"Death Over Miami"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HERE'S a tale of the high seas, of "Sparks," as the seamen call the radio operator who sits day and night over his set, picking up messages that may mean life or death to some hapless souls.

In this case, thanks to Ray Hutchins of Long Island City, N. Y., it meant life to the victims of a hurricane which had just swept a path of death and destruction over Florida!

Ray tells me that the Ward Line passenger ship Siboney, with him on board as chief wireless operator, and a ship named Miami, which was on her way from Havana, bound for New York, left on September 18, 1926. Just before they left the dock at noon, they received a hurricane warning from a station in New Orleans which called letters were WNU.

Now Ray says such warnings were a dime a dozen, and most of them came to exactly nothing. So when they ran into a gale with moderate sea on passing Morro Castle, they thought little of it. All unsuspecting they turned toward Key West.

Somebody Called the Siboney.

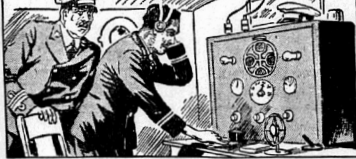

Ray tells us that at 10 p. m. that night he was on watch. Static was bad, the sea was running a bit more heavily, and the wind at force three blew spray against the radio-room ports so forcibly it sounded like hail. The passengers, their vacations over, were asleep or preparing for bed, secure in the thought of the trained men in whose hands they entrusted their welfare. Ray, watching with anxious eyes the rising storm, could think only of the helplessness of even these trained men when Nature goes on a rampage.

Idle running through the 600-meter band, Ray found things dull, with little traffic. At ten-thirty, against a rasping background of static, some fellow called WNU (the Siboney) Ray's vessel slowly and repeatedly.

"Shocks," Ray thought to himself. "This'll be some two-by-four tanker about to ask for a relay."

Unable to send their messages the full distance because of lack of power, the smaller ship asked help from a ship with better equipment. Ray was certainly justified in this conclusion, for what else would be sending a signal that was not the clear, musical note of the shore stations, but a weak, straggling spurt, "like someone shaking a bucket of pebbles," as Ray puts it.

But when this puny station signed WAX, which was the shore station at Miami, Florida, Ray was shocked into action! Miami, whose high, clear note always rang through the thirty miles of static that separated them. Something was radically wrong. Ray was sure of that. Hurriedly he snapped back a brief "Go ahead," Ray knew the shore station was able to hear the money much better than Ray could catch the thin signal that trickled in from Miami.

"Ham" Told of Miami Hurricane.

And WAX, Miami, came back with the hottest row of dots and dashes Ray ever had directed toward him in his life. A pitiful appeal for food, clothing and medical supplies for the victims of the Miami hurricane, which had just swept a path of death and destruction across Florida!

There was no second to be lost! Out there in those waste stretches, battered and swept clean by the fury of a Nature gone mad, were helpless men, women, and little children, their homes destroyed, their last link with the world this ship's radio room, where a horrified man sat over a delicate instrument and relayed the tale of their disaster to the world.

Ray jumped to his feet, ran into their quarters, slapped his kitchen, on the stomach. For the next twelve hours, while Kitchen stood by and tended the arc and spark transmitters, Ray alternately received from Miami and sent to WAX, in East Michigan, Long Island. A pal of Ray's, Al Kahn, who was on the Orizaba, near Hatteras, helped to keep other ships' signals off the air while Ray was slowly trying to pound through the thousands of miles between WAX and Miami.

Static Made It Almost Impossible.

You fellow-adventurers who are "hams," as the radio amateurs call them, will know what Ray was up against trying to pick up the faint code of WAX with static buzzing, sputtering, crackling, crashing, drowning out the almost insupportable signal that meant aid and succor to thousands of souls. Ray sat there glued to his chair for twelve hours, straining his ears to catch the pitiful appeal, receiving under almost superhuman conditions. "So bad was the static," Ray tells me, "that each dot was a drop of sweat and each dash a moan."

Captain F. L. Miller gave the ship to us as to keep the operators within range of WAX's low-power transmitter. He had been asked to bring his ship into the harbor with food and medicine, but the ship's draft would not allow it even in calm weather.

