

State Exhibit At Cleveland Is Great Show

Is Giving Florida Valuable
Publicity and Expected
To Attract Thousands

By RUSSELL RAY.
Cleveland, Ohio, July 23 (FNS).—While and in one's shoes may cause the wearer to return to Florida, ripe oranges growing on the shores of Lake Erie, together with marvelous displays of citrus fruits and beautiful animated dioramas depicting the industry in general are the mediums which will bring thousands of visitors to the Sunshine State, this coming winter.

Although but two weeks old, the Florida exhibit at the Great Lakes Exposition, in this city, has taken its place as one of the greatest attractions of the entire show.

Visitors are manifesting unusual interest in Florida's agricultural displays including those of citrus and attempts are being made to secure conditions regarding soil, crop conditions and opportunities for acquiring lands and at what prices. Literature supplied by the more progressive enterprising chambers of commerce is being distributed to those who manifest real interest.

During the few days the exhibit has been open—since June 27—the information booths have provided hundreds who contemplate a summer trip to Florida, with the most up-to-date and complete information. The publishers of many Ohio newspapers have visited the exhibit and have been very favorably impressed. This should result in much publicity calculated to present the state in its best light.

One diorama which has a tremendous appeal is that showing the Singing Tower at Mountain Lake, near Lake Wales. The diorama is "animated" to the extent that records of numbers played by the bells, cleverly concealed, are played constantly. The diorama affords hidden in the tower. Crowds of visitors are attracted by the music as well as by the picture and countless questions regarding it.

If inquiries received are an indication, Florida should see a brisk demand for small frame and grooved homes, this coming winter. There are many people of independent means living in this section of the country and many of them are being made Florida conscious by the exhibit of the state's resources and attractions, staged in this great industrial center.

Attendance is steadily increasing and every indication points to Florida's exhibit here in Cleveland being as effective as were the state exhibits at Chicago in 1933 and 1934 and in New York, last winter.

DIRECTOR OUTLINES WPA REGULATIONS

Unemployed Should Consider
WPA Only As Last Resort, Says Pynchon

With district WPA offices throughout Florida being set up, job applicants, State WPA Administrator E. A. Pynchon has called upon the unemployed of the State to follow the revised method of qualifying for assignment projects.

Although it eventually will be possible for some of the needy, who previously have not been assigned to WPA projects, to get jobs, no purpose will be served by a rush to local offices of the WPA or the State Board of Social Welfare, Pynchon declared.

Every job in the present limited quota of 27,000 workers is filled, the administrator explained, and added that before any additional workers can be employed some of those now on the rolls must be displaced.

Despite this condition, hundreds of persons, wrongly believing that the start of the new schedule meant that anybody could get a job, have continued to crowd the offices of the WPA and the Florida State Board of Social Welfare.

The revised procedure outlined by regional WPA officials during their conference at Jacksonville last week has not changed the requirement that the State Board must examine and pass upon all applications for relief, Pynchon said.

"Neither is there any change in the previous policy which demands that all applications must prove extreme need and be certified for employment," he added.

At the same time administrator made it clear that with certification accomplished there is no assurance that the new eligibles can possibly be assigned immediately.

Before that can happen, he explained, some of those now working must be displaced for one of more of the following reasons:

1. Failure to deliver an adequate day's work.
2. Failure to report for duty regularly.
3. A change in the financial status of the family of the employee, such as the obtaining of employment by some other member of the family, as specified in the relief act.

Inability to perform the tasks assigned.

The WPA's present object is to have a labor turnover on projects based on the four reasons enumerated so that it will be possible to carry on the payrolls, those in greatest service on projects.

"At times," Pynchon declared, "should the WPA be considered as the solution to the entire unemployment problem in Florida."

Attendance is steadily increasing and every indication points to Florida's exhibit here in Cleveland being as effective as were the state exhibits at Chicago in 1933 and 1934 and in New York, last winter.

"Briefly," he declared, "a person without work, and who desires to apply for a WPA job should contact the nearest social welfare office."

He pointed out that since no jobs are immediately available, applicants should not be disturbed if their applications do not receive consideration at once.

Van Hyning also gave assurance that the work of certification would be handled as speedily as humanly possible.

Vandals Slash Theater Seats

Unknown vandals slashed the seats of 44 chairs in the Park Theater sometime Tuesday night. The damage was discovered Wednesday morning when the theater was opened. The cushions of the seats had been slashed across with a knife or razor or some other sharp instrument. The seats were new, having been recently installed.

The theater was not locked as the Manager, Burke Floyd, was seriously ill in a Sebring hospital and he had the key, Constable W. A. Roberts said. He was apparently investigating but no clue has been uncovered. They found a trail of blood spots in the theater lobby and a lone person who had cut in and out was questioned but he apparently explained his actions as being a man-dazed job and was not committed by a boy.

R. H. EBERLY Doyle Carlton Is Native Son Of This State

Born On a Hardee County
Farm, Has Extensive
Legal Education

Tampa, July 23.—Doyle E. Carlton, former Governor, and candidate for the United States Senate to succeed the late Park Trammell, is a native son of Florida. Like many men in public life of his country, he has a "rancher boy" background. He was born and reared on his father's farm and cattle ranch near Watchlora, formerly De Leon, now Hardee county.

A product of the farm, he remains a farmer himself, and one of his favorite diversions from active life is to return for brief vacations to his own farm and ranch in Hardee County. Since young manhood he has been active in citrus growing, cattle raising, and truck farming, thus combining a few of his interests in a practical and civic manner.

A lover of the out-doors, and retaining much of the hardihood of his boyhood days, he makes a practice of "roughing it" with the boys upon his visits to his farm and ranch. It is an annual occasion with the former governor to take an active part in the cattle round-up on his ranch and those of his kinsmen in Hardee County. There are now in the round-up outfit who enter into the work with more zest. On such occasions he straddles a cow pony and spends days and nights in the open, using a rubber coat for protection from rain, and sleeping on a blanket spread on the ground. He is also a lover of hunting and usually finds time each season to go to the woods with his dogs and gun. He is thoroughly democratic and enjoys warm friendships.

Born July 6, 1917, Mr. Carlton is one of a family of nine children, eight boys and one girl. Even as a youth he exemplified a studious interest in politics and affairs of government. His completing his preparatory education in the public schools of Florida, he entered Stetson University and graduated with an A.B. in 1935. After attending the University of Chicago he completed his legal education with an LL.B. at Columbia University in 1937.

The same year, a month after his marriage, he associated in the practice of law in Tampa with G. E. Mabry and others. Except for the duration of his term as governor, he has remained an active member of the firm of Mabry, Reeves, and Carlton. About two years ago Morris E. White became associated with the firm as a partner.

While a student at the University of Chicago he won the annual oratorical contest with the University of Michigan. He is recognized today as one of Florida's really great orators, familiar with the state's economic and industrial development and needs, and a champion of the state's interests.

Coupled with an inheritance of initiative, aggressiveness, and a sense of duty, he has learned the value of hard work. He has a keen sense of hardihood and privation common to farm life at that time. There was little luxury. He fitted himself into the routine of rising with the sun, feeding the stock, milking the cows, plowing, packing fruit and vegetables. He absorbed much of the wholesome and stabilizing influence of clean country life.

Between 1917 and 1919 Mr. Carlton served as state senator for Hillsborough County, which then embraced Pinellas county. In 1928 he was city attorney for Tampa. The same year he was nominated for governor, serving from 1929 through 1933. A devoted member of the Democratic party, Mr. Carlton four years ago, while governor, toured mid-western and seaboard states speaking on the interests of the national Democratic ticket.

Since early youth he has been a member of the Baptist church. He is a member of the Masons, Scottish Rite, Shriners, Elks, Knights of Pythias, is a Kiwanian, and a director of the Tampa Y. M. C. A. He is a member of Delta Chi fraternity. Mr. Carlton was married in June, 1912, to Miss Nell Ray of Tampa. They met while both were students at Stetson University. Mr. Carlton has three children, Mrs. Carlton, Mrs. Carlton, and Mrs. Carlton.

Peace is the promise and reward of righteousness.—Mary McEvedy.

VALUABLE TREES ARE GIVEN TO ARBORETUM

Avon Park Woman Donates
Palm Trees Valued
At $1,600

The Florida Botanical Garden and Arboretum received a collection of Phoenix Palms as a gift from Mrs. W. R. Swearingen, of Avon Park. The group of palms which include five clusters and two individual trees are valued at $1,600.00. They are being planted along North Branch Drive, at the approach to the record house and office.

Under the supervision of W. H. Norris, foreman, the tremendous and tedious task of digging and transporting them is progressing rapidly. Due to their extreme size and weight it was necessary to use an eight-ton truck, five-ton chain hoist and a Cleveland tractor. Estimated weight of each tree is 12,000 pounds.

There are from six to nine plants in each cluster which have a height of around 20 feet. The two single trees are 25 feet high.

Several days were required to excavate and transport the first palm, but since everything has been systematized, it is believed, that it will only take about two and half days, per tree. R. H. Hill, leader, O. R. Hood, assistant leader and a crew of 25 CCC members are assisting Mr. Norris.

In connection with this planting which is being done about 300 feet from Tiger Branch, holes are being prepared for a group of 25 Washington Palms to be placed in the same area.

Lefty Palmiste Palms are to be used in landscaping Tiger Branch, which was recently completed. The trees are to be set at intervals along either side, according to plan recently approved by C. R. Vinten, regional inspector for the National Park Service in the State of Florida.

UNOPOSED ADMISSION CHARGE AT HAMMOCK PLANNED

State Park Service Suggests
Plan To Help On Maintenance

On the suggestion of the State Park Service the trustees of Highlands Hammock are considering the advisability of making an admission charge for Highlands Hammock park of 30c for each car entering the park, except for members of the executive committee and the board of trustees, told the members of the Sebring Rotary club at their luncheon meeting Monday.

Regarding the reason for the change in policy and the plan, Mr. Ives said:

"A year has passed since the State has assumed the responsibility of the maintenance and operation of Highlands Hammock. As this was the first State Park in Florida no very definite policies were established at the outset and no radical changes made, either in the methods of management or even the personnel. In the first year, the Park Service has been 'feeling its way' with the help and advice of interested local citizens."

"Even the budget that was set, was more or less a matter of theory, and naturally, many lessons in park management have been learned. These lessons will serve as guides for the administration of the five other State Parks now under construction in Florida."

"One of the most complex of the problems is that of obtaining sufficient funds to adequately provide for the necessities and with increasing park use, these necessities will become greater. For the first two years, the legislature has appropriated $30,000 per annum for Highlands Hammock but there is no definite assurance that succeeding administrations will do so. The plan, therefore, will agree to this or any other sum as the state may not be 'park conscious' to the extent of increasing appropriations for this purpose."

"This $30,000 will be supplemented during the next four years by funds from a bond fund of $25,000 for the purpose by John A. Rood, but as this will not last forever, it is evident that some very definite and increasing source of revenue must be found. It has, therefore, been considered wise by the Florida Park Service and the Board of Trustees to pass a part of the maintenance costs to those who use the parks most, in the form of an admission charge of 30c per car, except to students, Boy and Girl Scouts, four H. Clubs and similar groups and their adult escorts who will be admitted without charge."

The Service recognized the fact that many interested citizens and already contributed generously of their money and time and also that many residents and winter visitors make many trips to the Hammock for recreation and study so it was considered advisable to make a resident's ticket for two dollars which would be good for a year and admit the owner's car and its occupants at any and all times. For this class of patrons, a special plate will be issued for the front of the car which will be similar to those issued by the University of Florida or Doral County Bridge.

"In view of this decision, other park charges were considered. It was cited that Cypress Gardens make a charge of 25 cents per person; the Azalea Ravine at Palatka (a municipal park) 50 cents per person and McKee's Jungle Gardens at Vero Beach, $1.00 per person. It will be seen that an average of 10 cents per head will not be exorbitant. (Records of Hammock attendance show an average of 3 1/2 people to the car.)"

Sheriff Doyle Schumacher who underwent an operation for the removal of kidney stones at the Weems hospital Monday, is reported this morning to be showing much improvement.

Soon after the operation he developed a high fever and there was little hope of his recovery for several days Wednesday. The Weems stated this morning that he "is sitting on top of the world."

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Wendell and small son, Mrs. T. L. Williams and Jim Williams, all of Arcadia were driving home from Oklawaha when the accident occurred. A blow-out caused the car to swerve into the path of a bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Wendell and Mrs. Williams received several severe cuts and bruises and Mr. Williams' body was crushed. The extent of the injuries was not learned at the time of going to press as the x-ray pictures had not been completed. No bones were broken although the skull of one victim was cut.

T. L. Simpson of Lake Placid brought the injured to Sebring and they are being treated at the Weems hospital. Hospital attendants stated that all of the injured will probably recover.

Floyd Funeral Services Were Held Thursday

Victim of Auto Wreck Was Buried in Lakeland;
Many Attended

Funeral services for William Burke Floyd, 29, who died Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Sebring hospital from gas gangrene which developed from injuries received in an automobile wreck last Friday afternoon were held Thursday afternoon at Lakeland at 5 o'clock. Services were held at the Futch funeral home with interment in Oak Hill Burial Park. Fr. George Shilling, rector of the Episcopal church here, officiated and he was assisted by Rev. Loya Frink, pastor of the Baptist church.

Active pall bearers were: Roy McArthur, Lakeland; Charles Pritchett, Lakeland; Chas. McClure, Vero Beach; B. Arnold, Vero Beach; J. M. Murphy, Lakeland; and Joe Robinson, Plant City. The honorary pall bearers were: John Koppers, Avon Park; Phil Abrams, Avon Park; Earl Ware, Avon Park; H. M. Johnson, Avon Park; Harry McFerrin, Lakeland; and Dr. V. H. Miller, Lakeland.

The services were very impressive and a large number of Avon Park friends attended.

Mr. Floyd was born in Plainville, Ga., and lived in Rome, Ga., before moving to Lakeland with his family 11 years ago. He formerly was connected with the Palace Theatre in Lakeland and was manager of the Vero Beach Theatre. He was coming to Avon Park four months ago to manage the Park theatre.

Mr. Floyd had a number of friends here which he had made during the time he lived here. He had a very pleasing personality and had recently been approved for membership in the Rotary Club of Lakeland.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Fanny Floyd; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Floyd of Lakeland; four sisters, Mrs. B. B. Schell of Charlotte, N. C., Mrs. J. W. King of Rome, Ga., Mrs. J. G. Walden and Miss Edna Floyd of Lakeland and one brother, Richard B. Floyd of Lakeland.

Mr. Floyd received a compound fracture of the left leg above the ankle last Friday afternoon when the automobile in which he was travelling to Sebring left the road and turned over several times.

The accident occurred on state road 100 near the intersection of Mr. Floyd's home. He was driving at the time and had control of the car when he tried to dodge what he thought was an obstruction in the road. Passing motorists picked him up and took him to a Sebring hospital.

The fracture was set and then late Saturday gas gangrene set in and the leg was amputated above the knee. During the evening serum was used to stop the infection but was ineffectual and he passed away Wednesday afternoon.

Tall Tales

As Told to:

FRANK E. HAGAN and
ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ESCAPE IN SIBERIA

SIR HORACE PLUNKETT of England, or "Hod" Plunkett as the cowboys in western Nebraska and eastern Wyoming in the early days knew him, had some thrilling adventures on the American frontier, but his narrowest escape from death was in Siberia.

One day his horse went lame near a Russian village. Being in a hurry to reach St. Petersburg, he left his horse there and hired another one, hitched to a sleigh. In the midst of a dark, dismal forest, he heard a howl and saw a huge timber wolf pursuing him.

Sir Horace lashed his horse into a mad gallop, but the wolf gained on him at every jump. Just as the fierce beast sprang at him, Sir Horace dropped down into the bottom of the sleigh. The wolf shot clear over him and lighted on the horse's hindquarters.

The terrified horse kept on running even after it was half eaten up. Then Sir Horace sprang up. His whip gave the wolf a terrific cut. With a howl the beast sprang forward just as the horse died and fell out of the harness which dropped on the wolf.

Sir Horace then grabbed up the reins. By lashing at the wolf constantly with his whip he kept it going forward at a terrific pace. A few moments later it raced into a town and came to a plunging halt in front of an inn. Out dashed a group of Russians who killed the wolf and, as Sir Horace stepped out of the sleigh, pressed forward to congratulate him upon his escape.

THE HUMILIATED TEETH

IN SALT LAKE CITY, baseball bugs still refer to Joe Jenkins, their old catcher, as the man who always wore a mask, not because Joe used a mask when catching, but the contraption he wore other times was a little net under his chin. It acted as catcher, too, whenever Joe's lower plate of 18 shiny, false teeth, worked loose.

Without dreaming of being humiliated, Joe laid the plate aside in a restaurant one night and went right on eating. It happened the teeth were on edge; they were so humiliated by his act they rolled to the floor and hid there.

Next day, filled with remorse, the teeth began to hunt Joe. It was a long search, filled with heart breaks. Once the teeth almost caught up with Joe while he was gulping milk toast, missing by snapping distance only.

One afternoon, Salt Lake opened the Portland Beavers. The Utah team was three runs behind, ninth inning, two out and the bases filled. Joe'd been in an awful slump and was benched.

At this moment, fortunately for Salt Lake, something resembling a wide smile crawled up the players' bench and hit Jenkins where he carried his eating tooth. Whooping wildly, Joe leaped seven feet in the air. With his right hand he snatched the prodigious lower plate into his mouth; with the left he reached down for his bat.

Joe slammed a home run over the left field fence, winning the game for Salt Lake by a score of 6 to 5.

A RESOURCEFUL COOK

THIS picture in my living room," said Humming Bird Stevenson of Columbia, Tenn., "is not a reproduction of a fresh of nature, but a lifelike portrait of Blinky, my one-eyed rooster."

"That smear on the right side of his head is a glass eye," I know it's bloodshot, a pointed that way to make the other cocks overconfident. His neck is a trifle corkscrewed—that's because Blinky, in feigning to overcome the handicap of a single eye, almost wrung his own neck."

"The greatest pitting he won was when a couple of city fellows came to Columbia with their fighting birds and cleaned up."

"In the grand finale, Blinky was matched against the city champion, an Allen round-head, and I bet all I could beg, borrow or steal at odds of 5 to 1. The odds were easy to get, for word was passed to the city slickers that poor Blinky was a one-eyed cock."

"Blinky never showed better pitmanhood. Whenever the round-head struck my pride side-splipped and put his glass eye in front of the galls. After that the round-head's needles were too dull to meet a pair of open-work stockings and the match was in the bag."

Easy to Knit and Easy to Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT is a forgone conclusion among women of varied activities that knitted clothes are the logical sort to wear at play or at work. This conviction in regard to the practical wearability of things knitted has come about from actual experience, and from more theory. And so the clicking of needles goes merrily on.

There is added inspiration, too, in the knowledge that knit or crocheted yarns have been brought to such high state of perfection through modern processing that one is cheered with the assurance of dependable washability both as to shrinkage and to color fastness. Thus a new confidence has been created in the minds of the practical minded to the extent that knitted apparel has come to be recognized as simple wear rather than in the category of fleeting moods or fads.

As to the knitted items pictured they are now and they are practical, just such as you will appreciate wearing during week-end and vacation hours. The suntan halter as shown in the upper left of the group will give you all the exposure and freedom you need in beach and summer sports clothing. You can combine it with knitted bathing trunks or gaudy shorts or the popular culotte costume, or wear it with a linen skirt.

Out in the garden on a warm summer day with gay flowers about and skies that are blue it will be the frivolous dainty type of a blouse you will be waiting to fit in with the joyous landscape. Centered in the picture is a pretty blouse that is so simple and easy to crochet you can make it in a jiffy. It is cool because it is lacy. Choose yellow for the color of the mercerized crocheted cotton so that it will match the sunshine of a perfect summer day. This cunning model has practically no sleeves and is held together by a devastating about the neckline in peasant fashion.

To the left below a sheer blouse is shown knitted of mercerized crocheted cotton. It is the sort that will add the feminine touch to your mannishly tailored suit or will carry through smartly with your summer linen skirts. The rows and rows of tiny ruffles at each side above the waistline are something new. You will like this styling immensely and so will your friends for it is out of the ordinary. The sleeves puffed just above the elbow are also a smart and very new feature. The neck is high, giving that once-to-the-throat line which fashion decrees this season. This high neck effect fills the opening of a classic lapped suit jacket to perfect satisfaction.

Cool and lovely in its dainty coloring is the dress pictured to the right. The majority of dresses are knitted but this one is crocheted, soft washable knit-croch-sheen. The work goes rapidly as the stitch is a very open lace one. A dress of this type should go into every trunk that is vacation bound, for it packs, washes and wears beautifully. The soft rolled collar and the cord and tassel fastenings are style details that give "class" that is recognized at a glance.

Of course you have taken note of the crownless garden hats which the girls in the sweaters are wearing. You can make one yourself and at a trifling cost—just one of those big farmer straw hats with the crown cut out and the brim slanted up the back, rounding the corners. Finish all edges with a wide bias-cut binding of gay ging-ham and add ties of the same.

STAR-PRINT CREPE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Attractively studded with the symbol of Low Star state, this special design in honor of the centennial now being held there. The closely positioned buttons in the laple silhouette, the fanciful slit hemline, the widened puffed shoulders and the turnover collar effect are all contributing to the details. Free-flowing, allowing ease of movement, this smart-looking dress is ideal for the turn-of-the-afternoon or early evening wear.

WOMEN ADD COLOR;

DON GAY GALLUSES

Not satisfied with copying men's suits, both as to material and styling, the women are now wearing suspenders. They have discovered that galluses not only furnish an added chance to display their color and swank to the accessory theme, but these dashing skirt "holder-uppers" are exceedingly practical. In the narrow width sizes, chosen to form a daring contrast with the suit and blouse, suspenders present a smart appearance as they flash out from behind an unbuttoned jacket.

The whole idea, designers claim, is not just another fashion whim but springs directly out of style requirements set by the present trends in women's apparel; man's suits, hence suspender. Clipping onto the skirt, suspenders hold this garment in line properly, preventing it from acquiring that ungainly "satin" look.

Swim Suits Are Dark and Snug-Fitting This Season

Wine-and-white is the prize color combination for swim suits this season.

Navy-and-white comes next and then black, in lustrous suits of elastic satin.

Most of the newest suits have a dressmaker look. They are closely fitted, complete with uplift bra-siere top, halter necks and sun-backs.

The great open-spaced fed, which left the tummy bare to the sun's rays, is doing a graceful fadeout.

Negligee Ensemble

In making a silk negligee, buy enough silk to include a little jacket to match it. This can be elbow or waist length and slip on over your nightgown for breakfast in bed.

All Around the House

Cut all dead blossoms from garden plants, cut and water plants frequently during the dry hot weather.

Lemon juice and salt will remove scorch from white clothes. Hang clothes in sun until stain disappears.

When lighting a birthday cake always light the candles in the middle first and those on outside last.

Chamois gloves will be soft and pliable if a few drops of olive oil are added to the water in which they are washed.

Celery, lettuce or almost any vegetable may be refreshed by adding a little lemon juice to some cold water and holding the vegetables stand in it for a few hours.

Gangrene Discussed In Medical Article In Tribune Thursday

The death of Burke Floyd, manager of the Park Theater, this week from gas gangrene which developed following an automobile accident has caused considerable discussion and speculation among local residents. An article concerning this apparently little understood menace appeared in the Tampa "Tribune" Thursday morning.

It was written by Dr. Irving S. Catter under the general head "How to keep well" and the sub-head, "Wounds must be watched." The article is very enlightening and reads as follows:

Wounds Must Be Watched. Whenever physicians are remembered by posterity it is usually because their names have become attached to some disease. For example, Robert J. Graves, a scholarly Irish physician, is recalled in Graves' disease — scientifically known as exophthalmic goiter. Sir William Osier has his name attached to a disease of the blood.

Richard Bright, one of the kindliest of British practitioners of a century ago, is memorialized because of his description of a kidney and heart malady — Bright's disease. William H. Welch, medical scholar and philosopher, has had his name conferred upon a vicious bacillus, the cause of gas gangrene. He described this organism in 1892, and it has since been known as the Welch bacillus.

Because of the greatly increased number of traffic accidents, infection of the tissues with Welch bacteria becomes a matter of importance. In fact, it is far more to be dreaded in many respects than the possibility of lockjaw (tetanus) because the use of antitoxin has largely wiped out the aforesaid deadly menace of the tetanus bacillus. Furthermore, the use of serum that will neutralize the gas bacillus is not so widespread.

Positive diagnosis is not difficult either from the appearance of the wound or from the finding of the Welch bacilli through microscopic examination. The gas is easily demonstrated by means of X-ray plates, and the progress of the infection may be followed with fair accuracy by the use of daily radiographs. Treatment of the infection should not be delayed until gas forms, as involvement is far greater by that time. The bacteria in question produce so poisonous a toxin that the normal defenses of the body are practically paralyzed. This accounts for the rapid destruction of tissue.

The case is reported of a lad, aged five, who was struck by an automobile resulting in considerable tearing of the tissues of the right leg. On admission to the hospital the usual procedure was followed and tetanus (lockjaw) antitoxin was administered. No thought was given to the possible presence of the gas bacillus.

