Round Avon Park

by W. C. Beckett

The State Hospital. With the legislature killing the appropriation for the southern branch of the state hospital, Avon Park's chances to get this institution have gone glimmering for two years. Tampa and Hillsborough county were our chief opponents and they were also after several other things among them a war memorial. They evidently saw they could not hog the whole thing and get busy and obtained the memorial taylor.

War memorials may be alright but are not in the same class as a state hospital which means so much at this time, considering the crowded conditions and other evils at the present place. We think the legislature made a very poor move to kill the hospital appropriation and then let Tampa get a war memorial, costing, it is said, half a million dollars. It won't benefit the dead but it would have helped the living if used for a hospital.

The Band. Two Avon Park bands made excellent showings at the regional band contest at Rock Hill, S. C. this week. They had much natural talent of course, but were helped considerably by the efforts of Prof. E. L. Roberts, band leader for the schools. Mr. Roberts has made a wonderful showing while he has been here and deserves all the cooperation and encouragement he can get. The band was not in the contest this year, but maybe in the near future it will be able to step out and advertise Avon Park as one of the musical centers of the south.

School Trustees. With the school trustee election due early next month, July 6 to be exact, it behooves the property owners to consider whom they wish for the offices. We are not supporting anyone but do believe those holding the office should have children of their own in school or about to enter school. It gives them a better start at the problems involved and closer to the needs of the schools.

Air Tour Flyers Will Stop Here Friday, June 25th

According to Dr. A. M. Morgan, Secretary of the chamber of commerce, arrangements have been made with H. C. Whitney, aviation director of the state road department, to have the Florida Air Tour stop at the Avon Park airport on Friday, June 25. The aviators will be served lunch and taken on a tour of the city.

The Avon Park airport is considered one of the best of its kind in the state, in the present state of construction and it is considered of great advantage to Avon Park for the aviators to gain first hand knowledge of the field.

School Trustee Election July 6

Announcement was made this week that the election for school trustees will be held on Tuesday, July 6. The election officers for Avon Park are: Precinct One: J. H. McClelland, clerk; Kathleen Jones and G. A. Harper, inspectors and Wesley Mercer, scribe.

INTERNATIONAL ROTARY MET IN NICE THIS WEEK

French President Extends Welcome: Many Events Enjoyed By All

Nice, France, June 9.—Welcome to France by President Albert Lebrun, Rotarians from all parts of the world are gathering in Nice for their 28th Annual Convention which will continue here through the week of June 11th.

President Lebrun greeted this great gathering on his country's "Azure Coast" on the Mediterranean, at the opening session on Sunday. A Rotarian himself, the Honorary Governor of the 65 Rotary clubs in France, he presented the greetings of his fellow Rotarians and the French people to the Rotarians of the world, gathered in the Municipal Casino of Nice.

The theme of the convention, chosen by President Will R. Manier, Jr., of Nashville, Tennessee, is "An Adventure in International Understanding and Friendship."

"In Rotary," said President Manier, "we have built a great machine, and we are anxious to use it in the simple way to foster and encourage acquaintance, friendship and confidence."

"I have visited Rotary in many countries and everywhere I have found a great desire, not only for peace which all men desire, but the development of our great organization as one of the instruments for international understanding, good will and peace."

"Here in this convention we have thousands of business and professional men from many different countries, and in their presence at this gathering we have an adventure in international understanding and friendship."

The message of President Manier to the representatives of the nearly 4,300 Rotary clubs was the central feature of the first business session Sunday evening.

Among the many informal group meetings of the convention, one of the most popular was the one of the leading Rotarians of France, Jean Appleton of Paris, past president of the International Union of Lawyers, as the climax of Monday's session with the title "Lifting our Eyes."

Avon Park Musicians Win Honors At Band Contest This Week

Two Avon Park boys, Charles Sherman and Harold McClelland, won high honors at the Southeastern States Regional Band Contest held at Rock Hill, S. C. on Monday. Sherman with his French Horn in addition to with a rating of excellent, according to press dispatches from Rock Hill, McClelland, baritone, won the same distinction in the same division.

They were accompanied to the contest by E. L. Roberts, band director, and Miss Barbara Betts who acted as accompanist.

The Sebring band, under the direction of Prof. P. J. Gustaf, won first in the class of high school bands. They were rated superior, plus.

PUSH CANNED CITRUS THROUGHOUT NATION

Independents and Chains Are Pushing Canned Citrus Fruit and Juice

Lakeland, June 10.—Retail food stores throughout the country are offering special sales of canned Florida grapefruit and grapefruit juice this week, looking toward a national campaign to promote the sale of this season's prize pack.

Members of the Independent Food Distributors Council, comprising about 152,000 independent merchants, and many of the groups affiliated with the National Association of Food Chains, will support the program, which is being arranged by the Florida Citrus Commission.

More than 400,000 store posters and advertising pamphlets have been distributed by the Commission's sales promotion department for the canned products campaign, and F. E. Brigham, secretary, said today the demand for this material is continuing to be so heavy that additional quantities may have to be printed.

Announcement of the June National canned grapefruit promotion was made by the retail food organizations last January 29, to encourage the canning of a greater volume of Florida crops, of which there was a greatly increased production this season. Independent and chain food stores have steadily advanced their grapefruit sales this year.

The retail selling campaign will be supported by the Commission with advertising of canned Florida grapefruit and juice in 12 national women's magazines, and the Sunday magazine section of 38 metropolitan newspapers, which have a combined circulation of 28,000,000 copies. The advertising will appear in June, July and August, and will be supplemented by a nationwide publicity campaign.

