attention of nearby searching parties who hurried to the scene.

The first man there was Ray Rutherford, who found the body, unclothed, lying face down in about 18 inches of water. The body was badly decomposed and had apparently been dead for several days. With Rutherford were Ben Crosby, Hope Elder and others. The deceased's clothes were found scattered round about where the body was found.

A coroner's jury empanelled by Justice of the Peace W. H. McCarthy found Smith had come to his death by exhaustion and drowning.

Smith had been seen on the road near the camp Thursday afternoon by Olen Harris who offered him a ride which was refused. Two other men, said to be named Woodard and McRegister, are said to have offered him a ride also and told him he was headed away from Avon Park. This offer was also refused.

Mr. Smith was born in Berlin Heights, O. and would have been 78 years of age on November 11. In middle life he married a niece of the late Senator Smoot at Bellingham, Wash. where he owned an apple orchard. His wife passed away about 19 years ago and soon after he came to live in Avon Park. In early life he had also worked on a horse ranch in Colorado and had been a civilian employee of the U. S. Army under Capt. Jack Crawford in New Mexico. He was a stationery engineer by trade and was much interested in trade union activities.

He is survived by three brothers, T. Norton and Charles of this city, Lucius H. of Sandusky, O. and one sister, Mrs. A. J. Nickols of Berlin Heights, O.

Sebring Gridders Face Avon Park Here This Evening

Of nine games played, the Red Devils have won four while Sebring has taken five. Not since 1928 have the Red Devils been victorious. Coach Bissett and his warriors say things will be different tonight.

So far this season the Devils boast a better record than that of Sebring, having won four and lost one. The Blue Streaks have won two, lost two and tied one.

Coach Bissett is going to let the cat out of the bag tonight. Plays that have not been used against other teams this season will be brought into play and this will be Avon Park's crucial game in their race for Ridge laurels.

From every indication, this will be the proverbial 'battle of the century," and one of the biggest crowds ever to attend a football game here is expected to be on hand. The game is called for 8 o'clock.

Happy hunting boys.

STATE ELECTION LAWS O.K. SAYS J. B. HODGES

State Democratic Chairman Says Laws Are Simple and Efficient

Lake City, Oct. 21.—(FNS)—His views on Florida election rules, stressing simplicity of procedure and ease of casting ballots as a help to voters, were expressed by J. B. Hodges, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, in answering a recent communication from William A. Stanly, Duval county delegate to the 1937 legislature of 1937, whose platform was based on legislation to secure changes in state election laws.

"The holding of elections and casting of ballots by the people should be as simple as possible, and should not be circumvented by unnecessary statutes to such an extent that the casting of ballots by the voters would become laborious," declared Col. Hodges. "It is my opinion that if the casting of ballots at a primary and general elections become surrounded with undue and cumbersome regulations, the life of the primary will be shortened; its usefulness will be lessened, and the general elections will necessarily become unpopular."

"I believe our general election and primary laws are just about as complete as we can make them," wrote Col. Hodges. He quoted the recent decision of the State Supreme Court as to rights of dominant political parties, commenting, "The State Committee did not deem it necessary to declare that any amendments of the primary and general election laws be obtained."

Representing Stanly's suggestions of legislation providing comparison of signatures before voters are permitted to ballot, uniform biennial registration laws, abolition of the district registration system and payment of poll taxes at registration time were dismissed by Col. Hodges either as unnecessarily increasing cost and election procedure or as discouraging to voters through inconvenience or completion of polling methods. Treating each item in detail, he pointed out that comparison of signatures to prevent "repeater" voting would require more time, a larger number of poll officials, greater expense, and would in the end gain no better result than patriotic vigilence of loyal Democrats and their turning of the bright light of publicity on any irregularities.

Biennial registration laws were dismissed for the same reason of costliness, its unfavorable aspects in populous counties, and the fact that large population centers already use the system. The remaining suggestions of Mr. Stanly's program were not favored by Hodges because of inconvenience to voters that might discourage their full exercise of voting privileges.

WALKER TOLD ROTARIANS OF TEXAS CITRUS

Urged Greater Advertising Levy To Popularize Grapefruit

The citrus situation in Texas was the subject of the talk by Charles H. Walker at the Rotary Club luncheon Wednesday noon at the Jacaranda Hotel. Mr. Walker recently returned from the Texas citrus belt where he made an extensive study of conditions and he passed his ideas on to his fellow Rotarians.

Mr. Walker said he spent several days in the Rio Grande Valley, met grove owners, studied their methods and the possibilities of the crop. Alkali water does back up and injure the trees to some extent in some places, he said, but there are some conditions in some places on Florida that are just as bad. Texas has the advantage of needing to use little or no fertilizer. Some of the Texas growers are experimenting with fertilizer and are using sulphate of ammonia to some extent.

The cold average is not bad but some spots have been abandoned to citrus due to this condition, Mr. Walker said. Protection from cold is the same as in Florida, circulation of air if the elevation is sufficient. Mr. Walker said he saw frees that had been cut back on account of freezing but had recovered without the use of fertilizer.

Problems similar to Florida's have to be overcome by dusting and spraying but the scale is harder to control. He saw good clean fruit, well shaped and medium size, principally of the Marsh seedless variety, and Texas will produce about eight million boxes of fruit this year, six million of which will go on the market, Mr. Walker predicted.

Texas will now have the advantage of water transportation to the eastern markets with the opening of Port Isabel and they have been promised a freight rate of 64 cents to New York. The problem of Texas fruit is worrying Florida growers today, Mr. Walker said.

The distribution of fruit is not what it should be, Mr. Walker said and many small markets have not been touched. Advertising was started last year with good results and with more advertising this country can consume the entire output of citrus. Grapefruit will not sell itself and therefore the advertising appropriation should be 10 cents a box and not three cents as at present. The receipts to the grower would be materially increased. Growers must be educated to the needs of advertising, he said and added that some markets prefer Texas to Florida fruit.

J. S. Francis, recently returned from a tour of the west, supplemented Mr. Walker's remarks and said he had been offered Texas fruit that was not fit to eat. He added that Arizona does not grow much fruit but just enough to wreck the markets. They should stick to other fruit and vegetables, he said.

Mr. Francis also moved a resolution of condolence to Past President T. Norton Smith on the loss of his brother.

Visitors at the meeting were: E. H. Bristol, Sr., of Avon Park and Foxboro, Mass., Mrs. Helen G. Randle of Avon Park, J. M. Bunch and F. M. McGee of Sebring and T. F. Sharpless of Lake Wales. Miss Barbara Betts was the pianist during the singing.

J. W. Schumacher who owns and operates a farm near Lakemont was in Avon Park this week in the interests of his candidacy for the office of county commissioner from district two, Sebring. He says he is running as an independent Democrat at the request of a large number of friends.

Mayor Covington Has Collection of Interesting Relics

Mayor M. E. Covington has a varied collection of very interesting relics of the Mexican War and the War Between the States. They include an original Field Order of General Hood, a shirt studded and worn by Gen. Santa Anna during the Mexican War, many pieces of old money, old stamps and other things of extreme interest and value.

The Field Order is written in pen and ink with a fine and very legible hand and congratulates the army for its success in battle. On the back of the order are the signatures of the officers who received it. It reads as follows:

The Headquarters Army Tenn
Near Franklin, Tenn
Dec 1st, 1864
Genl Field Order
No 38

The Commanding Genl Congratulates the Army upon the success achieved yesterday over our enemy by their heroic and determined courage. The enemy have been sent in disorder and confusion to Nashville, and while we lament the fall of many gallant officers and brave men we have shown to our countrymen that we can carry any position occupied by our enemy.

The shirt stud was given the mayor by his mother and is one of a set of three, the other two being lost. Mrs. Covington in making the gift wrote as follows:

This is one of a set of shirt studs (old gold of diamond shape with one solid emeral in center) owned and worn by Gen. Santa Anna during the Mexican War. The set was presented to my father, Matthew Woodson, at that time a maj under Gen. Scott in the United States Army. I give and bequeath this said button to my dear son Marvin Euclid Covington on his 21st birthday (a gift from his mother.)

Legion Is Host To Conference

Sixth District Posts and Auxiliaries Held Meeting Here

Members of American Legion posts and Auxiliaries of the Sixth District of Florida met here last Sunday afternoon for a conference, Highlands Post and Auxiliary being hosts for the occasion. The Posts met at the Legion Home on Lake Lotela and the Auxiliaries at the Jacaranda Hotel for their business meetings and these were followed by a joint meeting at the Legion Home later in the afternoon. The day's festivities closed with a barbecue at which pork and beef and all the trimmings were served the assembled guests.

The post meeting was opened by Commander Will Bennett in due form and Mayor M. E. Covington gave the address of welcome. Glenn Ebersole of Arcadia made the response. The gavel was then turned over to District Vice Commander J. Douglas Arnest of Sarasota for the sessions.

Distinguished guests included: Bill Comer, vice commander of the fourth district, Charles Holtzslaw, state service officer, Jack Leonard, hospitalisation chairman and recreation officer at Bay Pines and S. M. McCahill, vice commander of the fifth district, Miami.

Posts present, represented and making reports were: Arcadia, Avon Park, Bradenton, Wauchula, Fort Myers, Punta Gorda, Sebring and Sarasota.

Bill Comer announced the midwinter department conference would be held in Orlando on January 16, 17 and 18th. Committee reports were heard from Joe Kitchen of Fort Myers on Americanism, Dr. A. M. Morgan of Avon Park on Child Welfare, R. M. Gast of Sebring on Rehabilitation, Latimer Farr of Wauchula read the report of the chairman of the Educational Committee which was written by J. Paul Cobb of Sarasota.

The report on the National Convention was made by Harrison Barringer of Sarasota. Punta Gorda asked for and will get the next district conference in January.

Mrs. G. B. Knowles of Bradenton, president of the department Auxiliary, presided at the business meeting at the Jacaranda Hotel.

Council Sets Tenative Levy To Operate City

A tentative levy of 25 mills for operating expenses was set by the city council at a recessed special session held Thursday night. There was much discussion on the proposed budget but nothing definite arrived at. The new armory came in for some comment with City Clerk Shockley stating he had been informed the WPA would stop work on the building if it is deeded to the state as requested and authorized by the council. It is a city project under the WPA at present and action on this may be taken later.

Chairman S. J. Pendleton suggested a cut in the councilmen's salaries but it was pointed out this would have little effect on the total budget. He also led a discussion on cutting other items in the budget.

The proposed budget calls for $38,840 as against $32,140 last year. The increased is caused by the $5,000 advertising appropriation and the $1,000 for lighting the football field. The actual expense is increased by only $700. The millage last year for this purpose was 22 mills but there has been some reduction in assessments this year as well as more homestead exemptions.

GRAPEFRUIT PRICES SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Prices Up In Six Out of Ten Auction Markets In the North

By Florida News Service.

Grapefruit prices for week ending October 23 for six of the ten auctions showed average increases in prices ranging from 10 cents to 46 cents a box, due to heavy shipments of Marsh Seedless, Lawrence Gentile, general manager of Tree-Gold Cooperative Growers, Orlando, pointed out in his weekly report to growers.

In the New York auction, where the bulk of the grapefruit shipments were received last week, the general auction average for the week was $2.28, an increase of 10 cents over the week previous. However, this price increase was due to heavy receipt of Indian River Marsh Seedless. Duncan variety declined sharply last three auction sales. The same condition applied also to Philadelphia.

Other auctions showing increases in the general average for the week were: Philadelphia, $2.17, up 15c; Boston, $2.12, up 5c; Cleveland, $2.61, up 46c; Cincinnati, $2.52, up 29c; Detroit, $2.47, up 10c.

Oranges, moving without control, declined in price on all of the 10 auctions.

Other auction averages were: New York, $3.24, off 9c; Philadelphia, $3.02, off 27c; Boston, $2.92, off 66c; Pittsburgh, $2.97, off 50c; Cleveland, $3.33, off 10c; Chicago, $3.22, off 36c; St. Louis, $2.76, off 77c; Cincinnati, $3.15, off 11c; Baltimore, $2.80, off 85c.

With Thanksgiving and holiday markets approaching and the volume of oranges ready to move north increasing daily, a volume prorate on orange shipments was again recommended by Tree-Gold.

MRS. RANDLE SPEAKER AT C. OF C. MEET

Urged Belief In Avon Park And Membership In Commerce Body

Mrs. Helen G. Randle, director of the Sun and Diet Health Resort recently established in Avon Park, was the principal speaker at the chamber of commerce mass meeting Wednesday night at the high school auditorium. The speaking was preceded by a number of selections by the high school band under the direction of Prof. E. L. Roberts. C. E. Crabtree, president of the chamber, was chairman for the evening and presented the different speakers, who, besides Mrs. Randle, were, Mayor M. E. Covington, E. H. Bristol, Sr. of Foxboro, Mass. and Avon Park, W. T. Coates, A. McKee Elwell, Walter S. Betts and W. M. Reck.

Mrs. Randle was greeted by the entire audience rising to their feet and opened with mention of the "Protective Committee" which had surrounded her from the time she came to Avon Park and spoke at the Rotary club until the singing of the papers by which she and Mr. E. H. Bristol took over the Highland Lakes Hotel. She paid her respects to Walter S. Betts, Mayor Covington, C. E. Crabtree, C. E. Lanier, W. M. Reck and Dr. A. M. Morgan, the latter being the first person she met in Avon Park.