And all the time Ray was racking his brains wondering how the Miami operators, whose big station was obviously out of whack, were getting even this faint signal through. "Those boys certainly deserve credit," Ray says proudly, "all their towers were down; the roof was blown from their quarters, and their lines were all out; they were sheltering one hundred men, women and children in the control room, and even then they rigged up an emergency transmitter, powered with batteries stolen from wrecked cars, to get the first word of the hurricane to the outside world."

"So far as I know," Ray says, "it was the first time a land station ever sent an SOS to a ship!"

I guess we can sympathize with Ray when we imagine the feelings of that operator at WAX, who called the ship so slowly and prayerfully with that pathetic little sending shag, knowing that the Siboney was due to pass and had continuous watch. Those boys got very little credit in the papers at the time, but Ray will always remember them with pride in his profession.

Spices From the Tropics
Pepper grows in clusters of small round berries on a vine that is widely cultivated in the Netherlands East Indies as well as in India and other parts of Asia. The berries are picked before they are fully ripe and laid in the sun to dry. They become dark and black looking as seen in case of whole peppers. While pepper, which is popular for salads and other light foods, is made from the same berry after the outside dark skin has been rubbed off. It is much more than black pepper, because the chief flavoring oils are more predominant in the outer coating than in the inner berry.

AMERICA'S NO. 1 LOVER WAS AN OIL DRILLER

CLARK GABLE was little different from any other small town boy. Born in Cadiz, Ohio, in 1902, and later living in Hopedale, Ohio, population 500, Clark Gable was a regular American boy, fond of the outdoors and all sports. Motherless from the time he was seven months old, he was raised by his grandparents until his father remarried. He held a deep love and respect for his stepmother.

Like any other normal American boy, Clark Gable was not sure what position he would like to hold in life. He thought for a while that he might be an architect, and later he studied medicine at night school.

The SUPREME COURT

AND HOW IT WORKS

"The Public Welfare"

By ROBERT MERRILL

THE Supreme court of the United States has frequently been called upon to act as umpire in cases where citizens protested that their health or their crops were endangered.

A number of such appeals have resulted in the elimination of conditions causing pollution of the water in an affected community must drink, or contamination of the air it must breathe.

In one instance a company made a practice of discharging waste material into a river, and the water, further along the course, were utilized for irrigation purposes.

A citizen wrote the company and asked it to stop discharging waste material into the river. The company refused to do so, and the citizen brought suit in a local court.

The company appealed to a higher state court, which modified the decree to the extent which allowed it to operate if it provided facilities to prevent the waste from being carried down the river. An appeal was then carried to the United States Supreme court, which affirmed the ruling and explained:

"In giving a right to use the waters of the public streams . . . the statute does not provide that such a user may send his waste material or debris down the stream to the detriment of substantial injury to the riparian rights of users of water below, and no such invasion of private property rights should be inferred."

State Seeks Fresh Air.

In another instance a state appealed to the Supreme court to prevent the United States to join certain industrial plants in a bordering state from polluting the air and endangering the health of the citizens of the state.

The Supreme court granted the injunction, pointing out that a state has the right to the air within its domain.

"It has the last word," said the opinion, "as to whether its mountains shall be stripped of their forests and its inhabitants shall breathe pure air."

On an occasion, a church in Washington, D. C., carried to the Supreme court its appeal against a railroad company which had erected an engine house and repair shop next to the church property. It protested that the noise and smoke thus caused interfered with its services and greatly inconvenienced worshippers. The court decided in favor of the church.

Cochrane's Outlook on Baseball Proves Tragic Observation

IT HAD been a good interview. We had talked about the pennant race being between the Yankees and the Tigers, two teams very much alike in that sheer power is their reliance rather than pitching cunning. Cleveland, we had decided, was good but not quite good enough because the Indians never had the extra nip which wins games that are needed most. From there the talk turned to the luck which makes or breaks pennant contenders.

"We had it for years," Mickey Cochrane said, "and we won two flaps. Last year we didn't have it and we lost. This year—we've had a lot of hard luck but we've stuck close. Who knows." He paused and rapped carefully on the wooden floor of the dugout.

"Who knows," he repeated. "I feel better I have for four or five years. It looks like Howe is ready to go for us and things are shaping up. But—" He paused again. "Well, anything can happen in baseball."

That was two or three minutes before game time. In the fifth inning Bump Hadley threw a fast ball. Cochrane stepped back. It was not a bean ball, should not have hit him. But when you have been in baseball a long while and have other things on your mind you become careless. The ball struck him on the right temple.