Florida's current pack of canned grapefruit will be about 60 percent larger than that of last year. About 6,700,000 boxes of Florida grapefruit have been canned to date, compared with 4,100,000 boxes last season. Prices paid to Florida growers for canning grapefruit have steadily advanced from an average of about 35 cents a box to more than $1 a box for some late crops.

While this season's canned grapefruit pack is larger than that of last year, retail sales have rapidly increased and Mr. Brigham said that no difficulty is anticipated in selling all of the present pack before the opening of the 1937-38 fresh fruit shipping season, next September. Most Florida canners have already sold their stocks, he said, and the quantity remaining to be shipped from the state is less than the supply which was available at this time last year.

Shipments of fresh grapefruit and oranges are rapidly declining in volume. Mr. Brigham said there practically no fresh grapefruit left, and that remaining orange crops will be marketed in the next few weeks. About 325,000 boxes of oranges were used by Florida canners this season in canning grapefruit juice.

Episcopalians Approve Site For Avon Park Camp

They came, they saw and were conquered.

A large party from the Episcopal camp now at Haines City together with members of the camp committee were in Avon Park Wednesday afternoon to inspect the proposed site for a new diocesan camp on Trout Lake. Words of praise were heard on all sides and everyone considered the site ideal for the purpose.

The tract consists of 20 acres, 13 of which are wooded and sloping to the lake shore and the other seven acres are in the lake. Although final decision has not been made as yet, it is expected the tract will be approved by the diocesan committee next week. The site is being donated by J. S. Francis of this city.

It is understood there is at present approximately $10,000 in the building fund. This will be added to, and the camp will become a reality.

COUNTY REFUNDING PLAN BEING PUSHED

Validation Proceedings For Refunding Bonds Authorized By Commission

Further steps were taken by the county commissioners Tuesday towards refunding Highlands county's bonded debt. Resolutions were adopted authorizing the validation proceedings and setting forth the number of style of the bonds and serially numbered R. E. Cramer Co. as fiscal agents for the work. Legal notices announcing the proposed refunding are being published in papers in the county this week.

The original bond issues amounted to $600,000 county six percent bonds, $287,000 county road bonds and $313,000 special road and bridge district one bonds. The refunding issues will cover the unredeemed balance of $600,000 in county bonds and $313,000 special road and bridge district one bonds.

The Cramer Co. was represented Tuesday by John H. Brown, who received by the commissioners and read. Recommendations concerning the sanitary conditions at the convict camp will be acted on as soon as possible.

A report on the child welfare work in the county was heard and suggestions noted for further consideration.

FLORIDA SHOW AT CLEVELAND TO BE BIGGER

Exhibit At Great Lakes Exposition To Surpass All Efforts In The Past

Cleveland, Ohio.—Great and beautiful as was the Florida exhibit at the Great Lakes Exposition of 1936, the display this year is greater and more beautiful and already has "stolen the show" even with such competition as is offered by the Aquacade and the Winter Carnival, the two new stellar attractions of the 1937 edition of Cleveland's big show.

"We expected big things of Mr. Brown and his associates of the Florida exhibit and when we were told that the display to be made this year would surpass that of last year, we were inclined to believe it," said Lincoln C. Dickey, General Manager of the Exposition, "but we were not prepared for the surprises which greeted us opening night. Last year's Florida exhibit amazed but words fail me when I try to explain Florida's offering this year. To say it is outstanding is true. It is amazing. It is one of the great attractions of the Exposition."

Other experts in showmanship were equally enthusiastic in their praise of the marvelous showing from Florida, this year, notably Almon R. Shaffer, Associate Director of the Exposition, who, when not directing exhibitions or other big amusement enterprises, makes his home at Orange City, Florida.

"Naturally I expected Florida to make a better showing this year than last," said Mr. Shaffer, "but I didn't look for a 1,000 per cent improvement. As a matter of fact, I didn't believe last year's exhibit could be greatly improved, but I have heard of Florida's ingenuity. I have heard the Florida impresario referred to as the reincarnation of Phineas T. Barnum, but in a sense that might be true but I am inclined to regard him as a second Florida Ziegfeld. The latter glorified the American girl but Brown has glorified the State of Florida."

Billy Rose, the international entrepreneur, whose Aquacade of Marine Theatre will be one of the outstanding amusement enterprises of this year's Exposition, expressed amazement at the magnitude and general excellence of the Florida exhibit. "It is a wonderful piece of showmanship and should be of great benefit to the state," was his comment.

The opinions of experts in showmanship seem to be endorsed by the general public judging from the attendance. The waving palms and other exotic plantings which were featured in the Florida exhibit, enlarged grounds, as well as the Florida Manor and the Florida Natatorium, filled as they were with the big show, attracted the large numbers of people who were here to see the Florida exhibit.

J. L. Green Wins High Honors At Bolles School

J. L. Greene, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pendleton, has attained high honors at the Bolles School, Jacksonville, during the past few months.

For April he was one of a select group of nine who received first honors for the month, with a rating as high as 90. He also won the same distinction for the month of May.

J. L. also made the second highest average grades for the year and won the annual athletic award for wrestling, boxing and intra muros.

Roberts Moves Tailoring Shop

L. D. Roberts has moved his tailoring, cleaning and pressing establishment to 113 W. Main street in the east half of the store room formerly occupied by the Georgia-Florida Market. The large room has been divided and Mr. Roberts has rented the east half.

The new location gives Mr. Roberts larger and more centrally located quarters where he will be better able to take care of his business which is increasing rapidly, he says, since the installation of new cleaning equipment.