She came to Avon Park, she said, not because of the mayor, the Mall nor the size of the town, but because of the fine people she met here. She had not met their like anywhere else. She has been knocked the knockers and said they are cowards to begin with. Avon Park is one of the healthiest towns in Florida, said Mrs. Randle, and promised to advertise that fact in her lectures in Boston, New York and other northern cities.

Be sold on your own town, she urged as well as on your wife and if possible your mother-in-law. Grow and stick together. Get the spirit of going after things and don't let other towns get everything. Have PUSHABILITY and get somewhere.

She said she is meeting leaders of the Oxford Group Movement today in New York and advocate their coming to Avon Park. It is an undenominational, God controlled movement embracing some of the biggest people in the country.

Dr. Randle gave a brief history of her life and studies leading up to the sun and diet movement. She visioned Avon Park with a large food laboratory, scientific poultry raising, mileralized gardens, a children's preventorium and headquarters for the Physical Culture Club. Reality is only as you are able to see it, she said.

She closed with an appeal for everyone to join the chamber of commerce. Avon Park must and will grow and needs a chamber of commerce, Mrs. Randle said and urged that everybody coming here be greeted with a glad hand.

Mayor Covington promised drastic sentence for any knocker brought before him in city court and Mr. Reck spoke briefly on the need of supporting the chamber of commerce which would return big dividends, he said.

Motorcade Planned This Afternoon For Game This Evening

Approximately 100 cars are expected to join the motorcade this afternoon in preparation for the football classic, Avon Park's Red Devils vs Sebring's Blue Streaks, this evening. The cars will assemble at the high school at 4 p. m., parade around Avon Park and then proceed to Sebring and serenade the residents of the county seat.

The annual game between the two high schools is the high spot of the local football season and much enthusiasm is shown by both teams and their supporters. Avon Park has been on the losing end for the past few years but this year Coach Bissett and his fighting Devils have every expectation they will make their opponents streak for home in a hurry.

John Gravlee who has charge of the motorcade asks that as many cars as possible be on hand and on time. The motorcade will be led by the high school band and a very lively time is expected.

Old Men Still Useful

Science Works Two Ways

Even in this day of flaming youth, mature age still has its usefulness.

Arthur Brisbane

The average age of our Supreme Court justices is seventy - one years. Twenty-six years ago Chief Justice Hughes took his seat on the Supreme Court bench. President Taft rendered public service by appointing him to succeed Justice Brewer.

He left the bench to run for President against Woodrow Wilson, and would doubtless have been elected had he not gone to California. Had he been elected he would have remained in the United States and probably would have saved the country ten thousand million dollars that Woodrow Wilson shoveled out in his ecstacy of self-approval.

Rioting in London's "Mile End Road," in which the faces of men and women were slashed with razor blades and one man was thrown through a shop window, etc., seems rather "un-English," to put it mildly. Fist fighting has been encouraged by distinguished Englishmen, including judges, on the ground that it is "better than using knives."

It is better, doubtless, but what about the razor blades?

Germany honors its youngest grandfather, Herman Jahnke, farm laborer, thirty-six years old. Married at seventeen, his eldest daughter became a mother at seventeen.

If all you want is children, that record is satisfactory, although any mouse family could beat it by 25,000 per cent, and almost any microbe by a billion per cent.

If good children were desired, it would have been better for Mr. Jahnke to have his first child at 36, and his first grandchild at 60 or 70; at least that was Plato's opinion.

Justice uses science—the electric chair, the lethal chamber—to punish criminals. The criminal uses science to carry on his trade. An SOS signal, purporting to come from a yacht in distress, drew the coast guard away from the coast of Hawaii, making it convenient for smugglers of narcotics to bring in their cargo. Tear gas, comparatively modern, was used to empty a New York theater where there was labor trouble.

Japan, until recently convinced, mistakenly, that this country is her enemy, and for excellent reasons keeping close watch on Russia and her anti-Japanese Vladivostok airplane and submarine base, now turns suspicious attention on dear old John Bull.

Britain is supposed to have asked nine nations to protest against Japan's demands on China. That should not worry Japan too much. The same old John Bull got fifty-one nations to protest Mussolini's attack on Ethiopia; but, paying no attention, the able Italian went ahead swallowing Ethiopia; sending the little Haile Selassie to live in Switzerland.

In his villa at San Remo, the Duke of Borea D'Olmo celebrates his one hundred and sixth birthday in excellent health. He has been active in Italian court circles since 1841, before the beginning of the United States-Mexican war.

Mussolini tells 200 farmers and industrialists to prepare for a "decisive conflict" that will be necessary "to preserve order against anarchy."

Those that favor the "present civilization," he said, will have to preserve it. "We are at the dawn of a decisive conflict between the representatives of order and anarchy."

Dr. Irving Langmuir, brilliant Nobel prize winner, announced a "counterpart of life," produced chemically; interesting, probably not important. Until some professor can produce "some counterpart of life" able to think, manufacture telescopes, explore the universe and run for office, man's domination will not be threatened. A cigar store Indian is a "counterpart," but not an Indian.

European nations are preparing to recognize the Spanish rebels when they take Madrid and set up a national government.

The idea is to take prompt action and forestall the victorious insurgents' giving Spanish territory to Italy or Germany; the Balearic islands to Italy for instance, to use as naval and air bases, with Ceuta for Germany. This would upset the balance of power in the western Mediterranean and disturb old England, with Egypt and the Suez Canal on her mind.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—During the recent bitter campaigning, both national political parties engaged in a good deal of palaver about the coal industry. As usual, the politicians were patting the miners on the back, telling them what wonderful assets to the nation they are, and carrying their demagoguery further by criticism of the mine owners every now and then because it was popular with labor to attack employers. Altogether, it was a rather sorry spectacle and, I think, did not do credit to either side to any extent.

The Coal Industry

But in this report, I want to stress a very much less obvious phase of the problem than was made apparent in any of the electioneering. With all of the verbiage cast aside, with all of the political hoodwinking forgotten, there is a very deep and difficult problem in the coal industry. I think it can be summarized in one question: What is the future of coal, the coal industry, and the thousands of men who know no other source of livelihood than that which they eke out in the bowels of the earth?

This question, if proper analysis is made, encompasses more than the usual factors that operate in economics. It does that because of policies of the federal government, among states and among municipalities. Because of the attempts to influence votes, the whole question has got into politics and that of itself is ruinous, an obstacle to a scientific solution.

Not so many years ago coal mine owners and coal labor units had what amounted to a monopoly on our fuel supply. Then came oil, oil with all of the scientific development that followed in its wake. Despite this, operators and labor leaders continued to take their toll from the hapless user of coal for fuel, be that user a great factory or an individual consumer in furnace or round oak stove. But that was not all. Electricity came along with its constantly increasing automatic control. First, of course, in the larger communities and later it came to villages and farm homes. Still, the mine owners and the coal labor leaders followed an unwise course: still, they continued to take their toll and before they fully realized what the circumstance was, they had succeeded by their acts in building up a desire on the part of millions of people to use some other sort of fuel. The end is not yet, and that is why the subject is most important at this stage of our history.

Public Ownership

During the Roosevelt administration we have seen an impetus given to public ownership of power plants never equalled. I think much of this development has gone on in a hit-and-miss fashion and that eventually the public will pay for the shiftless methods employed in development, but that is beside the point. The present question is whether our nation is going to continue to expand public ownership in such a way as to ruin an industry that is as much a part of our basic economic structure as any other unit of our natural life. I think sometimes it goes beyond that for the reason that, unless people awaken to the fact that they are being hoodwinked to a considerable extent by public ownership propaganda, it is likely to spread and public ownership will become a frankenstein, a parasite on our body public.

When I referred to the destruction of a great industry, I had in mind the thought that the consequences will run in two directions. Yet, paradoxically as it may seem, they constitute a cycle. It works out like this: As the demand for coal declines, it is quite natural that production costs go up. When production costs go up, they eventually reach the point where a further diminution occurs in demand. When that decline in demand occurs, there is only one answer: Labor is thrown out of work because you cannot produce and have those products piled high in storage. It takes money to keep labor and machinery occupied. The coal itself, after being removed from the mines, represents money and it is subject as well to deterioration. So, the ultimate to be expected on this side of the picture is an industry dying of dry rot.

On the other side of the problem is an equally important factor at work. It takes an immense amount of capital, massed in corporate form, to maintain a going concern whether that concern be coal mining, railroading or any other of our great industries. These industries operate largely on funds obtained through the sale of stocks and bonds of the corporation. But it has always been true, and human nature shows no signs of changing, that capital is not attracted to, it does not seek investment in, a declining industry. There you have a possibility at least of insufficient funds to carry through for the coal mining industry until it can readjust itself to the new place it must occupy in our economic structure. It will occpuy a new place because it will readjust itself, but it has not done so yet and the consequence of this condition is, in my opinion, coal mine labor is due for some very hard sledding in the next decade, notwithstanding the honeyed words of the politicians.

Blame Demagogues

Now, to turn to the part that government plays in bringing about present conditions. I have attempted to show how greed on the part of both capital and labor was responsible in a measure for building up what amounts to ill-will among many coal consumers. But the industry itself is not wholly responsible. Indeed, I rather hold the opinion that government is as much responsible for conditions as the industry itself, and when I say government, I must limit my reference to political demagogues. They always have been shortsighted and they are still shortsighted. They have been and they are now willing to sacrifice great masses of men and money for personal political gain of an entirely transitory character.

I have said before in these columns that the country is being sadly kidded—it is almost tragic—by the wonders of such parasitic organizations as TVA. The public ownership crowd have had a willing leader in President Roosevelt and his hangers-on have promoted his policies of public ownership without being honest as to the ultimate goal, or the eventual effect.

It is not alone that there have been millions wasted in the development of the Tennessee valley electrical mirage. It is not so much that taxpayers throughout the country will be paying a bill and paying it over and over again, that causes me to complain. It is not so much that the Tennessee Valley Authority will never be economically operated or become self-sustaining that brings this outburst. It is the fact that when a government, national, state or local, leads the way in this direction, it wields an influence upon a certain percentage of our population. Since public ownership advocates, in many instances, plain socialism, where in control of these agencies such as TVA, it is perfectly natural that they present to the taxpayers only the most rosy side of the story. They do not disclose to the taxpayers the adverse, the costly side, of the situation. Naturally then, hundreds of thousands of people believe that government can do this sort of thing better than private enterprise. They become convinced that private initiative has been turned into a spigot through which individual pocket books are drained. They do not realize that their pocketbooks are being drained much more heavily through public ownership by means of the taxes they take from you and me and everyone else. That is the sad story, made worse by the fact that through nearly four years the Washington government has been encouraging people to believe public ownership propaganda and distrust and destroy private investment.

Expensive Dream

Recent Treasury figures show that the Resettlement Administration has paid approximately $27,750,000 of its total appropriation of $134,518,000 for administrative expenses. That is, the organization which is the pride and joy of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell has paid that amount of money to job holders in trying to carry out the professor's impossible dream.

While the sum shown as used for administrative expenses by Professor Tugwell is small, compared to the billions of total waste in the Roosevelt administration, the proper way to consider this circumstance is on a percentage basis. If you take your pencil you can calculate that about 20 per cent or one-fifth of all the funds appropriated to Professor Tugwell for resettlement, has been used in management of his plan. It may be a fraction under 20 per cent, but it is so close that even the fastidious Mr. Tugwell would not quarrel about the difference.

One-fifth of an appropriation that is designed theoretically at least to serve for relief purposes is entirely too much. It is not as great perhaps as has happened with one or two other relief appropriations, but it has always been claimed that the Tugwell scheme was planned to reestablish those who have been resettled on a permanent basis. That is to say, it was planned that the bulk of the money should be used in providing those people with a fresh start in life, but I cannot see where they are getting the full measure of help intended if a lot of job holders sit around in Washington offices or in offices in various states using up one-fifth of the total layout of cash.

JUDGE YOUR OWN CONDUCT

"Beautification of the School Grounds" has been ringing in the pupil's ears for the last week. We do not know whether you have heard it or not, but we hope that you have for this is an important factor in the running and maintenance of a school.

Many times we hear that we are judged by our appearance. We believe this to be right. No person will have a very high opinion of a school, unless the building and grounds are kept in a manner pleasing to the eye.

Cleanliness is an important factor in the appearance and beautification of a school. No one is interested in looking at a school which is dirty and dingy. Unless we have the cooperation of all students in this matter of cleanliness, we will be unable to have it.

When some students finish lunch, they never look for the waste can but first throw the papers on the grounds. We should like to ask the students to stop this proceedure, for it mars the beauty of our grounds.

There are persons who do not believe in evolution, but when we hear of what many students have been doing, we will probably change our minds. These students, some of them in the higher grades, have been climbing in the trees on the campus like monkeys. In doing this they have broken off the limbs in some of the trees. This is another thing which is injurious to the appearance of the grounds. We urge the students not to try to do acrobatic in these trees.

Others seem to take great delight in seeing how many different pieces can be made out of a piece of paper and then throwing those pieces on the ground or floor. We think that this is poor self discipline.

We feel that it should be each person's job to try and keep our school and its grounds as neat as possible.

HOW ARE YOUR TEETH!

Beware of false teeth!

In order that all students may have their teeth examined, Dr. A. H. Able and Dr. A. R. Clark have offered a free examination to any pupil wishing it.