Within a few hours, however, the temperature rose to 104 degrees F. and the child complained of excruciating pain in the injured leg. On the following morning the limb was observed to be darker in color and much swollen and the odor from the wound was very foul. A crackling sound was heard in certain areas whenever the tissues were pressed upon. The pro-

CITRUS COMMISSION OPEN N. Y. OFFICES

Will Maintain Close Contact With North-Eastern Fruit Markets

Lakeland, July 23.—Headquarters of the sales promotion department of the Florida Citrus Commission have been established in New York City, Secretary F. E. Brigham announced today, to maintain close contact with the northern fruit trade. The offices are located at 415 Lexington avenue.

L. W. Marvin, sales promotion director, will direct the Commission's work of promoting the sale of Florida grapefruit, oranges and tangerines with the trade, as he did during the past season. He will be assisted by several experienced merchandising men working in different parts of the country.

Sales promotion plans for next season include the dissemination of accurate information about Florida fruit to distributors and dealers, the development of orange and grapefruit "week" and other retail selling stunts, and the distribution of store posters advertising Florida fruit, Brigham said.

Marketing conditions also will be studied, and Florida shippers advised of new developments affecting the sale of their shipments. An important part of the department's work, Brigham declared, will be to get the trade to capitalize upon the Commission's advertising in northern markets to increase consumer demand.

More wild ducks returned to their northern nesting grounds this year than in 1935, but the rains in numbers isn't great enough to justify any step in the program to restore the former great flights of migratory waterfowl, says Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey. This is the first time estimates by the Survey have shown an increase over the previous year in the number of ducks returning to nesting grounds.

ence of the Welch infection was immediately recognized and surgical removal of all the affected tissue was undertaken at once. At the same time, sizable doses of antitoxin were administered. Three days later the temperature had dropped to comfortable level and the patient was in complete recovery. It is doubtful if the could have been saved had not serum been on hand.

Florida Bond Men Censor Unethical Bond Committees

Orlando, July 22.—(FNS)—A resolution aimed at unscrupulous bond dealers throughout the state and designed to preserve the ethics and respectability of municipal bond dealing in Florida was passed at a recent meeting here of the officers and board of governors of the Florida Security Dealers Association.

According to findings of the association, certain dealers and attorneys have been purchasing defaulted bonds and coupons at discounts and bringing suits against distressed municipal taxing units with hopes of collecting such obligations in full. Condemning the practice, the association urges its members to sell past due obligations with care. Sale is to be refused when such is to be used as the basis of suits for embarrassing taxing units. In addition, all members are urged to ascertain if possible and make known the identity of actual owners of bonds so involved and taking such other steps as the Board of Governors deems advisable to stop unethical practices.

Farmer Thomas gave a new hand a platter of mushrooms for his supper. "Isn't anyone else having mushrooms for supper?" asked the hand, noticing that he was the only one eating them. "We like them for breakfast best," said the farmer. Next morning Thomas went to his new hand's room and asked him how he felt. "Fine," said the hand. Returning to the kitchen, and putting his head round the door, he shouted to his wife: "It's all right, Jane, they're not foodstuffs!"

GREATLY EXAGGERATED

ONE of the most famous of Mark Twain's witty remarks resulted from a case of mistaken identity. In 1897 his cousin, James H. Clemens, was taken seriously ill in London. Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) happened to be in the British capital at the time and somehow a report got out that the great humorist had died. Thereupon several reporters from London newspapers called at the house where Twain was staying to get the details of his death. Great was their surprise when the supposed dead man opened the door to admit them. When they confessed to him their purpose in coming, he said: "You find a pretty lively corpse, don't you?" "But our editors expect us to bring back a story about your death," persisted one reporter. "What shall we do?" "Well," said Mark Twain, "you can just tell them that the report of my death has been greatly exaggerated!"

The Kinkajou

The kinkajou is a species of the raccoon family found in South America, and sometimes known as a honey bear, a yellow lemur, a manaviti, and even a Mexican weasel. The adult is the size of a large cat and its fur is short, thick and yellowish brown in coloring with shades of deep brown on the neck and over the back and ribs. A peculiar feature of this covering is the flexibility of the skin. It can be stretched several inches from the body with no discomfort to the animal and serves as a great protection when attacked. The long tail is much the same as a monkey's and used in the same fashion for balancing or grasping an object.

Two days after the birth of her daughter, Anne died. Shortly after, the father died. The Lardes, grandfathers, the two with them to Oregon where, without child companions, Deborah grew up. To safeguard her grandfather had arranged for her to marry Stuart, son of Courtney Graham, when of age. When Deborah was fifteen, her grandfather died, and she had been set aside to keep the family, but a market crash had made it enough for them to live on. This was unknown to Deborah's grandfather, an invalid, Gary, a great deal, managing the finances. At twenty, the thought of marriage to Stuart, whom Deborah it had been planned that Deborah must marry in Oregon, where they were to be married. Tubby and Bryn await Deborah in a hotel in Princeton. Over a period of one year the groom is to prove he is no fortune hunter and can make Deborah happy to the satisfaction of her grandfather. Otherwise, the fortune is to go to charity. This still is somewhat ambiguous as to whom Deborah is to marry. The girl arrives with Holworthy, Tubby is surprised to find her charming and sweet.

Deborah was married and at home. It was less than a week since she had gone away from the mountain, but it seemed a thousand years. She was so much older, now. She knew so much more than she had known a week ago that her thoughts were like the thoughts of a stranger; she looked at her old life and everything that had been in it with a stranger's eyes, clear, wondering, critical. They were at luncheon, she and Grandmother and the man seated at the long table in the middle of the vast shadowy dining room. The ceiling was high and supported by dark heavy columns. At one end was a great fireplace with a carved oak mantelpiece and a stone hearth. Deborah sat up and moved the silver spoon beside her plate. She looked across at Grandmother. Grandmother was wearing her gray satin dress for the first time since Grandfather's death. Her white hair was pinned more loosely than usual, and she looked at Deborah with a face. Her eyes were sparkling, alight, happy. There was pink in her cheeks, and a threat of it in her lips. It was as if she had come to life again, too. An hour ago, when they had come up the weed-grown drive, Grandmother had been standing at the silver, dressed from head to foot in the black she had worn for so long, with one hand pressed to her heart in the old familiar gesture of a look of fearful questioning in her eyes. The man had stopped the big battered looking motor-car, and helped Deborah out. Grandmother had looked at Deborah at all, except for one quick encompassing glance as if to make sure that she was still intact. Her eyes had gone to the man, and he had stood tall and straight and smiling that faint steady smile of his waiting. The sun had glinted on his brown hair and had made his brown skin look very clear and wholesome. Grandmother had looked into his eyes for a long time. A tense, silent, searching look; and then she had drawn a deep breath and put out her hand. She had smiled back at him, a fluttering, relieved happy smile, and had taken on both her little white hands at his own. Oh, he was living up to his bargain. He seemed to understand the situation at a glance and decide what it was he must do. It was perfect, and Deborah knew that she should have been grateful and appreciative, but instead she was angry. Angry because . . . well, because, watching him with Grandmother, she had realized suddenly that all the way up from San Francisco he had been acting with her, too, amusing her, making her laugh, letting her interest in things, thinking of her comfort, because it was part of the bargain. On the trip she had forgotten the bargain, the fact that he was going to be paid, and paid well, as he had expressed it, for giving their marriage the appearance of a happy one, the appearance of a real marriage he mattered? Grandmother said suddenly. "You are quite pale!" "Nothing, Grandmother," Deborah answered, and managed to smile. "It's rather a long trip up from San Francisco when you're not accustomed to motoring," the man said. "I am sure it must have been trying," Grandmother said, still looking at her tenderly. There was something new and seductive in her expression. "Now that your greatest problem is solved, surely we can make a real change in our way of living." "What do you mean?" Deborah asked quickly. "Oh, so many things, dear," Grandmother leaned forward. "We must furnish ourselves up, for one thing. We are becoming quite careless as to our ways of living. I've been feeling guilty about it for a long time, but I've been so worried about Deborah that nothing else seemed of any particular importance. But now I feel," she finished briskly, "that we must have two or three extra servants at once, have the grounds put in order, have the electric plant repaired . . ."

"But—" Deborah said faintly, and stopped. "What, my darling? Would you not like to see the house filled with young company, with music, with life? To have a host of pretty new clothes?" "We don't know anyone to fill the house with," Deborah protested miserably. "Stuart does," Grandmother said with confidence. "He told me he had a few moments ago that he had a great many friends in San Francisco." "Grandmother . . ."

She smiled. "Now, Deborah, of course we should not ask anyone for some time, my dear. You and Stuart must have a month or two of your own, first. But during that time the house and grounds can be taken care of; they have been neglected so long it will be quite an undertaking. Since your grandfather wished that we should spend a year here after your marriage, I think we must try and make it a happy year, and in it prepare you as best we can to mingle in society when we emerge at last from our retreat."

"I never want to go away from here," Deborah cried, "never, never!"

"Why, Deborah?" Grandmother said in surprise. "Stuart, the dear child, is quite overwrought. Of course you will go away from here, my dear, you and Stuart. The whole world is before you. But I am right, Stuart? You would not be satisfied to spend all your life here?" He hesitated, but only for a fraction of a second. Then, "I'm not at all sure that I shouldn't, if Deborah were to be here," he said.

Deborah jumped from her chair. At half-past five, "What is necessary?" she asked him bitterly. Grandmother stood up too, a slight smile on her face. "What is necessary?" she asked in a cold, clear voice. "No," Deborah began, and stopped. "Nothing," she said slowly. "I am overwrought, Grandmother, I think I will go and rest for a little."

"Of course, dear," she answered, relieved. "Of course, I understand. Go along then . . . and your things are in the silver rooms in the south wing."

"The silver rooms?" Deborah repeated. Involuntarily her startled eyes flew to the man and gray and ivory clung together. Deborah's cheeks began to burn. She looked away.

"No objections, my dear. The silver rooms were always intended for you, but you preferred to be married rather than in the south wing alone. Go along, my darling, and perhaps after a little I will follow your example. I am confident the happiness have quite tired you out."

Deborah went across the room and through the door into the south wing, to stamp and kick and scream. This must be how a rabbit felt when it was caught in a snare. She went on, up the long curving staircase, down the corridor into the south wing, through the second door on the right. Inside was a sitting room, with walls paneled in silver, with rugs and chairs and curtains done in deep violet. There was a huge four-poster bed against the inner wall, with a beautiful violet and tarnished silver spread upon it, and a long silver bowl of violets on a little table at one end. And at the foot of the bed, a man's heavy pigskin bag, as yet unopened.

She went across to it and lifted it. It was a violet bag. It was heavy. She went through the bedroom and the sitting room to the corridor. She put the bag down with a thump and then, as the door, pulled the sitting room door shut with a bang and shot the bolt.

Pinafore for Little Girl

The clever cutting of this useful pinafore is shown in the small diagram beside the little girl. You will see at once that this frock requires no sewing and of course the feature which so greatly intrigues children is the butterfly which forms the neck. Notice how simple it is to put on, merely slipped over the head and tied at each side. Mothers find it a great help when a child can be used as an apron over a frock, which must be kept clean, and a great help when a child can be used as an apron over a frock, which must be kept clean, and a great help when a child can be used as an apron over a frock, which must be kept clean.

MONROE (?) DOCTRINE

WE CALL it the "Monroe Doctrine" but it might more properly be called the "Adams Doctrine," for John Quincy Adams, Monroe's secretary of state, was the man who saw the need for it and formulated it even though it did appear in Monroe's handwriting in his message to congress in December, 1823.

But if you want to go back even farther for its origin, then a pretty Russian baroness comes in for her share of responsibility. Her name was Barbara Juliane von Vietinghoff-Scheel and she was the youthful wife of elderly Baron von Krudener, Russian ambassador to Berlin. Also she became the sweetheart of Alexander I, czar of all the Russias, and under her spell he supported her scheme for a Holy Alliance by which, she believed, the world could be run according to the principles of Christian charity.

All the sovereigns of Europe, except the pope, the king of England and the sultan of Turkey, joined the Holy Alliance, thereby pledging themselves to aid each other when the need arose. When Spain lost her American colonies and called upon the Holy Alliance to help her get them back, George Canning, British foreign minister, proposed that the United States join with England in opposing the plan.

John Quincy Adams, however, proposed that an independent declaration of policy be issued. It was the famous Monroe Doctrine which brought about the collapse of the Holy Alliance.

They say Helen of Troy had "the face that launched a thousand ships," but the pretty face of Baroness von Krudener has been responsible for keeping the fleets of the United States, for the last century, ready to back up the "Monroe Doctrine" which was formulated by John Quincy Adams.

LIGHTS OUT

IF THE lights in a convention hall hadn't gone out when they did, James G. Blaine might have been President of the United States. It happened in Cincinnati in 1876. When the Republican national convention opened, Blaine was the outstanding candidate for the nomination. Although he was short of the necessary majority on the first six ballots, on the seventh ballot he had the votes of 381 delegates, almost enough to win the nomination.

It was growing late and the lights were turned on gas jets, for this was before the day of the electric light. The Blaine men were hurrying the vote, to put their man over. Then suddenly the lights went out and the business of the convention was suspended while the management of the hall tried to locate the trouble. The Blaine men were frantic. Finally the superintendent of the gas works announced that the trouble couldn't be located. So the only thing to do was to adjourn until the next day.

When the delegates reconvened, the anti-Blaine forces had rallied and united on Rutherford B. Hayes, who was nominated. In the much-disputed election of 1876 he defeated Samuel J. Tilden, the Democratic nominee, and went to the White House. It might have been "Blaine of Maine" who went there, if the lights in Cincinnati hadn't gone out that night.

GREATLY EXAGGERATED

ONE of the most famous of Mark Twain's witty remarks resulted from a case of mistaken identity.

In 1897 his cousin, James H. Clemens, was taken seriously ill in London. Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) happened to be in the British capital at the time and somehow a report got out that the great humorist had died.

Thereupon several reporters from London newspapers called at the house where Twain was staying to get the details of his death. Great was their surprise when the supposed dead man opened the door to admit them. When they confessed to him their purpose in coming, he said, "You find a pretty lively corpse, don't you?"

"But our editors expect us to bring back a story about your death," persisted one reporter. "What shall we do?"

"Well," said Mark Twain. "You can just tell them that the report of my death has been greatly exaggerated!"

The Kinkajou

The kinkajou is a species of the raccoon family found in South America, and sometimes known as a honey bear, a yellow lemur, a manakin, and even a Mexican wessel. The adult is the size of a large cat and its fur is short, thick and yellowish brown in coloring with shading of deep brown on the neck and over the back and ribs. A peculiar feature of this covering is the sensibility of the skin. It can be stretched several inches from the body with no discomfort to the animal and serves as a great protection when attacked. The long tail is stretched several inches from the body and serves as a monkey's and used in the same fashion for holding or grasping an object.

AVON PARK, FLORIDA, FRIDAY, JULY 31, 1936

[PRICE: FIVE CENTS]

AVON PARK MAY LOSE NATIONAL GUARD BATTERY

Qualified Officers Must Be Secured By Sept. 1 For Battery To Remain

Avon Park will lose the headquarters battery, 56th Field Artillery Brigade, F. N. G., unless qualified officers are secured before September 1. This was the pronouncement made by General Sumter Lowry and Col. A. L. P. Sands at a meeting of representative citizens held Wednesday morning at the Jaccaranda Hotel. The meeting had been called to consider ways and means to retain the battery here following the several weeks ago when Adjutant General Vian Collins which stated the battery would be moved.

It was stated by Gen. Lowry that word had been sent through a Major Jones some six months ago to the local school trustees concerning Mr. Yates of Plant City. The general said Mr. Yates was a qualified officer who would move to Avon Park if a suitable teaching position could be found for him in the Avon Park schools. Earl Hart, speaking for the school trustees said they had only learned of this recently, after all the teaching positions had been filled. He had talked with Mr. Yates the previous Tuesday evening in Lakeland and he had now accepted a position as principal of the Dover schools. There is one position open in the Avon Park schools, caused by resignation. Mr. Hart said, but the salary is too low to interest Mr. Yates.

Gen. Lowry said the battery here had an unsatisfactory rating due to lack of officers, although the enlisted personnel is good. The battery is on probation until October 1. The general said he was 40 old for the position and the officers must be young men from 25 to 30 years of age, he said. The battery will be moved unless proper officers are secured, he said, although he would like to see the battery remain in Avon Park, he added.

The question of the new armory, being finished also came up and City Clerk Francis Shockey said he had received assurance from W. P. A. authorities that the building would be completed by the end of the year.

The meeting closed with the understanding that local citizens would do all in their power to secure the necessary officers in order to keep the battery here.

Engelmann Moves Into Own Building; Is Better Equipped

Alfred Engelmann has finished moving his hatchery into the old ash and door building on South Forest avenue which he recently purchased. The new quarters are larger and more airy and allow plenty of room for the installation of additional equipment which is expected to be necessary in the near future as business conditions warrant.

The incubators have been installed on the ground floor where the office and shipping room are also located. A special room for the baby chick batteries is also provided on the same floor. The batteries for fryers have been placed upstairs where there is ample space for them.

A sprinkler system is being installed and a number of improvements and alterations have been made. The hatchery as now constituted is the largest of its kind in the state and it has the largest export business in the entire United States.

With the Pan American Airways planning to install new equipment next month the shipment of baby chicks by air to the West Indies and Central and South American countries are expected to increase considerably. Mr. Engelmann is the planner in exporting baby chicks and has built up a large business with a number of repeat orders.

Mr. Engelmann has a large collection of foreign and domestic stamps from orders and correspondence concerning the export of baby chicks. These envelopes have been framed and are on display at the hatchery.

Miss Shirley Page Shepard arrived this week from Fredericksburg, Va., where she has been attending summer school and is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shepard.

Rotary Club Heard National and State Convention Reports

Avon Park Rotarians at their weekly luncheon Wednesday at the Jaccaranda Hotel heard reports on the Rotary International convention held recently at Atlantic City, N. J. and on the district assembly held last week at Clearwater. Jack Stephenson of Sebring, who represented both his own and the Avon Park club, spoke about the international convention. The report on the Clearwater meeting was made by Walter Betts and Paul Garber, both members of the Avon Park club.

The meeting also saw the second issue of the Avon Park club's bulletin, the first issue of which appeared last week and was very well received by the club members and everyone else who saw a copy. Paul Garber and Bill Hestington are in charge of the publication. The bulletin set forth the rules governing the international attendance contest which is now in full swing and urged the Avon Park members to do their part.

Besides Jack Stephenson of Sebring, other visitors at the meeting were: F. W. Shockey and Earl Hart of Avon Park; Prof. P. J. Gustaf, Guy Maxey, W. W. Bell and Louis Almsmeyer of Sebring; Major Edward Keenan and Ken Smith of Fort Pierce; and Rev. J. H. Gamble of Grand Forks, N. D.

FARM POSSIBILITIES HERE, BEST IN STATE

Railroad Agricultural Tells Rotarians of Istokopka Farm Development

The importance of the farm development in the shores of Istokopka lake was explained to a large audience at the regular luncheon meeting of the Sebring Rotary Club Monday night by R. A. Carlton, president of the Istokopka Agricultural Railroad. Mr. Carlton is recognized as one of the best informed men on agricultural matters in the state. L. H. Almsmeyer, president of the club, introduced the speaker.

The Istokopka section has been considered one of the best agricultural possibilities in the state for the past seven years, Mr. Carlton stated, and its value has been thoroughly proven by Ivey Fitch and others who have been developing truck farms there for the past few years.

The soil in the Istokopka area is unlike the Everglades made of peat soil containing minerals as well as vegetable matter. Mr. Carlton stated, and although it requires some fertilization it will produce more than the soils around Okechobee lake, and will produce more varieties of crops.

Mr. Carlton displayed a map showing the various land elevations in this section of the state and explained how and why Istokopka has better cold protection than the area around Okechobee. The land now being developed is 48 feet above sea level and slopes one foot to the mile toward the Everglades section providing air drainage for the crops of cold air, the speaker stated.

Experiments show that when cold waves hit the state the air averages one degree higher temperature for each foot of elevation. Mr. Carlton said, which will give the Istokopka area and advantage of several degrees of cold protection above the area of the shores of Okechobee. It was this feature, the speaker stated, which was the prime factor in getting the Seaboard to build the proposed 10-mile spur track into the area. The development grows the spur may be extended, he stated.

Mr. Carlton pointed out that in a very few years more truck farms will be on the shore of Okechobee lake that the population increased in that area more than 30 percent. He predicted that the population of the area near Istokopka will grow and farming will develop as fast as the Okechobee county, giving Highlands county the best farming area in the state.

There are now between 800 and 1000 acres of crop production planned and in cultivation in the area now. Two years ago the acreage was only 100 acres. The speaker principally to the experimental development of Ivey Fitch.

Besides the members of the Istokopka club, practically every member of the Sebring Rotary Club was present. Many prominent citizens from other sections of the county attended the meeting.

URGENT INVESTIGATION RACING COMMISSION HERE AFTER TEN YEARS SERVICE

Tax League Reports Operating Cost Compared To Other States

Jacksonville, July 30.—(Special)—In an open letter to the County Commissioners of Florida, released today, the Florida Tax Revision League gives startling figures on "the excessive cost of operating the Florida State Racing Commission" in 1936 compared to the cost in 1932 and the cost of similar departments in other states.

The Racing Commission issued a 23 page statement on 1936 operations recently, presumably in response to a request of the league and similar requests by resolutions of the commissioners of a number of counties. The league points out, however, that this statement does not include a list of the employed personnel of the commission, their rate of pay, duties, period of employment and expenses, and again asks for this information.

According to the league's statement, the Racing Commission used $50,450, or 6.8% of the race track taxes collected in 1932, for operating expenses, but that the expenses have been increased each year and in 1936 operating expenses consumed $151,171, or 23.8% of the collections. It was further pointed out that other states with similar racing laws used a much smaller percentage of the tax collected for operating expenses. California used only 1.2%; Maryland 2.1%; New Hampshire 4.1%; and Massachusetts 8.1%. The league says that the operating expenses of the Massachusetts Racing Commission have been under investigation by the legislature and a reduction ordered.

In a recent statement the State Racing Commission issued a committee of the State Association of County Commissioners to meet with them for an investigation. The league claims no organization in the State, except the legislature, has legal authority to make an investigation and says in conclusion: "In view of the above facts, we feel that the operation of the Florida State Racing Commission."

VAUGHNS LEAVE HERE AFTER TEN YEARS SERVICE

Popular Pastor and Wife Are Tendered Farewell Party Last Friday Evening

Dr. A. P. Vaughn has resigned from the pastorate of the Union Congregational church here after 10 years service. He delivered his last sermon Sunday morning, his subject being, "The Liveliest of the King."

Dr. and Mrs. Vaughn have made a host of friends who will regret to see them leave. They came here in October, 1926 and during their stay here endeared themselves to the community. They will make their home temporarily in Punta Gorda where they have property interests and where Dr. Vaughn will supply at the First Presbyterian church. They also plan to take a well earned vacation.

It is not generally known that Dr. Vaughn has been honored on numerous occasions by the publication of his sermons in various theological magazines and other publications both in this country and abroad. They have also appeared, together with ministers of the gospel, in "Vital Speeches," compiled by Greenville Kleiser and published by the Funk and Wagnalls Co. His sermon, "Whence the Color of the Rose," which was delivered here on December 9, 1934 appeared in the latest issue of this book.

Honoring Dr. and Mrs. Vaughn, members of the church were hosts at a farewell gathering held in the church parlors on Friday evening last week. Games were played during the evening. The Vaughns were presented with a beautiful cedar chest and an electrical clock set as gifts from the church membership. Following the close of the games, a collection for fruit punch and cake were served by the young ladies of the church to those present, numbering nearly 50.

Mrs. Vaughn has assisted her husband in his church work and her leaving will also be a distinct loss to the community.

DAIRYMEN SELLING FAKE ORANGE JUICE

Citrus Commission Finds Sale of Synthetic Beverage Damages Market

Tampa, July 27.—The rapidly increasing sale of bottled orangeades, containing little or no fruit juice but advertised as health food, threatens to lessen the demand for oranges, Marvin H. Walker, publicity director of the Florida Citrus Commission, said today.

"Nearly half of the dairies of the country now are distributing these beverages, and many are advertising them in such a way as to make people believe they have all of the healthful qualities of fresh orange juice," Walker told the members of the Tampa Advertising club.

"We have found that orangeades, delivered by dairies along with milk, are being consumed at breakfast, which means that they are replacing fresh fruit juice. A gigantic deception is being perpetrated upon the public when they are advertised to make the people drinking them believe they are getting the benefits of fresh, unadulterated orange juice."

"As beverages these drinks are all right. Their sale for refreshment purposes should be encouraged, for they provide an outlet for some low-grade fruit which cannot be marketed otherwise. But even California citrus people who developed the concentrates for making these beverages are beginning to wonder to what extent they will affect fresh fruit sales. It takes only a little fruit to make a lot of the stuff."