MANY PROBLEMS OF CITIZENSHIP TOLD BY BURTON

States Attorney Tells Rotary Club of Responsibilities Involved

The responsibilities of citizens to the state and country are very definite and tangible, L. Grady Burton of Wauchula, state attorney for the tenth judicial circuit, told the Avon Park Rotary Club at the weekly luncheon Wednesday noon at the Jucaranda Hotel. Lms are proving the vital of government and many are unaccountably contributing to this, he said.

War is going on today for the supremacy of Europe and this country. The final goal of the fighters, he said. Civic clubs should think about the making of a stable government. About 60 per cent of the citizenship is underprivileged when it comes to government and understand nothing about it nor what real citizenship means. The citizenship is being attacked from all angles by aims for political purposes, Mr. Burton said.

All should learn about the responsibilities of government and officials should be filled by patriots and not by politicians as at present. After every election those elected are being subjected to all forms of criticism instead of receiving the cooperation of those who elected them to office and who evidently thought them good enough for the office when they gave them their votes. He deplored this but said it seemed to have become a national trait.

Cooperate with the law enforcement officers, he urged. Lack of law enforcement is due to poor citizenship. Citizens should be aware of violations fear to tell of what they know. Law enforcement is the duty and responsibility of the citizen. A few public officials and law observance is a duty on the shoulders of every man, woman and child.

It is the right of the citizen to men for jury service. Mr. Burton said, as many have excuses. The integrity of the country is wrapped up in the jury service and this should be the most patriotic service in the time of peace as it means the safety of America.

It has become the Golden Rule by the Rule of Gold, he said, and mentioned the parable of the Good Samaritan. There are three types of citizens. Some would rob the country for their own benefit. Others are self satisfied, don't care for others and the institutions of the community and belong to no community. And there are the others who represent every citizen worth while. They represent the Good Samaritan and are willing to give to their part for the community.

One of the responsibilities of government is to contribute to and help the community. Mr. Burton said. Help the underprivileged citizenship. Think in terms of the Golden Rule and not the Rule of Gold and the rights perspective of public office and the public office and cooperate, he said.

Other visitors were: R. W. Bennett and Dr. Shultz of Frostproof, Comp. J. M. Lee of Tallahassee and Avon Park, and Master J. W. Burton, son of the speaker.

Recent Rains Big Help To Growers

The rains of the past week have been worth thousands of dollars to citrus growers, it has been estimated. Following a dry spell of a week, the rains have been just in time to prevent serious damage to the groves. Irrigation had already started in some sections, but the rain done from the numerous lakes and city water also being used.

A record of nine million field bushels of grapefruit has been reported for this season, just closing, it is estimated. The consumption of the canned product is climbing rapidly and some predict that in the near future the entire crop will be canned and none fresh.

Name Teachers For Avon Park Schools

Acting on the recommendations of local trustees, the county board of public instruction named additional teachers for the Avon Park schools at their meeting Tuesday. Miss Elizabeth Green and Miss Frances Lee were named for the grammar school and Mrs. Jessie Reddick Shepherd for the Crater Mill school.

J. L. Wells Improves. Latest advices from Lakeland state to the effect that J. L. Wells is improving rapidly from his recent illness. His brother, Ray Wells, says he expects he will be able to return home to Avon Park Sunday.

FLOYD GIBBONS

FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER

How Everybody

"Strange Visitor"
By FLOYD GIBBONS

YOU know, they say troubles never come singly—which is just another way of saying that Old Lady Adventure is never content with giving you just one sock in the jaw. I don't know how true that is, but it certainly worked out that way in the case of Hattie Bohr of Chicago.

Hattie's big bout with Old Lady Adventure came in the Winter of 1917. There was trouble enough in the world then, without having the old girl with the thrill bag on your neck. The war was on and the influenza epidemic was sweeping the country. Hattie, in those days, was just the seventeen-year-old girl, living with her mother and dad and three sisters on a farm between Clare and Dodge City, Iowa. Her name then was Hattie McLaughlin.

The flu epidemic struck the McLaughlin family in January. It brought down Hattie's dad and her three sisters, and that left Hattie and her mother to do all the chores around that big farm.

It was one of those days when everything seemed to go wrong. Mother had just come from upstairs to call the doctor. Dad and the three sick girls were worse. While they were waiting for the doctor the party-line phone rang. It was the school teacher, down with the flu herself, who wanted Hattie to go to the schoolhouse and post a notice saying there would be no school that day.

Strange Man Came to the Door.

Already tired from her morning's work, Hattie struggled more than a mile through the snow to post that notice. She found two small children shivering in the cold, waiting for the school to open, and took them to her home and phoned their father to come and get them. And no sooner had he come and gone with his pair of kids than Hattie heard another knock on the door.

A strange man was out front. He said he was a telephone lineman from Clare, and wanted to know if he could come in and get warm. Hattie and her mother asked him in and gave him a cup of tea.

While he was drinking his tea and eating a piece of corn bread, Hattie and her mother went on with their work. Nothing unusual happened until he had finished eating and drinking. Then the stranger got up and walked over to the stove.

It was such an unusual movement that Hattie stopped to watch him. He backed up against the stove as if it were himself, but Hattie saw one of his hands slide into his pocket and come out holding a tiny bottle.

He Poured Something Into the Beans.

There was a pot of beans boiling on the stove. Slowly, sidled by his body, the stranger's hand crept up and emptied the contents of the bottle into the pot of beans.

Her mother hadn't seen it, but Hattie was standing in such a position that she could see every move he made. She was startled—frightened. An older person might have been capable of precipitating trouble. That mother and child were defenseless, with dad ill in bed upstairs. But Hattie's age don't stop to think of those things. She let out a scream and then, impulsively, she darted across the room and knocked the bottle from the man's hand.