The students will have a chance to better their health by taking advantage of this opportunity. Dr. Able and Dr. Clark urge all students to see them as soon as possible lest minor defect become a larger one and cause the health to be impaired.

Half the football players have already had teeth pulled, and more are doing so now in preparation for their tilt with Sebring.

Better the rating of your school in health by bettering yourself.

Seniors Give Party In Favor of Witches

Many enjoyed the Hallowe'en party given by the Seniors last Monday in a vacant house on the Sebring road.

The rooms were decorated in a black and yellow color scheme, and dimly lighted with candles and jack-o-lanterns.

After several games, the guests were served punch, cookies, and mints. The chaperones were Mrs. Wilma Peden, Miss Erress Arant, and Dr. Stanley K. Reeves.

John Vilkaitis Elected Head Avon Student Council Body

Tommy Lou Greene Is Secretary Student Group

SECOND PRIMARY NEXT TUESDAY

Johnny Vilkaitis, senior, was elected president of the student government of the Avon Park high school and Tommy Lou Greene, sophomore, elected to secretary in the first election yesterday.

The office of vice-president was left vacant because there was not a majority of votes cast for any of the three candidates. Bill Windham, senior, received 117 votes, Faye Gordon, junior, received 97 votes, and Barbara Betts, junior, received 59 votes. The final election for vice-president will be held next Tuesday. Bill Windham and Faye Gordon will run for that office.

Johnny's winning by a large majority of 207 votes against 65 for his two rivals proves that he is looked upon as a leader. The students voice the sentiment that Johnny will continue to do as much for the school as he has done in the past.

Tommy Lou Greene received 210 votes against 44 for her rivals. Tommy Lou stands at the head of her class and is very popular among both girls and boys of the Avon Park high school. She writes a good hand and the many things she has already done for the school proves that she is capable of filling the office of secretary.

HOME EC CLASS HAS NEW HOME PROJECTS

The girls are trying on different colors and are finding the most becoming colors. If some of the girls are seen looking better in appearance, it will be the color selection, which have been made.

The first class of home economics went to Radcock's Furniture store Thursday to observe types, prices and construction of furniture. The trip proved very beneficial to each girl.

Red Devils Crush Haines City Team By Heavy Score

Although the Red Devils came out on the high end of the 13-0 score with Haines City last Friday, it did not prove that Haines City had a weak team.

The Red Devils kicked off to the Hornets. The Hornets' halfback received the ball on their 25 yard line bringing it up to their 37 yard line. They tried four hard but unsuccessful downs, The Red Devils took the ball with a few end runs and line bucks, but did not succeed in making a first in ten. Both teams shifted the ball back and forth neither gaining any yards. This ended the first quarter.

The Red Devils took the ball on the Hornets' 35 yard line at the beginning of the second quarter. On a series of line plays the Red Devils carried the "pig skin" into scoring position, Windham took the ball on an off tackle play carrying it across for the first touch down. The try point failed. The Red Devils kicked to the Hornets' 35 yard line before being stopped by Howell. The Hornets tried to make a first in ten in the first 3 downs but did not succeed so they punted, but Sherman was in on the punt blocking and covering it. This made the Red Devils feel so frisky that they carried the ball in scoring position in six downs. McClelland took the ball on an end run making the second touch down. McClelland rushed the line for the extra point.

At the beginning of the fourth period Coach Bissett sent in an entire new squad to relieve the first string. The ball was obtained by the Red Devils from a fumble on their own 85 yard line. Earlie Lynn received the ball on a wide end sweep and with strong blocking from the back field and the line boys carried the ball to the 20 yard line. The ball was brought back and the Red Devils were penalized 5 yards for being off sides.

Meriwether tried two successful passes which netted a first in ten but lost the ball on the third pass from an intercepption by a Hornet back. The ball kept seesawing back and forth until the end of the game.

LOCAL FOOTBALL OFFICIALS GIVE SERVICES IN HIGH SCHOOL GAMES

With the help of four local men Avon Park high school is able to have referees free of charge.

These men are out at the field helping because they still have that old "high school spirit" and are interested in the boys.

Any other referees would ask for pay to officiate and yet these men give their services free just because they want to see the school prosper.

Although C. B. Martin graduated at Madison A. and M. College in Georgia, he spent most of his high school time here. While he was in college, he became one of the best gridders in the south and was rated as all-southern halfback. He went to the University of Georgia for two years and was an outstanding athlete.

Park Anderson, a local man, went to school in South Carolina in his younger days and later became one of the University of Florida's best players. He has lived in Avon Park for the past few years and is one of the outstanding men of the town.

Curt Lawhon spent his high school days in some school unknown and visited many colleges including Georgia Tech, Clemson and practically all of the good colleges of the south but his visits were short, because he had a longing to see them all.

S. P. Durrance went to school here and was one of the most outstanding students. He went to a college in Arkansas where he became widely known. Last year Mr. Durrance was assistant coach at the high school in Gainesville.

These men should be congratulated for their splendor in handling the games. They are considered some of the best officials in the state. Avon Park high school appreciates the interest which these men have in the school.

Coach Bissett has secured out of town officials for tonight's game.

"Stape" Gooche, Southern conference football official, will referee. Gooche lives in Orlando and is rated as one of the best southern officials. Johnie Edison, freshman coach from the University of Tampa will umpire. Edison is scouting for material for the University of Tampa for next year. Joe Verri, who refereed last week's game and his assistant Marion Lee will hold the positions of headlinesman and field judge.

Last Friday night's football game was refereed by some of the best officials of any Ridge games. The referee was Joe Verri, former University of Florida football player who resides in Tampa. Marion Lee was umpire. Lee is a giant in size and went to three different schools in Florida, Miami, University of Florida, and University of Tampa. He was one of Tampa's best tackles.

Dental Examination To Be Held Saturday With Both Dentists

A thorough dental examination is to be given on Saturday morning from 10 to 12 o'clock for those pupils who were examined and had defective teeth when the first clinic was held at Avon Park high school.

The examination will not cost anything and an estimation on prices will be given the students at a lower rate. There is an extremely limited time that school students may go to the office.

Dr. O. G. Brewster will examine the eyes on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday from 9 until 3 o'clock.

"All students are requested to do this follow up work immediately, because we want to cooperate with these professional men who are giving their time," said Mrs. A. M. Morgan, chairman of the welfare committee.

Candidates Speak On Coming Election In Auditorium

"I came upon the stage to give my platform but it seems as though my opposing candidates have outlined it very ably," began John Vilkaitis last Friday morning to give the students and faculty the first laugh in the campaign for officers of the student government in Avon Park high school.

Charles Sherman actually led in the speaking, however. Next, came Cecil Clements, who made a clear, concise, convincing speech. John was the last of the presidential candidates to speak. The nominees for the vice presidency Barbara Betts, Clifford Windham and Fay Gordon declined to speak. The nominees for secretary also were not inclined to talk.

Charles Sherman asserted: "I am highly honored that you should choose to nominate me for the position of president and I will do my best to serve you all to the highest pep squad organized.

"I am in favor of the beautification of the school grounds, each room will have a plot to do what it wished with. It may plant trees, shrubs, grass, and at the end of the year the room which has the most well-kept plot will be awarded a plaque which I will obtain in some manner.

"I want the student government to go over with a bang and if elected will see that it does. I thank you."

Cecil Clements took the stand in behalf of his candidacy and gave the following points of why he should be elected t othe presidency.

"I will keep your needs foremost in my mind and serve you to the best of my ability. My grade record is comparable to either of my opponents. I approve of beautification of the grounds and building, and the enlargement of the school library.

"I favor better relation between the teachers and the students and better social relationships between the students themselves. I stand for better safety rules and better direction of traffic in the school zones. Your vote and support will be appreciated."

As John Vilkaitis mounted the stage to make his speech he received a large ovation from the students. John launched into his speech by telling the students who he was and the office for which he was running. "The success or failure of this movement depends entirely upon the person whom you put in office," he stated.

He remarked that he and his opponents had almost the same scholastic standing. In regard to his scholastic activities he said that he was a member of the glee club, band, and had played on the football team. "I am going to drop glee club, so that I may devote more time to my office, if elected."

The speech was concluded on this statement: "I appreciate the support already given me and I would like to gain the support and confidence of the whole student body."

GHOSTS FLIT TOMORROW NIGHT CELEBRATING ANCIENT HOLIDAY

"In the black furrow of a field
I saw an old witch-hare this night;
And she cocked her lissome ear,
And she eyed the moon so bright,
And she nibbled o' the green;
And I whispered, 'Whast! Witch-hare!'
Away like ghostie o'er the field
She fled, and left the moonlight there."
Hallowe'en!

The time that ghosts flit, goblins walk about, and jack-o-lanterns hang on every gate post has arrived.

Boys and girls have been thinking up good clean pranks to play on unsuspecting citizens, such as: soaping windows, ringing doorbells, and frightening children half out of their wits.

Prudent housewives have removed garbage cans and unhinged their gates and moved them to a safer place.

Costume parties are in full swing and various clubs are planning many interesting public celebrations. Thus giving the young and old the fun to be afforded by such an occasion.

This holiday was originally a Roman holiday in honor of Pamona, a goddess of fruit and trees, and was celebrated about the first of November. It was believed that on this night the spirits of those saints that had died, returned to their homes. For this reason food and delicacies were left out for these spirits and a special chair was carefully dusted and placed at the table for the convenience of these spook like creatures.

In this day and age instead of leaving food for the saints, one hardly realizes what Hallowe'en means. Knowing that the saints themselves will not walk our people have taken their places and play many childish pranks.

"You better be careful, 'cause the goblins will get you if you don't watch out."

"Ghost" Leads Avon Park Team In Annual Grid Classic Here

Tonight Two Weeks Belton Sees Devils In Bi-State Clash

Two weeks from tonight the colorful Belton, S. C., team will clash with the local high school eleven on Head Field.

This will probably be the first time a school of this size has made a contract with an out of state team.

Belton has practically the same standing as the Deville although Belton lost to Clinton high school by the tune of 18 to 0, while the local boys have lost but one which was dropped to Tampa College High School 7 to 6.

Belton's "Golden Warriors" will leave their home stamping grounds one week from this coming Wednesday with 20 players, two coaches and the coaches wives.

The boys will work out in Gainesville Wednesday and the Avon Park field Thursday night.

"I am asking the local people who can keep one or more of the boys Thursday and Friday nights to please see me. The football boys themselves are taking care of half of the Belton team, but we need more room," says Coach Herbert Bissett.

"Although we have been hit by the injury jinx, we have had good luck in all of our games except one," wrote Coach C. F. Radcliff. "I am glad to know that you have had a successful season thus far and I certainly hope it will continue to be so until you meet Belton."

Pete Chagaris, 207 pound tackle, and Wright Horton, a back, have been out of the lineup for the last two weeks but will be in shape for the game here.

Belton 30; McCormick 0.
Belton 0; Clinton 18.
Belton 13; Senaca 0.
Belton 33; Simponville 0.
Belton 7; Abbeville 0.
Totals 83; Opponents 18.

Ridge Conference Championship At Stake

Beat Sebring!

This is the aim of the Avon Park high school football team, and the "answer to many a maiden's prayer" not to mention the fervent wishes of the boys.

It is a well known fact that the Red Devils will clash with the Sebring Blue Streaks tonight at 8 o'clock, in the riproaringest, fightingest battle in Avon Park's gridiron history on Head Field.

To picture it now: the score is 36 to 0, and the Avon Park crowds are wild with the elation of victory.

Coach Herbert Bissett has been putting his boys through an intensive week of practice, and has worked up a special defense in preparation for the year's feature football game.

The old Devil himself will probably leave his perch on the school building and besport himself to Head Field and witness the parade of touchdowns, goading the boys on with his indomitable spirit. "Ghost" Windham will be out in full force.

The Avon Park seniors and juniors have promised the Sebring seniors and juniors a dance if the Devils lose. Sebring reciprocates.

As far as the Avon Park team is concerned, this is a deciding game, and if it is won, it will place the home team in first place in the Ridge Conference. If Sebring loses, it will put that team completely out of the running for the title.

The probable lineup will be Avon Park: Sherman, Gibbons, end; C. Wild, H. Wild, tackles; Howell, Prescott or Belin, guards; Clements, center; Gribble and Merriwether, halfbacks; McClelland, quarterbacks; Windham, fullback.

P.-T. A. to Operate Lunch Room

The lunch room at the Avon Park school which was formerly operated by Mrs. T. G. Haynie is now being run by the P. T. A.

It is being maintained under the capable management of Mrs. A. M. Morgan and Mrs. Walter S. Betts. Mrs. Haynie is employed by the P. T. A. on a salary basis.

Everyone agrees that the food which is served is better than that which was served before the P. T. A. took it over. The price of meat now costs 5 cents instead of 6 cents, and the bread is being furnished free. At the present there are 90 lunches which are given free to underprivileged children.

Mr. B. Kirkwood, who runs a poultry farm, donated three chickens to the lunch room. Mr. J. M. McCord donated a crate of oranges to be used for orange juice.

Teachers, who formerly had to stand in line and wait, are now served at tables.

Almost all of the help used in the lunch room is being done by those students who are working on lunch scholarships.

Dr. Stanley K. Reeves, principal, says this is another forward step taken by the school this year, because this is the system which they are using in a majority of the schools of the state in lunch room management.

Sixth Grade Group Holds "Book Week"

"Book Week" was held last week by Miss Louise Pittman's sixth grade home room.