Walker said a survey of 410 dairies throughout the east, south and middle west has shown that 52.9 percent of them distribute some form of orange drink, and that sales in recent months have reached one gallon of orange drink for every 25 gallons of milk. Analysis has shown that these products are made from a concentrate or an essential oil of orange, with little or no juice added when mixed, he declared. He said a preliminary survey had indicated that at least half of the orange drinks delivered by dairies to homes are made of this stuff.

Florida Royal Palms May Be Exterminated, Says Plant Authority

Gainesville, July 29.—Drainage and road building may cause extermination of the majestic royal palm, one of Florida's most beautiful trees, according to a statement from O. F. Cook, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, to the State Agricultural Extension Service.

The fire hazard is being increased by drainage and road building and this may mean the final disappearance of the species from Florida, Mr. Cook avers.

Only one group of royal palms have been preserved and made accessible to the public—at the Royal Palm Park, southwest of Homestead, and even a part of this small reservation burned several years ago.

The plant specialist explains that the pioneer period of cutting and burning, which lasted more than three centuries, reduced the royal palms to a few scattered groups protected from fire by open water or deep swamps.

The species may grow to a height of 100 feet or more, their straight, tapering trunks, ash-gray in color, ending in a plume of rich green leaves. When young, they grow as forest undergrowth and do better in grove than sheltered than when set along streets and in open ground. Thousands of young palms are destroyed every year. Seed are scattered by birds, but the seedlings, which look like coarse grass, often are hoed out as weeds.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLE SALES OFFICE OPENS

Office Established In Orlando To Handle Sales of Florida Products

Orlando, July 30.—The continued prosperity of Florida's fruit-vegetable industry has prompted the establishment in Orlando of a new branch of the National Fruit & Vegetable Exchange, Inc. It is announced here, and both Florida citrus and southern vegetables will be handled this season. This National organization has 175 terminal sales offices, covering all important carlot markets in the United States and Canada.

The charge of the Florida district office at district manager is A. W. McKay, former chief of the Cooperative Marketing Division of the Federal Farm Board, and also formerly secretary-treasurer of Tree-Gold, along with Perry N. Whitehurst, district sales manager, who has been in the thick of the vegetable deals at Sanford for the past eight years and who has fifteen years of experience as sales manager for fruit-vegetable co-operators.

The purpose of the National organization in Florida will be to take fruits and vegetables—the packed product—and then to market these commodities to the best possible advantage for producers. The National was organized in 1931, with the assistance of the Federal Farm Board, by cooperative marketing associations, and has been assisted and supervised by the Farm Credit Administration. The organization in more than five years of operations has developed many outlets which now depend upon this big organization for regular supplies of fruits and vegetables. Now the National Fruit & Vegetable Exchange's office here has decided to expand to include Florida products among the commodities offered their customers.

A capable and experienced staff will handle sales and distribution through the Florida office, and direction of Messrs. McKay and Whitehurst. The National is owned by its members, cooperative associations and grower-shippers, and is controlled by a board of directors representing members. The primary function will be to market fruits and vegetables by this important cooperative marketing organization at this time. National headquarters are at New York.

Winodaus Club to Meet. The Winodaus Club will hold an all day meeting next Friday at the home of Mrs. Charlotte Leigh. The club, which has charge of the meeting and she wishes that all members be present.

"It is to stimulate interest in the Boy Scout organization in our community, the Avon Park Boy Scout Council, together with the Rotary Club, will have the Rotary meeting next Wednesday, Jaccaranda Hotel, 12:15, devoted to Boy Scouts and prospective Scouts. You are invited to attend the meeting."

Rotary luncheon next Wednesday and hope that you can be present. You will be guest of our club for lunch and the meeting to follow.

Rev. J. H. Gamble, a veteran scout for the past ten years will give a talk on Scouting, which he felt sure you enjoy. Rev. Gamble has been scoutmaster of three troops, namely, at Roscoe, Ill., Chicago, Ill. and recently at Fort Worth, D. C. This year he had 48 boys in his troop, considered to be the best in the council area. The troop received a citation from National Headquarters for its work in the 1935-36 season. The troop won the 34th Merit Badges during the season, October to May, 1935. The troop won the 34th Merit Badges during the season, October to May, 1935. John Rohr was elected last Monday's Scoutmaster of the Avon Park Boy Scouts and we hope that you will give him every assistance possible in making the Avon Park troop one of the best in the State. It can be done if we all pull together. WE WILL EXPECT YOU AT THE JACCARANDA HOTEL NEXT WEDNESDAY AT 12:15. If you cannot attend, please let me know not later than Monday. The Hotel will have to know how many plates to prepare for lunch.

This meeting is being held with the hope that it will create more interest in Boy Scout work in this community and it is hoped that all parents of boys of scout age will cooperate with the Rotary Club in this effort. The majority of the neighboring towns have working scout troops and the club believes similar results can be accomplished here with little effort.

On Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Jaccaranda Hotel there will be a meeting of Boy Scouts and boys interested in scouting together with their parents. A capable speaker from Lakeland has been invited and a scout official will have charge of the meeting.

Raymond Dilley In Auto Wreck

Raymond Dilley was painfully but not seriously hurt in an automobile wreck about 8 o'clock Wednesday morning on state road eight near the east end filling station. Accompanied by his wife he was coming to work at the post office and while making the turn at the filling station his car was hit by a Tropical Line Supply truck coming from the mill quarries on the old Sebring road. The impact of the collision wrecked the left hand door of the car and Dilley who was driving was bruised and shaken. Mrs. Dilley was uninjured.

S. L. Kelley of Babson Park was a business visitor here Tuesday.

Curiosa Americana

IF YOU like to "talk back, wide and handsome," you might practice up by learning the text of this letter which a Louisiana Congressman once wrote to a gentleman in Virginia with whom he seems to have had a disagreement. Here is his letter:

"Sir:—You have behaved like an impertinent acrolyt—like those infamous crossbreeds who envious of my moral exaltitude carry their tongue to the height of creating my polychromatic genius with which I shew to enlighten the tongue of the weightless. Sir, you have crassly parodied my own pet words, as though they were tangrams. I will not concede reproaches. I would adduce a veil over the atrocious ingratitude which has charmed even my unscrupulous heart. I am silent on the foolishness which my cordial fancy must have given you when I offered to become your fan and admirer. I will not speak of the uplifted, the absterge you have shown in exacerbating me; one whose genius you should have approached with the stiffness of a steel comb. So, I tell you, Sir, cynically and without superfluous words, nothing will render inexcusable your conduct. I warn you that I will venerate your nose if I thought your moral distaste could be thereby performed. If I thought that I should not incorporate my reputation by such a degradation. Go, taxigrapher; your onesquinate drudge obeisance from the greatest poet since Milton, and draws upon your head this letter, which will drive you to Webster, and send you to sleep over it."

"Knowledge is power! and power is mercy; so I wish you to re-voice that it may prove an eternal hypocrite."

First American Librarian

THE first American librarian was a Frenchman! He was Louis Timothee, the son of a Huguenot refugee who left France when the Edict of Nantes was revoked, learned printing in Holland and from there emigrated to Philadelphia. Soon afterwards Benjamin Franklin hired him to work in his print shop, and when Franklin and his associates in the " Junto " pooled their book resources and established what was in fact, if not in name, the first public library in the United States, Timothee was placed in charge of it.

On November 14, 1782, he and a committee of directors of the " Junto " signed a petition of agreement which provided for the library's attendance in the rooms from 2 to 3 p. m. on Wednesdays and from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. on Saturdays. Only subscribers might borrow books but all " civil gentlemen " could use the library as a reading and reference collection. Eventually Timothee Americanized his name to Timothy and moved to Charleston, S. C., where he purchased the Carolina Gazette and opened a printing and publishing shop which soon became one of the leading establishments of its kind in the South.

OSLO, NORWAY'S CAPITAL

Oslo was the ancient name of the capital of Norway, the city being founded, according to Norwegian tradition, in 1047 by King Harald Hardrada, and by the end of the Fourteenth century had become the chief city of the kingdom. In 1624 this city was destroyed by fire. King Christian IV immediately rebuilt the capital on the opposite side of the Akre river and named it Kristiania, or, to Swedish Christians, But Oslo continued to be the name of a suburb on the east side of the Akre where the original city had stood. Soon after the World war a movement began in Norway to have the name of the capital changed back to its early form. This was done on July 15, 1925, by the Norwegian parliament, and after January 1, 1926, Oslo again became the official name of the capital.

"The Man Who O-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

FRANK L. HAGEN

DARK HORSE
WITH President Roosevelt's nomination by the Democrats a certainty for a long time and the selection of Governor Landon strongly indicated for several months before the Republican convention met, this wasn't a year for "dark horses." A "dark horse" is American political slang applied to a man who is not generally mentioned as a candidate previous to a convention but who wins the nomination when the delegates fail to agree on one of the leading candidates.

The phrase started as English racing slang, originating in the practice by jockeys of dyeing black the hair of fast horses in order to enter them in races under another name and then clean up in the betting. The first recorded use of the term was in Benjamin Disraeli's "The Duke," published in 1831. In it he speaks of "a dark horse" which had never been heard of, running past the standard in sweeping triumph. Gradually the use of the term was extended to apply to any horse, regardless of color, which won unexpectedly and similarly it was applied to candidates for public office.

American political history affords a number of examples of dark horses capturing the Presidential nomination but only a very few of them have gone on to occupy the White House. In 1844 James K. Polk of Tennessee won the Democratic nomination, at Baltimore when there was a deadlock between ex-President Martin Van Buren, asking a second term, and Lewis Cass of Michigan.

Against the Democrats assembled in Baltimore to choose their standard-bearer and again Lewis Cass was a leading candidate with James Buchanan of Pennsylvania and Stephen A. Douglas, the "Little Giant" of Illinois, furnishing the principal opposition. But again there was a deadlock and when at last the tide began to turn toward Brig. Gen. Franklin Pierce, again there was a stampede and this "dark horse" from New Hampshire was nominated.

In the election he defeated the Whig candidate, Gen. Winfield Scott, under whom he had served in the Mexican war.

As for the Republicans in 1876 they passed up their strongest man, James G. Blaine of Maine, and his principal opponent, O. P. Morton of Indiana, and gave the nomination to Grover Cleveland, Ohio's "favorite son," who defeated Samuel Tilden, the Democratic candidate.

In 1880 they turned down President Grant's bid for a third term, again passed over Blaine, and gave the nomination to John Sherman of Ohio, another strong contender, and finally selected another Buckeye "dark horse"—Gen. James A. Garfield. The most recent Republican "dark horse" to win the nomination and election was still another Ohioan—Sen. Warren G. Harding who was chosen after the Lowden and Wood deadlock at the Chicago convention in 1920.

G. O. F.
PERHAPS you never heard of a young printer named T. B. Dowden, but he was the man who made G. O. F. a synonym for the Republican party.

In 1884, the year that the Republicans finally nominated James G. Blaine for the Presidency, young Dowden applied for work at the Cincinnati Gazette and got it. About 3:30 o'clock one morning, just before the Gazette went to press, Dowden took from his pocket a piece of copy marked "Must go in ten lines." He soon found himself in difficulty.

"My copy ends with 'Grand Old Party' and I have two words left over after 'I've set the ten lines,'" he told the foreman of the shop.

"What shall I do?" "Trove 'em away and use your intelligence!" exclaimed the foreman impatiently. "No, wait! 'em short . . . get 'em in some way! Abbreviate 'em."

So Dowden went back to his case and the next morning the Gazette came out with this sentence on the front page: "The Hon. James G. Blaine will address the meeting on 'Achievements of the G. O. P.'"

At the meeting that night the Republican candidate was concluding a two-hour speech when a voice seated down from the gallery: "Why don't you tell us something about GOP and what it did?" "Why, my friend," retorted Blaine, "I've been talking about GOP all evening. The word GOP contains the initial letters of the Grand Old Party and that is its official and abbreviated name." The audience roared with laughter, but Blaine didn't crack a smile. He little realized that he had given currency to an expression which would become a trademark to millions—a trademark attached to a major political party by a hurried young printer named T. B. Dowden.

Blooded Horses Are Revered in Kentucky.

Owned by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WSD Service.

SOME 40,000 acres of land, much of it magnificent virgin forest, will be included in the Mammoth Cave National park in Kentucky, in the long struggle to establish this national park. Maurice H. Thatcher, for many years United States representative from Kentucky, was a prime mover. Discovered in 1803, Mammoth Cave was considered the largest national cavern in America until the discovery of the Carlsbad caverns in New Mexico. The underground passages are of remarkable extent, probably underlining the entire area of the proposed park development. Almost every dweller in the neighborhood has a cave of his own to which he seeks to attract visitors.

Underground rivers in which swim eyeless fish are a weird feature of the caverns. Besides these there are vast stalactites and stalagmites, the best of which are seen in the part of the cavern reached through the New Entrance. A "frozen Niagara" of salmon-colored rock and a stalactite, which, when illuminated by an electric light placed behind it, shadows the perfectly molded form of a beautiful woman stepping down as if to bathe in the subterranean river, are unique.

There are onyx caves and crystal caves; one might probably pass weeks going through them all. It was in one of these that Floyd Collins met his death.

Beyond Mammoth Cave to the west winds the beautiful Green river known as one of the deepest fresh water streams in the country.

In this neighborhood was shed the first Kentucky blood of the Civil war, when Granville Allen was shot. Families were torn asunder by the difference of allegiance. Few states knew the horror of Civil war as did Kentucky. To understand what war meant to the people of one state only to be reminded that Jefferson Davis was born near Hopkinsville, not far from Bowling Green, and that Abraham Lincoln was born near Hodgenville, a few miles to the north.

Birthplace of Lincoln.
At Hodgenville, a stately memorial shelters the humble log cabin in which Lincoln was born. Simplicity marks the place as it marked the great soul it fostered. Visitors pause for a drink from the Lincoln spring.

Memories of Lincoln linger in the very air between Hodgenville and Bardonia. To know the Lincoln family moved before young Abraham was two years old, and there they lived until he was eight. His earliest recollections, he wrote, were of Knob creek, and how he was saved from drowning there by the quick aid of a chum. Not much chance of drowning in the creek now; it is little more than a rivulet.

If there is a house in the world worthy to inspire music, it is "My Old Kentucky Home," near Bardonia. While a guest in the house, then owned by his kinsfolk, the Bowan family, Stephen Collins Foster composed that deathless ballad, "My Old Kentucky Home."

It wrote the music, it is said, at a desk in the wide hall, the sun streaming through the door opening toward the slave quarters. That selfsame desk still stands in its wonted place, the most precious of Kentucky's furniture relics.

Even without the Foster tradition, the home would be priceless. It makes no attempt at ostentation, but it is peopled with ghosts of the past. On the walls behind the house the magnetic orator and statesman used to pace back and forth planning his speeches.

Through the perfect green of the Blue Grass country you may drive to High Bridge, where a railroad bridge 200 feet above the water spans the Kentucky. Crossing the river on a ferry, you approach old Shakerstown, once the home of a strange sect who believe in celibacy and the coming of the millennium.

Another place of interest in a swing south of Lexington is the old fort at Harrodsburg, where George Rogers Clark planned his campaigns. The fort has been restored and is open as a museum.

At Berea college you see the remarkable results of vocational education brought to mountain whites. One cannot escape a feeling of humility at sight of the industry of these students.

OL' KAINBUCK

To lovers of horse racing, Louisville is a mecca when the Kentucky Derby is run at Churchill Downs.

Where Baseball Bats Are Made.
At the Louisville Slugger factory, baseball bats for many of the famous players are hand-turned by skilled workmen. The second growth ash comes to the factory in rough billets. These billets are rounded and laid on racks to season for 12 months before they are made into bats. Because ball players are particular about the weight and balance of their bats, each step in the shaping of the shagbark requires the utmost care. Special orders are prepared by hand workers. Thousands of bats, however, are made by machinery.

From Louisville it is a pleasant trip to Frankfort, the hill-encircled capital of Kentucky. The old Statehouse, now a museum, is an architectural gem of pure Greek design. Within it is a self-supporting circular stairway, one of the remaining features of the new Statehouse is a splendid rotunda, with a magnificent rotunda under the dome.

It is strangely fitting that Daniel Boone is buried in the cemetery overlooking the capital of the state he helped win from the wilderness. From the path across his tomb one looks down to the broad valley of the beautiful Kentucky river.

The heart of the Blue Grass is the home of the thoroughbred. To one who has striven futilely, baffled by crab grass, to encourage a lawn, the sight of those blue-grass pastures brings mixed feelings. One does not feel outraged to see splendid horses browsing on such lowly food, but one is led to escape taking affront at cows and sheep feeding in the velvety carpet.

Horses in the Blue Grass are monarchs of the earth. On some of the famous farms the huge circular stables house quarter-mile stables tracks floored with tan bark.

The thoroughbred is nurtured more carefully than a baby—soon after birth he is vaccinated. He is born he is fitted with a halter, that he may become used to the equipment. He is permitted out of doors only when company are exactly right. If he scratches his skin, he is plastered with antiseptic and put in a hospital. He is driven from his own special bucket and his diet would be the despair of a French chef.

Owners of one horse cut by a highway has a tunnel under the road through which his thoroughbreds may be led without danger from passing traffic.

There is a thrill in visiting the stable that housed Man-o-War, Golden Broom, Crusader, and Mars.

Lexington Is Charming.
In Lexington there is a wealth of charm as well as historic interest. The University of Kentucky is there, its mellow old buildings stand out against a sky of blue. In the study room at the College of Engineering, heavy tables, with tops fashioned of thick sections of a venerable cypress tree that once grew on the campus, are treasured relics covered with carved names of alumni.

Another fine educational institution in Lexington is Transylvania college, the first school for higher education west of the Alleghenies. These Jefferson Davis and Henry Clay were once students. The library of this school contains thousands of volumes so rare that scholars from all over the world come to consult them.

Ahland, restored home of Henry Clay, stands on the outskirts of the city. On the walk behind the house the magnetic orator and statesman used to pace back and forth planning his speeches.

GOVERNOR LANDON ACCEPTS.

The temperate tone of Governor Landon's acceptance speech is its most significant feature. As an independent, nonpartisan newspaper The Christian Science Monitor welcomes that approach to American problems.

We believe that with free, tolerant and honest discussion none of those problems are insoluble. The suppression, intolerance and demagoguery which form the characteristic and indispensable mental background of every kind of dictatorship will not solve them. Excess of language such as that for which the Rev. Charles R. Coughlin has just publicly apologized will not solve them. And in the heat of the campaign Americans will do well to remember that the essence and surest support of free government is reasoned, fair discussion.

Governor Landon must have known to millions who had waited for this opportunity to give him better the same simplicity and sincerity which visitors to Topeka have been reporting in recent months. He held to his plan for a campaign to be carried out in the manner of Abraham Lincoln, "who always addressed the intelligence of men, never their prejudice, their passion or their ignorance."

The speech expressed the general attitude of the nominee; it did not disclose the details of his program. For those who have already decided how they will vote in November further explanations are not necessary. But many who find that the announced objectives of both major parties are almost identical, and even their platforms surprisingly similar in many places, will be curious to learn the details of his program. Especially will many progressive Republicans, who like Senator Borah, distrust the Old Guard leadership which largely controlled their party, seek further evidence as to the extent to which that control has been broken.

Yet even the general purposes outlined by Governor Landon disclose some major objectives and, coupled with his sober, reasoned approach, will be persuasive to many. The point that the Roosevelt Administration has not solved the unemployment problem strikes at a vulnerable place. Even those who question whether merely taking the lid off business will provide jobs on any permanent basis, even those who are grateful for the "made work" of WPA, are profoundly dissatisfied with the "fumbling with recovery" in the field of unemployment.

Certainly many who originally supported the Roosevelt program are among those practical progressives who "have suffered the disheartening experience of seeing many liberal objectives discredited during the past three years by careless thinking, unworkable laws and incompetent administration."

Certainly many who are ready to pay for all necessary relief or even for emergency unemployment insurance and who recognize that neither party has a monopoly on devotion to civil service and efficient administration will yet endorse Governor Landon's insistence that "the security of all of us depends on the good management of our common affairs." And they will thank him for frankly explaining the fact that excessive governmental costs oppress the poor as well as the rich.

Also welcome is the Republican candidate's declaration that labor must be free from coercion by anyone, although labor leaders are already attacking this as too general and manifestly feel that labor can expect more from the Democratic Party. Whether we like it or not, this is because labor feels that employers have a larger voice in determining the practical application of Republican policy, for the same reason, those who feel that monopoly is one of the underlying issues in American political life may have similar reservations on the antimonopoly declarations of Republican platform and candidate, although much New Deal practice—contrary to Jeffersonian theory—has been more based on balancing production controls than on really freeing the national economy.

Moderates will agree with the moderate approach to constitutional questions. But some will question whether the choice before the American people is so simple as the question: "Do we desire to preserve the American form of government?" Only the Communists will answer no to that question. The question (and on other occasions Governor Landon has recognized it actually is: "How do we propose to solve fundamental social and economic problems while preserving the American form of government?")

The American system cannot be destroyed by person, party or propaganda. It can only be destroyed by failure to keep it working in the face of new conditions so that the old ideal of equal opportunity for all is sufficiently experienced by the people that they cannot be led astray by political panaceas.

As Governor Landon says, "Neither political nor civil liberty long survives the loss of economic liberty." With the passing of the emergency, the American form of government must show every sign of surviving. The Constitution is still supreme. The great problem that remains is how to make economic liberty manifest under the Constitution.

We hope that Governor Landon will later develop in more detail his plan for dealing with this problem.—Christian Science Monitor.

STEP TOWARD STATE SOCIALISM.

"In asking the United States District Court in Alabama to invalidate the TVA power program, the aluminum utility groups are not only asking the court to destroy the first instance of self-protection, but are asking judicial determination of a question... which is vital to our whole national economy."

... says the Boston Transcript. "There is a matter which affects the future property, the very life indeed, of a capital structure involving nearly a billion dollars and carrying the savings of stockholders in every part of the United States. If the Government succeeds... in putting the utilities out of business, either by subjecting them to a ruinous competition or forcing them to sell their properties at fire-sale prices, the investments made by American citizens of all degrees of wealth will prove practically worthless."

"From the standpoint of the government itself, the attempt to produce and distribute power in the Tennessee Valley is as ill-advised as it is unfair. Carried to completion, it will close plants which provide employment for thousands of citizens and will deprive states and cities of tax revenue which in the past year reached a total of nearly $15,000,000. It is a step toward State Socialism which is being taken. And it is all being done without the consent of the people of the United States."

There, short of non-essentials, is the issue the TVA presents. And it must be remembered that TVA is but one phase of a gigantic planned program—its proponents look forward to the day when similar super-legal authorities will be established in every important area of this country. Furthermore, no court decision, favorable or unfavorable to TVA, can settle the issue. The final answer will be up to the people—they must decide whether they will permit public servants to destroy with impunity investments made in good faith by private citizens, and whether private enterprises will be thrown overboard in favor of the alien theory of State Socialism.—Industrial News Review.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

By RUSSELL KAY

You know I thought I'd get away from Florida politics for a while by sneaking up here to Cleveland. But I guess it just can't be done. You see, I formed the habit of reading the papers a long time ago, and most Florida editors seem naturally kind and thoughtful have been sending me copies of their papers to keep me from getting lonesome. Then on top of that, it is surprising how many Floridians who find "news" around here. You just can't tell what'll turn up next.

Last week Ken Ballinger of the Miami Herald held it and it was no time at all before we were discussing large goals of political state. Then Henry Hudson of the Miami Star came and joined the party. The Townsend picnic brought another gang of Florida folks up here and the first place they head for when they hit town is the Florida Exhibit.

Well, from what I see in the papers and hear from the home folks who drop in on us, it appears that Mr. Pepper is riding to glory without any competition. He will be changing his address to the Senate Office Building in Washington along about the first of the year. As far as I'm able to determine, the idea of having Claude Pepper for one of our senators seems to set just about right with everybody. In fact, most folks seem to feel that he was elected two years ago, and are glad to see him in line for the job now.

GOVERNORS PLANT FLORIDA CITRUS TREE IN CALIFORNIA

California has succumbed to the alienation of Governor David Sholtz of Florida, and is trying out a new idea. A Florida citrus tree has been planted at Exposition Park in Los Angeles, where the natives will have a chance to examine close range one of Florida's best selling points. Here is Governor Sholtz, left, with Governor Merriam, of California, who turned the soil to admit Florida's prominent guest.

Gov. Sholtz Tells Country About Florida Advantages

ing, and himself. "And not one is a candidate for President of the United States," added the governor.

After Governor Sholtz's installation as ruler of the Elks, John K. Tener, former governor of Pennsylvania and former grand exalted ruler of the Elks said: "I know that under the Sholtz leadership we shall greatly increase the membership of our lodge."

At San Francisco and Los Angeles, centers of disapproval of California's high taxes, newspaper interviews discussed at length Florida's success in lifting itself to a position among the few states where there are no unpaid bills, where there is an imposing cash balance for governmental operations and where there is a balanced budget; all this, in the face of the fact that there is no income or inheritance tax.