Her mother turned to see what was the matter. At the same time, the stranger reached inside his coat, pulled out a long, thin-bladed knife, and slashed Hattie across the legs. Blood began to flow from a long deep cut. Dazed at the turn affairs had taken, Hattie backed away, staring at the man. The man stood, knife in hand, staring back at Hattie. Her mother was staring at both of them. For a minute there was a deadly silence.

Hattie Fought to Save Her Mother.

The man made no other move—said nothing. Hattie and her mother were too frightened to speak. They began to realize the fellow was stark mad. Hattie sat down, took off a stocking and tied it about her wound.

The man stood looking, first at her, then at her mother. He waited until she was finished tying up her bleeding leg, and then he walked across the room to where her mother was standing, breathless and paralyzed with fright. AND RAISED THE KNIFE.

And again Hattie acted impulsively. In an instant she was out of her chair and darting across the room. Reaching out quickly grabbed the knife.

The man gave the knife a quick pull. It came out of Hattie's hand, cutting it clear to the bone at the base of the thumb. Crying out in pain, she grabbed at her wrist with her other hand. The madman shoved her away, and knocked her mother down. The man fell on her mother, sat on her chest and began choking her. And at that, a sudden change came over Hattie. Before, she had been frightened—trembling. Now she became furious. A red mist seemed to drop before her eyes. She grabbed up a piece of wood from the pile beside the stove and hit over her head and brought it down, as hard as she could, on the madman's head.

The Beans Were Poisoned.

The man reeled over and lay still. Hattie's wrist was still bleeding and her mother tied it up tightly to stop the flow. They got ropes and tied the madman's hands behind his back and then—well then Hattie crept over in a dead faint. When she came to, the doctor had been to the house. He had sewed up Hattie's wounds and she had never known a thing about it. The doctor also took the madman back to town and turned him over to the police. They found out later that he had escaped from an institution down in the South, where he had been put for murder. And when they analyzed that pot of beans into which he had emptied that bottle, it was found that they were poisoned!

Anna Laurie Home Held by the Family Since 1611

The home of the famous Anna Laurie, the heroine of the Scottish ballad sung in every corner of the world, is known as the estate of Maxwellton, Dumfriesshire, Scotland. The ownership of this property goes back more than 300 years, says a writer in the New York Herald Tribune.

Maxwellton House, originally a fortress of the Earls of Glencairn and known as Glencairn castle, has been in the hands of the Laurie family since 1611.

Seventy-one years later, in 1682, Anna was born, the daughter of Sir Robert Laurie. The first Baronet Douglas of England, the author of the original words of the ballad, was her first sweetheart, but the engagement was broken off, and in 1706 she married Alexander Ferguson, of Craigdarroch, a neighboring estate. Her picture and that of her husband hang in the dining room at Maxwellton.

There are 600 acres in the property, which overlooks the River of the Clyde. In the house there are four reception rooms, two bedrooms, fifteen bed or dressing rooms, one bathroom and servants' accommodation.

Brides of Granna Island Wear Queen's Headress

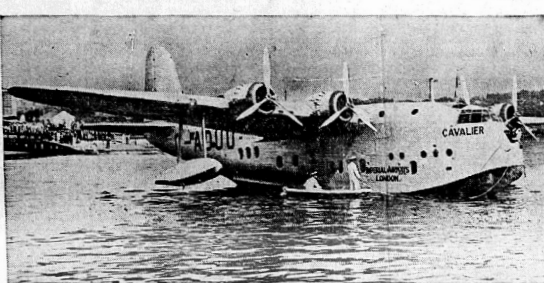

Not orange blossoms but a crown intended for a queen is the wedding headress of brides at Granna, Sweden, on the island of Vinsingo in Lake Vattern, one of Sweden's largest and finest lakes. Now over 200 years old, the crown was originally made for a daughter of the Bråhe family, which built the Castle of Vinsingo and the Bråhe church on the island.

The girl, Ebba Bråhe, was loved by Gustavus Adolphus and the crown was made for her wedding to him, but for reasons of state he was forced to give her up and marry a princess instead. The crown was placed in the Bråhe church, where visitors to the island sometimes see it worn by a bride of the parish.

The castle built by the Bråhe family was destroyed by fire in 1718 and became an imposing ruin overgrown by vines. The family is also credited with founding Granna, called by travelers one of the loveliest towns in Sweden. Besides being famous for its beauty, Granna has a great reputation as the "Pearl of the Lake."

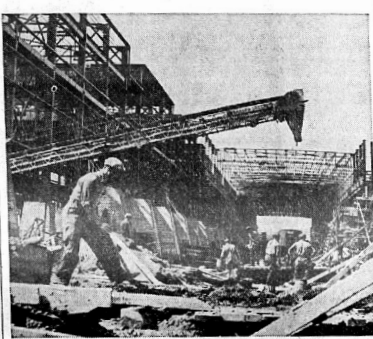

The original pear tree was planted more than 300 years ago in a kitchen orchard near the one street of the town, and long was known as a national monument.

British Plane Blazes Trail for Overseas Line

Pictured at the airways base at Port Washington, L. I., is the British 15-passenger flying boat "Cavalier" after completing the first east-west survey flight from Bermuda. These survey flights are in preparation for the eventual trans-Atlantic passenger service which will be jointly operated by the Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways. Simultaneously with the Cavalier's flight, a Pan-American Sikorsky clipper made the west-east flight to Bermuda.