Billy Helm, class librarian, reported that 32 books were turned into him during the week.

Jack Head Jr. was presented with a prize for having turned in eight books during the week. Others who brought in one or more books were presented with a red and white ribbon.

A motto is to be placed over the bookshelves as soon as the proper arrangements can be made. It is believed that this will make the bookshelves more inviting and interesting, according to the committee.

FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER

FLOYD GIBBONS ADVENTURE CLUB

Hello Everybody

"Miracle on a Bridge"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

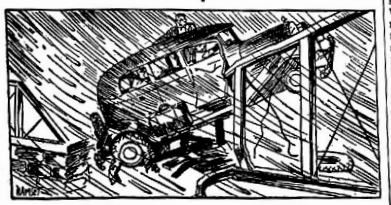
NOW it's a well known fact, boys and girls, that adventurers have adventures, but why is it nobody ever gives a thought to adventurers' wives? They have adventures too—particularly if they travel around with their husbands like Grace Stanley of Fairview, N. J.

Mrs. Stanley is the wife of the late Col. King Stanley, a traveler and adventurer of long standing. During the four years that she traveled with him, she says she had enough adventure to fill an encyclopedia. But the one that gave her the biggest thrill—and also the worst fright—happened down in the wild and woolly state of Texas in the spring of 1926.

Grace Stanley and the colonel were taking a trip by automobile from Texas to Shreveport, La. Just beyond Marshall, Texas, they ran into a severe storm—and when storms are severe down on the Texas plains, they're severe, and no mistake. This one was a combination of thunder, lightning, rain and hail The rain came down in sheets. There was no cover in sight, and nothing to do but go on.

They were getting close to the state line when the car came to a bridge spanning a deep cut through which ran the tracks of the K. C. and S. railroad. As they hit the end of that bridge, Grace heard a DEAFENING CRACK. A sudden flash of light almost blinded her. The car came to a sudden stop and the air was filled with a sulphurous smell. Lightning! Had it struck them? With her heart in her mouth, Grace raised her eyes.

There were three people in the car—her husband and the driver in the front seat and Grace herself in the rear. The men, up front, were all right. Grace breathed a sigh of relief. But at the same time something inside of her was telling her to sit still—not to move even so much as a single muscle. Without moving her head she turned her eyes to the right. The sight she saw there FROZE THE BLOOD in her veins.



The Driver Got Out on the Running Board.

The bolt of lightning had ripped away the entire corner of the bridge. The car was standing on three wheels, teetering precariously over a fifty-foot chasm, its fourth wheel—the left rear one—hanging FAR OUT OVER SPACE.

Then the Car Started to Sag.

The men in the front seat weren't moving, either. They sat stiff and motionless, with grim, set expressions on their faces. Then, slowly, the car began to sag to the right—toward the broken, twisted wrecked side of the bridge.

There wasn't any time to waste. Quickly they talked the matter over—decided the only thing that could save them was to shift as much weight as possible to the left side of the car. Grace, who was in the rear seat on the right side, directly over the dangling wheel, couldn't move because the seat beside her was filled with luggage. It was up to the driver and the colonel to do the shifting.

The car settled a bit more. Grace held her breath as she felt herself sinking. The driver opened the door, slid over in his seat and got out on the running board. Both he and the colonel were big men—both of them weighed in the neighborhood of two hundred pounds—and Grace found herself breathing a prayer of thankfulness for that. In an agony of suspense she watched while the driver got out and her husband slid over in the seat to take his place behind the wheel.

"All this time," says Grace, "the car kept on settling down toward the right. It was probably only a minute or two, but it seemed like a thousand years. I hugged as close to the baggage on the left as I could, but still the car settled. It looked as if we were going over in spite of all our efforts."

Saved by Truck Driver With a Rope.

The colonel, too, was climbing out on the running-board now—shifting his weight as far to left as possible. Still the car sagged, and there was nothing more they could do. If they stepped from the running board the car would go over. If Grace tried to move, it might furnish just the vibration needed to send the car off the bridge and down to the tracks fifty feet blow. It was a heartbreaking situation. Death was staring her in the face, and nobody dared to do anything about it.

But at that same moment help was in sight. A small truck shot around a corner from the opposite direction, and the driver saw what had happened. He stepped on the gas and came speeding toward them.

Again, Grace was afraid to breathe. Would the vibration set up by the truck send them over the side?

But the driver of that truck had a lot of presence of mind. Also, he had a rope. He leaped from his seat with the rope in his hand, looped it around the front of the car and then made it fast to the far side of the bridge.

With the rope holding the car, Grace could get out. She and the colonel went around to the back of the automobile to join the truck driver, who was excitedly crying that nothing but a miracle had saved them. The fellow was right, too. The lightning had curled up the ironwork of the bridge like so much straw. One of the curls had ripped off both right tires and completely ruined one side of the car. Another curl had caught under the car itself—and that was the only thing that had kept them from going over.

Bats Are Not Stupid

Bats are not nearly as stupid creatures as you might think them to be, even though they do hang themselves upside down when they want to sleep. Its delicate fur is red as bright iron rust and its wings open up like an umbrella. When the bat is handled it squeaks and protests in a highly pitched voice, but according to people who have studied bats, the animal may make many other sounds which human ears are not able to hear. It is believed, too, that bats have a number of senses which man does not possess, which enables the nightflyers to fly rapidly around all sorts of obstructions without coming into collision with them. Bats live largely on insects, although their tiny sharp teeth would be able to make a good meal on something more solid.

Lives Without Eating

An animal which can live for years without eating is on exhibit at the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. It is the olm, one of the three known species of cave salamanders. Found only in the deep, lightless caves of Europe, the creature has a snake-like body about a foot long. Its four legs are set widely apart and are almost useless. This doesn't bother the olm, for it is one of the most sluggish animals known, spending most of its life lying motionless upon a rocky ledge, or among the stones at the bottom of a stream. With the exception of its gills, which are red, the olm is perfectly white, but if exposed to the sun will turn jet black. The eyes, since it does not need them, have degenerated and are completely hidden under the skin.

Army Looms Tough for Navy, and Lion Will Roar Plenty

IF CONGRESS were in session right now the duty of all humane and forward - looking taxpayers would be quite plain. Letters could be rushed to the guardians of the public purse urging that Navy forthwith be provided with six battleships, a dozen cruisers and as many submarines as any little admiral's heart desires.

Of course that would cost a pretty penny but it would be worth it. This is a nation which yearns to keep its bluff seadogs happy and I greatly fear no other sop will be quite so effective in easing the discontent which must settle upon Annapolis sooner than usual this season.

I mention this as the result of viewing Army in some of its recent football enterprises. The Cadets seemed far better than they have seemed in any early recent season. What is more the line—the runt, right guard Kimbrell, stands six feet and weighs 175 pounds—has such a sheer, raw abundance of power that even a Pitt coach would be awed at the sight.

Naturally Gar Davidson's team is, at the moment, far from a smoothly functioning machine. General Pershing had that same trouble at the start of the World war when he was tossed 2,000,000 stalwart youngsters and stacked up against outfits which had been practicing for years. But the power and the reserves are there—where they mean the most in football—and it remains only to be seen whether proper plays can be provided along with backs to execute them.

Against Lou Little's Columbia Army showed little in the way of a running attack. This partly could have been due to the greasy field, the unwillingness to display cherished formations to eagerly peeping scouts, and to the fact that both teams had quick success from the "grand slam for touchdown or nothing" formula. Monk Meyer is a very good passer and he was better favored than his equally able opponent, Sid Luckman, in having skyscraping wings to throw from. Then, too, his coaches seemed to have stressed this aerial preparation more than did the Columbia mentors who provided a better balanced attack.

Lou Little

In the second period, for instance, the way was paved for the tying touchdown by means of an aerial connection with Wilson standing on the line. On this play one side of the line stays in position until the ball is tossed to the receiver, then forms for interference down the field. Greasy Neale has been using it at Yale for several seasons—indeed the Elis scored a touchdown against Cornell with it.

It is not. It merely is a few degrees and seconds removed from the border line where illegality begins. Like that short, rifle toss over the line—first used in proper winning style by W. and J. years ago and again properly handled by Meyer and Hipps in time of need.

Defensively Army made mistakes—in mechanics as well as in cerebration—which could very well lose late season games. It is probable such defects can be remedied within another game or two. The real weakness right now exists in the backfield and there can be some wonder it was not long ago noted that Stromberg at right end has more real driving power than any Cadet ball carrier.

Columbia's problem is in the line, usually the place where Little-coached teams are their best. Lackman, who seems likely to be the most popular football hero in local baseball parks this fall, needs more time to acquire big league savvy on the defense. That largely is because he can be drawn out of position.

Furey also is a back who would win the esteem of almost any coach for all that he weighs less than 170 pounds. Perhaps he does not catch the eye as quickly as did one or two other members of the famous Columbia football family but he is alert on the defense and may be the best interferer the Lions have had in several seasons.

Schulze, the rangy end, is another athlete who strengthens the old grad convictions that Columbia is back on its feet this year.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: FRANK KEARNS new trainer on Warren Wright's Calumet Farm Stable, should know how to get his horses away from the post. He once was an assistant starter . . . Frank Collins, Brooklyn newspaper man has missed only forty home games since the Dodgers opened their new park in 1912 . . . Henry McLemore spent two years studying medicine at McGill university before he decided to become a celebrated sports writer instead . . . Pop Foster probably is the fastest talking of all fight seconds when he is operating in Jimmy McLarnin's corner.

If Connie Mack gets hungry again this winter, the Yankees will offer numerous well-sugared doughnuts for Pinkey Higgins. They have a notion Pinkey might do very well in their second-base show window on Tony Lazzeri's days off during the next few years . . . Cal Rainey, crack rider only a year ago when he was winning with King Saxon, weighs 130 pounds now.

Eddie Ainsmith, once famed as a catcher and as the best of all baseball fighters, is coming back to the big time. He has done so well as a Southern association umpire that the American League now controls his future . . . Every horse likes carrots but only Pompoon can eat them by the bunch . . . George Smith, the eminent box office man now reunited with Mike Jacobs, is no chance taker. He wears both Roosevelt and Landon buttons . . . They led another lamb—this time a curly haired one from the Argentine—into the pit recently against Joe Louis. The slaughter took place as scheduled, in the third round. The lamb, by the way, was named Jorge Brescia. If it had not been for the necessity of having a fitting sacrifice for the opening of the Hippodrome sports temple ho might—with another year of the six-rounders by which he was fattened—have become a fair fighter.

Pat Malone, Johnny Murphy and the other members of the Yankee bullpen gang are such modest citizens that they refuse to admit it. But little Jimmy De Foe, who runs errands for them out there in their left field station, is very, very happy about that $85 they presented to him as his cut of the World series . . . Manhattan's football players are complaining out loud about having to perform at night. They insist most of them have caught colds.

Irish Are Said to Have Backfield Ills

In spite of early season scoring, Notre Dame insiders claim the Irish have backfield trouble. But you can pretty well depend on it that Elmer Layden is a good enough doctor to remedy the ailments before it becomes acute . . . Soccer folks don't boot any chances to boost their game. For instance, John J. Doherty coaches the Flushing Juniors and the St. John's university team in addition to being secretary of the Empire Junior league. And Tommy McManus, secretary of the Gallopin Gaels of St. Mary's Celtics, is treasurer of the Metropolitan league and delegate to the New York State association.

Elmer Layden

Jim Tierney, long secretary of the Giants, hopes to return to baseball next season. He has strong support for his bid for the International League presidency . . . Foreign spies report that several English thoroughbreds are suffering from "heel bug." This is a form of athlete's foot and the germ is picked up on the turf, usually in the fall. What is rare in this country . . . Although he was one of baseball's best third basemen for fourteen years, Joe Dugan never once handed the ball to the pitcher. Thought it was bad luck . . . Jack McGrath, the United States Narcotic Squad man, gave Joe McCarthy his first glimpse of New York. That was in 1904 when McGraw refused to let his Giants appear against the Red Sox in the World Series. McGrath, long a baseball power in The Bronx, got together an all-star team that included Joe McGinnity and Rube Oldring. Then when he needed a second baseman he sent to Germantown for the smart, active youngster named McCarthy, who had not yet taken up baseball as a profession.

In addition to being cousins of Sports Columnist Dick Vidmer, the prize fighting Simmses of Cleveland (Eddie and Frankie) can play all kinds of musical instruments . . . Max Machos. Max Schmeling's trainer, rarely finds words of praise for a European fighter other than the Black Uhlan. But Machos, on his last visit, remarked that he would like to have Gunnar Barlund, the Finn. Gunnar demonstrated why recently when he knocked out Sandy McDonald in two rounds at the Hippodrome.

Dean Watkeys, who has ranked tops among football officials during thirty years and 400 games, now is viewing the sport from a new angle. He takes an autumn Saturday off now and then to enjoy the thrills coming to a cash customer . . . Wrestling Promoter Jack Curley pays his own expenses while touring with Jack Dempsey and making speeches for F. D. R. . . . Buddy Hassett, whose dad runs one of The Bronx's most active Democratic clubs, makes a political speech almost as well as he plays first base.

Keystone State

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WHEN historic Georgetown, D. C., still was the metropolis of the north bank of the Potomac and the city of Washington was little more than a beautiful plan on paper, a bridge was thrown across Rock creek to connect the two.