California, newspapers also described how Governor Sholtz organized the Florida citrus commission which by law brings together all growers and shippers, commodity standards for grades of fruit; establishes marketing negotiations and "color added" negotiations and through the use of tax levies created a fund for extensive commodity advertising of Florida's grapefruit, oranges and tangerines.

Heading toward Chicago over the northern route, Governor Sholtz was feted at Reno and at Denver. At Cheyenne, a special celebration was staged Wednesday in honor of the governor as a feature of that city's annual rodeo, which is being held now. The governor stayed over in Cheyenne for Governor Leslie Miller.

When Governor Sholtz left Chicago late Sunday, Florida's story had been told first-hand to most of the United States by the man best equipped to tell it. In all his interviews Governor Sholtz talked only of Florida and its development.

He said that he had been in the Senate for more than a dozen years that he has visited in that capacity in every part of the United States and has been recognized as a new type in America's troubled political scene—a business man who has carried business policies into the administration of a state's affairs.

Proactive of most comment has been Governor Sholtz's explanation of how Florida has established its selling points and has established through legislative action, a business organization capable of presenting these points to other sections of the country. Editorial writers and public officials, who have met and talked with the governor on this trip have commented on the fact that he has been the thorough-going way in which Florida has been built into a region that understands its advantages, as well as understanding the readiness of tourists and businessmen and investors to appreciate a clearly-outlined story.

Florida's promotion of its citrus industry has attracted national attention, the governor learned as he discussed his state's best "cash crop" with newspaper men and officials of other states. He said that other types of "cash crops" are being created in the state to attract and market the citrus crop attracted deepest interest. Mandis Butchers Another Huge Hog

A huge hog which tipped the scales at 570 pounds when dressed was butchered by Demos Mandis at his dairy farm on the Watchula road on Tuesday morning. The animal, a Poland China sow, was 23 months old and weighed 900 pounds alive.

The carcass was purchased by W. A. Foster of the B&B Market and sections of it will grace the tables of Avon Park citizens.

This is the second immense hog raised and butchered by Mr. Mandis in recent months and proves conclusively that first class hogs can be raised in Highlands county when given proper care. Mr. Mandis raises all his own feed and says hog raising is proving very profitable.

Social Welfare Workers Will Be On Merit System

The State Board of Social Welfare has taken action in approving the Merit System as a means of establishing eligibility for State Welfare employees. It is hoped that this plan will work for the benefit of the District Boards in assisting them to know more definitely which candidates are best qualified for the positions available and to enable them to act with a feeling of more security in regard to the efficiency of the people whom they are appointing.

Applicants desiring positions with the State Welfare Board should make applications directly to the District Director, Lillian Beel of District 8, Board of Social Welfare, Fort Myers. If the person is qualified for any one of the positions available a complete record of their past experience and qualifications will be taken. This will be forwarded to the State Office and at a later date the applicant will be notified to take a written examination.

The Merit System is based on three points consideration. First, an evaluation of past experience and counts 30 points; second, a written examination counts 45 points; third, a personal interview counts 25 points. A total score of 70 must be achieved with a rating of not less than 50 percent in any one part.

All present workers will be required to meet the necessary qualifications as set up in the Merit System and to take the scheduled examination.

At a later date notices will be sent to the eligible applicants telling them of the place and time the examination will be held.

Highlands County is in District 8, Board of Social Welfare, headquarters in Fort Myers. Mrs. A. L. Kelley is the official representative for the district from this county.

Establish Child Welfare Unit In Highlands Soon

Miss Louise K. Carr, technical consultant of child welfare for the state of Florida with headquarters in Jacksonville was in Highlands county Wednesday arranging for the establishment of a child welfare unit. This county is one of a few selected in Florida for the establishment of one of these training units. The headquarters will be in the court house in Sebring and a committee of responsible citizens is being asked to sponsor the work which will begin as soon as the personnel can be arranged.

"Twelve of these concentrated drinks, with the largest distribution, have been analyzed and found to contain, on the average, only 10 percent of the important vitamin C per ounce that is found in fresh Florida orange juice," Walker said. "Yet much of the advertising of these products claims they are as healthful as orange juice. Even in Tampa, of all places, a dairy is advertising its orangeade to be 'the most sweetest orange juice that ever came out of an orange grove,' and the gullible public believes it."
"A thorough investigation will be made by the Florida Citrus Commission to determine the effect of these dairy-mixed drinks on the market for fresh oranges. An exhaustive survey has already been started to learn what people who drink these products think about them, and to what extent they are drinking them in place of fresh orange juice. Steps will be taken to stop the advertising of fraudulent claims for them, and to acquaint the public with the health values of these drinks in comparison with fresh oranges."

Urgent Investigation Racing Commission

should be thoroughly investigated by an impartial committee of the 1937 legislature. We feel further that the Racing Commission should operate on a definitely budgeted appropriation of the legislature, and not be permitted an unlimited expense account as at present," and requesting the county commissioners, who are the recipients of net race track revenue, to pass appropriate resolutions urging such action.

Game Association To Distribute 500 Deer; Enforce Game Laws

Winter Haven, July 29.—(FNS)—Plans of the Florida State Game and Fresh Water Fish commission, meeting here last week, call for early distribution of 500 deer throughout the state to be used in a game restocking movement.

Commission chief conservation officers and the Polk county delegation to the state legislature were present at sessions where plans for drastic enforcement of hunting laws were evolved. A number of secret conservation officers will be employed to assist in enforcement of state game rulings. Rewards set at $100 will be offered for each conviction secured on evidence of dynamiting for fish or fur hunting for deer.

Training of officers to patrol all sections of the state was also approved by the commission. It was announced that trained guides will be available to lead tourists on safes in the winter sections of the state.

Car Parking Is Easy When System Used

"The really simple task of working a car into a certain gap in the row of cars lining the curb is something that troubles many motorists, including some that have years of road driving to their credit," says W. B. Banford, director of the Dodge Division of Chrysler Corporation.

According to Banford, there are drivers who spend unreasonable time and effort trying to work their cars into a parking place of ample size, and others who wear their own tempers and others car owners' fenders and bumpers in vain attempts to wedge a car into a space plainly too small for the purpose. For the benefit of drivers none too sure of their parking ability, Banford has reduced the effort to a sure-fire system.

"If the available parking space is three feet longer than your car, you can make it, if you go about as follows," he says. "First, drive your car parallel to the forward parked car and 1 1/2 feet to the side of it, until the rear end of your car is even with the rear hub cap of the forward parked car.

"Second, with the transmission in reverse, start the car rolling back while turning the front wheels as far as possible toward the curb, until your own seat is even with the rear of the forward parked car.

"Third, straighten the wheels of your car and come back for a distance of about two feet.

"Now with the front wheels of your car as far as possible away from the curb, slow the motion of your car by applying the breaks until you feel the bumpers touch.

"Fourth, put the transmission into 'first' and engage the clutch. As soon as the car starts to move, turn the front wheels away from the curb and let the car go ahead until it touches the car ahead. Put the transmission in reverse, engage the clutch and back up about 18 inches.

"If these directions are followed, ed, the maneuver will bring your car to the center of the parking space and about 6 inches from the curb - and neither your own nor the adjoining cars' fenders will be nicked or scraped in the process."

Concise remote and anguished must be felt, to curb desire, to break the stubborn will, and work a second nature in the soul.

"Thunder in the Air"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

STEP up and meet William Dill of Newark, N. J. Bill's got a yarn to tell us today, and it doesn't make him a Double Distinguished Adventurer with an order of blood and thunder on the side, then I'll be a Chinaman and so will my brother Ed.

It was during the early days of the World war—the fall of 1916, to be exact—and Bill Dill was working in a place where trouble was in the air and danger perched on his shoulder every minute of the day.

He was a foreman in a munitions plant located in the Bush Terminal building in Brooklyn, and in those days mysterious accidents were happening in munitions plants all over the country.

The big "Black Tom" explosion had occurred in July of that same year, and people said that German spies and had been responsible for it. The United States was expected to take a hand in the war any minute. Germans were being watched closely by government detectives.

Munitions Factory Does a Shimmy.

German boats were being contacted and all factories turning out war material for the Allies were swarming with guards watching for evidence of dirty work at the crossroads. But just the same, "accidents" and mysterious explosions were happening all over the country. No one knew where trouble was going to strike next.

It was almost nine o'clock on a chill September evening. The plant was working 24 hours a day, and the men were coming back to work after the supper hour. Bill Dill was in the glass-enclosed office, checking over reports. Everything seemed to be going slowly, when suddenly the floor gave a lurch—a terrible roar filled the air, and glass began flying from every direction.

The first thought Bill had was one of surprise to find that he was still sitting in his chair. He was cut in half a dozen places about the face and arms by bits of flying glass, but otherwise he seemed to be all right.

Bill Got to the Switch and Snapped It Off unhurt. He looked out over the floor of the plant. For a second or two everyone stood still. Then, all at once, they began a loud screaming rush for the exit.

Bill dashed out of the office, shouting to the men to stay where they were. At the door stood a guard, his arms outstretched, trying to still the fears of the panic-stricken workers. The men stopped for a second, and Bill thought they had calmed down. But at the crucial moment, a new menace threw them into a second frenzy of fear. Smoked a heavy black pall of it was issuing from the direction of the sand blast room.

There Was Sabotage in the Sand Blast Room.

Nothing could stop those frightened men then. They stampeded for the doors. Bill was knocked over on a tray full of shrapnel shells. A guard tripped over a fellow carrying two pails full of oil, and both of them went down while oil ran all over them and over the floor. Bill scrambled to his feet and ran toward the sand blast room. He had a pretty good idea of what had happened. There were two giant compressors in there that stored air in great tanks five feet wide and eight feet high. Someone had been tampering with those compressors, and one of the tanks exploded.

Bill had gone about three steps in the direction of the sand blast room when suddenly, the lights went out. At the same time, several lesser explosions rocked the building and a dull red glare lit up the great room as great tongues of flame licked out across the floor. At the first flash of light Bill stumbled through the door to the sand blast room and saw the body of the blast operator stretched out on the floor.

But Bill didn't stop to pick up the blast operator. Suddenly he was faint with shock, and he knew that his explosion had hurt him more than he first supposed. While he still had his strength, he had to shut off the compressors which were still pumping air into the second, still unexploded tank.

How Bill Saved the Day for Bush Terminal.

The smoke was so thick that Bill was gasping to get his breath. The acid fumes, drawn deep into his lungs, burned and burned them. His eyes smarted. His knees buckled beneath him. Flames were shooting up all around him. He had just about enough strength to reach the power switch and turn off the compressors. How he was going to get out of that smoke-swept room he didn't know. He wasn't even thinking of that. First of all, the compressors had to be turned off.

Bill got to the switch and snapped it off. Then, suffocated and exhausted, he crouched in a heap on the floor while tongues of flame lapped around him, coming closer and closer with every second. A black curtain descended over his eyes. Bill fainted.

He came to to find some one bending over him, holding a bottle of smelling salts to his nose. He asked about the sand blast operator and was told that he'd been taken to a hospital. In the sand blast room, the company's firemen were getting the blaze under control. All was well in Bush Terminal. But the "accident" was not without its effect. "We discovered," says Bill, "that the explosion had been caused by someone who tampered with the hydraulic safety valves, and the next night more than half my force refused to return to work. Fear and panic had done their jobs only too well."

Electoral Votes Count

in Electing President

A President may be elected by a majority, or less than half of the total number of popular votes cast.

This is possible, explains a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, because the President and vice President are not elected directly by popular vote, but by electors who choose by popular vote.

A candidate for President receives all or some of the electoral votes cast by a state, except in rare instances when the electoral vote of a state is split. Hence, it is possible for a minority of the voters of the country as a whole to elect a majority of the electoral votes.

In the election of 1824 none of the four candidates for President received a majority of either the electoral or the popular vote, and John Quincy Adams was chosen by the house of representatives in accordance with the method prescribed by the Constitution for such cases. When James K. Polk, Zachary Taylor, James Buchanan, Abraham Lincoln, in 1860; Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Grover Cleveland, in 1880 and 1884; Benjamin Harrison, and Woodrow Wilson, in 1912 and 1916, were elected President without receiving a majority of the electoral votes.

But in the disputed election of 1876, Samuel J. Tilden actually received more popular votes than Hayes did, and yet Hayes was declared elected, the electoral count being finally determined as 186 to 120 in favor of Hayes.

In the election of 1900, William McKinley received 233 electoral votes to Benjamin Harrison's 145.

But Harrison was elected, 175 electoral votes to Cleveland's 128.

Terry and Cochrane Are Facing Crisis in Baseball Jobs

DEFINITELY Bill Terry, and Mickey Cochrane now are in the midst of what higher class writers might term a crisis. Aside from their spot efforts to keep crisp plot and hard luck teams in the first division they also are undergoing tests which may determine whether it is worthwhile for them to continue in baseball.

Because each of them wor a world championship early in his managerial career and no, immediately, was acclaimed as one of the greatest of all time pilots this view may require a bit of explaining. It involves putting the reverse on that old "Don't say as I do but as I say" bit of philosophy by which the youth of the nation once was entertained.

Terry possibly was the best first baseman who ever played the game and Cochrane holds similar high rating among the catchers. They took over their manager's jobs while still able to perform in a sprightly fashion. They starred in their own right while their example undoubtedly inspired lesser teammates to reach hitherto (and since then) unthought-of heights.

Now, when they are sorely tried by an assemblage of the alphas which inevitably take toll of aging athletes, things do not add up the same. Rebers, Myatts, Leslies and such folk are hired men of average worth, but they simply do not possess the spark that makes Terry and Cochrane. So, as they have appeared all season, the two managers immediately are beset by problems even more vexing than thyroids or acetia, while attempting to re-establish their baseball lives.

If the law of averages operated properly there could be some compensation for all this. Blood streams, which formerly had to do double duty while generating both base blows and strategy, could be entirely at the service of deep thinking. In place of the line drives which once encouraged their championship ambitions the Tigers and the Giants could be inspired by daily strokes of managerial genius.

This, of course, would indicate a most sublime future but, unfortunately, neither Hoyle nor Haggle has much influence with the law of averages.

Both Bill and Mickey are men of action. They seem to function best, mentally as well as physically, while on their feet in the midst of heated action. Probably a proper appreciation of his own muscular possibilities has inspired each of these managers as much as it has inspired his followers.

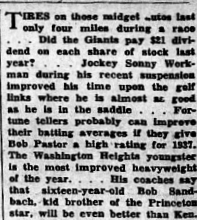

Undoubtedly this has been true of Terry during the past two years. Without attempting to second-guess a guy who has been trying hard in the midst of severe handicaps, we feel sure he is a far better manager when playing than when spending an afternoon in the dugout.

Less opportunity has been provided for judging Cochrane as a dugout executive. Yet it is possible that the future may be even harder on him than on Terry.

Mickey Cochrane is an instantly nervous type—in some ways resembling Ty Cobb who failed as a manager. At least once during each of his best playing years when he could release pent-up emotions through direct action he came close to just such a breakdown as finally overtook him this season. He also is excessively irked by players who cannot comport themselves according to his own high athletic standards.

During one inning at Yankee stadium recently I watched him. He made six trips from one end of the dugout to the other. He knelt in front of the dugout five times, sat down and immediately arose eight times.

There you have the question for the future: Will Cochrane wear himself out of the majors with worry? Will Terry achieve the essential dumbness of his fellow men?

TERRY on those midget acts last only four miles during a race

Did the Giants pay $21 dividend on each share of stock last year? Jockey Sanny Workman during his recent suspension improved his time upon the golf links where he is almost as good as he is in the saddle. Fortune tellers probably can improve their batting averages if they give Bob Foster a high rating for 1937. The Washington Heights youngster is the most improved heavyweight of the year. His coaches say that sixteen-year-old Bob Sandbach, kid brother of the Princeton star, will be even better than Ken.

If the president of the Phila had not vetoed the deal at the last minute a Frenchy Bordagary-Johnny Moore swap would have been made in May. The Giants will operate the Jersey City club as a farm when an International League franchise is moved to Hagerstown next season. Unless thoroughly bred prices are upped considerably Colonel E. R. Bradley will not take his yearlings to the Saratoga sales next month. He will be annoyed at the low receipts obtained last August. Charley Gehring and Billy Herman, the game's two best second basemen, share an easily understandable weakness. Ballplayers say they do not like to be slid into with spikes.

The S. G. is a badly perturbed because of rumors concerning four-ball tournaments and the action pools which so often make them more than willing to be the performers. These pools—you buy tickets on teams you think are hot—often are worth from $1,000 to $2,000. The so-called "gentleman's racket," is enough sugar to bring the racketeers in so that they can arrange such "amateur" golf matches for their own high purposes. Hun school, right there in the shadow of Princeton's famed Gobble tower, will have five representatives (Elverson, McNamara, Ober, Michman and Shinn) on the Peen variety next fall. Don Laab, the runner, will play through college by mopping up floors in the dormitory at Indiana university. Ivy Wilson, the very good twenty-four-year-old girl athlete from the Mercury A. C., makes dolls' wigs when not winning 50-meter championships.

Landis Irks Scribe By Talking Golf

A veteran reporter is very indignant because he had to wait fifteen minutes in Boston before getting some information from Judge Landis.

It seems that base ball's high commissioner was spending some time in entertaining his audience of club owners with blithesome comments concerning his golf scores.

Could it be true Judge Landis the New York racing commissioner now has played a disapproving role in the betting ring and other gossip juicy sections of local tracks? Or are naughty boys just blaspheming when they whisper that this cunning device, which was tried out last winter by Florida and Don Madden, produced a colorful and worthless chit-chat when secreted in the Aqueduct jockey room during the recent meeting?

There is more than a chance that the Ivy League, which now protects the more holy colleges from rude beatings in basketball and baseball, will also provide the same smooth, arid, and uninteresting 1938. Although he is a motorboat enthusiast, John D. Spreckels, millionaire horse owner from the West, believes in keeping equine sports in their proper place. He has no liking for the regulations which have plagued the regular winter regatta committees at too many Eastern racetracks. Another effort may be made next winter to put the Cards in Detroit and leave St. Louis as a one-bulb (American League variety) town. If Joe Louis can score a decisive victory over Al Kittle there need be little doubt about the Brown "Smasher" having the proper comeback ammunition.

Although he can take the walls of disappointed fans as well as he can give his money to Connie Mack, there is one rift in Tom Yawkey's serenity. The owner of the Red (and frequently Soxed) Boston team has been hearing the whispers of his mates among the magnates. They refer to the youthful business man as a "Rag" and a "Bucker," which is rather hard to take considering all he has done for them. Each member of that great hunky crew is a native of the state of Washington, is working his way through college and never hands a racing sweep until his freshman year. Winslet, the big outfielder listed for the Dodgers, is a good hater. That is, he is until the pitchers start throwing too close to him.

A Finnish vapor bath has been installed in the Olympic village at the request of Finland's athletes. The bath was placed on the edge of a lake because the Finns like to cool off with a cold plunge after the bath. Fred Vester of the Pirates still uses a bat, now taped half its length to keep it from falling apart, that he borrowed during the 1934 All-Star game in New York.

WHO PAYS FOR THE ELECTRICITY?

"Plenty of light has been turned on the high cost of the wasteful TVA experiment to private industry, to investors and to all taxpayers," declares the Philadelphia Inquirer. "It is time to ask the question: 'What time that TVA, so far from constituting an authentic 'yard-stick' for ascertaining proper costs of electric current, comes under the head of 'false measures'." The Inquirer goes on to talk of the way in which the effort to fool the public is being made by extending the electric service with the idea that it will serve to show just how much should be charged by private companies, if they are allowed to continue to make and sell the current, in competition with the Government.

"The most ruthless and searching analysis of the hidden costs, of this New Deal white elephant has just been presented by William M. Carpenter, economist of the Edison Electric Institute," says the Inquirer. "For the hundreds of millions already appropriated by Congress for this grandiose adventure with the people's money tell only a part of the story." Then adds:

Official cost reports on Muscle Shoals and other TVA enterprises conveniently sidestep the little item of interest. There are growing announcements of operating profits, but the fixed charges, as Mr. Carpenter remarks, are buried among the vast general expenditures of the Treasury Department. The TVA is measurably contributing to Treasury deficits, which are financed by wholesale borrowing. Then additional bonds have to be sold to pay interest on fixed borrowings.

To use Mr. Carpenter's striking expression, "a merry marathon" has been going on in the Tennessee Valley, with compound interest many laps in the lead. The actual deficit of Muscle Shoals alone for the fiscal year 1936 was $1,455,000, for a total investment of more than $57,000,000.

It would be easy for any public utility to furnish service at cut-throat rates if it could levy upon the taxpayers of the whole country to meet its losses. Mr. Carpenter figures that for every kilowatt hour of electricity sold by the TVA in 1935 American taxpayers donated 1 1/2 cents.

But this is only a beginning. Since TVA is making no allowances for depreciation and giving no consideration to sinking funds, this mounting debt will be a charge upon "the children of the third and fourth generations." Soon after the close of the World War there was a strenuous effort made in Congress, by men who objected to the United States Government going in to business, against the completion and putting to work of the Muscle Shoals project. Born as a presumed establishment to manufacture war materials. It was projected to completion by Senator Norris, and some other interested for one reason or another, "to manufacture nitrates to sell cheap to the farmers." It was demonstrated, over and over again that nitrogen could be made or produced more cheaply by other processes, that the farmers were not shouting for this, or for government manufactured fertilizers.

Then came along the plan to make cheap electricity—and now the Government is making electricity, but cheap only in the price at which it is sold. It costs more to make it than the estimates for private manufacture. But the Government is forgetting everything but the idea to undersell the private companies. The people at large are paying the difference in cost; and there is nothing to justify this. The entry of Government into business, other than governing, is all wrong; some day the tendency toward governmental control and operation of all industry will be checked.—Jacksonville Times Union.

CRACKPOT WANTS NO STATE LAWS.

(Reprinted from the Macon Telegraph of July 2.) The most infamous assault upon the American system of government and the most brazen incitement to revolution that have come from the pen of any responsible member of the administration at Washington find expression in a book, "Whose Constitution?" written by Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, published today.

Unless the letter and spirit of this book are repudiated by the administration at the earliest possible moment, preferably by demanding the resignation of Wallace himself, the task of inducing the American people to travel along with the New Deal in the hope that the leader himself will shift to the Right, will be unpeppably difficult.

Excerpts from the book are quoted in a dispatch from New York by the Associated Press. It will be remembered that this is the same Wallace who declared that the Supreme Court decision requiring the return to processors of the taxes collected under AAA was "a legalized steal." Wallace now says boldly that the entire American system of government must be scrapped and a co-operative commonwealth must be established in place of the system of 48 states. This half-baked student of the Constitution and the American system insists that the organic law was intended to be a "union of states"; that the states have been a barrier from the beginning and today "they mark no economic boundaries that make sense."

It is unnecessary for any real student of American history to bandy words with this mystic dreamer, on this question of the Supreme Court, who ignores the entire philosophy of a system of checks and balances so well worked out by the founding fathers and branches the high court with big corporations, the Republican Party, the Liberty League and "most of the newspapers" as standing for states.

rights. Wallace makes the amazing statement that if agriculture were today a "local matter, as the Supreme Court says it is, half of the people of the United States would quickly starve."

The complete answer is that they have never yet starved, but they would have come perilously near it if Henry Wallace could have contained his policy of throwing six million little pigs into the river, plowing up a third of the lettuce in Arizona and California and requiring mid-west farmers to burn their wheat at a time when 11 million persons were out of work.

The dyspeptic snarl with which Wallace continues to greet the decisions of the Supreme Court which saved the country by invalidating NRA and AAA will tend to stir the red blood of the American people. They comfort themselves with the reflection that the impartial Brookings Institution, called "the Supreme Court of Business," found that both NRA and AAA had retarded recovery, and such has come to be the deliberate view of the public.

Wallace's incitement to revolution comes in the closing paragraph of his farrago. Wandering among the clouds with references to "the spirit of the ages," which in concrete terms he has already described as wiping out the states, he says, "We may be able to do this, but it can be taken bloodlessly, as the Constitution was enacted."

The natural corollary is that unless the Constitution is debauched to suit his crazy schemes he is in favor of a bloody revolution.

So the American people will know where to place the unappealing Wallace from this day on.

BITING THE POOR.

A tax expert recently observed that the new tax bill "barks at the rich—and bites the poor."

In other words, exhaustive analysis of the measure by competent accountants and statisticians shows that, under its provisions, some very large corporations may actually pay smaller taxes than they paid previously, while some smaller corporations pay greater taxes—taxes ranging up to 30 percent of their income.

The bill is so complex and so confused in various sections, that no one really knows just what its ultimate effect will be. That is certainly not surprising—it was forced through with little debate, to facilitate the adjournment of congress.

So it may turn out that a tax bill that was backed vociferously by "friends of the common people" picks the common people's pockets ruthlessly. If that happens, some good will follow for the public who are awoke to the menace of punitive tax laws.—Industrial News Review.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

By RUSSELL KAY

It is customary, I believe, for salesmen to make a report now and then to the boss, and in the case of Florida & Co. YOU are the boss, so I'm writing this to let you know just what your sales force is doing here in Cleveland.

Our job, of course, is to SELL Florida and we're doing it. We are now located here at the Great Lakes Exposition and you know Earl Brown is a wizard when it comes to making an exhibit. Another thing, he knows how to pick a personnel and the folks he's got help in are all top notchers.

