

HIGHLANDERS RE-ORGANIZED THURSDAY EVE.

Old Ridge Organization Is Revamped With Many Good Objectives

The directors of the Scenic Highlands met Thursday evening at Frostproof at the call of the re-organization committee to complete the program for an aggressive campaign in all matters affecting the interests of the whole Highlands.

Thirty-eight directors and members of the press sat down to a seven o'clock dinner at the Day Nursery Club House. W. R. Brewster of Babson Park, vice president of the organization, presided. Mr. Brewster briefly stated the objects of this re-organization and then, on James C. Morton of Waverly, who made a clear cut presentation of the work ahead of the Scenic Highlands. Mr. Morton stressed especially the necessity of immediate action to conserve the rights of the Highlands to State Road No. 8 and emphasized the importance of immediate, vigorous and concerted action. The speaker also called attention to the desirability of cooperation with State and Federal Authorities, looking toward the early completion of Federal Highway No. 19. Another speaker was called attention to the desirability of cooperation with State and Federal Authorities, looking toward the early completion of Federal Highway No. 19.

At the suggestion of Judge DeWitt and several other members of the committee on nomination for the various offices was appointed, the committee to consist of one member from each of the seven towns. After careful consideration the committee reported the following ticket, which was unanimously elected: President, John D. Clark; Waverly: First Vice President, W. M. Reek, Avon Park; Second Vice President, W. R. Brewster, Babson Park; Secretary, J. A. Worthington, Lake Wales; Treasurer, John Marcy, Frostproof. These officers will have the following duties: The executive committee, Mr. M. L. Halliday, Haines City; G. C. Shewer, Lake Hamilton; John L. Olsen, Orono; John A. Graham, Sebring; Dr. E. J. Etheridge, DeSoto City; J. E. Simms, Lake Placid; E. A. Stokes, Lake of the Hills. Mr. Clark, president, presided at the dinner and a spirited discussion followed.

Each director was named to head the membership committee in his community and urged to increase the membership in the Scenic Highlands as largely as possible. It was felt that several thousand members could easily be obtained in the Highlands. The executive committee accepted the invitation of C. E. Crabtree, manager of the Jacaranda Hotel, to be his guests at a dinner meeting at 7:30 Thursday evening, September 22nd.

There have been few meetings in recent years on the Highlands of more representative character. The greater earnestness of purpose and expressed determination to push the Highlands in every way as it was brought out that this work of the Scenic Highlands is for the purpose of handling matters, which affect the rights of the Scenic Highlands in no way, at any time, interfere with the work of the Chamber of Commerce of each community. It was also brought out that this would not be a money raising campaign for advertising purposes, but that in many ways, favorable publicity can be obtained at not more than a nominal cost.

The utmost good feeling was manifested throughout the meeting and the directors felt that in addition to the motto, "One for all and all for one," there would be no let up from now on in vigorous action in all matters affecting the welfare of the Scenic Highlands. (Contributed.)

Many Attended Citrus Meeting Wednesday Night

A very successful county wide meeting of citrus growers and others interested in the industry was held Wednesday night at the Avon Park high school auditorium. About 75 were present from all over the county.

A very instructive talk was given by Dr. A. F. Camp who is in charge of the Citrus Experiment Station at Lake Alfred. His talk was illustrated with colored slides in order to bring out his points more clearly.

He showed the differences in stress when the trees have full measure of fertilizer and when they are lacking in various minerals, such as magnesium, zinc, manganese, iron, copper and other elements.

LEE ANSWERS WAKULLA SUIT FOR GAS MONEY

Claims Demand for Payment Was "In Nature Of A Loan"

Tallahassee, Sept. 16.—(Special)—Answering Wakulla County's mandamus for continued payment of gasoline tax money, Comptroller J. M. Lee today told the Supreme Court that he had received a loan from gasoline taxes in the sinking fund of the county.