Ohio Will Have a "Little Ruhr"

A new "Little Ruhr" is rising seven miles up the Cuyahoga river from Cleveland, Ohio, which will mark it as America's meeting grounds for iron ore and coal. The development is part of the Republic Steel corporation's program of expansion. A $15,000,000 plant, shown above, is under construction, which, when completed, will be the world's most continuous strip mill.

Mariner Plans Sea Cruise in Tub

Ernest Biegalski of Buffalo, N. This is the second such boat he has built with his odd's house money. The 1926 model leaked so badly that only the timely arrival of the coast guard prevented its maiden voyage from turning into a tragedy.

Sons of Diamond Daddies Good at Baseball

These four stalwarts of the University of Florida baseball team ought to be pretty good at the national pastime—if there is anything in the theory of heredity. All are sons of famous major league fathers, whose names were household words a few years ago. Left to right are Ed Manning, twenty, son of Ed Manning, former pitcher for the St. Louis Browns; Lee Meadows, Jr., nineteen, son of Lee Meadows, old Pittsburgh Pirates mound ace; Jimmy Shotton, seventeen, son of Bert Shotton, a former St. Louis Cardinal; and Wilbur White, nineteen, whose father once played third for the Chicago White Sox.

His father opposed him, so Adolf refused to study in school. He was the despair of his father and mother. When he was eighteen, he went to Vienna and applied Symptoms may be nagging backache, dizziness, headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, stinging, or too frequent urination.

SENATOR BYRD PROTESTS.

"If that redoubtable fighter for economy Senator Harry Byrd, of Virginia, can force into the limelight the full story of the extravagance of the Resettlement Administration, he will verify the growing suspicion of the American people that it is not alone the size of the sums spent by the New Dealers which is staggering, but the wasteful manner in which these sums have been spent," declares the New York Herald Tribune. "Three months ago, for example, it was formally announced that the Resettlement Administration had written off 25 per cent of the cost of the first twelve rural communities which it has completed. The inference is obvious—that this amount was needlessly spent."

Quite recently Secretary Wallace, in reply to Senator Byrd's protest about the extravagance of the Shenandoah Resettlement project in Virginia, pointed out that the actual cost of this project will be a third less than had been estimated. This is, of course, encouraging, but it must be accepted as indicating the extravagant scale on which the RA was operating in the enthusiastic days of the Tagwell direction. An undertaking which is nearing completion at a cost of two-thirds only of the Tagwell estimate is remarked as "satisfactory." And it is told that figures sent by the Director of the Budget to Senator Byrd show a very much larger sum than the Secretary of Agriculture mentioned has already been allocated for this project. So doubt exists as to whether the final cost will be as low as Mr. Wallace estimates, or not.

This would appear to show the desirability of a thorough factual presentation of what this government agency has actually done up to this time. "Like so many other agencies set up in the present administration the Resettlement Administration was benevolent in intent. It was created to work for the poor and homeless and to help them to secure comfortable living places, at low cost or less." The Herald-Tribune says that "it sought to help resettled farmers removed from lands owned by the government, or deemed incapable of supporting those living upon it. But instead of doing this sort of work on a modest scale most of the projects have been grandiose, calling for 'model buildings,' generous equipment and modern conveniences. Costs have run from $4,000 to twice that amount for a single unit. Some of the projects have been marked by extravagant planning and wasteful execution."

Senator Byrd is interested in the matter because he knows that as the country realizes that in many cases the government has been spending not only four dollars for every three it should have spent, but two dollars for every one that was really justified, the demand for a cessation of waste and extravagance will grow in force.

Congress bent upon practicing paternalism and hoping to secure steady employment as members of that body through securing much money for their States and sections, one way or another, and without regard to necessity or even reasonableness, will not pay much attention to explanation which shows waste; useless, unnecessary, undesirable waste of Federal money, unless they discover that the people are wise to the fact that continued and great expenditures for projects such as mentioned mean certain tax increases. Their constituents are murmuring now and decrying the mounting taxes. They have gone about the limit; and are crying "hold harder!"—Jacksonville Times-Union.

WOOLING THE SOUTH.

Some time ago President Roosevelt let it be known that he will not flit even with the idea of a third tier. Popular as he is with the electorate, his political agency has been noted for its lack of sympathy with the American public.

Although more than three years have elapsed before the fortunes of the Democracy are thrown again into the political arena, it is not too early for aspirants to the Democratic nomination to lay the groundwork for selection by the party.

While none of those who deem themselves eligible have come forward openly, it has been rumored that Postmaster Farley would like to lead his party to the next general election. His praise of the late Huey Long for his devotion to the cause of education in the state of Louisiana may have been prompted by sincere estimate of the worth of his former open enemy. But it did not hurt Jim Farley for possible support of one Southern state when nominations are in order for the Democratic party. Praising one's enemies, particularly those who have departed the earthly scene, has always been excellent politics.

It is not indelicate to presume that Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania also might have been looking ahead three years when he lauded the "Solid South" before the Southern Society of Washington. Governor Earle attributed the place Franklin Roosevelt holds to the South's devotion to the Democracy. He even went so far as to assert that solid, united support of the South saved the nation from destruction when in 1932 "the dark forces of Fascism and Communism were gathering for a final assault upon our American liberties."

Governor Earle may have had one eye on the next Democratic convention when looking into the coming years he solemnly predicted that the same solidarity of the South promises to be the country's salvation in the future.

Within a short time it is certain candidates will be groomed more or less openly for public trial as to their popularity and vote-getting possibilities. Some will present themselves on their own initiative. Others will have the backing of various Democratic groups.