Almost immediately old-timers in the press box were heading towards the clubhouse. There was no need to watch Cochrane lay there on his side for a moment and then turn over on his back. The third of the ball against Cochrane something serious had happened. You know that everybody in the stands realized that Mickey might not have a hat on his shoulder again.

Things such as that happen in baseball as in all sports. While you wait for X-rays and hope this one will not be serious you—if you have been covering games for long—think about other ones.

There was that Polo Grounds afternoon seventeen years ago when Carl Mays threw his baffling underhand fast ball and Ray Chapman, great Cleveland shortstop, was doomed. There was the afternoon in St. Louis when you heard that sickening thud again and saw Babe Ruth standing in the mound while Mel Ott lay silently beside the plate, lucky to be out only for the rest of the season.

Back through the years there are other memories of such moments. Merwin Jacobson ducking into two fast pitches during two years with Jack Dunn's famous pennant-winning Orioles. His life despaired of each time.

Chuck Fawcett, grinning as he stepped to the plate against Jeff Pfeffer in a Yankee-Dodger training season game. Fawcett still around town now, a silver plate in his skull as a memento of the fast ball that struck him from across second base later. Ray Corban, Willie Sox shortstop, being led off the field, hobbling to himself, never to be a real player again after being hit by Russ Ford's high hand one at the Old Millport grounds.

Mickey's Mishap Recalls Accident to Earl Combs

Little Pete Walls, a jockey playing in a pickup game against the racing writers at Saratoga last August. Earl Combs running into the fence in St. Louis. Rottger knocked unconscious by a ball that rebounded from the fence in a Brooklyn-Beacon contest.

Accidents, all of them. Yet—Well, somehow it is hard to get used to the scene. Even memories of moments when comedy has followed quick upon what might have been disaster don't really help.

There have been such moments. For instance the day when Larry Doyle was skulled at the Polo Grounds. The crowd scarcely dared breathe while Larry groveled beside home plate. Then some one brought a glass of water, lifted the great second baseman's head. Larry drank the water, grooved his head, grinned a white grin and stumbled down to first base.

Lesson for June 20

JOSEPH'S KINDNESS TO HIS KINDED

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 46:1-7, 28-30; 50:1-24.

GOLDEN TEXT—And ye be kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven us. Ephesians 4:32.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Joseph Saw His Father Again.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph Honoring His Father.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Kindness in the Family.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Mutual Kindness in the Family.

A happy ending—yes! Modern writers may look with disfavor on it (and perhaps rightly so, for most of them write about life apart from fellowship with God) but to those who trust God and who seek his will, the story of life has a bright and joyful conclusion.

But someone may object that the lesson for today closes with the last words of the book of Genesis, which are "a coffin in Egypt." Is that a happy ending? It is, because even that forbidding emblem of death pointed in faith toward the day when God was to keep his promise and bring his people into the promised land.

Our lesson centers around the last of our patriarchs, Joseph, and his kindness to his father and his family. The highest official in the land of Egypt (save for Pharaoh himself) proves his inherent greatness by forgetting position and power, except as they enable him to be a loving son and brother. We consider his kindness as it is centered in his devotion to God, shown forth in thoughtful provision for others, expressed in affectionate deeds, and as it imparted itself by faith to others.

I. Founded on Fellowship (Gen. 46:1-4).

Joseph, having heard from his son that Joseph was in Egypt, and having thus learned of their treachery and deceit, came at last to realize that his beloved Joseph is alive. He has been urged to go to Egypt but he hesitates about leaving Canaan. How shall he know whether to believe in and respond to Joseph's invitation. He asks God, the One who is the joy and center of Joseph's life, and of Jacob's as well, and he has his answer.

Best family life and devotion center around a mutual fellowship with God. There may be little else to share, but "little is much when God is in it." Has God been honored in your home? Has He been made the center of family life? These are vital questions.

II. Evincenced by Thoughtfulness (vv. 5-7).

Joseph had arranged for Pharaoh to send wagons to bring his aged father, the women, and the little ones.