There were 13 stones on the face of the arch of the bridge. Upon them were inscribed the abbreviated names of the 13 states that had created and successfully defended the Union. On the keystone of that arch were the letters "Pa."

Whether that was the origin of the nickname of the Keystone State or only testimony of its earlier use remains a matter of debate, but the sobriquet was aptly descriptive of its role in American history and industry.

The congress that gave America its Declaration of Independence met, deliberated, and acted on Pennsylvania's receptive soil. The convention that forged the Nation's Constitution labored amid that Commonwealth's genial atmosphere.

The financial wizard who averted the economic disaster which threatened to overwhelm the young nation was that patriotic Pennsylvania banker, Robert Morris.

The fine old philosopher and master of humanized science who won international recognition for the struggling child among nations, and brought us alliance with France, with history-changing consequences, was the revered and picturesque Ben Franklin.

So it has been through the generations. When ship sails no longer met the demands of maritime commerce, Robert Fulton, a native of Pennsylvania, laid the foundations of steam navigation around the world.

Development of Its Industries.

The industries of the Atlantic seaboard become so vast that wood no longer served for fuel, and Pennsylvanians developed their coal resources.

Pittsburgh's Scotch-Irish empire builders expanded the iron industry to a point where Pennsylvania practically equipped the factories of the Mississippi valley and produced both the rails and the rolling stock of the nation's railways.

When whale oil and other animal fats and oils no longer yielded adequate lubricants and illuminants, it was in Pennsylvania, at Titusville, that Col. E. L. Drake drilled the first oil well, thus helping revolutionize the world's ways of living and making possible the present motorized transportation.

Pennsylvania's industrial pioneers inaugurated the reign of steel, thus beginning in the era of skyscrapers in a thousand cities, and the speeding of traffic on the railroads of the country.

To the present hour, the land of William Penn goes forward as one of the foremost industrial communities of the world. Before the depression it was making one-fifth of the world's electrical machinery, refining one-sixth of its sugar, mining a like share of coal, and producing an equal proportion of the world's steel.

The federal census of manufactures shows that among the nation's 51 major industries Pennsylvania ranks first in 17 and holds third place or better in 15 others.

In 42 of the nation's products its factories lead those of every other state. From artificial limbs to zinc products these wares of Pennsylvania's primacy run the gamut of the alphabet. In such diverse industries as coal mining, chocolate and cocoa manufacture, pig-iron production and silk making, steel rolling and wool pulling, cement grinding and lace weaving, coke burning and hosiery knitting, Pennsylvania is first by a wide margin.

Romance In Its Story.

Pennsylvania's history is filled with stirring chapters. The story of its wild life, from the days of primal abundance to virtual extinction and back again to abundance under intelligent human protection, is a true romance of forest and stream. The tenacity with which the many religious sects, drawn there by the broad tolerance of the founder, have adhered steadfastly to their cherished rites and customs, and frequently their costumes, consitutes a fascinating story of quaint survivals in a progressive age.

Within Pennsylvania's borders are more people born of native white parents than in any other state of the Union. It has nearly a million more than New York, its closest rival, although the total population of the Empire State is approximately three million greater. In fact, the people of native-white parentage in Pennsylvania exceed the total population of any other state with the exception of New York, Ohio, Illinois, Texas and California.

The Pennsylvanian's tendency to migrate is no new phenomenon. For more than a century and a half its restless citizen families have been moving from the old home rooftree, and, with their children and their children's children, have pushed out to the changing frontiers of the country. Their first outpouring was in the colonial period, when large numbers moved down into the Shenandoah valley of Virginia and into western North Carolina and eastern Tennessee.

This was the migration which carried the Lincolns and the Boones, the Caldwells and the Calhouns, the Prestons and the Christians, the Sevier and the Breckenridges, to say nothing of that large group of Lutheran, Reformed, Dunkard, and Mennonite pioneers who settled in the Virginia valley and its highlands.

As Ohio and Kentucky and the states beyond opened up to settlement, migrants from Pennsylvania turned westward in regiments; there they were joined by sons and daughters of their uncles and aunts, who had so largely settled western Virginia, eastern Tennessee, and western North Carolina—ever onward to help open new areas of plenty.

Some day a historian will write the saga of the role of Pennsylvania and its descendants in the settlement of the Mississippi valley, and America will realize the debt it owes to the fecund folk born in or descended from Penn's Land who spread over the continent and played such a vital role in the greatest of our valleys.

Leads in Home Ownership

Although Pennsylvania has furnished more migrants than any other state in the Union, both in the colonial era and up to the present time, the state still America's foremost land of home owners. The last census shows more dwellings occupied by their owners than in any other state, a total of 1,198,000 owner-occupied homes. Even New York with one-third more population loses rank in this regard.

When William Penn came to America, he had title to some 28,000,000 acres of woodland, mountain, and dale. For a dozen decades these forests yielded only to the settler's ax and his new-ground ripping plow. Then larger towns and cities began to grow and there was born an insistent demand for lumber.

This havoc went on until there was left in all the 28,000,000 but a beggarly 10,000,000 acres of virgin timber. The lumberman had left his tree tops and his sawdust piles to make the most dangerous of fire hazards on millions of acres and to render a thousand streams unfit for fish life.

Floods became more frequent, since barren lands cannot hold back water and give it a chance to soak into the ground. Low-water stages of streams occurred oftener; springs in barren lands cannot collect sufficient water to keep the streams fed in dry weather. Fish by the millions perished when streams were transformed for long periods into dry river and creek beds.

Forest Lands Restored.

Then the thinking citizens of Pennsylvania awakened to the menace the wasteful methods had wrought. State agencies and private interests joined in reforestation and in protection against forest fires.

Today one finds that thirteen million acres in the Keystone State are accounted to be forest land. A major portion is in young trees. Wander along the Delaware river, through the Poconos, follow both branches of the Susquehanna and cross their watersheds, travel the Roosevelt highway across the state from east to west, dip down to Emporium, Williamsport, and Jersey Shore, climb Bald Eagle, Tuscarora, Laurel Hill, and South Mountain, and you will begin to understand why some one has proposed that Pennsylvania be renamed the Sapling State—because of its tremendous number of young trees.

Reforestation is beginning to bear major fruit. Floods are becoming rarer and less destructive, for water is absorbed instead of rushing pell-mell riverward. Springs constantly fed by seeping water in turn fill the streams with a more constant current. Fish are accordingly increasing in substantial numbers due to steadier stream flow, seasonal restrictions, bag limits, and artificial propagation.

State Press Comment

(Rosslyn, Va., Chronicle)

There has been much comment by Christian ministers about the lack of interest of Mr. Roosevelt both in his private and public life in spiritual matters. One eminent minister recently declared that he had shown no interest as President or as a citizen in the church and what it stands for. The White House has been declared from many pulpits as a godless place, where religion is not known. There has certainly been nothing reverent that has ever echoed from the White House walls in this administration. After three years in office President Roosevelt invites the help of the clergy. Nothing could be so unfortunate to Christian people of this country as for the clergy to mix in political matters. Nothing could more quickly dethrone the clergy than the prostitution of the pulpit to the purposes of Mr. Roosevelt. About all the replies he has received to date have spurned his invitation. They see in it a brazen, shameless, inexcusable attempt to smoke-screen the army of atheists that he has brought to Washington and put in lucrative office, into places of power at higher salaries than the struggling congregations are able to pay their ministers, higher than are paid 99 per cent of the clergymen to whom he has sent his letters.

Some Questions.

Had the clergy to whom he wrote and those who made replies known the real Franklin Delano Roosevelt they would have been less temperate in their answers. They should ask him to answer these questions:

1. Why are your advisers notorious atheists, communists and socialists, who come at your invitation to tell you how the government can best serve the people?

2. Why were notorious socialists, communists and atheists appointed to about all the important boards of the NRA?

3. Why was one of the highest appeal boards of the NRA made up of three notorious communist-atheists?

4. Why was a socialist made head of the NRA?

5. Why have men whose names are published in "Who Is Who In Radicalism" and whose names appears in the "Red Network," and who are known as men who preach the overthrow of this government and atheism given high place in every department and bureau of this government?

6. Why do you constantly advise with Felix Frankfurter, a notorious socialist, who was denounced by President Theodore Roosevelt and who condemned the Department of Justice in 1925 for the prosecution of communists and atheists preaching the overthrow of this government?

6. Why did you put Clarence Darrow at the head of the Review Board of the NRA, the highest position in the NRA, knowing that he was a defender for the past thirty years of all the indicted who have sought to overthrow this government, and himself a notorious atheist and on every important committee of socialism, communism, and atheism in this country?

8. Why did you not repudiate the invitation of the socialist and communist convention of Reds and atheists that invited you to join them on October 5, 1933, in New York when their leaders stated that they had visited you at the White House "and looked him (you) over and found him good."

9. Why are you the idol of the communists and atheists in this country and referred to frequently in the "Communist Daily Worker," and by the communist atheists of national repute as their friend?

Why Bullitt?

10. Why did you appoint William C. Bullitt, a notorious socialist, who married the widow of a notorious communist, ambassador to Russia?

11. Did you not have a communist atheist, barred as a communist from Germany, as your overnight guest at the White House?

12. Did you not appoint as a Lieutenant Commander in the Naval Reserves Vladimir Karapetoff, a radical socialist accused of having spread socialist and communist propaganda in schools and colleges?

13. Did you not appoint Frederick Clemson Howe chairman of the Consumers Board of the AAA, who was shown by a Congressional investigation to be connected with Anna Goldman, and other anarchists and communists and atheists?

14. Did you not select the slogan "New Deal" from a communist-socialist book from which nearly all your legislation put through Congress was in the socialist platform of 1932?

15. Did not the author of this book, which you used as a model for the alphabet bureaus, say in this book: "It is a pity that the road to revolution is temporarily closed?"

16. Why did you appoint to the Chicago Mediation Board of the NRA the radical Robert M. Hutchins, who said he did not know why communism should not be a student activity at the University of Chicago, and that he taught Marxism and Leninism himself?

17. Why did you appoint the outstanding radicals Leo Wallman and Sidney Hillman to the Labor Advisory Board when you knew their activities?

18. Why was Rose Schneiderman, Russian-born socialist, appointed at a high salary on the National Labor Advisory Board, with two other nationally known socialists?

Who Is Douglas?

19. Why was Pal Douglas, whose radical record is published in the "Red Network," brought by you to Washington as your adviser on the NRA?

20. Why did you appoint a socialist, William E. Dodd, ambassador to Germany?

21. Why did you appoint John F. St. Clair of the communist Garland Fund Committee to membership on the NRA Review Board with the socialist atheist Clarence Darrow?

22. Why did you pardon 1500 Reds convicted of seditious activities against the United States government following your recognition of communist-atheist Russia?

23. Why did you pardon Corporal Robert Osman convicted in 1931 of communicating military secrets to communists?

24. Why did you support Upton Sinclair, notorious communist atheist, and on the International Advisory Board of Moscow's Communist International Literature, for governor of California?

25. Why did you write a letter to the widow of Morris Hilquit, deploring his death in October, 1933, when you knew that he had been a notorious communist atheist, preaching for 35 years the overthrow of this government, and engaged in spreading atheism in the schools and colleges of this country?

26. Why have you brought so many socialists, communists and atheists to Washington and put them in high office?

27. Why do you keep Rexford Tugwell in office knowing his connections for many years with radical socialist magazines, and organizations preaching revolutionary socialism?

28. What have you ever done or has your administration ever done, to stop the teaching and spread of revolutionary communism and atheism in this country?

29. What help have you ever offered for the investigation of communist activities and the spread of atheism and Moscow propaganda in this country?

DEBT FOLLY EXPOSED!

New Deal orators insist that the thirteen-billion-dollar national debt increase during the present administration is in reality only eight billion dollars because of "recoverable assets."

Professor Raymond Moley, who played an important role in the formulative stages of the New Deal, offers a critical analysis of this claim in the current issue of the magazine Today.

Mr. Moley is skeptical of the ability of the federal treasury to recover five billion dollars from the available "assets."

But he is more concerned with the current treasury policy in disposing of the money it does collect from this source.

The treasury is NOT APPLYING REPAYMENTS ON DEBTS to the government to reduction of the national debt. IT IS SPENDING THIS MONEY FOR THE CURRENT EXPENSES OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Moley wonders how this practice would work in private business.

"Suppose a corporation treated income from liquidation of capital assets in the same way as current income. Would it not be giving its stockholders a false picture of its affairs? Are not Democratic speakers leaving the taxpayer to discover, ultimately, the melancholy fact that gross debt has become in reality net debt?"

The assumption by President Roosevelt in his Pittsburgh speech that the national debt will be reduced by increased income instead of by decreased expenditures comes in for further criticism by Mr. Moley.

Pointing out that the national income includes government expenditures which are part of the national ability to repay deficits, he writes:

"Such a fallacy leads to the fantastic suggestion that, when the national deficits get beyond control, the national income will continue to rise and the nation will be prosperous beyond all precedent."

The nation is indebted to Mr. Moley for this exposure of the preposterous theory that for the more the nation owes the better off it is.

As he indicates, a permanent national debt in excess of thirty-five billion dollars would be the crushing burden imposed by this insane policy.—Atlanta Georgian.

Duck Hunting Zones Changed

Tallahassee, Oct. 22.–The statement that the duck season has been fixed at 30 days fails to take note of the fact that the season in the United States has been lengthened by some 18 days over the season of the previous year, though shooting is held to 30 days in each state. The lengthening of the season as a whole was accomplished by shifting from 2 zones to 3, as shown by a comparison of Federal Regulations for 1935 and 1936.