Their chances of nomination will be measured in what approval they merit at the hands of the present occupant of the White House. Recent developments of the John W. Davis, Al Smith and Bainbridge Colby stripe discovered at the last election into whose hands had fallen the direction of party affairs.

The answer to the question "After Roosevelt, who?" so far as the nomination of the Democratic party is concerned—will be whom Mr. Roosevelt determines shall be the choice of the Democracy.—Miami Herald.

"STRIKE OR STARVE."

"Twenty bullets hit the plane bearing food to nonstriking workers in Republic Steel Company's plant at Warren, Ohio."

This is a picture in peaceful America, supposedly governed by forces of law and order, that came over the wires only yesterday.

Here is the situation. In response to the orders of officials of an outside labor organization, a large number of employees of the Republic Steel Company have struck their tools and left their work.

There were, however, a large number of employees of the company who refused to join the strikers and remained at work.

The picketing initiated by the strikers then took the form of not only excluding outsiders from entering the plant, but of preventing those within it from obtaining food. "Strike or starve" was the order issued to the beleaguered loyal employees.

Efforts were made to get food to the besieged. At last an attempt was made to land supplies by the use of airplanes. They were met by showers of bullets fired from guns in the hands of strikers.

Increasingly there are incidents of violence in these strikes that are now agitating the country. Nothing, however, so presumptuous has taken place as this attempt to deprive workers of food by force of arms. This savors of rebellion, or at least the extreme of arrogant disregard of law.

And the country does nothing about it. Minorities of workers here and there, controlled by unprincipled leaders seeking all power, force larger groups to strike, picket plants and inaugurate civil war on a small scale. And the country does nothing about it.

To those who live in this favored part of the country where no such outrages as are daily being perpetrated in other portions take place, it would seem that the forces of law and order, if there still remain such forces in the afflicted regions, should take a hand and suppress all incipient rebellions against the authority of state and federal government.—Miami Herald.

COMPULSORY GOVERNMENT INSURANCE.

Compulsory buying of insurance policies against unemployment, old age and certain other ills from the federal government as the insurance company has been sustained by the supreme court. It is called "social security," politicians having hit upon that alluring and honeyed phrase as better calculated to fool bores than is compulsory insurance.

In the nature of things is no reason that the federal government should be the insurance company. The law, containing exactly the provisions that it does contain as to payments by employees and employers, could have required placing of the policy (subject to watchful regulation) with the private insurance companies, experienced masters of the underwriting business. To this would have been two insurmountable objections.

The first is that it would have been more economical. That is to say, thousands of political offices would not have been at the disposal of congressmen and presidents. The time has come when bureaucracy is desired and erected for its by-products. Compulsory insurance with the Prudential, for example, would mean no votes to the congressmen. That concern does not inquire how its men vote. Or it may be that the insurance is to be the by-product of a vast machine set up primarily to elect and reelect the favorites of the Lord to the offices.

The second objection to insurance in private companies is that a profligate government needs new sources of supply. The government can and will receive the insurance premiums and will accordingly to its sweet will. It can "balance the budget" with them and, eventually, meet huge deficits that it is now incurring. A public deceived and intoxicated by "social security" is like a lark. The phrase is soothing syrup and it contains "dope."

In compulsory insurance is nothing new. Many kinds of persons and officers are compelled by law to buy indemnity insurance—from private insurance companies. Our government now goes into the compulsory insuring business because it means thereby to control the voters.

Justices McReynolds and Butler appear to be wrong because they oppose the subversion of the American republic. They think revolution unnecessary.—Charleston, S. C. News & Courier.

MAIL INTERFERENCE.

Interference with the United States mails has always been deemed a crime of proportions and dealt with by the federal authorities promptly and with severity.

But under conditions which have developed within recent months neither state nor federal government has been able to control outbursts against legal authority.

In President's Cleveland's time there was interference with the United States mails by strikers in Chicago. The president promptly sent United States troops into the afflicted district and speedily restored public order and provided free transport of the mails with which the strikers had interfered.

Similar incidents, now, do not seem to arouse the ire of the mail authorities. On the contrary, officials seem to encourage the interference which strikers have inaugurated against the lawful distributions of mail matter.

In the Republic Steel Works, at Warren, Ohio, a large number of employees refused to obey a strike order and remained in the plant and continued their work.

Those who did strike, aided by many others, members of outside union organizations, immediately established picket lines with a view of preventing any entrance to the plant and preventing the carrying of food and medicines to the loyal workers.

Every attempt to send packages of food to the practically imprisoned employees, through the mails, has been prevented by the picketing forces. They have examined all packages and ordered the mail authorities not to deliver them.

And the postal department of the United States has supported the strikers in this assuming authority over the mails and has ordered that no "unusual" packages shall be delivered to the men who are still loyally carrying on in an effort to sustain their right to work and who have refused to desert the operators of the plant.

It is useless to think that the strike situation can be coped with while the United States government departs from its duties and takes sides with the contestants.—Miami Herald.

THE CONSUMER PAYS.

Among other things, says the Kansas City Star, "the new Guffey-Vinson coal bill provides for a commission of seven members at salaries of $10,000 each who, with the assistance of twenty-three district boards, will fix the prices the public must pay for coal. A consumer's council is part of the administrative set-up under the legislation. But the formidable commission array suggests that the public will get about as much protection in this instance as it obtained from the consumers' agency under the NRA regime."

Consumers of coal everywhere will contribute to the maintenance of this additional bureaucracy. Producers and distributors of the fuel will not absorb the greater cost of doing business. If miners shall receive higher wages for fewer hours of labor, the cost of mining coal will be increased. Prices will be fixed by the commission, but they must be sufficient to show a profit to the collieries, or they will be compelled to shut down. The commission, not the collieries, will be supported by the United States government.