The Comptroller's answer in this suit filed this morning included a certified copy of the Wakulla County "resolution" asking for the money, "in the nature of a loan."

The Comptroller also said the only plan for repayment of the loan was "that the loan be repaid from State funds under an act of doubtful constitutionality, to-wit, Chapter 7818," which act is a local act applying only to Wakulla County and which directs that the county of Wakulla be given funds now being sent to the State Road Department under provision of the general act.

The State Road Department is required to give these moneys in Wakulla County for roads of the first, second and third preferential system.

The Comptroller also sets forth that the last Legislature passed four different special acts dealing with gasoline moneys all "referring only to Wakulla County and one of which acts, according to his answer provided he should require the State Road Department to refund to Wakulla County moneys it had received under the general law. Another of these acts merely required that future gas moneys be turned over to the county and fund. A third attempted to supplement the sinking fund of the county from moneys now going to the State Road Department and the fourth undertook to set up a financial car in Wakulla County. The Comptroller's answer quoting the statute as follows:

"SECTION 5. All funds hereafter payable to the Board of County Commissioners of Wakulla County, Florida, and coming from the State gasoline taxes, or racing funds, or any other State funds shall be expended exclusively in the manner and form provided by this law unless the said Supervisor of the County shall release all or a part of said funds for other county purposes by filing a written release with the Clerk of the Court."

The Comptroller reiterated to the court that he "has never and does not now arrogate to himself the right to declare the validity of the legislature unconstitutional" but that he "does now request the court to determine the constitutionality of the several acts dealing with his duties in reference to this money."

FLORIDA BROKE AGAIN SAYS COMPTROLLER

Payment of Bills From General Fund Being Held Up

Tallahassee, Sept. 16.—(Special)—With barely enough money in sight to meet the State's September 30th payroll, Comptroller J. M. Lee has stopped writing general revenue warrants for bills being contracted by officials and state institutions supported by this fund, and by noon Thursday, approximately $100,000 of unpaid general revenue bills had piled up in the Comptroller's file to await funds for payment.

There is in the general revenue funds only approximately $170,000, of which $50,000 are earmarked for specific purposes.

The General Revenue Fund's principal income for the balance of the month will be the gas tax distribution September 25th which will run around $115,000.

Other internal receipts are expected to build the fund up sufficiently to meet the payroll September 30th.

State Road Department and many other ear-marked funds are being paid right along as these funds are not short at this time.

There are also ample funds in the Teacher's Salary fund to meet the October distribution to the various county boards of public instruction, totalling almost $1,150,000, with $300,000 to spare as a nest egg for November distribution.

TAX LEAGUE CHARGES STATE FUNDS WASTED

Salaries and Expenses of State Departments Run Into Millions

Jacksonville, Sept. 16.—(Special)—Appropriations from the State General Revenue Fund for expenses for this fiscal year—approximately $3,000,000—approximately 46 percent of the total appropriation according to a statement released here today by the Tax Revision League. "This," in the opinion of the League, "is a fertile field for the practice of economy."

The General Appropriation Bill set for this fiscal year, approximately $3,000,000, in salaries for the operation of major departments and institutions of the State, or approximately $3,400,000, or 46 percent for expenses of these same departments.

"This does not include the expenditures to be made by the numerous state departments and commissions operating on continuing appropriations. Assuming that these expenses are divided in similar proportions for salaries and expenses this amounts to another $4,500,000—a total of approximately $7,900,000 per year for expenses of the various departments, bureaus, and commissions of the state government."

"Those who have had occasion to frequently contact state employees have probably heard the slang phrase 'Salary and ———'—also probably observed certain state employees apparently 'craving' the pay of their time traveling for the State with no visible purpose except building political fences, attending to personal matters, or who are apparently traveling primarily for the purpose of collecting personal living expenses and mileage."

"Another practice that is in vogue, at least to some extent, is traveling by train on cash fares at 50c per mile and turning in expense accounts for automobile mileage at 5c per mile, which represents a handsome percentage of profit."