Our little Garden of Eden with its bearing orange trees, palm trees, tropical plants, literally takes the visitor's breath away. It is the work of Foster Barnes and he's certainly done a wonderful job. Florida Manor, housing our main exhibit, was designed by Paist and Steward, architects of Miami. It is as distinct and unusual, so different from anything else on the grounds, that it draws praise from everyone.

The marvelous dioramas which depict scenes from all sections of the state are the work of C. E. Plaster, who did such a good job for us that the government has taken him to Washington to make exhibits for them. But resourceful Earl steps out and finds another Floridian, Byron Stephens of Sanford, who has gone on with the work and his beautiful diorama of Wakulla Springs, the Florida Portland Cement plant, McKee Jungle Gardens and the Gasparilla ship are clicking and holding the crowds alongside the best that Plaster turned out.

An outstanding feature of our show here is the effective lighting, not only of our grounds, but the building, dioramas and other displays. This is the work of John Colvard who hails from Belle Glade.

George Clements, veteran newshawk, directs publicity and sees to it that Florida stays on the front page and in the rotogravure sections of the nation's press. He is getting hundreds of columns of space, all favorable publicity, and finds time to interview the steel celebrities and pull other stunts that keep Florida out in front.

One of the busiest men on the staff is Dick Bennett in charge of our merchandising department which covers the sale of citrus juice, orange sherbert, novelties, perfume and other Florida products sold at our stands.

Like all smooth-working organizations, we have a "Girl Friday" who keeps all the loose ends together and takes the blame whenever anything goes wrong. In this case it is Mrs. L. C. Wray, office manager and secretary to Earl Brown.

Our entertainment staff includes the Florida Orange Blossom Quartet — young men from the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College, Whittell Willie and Harmonica Slim who double as janitors.

Then there is a corps of assistants who help operate the stands and information desks, guide visitors about, help maintain the exhibit and do a hundred other necessary tasks that keep them busy from early morning until ten or eleven each night. All of them are Floridians and all are loyal, enthusiastic workers, putting in mighty long hours at mighty small pay. But they realize that in helping Florida they are helping themselves. They are proud to be identified with the Florida Exhibit.

And these are the folks that are selling FLORIDA to thousands every day. I just wanted you to know them. Their work will result in bringing millions of dollars and a raft of new settlers, investors and tourists to our state. They are doing a sterling good job and deserve to be commended.

You can take it from me, the Florida Exhibit is the greatest place of advertising the state ever had and it will pay for itself a hundred times over, for it is giving us DIRECT contact with LIVE prospects—and we're selling them.

Sermon Given Here in 1934 By Dr. Vaughn

Local Pastor Had Many of Sermons Published Here and Abroad

As stated last week, Dr. A. P. Vaughn, who recently resigned from the pastorate of the United Methodist Episcopal Church, had many of his sermons published in theological publications both at home and abroad as well as in collections of notable sermons. One of these sermons appeared recently in "Vital Sermons, Model Addresses for Study," published by the Funk and Wagnalls Co. It was titled "Whence the Color of the Rose" and Dr. Vaughn delivered it here at the Union Congregational Church on December 9, 1934. Believing it to be worthy of reproduction, it is presented herewith.

"WHENCE THE COLOR OF THE ROSE"

Rev. A. P. Vaughn

Then the wilderness and the dry land shall be glad and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. Isaiah 35:1.

In old almost-forgotten days every home had its cellar, stored in winter with vegetables and fruits to keep them safe from frost. Flowering plants and bushes that would winter-kill were also taken up in the autumn, stored dormant in the dark cellar, and put out in the open again with the wakening of spring.

Hibernating one winter in this fashion, a favorite rosebush of my childhood was covered over behind a large box and boards in the corner of the cellar, lost and forgotten. Spring came, and by its nature the sap began moving, and the buds began to grow; pale, frail, white and cream-leaved, and tendrils questing through the darkness for the light essential to its life. When the cellar was cleared we found it. It looked nothing like a rose, but like some unwholesome, noisome growth of caverns where there is perpetual night. So the plant was brought out into the warm spring sun and rain and rich soil; and in the June-time of roses it was a rose as God made roses to be.

There must be a sun of incomprehensible magnitude and mass, and intense energy exploding through millions of ages, dispersing itself in every direction, before ever there can be one tiny rose on any distant speck of planet. The rose gathers its color only from that origin, far removed. And how many colors the rose displays and uses according to its need; but every color was first in the sun. The roses of gold, the rose of flame, the rose of exquisite shell pink, each is what it is by gift of the sun. And man—"A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven" (John 3:27). "Every good and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father, source of all light" (James 1:17). "Of his grace we all have received, grace upon grace" (John 1:16). "May more and more grace and peace be granted you . . . seeing that His divine power has given us all things that are needful for life and godliness, through the knowledge of Him who called us by His own glory and perfection. (Tharely He has granted us His exceedingly great and precious promises, in order that through them you may become sharers in the divine nature." (2 Pet. 1:2-4).

Each virtue, each quality, every grace that makes up His glory and perfection is transmitted to us to have and to hold, converting us into new creatures, partakers of the divine nature. Only from that Light does man-soul distill and fix in its substance the colors of divine grace, all that he is of truth, purity, justice, goodness, honor, self-control, patience, loyalty, love. Grace upon grace, every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father, Source of all Light.

Mark the infinite variety of color in the rose garden, but all harmonious—naturally, for all are woven from one sunlight. Infinite variety also overpervades the human scene, we all "having gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us" (Romans 12:6). Thereby is possible the complete realization of all spiritual graces in human society; each member ministering of the gift he has received, "building up the body by that which every joint supplieth," until we all attain unto the stature of the mature fulness of Christ. How sorely we need that grace-conferring Light in our human garden today; for social betterment in culture, in civilization, in common safety and justice, can never be built up by antagonism and conflict, self-seeking, jealousy and warfare. It can come only as men of grace work together as articulated members of one body, each using his gift of grace as a trust for the service of others. Dr. Fiedick states it thus: "It can never be altogether well with anybody until it is well with everybody."

Light is still coming into the world, but men in darkness still will not comprehend or receive it. To as many as will receive that Light it brings all the graces and perfections of the spiritual realm to penetrate our dust, changing our substance, to "put on the new nature, which is renewed in the likeness of its Creator" (Col. 3:10). The Sun shines; its energy is enough to perfect every individual in fulness of grace, and to realize in all human society the relations of heaven on earth.

Men in darkness, who have not comprehended the Light, ridicule that hope as unthinkable, as an impossible paradise. You must remake human nature, they say, before you can build such personalities or such society. And that is true. That, exactly, is what a Christ said: you must be born again, of the Spirit; you must enter the realm of a life of different order. Given that life, blameless individual conduct and entirely

LIGHTNING

That destructive uncontrollable force, the arch foe of the electric utility company, is again slaying man-made structures. A single bolt of lightning is equal to 2,000,000 Volts and has enough energy to supply a large city with light and power for two hours if it could only be harnessed.

United States Weather Bureau records show that this part of Florida has been threatened in a season—or an average of one storm every four days during the summer months. This is the highest average of any section of the United States. The damage done by these storms cost millions of dollars in repairs—and means you must manufacture through temporary loss of service.

Throughout the day and night, in fair weather or dark like cover work at the hazardous task of restoring service after a lightning strike from the storm. Why not try you can't anticipate these storms and be right on the spot to make repairs? We'll do the best we can to make them promptly.

Mayor and Three Preachers Fishing

His Honor, the Mayor, M. E. Covington and Rev. Loyd E. Prick, Rev. J. H. Gamble and Rev. Ora Lee Lee, the last three being preachers of the Baptist denominations, have been doing some fishing this week. On Monday they fished in Lake Letta, on Tuesday in Arbuckle Creek and on Wednesday His Honor said they were still fishing.

For the Tuesday expedition they met at the Mayor's home at 5 a. m. and the breakfast was prepared and cooked by His Honor in person. This fact was verified by Mrs. Covington herself when questioned by members of the council Tuesday evening. "But," she said, "they made a lot of noise and woke up the whole household." The mayor said he never found more congenial fishing companions but his was the only one to have any luck fishing.

Pattern No. 1916-B

This clever dress features a flattering yoke which dips to a point in front and is equipped with twin slashes a few inches below the neckline to accommodate a ribbon bow of any color you wish to use. Most women like several different ones to which they match their accessories. Radiating tucks at the yoke and waist contribute a smooth fit and flattering effect, while center seams in front and back terminate in two kick pleats for reserved fullness where it will do the most good. The pointed pockets with shaped turned over flaps are novel. You'll want to make more than one dress, because the pattern is so easy to follow and the fabric so numerous to choose from. How about seersucker, novelty cotton, linen, crash or silk.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1916-B is available for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 2 1/2 yards of 35 inch material. Send 15 cents in coins.

Uncle Phil Says:

Perhaps It's Plated

A man may be born with a silver spoon in his mouth and still make no stir in the world.

If you don't like the picture of Milton's poetry you are not necessarily uncultured. Culture is a matter of knowing more than of liking.

To rule one's anger is well; to prevent it is better.

Some people tell the truth to shame the devil, others just to make trouble.

Democratic Aristocrat

We congratulate ourselves on being a democratic people, but any man is pleased by being told he is aristocratic. Why not? An aristocrat can be democratic.

A life without affection and sympathy could give only a very negative kind of happiness.

It's easier to love an enemy after you get the better of him.

Perhaps money talks, but it seldom comes when it is called.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes, feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

The Original Milk of Magnesia Wafers

Sermon Given Here Dec., 1934 By Dr. Vaughn

May I give you the key to open and confirm that hope? It is really just the history of how God made roses. It is in very old words, the first words of the Bible: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. The earth was waste and empty; and darkness was over the abyss." In outer space there are many orbs of rock and metal and dust, but with out a trace of organic life, barren and empty and dead. Set down on such a dead sphere it would not be possible for your mind to conceive that the place might be transformed into a world of roses, by the letting in of light from a distant sun. It would be a miracle beyond imagination, against reason, unpredictable. "The earth was waste and empty; and darkness was over the abyss, and the Spirit of God brooded over the waters. Then God said, 'Let there be light!' Light is the key of life—and roses—and saints."

The Spirit of God broods over the human chaos, hovering, incubating, warming the seeds of a new order of life. Oh, there is power enough in the Eternal Light coming into the world to make it a new paradise where man shall walk with God again. Enough grace and power from that spirit domain, invading humanity, to refashion men and the institutions of mankind into the likeness of that kingdom and obedience to its laws. Then men will be citizens of heaven; and earth will be a colony of heaven. It is reasonable to expect it, and with faith and hope to work for it, and pray with Jesus, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." You are without reason when you say this present darkness and human waste will snuff out the Eternal Light.

The rose spreads its leaves to the sun; when shut in from light it stretches hurriedly toward any ray; it has insatiable light-hunger. To know on earth the blessed life and the fellowship of peace, we must expose the soul to the Light; we must give it time and place to work in us. We must strip off the wrappings of self-righteousness and pride and jealousy and enmity, until we have nothing between our disordered souls and that Light; as the invalid does, we must conscientiously set about a regime of sun baths in that Light coming into the world "for the healing of the nations."

Ruth Bryan Owen Presents Portrait To State College

Gainesville, Aug. 5.—(FNS)—A valuable oil portrait of Thomas Jefferson, which once hung in the office of William Jennings Bryan when he was Secretary of State, has been presented to the University of Florida by Ruth Bryan Owen Robbs, daughter of "the great commoner."

The painting was given to the university by Mrs. Robbs, minister plenipotentiary from the United States to Denmark, shortly before leaving with her husband for a tour of the West.

According to President John J. Tigert, the portrait will hang in the lounge of the new Florida Union building on the University campus. In appreciation of the gift, the room in which the picture is to be placed has been named William Jennings Bryan lounge.

Citrus Commission Discusses Problems

Lakeland, August 6.—Problems faced by the Florida fruit industry in marketing its 1936-37 crops were discussed at meetings here Friday of the Florida Citrus Commission and Control Committee.

Reports were received on plans for crop estimates and analysis of marketing conditions. This information will be used in preparation of the industry program, under which advertising, merchandising and marketing activities will be more closely coordinated.

E. J. Coughlin was appointed as chief of the Control Committee, to handle any prorations of shipments which may be authorized under the federal marketing agreement. A. F. Fowler was employed to direct the crop survey. A regulation requiring that state inspectors be furnished with leading manifests when they issue permits to export fruit was discussed by the commission, to provide information on the grade and size of shipments, which is essential to the new industry program.

The commission voted to hold regular meetings hereafter on the second Monday of each month.

"We must go about it as practically and persistently as the scientist goes exploring for the process of making food by photosynthesis, finding and obeying the laws of light until the miracle energies of sunlight change earth elements into food in his vats, even as we have always done in the leaves of plants. For we are workers together with God in a business higher, more hopeful than feeding the physical bodies of starving masses of men, as heaven is higher than the earth. We are dealing with souls, spirits that have the 'right to become sons of God,' right to fullness of life, and fullness of light, and the perfect fellowship of the realm of God. 'Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.' Not of earth's wastes redeemed to beauty, but of the garden of man's soul and the realm immortal, the prophet spoke: 'The wilderness and the dry land shall be glad, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose.'"

ALL-FLORIDA MUSIC FESTIVAL AT MIAMI

W.P.A. Musicians Will Present Opera "Aida" at Feast Beginning Aug. 11

Miami, Aug. 5.—(FNS)—All foreign consuls with headquarters in Miami and Tampa are color invited to participate as guests of honor at the first All-Florida music festival to be held here in Bayfront Park for three evenings, beginning August 11.

A Latin unit of the recently-organized vaudeville group in the Federal Theatre will make its initial tour appearance in Miami, presenting the "Spanish Revue," featuring the second night of the festival. Portraying the racial differentiation of Florida from its early Spanish colonization, the revue will offer acts typical of the color of Old Spain which lingers still in Tampa's Spanish settlement. Characteristic Spanish music, songs, and dances, including the colorful rhythms of the rumba, will be offered to festival audiences. With staging in authentic costume and scenic arrangements, Miami will be afforded one of its first opportunities to witness the depth of color in entertainment presented by an all-Latin troupe in whose blood still lingers all the warmth and beauty of Spanish tradition.

Arriving in Miami Monday, Dr. Clarence Carter Nice, state director of music for the Works Progress Administration, said that the festival here is a realization of his desire for greater participation in musical events both by the public and musicians. He termed as completely satisfactory the arrangements made for a combined symphonic presentation which will open music activities here next week.

Possessing his talent and attention on staging of the opera "Aida" on the closing night of the festival, Dr. Nice is arranging to present five singers who are to be brought from New York for the occasion. Presenting the opera in English and with the tropic background of Bayfront park, the Federal Musicians of Florida and festival authorities promise music-lovers of the Miami area a real treat.

Townsend Delegate Says Carlton 'Victim' Of Political Pirates

W. C. Brown, voting delegate and secretary of the Townsend club No. 17, Buffalo and Nebraska avenues, charged last night that the late Governor Doyle Carlton was the victim of "paid political pirates" at the state Townsend convention in Lakeland, which Saturday endorsed C. O. Andrews for United States senator.

Making a report of convention activities to his club, Brown said all endorsements voted at the convention were illegal because forbidden by the constitution and by-laws of the national organization, but that they were "all stacked and loaded beforehand anyway."

Quoting from a copy of the by-laws he said no endorsement could be given by any club or any convention unless authorized and directed by the national headquarters and that this automatically precluded support for any candidate by any other means.

Hits at Salaried Officials "That's the law," he said, "but the law doesn't matter if these paid political pirates want to change it around. They draw their salaries from the money we contribute to the organizations. We pay them. But they are running the organization in this state the way they want to without any regard for the wishes of the general membership."

"All the endorsements voted there are meaningless and I, for one, don't feel bound by any action taken at the convention. But even if we had been able to give our endorsements legally, it probably would have gone to Andrews. Carlton's friends didn't have a chance. The whole thing was stacked and loaded beforehand."

"The whole convention was ruled by this self-imposed hierarchy of paid workers. They are the worst kind of tyrants and would be working against us if they were not on our payroll. Many clubs didn't receive any notice of the convention at all and they got there found that the deadline for submitting resolutions had already passed. I've seen a lot of conventions in my time but never seen such an example of high-handed tyranny as that one."

In addition to the violation of the provisions forbidding endorsements, Brown said the whole convention was illegal anyway because there was not a quorum present. Only 124 clubs out of 324 in the state were represented, he asserted, whereas the rules require two-thirds.

certified copy of each label then is returned to the shipper who, under state regulations, must post it in his packing plant. Labels cannot be re-registered during the season to represent different grades.

Purpose of the September 1 deadline on registrations, Brigham explained, is to enable the Commission to acquaint northern buyers with the grades which these labels will represent during the 1936-37 season. Shippers who do not register their labels will have to stamp the grade of fruit on the end of each box.

Two Outstanding Hits At The Circle Start Next Week

Henry Fonday, popular star of "Trail Of The Lonesome Pine" and "The Moon's Our Home," will appear in "Spendthrift," Sunday and Monday, Aug. 9th and 10th, at the Circle Theatre. In the supporting cast are Mary Brian, Pat Patterson and George Barbier.

"The House of a Thousand Candles," starring Phillips Holmes and Mae Clarke, will be shown Thursday and Friday, "Bargain Nights," at which time two patrons will be admitted for the price of one ticket.

Though the title of this picture may be familiar, the modernized story it tells is something entirely new. In the present version, with a well moulded thread of suspense holding the yarn together, it is a drama of international espionage and intrigue. Supplementing the gripping plot is a contrasting vein of romantic love interest and novel comedy.

Phillips-Holmes, involved in a series of entangling situations with a spy ring, is trailed by his American sweetheart, Mae Clarke, who with him falls into the hands of Irving Pichel, playing the part of head of the spy ring. A surprising turn of events brings the story to a climax and a happy ending.

Kay Writes Of The Big Show On Lake Erie

Makes Thorough Tour of the Grounds and Tells About
The Many Wonders

(Written exclusively for Florida
News Service)

Cleveland, O. Aug. 12.—(FNS)—America has become Exposition conscious. Nomads at heart, Americans like to travel. They want to go places and see things; they follow the crowd, and they enjoy ballyhoo. This summer three great expositions are in progress: the Texas Centennial at Dallas, the California-Pacific at San Diego (in its second year) and the Great Lakes Exposition here in Cleveland. All of them are drawing good attendance and proving successful.

When the question of Florida's participation in this exposition was first advanced, there were some who expressed the belief that the public might be fed-up on expositions. But such is not the case. They are flocking to these events in greater numbers than ever before.

Entering its second month, the Great Lakes Exposition is drawing attendance far beyond the expectation of its sponsors and there is talk now of continuing it another year. Transforming a former city dump into a veritable fairland, Cleveland is staging a remarkable show. It is not called a "World's Fair" - in fact it operates only 100 days - but it is without doubt the most complete and comprehensive exposition ever staged for so short a period. In many respects it rivals the great "Century of Progress" of 1893-94, smaller in extent but better laid out and far more beautiful. Striking is the cleanliness of grounds and buildings. There is nothing cheap or shoddy about it; the landscaping is excellent; the arrangement of buildings and their architecture gives an atmosphere of freedom and roominess; you do not feel crowded.

To your right as you enter the grounds, and a part of the exposition is Cleveland's great public hall, termed Radioland during the show period. Radio shows are featured daily from the gigantic stage with nationally known stage and radio stars participating. Programs are both local and network and among those who have recently appeared are Ed Wynn, the Fire Chief, with Graham McNamee; The Sisters of the Skillet; Stoneagle and Bud; The Pickens Sisters; Reginald Werenwath; Rudy Valle; Jessica Dragonette; Thousands of visitors are privileged to hear and see these artists while the programs are actually broadcast on national networks. CITRUS COMMISSION WINS IN WASHINGTON

Approval of Method of Coloring
Fruit Will Help
Growers

Lakeland, Aug. 13.—Approval by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace of Florida's new method of coloring oranges will benefit both the growers of this state and the consuming public, L. P. Kirkland, chairman of the Florida Citrus Commission, said Saturday upon his return from Washington.

This process of coloring the peel of mature oranges with a harmless food color, like that used in butter, enables us to give consumers a more uniform, attractive product, and this in turn provides a greater opportunity to market our crops successfully," he declared.

"Secretary Wallace has permitted Florida to continue the use of this coloring process because we have made the 'color added' stamp on our oranges a mark of superiority. Before our oranges can be colored this way, they must pass maturity and other standards higher than those required by the federal government or any other state, and they must also contain 4 1/2 gallons of juice per box, which is not required for other oranges."

In extending for one year the effective date of a ruling which might have prohibited the use of "color added" process after September 1, Secretary Wallace commended the Florida Citrus Commission and Commissioner of Agriculture Mayo for their good work this past season in enforcing Florida's citrus coloring law, establishing higher standards for oranges so treated. Wallace's new ruling is understood to mean that Florida may use "color added" indefinitely as long as it does not mis-use it. The state officials, in their conference with him, promised that these oranges will be properly stamped, not over-colored, and carefully inspected.

Senators Lottin and Hill, and Congressman Peterson and Soren supported the appeal of the Florida fruit industry against the prohibition of "color added." Citrus men attending the conference with Secretary Wallace and Director W. G. Campbell of the Food and Drug Administration were L. P. Kirkland, Auburndale; H. C. Babcock, Howard; Phillip R. B. Woolfolk, Orlando; Bernard Kilgore, Clearwater; C. A. Garrett, Kissimmee; Francis P. Whitehair, DeLand; and Marvin H. Walker, Lakeland. Representing the state department of agriculture at Tallahassee were Nathan Mayo and J. J. Taylor.

Come On, Avon Park LET'S GO!

(AN EDITORIAL)

Many favorable comments have been received on the "Times" editorial of last week and the idea of a live, and up and going Chamber of Commerce is gaining ground. Avon Park citizens have come to realize that a chamber of commerce is needed if the city is to go ahead and be something instead of just a spot on the map of Florida.

So, let's go. Be up and doing. Let's have action and not words. We can't afford to sit down, wring our hands or twiddle our thumbs. We must get busy and do something to make Avon Park one of the liveliest little cities in the state. It can be done and it's up to us, individually and collectively to do it.

We can't afford to wait and say "Let George do it." We must all get busy. Everyone of us has a part to play. Maybe only a small part, but even so we must do our best. There is an old saying "United we stand, divided we fall" and that applies to Avon Park.

There is a consensus of opinion that Avon Park must have a live chamber of commerce with a paid executive who will do things. Of course, there have been some calamity howlers who say "It can't be done" but we must disregard them and forge ahead. The trouble is our benefits and advantages are so close under our nose and that we can't see or appreciate them. We can't see the woods for the trees.

The financing of the chamber of commerce has come in for much comment and many suggestions have been offered. It is generally conceded everyone in the city should contribute to some extent as everyone will benefit. Some say a special millage and others suggest an automobile drivers license, the proceeds to go to the chamber of commerce. The proponents of this claim it will kill two birds with one stone, help the chamber of commerce and curb careless and inefficient drivers.

Let the chamber of commerce take in everyone with an interest in Avon Park. Not only the business and professional men, but the citrus growers and the packers, the railroads and everyone who believes in the future of the city. It must be non-political, and with the knowledge that Avon Park will go forward, great things can be accomplished.

Results cannot be expected in a week or a month or maybe for a year. It takes work and the tangible results may be slow in coming, but they will come as surely as day follows night. Look what other towns have done, and what they have done, we can do also.

It will take money, yes. You cannot expect to make money without spending some but the results will be well worth it. So, let's all get busy and act.

We would suggest that Mayor M. E. Covington or some other good citizen call a meeting in the immediate future of all interested in the welfare and progress of Avon Park and let's get started.

So, let's go Avon Park, the best little city in Florida, the best state in the U. S. A.

Lakeland Man Spoke At Boy Scout Meet At Jacaranda Hotel

C. G. Sowers of Southern College, Lakeland, gave an excellent talk Monday evening at the Jacaranda Hotel to a number of Boy Scouts, their parents and others interested in the movement. Mr. Sowers took the place of Ed. Beniley of Lakeland who was unable to be present. He was introduced by "Buster" Keaton, scout executive, also of Lakeland.

Mr. Sowers spoke on the situation now confronting the youth of the land today and stressed the value of the Boy Scout movement in character building. He said the "Gang" is next to the home, and sometimes first, in influencing boys today. It comes ahead of schools, churches and other organizations in influencing the boy and entering the Lake Vero Club. He urged the boys to be very careful in choosing the friends they associate with.

Two Charged With Breaking-Entering

Wallace Gibbs was returned here Monday from Moultrie, Ga. by Constable W. A. Roberts to face charges of breaking and entering. Milton Rivers was arrested Tuesday in Bartow and brought here on a similar charge. They are charged with breaking and entering the Lake Vero Club. Gibbs was in jail here and Rivers has been placed in the county jail at Sebring.

At a preliminary hearing Wednesday before Justice W. H. McCarthy they were bound over to the November term of Circuit Court under bond of $250 each. Gibbs made his bond and was released.