In view of the many conditions in which the consumer is being forced to spend more money for the goods, wares and stuffs he needs, it is unbecome for the New Deal spokesmen to say that their aim and object are to protect him. Ultimate buyers lose every time the Roosevelt administration establishes a bureau under whatever name. Yet the men in the street goes serenely on his way in the apparent belief that the Roosevelt administration is conserving his interests. This same man in the street is contributing to the support and maintenance of a farflung army of bureaucrats who are engaged in administering the social security and unemployment insurance establishments.—Charleston, S. C. News & Courier.

A CITY CAPTURED.

These labor uprisings assume a serious position when government forces before them. The disturbances may take over the streets and business of a city; when they may occupy the office of the governor; when they give orders and the officeholders are so cowardly they dare not resist. This is a form of revolution, deny it as you will.

Lansing, the capital of Michigan, was captured by the Lewis radicals when the United Automobile Workers called a general strike as a protest against the arrest of a few pickets by the police. The law, you see, can no longer act independently; it is not permitted to perform its duty if it is not agreeable to this labor crowd. That spells the end of order and government, and allows to continue. And it is being allowed to continue under the blessings of Governor Murphy of Michigan, who seems to approve of lawlessness.

For some reason labor cannot see or understand that in this destruction of rights and liberties, that it will lose should it succeed; that the workers will become not the bosses, but the slaves of the union chiefs, who would show far less mercy and consideration for their men than do the "taskmasters"—the employers.

These courses are not only dividing labor, but are destroying public sympathy for the organized workers, and the unions must remember that they are still only a fraction of the total population. An example of this reaction was manifested at the Michigan State College, East Lansing, where aroused students cast a few labor agitators into the campus river. It is too bad that these students are not in command of the state house, instead of this politician, Murphy.—Miami Herald.

PRESERVING REPUBLICANS.

Democrats engaged in saving and preserving the Republicans is a rare and commendable sight that would indicate the return of brotherhood and peace on earth. Well that is happening in Tallahassee where the Democratic state senate passed a bill to lower from 30 to 15 per cent the number of votes that must be cast in two general elections if a party is to remain on the ballots. The bill has gone to the Democratic house for action.

Under the present 30 per cent the C. O. P. would be ruled out, as it failed to negotiate that percentage of votes in the Democratic primaries. Hence it would disappear from view except as the lonely Republicans sneaked in and out of dark alleys along with Socialists and Communists.

This new measure would keep the Republicans recognized, and that is fair enough if the Republicans can recognize themselves. It is much better for the state to have two parties, one keeping watch of the other, and it even helps the parties themselves.

In fact, the Democrats admit their legislative action was not entirely due to pity for the Republicans; that there was a selfish reason attached. Chairman Fred H. Touchton of the elections committee said that as long as there are Republicans around they should be fenced in their own party, as otherwise they might stray onto the Democratic highway and yield the balance of power.

So breathing life into the weakest Republicans ought to please everybody, which makes this a most unusual bit of wise legislation.—Miami Herald.

CANAL GESTURE.

After spending weeks listening to argument for and against the Florida canal, the house river and harbors committee knew it had to report the thing. It was much easier to favor than condemn because the administration leaned that way, and so in a secret session it endorsed the proposal to finish the ditch.

However, no appropriation was authorized and the committee members admitted they did not expect the house to act on the bill this year and perhaps next. It was merely a friendly gesture of no consequence to please the folks who want the canal, while south Florida and the opposition do not matter as they probably will gain their desire.

However, this does not mean south Florida must not maintain watch, that the opponents can afford to do for a moment. The canal might be slipped through when nobody was looking with a couple of million dollars tied on. There is ample talk toward that end.—Miami Herald.

AN ENGLISH BISHOP STIRS THEM UP.

Dr. Ernest William Barnes, outspoken low church bishop of Birmingham, the great English industrial city, is likely to shake the Established Church to its foundations by his latest attack on the conservative regime that opposed the marriage of the Duke of Windsor and Wallis Warfield. The bishop, head of his great diocese since 1924, not only demands a reform in the divorce laws but suggests that Communion be given by the Church to divorced persons. That attitude would admit the new Duchess of Windsor to the Holy Table, where Christian believe God, and not Man, judges "the innermost secrets of the heart" and rewards of penitence according to the spirit in which the sacred elements are taken. Barnes will likely not win his point but he will continue to make it uncomfortable for medievalists who seek to continue the Establishment and fuss about the "letter" to while missing the "spirit" or divine law.

More men of the type of Bishop Barnes, Vicar Jarrold, Canon Streeter and former Dean Inge of St. Paul's are needed in Britain to wake up the Establishment. This reminds us that Dr. Wilbur Caswell, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Yonkers, N. Y., in a recent address remarked that "if Rip Van Winkle were to come back, he would find the Church had changed the least of any institutions." And that's true, possibly, of all communions, irrespective of their denominational tag.—Winter Haven Chief.

BANK NITE.

"'Was a sad bank night,'" as related by George Burr, of the Winter Haven Herald:

The saddest bank night story we've heard came from Kansas, where, in a small town, the movie owner also owned one of the town's best restaurants. His competitor drew down a $1,500 bank night award and proceeded to blow it all in on a new sign and other advertising. A Kansas newspaper tells of another pathetic instance. A Neodesha church was holding communion service and when every thing was ready it was discovered the wine had not been provided. A man was sent out for some wine and all he could find was persimmon wine. When the congregation came to the doxology they had to whistle it.