"There are other similar subterfuges by which certain state employees apparently 'crave' the taxpayers of thousands of dollars under the heading of 'Necessary and Regular Expenses.'"

"It would seem that while the impending state deficit is being discussed by the Governor and the Cabinet that preferred consideration should be given to the familiar item 'Necessary and Regular Expense.' We believe this would prove to be a fertile field for the practice of economy."

P. T. A. MEETING THURSDAY FIRST OF SCHOOL YEAR

Mr. Brown Spoke On "Crime and the Child"; Others On The Program

The first meeting of the school year of the Parent Teachers Association was held at the school auditorium, Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Raleigh Lawhon was program chairman for the afternoon. The singing of America by the assembly, led by Mrs. Ted Ward, accompanied by Mrs. J. B. Coen, Jr., was repeated in unison, led by Mrs. Lawhon. A vocal solo, "School Days," by Mrs. Ted Ward, accompanied by Mrs. J. B. Coen, Jr., with members joining in the chorus followed.

Rev. R. I. Brown was introduced and gave a very interesting talk on "Crime and the Child". In his talk he stressed the fact that a feeling of inferiority was the principal reason for crime in young children and suggested as a remedy social equality, at least where they are concerned.

At the conclusion of his talk the meeting was turned over to the president, Mrs. C. E. Lanier. Minutes of last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Earl Hart, Mrs. Walter Betts gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. R. I. Brown was elected secretary to fill the place of Mrs. Jimmie Spencer who resigned. In the room, Chester Yates' 12th grade won the prize for the high school and Miss Clausen's 4th grade won the prize in the lower grade.

Cravey Resigns From Police Force Following Arrest

Officer James Cravey resigned from the Avon Park police force Monday following his arrest Sunday by sheriff's officers on charges of breaking and entering with intent to commit a misdemeanor and assault with a dangerous weapon. The charges are said to have been brought by Cravey's estranged wife and George Ward following a family quarrel Sunday night. Cravey and his wife have been living apart for some time, reports state.

Cravey was released from custody this week following the signing of bonds by some of his Avon Park friends.

Frank Camp has been appointed temporarily to the police force pending a definite selection by the city council. The matter is expected to come up for discussion at their meeting Tuesday night.

Street Lighting Contract Signed; Start Work Soon

Word was received this morning that the contract for the overhead street lighting in Avon Park has been signed and the necessary construction work will start in the immediate future. It is estimated that 90 days will be required for completion.

The city council approved the contract at their meeting on Tuesday of last week with the exception of a clause governing rate increases due to higher taxes. They moved for a modification of this clause with regard to Avon Park taxes and this has been accepted by the company and inserted in the contract which was signed by the city officials this morning.

The company will sign as soon as the contract can be sent to the head office in Orlando and the work will be started at once.

It is contemplated that approximately 51 lights will be used over a 5 1/2 mile circuit covering most of the residential section of the city.

ELKS CLUB EMPLOYEE CONVICTED BY JURY

First Case Under New Dry Law Attracts County Wide Attention

After deliberations lasting less than 30 minutes, a jury in county court late Wednesday afternoon rendered a verdict of guilty against A. L. Edwards, employee of the Sebring Elks Club, who was charged with possession of intoxicating liquor with the intention of selling same.

The defense was based on the contention that the dry election held in 1934 was not properly canvassed and since the arrest was made on the basis of the county being dry because of that election, the state had no case. County Judge S. C. Ives, before whom the case was tried ruled that the records of the supervisor of registration were sufficient as to the result of the election.

Since this was the first case to come up in this county under the new law, rulings of Judge Ives on the many objections of the defense to evidence and testimony of the state was important in that it makes the precedent for all such cases in the future for this county.