TEXAS GRAPEFRUIT STRONG COMPETITION

Planes State Is Becoming a Factor In Citrus
Market

Lakeland, Aug. 13.—Texas competition for Florida's grapefruit crop this season will be "more than twice as great as last year," A. M. Pruitt, secretary-manager for Associated Citrus Growers & Shippers of Florida, announced here today after a crop survey.

The Associated is a non-profit organization of independent shippers, banded together for cooperation, representing nearly 50 percent of the citrus tonnage of Florida. Headquarters is at Lakeland.

The preliminary estimates on the Texas grapefruit crop are growing larger and larger. There is certain to be a great amount of competition for Florida's growers from Texas," Mr. Pruitt commented.

"Texas, of course, nearly every season has an over-estimated grapefruit crop, so I am, frankly hoping that the talk of 8,000,000 boxes of grapefruit in Texas this season is another over-estimate," he continued.

"Texas last season shipped only a little more than 2,000,000 boxes and another million boxes were shipped from Texas. To jump from 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 boxes to 8,000,000 boxes seems almost impossible. Yet preliminary estimates indicate that size of crop in Texas for 1936-37," the citrus statistician declared.

He then calculated that in Texas there are about 4,000,000 grapefruit trees which are 5 years old (and older) and stated that an 8,000,000 box production would be the rate of only two boxes per tree.

"In Florida we have about 5,000,000 grapefruit trees 6 years old (or older) and assuming that we might have a 15,000,000 or a 16,000,000 box crop this season, which is just about the crop which was in prospect two years ago this summer—it is clear that this would be the rate of about three boxes to the tree. Consequently, the Texas situation is most interesting and will be watched closely by Florida's growers," he said.

Mr. Pruitt asserted preliminary estimates from California-Arizona indicating around 4,000,000 boxes of grapefruit which is about equal to the production the season just past.

"We are beginning to hear a good deal about Florida's new citrus crop," the Associated statistician continued, "but it is just a little early to make a real estimate. I think it would be interesting for growers to study the total shipment figures for the last ten years" (Continued on page four)

Columbus Red Birds Will Not Return Here For Training

The Columbus Red Birds will not return to Avon Park for training next spring but it is expected that another team will be here in their place. This is word received by C. E. Crabtree from Don E. Beach, president of the Red Birds. It was also announced that the Rochester Red Wings will not return to Bartow.

The reason is that the St. Louis Cardinals will be at Daytona Beach and it is desired to have these teams as close there as possible. Mr. Beach stated they are not at all dissatisfied with the treatment received here in the past and think that it is an ideal training center and promised to do all he could to get another team located here. George E. Troutman, president of the American Association, concurred with Mr. Beach and promised to do what he could regarding another team.

Which of the presidential candidates in the national election this fall is going to carry Florida, Lakeland citizens and Avon Park?

Which of the candidates will get the highly important small-town and rural vote? Which candidate will get those votes in the majority of states throughout the nation? These are questions, the answers to which no doubt play an important part in the final national returns next November. Upon the choice of the small-town and rural America voters may rest the balance of power to swing the election for the successful candidate.

Reports from throughout the country indicate that voters everywhere are manifesting exceptionally keen interest in the political campaign now well under way. All signs point to a closely contested election.

It is therefore of special interest at this time that the publishers of weekly newspapers throughout the country have launched a nationwide effort to draw-vote ballots, to learn "which way the wind is blowing" with the small town and rural American voters.

In Nation-Wide Poll.

The Avon Park Times has joined in with these weekly newspapers and will conduct the vote in this section. A straw-vote ballot is published in this issue. It may be voted by any legal voter. You do not have to sign your name. It is important, however, that you cast the name of the town and state from which you expect to cast your vote at the November election, so that the national tabulation of your vote will be accurately recorded.

Publishers Autocaster Service of New York, producers of a service for weekly newspapers, is to serve in the capacity of national headquarters for this nation-wide vote. Your local vote will first be recorded here in Avon Park, then the ballot sent on to New York for national tabulation.

Our Voters are Important

Our local, county and state returns in this straw-vote will be of particular interest to voters everywhere, just as returns from other voters here will be of interest to the voters here. It is only through combining efforts of hundreds of weekly newspapers that such a record of sentiment in the small towns and rural America can be obtained.

It is therefore important that you decide now to cast your straw-vote in this balloting, so that your fellow voters for your favorite candidate in other states will know what may be expected from Florida.

Of first interest, of course, will be below, voting it and choosing right here in Highlands county. Decide now to cast your vote. Clip out the ballot, vote it, write in the name of the town and state, then mail or bring it to The Avon Park Times.

Returns Each Week

Returns in the local voting will be published in these columns each week as the voting progresses. National returns will also be published as soon as they are available, first releases of which should be forthcoming weekly within the next ten days or two weeks.

Let's get the ball rolling here in Avon Park by clipping out the ballot below, voting it and sending it in to this office at once.

Which of the Presidential candidates is going to get an early lead in the first votes cast here in Avon Park?

First returns here should be mighty interesting. You'd better vote for your Presidential choice right now.

Memory of McGraw and Earlier Days Crowds Out Present

WHEN memories stick with you while you should be doing something else, there is only one solution. So you are stuck with them today.

The time when Benny Leonard, who must have weighed 160 pounds, was obtaining publicity for his vaudeville tour by letting it be known that he might soon defend his lightweight title. His very proper indignation when I suggested that my customers might be easier to convince if he would stand on the scales and indicate which leg he was willing to have cut off so that he could reduce to the 135-pound limit.

There was the year when I was a very young and wise apprentice reporter in Baltimore. Then I thought that all New York sports writers must be phonies. That was because of a firm belief that such names as Damon Runyon, Roseman Bulger, Hyatt Isaac could not possibly be real.

There was the time when I first met John McGraw. A ninth-inning decision had cost the Giants a ball game while they were battling for a pennant late in the season. Naturally I expected to hear numerous inside facts concerning baseball and umpires. Instead he took me to sit in dinner and devoted two hours to talking about the high cost of steam yachts and the pleasure that might be obtained by owning one. Not good, but the thing did help me to get the ball game or the decision that had meant it to the Giants.

The time when, after a very delightful evening with Jim Thorpe, I shook hands with him at A. M. and solemnly promised that his football career would be crowned by an opportunity to play against Bradley in the professional contest that afternoon. The memory that Jim, although already somewhat old and rather fat, played a swell game, I forget the rest.

The baseball club which was somewhat annoyed at the way a star was conducting his spring training. The daily search that was made of his room while he was at the ball park and the private detective who trailed him until he went to the room at night. The wondering as to why the star always appeared so shaky the next morning. The night I looked out the window and saw the very obscure rookie who roomed directly above the star dangling a quart bottle on the end of a rope.

That year in Baltimore when I inaugurated the city amateur boxing championship tournament which has been copied so profitably elsewhere since then. The boot-lagger who withdrew his son from the finals because he became angry at the army captain who was representing the A. A. U. as manager of competition. The Police department team which went on sympathetic strike along with the gentlemen who sold very good stuff at 50 cents a shot.

That year when there was so much talk about the International League being a one-man enterprise and Judge Landis' official pronouncement that such tales were all the bunk. The great self-strain I used in not revealing that a few days previously I had been in the same room while Jack Dunn, officially the Baltimore owner, had issued orders which fired a umpire, two Jersey City ball players and one from Newark. The fact that I spent two hours in persuading Dunn, who was a wee bit available at times, that he should not also be the president of the league.

That evening when Winch Symonds threw Rennie Gargard at me because I had shown a tendency to be a bit too wise in my opinion as to him that all wrestling matches are not made in heaven.

The time when the very agreeable Bradley agreed to box a four-round exhibition for charity and might make a lot of money. The fact that the referee was Ed Williams, who was just getting over being bestmanweight champion of the world.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

THE weaker clubs will make a determined fight for a share of the league money next winter. They claim that they provide half the show even when they visit Yankee stadium. So, they argue, visiting clubs should get a better break than the 20 cents on each paid admission arrangement which has been in effect since the 1920's.

Sam McQuade, who now makes matches at the Garden, once was an altar boy. . . . Uncle Sam's rival poleists have definitely decided not to enter a team in the Olympics, but the British, seeking consolation for their Westchester Cup defeat, will send the same 25-goal side to Berlin. . . . Pete Gilbooly, Scotland's celebrated all-around athlete, now trains the Fishburgh Juniors, runner-up in the Empire State Junior (soccer) league.

Don Petrin, the light-heavyweight, wants the world to know that he is now the daddy of a nine-pound boy. Also that, because he needs more dough than can be had in his father-in-law's bakery, he would like to receive some fight offers. . . . It costs $3,000 a night to stage those mid-air auto races in the Garden now. . . . International league writers and managers are even better scraps than the ball clubs. Right now Phil Vitt of Newark is being panned because he is too hard boiled, while Guy Sturdy of the Ochs is being praised for being too easy going. . . . Al Lane, star high school football and brother of the former Princeton football captain, has just failed to receive the proper nod from the entrance committee at Old Nassau. He still has a chance to make the grade in the fall.

Dr. Bler, the Pompton Lakes health farmer, claims a record at which all other fight camp proprietors can aim. During the sixteen years he has been conducting the place, no referee ever has counted ten over a main bout performer who trained there. . . . One of the more vigorous fight squabbles now concerns the Bradstock-Schmeling picture rights. . . . If the Gardner puts the show Harry Vetter probably will get the call. If it is under Hearst A. C. auspices the break will go to the Justy-colored Bill Duff. . . . Possible opponents to the late Charley Knapp as president of the International League are either Secretary Willie Maskey or Umpire in Chief Bill Carpenter.

Ruppert Has Heaviest Insurance on Stadium

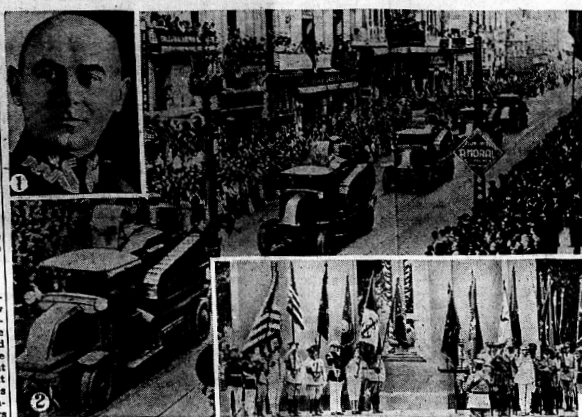

Colonel Ruppert carries more insurance (a bigger sum and more different varieties) on Yankee stadium than does any other big-time club owner. . . . When Charlotte Epstein skipped the Olympic trials she set some kind of a record. It was the first major swimming meet in these parts that the very capable coach has missed in years.

In Detroit they whisper that Mickey Cochrane and Schoolboy Rowe are so far apart temperamentally, that, for the good of all concerned, the potentially great pitcher will be traded this winter. . . . Jimmy Callahan of the Bushwicks soon will dangle a little second-ranker on his knee. . . . Although he is not quite so brash when speaking for publication, Coach Al Ulbrickson confides to friends that Washington's Olympic crew will track the record set by the 1928 California boat.

The biggest bet at metropolitan tracks is a young man who once seemed to be headed toward golfing stardom. His plow down as much as 50 O's on a race. . . . Aside from the fact that the best Card's farm outsider is a Joe Melvick type of his named Les Scottie, the Dodgers gave away a lot of weight when they traded the giant Karasaw. Eddie Morgan, who eventually will arrive at Brooklyn as part of that deal, is 1 foot 1 inch tall and weighs 160 pounds. It is because they are overstocked with one-base-biting guys of that size that the Dodgers are in the cellar now. . . . In addition to being a distinguished surgeon, Dr. G. Randolph Manning is one of the grand old men of soccer. He was the first president of the U. S. F. A.

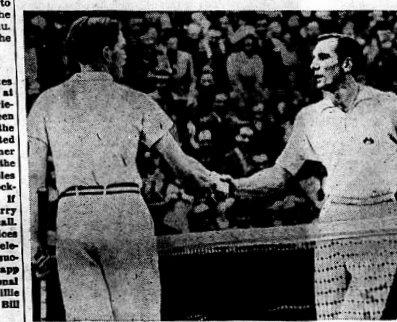

At dinner recently when a group of very well-informed baseball men were discussing the merits of two major leagues this proposition was set forth: "The Cubs won the pennant last year while the Yankees finished second in their own loop. Suppose you owned the Yankees and, during the winter, you were told that you could have the pick of the Cubs to strengthen your club. Leave pitchers and Di Maggio out of it. This is a deal where you would have to swap regular for a regular." The unanimous answer to that was that the difference between their 1935 and 1936 seasons was a Billy Herman-Tony Lazzeri deal very attractive. Otherwise the American League could not improve themselves.

51-Foot Yawl Wins Honolulu Race

"You're first to finish!" James Wilder, judge, tells James Flood (left), owner of the 51-foot yawl Dorade, at the end of the longest yacht race in America—3,225 miles from California to Honolulu. The Dorade, of San Francisco, crossed the finish line with an elapsed time of 13 days 7 hours 46 minutes and 53 seconds. The Circe, of Seattle, was second.

Curiosa Americana

By Elmo Scott Watson

"Here Lies..."

VISIT Cape Ann, Mass., and in a cemetery there you'll find a headstone with this inscription: "Here Lies the Body of Bontswain Allen Whose Body Was Lost at Sea." The explanation for this paradoxical statement is this: Bontswain Allen's body really was lost at sea. When his relatives commissioned a headstone—maker to prepare a memorial shaft for the vanished seaman he began it "Here Lies the Body..." because he always began the inscriptions on headstones thus and didn't know any other way. So they just let him go ahead.

A somewhat similar situation is reported by an American traveler abroad who gleaned this epitaph from a headstone in an English cemetery:

Beneath these cold and silent stones Lie the remains of Samuel Jones, His name was really Smith, not Jones, and he named his name to rhyme with stones.

No such difficulty, however, was experienced by the man who engraved an epitaph for a former slave who was buried near Savannah, Ga. It says:

Here lies old Rastus Rommily Died a-sitting hominy In '25, anno domini.

But A. D. gets a different interpretation in this epitaph, found in a Connecticut graveyard, even though the second rhyme is a bit lame:

Here lies cut down like unripe fruit The wife of Deacon Amos Shute: the died of drinking too much coffee.

Amos Dumay eighteen forty.

Alliteration

IN 1825 when the cornerstone of the Dunker Hill monument was laid and David Webster delivered his greatest commemorative oration, some unknown poet inspired perhaps by the eloquence of the "good-like Daniel" composed this classic of alliteration:

THE DUNKER HILL MONUMENT

Americans strayed and armed at Chief, clergy, citizens congregate. Detesting deeds, daring deeds debate.

Each eye emblazoned ensigns entertain. Flouting from far, fan freedom's flame.

Guards greeting guards grown gray—quest greeting quest, high-minded heroes, hither, home, here, here.

Ingenious jokers join in jubilee, With keening kin, kind knowing kindred kin.

Lo, lengthened lines led Liberty high love. Mixed masses, marbled, monarchical moves.

Note noble navies near—no novel oft action. Of our oppressors overpowered Ocean.

Presentious princes, pristine patriots paired. Queens' quarrel questing quotas, quondam quailed.

Rebellion routed, revolting ramparts rose. Stout spirit, smiting servile soldiers, strive.

These thrilling themes, to thousands truly told. Unhappy unjust usages unfold.

Victorious vanquish, vaunting, vainly vainglorious. Where, while since Webster, warlike Warren waited.

"Excuse 'sensitive' 'sire' queer 'spread.' Yielding Yankee yeoman rest.

Where, while since Webster, warlike Warren waited.

"Excuse 'sensitive' 'sire' queer 'spread.' Yielding Yankee yeoman rest.

Chic Frock Slenderizes

Pattern 1880-B

There is nothing smarter for cool summer wear than silk linen, novelty crepe, dotted swiss, or printed silks, especially when fashioned into a slim and trim model like this stunning design. Who isn't excited about the new wider shoulder width that tends to slenderize the waistline and a pattern that goes together as quickly as a slide fastener. Note the unusual bodice lines, the panel extending to the hem, and the kick pleats that contribute dash and ease. The natty turn-down collar affords versatility and this is where your discriminating taste becomes apparent. It's an opportunity to show the "earmarks" of your creative ingenuity and personality. The cost is small, yardage scant, the effect superb, and sewing simple. Send for this gorgeous frock now.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1880-B is available for sizes: 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42. Size 16 requires 4 1/8 yards of 39-inch material. Send 15 cents in coins. Send for the Summer Pattern Book containing 100 Barbara Bell

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Add a tablespoon of cream to roast beef or lamb gravy. It makes it a delicious brown.

Some folks use a small, round goldfish bowl with a small opening at the tip as a spatter-proof plate to whip cream, beat eggs, etc.

Drain all juices from fruits or vegetables used for salads before arranging them on the plates. Placing the food in a colander for five minutes is a good idea as then all juices will drain out quickly.

Place a glass pie plate over the top of the kettle when making a stew. The steam may then be watched while cooking without lifting the cover or allowing steam to escape.

Do not wash art mulin curtains in warm water. Make a lather with hot water and when it is nearly cold wash the curtains. If the mulin is green add a little vinegar to the water in which they are washed; if lilac or pink add a little ammonia.

and Mechanical College, are proving popular entertainers and because of their excellent work they have been featured with some of the stars on coast-to-coast hook-ups. Local radio stations, which include WTAM, WGAR, WHK and WJAX have been most liberal in providing time for Florida programs. In some instances as many as four a day are featured, all directing attention to our Florida Exhibit and to the state.

Giant, brilliantly colored pillars and arches set in a charming parking park lead one to the Sherwin-Williams Plaza where each afternoon and evening orchestra and hand concerts are held. To the right, as you advance to the upper level, you find the beautiful Ohio Building, maintained by the state; to the left, beautiful home exhibits show modern design in the architecture and home furnishings. Reaching the end of the upper level, you look down on a scene of charm and vivid color that will linger in your memory for a long time, for from this vantage point you overlook practically the whole of this great exposition, a festive galaxy of flags, flowers, gay crowds, colorful modernistic buildings and artistic landscaping. Looming up, to the left, is the gigantic Cleveland Stadium, a permanent structure, but at present part of the exposition. Immediately below you stretches the Bridge of Presidents leading straight into Lake Erie, which glimmers before you in the sunlight. Long easy ramps and comfortable stairways lead down to the lower level where you enter the huge building housing rugged exhibits that tell the fascinating story of coal, iron and steel. Here man is a pigmy amidst gigantic mechanical Frankenstein of modern industry. Force and Power are the dominant themes in this exhibit. You pass through typical mine tunnels, past great blast furnaces, to learn romance of iron and steel. At times it seems that you must surely be in that ghastly Inferno so vividly portrayed by Dante, the only thing lacking being the coven hoofs and tails for the half-naked workmen straining and perspiring at their task. The sizzling, white-hot molten metal might well be from fire pits in the infernal region. Out of this and into the sunlight, again, you make your headway between beds of flowers and gaily decorated pillars and arches to the Automotive Building, where the steel you saw in process of manufacture is put. From this you turn to heavy armor plate, every conceivable form of use, it seems, is shown. Steel's place in the automotive industry is vividly portrayed. You journey on to the Hall of Progress and here the latest in modern invention for the welfare, comfort and happiness of mankind is shown: Refrigeration, Air Conditioning, Telephones, all manner of Electrical Appliances, the latest in Chemical Science and other interesting exhibits.

Then you reach the Federal Building where U. S. Government exhibits acquaint you with the work your government is doing in its various departments. As you leave this group of buildings you encounter another lovely park and before you stands the Firestone Building, on the left the Higby Tower and to the right the Florida Exhibit.

Your entire journey so far has been through the rugged, mechanical displays of great industries. Spinning wheels, whirling motors, big business, energy, endless tireless energy, speed, struggle—and so you have seen the WORKHOUSE of MEN, man-made, hard, cold and rugged.

But the millions who toil and slave day in and day out in the mines and at furnace and foundry amid these giant machines, are human beings with souls that crave the light and freedom and joy of living that Nature and a Nature's God intended that they should have. As the man of the forest and woodland, the fields and hills, marvels at the wonder of modern industry, even so does the man of industry marvel at the work of nature. To him the tiny flower, the waving blade of grass, the climbing shrub, are just as entrancing. Like a child with a new toy, he gurgles over a shiny sea shell, a rough bit of sponge from the depth of the Gulf fascinates him. And as the industrial-minded populace of this region journeys from sturdy, mechanical exhibits into the Florida Garden, they are spell-bound, enthralled; orange and heavy citrus trees, in full bloom, and other with fruit, stun them.

Palms wave graceful leaves above their heads as they make their way up the path that leads to Florida Manor - to them it is a veritable Fairyland - a land of makebelieve, a Garden of Eden, nothing less. The delightful scent of orange blossoms reaches their nostrils as they enter the building and colorful animated dioramas charm them with the realistic scenes from another world - a world which they have always dreamed but for the most part have never seen; a land of open country, great forests, picturesque rivers and rolling hills, white sand beaches and rolling surf, lakes, groves, fields of truck crops, corn, cotton and cane, of cities and hamlets that bask in the warm sunshine when the world they know is blanketed with ice and snow. Eagerly these nature-starved souls ask for information; the desire to see Florida itself wells up in their hearts. A home in Florida becomes their obsession.

Many of these people have substantial savings; they are a hard working, thrifty lot; they look to the future and prepare for it, for it is bred in them for generations. And even the cry of reckless spending that we have been experiencing has not turned them from their path in this respect. Some are pensioners, having served their time in industry, and these are free to make their home wherever they choose. Before the coming of the Florida Exhibit to their doorstep they had thought of our state as a land unattainable and far away. But as they talk with Floridians they learn that living costs are cheaper, clothing costs less, there is no coal bill to worry about and above all they learn of the homeowner's freedom from taxation on his homestead in the beautiful climate of Florida. A surprising number are planning to come to our state. They have come to know Florida better and they are convinced that "what they say about Dixie is true."

But I started to take you on a hurried trip through the exposition, and like everyone else, I reached the Florida Exhibit where it seemed as if I just couldn't ever get away.

But let's hurry on. We'll stop for one performance at the "Parade of Years" - a marvelous spectacle that depicts the progress of civilization from the Indian's drag to the latest in air, train, boat and bus travel. A two hour show that is intensely interesting and highly instructive. We go on through the exhibit buildings of Western Reserve University, the beautiful Horticultural Hall, stop for a peak at the Marine Theatre where stars of the aquatic world entertain us with a delightful water sports program, then take dinner on the Show Boat where cuisine is excellent and prices moderate. Nationally known entertainers add to our enjoyment, and if we feel in the mood we may dance while Don Voohrie's orchestra provides the tempo. As we sit at our table and look across Lake Erie we can see the speed boat races, and we look down on the Byrd Polar Ship at anchor nearby and make a mental note to visit it before we leave the grounds. Dinner over, we climb in a "rickshaw" and ride down to the midway. It is a bit too soon after eating to try any of the breath taking rides, but we can visit some of the shows. "Strange As It Seems" is a good one, then we look in the Ski jumpers, the Midway Circus, The Rumba Show, Motordrome, and Monkey Land. But wait, what is that stand just below the Old Globe Theatre where Shakespearean plays are featured? It's Poo's wine stand - and the crowd gathered 'round is drinking Florida grapefruit wine and liking it immensely, while Mr. Poole of Clement pours glass after glass and talks Florida citrus for health.

We now reach the Streets of the World where it seems that every nationality is represented. Queer winding streets lead thru a labyrinth of foreign looking houses. Strange costumes are everywhere. Blonde Dutch girls in wooden shoes, Spanish dancers, half-wild Syrians, Swiss Alpine Climbers, Czechoslovakian dancers and musicians, a never ending colorful parade of nations. Quaint shops beckon us. Novelties and merchandise of every land may be secured in this amazing world village. It is unique, the most striking setting I have ever seen, surpassing anything at the Century of

Large Number U. S. Savings Bonds Have Been Sold To Date

Wayne C. Taylor, Acting Secretary of the Treasury, announced today that the one-half billion dollar mark, maturity value, of sales of United States Savings Bonds had been passed.

Savings Bonds were first made available on March 1, 1935. To the 10 months period from that date to the end of the year, purchases amounted to a maturity value of $289,000,000 or an average daily sale for each business day for that period of approximately $1,000,000, maturity value. Purchases from January 1, 1936 to July 6, represented maturity value of $241,000,000 or an average daily sale of approximately $1,535,000 for each business day, reflecting a 50 per cent increase in the average daily sales for the year 1936 over 1935.

Purchases for the new fiscal year beginning the first day of last month are at an increased rate, averaging a daily maturity value of $1,823,700, which is in excess of 80 per cent increase over the daily average sales for the year 1935. Average daily sales in July, 1936, are approximately 75 per cent ahead of average sales for July, 1935.

United States Savings Bonds may be purchased at all Post Offices of the first and second classes, at most of the third class, and at some of the fourth class offices or direct-by-mail from the Treasurer of the United States, or any Federal Reserve Bank. The direct-by-mail sales have likewise shown a consistent rate of increase during the last several months. The upward trend of sales is apparently due not only to increasing numbers of new purchasers but to the purchases made by present owners at regular intervals.