Under the provision for duck shooting in 1935, the season opened in the northern zone Oct. 21-Nov. 20, both dates inclusive; in the southern Nov. 20-Dec. 19, both dates inclusive. This gave a season of 58 days in the United States. For 1936 the season in the northern zone is Oct. 10-Nov. 8; in the intermediate zone, Nov. 1-Nov. 30; in the southern zone, Nov. 26-Dec. 25. This gives a season of 76 days for 1936 in the United States. This addition of 18 shooting days of the duck season is hard to reconcile with the urgent need for protection of these wonderful birds. There is more to this question of the duck season than supplying targets for the gun of hunters.

Ladies' Aid Meeting.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational church held their regular all day meeting Thursday at the church.

World's Mightiest Circus Coming Soon

With the most impressive and brilliant seven-ring-and-stage program in its history, the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus, which will exhibit in Tampa, Wednesday, Nov. 11 offers this season, as a sensational super-feature, a herd of African pigmy elephants, the first ever to set foot on this continent. These ting tuskers are not babies, but tiny tuskers are not babies, but elephants, the rarest animals on the face of the earth. Accompanying them is a herd of miniature African pongurs, the world's smallest beasts of burden. The pigmy elephants have proven the greatest attraction the Big Show has ever placed before the public, not even excepting its presentations in the past of the disc-lipped Ubangis, the giraffe-necked women from Burma, the sacred white elephant of Siam, Jumbo, Tom Thumb and Goliath, the sea elephant.

Among the scores of new features, to say nothing of the new importations from Europe and Asia, including the incredible Naitto troupe, the Royal Bokara troupe, the Imperial Viennese equestrian troupe, the great Frederico and a free running horse, pony and elephant liberty act of sixty members, is Col. Tim McCoy, the screen's most outstanding western star, the head of his congress of rough riders of the world—Cossacks, cowboys, cowgirls, vaqueros, Sioux and Black feet warriors and Australian bushrangers. Col. McCoy, plainsman, cavalry officer in the U. S. Army Reserve and friend of the Indians, is the idol of American boys and girls, and he will be seen in both the main performances and the wild west.

The Greatest Show on Earth heads into this territory on four long railroad trains of 100 cars, with 1600 people, 7 herds of full-sized elephants actors, 1009 menagerie animals and 700 horses. Its tented city covers 14 acres of ground. There are 31 large tents, including the world's largest big top, seating 16,000 persons.

This is the peak season for youth and beauty among the 800 world famous arenic artists with the show. In the air, in the three rings, on the four stages and in the quarter-mile hippodrome track will be seen hundreds of pretty girls. In the 60-girl aerial ballet, the most beautiful mid-air display ever produced, there are beauties that evoke columns of newspaper comment wherever the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus exhibits.

Card of Thanks.

We are deeply gratful and take this means of expressing our appreciation to all who in any way assisted in the search for our unfortunate brother; and also to all those who, like ourselves, could only wait, hope and pray for their success. Your sympathy has helped to lighten the burden.

Especially do we wish to thank the members of the Sheriff's office, the American Legion, the Coast Guard Service, the officer and members of the CCC camp and all others for their splendid assistance.

Fourth Grader Writes Of Imaginary Trip to The Belgian Congo

Note:—The following, is a composition by Harold Bowman, in which he tells of an imaginary trip to the Belgian Congo taken by the members of Miss Harrell's room.

A TRIP TO BELGIAN CONGO
(By Howard Bowman)

September 20th, Miss Harrell's room took a trip to Belgian Congo. We took a trip to New York in an airplane. As we were traveling to New York, we saw little roads and little houses. When we reached New York, we saw big buildings, street cars, and boats.

We found a big steamboat that was going to Matudi. We got on the big steamboat and sailed out. After a while it was dark. We got ready to go to bed. The night was very short. The next morning we saw land. We saw Matudi. Some natives came out in small boats to bring us to shore.

We got on a train at Matudi and went to Leapoldville. On our way we saw monkeys, birds and flowers. We finally reached Leapoldville.

When we got off the train, we saw some trading stations. There were natives trading things to the white people.

At Leapoldville we got on a steamer that burned wood. At 4 o'clock it was dark. We put up little cots and nets to keep the poisonous insects off us. The next morning we got off.

We got into some teapoys and traveled through the forest. We finally reached a clear spot in the forest. It was Bombo's village. When we reached Bombo's village his father wasn't there. He had gone hunting. That night they had a feast.

In a few days it was time to say goodby. We crawled into our teapoys.

After a while we were at the trading station. Bombo's father had some things to trade to the white people. I guess Bombo's father took back some things to his family.

MURDER MASQUERADE

SYNOPSIS

Mary Avery, a widow who lives in the harbor town of Satuit, Mass., with two negro maids, Sarah Darbe and Bessie Williams, writes a manuscript describing the famous Second Head murder, which occurred on her estate. Next to Mary live Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stow who every year give a summer masquerade party. One of the guests of this function is murdered. Nearby live Dr. and Mrs. Geary and their married daughter Edith and her husband Alfred Bray; Doctor Myron Marden and his step-granddaughter, Caro Prentiss, a beautiful young girl who was born in France. Next live Paul and Lora Eames and their daughter Molly. Molly was engaged to the murdered man, Ace Blaikie. She had previously been engaged to Walter Treadwell, who had been Blaikie's secretary, but the engagement was suddenly broken and he had left town. Other neighbors are the Fairweather sisters, Flora, a hopeless invalid, and Margaret. All but the latter two attend the masquerade. Mary's eight-year-old niece, Sylvia Sard, is visiting her for the summer. The wooded part of Mary's estate is called the Spinney. In it is a tiny log cabin, called the Little House. On the day of the masquerade excitement is high. Mary decided to take Sylvia, who is an unusually observant child. Caro Prentiss and Molly Eames drop in during the afternoon. Molly seems pre-occupied. Soon a car arrives and Blaikie, Doctor Marden and Bruce Henson, a friend of Ace's, alight. Molly is impatient to leave and they all excuse themselves. At the party Sylvia identifies each of the masked guests as they arrive. Ace comes garbed as Julius Caesar. Molly Eames appears as a Snow Queen, accompanied by a man in armor whom Sylvia identifies as Walter Treadway. They dance together continuously. Caro Prentiss and Marden arrive dressed in Revolutionary costumes, the doctor wearing jeweled shoe buckles. When the guests unmask, Ace, Walter and Molly have disappeared.

It was one of the contradictions in Ace Blaikie's contradictory character that he preferred little girls to little boys. He had an enchanting "way" with little girls and this enchanting "way" had no relation whatever to the fascinating "way" he had with older women. For Ace Blaikie had always been attractive to women—always.

"I'm sorry Doctor Ace didn't come back and take his charade off," Sylvia insisted. Afterwards, I was to recall that Sylvia had said twice that Ace Blaikie had gone away, twice that she was sorry he had not come back. At that moment of course it made no impression. It did make an impression however, when she said, "Walter didn't come back either."

I said, "Sylvia you will not say anything to anybody about Walter's being there."

"I won't, Aunt Mary," she promised me.

Sarah Darbe came in as Sylvia went out—fresh linen for my bed over her arm. "I've drawn your bath water, Mrs. Avery," she said, handing me my kimono.

When I came out of the bath, my room had been put to rights.

"Is there anything further I can do, Mrs. Avery?" Sarah asked.

"Nothing, thank you Sarah," I answered.

An invariable ritual of entertainment for the maids of Second Head marks the Sunday after the Stow masquerade. They all come to a picnic in the Little House on my place. A little perfunctority, I said, "I suppose the girls are getting ready for the picnic tomorrow."

"Oh yes, Mrs. Avery!" Sarah answered. "They're all pretty excited. They always are. We wouldn't miss our picnic for anything."

"Are all the usual crowd going?" I asked.

"Yes, Mrs. Avery," Sarah answered, "about a dozen of us."

I sat down at my dressing table to comb my hair. Sarah lingered. She moved over to my table and made some casual rearrangement of the objects there. I knew something was brewing in Sarah's mind.

"Mrs. Avery—" Sarah began in a low voice.

"Yes, Sarah," I answered.

Sarah appeared to forget that she had spoken. Or was it that she regretted and pretended she hadn't. She took up my tray; then put it down again . . . lingered, doing nothing.

"What is it, Sarah!" I asked.

"Oh. Nothing I guess, Mrs. Avery," she answered.

"Oh come now, Sarah," I demanded, "tell me!"

"It isn't really important I guess, Mrs. Avery. And yet, I think I'd feel more comfortable if I told you about it. It's about the Little House."

"Yes," I encouraged her.

"Well, I went down there this morning while you were sleeping—the way I always do the day before the picnic. I always sweep it out and dust up a little and see if everything is all right."

"And wasn't everything all right there this morning?"

"Everything was in order. But —well, I have a feeling, Mrs. Avery, that somebody slept there last night."

"What makes you think so?"

"Well, for one thing, when I was doing the floor, something clattered under the mop. I hunted a long while before I could find it. You see it was just the color of the floor. But finally I got it. It was one of those wooden collar buttons which come from the laundry in men's shirts."

"Yes," I said interrogatively.

"That wasn't all," Sarah continued. "Outside in the bushes I found one of those sheets of stiff cardboard the laundries put in men's shirts to keep them from getting wrinkled."

"Somebody might have used the Little House to dress for the masquerade," I said slowly, "although I can't imagine anybody doing that without asking my permission. Of course we never think of locking it."

"Somebody slept there, Mrs. Avery," Sarah said with decision. "The couch had been used. You know we keep some comforters folded up in the closet. Nobody touches those comforters but me and I always fold them a particular way—the way I fold everything; the way you taught me. Whoever used them, folded them too, but very carelessly."

"I wouldn't say anything about it to any of the girls who are coming to the picnic," I advised. "It isn't important really—so long as no harm was done. Of course I don't like to think of strangers—tramps or whatever—sleeping in the Little House. It doesn't frighten me though. But some of the girls might feel a little frightened about going there."

"Oh I wouldn't say a word about it to anybody!" Sarah declared, giving me a reproachful look. "You can trust me for that."

"I know I can," I said, giving her an affectionate look.

I came downstairs and dawdled for about an hour. The day was languorously beautiful. The afternoon was unusually tranquil. Garden scents drifted onto my piazza and into my house. I do not remember that my telephone, usually so busy, jangled once. "Everybody," I remembered reflecting, "is sleeping it off." I remembered too wondering how many people stayed until sunrise at the Stow party. About three o'clock, Sylvia came trudging up the driveway. Her face was flushed from two hours of play in the sun. Dorinda Belle looked a little the worse for wear.

"Did Nancy come?" I asked.

"No, Aunt Mary," Sylvia answered. "She didn't come at all and Dorinda Belle hasn't been crowned yet." She laid her carefully down on the chair beside her.

"How Dorinda Belle glitters!" I exclaimed. "What's that you've tied around her waist?"

"Bring it over to me, honey." Sylvia trotted to my side bearing Dorinda Belle.

"Oh it's a buckle!" I exclaimed. "And it's a very beautiful old one. It looks like Spanish paste. Somebody must have dropped it coming to the party. I'm afraid I'll have to take it away from you, dear. We'll have to find out who lost it."

I remember that I started to examine the buckle closely. But at that exact moment the telephone rang. Before I took up the receiver — quite mechanically — I slipped the glittering thing into a little Dresden box on the table nearest me. From that precise instant, I did not think of that buckle again until—But I must not anticipate my own story.

It was Sam Chess, Ace Blaikie's negro man, on the wire. I had known Sam for twenty-five years.

"Is that you Mrs. Avery?" Sam asked.

"Yes, Sam. What is it!"

"Mrs. Avery, Doctor Blaikie ain't got home yet from the party. And some of his patients keeps calling. I jess wondered if you knew where he was or when I could expect him. I sort of feel kind of worried, Mrs. Avery."

"I haven't the remotest idea, Sam, where he is," I replied. "He left the party before the unmasking. I left it about two o'clock and he had not come back by then and I fancy he didn't come back at all. But you know Doctor Blaikie! You ought to know him well enough by this time not to worry and not to expect him until you see him."

"Yes'm. I reckon I know that about Doctor Blaikie, Mrs. Avery. But he didn't even come back here to change his clothes and you know how he was dressed."

"I wouldn't worry about Doctor Blaikie if I were you," I reassured Sam. "The punch was very delicious and there was plenty of it."

Sam laughed too. "Yes'm and Doctor Blaikie—he certainly likes punch."

"Did he come over in his own car, Sam?" I asked.

"No, Mrs. Lane took him over. Mrs. Lane said she'n Mr. Lane came home alone. They couldn't find Doctor Blaikie when they started home."

"It's likely, Sam, that you'l get a telephone call any moment now, from Doctor Blaikie, asking you to bring some clothes to him wherever he spent the night. He's probably still asleep."

"Yes'm, I guess that's right. Thank you, Mrs. Avery."

I had hardly put the telephone down when Sarah Darbe appeared.

"I brought some things down to the Little House this morning, Mrs. Avery," she explained, "I have always done that the day before our picnic, but I feel a little worried about leaving them there."

"But I think they'll be all right, Sarah," I said.

Sarah cast me a meaning look. "I'd feel better, Mrs. Avery, if they were safe in the house. I remember I took the silver pie-knife. I was wondering if Sylvia would like to walk down to the Little House with me."