State Revenue Inspectors P. D. Sandlin and G. C. Allmon were the chief witnesses for the state. Mr. Sandlin testified that on two different occasions he purchased liquor at the Elks club, once from the negro porter and once from Edwards. He also testified that he is a member of an Elks lodge in the state but that he did not make this known to anyone in Sebring until after he had purchased the first bottle of liquor.

The defense put two witnesses on the stand besides the defendant who testified that he was present on one or both occasions the liquor was said to have been purchased by Sandlin and that Edwards made no sales at the time.

The case was of unusual interest, attracting what is believed to be the largest number of spectators of any county court case held in this county.

Following the verdict of the jury, attorney for the defense, Wilbur Whitehurst, of Wauchula, gave notice he would request a new trial which it is understood means that the case will be appealed if the plea for a new trial is denied which is thought probable. M. C. Whitehurst of Sebring and former county judge of Highlands county assisted his brother in conducting the defense.

Those serving on the jury were: E. Edwards, M. H. Grice and Marvin Jones of Avon Park; A. L. Butler, Lewis Page and C. S. Martin of Sebring.

School Janitor Squabble Settled

Determined to keep politics and factional differences out of the schools, S. E. Booth, Avon Park member of the county board of public instruction, has settled the squabble that arose over the janitor question in the Avon Park schools, it was announced this week.

Under the arrangement arrived at by C. D. Nolan, retiring janitor, and W. H. Martin has been appointed county treasury officer, his headquarters being in Avon Park.

ROTARIANS HAD TWO MEETINGS HERE THIS WEEK

District Governor Horton Paid Official Visit To Local Club

Avon Park Rotarians held two important meetings last week with District Governor Roland S. Horton of Lake Worth paying his official visit to the club. The first meeting, a club assembly, was held Tuesday night, the club directors, committee chairmen and other members meeting with the governor to discuss important club matters and ways of improving the club's service to the community.

On Wednesday Governor Horton met with the club at the regular weekly luncheon, and then told of his attending the international assembly of Rotary at Montreux, Switzerland, where he had received much inspiration and found that Rotary is advancing rapidly throughout the world. Rotary is becoming a new all over the world, he said with 348 new clubs organized last year and the goal of the new international president this year is 500 new clubs.

Rotary is looking toward world peace and the population of a town is not considered now when a new club is being formed. Difference in language is no bar and these barriers are being torn down. With 430 clubs already existing in Great Britain and Ireland a goal of 1,200 to 1,500 clubs has been set for these countries with many more in Europe and Asia.

Gov. Horton quoted an analysis of Rotary's progress by the French clubs and stressed the opportunity for community service. World wide peace means much in the eyes of the Rotarian, he concluded.

Floyd Gibbons' ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Task of the Wild Boar"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:
Well, sir, here's a story that starts out with another story. A long time ago I got a letter, sent to the Adventurers' Club, from Java, in the Dutch East Indies, way over on the other side of the world. It came from Kabei, whose address was Panggongweg No. 2, Tegal, Java, and Kabei said that he'd read in the paper that I was giving away money, and would I please send him a hundred dollars because he was very poor.

Well, sir, I wrote Kabei a letter telling him I couldn't send him an money until he'd sent in an adventure yarn good enough to print in this column, and—well—I guess they have adventures over in Java, too, because in came the yarn from Kabei.

Incidentally, here's where the Adventurers' club breaks another ironclad rule. You know these yarns are all true and they all have to be vouched for. It's the club's custom to require that all papers be signed by the adventurer's name in full—first and last name, complete. But what are you going to do when a guy hasn't got any last name. Kabei writes:

"Kabei is the only name I have. I am a pure blooded Javanese boy, and we have no family names."

On a Week's Hunt in the Jungle.

And now for Kabei's story. He says he's had a lot of adventures, but this time he's come to tell us about a bear hunt he went on with his father and some of their Javanese neighbors. They set out for a week's hunting in the jungle one morning in 1929, taking with them a supply of herbs, or prepared rice, and a few small, prepared, dried, salted, spiced. They traveled through the jungle for two days, talking about eight hours a day, and stopping to eat and rest in the early afternoon when the sun was hottest.