In Florida for the fourteen months period the sales amounted to $3,367,298.75. The month of April totaled $265,987.50 and a preliminary survey for May showed Florida had bought $253,537.50 during the month.

Boy Scout Meetings.
The Avon Park Boy Scouts will hold a meeting every Thursday evening at the Baptist Church. All members are asked to attend the meetings.

Progress for its scope and completeness. Beyond the Streets of the World we find the Army Camp and the Blimp landing field where for a small fee we may enjoy a Goodyear lighter-than-air cruise. It is a wonderful trip and one you will never forget, for you soar above the Exposition grounds, loop about the business section of the city and view the surrounding country for miles in every direction.

And so I have tried to take you on a hurried trip thru this marvelous Exposition. I do not pretend to do it justice. There is much that space would not permit me to attempt to describe. You must see it for yourself. But in closing, let me again remark that Florida is fortunate in being represented here. Our participation is putting us in touch with thousands of people who will visit Florida as a direct result of having seen our display, and many of them will remain as permanent settlers.

Expects Higher Prices For Citrus

Orlando, Aug. 13.—After attending the Annual Apple Convention at Boston this week, R. B. Woolfolk, vice president of American Fruit Growers, will return to Florida where the new fruit season soon will be under way. Mr. Woolfolk recently declared the national apple situation is encouraging for citrus fruit growers in Florida for the reason that the apple crop is short, apple prices are expected to be high—and there is always a marked tendency for citrus prices to move up, or down, with apple prices.

Mr. Woolfolk attended the Color-Added conference at Washington, before going to the Annual Apple Convention.

Stolen Bicycle Is Swapped For Booze

H. C. Holland is in the county jail at Walkeah charged with stealing a bicycle belonging to the son of John Ewings of Wauchula. It is charged that Holland stole the bicycle on June 1, brought it to Avon Park and hid it in a grove. He later pawned it to Bill Revella for a gallon of booze. Revella, when he found the bicycle had been stolen, sunk it in Lake Streety from where it was recovered.

Police Officer James Cravey found the bicycle and was instrumental in bringing about the arrest of Holland.

Big Donations Are Requested From County

Commissioners Bombarded
With Requests For Money
At Meeting Tuesday

With only three commissioners present, Chairman L. H. Henderson, A. F. Spooner and N. B. Jackson, the county board Tuesday was besieged with requests for money. No action was taken on any of the requests and the board met again this morning to consider the matters further. Commissioner Jackson again brought up the question of extermination of deer in the broad country south of state road eight and east of the railroad. Jackson wants the grounds opened for deer hunting by the county to carry cattle fever ticks. He and Commissioner Henderson were named to attend a meeting of the state and game board in Tallahassee next month at which time the matter will be discussed.

The first of the money requests was made by E. C. Wimer, assistant to Earl W. Brown, manager of the Florida exhibit at the Great Lakes Exposition at Cleveland, O., now in progress. The exhibit is staged by Florida National Exhibits, Inc., a non-profit organization and Mr. Wimer stressed the advertising results obtained from the exhibits at Chicago. Century of Progress for two years and at Rockefeller Center, Radio City, New York, last winter. Another one will be staged in New York next winter, he said.

He said the committee was asked to contribute at the rate of 5% cents per inhabitant and Highlands county's share would be $600. He had a letter from Attorney General Cary D. Landis stating such contributions are legal.

The board took no action, deferring the matter until such time as there is a full report on the exhibit.

Next came a delegation from the Sebring chamber of commerce, the Lions' Club and others asking the county to contribute $500 to help retain the CCC camp in the county. It was stated the present buildings have to be vacated by September 7 and the federal government is acquiring new buildings to be provided if the camp remains in the county. The city of Sebring would be asked to contribute a like sum, being estimated $1,700 to be required to be taken down and move some camp buildings at Old Town which the state forestry department said could be used.

Speakers said that if the camp is moved much of the work already done at Highlands Hammock and the Arboretum would be lost. It was also alleged that if the camp moves it would be up to the county to maintain the Hammock.

Commissioner Spooner suggested the sum be raised by popular subscription if the matter is so urgent. He objected to hand out county money when there is none in sight. He also expressed the opinion privately that the camp would not be moved even if the sum stated is not forthcoming.

The matter was left in abeyance in order to see what amount could be raised and the board adjourned to meet again Thursday morning.

The sum of $2,500 had been asked by the state forestry department to help maintain fire prevention work in the county and in conjunction with the Hammock. This sum would be matched by the state and as it dovetailed with the CCC camp requested action on this was also deferred.

At the meeting Thursday there was a large delegation present from both Sebring and Avon Park and after some discussion, the board declined to provide the $250 asked for. At their meeting Tuesday night the Sebring city council voted the other $550 as the camp would be employed as a good sign of the city for electric light and power, the bills amounting to approximately $100 per month.

The commission on Thursday decided to appropriate the $2,300 asked for by the state forestry department for fire protection in the county.

SIX-YEAR PROGRAM PW BEING PLANNED

County Planning Council Instructed To Make Survey of County

Tallahassee, Aug. 20.—The Highlands County Planning Council today furnished with instructions and forms by the Florida State Planning Board for the taking of a county-wide inventory of public works projects suitable for a six-year program to be financed with federal and local funds, Secretary M. L. Montgomery of the State Planning Board said.

Headed by Secretary Ickes of the Interior Department, the National Resources Committee designated planning organizations throughout the country as the agencies to take the inventory.

The Highlands County Planning Council has received instructions governing the manner of listing and describing all projects desired by the municipal and county officials of Highlands county for construction during the six-year period beginning January 1, 1937.

Secretary Montgomery called this a most important assignment and said that the future execution of a public works program in the county will depend on how well the inventory is made.

The officials of all governmental units in the county are being requested to indicate the order in which projects they recommended should be constructed and to base their decisions upon urgent need. The State Planning Board will transmit such recommendations to Washington, where national public construction needs are to be determined on a local basis.

The importance of the inventory is shown, Secretary Montgomery added, by the fact that it will unquestionably be the foundation of the federal public works construction program after January 1, 1937, and that the best interests of Highlands county will be served by the prompt and complete listing of projects.

The State Planning Board has assured the County Planning Council that every possible assistance in completing inventory.

F. D. R. PAYS TRIBUTE TO FLORIDA EXHIBIT

Favorable Impressions On
Florida Given By President at Banquet

Cleveland, Aug. 18.—(FNS)—Florida alone among a field of several hundred exhibitors at Cleveland's Great Lakes Exposition, gained individual recognition from the President of the United States when during a brief talk at a banquet given in his honor, he specifically mentioned the Florida Exhibit following a general tribute to the whole Exposition.

His talk, non-political and extemporaneous, was given over to an expression of amazement at what had been accomplished in a few short months by the enterprising business men responsible for the staging of this great Exposition.

"A few years ago," the President said, "the task of creating such an extensive exposition as this would have been looked upon as a two or three-year job, but you have accomplished it in six short months."

Continuing, he expressed the thought that such events are playing an important part in breaking down sectionalism and is cementing the relationship of the states, affording the people of the country an opportunity to learn of the resources, opportunities and problems of neighboring and distant states. It was this particular line of thought that led him to the mention of Florida. Pointing to the Florida Exhibit, he said, "I am glad to see the great state of Florida participating in this with her beautiful exhibits." He made no specific mention of any other exhibit on the grounds.

Florida and the Florida Exhibit had been forebodingly and pleasantly impressed upon his active and alert mind just a few moments before he stepped from his automobile to enter the banquet hall. For as Cleveland's Mayor and Exposition officials took him on a personally conducted motor tour of the grounds, his journey down "Blossom Way" led him directly to the Florida Manor House which stands on a knoll visible for the entire distance.

Anticipating his visit and alert to do everything possible, Earl Brown had arranged with Byron Sanford artist, on the exhibit staff, to paint a giant portrait of the President. And this portrait, which proved to be a striking likeness in full color, artistically framed and draped with the national colors, was a welcome and greeting at the entrance of Florida Manor.

While many smaller pictures of the Chief Executive were displayed about the grounds, none could compare with Florida's presentation. As the presidential car neared the entrance to our exhibit, the picture caught his eye; his smile widened and he leaned from the car for a better look as he gracefully lifted his hat high above his head and bowed his acknowledgement to the staff of Florida Manor standing at attention in front of the building.

News photographers and reporters had no advance knowledge of Florida's plan of greeting, and they were as much impressed and surprised as the President. Several snapped photos for use in local newspapers.

With Florida so vividly brought to his attention, the President evidently carried his favorable impressions to the banquet table and leadership in the hands of C. C. Coderling, Lake City, and George B. Hills, of this city.

Several gubernatorial nominees, Fred Cane and Senate nominees Claude Pepper and C. O. Andrews, were among party leaders attending the executive meeting. Following appointment of sections, campaign committees, Chairman J. B. Hodges announced that these committees will be called back to Jacksonville next August 29 to lay final plans for the campaign.

Secure Officer For National Guard Battery

Battery Will Remain Here;
Expect Armory To Be Completed Soon

Through the strenuous efforts of the Avon Park school trustees and other interested citizens a commanding officer has been secured for a new National Guard battery, 56th P. A. Brigade, P. N. G., located here and the battery will remain and the prospects for the completion of the new armory building are considerably brighter.

Due to lack of officer material the battery had been ordered disbanded and at a meeting of local citizens and Gen. Sumter Lowry and Col. A. L. Sands held on July 29, the first of September was set as a deadline to secure a commanding officer. The officers recommended Lieut. Chester Yates of Plant City as being the only available man and Gen. Lowry also promised to use his influence to have the new armory completed as soon as possible, if qualified officers were secured.

Lieut. Yates had recently been appointed principal of the Dover schools at a good salary. Following correspondence and conferences he and his wife consented to come to Avon Park as school teachers and provide satisfactory army arrangements could be made.

In cooperation with the county board of public instruction the local trustees went as far as they could in this respect and the $300 remained to be taken care of.

As time was short a decision had to be taken immediately a meeting was held Friday night at which local trustees, members of the city council and others were present. The matter was presented by the trustees and the council members present agreed to the city taking care of the $300. At the regular meeting Tuesday night the council agreed to guarantee the sum with bonds, thus insuring the county would be asked to help. The proviso was also made that proceeds from dances and other entertainment held in the armory would be used to help defray this amount.

At a special meeting Saturday the county board approved the appointment of Mr. and Mrs. Yates for the Avon Park school. They are expected to move here in the immediate future and assume their duties.

At Sunland Miss Alice R. Crawford was named primary teacher and at Plant City, Miss Mary Key of Groves Springs were appointed teachers.

At Sebring Herbert J. Benson was appointed commercial teacher to take the place of Miss Oston, resigned.

At Sunland Miss Alice R. Crawford was named primary teacher and at Lake Placid Miss Ruth May Madden was appointed high school teacher and Miss Dorothy Magerman school teacher.

A contract was signed with Sol McClelland, Sunland, to transport 11 children who have completed the eighth grade who so desire and others on the same route to DeSoto City where the high school children will join the DeSoto City-Sebring bus to attend the Sebring high school. The other will remain in DeSoto City to attend school there. The driver on the DeSoto City-Sebring bus will be Frank Tegen and a large bus will be used.

Mrs. Marie Martin was named bus driver at Bassenger where a driver will be used. Mrs. Mary Thomas was named school driver for the Port Kissimmee school.

The Venns local bus driver will be Bobbie Langford and the Venns Lake Placid driver will be A. H. Farrington. The Lake Placid local driver will be Robert Roberts.

Two buses will be used at Sebring and two at Avon Park. For the Avon Park drivers the same contract was entered into with the Avon Park Motor Co., which system has proved satisfactory in the past.

The board received bids and bought a large bus, seating 91 children from the Sunshine Motor Co., Sebring. By the sun of the bidders present, the board purchased a station wagon instead of a chassis as advertised for. This contract was awarded to the Avon Park Motor Co.

CITY COUNCIL Orders Permit For New Church

New Contracts For Lighting
Mail Offered By Service Co.

To permit or not permit a church to build, was one of the questions before the city council Tuesday night and it was the cause of considerable discussion and pro and con. The matter had been deferred from a previous meeting in order to give City Attorney S. C. Pardee time to look up the law and render an opinion. This opinion was in the hands of the council Tuesday night and then the argument started.

The crux of the matter is that the Church of God, now located on the south side near DeLaney's store has purchased lots on South Verona avenue opposite the C & C Grocery and the Ely Bakery and requested a permit to build. Property owners in the neighborhood objected, alleging the services are noisy and constitute a nuisance. They asked the permit be refused and then it would be up to the church to mandamus the city. The attorney's opinion apparently was the effect that the city could not legally refuse the permit.

During the discussion the pastor of the church and several members came into the council room. The pastor cited shouting and noise made during ball games and by "nigger gangs" and said the church is only trying to do good. He also cited the constitution of the U.S.A. gave them the right to build. He suggested the permit be granted and each member of the council voted 10 towards the building fund. He promised to stop the services if the neighbors can't sleep.

The matter was disposed of by Chairman Pendleton vacating the chair and making the permit be granted and if the law is broken later, legal action will be taken. Councilman Sappington seconded and the motion carried. Councilman Hall was in the chair for this motion and Councilman Garrett did not vote. He expressed his opinion that the matter was not disposed of and something had been started.

During the discussion efforts were made to trade some city owned lots located close to the lot bought by the church but this trade did not go through.

J. G. Gravelle, local manager for the Florida Public Service Co., presented for consideration new contracts for the White Way lighting and for power for the sewage disposal pump on a three or five year basis. The proposed contracts would provide lights for the entire length of the Mall at small additional cost to what is charged now for the lights in the center of town and saving on the pump bill would more than cover the extra lighting cost.

Chairman Pendleton vehemently objected to any contract and asked why the proposed rates could not be given without a contract. He thought the city might have a plant of its own at some future date. Both Councilmen Hall and Sappington urged more lights in town and said tourists have left because of the poor lighting of the streets. It was pointed out that the service company's franchise still has eight years to run and then the question was asked why not a contract for three or five years. The matter was a temporary settled by Councilman Garrett moving the contract be received for further consideration and the question was left over until the next meeting. This motion carried but the majority of the council appeared to favor the proposed contract.

During the discussion Mr. Gravelle stated that Avon Park is fortunate in having power available for any industry that might wish to connect for power. Any industry can be invited here, he said, with the assurance of ample power at economical rates. The contracts with the question of power in effect in other cities, he said.

Will Bennett and E. G. Todd, representing the school trustees and others interested in the armory, presented a request that the city supply $300 a year to make up the necessary salary for Prof. and Mrs. Yates. They will teach and have the contract for three or five years and Prof. Yates will be an outlay of $93,677.80.

FLOYD GIBBONS FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER ADVENTURER How Everybody

"The Man in the Rafter"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

THIS is the story of John Schindler of West Orange, N. J., and how he learned to be afraid of a pistol. That was a funny thing about John. He says he had always been afraid of things like rats, spiders and women, but a loaded revolver sticking in his face wouldn't even make him bat an eyelash. Maybe it was a good thing, too, for John was a detective, and every once in a while somebody DID stick a revolver in his face.

That happened to him once in the summer of 1922, down in a resort town on the Jersey coast. The superintendent of an estate there was suspected of robbing his employer with a sort of systematic thievery. John had been hired to get the goods on him, and was working as second chauffeur while he poked and probed around gathering his evidence. He just about had the case sewed up when he met the superintendent on the grounds one dark night. The super had a revolver out, was pointing it at him.

And what did John do? He walked over to the super and ripped the gun right out of his hand. The super started to throw the gun on the ground, turned his back and walked away.

A spider would have scared him stiff. He'd have run like a turkey from a woman. But shootin' iron just didn't impress him. That's what John THOUGHT. But he wasn't through with that case yet. He was due to be plenty scared before it was all over. And by a gun, too.

Lunatic Menaces John With Revolver.

It happened the next day, about two o'clock in the afternoon. "I was entering the garage to go to my room," he says, "when I was greeted by the most blood-curdling laugh I ever heard in my life. I looked about the garage. There was no one in sight. Finally, I looked up!"

Then John saw him! Three days before, the superintendent's son had been brought home from the state insane asylum. Now he was sprouting atop a crossbeam of the garage, leering down at John with a mad light in his eyes. And in his hand he had a revolver!

"I'd been thinking guns didn't scare me," says John, "but I'd never figured on bumping into one in the hands of a madman. It was the worst experience I ever had in my life. My knees wanted to shake, but I didn't dare let them. I had to keep my head and keep on talking. And talk I did, while he toyed with me like a cat plays with a mouse."

John Flatters the Echo of Homicidal Maniac.

For a full half hour John talked and stalled for time. "First," he says, "he told me he was going to kill me but had a few things he wanted to tell me first. He said I had his father suffering the tortures of hell through my butting into his business, and now he wanted to see me equal."

He said he was going to make me suffer as long as possible before putting me out of my misery. Then he added that, of course, if anyone came into the garage that would upset his place he'd have to shoot me before they could interfere. All I could do was stand there and play up to his ego while, at the same time, I prayed no one would come near the garage."

John played up to that insane lad until he thought he'd crack from the strain. He yested him to death—admitted he had the upper hand and could control the show. He agreed that it was up to him whether he killed him then or waited until he was doggone good and ready, and did everything he could think of to make the maniac feel he was a great fellow. And the crazy boy, all swelled up with conceit, ate it up as fast as John could dish it out to him.

Gullible Crazy Man Helps in Phantom Search.

Meanwhile, all John could do was stall along and hope that something would break in his favor. On the other hand, each moment of delay meant that someone might come into the garage and startle the mad boy into pressing the trigger. John had to think fast if he ever expected to get out of that spot alive.

Finally, he began coaxing the mad boy to come down off his perch on the cross-beam. He told him he had all the evidence against his father written down and hidden in his room, and that, before the young lad killed him, he ought to get those papers and destroy them. "He agreed to that," says John, "and thought he was more clever than ever. He brought up to the rear and kept me covered as we went up the stairs to my room."

Once in the room, though, John began looking around in places where he knew doggone well there were no papers, mumbled, as he searched, that he couldn't seem to find what he wanted. "Finally," says John, "I asked him in an offhand way if they could be on the table next to where he was standing. He fell for it—started looking through the papers on the table. Was my only chance and I took it!"

John Crowns Madman With His Own Revolver.

John says his hands got to that table in just nothing flat. Then the battle was on. John says he was never much at fighting, but he fought for his life that day. He had a struggle to get the gun away from the lad, and another one to keep him from getting it back again.

He finally settled that by seeking him over the head with the revolver, and maybe, after remembering that terrible half hour of fear and futility he had been subjected to, he soaked a little harder than usual. Anyway, the lad went out—cold. John didn't have any more trouble with him after that.

But nowadays, John doesn't go up against any more birds with guns, unless said birds can furnish him with convincing proof that they're reasonably sane.

Scandinavian Green

The Scandinavian green or emerald, sometimes called the woodcock in Scotland, is considered the finest game bird on the European continent. It is the largest member of the grouse family found in the world and is also ranked second only to the wild turkey. In the Scandinavian countries it is considered a rare table bird and is generally served on festive occasions. The bird is not highly colored but rather drab in plumage. The head and neck are dull black; the eye feathers red; the breast and lower part of neck a dark blue green metallic. The male outweighs the female and frequently weighs from 12 to 20 pounds. Some weigh as much as 30 pounds.

College Caps and Gowns

The history of academic dress reaches far back into the early days of the oldest universities. A statute of 1281 required that all doctors, bachelors and bachelors of the University of Cologne wear gowns. In England in the fourteenth century certain college fellows "wore in apparel" and prescribed the wearing of a long gown. Gowns may have been necessary for warmth in the unheated buildings of the period. Hoods seem to have served the intended head until they were superseded by skull caps. These were discarded by a headpiece more like the one now recognized as academic. Both Cap and gown have been made academic dress a matter of university control.

Lesson for August 23

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL MEN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:1-17; Romans 1:1-17. GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life—John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Learns a Lesson. JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Makes a Great Discovery. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—First Steps in World Brotherhood. Young People and Adult TOPIC—Universal Brotherhood in Christ.

Christianity early found its progress impeded by a difference of opinion. Such a difference when met in a Christian spirit will not be a stone of offense, but when properly and tactfully settled may be a stepping stone to progress.

Jewish Christians at Jerusalem were disturbed by the report that Peter had received the gentile Cornelius as a Christian brother without requiring him to fulfill the Jewish law of circumcision.

Peter defended his action not by asserting his position or appealing to his apostolic authority, but by relating what God had done. Henry Drummond once said, "The best argument for Christianity is a Christian."

The best proof that God has actually been at work is to present the unanswerable evidence of a redeemed soul. In this matter his plea Peter reveals that I. He Had a Vision of God's Purpose (vv. 5-10).

God had spoken to him when we meet a man who is in touch with God, we should at once give heed. He may be, and perhaps should be, the minister or a Christian leader, but he may be and frequently is some humble, unknown servant of God. But if God has spoken to him we will do well to listen. Peter had learned the great lesson that what God had cleansed man should receive as clean.

II. He Had Seen God Work (vv. 11-15).

The Holy Spirit had fallen on the gentiles and they actually had been saved. It is not singular that in the early church they could hardly believe that a gentile could be saved? Now we are astonished if a Jew is saved. Why will we in our unbelief limit the Holy One of Israel?

The all-powerful gospel of the grace of God is still saving men and women. Jew and gentile, from their sins. Have you seen it happen? It is a great inspiration to faith and service. God is ready so encourage us—he is the same today as he was when he sent Peter to Cornelius. Are we willing to run his errands, proclaim his message?

III. He Had Received a Fresh Insight Into God's Word (v. 16).

The best way to learn the meaning of God's Word is to use it. Live by it. "If any man will do so, he will be a part of the doctrine, whether it be of God." (John 7:17).

Peter had learned anew that God's Word meant just what it said. We who are his servants should believe his Word and act on it in faith.

IV. He Knew Better Than to Withstand God (v. 17).

When God has not raised any barriers of race, creed, color, class, or social position, it is not for his followers, and assuredly not for his servants, to build "fences" which he would not authorize or countenance. If God intended to save gentiles, Peter wanted to be an instrument in his hand, not a hindrance in his way.

One of the needs of our day is that those doing God's work should not withstand him and his will. He who is the same yesterday, today, and forever is ready to work as powerfully today as he did in the days of Pinney and Moody, and in the days of Abraham, Moses, Daniel, and of Peter. Let us give him liberty to work in and through us, not as we may wish, but as he desires. Who are we, that we should withstand God?

V. In Conclusion (Romans 1:15-17).

This portion presents a magnificent declaration from Peter's co-worker, Paul, the apostle to the gentiles, that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation for everyone that believes. Jew or Greek. Regardless of race or condition, we are all unrighteousness, and there is but one way of salvation—through faith in Jesus Christ. It is our responsibility and privilege to make this message known to all men everywhere. Your neighbor and mine, whether in the next house or on the other side of the world, is our opportunity. Not one is unclean or untouchable, although he may be stained with the dark pollution of sin. God is ready and willing to save. Let us tell men the good news!

Good Things

It is only by thinking about great and good things that we come to love them, and it is only by loving them that we come to long for them, and it is only by longing for them that we are impelled to seek after them, and it is only seeking after them that they become ours and we receive the vital experience of their beauty and blessedness.—Henry Van Dyke.

DAD'S DASHES.

—UNEMPLOYMENT.

We notice in the papers where a gentleman by the name of Tagwell, up at Washington recently made a talk on the unemployment situation and took occasion to haul the business men of the country over the coals for not absorbing the surplus of laborers, remarking that business was negligent in not doing its share in supporting the government in its purpose of putting everyone to work.

Now, we don't know much about this Tagwell fellow, but judging from the way he shoots off his mouth and the alphabets he has before and after his name that he is a school teacher who has made good in his profession, that he may have a good supply of "book learnin'" but mighty little business experience. His cranium seems to be chuckful of theories and he has the gift of gab to make a rather convincing talk.

This we do know, and so does any man who has been in business on a small scale during the past few years, and that is that the fellow who overflows his payroll by hiring more help than he can profitably use is headed straight for bankruptcy.

Big business we know nothing about. It may be true, as the administration fellows tell us, that they can go right ahead full steam whether or not the income meets the expenses, and get by with it. That the more workers they hire, the more customers they will have.

When it comes to the little fellows with limited capital and credit we are telling Tag and his fellow professors that it WILL NOT WORK. As soon as the money in the old wheelbarrow has gone and the money boys refuse credit the tent folds up and those who had jobs with the institution are out, bag and baggage. It isn't a theory but a condition.

To stay in business you have to have good old American dollars, and to make them in business you have to have a profit, over and above expenses, whether it be for labor, equipment or taxes. Tagwell and his gang can find all the fault they care to with the business men, but when it comes right down to brass tacks, and not the politicians, are the backbone of the country. It is their initiative, their energy and their capital that furnishes the money to pay the salaries of the swivel-chair operators and theory doers.