"I think she'd better stay here, Sarah," I said. "I think she's beginning to feel tired."

How many times since I have thanked all my gods that I did not let Sylvia go with Sarah. The ten minutes or more which it took Sarah to go to the Little House and return—it happened that she came back by the path which led up to the side entrance at the left of the house—were the last happy moments I was to know for many a day.

Suddenly, I heard swift footsteps pounding around the farther corner of the piazza. Rugs deafened them but on the hard wood, they boomed like quick drums. Even before Sarah Darbe's hoarse, horror-strained voice, carefully muted, called, "Mrs. Avery, Mrs. Avery!" I knew that those footsteps were loaded with panic.

"Stay here Sylvia!" I ordered. I leaped from the hammock, ran around my corner of the piazza to meet Sarah. Sarah's brown face had turned tallowy. Her brown eyes were starting out of her head.

"Oh my God, Mrs. Avery," she whispered. "Doctor Blaikie is lying dead in the Spinney. I think he's been murdered."

Horror! Terror! Confusion! And horror, terror, confusion all woven together!

Fortunately I kept my head. Fortunately Sarah kept hers. I leaped to the telephone, got the Geary house immediately. Luckily, Joe Geary was at home. Then I called the police station. Luckily, Patrick O'Brien was in. Joe Geary arrived a minute or two before Patrick.

The instant I dropped the receiver, "Bessie," I called. There must have been some strident terror in my voice, for Bessie came running from the kitchen. "Bessie," I ordered, "take Sylvia over to the Stows. Mr. and Mrs. Stow are out mooring. I saw them on the causeway a little while ago. But tell Caddie and Jessie that an accident has occurred over here and to keep Sylvia there. Tell them to ask Mrs. Stow to call me up the instant she gets in. Tell one of them to call up all the girls who were coming here tomorrow and tell them that the picnic must be postponed. Then come back here at once. Sarah will tell you what has happened."

I never saw Bessie's dimples iron out of her face so swiftly or so completely. She gave one look at Sarah's stricken aspect and went immediately out onto the piazza. "Come honey!" I heard her say in her softest and gentlest tones, "you and me's going to take a nice little walk."

By this time Joe Geary had arrived.

Soon Patrick approached and I could see that there was a policeman beside him on the seat, two on the running-board; three on motorcycles following the motor. The two on the motor-board dropped off where the road from the village ran into Second Head—on guard. I guessed at once. Patrick's car came into my drive; the three motorcycles followed.

With one of his swift leaps, Patrick was out of the car and across the piazza. "Stay here until I whistle!" he called over his shoulder to the four policemen. "Lucky you were at home, Joe," he commented.

Sarah and I accompanied them to the farthest end of the piazza. There we women faltered.

"Mary," Patrick begged, "if you can bear to stand it, I wish you'd come with us."

For the first time I saw that Patrick's Irish gray eyes were filled with tears. I began to sob helplessly. "Yes, I'll come," I agreed.

"You come too, Sarah!" Joe ordered briefly.

We had scarcely stopped for this brief dialogue. All the time we were hurrying forward over the short path. Presently we were at the entrance of the Spinney. As I have said, only this one gravel path, joining the grassy path which leads from the side door of my glassed-in piazza, passes through it. That path curves out of it, runs part way up the Head to the Little House and then, up the Head beyond it, curves backward and ends at my back door.

The Spinney is a tangle. I let things grow there as they will. And they will turn to jungle.

Entering the Spinney on that transcendent day was to come abruptly from sunshine stinging hot to shade, velvety cool. Cool. I say —that coolness rapidly became the frigidity of horror. For our cavalcade proceeding swiftly—Doctor Geary first, then Patrick, then myself, then Sarah—I caught sight presently, over the men's shoulders, of a splotch of white, humanly shaped, on the gravel path. Suddenly the atmosphere of the Spinney blackened and whirled.

I stopped.

"You go ahead," I ordered faintly. "I'll follow in a minute." But what happened was that, after Sarah passed me, I recovered myself instantly; followed at once and passed her. In a second or two we all stopped.

"He's dead all right," Joe pronounced grimly. "He's been dead since—rigor mortis has set in."

"Yes, he's dead, the poor fellow!" Patrick echoed. Sarah and I stationed ourselves one on either side of Patrick.

Ace looked strangely beautiful and strangely dignified in death—as though his body had been carefully laid out, as indeed ultimately we learned was the case. His tunic lay straight and close about his figure. His helmet lay at his side. His tiny black velvet mask lay beside it. Suddenly I seemed to see for the first time the slit in that tunic, a slit surrounded by a rusty-colored stain over the heart.

"Stabbed!" Patrick dropped tersely. He too knelt.

"Yes," Joe assented. "There it is!"

It was the weapon that had killed Ace. It was his own sword; the short sword of the Roman officer which had stuck upright on the left of his belt. The blade was unstained, smooth and shining.

A second wave of faintness came over me. As I went into it, I heard Patrick say, "Not suicide! And somebody that he trusted killed him. Whoever it was, he wiped the blade clean." As I came out of it, I saw Patrick's stern eyes examining the ground about Ace's body.

"Finger-prints!" Joe Geary suggested sternly.

Patrick drew something shining from his pocket and put it to his lips. On the blast of his whistle, the four policemen appeared at the entrance of the Spinney. "It's a murder all right," he informed them briefly. "Mike, you call the coroner! Then get Doctor Blaikie's house and tell them there what has happened. Then get the station and tell them to put a man at the crossroads. Nobody but the people who live here or deliver here are to come over to the Head until I say so. The rest of you spread about and guard this wood. Nobody is to set foot here unless I O. K. it."

I lay awake almost all night long, thinking of Ace Blaikie . . . considering poignantly certain half-forgotten scenes which seemed, of their own volition, to drift from out of the past into my mind . . . recalling with careful deliberation a succession of pictures of our long, vivid friendship . . . all these the very warp and woof of my childhood and girlhood.

Lesson for November 1

LAW, LOVE, AND TEMPERANCE
(International Temperance Sunday)

LESSON TEXT—Romans 13:1-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth. Rom. 14:21.
PRIMARY TOPIC — Why We Keep Rules.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Junior Citizens.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Shall We Do About Drinking?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Law, Love, and Temperance.

Revolution, political disorder, anarchy—these are words which characterize much of the world's news of our day. What should be our attitude toward government? Should a Christian participate in revolts against government? These are questions that stir the hearts of men.

The Bible has an answer, and it is found in our lesson for today. Let us study it with care and seek God's message for us and for our nation in these utterly confusing days.

We consider together a portion of Paul's epistle to the Romans in which, having laid his superb doctrinal foundation, he turns to a practical application. Let us ever remember that while right doctrine is necessary to right living, it is never sufficient to hold the doctrine and fail to permit it to control our daily walk.

Good citizenship of the true type is the result of staunch Christian character. Much of the weakness in our political and social life can be traced to the neglect of the things of God in the home, the school, and the church.

Paul presents the Christian as one who has the right attitude toward his neighbors, and toward his own daily walk. The Christian is

I. Politically-Intelligent and Loyal (vv. 1-7).

Lectures on political economy are well worth while. School children should learn to love and honor their country. But for real intelligent citizenship we must have a study of God's Word. For all governmental authority is dependent on a God-given power. No man has any right to rule over any other man except as God delegates that right to him.

No "divine right of kings" is justified by this passage, but clearly it does teach that government is ordained of God and functions by his providence. To resist such authority is to resist God.

Must we always obey the government? Yes; until it commands us to do that which is clearly contrary to the laws of God. We do not resist or question the authority of any properly appointed governmental agency, no matter how weak, or even wicked the agent may be, as long as he acts as "a minister of God . . . for good." Any government is better than anarchy. But no government has the right to command any man to disobey God.

In our land we have a powerful agency for the correction of governmental weakness and error — the ballot box. Let every Christian use it discreetly and in the fear of God.

Before leaving the passage, note that the Christian does not dodge, "tax" or leave unpaid the taxes which support the government under whose benefits he lives and works. There is too much dishonesty at this point, and we need to correct it.

II. Socially-Honest and Loving (vv. 8-10).

"Love thy neighbor as thyself" and there will be no social dishonesty, strife, and ill-will. Remember the lesson of last week on love—I Corinthians, 13.

III. Personally-Clean and Spiritual (vv. 11-14).

The time when our redemption is to be fully completed—that is, when the Lord himself returns — is at hand. We therefore will not live as those who walk in darkness, but as children of the light, clean in life and thought. We will "put on the Lord Jesus Christ."

In these days when almost every wayside store and hundreds of thousands of city buildings have been converted into drinking places far worse than the old-time saloon, when men and women are making drunken sots of themselves, it is indeed time for Christians to raise their voices in protest and to act to protect the boys and girls of America.

But above all—let us win them to Christ, for if they "put on Christ" they will "make no provision for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof."

Talent Put to Use

Talent without energy is like a steam engine without steam, and if you care not about it you will soon become incapable of labor, though filled with the wisdom of the ages.—Sir Ronald Ross.

Miss Dorothy Hicks Leads District 5-A Basketball Group

Miss Dorothy Hicks, girls' athletic instructor of Avon Park high school, will be the representative of District 5-A on the National and Florida State Women's Basketball Committee, which is a sub-division of the National Women's Basketball Committee of American Physical Education Association.

Highlands, Polk, Glades, Hendry, Collier, Hardee and DeSoto counties are included in District 5-A.

Mrs. Cordelia B. Hunt, chairman of Florida Women's Basketball Committee and director of girls' activities for recreation department of City of Tampa, notified Miss Hicks of her appointment last week but the appointment was not accepted until Saturday.

The purpose of this representative is to try to raise the standard of basketball officiating in this section of the state by getting women to officiate or all girls' games. These women officials will have to pass both written and practical examinations on umpiring, refereeing and score keeping. These examinations have to be renewed every two years to keep the rating.

The scarcity of women who are eligible to officiate at girls' basketball games has made it necessary for men to officiate. Therefore, if sufficient interest should be aroused in this section of the state, girls' basketball teams will have women officials.

Dr. Reeves Donates Intramural Winners Silver Loving Cup

Dr. Stanley K. Reeves is offering a silver loving cup for the winner of the intramural program of the girls athletic program for this year.

This cup will be given to the class in high school which has the highest number of points from athletics during the entire school year. This crop will offer competition between the grades and the honor of winning the first cup to be awarded.

This is something new to Avon Park high school and will be greatly appreciated by all students. This cup will be placed with the cup which the band won in Tampa last year in the trophy case which is under the hall clock.

The points are given by a percentage basis, and the highest percentage gets the trophy. Each person who enters any sport gets points toward the cup. In this way it will draw many winners from each class.

LARGE DEMOCRATIC VOTE IS PREDICTED

State Democratic Campaign Director Predicts Largest Vote In History

Jacksonville, Oct. 28.—(FNS)—Florida will poll the largest Democratic vote in its history on next Tuesday, according to a statement here today of Clayton C. Codrington, director of the campaign now being brought to a close.

"I base my pre...tion," Codrington said, "upon the splendid spirit that is being shown by the various county Democratic organizations, and upon the evident determination of the party to give the President an overwhelming vote of confidence."

Florida democracy will profit by a large turn-out at the polls, Codrington further stresses. Since the two-thirds rule at national conventions has been abolished, the state's representation will depend upon its voting power. A large vote in the regular election will insure large representation at the national convention and more voice in the direction of party affairs.

With an unprecedented oratorical barrage to be laid down this weekend, featured by imposing rallies in nearly all counties, and with a major newspaper advertising campaign reaching its climax at the same time, the final drive to arouse the voters is one of extraordinary proportions.

The speakers' bureau, under direction of C. P. Helfenstein, has been working at top speed all week. It has brought into action practically every Democrat of note in the commonwealth and has supplemented this array by the importation of outside talent. The most gifted of the visiting speakers is Senator Richard B. Russell, jr., of Georgia, who recently won national recognition as a campaigner through his defeat of Governor Talmadge of Georgia, Roosevelt foe.

According to John G. Baker, chairman of the Young Democrats campaign committee, probably 150 pages of newspaper advertising will be released in the weekly and daily papers of the state, the former today and the latter next Monday. Last week some 75 pages was run and the previous week half that amount. The ads were written by State Campaign headquarters and, for the most part, sold in the various counties by the Young Democrats.

Reports indicate that a determined effort will be made to get the voters to the polls Tuesday, rain or shine. To facilitate transportation to the polls it is expected that the public schools will close and that school buses will be requisitioned. The State Board of Public Instruction has ruled that the granting of a holiday to the schools rests with county school authorities. The majority of these, it is known, will keep the kiddies at home so that their elders may exercise the right of suffrage.

The campaign now nearing an end has been distinguished by the zeal with which it has been conducted. The state is organized right down to the precincts and on election day the poll lists will be checked in order to discover absentees and bring them to the booths.

Charge Roosevelt Sold Democratic Party "Down River"

Baltimore, Md.—Leaders of political thought in the nation's capital do not hesitate to charge that President Roosevelt has sold the whole Democratic organization "down the river" and that his reelection means the deathblow to the historic party which brought him into power in 1932.

By 1940, they say, the Democratic Party will be only a memory and its place will be taken by the Farmer-Labor party.

These same leaders of thought point out, as their evidence for these statements, that Mr. Roosevelt abandoned his party in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Nebraska. They also point out that the New Deal group is now sinking the Democratic Party further into oblivion by each campaign trip of the President.