Funny how these Lewis unionists, looking for trouble, hovel for aid when they find what they seek.—Miami Herald.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

By RUSSELL KAY

Good evening, children! To-day your Old Uncle Wiggly has selected a few nice little nursery rhymes. So pull your chairs up close to the radio and I'll tell you all about what happened up at Tallahassee, in language you can understand:

Hi Diddle, Diddle,
They fumed and they fiddled,
But the moo-cow stays on the road.
The lobbyists laughed to see such sport
And the taxpayers carry the load.

Senator Spratt could eat no fat,
His pal could eat no lean.
They did some tradin' back and forth
And licked the platform clean.

Little Bo-Peep has lost some sleep—
She napped on an attitude,
With little dickets and much adulation
She earned her six dollars a day.

Sing a song o' sixpence,
A bottle full of rye,
Four and twenty wise guys
Could up a pie.
Before the party ended
A lot of votes were switched
And still some people wonder
Just why the bill was ditched.

Little Miss Muffet sat on a tuffet
Yerf'd a bill
A fat lobby spider sat down beside her—
The rest you can guess if you will.

Peas porridge hot, peas porridge cold,
Get it at a chain store, nine days old,
Some want 'em open, some want 'em closed,
But what we'd do without 'em, God only knows.

Little Boy Motorist, bow your horn,
The cow on the highway and not in the corn.
There should be a law and also a fence—
And maybe there will be a few years hence.

Now Mary had a little lamb,
But she was one smart lassie.
She knew it was her little calves
That clicked at Tallahassee.

Little Jack Horner stood on a corner
Playin' a slot-machine.
But the first of October his fun will be over
Unless he sneaks back of the screen.

See-saw, Marjorie Daw,
What'll we do about liquor?
Shall we give it the axe?
No, we'll double the tax,
And the sooner we do it the quicker.

Hickory, Dickory, Dock,
They didn't stop the clock;
When it struck three,
They quit by gee,
Hickory, Dickory, Dock!

And now children, my time is up. But Old Uncle Wiggly will be back with you again next week with more stories for good little girls and boys...

Many Classes of Business Belong To State C. of C.

Jacksonville, June 10.—More than 100 different classes of Florida business, ranging alphabetically from “abstractors” to “warehousemen,” are directly represented in the membership of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce, according to a survey released today by officials of the statewide organization.

“Directly or indirectly, some 10,000 Florida businessmen share in shaping the activities of the State Chamber,” Harold Cole, president, stated today. “They may be a member of some statewide Florida organization whose head is automatically a director of the State Chamber or a member of some local Chamber of Commerce associated with the State Chamber.”

“We thus bring together the work of the State Chamber with other statewide organizations as the Florida Association of County Commissioners, the Florida League of Municipalities and the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards. This creates an organized force through which Florida businessmen work for the progress and advancement of the State,” Mr. Cole said.

Exactly 104 classifications are listed in the survey, giving a complete cross section of Florida commerce, agriculture, industry and manufacturing from the papermill operator of Northwest Florida to the grower of the Key-seed of the Sunshine State.

The “A” range from abstractors to avocado growers; the “B” range from bakers to boat builders; the “C” range from crushers to stone dealers; the “D” range from dairy operators to dry-dock concerns; engineers to exporters; feed dealers to fertilizer manufacturers; and so on through the list, including warehouse operators, the feeders in the 104th space of the State Chamber survey.

The Curse of Progress

Ready to Oblige

The policeman just managed to leap to safety as the sports car pulled up with a screeching of brakes. Naturally he was not very pleased, but when he saw that the driver was a very pretty young lady he did his best to keep his temper. "Do you know anything about the Highway Code?" he asked, more in sorrow than in anger. "Oh, yes!" she replied sweetly, "What is it you want to know?"—Stray Stories Magazine.

Il Cackles

A couple of sailors got into a discussion about the kind of an animal a heifer was. One sailor claimed that the heifer belonged to the hog family. The other said it was a variety of sheep. Finally they called in Rouben's Bill. "Bill, what's a heifer—is it a hog or a sheep?" they asked. Rouben's Bill let off a large chew reflectively. Then he said: "To tell you the truth, mates, I dunno much about poultry."

Correct Vacation Toggery

VACATIONING they will go—Vera, Mom and Flo. And they will enjoy themselves the more because their wardrobes after Sew-Your-Own are just exactly right. Mother in this model will be mistaken for daughter many a time because her design and dots are so very youthful. She will have various frocks in various materials developed on this theme, and in one of them, at least, the dots will be red.

Dates for Dancing.

Vera, to the right, has a date for dancing and when her escort admiringly effuses some such nonsense as, "That gown must have come on the last boat from Paris," she will toss her dark head and say, "No foreign frocks for me. I Sew-My-Own." Her dress of soft flowered material with demure braid at the neck and hem almost makes a sweet old-fashioned girl of her, but the tailored collar and trim cut label her the sophisticated young thing that she really is.

Collegiate.

Only a snappy sophomore can fully appreciate just how smart are those buttons down the back of the model to the left. Her yoke and neckline are "Oh, so new, my dear!" her plaid as British as she would ever accept to be. Best of good vacation wishes to the three of them from Sew-Your-Own.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1297 is designed in sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 2½ yards of 35-inch material plus ¼ yard contrasting. Pattern 1998 is designed in sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material. With long sleeves 4½ yards of 35 inch material is required.

Pattern 1307 is designed in sizes

12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 30-inch material. For trimming 7½ yards of braid or ribbon is required. Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (34 cents) each.