We are willing to admit that things up at Washington are at present in the hands of highly educated experts—fellows who have confidence in their own capabilities, but who are not to be trusted, for we are not willing to admit that any set of humans are smart enough to change Nature's laws or run every little peanut stand from Canada to Mexico. They may think they can do it and try to convince the American people, but experience will teach them that they are barking up the wrong tree. MR. COOK JUST WILL NOT COME DOWN.

They can try to spend the country into prosperity, try to regulate everything from school boys to the tides of Passamaquoddy, but they cannot get away from OLD MR. SUPPLY AND DEMAND. When there is a demand for more labor it will be, to a certain extent, absorbed by business. All business may be regulated, but the ultimate destination of most of what they shall not plant, but what it comes to regulating production and prices, drought, windstorms, bugs and other natural causes, they cannot be regulated by human agencies, and OLD MR. SUPPLY AND DEMAND WILL KEEP DOING BUSINESS AT THE OLD STAND.—Winter Haven Chief.

COMMUNISTS SUPPORT LEWIS.

They Hate American Federation of Labor and Would Destroy It.

The ominous fact about the insurgent labor movement, now identified as the Committee for Industrial Organization, is the enthusiasm with which COMMUNIST INTERESTS GIVE IT THEIR APPROVAL.

Whether their support is welcome or not, Communists are OPENLY SUPPORTING the committee in its struggle with the American Federation of Labor.

It is possible that Communist approval is neither sought nor welcomed by the committee or its organizer, John L. Lewis. But the whole movement is instantly made suspect by the inescapable fact that IT IS ATTRACTIVE TO COMMUNISTS.

The movement is therefore proceeding without the confidence of the nation and of legitimate labor groups BECAUSE OF THE CURSE PUT ON IT BY the Communist Party and its spokesmen.

Communists hate the American Federation of Labor, perhaps for entirely different reasons than those inspiring Mr. Lewis. But their immediate objectives—TO DESTROY THE FEDERATION—are the same, and they are thus allies:

IT IS IMPORTANT TO KNOW WHY COMMUNISTS HATE THE FEDERATION.

The American Federation of Labor has been an effective instrument for social advancement because it has co-operated with employing industry to that end.

Organized labor and industry in America have WORKED TOGETHER to create a high standard of living for labor.

The Communist labor policy is to DESTROY INDUSTRY, not to co-operate with it.

The federation recognizes that it is the function of industry to create income, and that it is the function of organized labor to secure a fair distribution of WEALTH IN WAGES. The purchasing power of the community rests upon these essentials.

COMMUNIST LABOR POLICY REJECTS THESE ESSENTIALS.

It seeks to force industry into bankruptcy, to establish Communist control of industry.

It ignores the fact that management is a fundamental success, and that politicians and agitators are NEITHER ABLE ENOUGH NOR HONEST ENOUGH to manage industrial enterprise successfully.

Communist labor policy would provide that labor should live beyond its legitimate means, and should thus consume its capital and inevitably CONSUME ITSELF while destroying the industry which supports it.

The Communist press is waging the Lewis committee's battles vigorously, obviously with full belief it is thus FIGHTING ITS OWN BATTLE.

A recent issue of THE DAILY WORKER, which describes itself as the central organ of the Communist Party in America, featured as article by Louis F. Budenz, RANKING EXPONENT OF COMMUNISM, upholding the Lewis organization.

A current issue of THE NEW MASSES, also a Communist organ, similarly champions the committee in an article attacking the federation.

While the reaction of Mr. Lewis to this support from the Communist sources may be obscure, his contribution to the current issue of the DAILY WORKER, published in the name of the Communist Party, certainly leaves the impression he finds this support FAR FROM UNWELCOME.

The Communists very obviously expect either to acquire control of American labor through the Lewis committee, or TO WREST CONTROL OF LABOR FROM IT.

Whatever Mr. Lewis' intentions toward Communism may be, it is certain that successful fruition of his plans will accomplish one major objective of the Communist Party.

IT WILL DESTROY THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

As long as this is his purpose, or there is any possibility of accomplishing that purpose, MR. LEWIS HAS THE BACKING OF COMMUNISM whether he likes it or not.—Atlanta Georgian.

IT'S UP TO YOU.

There has been a great deal of concern over the safety of about a hundred and fifty American citizens in Madrid. The fear was felt that in the event of a battle between the rebels and loyalists in the city some of these Americans would be killed or injured.

It is natural and proper that the public interest be aroused by such a situation. But it is rather a strange anomaly that the public is vitally interested in the safety of a handful of people, and yet little attention to the massacre of thousands of others.

The reference is to our automobile death toll. It takes less than two days for auto accidents to account for a greater number of lives than those hazarded in Madrid. Last year's death record was around the 35,000 mark—this year it may be even higher. That many people are killed in some of the accidents is a fact which would be agonizing to the event would become a grim page in history. But because auto accidents are killed a few at a time throughout the days of the year, and in widely separated areas, the average citizen gives almost no thought to the needless carnage.

No problem more vitally affects us all than the safety of our automobiles. And none is more completely within the control of the people. Every individual can drive safely if he only wills it—and the force of public opinion, unified and aggressive, could make the highways a very comfortable place for the reckless. Think of the horror with which you regard a revolution that kills a few hundred or so. Now think of the whole world being agitated by the fact that it isn't your duty to help reduce our grisly accident toll.—Industrial News Review.

MORE MILLIONS FOR QUODDY?

Mr. Roosevelt Hints That.

Mr. Roosevelt, back from his yachting cruise, tells the State of Maine that the Quoddy tide-harassing experiment will go on.

Seven million dollars already have been sunk in the project.

A million and a half already have gone for a model village for the staff—Colonial houses, Cathedral-chime clocks, reproductions of the masterpieces of painting, period furniture, love seats, etc.

It is said that thirty million more, at a conservative estimate, will be required for the actual tide-harassing.

Few engineers think the project is anything but a colossal boondoggle, and laymen wonder who would use the power if it could be developed. That part of the country is about as primeval as you will find in the East.

But Maine votes—votes in September—and it is an old political proverb, that "as Maine goes, so goes the nation." A defeat for the New Deal there would be ominous.

So Quoddy, it would seem, must go on—and if Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected he evidently plans to pour more millions of taxpayers' money into the state, even though the ultimate destination of most of it may be at the bottom of the Bay of Fundy.—Atlanta Georgian.

A "BUDGET BALANCE FOR PROSPERITY."

The commerce department at Washington warns against heavy expenses and says that "Business needs a budget balance for prosperity." We are glad that at least one federal department realizes what millions of patriotic Americans have known all along—that to have prosperity you can't spend money like a drunken sailor and increase taxes so that future generations will groan beneath the load as they try to pay the bills piled up by the follies and excesses of the present generation. The department is honest enough to admit that the government deficit "springs from the root of unemployment," which it characterizes as "still the major problem confronting the country. Only a few days ago this same department revealed that 9,550,000 Americans are still without work, which is only a few million less than the peak of the depression. Even in the best of times this country has always had an average of a million or more unemployed, but there's a wide gulf between that figure and nine and a half million—a gulf that will need to be bridged before normal economic prosperity returns. And leading business with excessive taxes through wild government expenditures is not conducive to its early return.—Winter Haven Chief.

NATIONAL UNIONISTS ENDORSE LEMKE AT CLEVELAND MEET

By RUSSELL KAY.

Cleveland, Aug. 19.—(FNS).—With cheers from a million throats for President Roosevelt ringing in their ears, delegates to the first convention of the National Union for Social Justice opened their meeting in Cleveland's Public Hall. While the eager populace of America's greatest industrial city lined the streets for miles to pay tribute to their Chief Executive, some 10,000 followers of the Reverend Father Coughlin likewise gave voice to their emotions with wild cheers for speakers bitterly denouncing the man whom those on the outside lauded.

The appearance of Father Coughlin on the platform at the opening of the session brought the delegates to their feet with a burst of applause that lasted many minutes. When the demonstrators finally subsided, Coughlin's remarks were short and more in the form of a welcome and statement of purpose. He was followed by Congressman Martin L. Sweeney, temporary chairman of the organization, who introduced the keynote speaker, Senator Rush D. Holt of West Virginia.

Without wasting time or mincing words, Holt launched into an attack on the Roosevelt administration. He charged members of the administration with being in tune with the thought and sentiments of the NUSJ delegates gathered in the great auditorium. He said they were not only in tune with the thought and sentiments of the NUSJ delegates, but also with the thought and sentiments of the NUSJ delegates gathered in the great auditorium.

As the cheers of those within the hall echoed and reached their climax with the president and his leadership, a mightier cheer burst forth from without the building, for at that same moment the President of the United States, target of their flaying, was entering the gates of the Great Lakes Exposition on the steamship flanking the meeting hall of his enemies.

Continuing his tirade, Senator Holt pointed once again to another of the brain trusters, with especial attention to Harry Hopkins. He charged that the secretary maintained the greatest lobby for the promotion of its own interests ever known in the country.

The announcement that Dr. Francis E. Townsend and Rev. L. K. Smith, successor to the late H. P. Long's "Share the Wealth" dynasty in Louisiana, would address the convention, brought immediate opposition from Walter Davis, Grand Marshal of the Convention, who maintained that the meeting would be 100 per cent non-political and that he was opposed to outsiders getting the platform. Dissension on the point was averted, however, when leaders went into a huddle and Father Coughlin compromised by changing plans so that these speakers would not be heard until immediately following the close of the business sessions of the convention.

But dissension raised its ugly head again in the afternoon session when rebellion against endorsement of the candidacy of William Lemke for the presidency by the NUSJ broke out. In spite of the fact that their leader, Father Coughlin, has selected him as his personal candidate, A resolution was presented against the endorsement of Lemke.

The afternoon session was devoted largely to the perfection of a permanent organization and the unanimous election of Sylvester V. McMahon of Cleveland as permanent chairman. McMahon, who is national secretary of NUSJ and who has been active in the movement for the last 10 years, was elected chairman of the convention.

The star of the immortal "Seventh Heaven," Janet Gaynor and the sensation of "Magnificent Obsession," Robert Taylor, joined hands to bring to the screen one of the most stirring modern romances in their latest picture, "Small Town Girl," which will be presented at the Park Theatre on Sunday and Monday.

If you like real entertainment with thrills, laughs, tears and action, then see "Small Town Girl."

The new screen team of Miss Gaynor and Taylor will bring to the heart of every member of the audience. Both reach new heights in the stirring story about a modern runaway marriage brought about by the rural girl's efforts to escape the boredom of a small town that is snuffing out her life.

Miss Gaynor's work as the small town girl is outstanding as is Taylor's in the role of the young doctor who wakes up in his car to find that he is married and who takes his wife on a honeymoon to avoid a scandal—and then refuses to even appear to her.

With the star duo of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture is an elaborate cast including such favorites as Binnie Barnes, Lewis Stone, Andy Devine, Frank Craven and James Stewart and their performances are uniformly excellent.

Not failures, but low aim, is crime, J. R. Lowell.

RESOLUTION WHEREAS, Bert F. Wilson, City Clerk of the County of Avon Park, Highlands County, Florida, has completed and filed with the City Clerk, a preliminary tax assessment roll for the year 1934, as required by Section 30 of the Charter of said City.

BE IT RESOLVED, by the City Council, in regular session, duly assembled: That the said tax assessment roll, in 1934, at 7:30 P. M., be set as the date when the City Council shall hear complaints of all parties who are dissatisfied with the assessment of their property as fixed by the Tax Assessor of said City, and shall make such adjustments in the values on the tax roll for the year 1934, as to them may seem proper.

That all parties who are dissatisfied with said assessment be required to appear before the Equalizing Board on said day and make their complaint known.

That a copy of this resolution be published in a newspaper published in the City of Avon Park for two consecutive insertions.

Witness my hand and the seal of the City of Avon Park, this 4th day of August, A. D. 1934.

J. F. PENDLETON, President.

ATTEST: V. W. SHOCKLEY, Clerk.

Aug. 14-31.

Coughlin made no effort to force the issue as far as endorsing Lemke was concerned. He simply stated that Lemke was his personal candidate and it was up to the convention to determine for itself if it wished to follow his lead.

The radio priest then launched on a detailed explanation of his views on bank revision. Denouncing the Federal Reserve banks as usurers, he said he would go away with them. He denied that he favored the nationalization of banks and said he did not now and never has believed in inflation.

It was plain to see that Coughlin was the idol of the convention, 40 per cent of which was women. They hung on his every word, cheering and applauding to such an extent that he was constantly forced to come on until the music of the band died down. When the question of Lemke's endorsement came up, the convention roared its approval and the earlier opposition was evidenced by a but a single negative vote. In endorsement of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, his acts, utterances and 10-point platform was voted unanimously. When the radio priest's name was placed in nomination for re-election to the presidency of the organization, the convention was thrown into a frenzy. Delegates poured from their seats, milled about the hall and shouted themselves hoarse. In nominating Coughlin, Miss Helen Martin of New York likened him to Abraham Lincoln and termed him "the man who has come to lead his people out of the wilderness."

Amid a thunderous chorus of ayes, the convention approved a resolution of resolutions covering most of Coughlin's policies.

At the conclusion of the business session, the convention was addressed by Dr. Francis Townsend and the Rev. Gerald L. S. Smith. Moving from the Public Hall to the Cleveland Stadium, a monster mass meeting was held on Sunday afternoon. Attendance was estimated at close to 100,000. Followers of the radio priest came in droves from all sections of the middle west and east, not only to hear Coughlin but likewise Lemke, O'Brien, Townsend and Smith.

I'm delighted with my new Dodge! In the first place it's such a gorgeous-looking car, I doubt whether we could find greater riding comfort in any other car...

It handles like a dream...so easy to steer and shift gears—and the brakes are marvelous...and what a money-saver it is...

We haven't had to add any oil between regular changes...What's more, our Dodge is giving us at least 7 more miles to the gallon of gas than our old car. No wonder they call it the Money-Saving Dodge!

Miss Charlotte Shepherd Became Bride of Richard A. Smith Tuesday Afternoon.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was that of Miss Charlotte Watson Shepherd and Mr. Richard A. Smith which was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Shepherd, on Lake Byrd. The ceremony was performed in a beautiful natural setting of flowers and trees on the sloping lawn of the home, overlooking the lake. The wedding service was read by Dr. A. P. Vaughn of Punta Gorda and formerly pastor of the Avon Park Congregational church.

Led by her sister, Miss Shirley Page Shepherd, and on the arm of her father, the bride paced her wedding march across the lawn to a vine covered trellis banked with baskets of cut flowers where the groom was waiting. Her father gave her hand to the clergyman, the maid of honor taking the bride's bouquet as hands were clasped in repeating the vows. The best man, E. O. Shepherd, Jr., conveyed the ring that sealed the marriage vows.

The wedding guests, "star sprinkled on the lawn" with old oaks, old pines and palms overhead and beyond, the clear afterglow of blue of the sky, made up a perfect picture which Miss Charlotte had desired for her marriage hour.

"At Dawning" from the violin of Miss Martha Marsh, accompanied by Mrs. Paul Garber, introduced the service. Mr. and Mrs. Garber sang "I Love You Truly" with Miss Marsh at the piano. The Mendelssohn wedding march was played by Mrs. Garber for the procession and the Lohengrin at the conclusion of the services. The witnessing signatures on the certificate were those of the bride's maid and the best man.

After the many relatives present for the ceremony and all the guests had come to the bride with their best wishes of joy and congratulations to the groom, the bride led the company from the arbor into the dining room and served the guests wedding cake to all with chilled fruit punch and ice cream. A little later the young couple made their escape from an actively assisting company of friends in cars, for their auto honeymoon in New England, the home of the groom's family.

Halter Neck, Princess Lines, Capes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A NEW party dress this time of year brings two-fold joy. There's the fun of rounding out the summer season of social activities in lovely array and then when midseason dances and dinners are over, it's off to college where the fun begins all over again for your dress will take on new glamor in new environment. Wherefore, it would reason out that a party dress bought now is not an extravagance but an economy since it provides not only for the present, but for the future as well.

The gowns pictured have smart features that are scheduled to carry through into late fall, since their styling is decidedly advance. The skirt of the lovely flowered chiffon dress on the seated figure is that full and billowy it floats beguilingly with every move of its fair wearer. The halter neckline is especially significant together with the Margot ruff about the throat. The halter neckline is appearing right along on incoming fashions.

Designers are all enthusiasm over the new princess lines that are destined to play an outstanding role this coming season both for dresses and coats. The charming gown centered in the picture adopts princess lines that develop into a full hemline. The perfectly gorgeous mousseline de soie that fashions this delectable gown is in an appealing shade of blue with huge golden flowers artfully widespread as are most of the more formal prints this season. This handsome quality-high silk mousseline confirms the message from fabric headquarters that silks of extreme luxury and elegance will triumph in the coming modes.

The flair for all white in the evening is reflected in the ensemble to the right. An alabaster white silk sheer was the choice for this supremely lovely costume created by Reville. The waistband is fastened with a silver Grecian clasp. The prestige of capes in the evening mode is noted, and knowing style creators declare they will continue to play their triumphant role as the new season comes on. The word that fashion is reviving the use of ostrich is confirmed in the opulent banding of white South African ostrich feathers that embellish this cape. Not only, according to indications, will ostrich appear on hats but a lavish use will be made of it for costume accessories and other adornment.

FEATHERS IN YOUR HAT THIS AUTUMN

Now comes a word about fall hats. Higher crowns and off the face lines in brimmed styles are being shown. One advance model developed in black leghorn for late summer, and in velvet for fall, has a turned-up brim, cleverly slit at the back and trimmed with a dark gray ostrich feather.

Feathers are coming into the conversation, too — and how they will increase our vocabularies! Our plumage, it seems, is to be one of our most important autumn features. We'll be using the term "Coc feathers" again, and "conquille." The former are the tall feathers of a rooster, and the latter is a short body feather of a goose. There are "Palette" and "Ballette" and a lot more to learn with the new season, along with the fact that we'll be formalized by ostrich plumes.

Buttons New Offer Style
Touch for an Old Costume
Seekers of the latest in accessories for the modern well dressed woman are missing an important bet if they don't make a special point of keeping close watch on the button market.
Every trip to the stores should include a stop at that most fascinating of all counters where buttons of all colors, shapes and sizes are tucked away in hundreds of little drawers.
Since color is so important in accessories, buttons of the new vivid scarlets and blues, emerald greens, and lemon yellows, or of the multiple other intriguing colors, might be just the proper touch for the revitalization of last year's clothes.

Early Returns Give Landon A Slight Margin

Scattered Ballots Indicate Hard Fought Battle For Presidency

By John Thomas Wilson.
New York, August 20.—First scattered returns in the Presidential poll, to reach Straw-Vote Headquarters here this week, show Landon highest in the initial tabulation of the nation-wide weekly newspapers' poll.

Ballots were received and tabulated from 23 states. But votes in sufficient number to actually be considered indicative of what the final returns may show, were available in only five of those 23 states.

Nevertheless, on all returns from the 23 states, as between the two leading candidates only, the ballots show voters' choices as follows:

Landon	54%
Roosevelt	46%

The 23 states from which first scattered ballots were received here for national tabulation are: California, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Vermont, Washington and West Virginia.

Bearing out early surmises of political observers that support of the Union party candidate, Lemke, would come from the small towns and rural America, the tabulations of first total returns from the same 23 states, disclose division of choices in this manner:

Landon	50.9%
Roosevelt	49.5%
Lemke	03.4%
Thomas	01.3%
Colvin	00.3%
Browder	00.6%

In only one state, Michigan, of the 23 from which first returns were received here, was the vote of sufficient volume, at this early date, to warrant tabulation which might be considered an authoritative straw which accurately indicates the direction of the August political winds. The Michigan vote shows:

Landon	45.9%
Roosevelt	45.9%
Lemke	04.3%
Thomas	02.4%
Browder	01.5%

Another distribution of first returns from the 23 states, as between Roosevelt, Landon and Lemke only, shows:

Landon	52.2%
Roosevelt	44.4%
Lemke	03.4%

Poll Wide Spread
The early interest shown in this poll by publishers throughout the country, plus the continued increase in the number of weekly newspapers that are cooperating by conducting the straw-vote in their territories, indicates most clearly that the final returns in the nation-wide balloting will be the most representative pre-election expression of political sentiment ever tabulated from small towns and rural America in a national election year.

Extra efforts have been made to keep this poll non-partisan in every respect. All weekly newspapers, whether they be Demo-

More argument followed with Pendleton requesting to know where the money is coming from. Bennett said the school board has put up $2,000 and he thought the city could put up the $300. Garrett moved the city guarantee the $300 and that the county be asked to help. Hall amended this motion to read that the proceeds of entertainments and dances given at the armory be turned over to the city to help defray this $300. This amendment was accepted and the motion carried.

Councilman Hall brought up the proposal of Charles H. Walker to pack his fruit elsewhere this season and operate the packing house here. He suggested the chairman name three members of the council as a committee to meet with Mr. Walker and see what could be done. If the fruit is not packed here it will work a hardship on everybody, he said. Chairman Pendleton named Hall, Jordan and Sappington on the committee.

On motion of Councilman Garrett, colored hall games will be prohibited at Head Field in the future.

eratic, Republican or Independent in policy, have been invited to join in on the poll. Hundreds of them are now conducting their local polls and will then forward their ballots to Publishers Auto-caster Service, straw-vote headquarters in New York, for national tabulation.

Our Local Vote First.
Readers of the Avon Park Times may expect more and more interesting national returns in the weeks right ahead. This newspaper will give you week to week reports on the progress of the voting.

Have you yet voted. If not, then clip out the straw-vote ballot below, vote for your presidential choice, then mail or bring it to the Times office.

You are not obligated in any manner by voting in this poll. You need not sign your name. You only write in the name of the town and state from which you expect to vote in November. This is done to assist in an accurate tabulation of the national vote.

Every voter in Avon Park should cast a ballot in this poll. Voters in other states throughout the country are interested in knowing which candidate we favor here in Avon Park and Florida, just as we are interested in learning of their choices.

So clip out the ballot below... Vote for your favorite... Send the ballot to us... We will count it in the local vote... then send it on immediately for national tabulation.

Few ballots have been returned to date in the Avon Park poll but interest is expected to materially increase in the immediate future. Of the ballots received so far everyone has been marked for Landon, Republican candidate. The Democrats and other party adherents are apparently slow in expressing their opinion. So, come on, vote your ballot and get an expression of opinion in Avon Park.

Second Annual Field Day and Livestock Exhibit

An invitation has been extended to all farmers and livestock men by W. F. Ward, superintendent, to visit the Chasagut Hill Sanctuary and Experiment Station at Brookville next Thursday. The invitation explains the purpose of the visit and reads:

The Second Annual Field Day and Livestock Roundup will be held at Chasagut Hill Sanctuary, also known as the West Central Florida Experiment Station, 6 miles north of Brookville on State Road No. 5, on Thursday, August 27th. At that time there will be an interesting program covering the following subjects: dual purpose cattle, pasture grasses, forage crops and screw worm control. The work being done conducted along these various lines at this Station will be reviewed and an inspection made of pastures, forage crops and cattle. The filling of a trench site with sorghum silage will be in progress and the farmers will have an opportunity to inspect the trench, semi-trunk-city being required to levy in full for the judgment.

The city council will meet next Tuesday evening and sit as an equalization board when property owners can make complaints, if any, regarding assessments made against their property.

and concrete, above-ground silos at the Station.

A portion of the program will be devoted to the Screw Worm Control work being carried out in this State and the men in charge will be here to discuss this subject first hand with the cattlemen. This alone may be worth many dollars to you. You should not miss it.

A number of the prominent officials of the Florida Experiment Station and the Extension Service will take part in the program, since all work at this Station is in cooperation with the Florida Experiment Station at Gainesville.

A Barbecue Dinner will be served at the Station at a very nominal cost and a splendid luncheon is promised.

The automobile tour through the various pastures should be especially interesting to those who contemplate establishing pastures on sand-hill lands. Needless to say the dual purpose herd of Red Polled cattle and the calf herd will attract considerable attention. Those especially interested in poultry will have an opportunity to look over the pedigreed flocks of White Leghorn and Rhode Island Red chickens and discuss with the poultrymen the results of the various tests being conducted.

This is a special invitation for you to attend this meeting and to bring with you any men whom you think may be interested. Discuss this with your friends and neighbors at once and with your County Agent. Make up a car-load and come to Brookville

Rotary Solarium To Be Erected at Hollywood Beach

Hollywood, Aug. 19.—(FNS)—Authority for construction on Hollywood Beach of a rotary solarium, said to be the first ever to be erected in this country, was granted in a recent meeting of the city commission.

According to Samuel S. Hixon, Miami Beach inventor of the device, the function of his solarium is to provide a maximum of facilities for sun therapy in a minimum of space. This is accomplished by the round construction of the solarium and the fact that the sun-bathing deck rotates, permitting equalization of distribution of sunlight in all of the 52 cabins. Rotation of the upper deck is controlled automatically by an "electric eye."

The lower deck of the 22-foot high structure is to contain massage rooms, showers, lockers, physicians' examining rooms, and a modern bar. The entire building will occupy a space measuring 100 by 100 feet.

Inventor's representatives present at the meeting stated that the solarium will be completed within

Thursday morning, August 27th. Please plan to arrive not later than 10:30 a. m. and earlier if possible. Trusting to see you at that time, I am