On this subject Paul Y. Anderson in the St. Louis Post Dispatch wrote the other day:

"A large number of persons are supporting the President on the avowed assumption that four more years of his Administration will constitute a hothouse for the growth of a strong nation-wide Farmer-Labor movement. They believe that a political group which include both Carter Glass and David Dubinsky is being held together by artificial means and their program is to have something ready to take its place when the string breaks. Labor's Non-Partisan League, headed by Lewis, Berry and Hillman, entered the scene with the announcement that it was organized to reelect Roosevelt and 'to be in position to act effectively in any political realignment that may take place by 1940.' That is plain language and it comes from men who mean what they say."

Cash Prize For Best Band at Stetson on Homecoming, Nov. 14

DeLand, Oct. 29.—A fifty dollar cash prize will be presented to the band which is the best in the parade at Stetson University's Homecoming, November 14.

Besides the prize, which is offered by the DeLand chamber of commerce, there will be loving cups to the winning band, to the best float entered by a Stetson organization, and to the most unique entry in the parade.

Former Governor, Doyle E. Carlton, a trustee of the institution, will speak at the formal dedication of Stetson's newest building, the University Commons. The 80-voiced Glee Club will sing under direction of Prof. Harold Milne Griffin.

Plans are being completed this week, for the entertainment of the hundreds of alumni who are expected to return to the campus November 14. The program begins Friday afternoon, November 13, with a tea given by President and Mrs. W. S. Allen at their home for the visitors.

In a campus straw vote this week, President Roosevelt received a substantial majority over Governor Alfred Landon. The other parties, represented by Norman Thomas, Earl Browder, William Lemke, pollet a total of 16 votes. The results showed that the girls were more Republican minded than the men students; that the qualified voters among the students went stronger for Roosevelt than did the ineligible; that the faculty gave the Democratic nominee for President a stronger endorsement than did the students.

Dodge Announces New Model Prices

Detroit, Oct. 29.—Prices of the new 1937 Dodge cars, involving a number of reductions and the furnishing of safety glass at no extra cost, were today announced by the Dodge Division of Chrysler Corporation.

As in former seasons, the base price of the line is that of the business coupe, which lists at $640, followed by the rumble seat coupe at $695. There are two 2-door sedan models, one equipped with tire and luggage compartment in the rear section of the body and quoted at $705, the other with built-in touring trunk, listing at $715. The 4-door sedan type also appears in two versions, one with rear tire and luggage compartment, at $745 the other with inbuilt trunk at $755.

In a communication addressed to the Dodge field organization, general sales manager A. vanDer-Zee cites remarkable attendance records made during the first week in which the new Dodge models were shown by dealers throughout the country. In Detroit alone, Dodge dealers' showrooms were visited by 50,139 persons during the first six days when prices—announced at that time—were no part of the attraction.

Reports from other sections, quoted by Mr. vanDerZee, indicate such rise in general new car consciousness as promises to give the forthcoming automobile shows the greatest attendance they have had in many years.

Dream and Reality Puzzle

Still existent today are primitive people who are unable to differentiate between a dream and reality. For example, when a man dreams he is bitten by a snake, he treats the supposed wound upon awakening. When he dreams of a fight with a friend, he continues the battle the following morning—much to the friend's astonishment. —Collier's Weekly.

NEWS and VIEWS ON ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

During depression, there was almost an entire dearth of industrial construction. Industry naturally sat tight, and tried to hold on to what it had. In the darkest days, which occurred in 1932, the "new construction" sections of newspapers and periodicals practically vanished.

One sure sign of recovery is a revival in industrial building. And 1936 has witnessed an extremely encouraging trend in this field.

According to figures gathered by Engineering News-Record, construction contracts awarded in the first nine months of this year by the railroads were 84 per cent ahead of the same period last year —which in itself was a far better year for almost all industry than any since 1930. Automobile transportation contracts were up 10 per cent. Public utility building rose 1393 per cent. Process industries showed an 89 per cent gain, food industries advanced 40 per cent.

Automotive factory construction, as might be guessed, showed the greatest jump of all—2278 per cent. Aircraft factory building was up 105 percent, textile building advanced 59 per cent, and general factories 41 per cent.

Only a few important industries showed drops in contracts awarded. These included metal refining and rolling, down 11 per cent; foundries, which dropped 47 per cent, and refrigeration and cold storage, off 14 per cent.

Total industrial construction was 60 per cent above the comparative period last year, and amounted to an expenditure of $197,439,000 as against $123,101,000.

Looking at the picture in still another way, Business Week says that in the first nine months of this year, more factories have been built or started than in any full year since 1930, and textile machinery plants are going up in greater volume than in any year since 1929.

Reason for this greatly stimulated building, of course, is increased flow of orders to our major industries—an increase, in many instances, that is much larger than was anticipated even a short time ago. The utility industry is a case in point. In recent years, utility construction budgets have been held down, not only because of depressed conditions, but because executives felt that the Federal power program menaced their existence. Now power consumption has reached all-time highs, is steadily climbing. Result is that utilities must build new plants and modernize old ones. It is expected that many utilities will announce big construction increases before 1936 fades into history.

Steel is in a similar position, with demand pressing mills hard. And, as everyone knows, the automobile industry is reaching almost undreamed-of production levels, must rapidly expand. The industry expects to produce over 5,000,000 units in 1937.

In a few industries, major changes in the product necessitate much new plant construction along with revamping of old plants and equipment. Such an industry is the aircraft. Obsolescence in commercial airplanes is extraordinarily rapid—every year witnesses bigger, faster, quieter, more comfortable airliners.

So, in many instances, "America's capacity to consume" has run ahead of the existing "capacity to produce." That is one of the most encouraging signs in the business scene.

As the campaign enters its closing days, it is becoming the liveliest and most aggressive in many a year. Not since the war have both the principal figures in a presidential race referred so directly or cuttingly to each other. Recent Landon speeches offer the New Deal no quarter. And recent Roosevelt speeches have pulled no punches.

Hoover almost never referred to his opposition, either in 1928 or 1932. And Harding and Coolidge did not have to put much effort into campaigning—their elections were fore-gone certainties, with the betting odds running as high as 40-1 in 1920.

This aggressiveness on the part of the candidates is serving to clear the air and bring the issues into relief. It is dissipating some of the tremendous vagueness that characterizes both platforms, with their cautiously worded "escape clauses."

But there is considerable question as to whether the candidates' closing drives can enlist new followers in any number. Polls show relatively little chance in recent weeks. All the polls indicate that the vote is extremely close in most of the big states, and that the winner will emerge victorious by a very small percentage of the ballots, so far as popular vote is concerned. Electoral vote is another matter—a candidate who received only a little over 50 per cent of the popular vote could attain a large majority in the Electoral College.

Special Train For The Knights Templar To Miami Next Summer

Miami, Oct. 29.—The Keystone Templar Special is the name given a special train to be operated to Miami by the Grand Commandery of Pennsylvania on the occasion of the 40th triennial conclave of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar of the United States in July of next year.

Copies of the elaborate itinerary of this train, received at the Triennial Conclave headquarters in the Old Post Office building, show that the movement of Pennsylvania Knights Templar to Florida will be handled by the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad and the Seaboard Air Line. Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Silver Springs, St. Petersburg and Tampa will be visited enroute to Miami. On the return trip a stop will be made at Lake Wales for a motor tour to the Mountain Lake Sanctuary and the Bok Tower.

We Are Florida Democrats But We Place The Future of Our Country Above Blind Loyalty to National Party Leaders Who Have Made a Terrible Mess of Things—

So We're Voting for LANDON!

So we're voting for Landon!

We have seen rich estate owners get fat checks for NOT planting crops.

So we're voting for Landon!

We have seen many unworthy and undeserving people coddled and petted like babies at the public expense while truly worthy people begged vainly for help. We know that Landon will carry on proper relief measures —but will conduct them wisely and fairly.

So we're voting for Landon!

So we're voting for Landon!

We have had hard-earned dollars snatched out of our pockets to pay for these high-jinks. And we shudder at the tax burden that is being piled up.

So we're splitting our ticket to vote for Landon.

The Famous Smile Is Poor Payment For Wasted Millions

All that the great middle class of America has gotten out of the Roosevelt administration is the famous "good neighbor" grin and many slick radio talks. But the neighbor who smiles at you across the fence while he's poisoning your dog is a sorry, treacherous neighbor, after all. And a smile and a radio act are pretty poor payment for wasted millions and ruinously high taxes.

So we're voting for Landon!

What Florida Will Gain By a Majority Vote for LANDON

Florida has always been counted as a solidly Democratic State. So Republican administrations feed us crumbs because they think there's no chance to win in Florida. And Democratic administrations treat Florida like a step-child because they're so sure of us. The doubtful States get the federal gravy.

Let Florida once become a doubtful State and both parties would woo us. Florida would get some of the federal improvements that are lavished on California and the other doubtful States.

Don't be afraid that Florida would lose anything by departing from the Democratic column this election. Every thinking voter knows we would gain much.

What's more, it's not disloyalty to your party to put your country ahead of party loyalty. Political parties come and go, but the United States must remain a Republic, ruled by the people—not by a Dictator.

So we're voting for Landon!

Why we prefer Landon

Because the Republican candidate is a man of the people. He comes from the soil. He has worked with his hands and has lived with common folks. He is warm and simple and straight-forward. He's no rich aristocrat with a stock smile and a gift for slang talk. He's the solid stuff a president should be made of . . . a business man who will chase the socialistic professors back to their classrooms and the Communists back to their rat-holes. He'll put America back on its feet. He'll put Americans back to work at honorable jobs. He'll do away with the national poor-farm that Roosevelt has made of America.

He'll balance the national budget. With him we'll get back to the principles of our greatest Democrat, Thomas Jefferson.

So thousands of us are splitting our ticket to vote for Landon. These are the reasons why you, too, should:

Practical Sentiment

"Do you always stand up when the band plays 'The Star Spangled Banner'?"

"Of course," answered Miss Cayenne. "The old song holds a sentiment that I cannot resist. I wish they would play it in passenger busses. It might make standing up seem easier."

Of Course!

Seems Pat's Front Had Retreated to the Rear

Pat, being a sound sleeper, had slept through the racket set up by his alarm clock, and, consequently, when he did awaken, found himself late for work. He hurriedly dressed and rushed off. In his great haste he did not know that he had put his trousers back to front. Alighting from the bus outside the factory, he slipped and fell into the gutter. The conductor went to his assistance.

"Are you hurt?" he asked.

Pat looked down at himself and noticed his trousers.

"I don't know about being hurt," he grumbled, "but I must have given myself a bad twist."

If You Have a Child

ASK YOUR DOCTOR THIS

Ask Him Before Giving Your Child an Unknown Remedy

Practically any doctor you ask will warn: "Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first."

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy — "milk of magnesia," the standard of the world is established. For over half a century many doctors have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia." Safe for children. No other is "quite like it."

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Now also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

TO THE VOTERS OF HIGHLANDS COUNTY:

IN ANSWERING MY OPPONENT, W. Z. CARSON'S FIVE REASONS FOR NOT HIRING ME FOR ANOTHER FOUR YEARS.

FIRST—It is true I go fishing and support the local ball games and the office w h i c h I attended since 1933 paid $200.00 per month out of which W. Z. Carson was paid $50.00 per month therefrom at his request but what services did he render the office for this $50.00?

SECOND—It is true that the Sebring American paid me $40.00 for delivering its papers on its regular route for a period of five months which can be verfied by the Sebring American.

THIRD—Complaints from the Avon Park merchants as he states is being answered by the Avon Park merchants. I might say however, that I do not owe any of the closed banks any money and I have not at any time compromised any note with them whatever. If I compromise my debts which are minor, the same as Mr. Carson compromised his debts with the closed banks of Sebring, I would not owe anything and if I should have drawn the $50.00 per month which was paid Mr. Carson as mentioned above, I would have money on hand. The County records will verify the fact that Mr. Carson has owed the Highlands County (closed) Bank $700.00 since early in 1933 on which he has never paid one dime of interest or principal. He permits this note to be sold with the assets of the bank at a very low figure and he has not yet paid the holders thereof one dime of interest or principal. The records will also show that he has a suit against him at this time for the payment of a note which he owes in the sum of $2500.00. NOW DO YOU THINK THIS IS A GOOD RECORD FOR THE CLERK OF HIGHLANDS COUNTY TO HAVE?

FOURTH—This fourth reason is absolutely untrue.

FIFTH—It is true that after my friends came to me and stated that Mr. Carson was going to fire me after the general election I called his hand and told him that in view of these reports I wanted him to give me in writing whether or not the reports were true.

I will appreciate your vote and support in my behalf for the office of County Clerk in the general election to be held Tuesday, Novmber 3, 1936, assuring you that I w i l l at a l l times render most courteous and efficient services.

Respectfully yours,

N. H. TRENT,

IN VOTING FOR ME:
Be SURE to write my name Neal Trent.

MR. W. Z. CARSON:

We note that in the issue of October 29th, of the Highlands County News, you assert that the merchants of Avon Park directly requested the dismissal by you of Mr. N. H. Trent, Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners, on the grounds that:

1. He would not pay his bills.
2. He drew checks without funds in the bank to meet them.

We, the undersigned, merchants of Avon Park, deny that we have made such requests of you, directly or indirectly, and we resent the imputation.