Many in our day glory in being "hard-boiled." In their relentless pursuit of fame and riches they ignore the members of their own families. They are ashamed of the broken bodies, the humble apparel, the undecorated speech of their parents, fearing lest their new-found friends in the circle of wealth and position may ridicule them. There is a crude but apt expression that describes such persons as "stuffed shirts," people with a "front" but with empty heads and hearts. God pity the young man or woman who is ashamed of a simple and humble father or mother!

III. Manifested in Love (vv. 24-26).

Joseph kissed his father whom he had gone out to meet, and held him close and wept for joy. Again he showed his true greatness by being his natural self.

We are not all demonstrative in showing our affection. Furthermore, we would not plead for more of that sham public expression of affection which is so distasteful to right-thinking people. But may we not suggest that in our loving consideration for our kindred, let us ask ourselves how long it is since we did something to show that we really love our mother, our father, or a faithful wife, son, or daughter? How long is it since you wrote home to mother, or went home to visit?

IV. Imparted by Faith (50:24-26).

Jacob had been gathered to his fathers; time had gone on in the relentless way, and Joseph is about to die. What shall be the heritage to his family? Money, property, position? No; he leaves them something infinitely more valuable—a forward-looking faith that will keep alive in their hearts the expectation that God will in due season bring them into their own land. Joseph had spent most of his years in Egypt, he had attained high position and a great honor, but he never lost his vision of the promised land. He imparts to them a faith that hope. When you and I die, will we be able to say to our people, "I die but God will. . ." (v. 24)?

A Moral Success

WEALTH DIVISION

A major objective of the second term of President Roosevelt is to bring about a greater division of wealth among the ill-nourished, ill-clad and ill-housed, he told newspapermen. This is a very commendable aim to which no one can properly take exception.

Others have had the same idea, such as Huey Long, who urged the division of wealth. Great industrialists have practiced this distribution through higher wages, through profit sharing, through humanizing relations with employees. There have been other employers who built up their fortunes by grinding down their workers, but these are steadily growing less in number. The wise employer knows that his own prosperity is now linked closely with the well-being of his employees and is governed accordingly.

President Roosevelt, himself, through his New Deal, has already introduced wealth division by taking larger sums from industry and from the rich in the form of taxation and redistributing the money in relief, work, labor and agricultural benefits.

But this method is political, it is temporary and solves no permanent problem, and so much of the money is wasted and slips into the pockets of the undeserving, into the greedy paws of politicians.

There would be no gain, but a loss, if wealth is taken from the wealthy who earn it honestly and redistributed to officeholders who create nothing. A real division of wealth, as in Russia, merely means everybody becomes ill-nourished and poor; no one except the officials are well fed and contented. Divide all the wealth in the United States equally and all of us would be comparatively poor. You cannot get up well, live in factories and business and mines and farms. You can only divide the income from these things more equally, and if you wreck the enterprises in doing so, then business will crash and there will be no wealth to divide.

Some people are naturally workers and earners and others are not; no government has a right to take away from the former to aid the latter and the lazy and the gamblers.

The theory of wealth division sounds fine in words; to put it into effect by government edicts and taxation is not so simple and it is dangerous.—Miami Herald.

GOES TO BAT.

It is good to see at least one official in Washington, and from Michigan, with the courage to combat the lawless strikers of the rising John L. Lewis mafia.

Congressman Hoffman, Republican, dares to defy the mob, urges the enrollment of citizens, the gathering of ammunition to fight the revolt of the Committee for Industrial Organization should it advance upon Muskegon, where steel employees are working against the wishes of Lewis and all his radical crew.

The man who is supposed to be governor of Michigan, Frank Murphy, of course, will do nothing to defend the decent, honest, law-abiding citizens of the state for he has cast his lot with the rebels; he throws his arms and runs whenever he sees a Lewis unionist approaching. He permits them to take over the state capital and suppress all business; lets them invade the near-by college town, where students mobilized and threw the disturbers out, after soaking some of them in the river.

Murphy has state police and national guardsmen at his command, but he is afraid to resist revolution; he would rather have his state torn apart than injure anybody. Such a kind, noble, merciful leader is Murphy, a man that Michigan ought to cast out if it does not want to sink.

Hoffman goes to bat; he is the man who should be governor; he risks his political future by standing for the right and for law. Now will Michigan back him or run away with its "yellow-streak" governor? —Miami Herald.

"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, June 20.

The Golden Text is from Deuteronomy 10:14, "Behold, the heavens and the heaven, and the earth and the Lord thy God, the earth also, with all that therein is."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. He gathereth the waters of the sea together as in a heap; he layeth up the depth in storehouses: Let the earth fear the Lord: let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him. For he spake and was done; he commanded and it stood fast" (Ps. 33:6-9).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God creates and governs the universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual life, which He evolves, and they are obedient to the Mind that makes them" (p. 295).

I do not maintain that anyone can exist in the flesh without food and raiment; but I do believe that the real man is immortal and that he lives in Spirit, not matter.

Of the stock which brings luck and to do prosperity to the household, observes a writer in the Boston Globe, Poland, perhaps more than any other country of the world, has been the faithful harbor of spring and, with its east, the land of good fortune.

For equal centuries therefore has been protected, coaxed and spoiled. In the nesting days previous often the young birds were seen on the edges of their roofs. These are waving the lanky birds to wave some there for their babies. Once such a nest is built it becomes the enduring tallismen for a household's prosperity and peace.

Coast Line Offers New All-Expense Vacation Trips

Believing that the best possible use of one's leisure time is to stimulate knowledge, and learn by seeing more of our country and its great world famous cities, W. W. McFarland, president of the Atlantic Coast Line has after exhaustive study arranged three perfectly packaged Individual Economical Vacation Trips; namely: to Washington, New York and Atlantic City. Beginning June 1st and extending throughout the summer each trip will be sold daily from Avon Park. All major expenses, including round-trip rail-road tickets good in air-conditioned equipment room with bath at first-class hotels; taxi transfer between station and hotel and attractive sightseeing tours.

Mr. McFarland pointed out that these are the only vacation trips sold from the southeast by rail which include sightseeing trips. Hotels and sightseeing companies have made substantial reductions in prices, and these savings are passed on to the public.

Sightseeing tours include all of beautiful Washington, its great public buildings, parks, foreign embassies; uptown midtown and lower New York, RCA Building, NBC Studios, etc. Atlantic City's famous amusement pier, great hotels and board walks, with the great and near great from all over the world should be seen by all southerners.

Attractive illustrated booklets containing all details of the tour, and showing the hotels, as well as many of the points of interest included on the trip may be obtained from any Atlantic Coast Line Representative, or will be mailed upon request.

The hotels selected in connection with these trips are first-class centrally located, and a most reliable establishments, at which one may enjoy every luxury, comfort and courtesy.

Mr. W. W. McFarland further pointed out that in taking these Coast Line Vacation Trips one is relieved of all hotel expenses. Individual hotel reservations, sightseeing arrangements, etc. Too, the cost of making the same trip in any other way would be much greater, as the prices have been reduced to the minimum due to the special rates which the Atlantic Coast Line has been successful in obtaining from the hotels and sightseeing companies.

While each trip is sold individually, he added that it is the plan of the Atlantic Coast Line to organize group movements, enabling friends to go together, thus enhancing the pleasure of the vacation.

An important recent development is the movement begun by home demonstration women of one community for establishing a club house.

Clothes That Look the Part

NOW, Milady, that you've seen all three, which will you choose, the lovely dance frock, an easy-to-sew runabout model, or a slick all around the clock dress to flatter your every move and moment?

It's a personal question but one you'll surely want to toy with since Sew-Your-Own makes the answer so easy.

The romantic fashion at the left will make memorable occasions of your summer parties as only a lovely appearance can. Its two pieces are young, cool and streamlined. For the Miss whose interest centers about matinee goings-on, there's a dashing shorter style—it differs only in length, and either will be picturesque in marquette, dimity, or organdie.

When you're keeping up with the Joneses, wear this stylish all occasion dress. It will do great things for you socially, and, figuratively speaking, it will cut inches from those high spots and make you feel pounds lighter. Think of what that means to chic and comfort when things get hot out your way. Dark sheer crepe is the material that lends to charm to this creation.

Easy to sew and always ready to go is this new spectator frock for young women and those who want to turn back the clock. With this number handy there's no need to pause for reflection about what to wear. And that holds good whether you're bound for sports, business, or society. It is becoming as a sun tan, as simple to sew as a dress can be, and a cinch to launder. Why not make a carbon copy for the morning, after? Remember summer chic depends upon the company your wardrobe keeps. Be sure it's amply supplied with cool convenient Sew-Your-Owns!