During the first two nights, they slept on the ground, rolled up in blankets. After that they were in country where the wild boars were plentiful and dangerous. Then they climbed trees as soon as it got dark, and passed the night in them. On the third day they pitched camp and were ready to begin hunting. First they looked for water holes (drink places). Kabei calls them where the bears came at night to quench their thirst. They found several, and Kabei and his dad hid in the undergrowth near one of them. The first night they killed three bears and carried them back to camp.

On the second night, about eight o'clock, a bear came out of the jungle across from where they were hiding. Kabei and his dad both fired. The shots told. The bear stumbled and fell. But the next moment he was on his feet again, his eyes gleaming malevolently, and was coming at them like a hurricane.

The guns they were using were old single shot affairs. There was no time to reload. Kabei and his dad yelled to him to run, while he dashed off in another direction.

The bear could only follow one of them—and he picked on Kabei. The bear was a scant ten yards from him, and the nearest tree was twenty-five or thirty yards away. Kabei ran as he had never run in his life, but he couldn't outrun that bear. Foot by foot it gained on him. By the time Kabei reached the nearest tree, the bear was a scant yard behind.

Neat Trick That Fooled the Bear.

There was no time to climb that tree then. The bear would have ripped Kabei's legs to pieces with its tusks while he was trying to get up. But Kabei had a trick up his sleeve—a trick known to all native bear hunters in Java. As he neared the tree he reached out and caught it with his hand—swung himself sharply around it.

The bear WENT THUNDERING BY HIM. Before he could stop he was ten yards away, and that was all the room Kabei needed. Before the animal could turn around, Kabei had started up the tree. The bear saw him—charged again—but he was just too late. By the time he reached the tree again, Kabei was sitting pretty on one of the lower limbs.

But the bear wasn't giving up yet. He made a few desperate lunges up the side of the tree trunk, trying to climb up after Kabei, then he began to walk around that tree. Around and around he went, pawing the ground with his hoofs and stepping every now and then to glare up into the tree at Kabei.

Kabei thought it would be only a short time before the bear either succumbed to his wounds or got tired of waiting and went away. But the bear, evidently, wasn't wounded very badly, and neither did he get tired of waiting for Kabei to come down. Hour after hour went by. Dark turned into night, and the night wore on. Still the bear hadn't given up. Still he paced around and around the tree, waiting to kill that man creature who had hung him with his shooting stick.

Kabei Tied Himself in the Tree.

Kabei was getting sleepy, but he fought sleep off. Once or twice he caught himself falling into a doze, and brought himself awake just in time to keep from falling out of the tree. That would never do. Once he landed on the ground, he would be ripped and trampled to death by the bear in a matter of seconds—minutes at the most.

Still, he was dead tired. The day had been a hard one, and his body ached with fatigue. He searched his pocket—and found a piece of rope. That was all he wanted. Picking a nice comfortable spot in the upper branches of the tree, he tied himself to the trunk.

Sleeping in trees was nothing new to the Javanese boy. It was uncomfortable to sleep in trees straddling that tree limb, but not uncomfortable enough to keep him from taking a nap when properly secured. He dozed, and when he awoke again it was morning. The bear was gone. "Dead, such animals are timid in daylight," says Kabei. And Kabei climbed down the tree and started back to camp.

And of Parsley Family

The true anise is a member of the parsley family, native to southern Europe. It is a slender plant, two to four feet tall, with opposite oval pharphy serrate leaves. Somewhat branched at the top the branches end in interrupted spikes of small blue flowers each a half inch long. The tubular calyx is also a purplish blue adding color to the flowering spike. The decided odor of the leaves gives the anise its name; however, botanists call it Agastache anisodora and it is also known as dragant giant herb.

Hemlock for Haught

The American merchant's arithmetic is somewhat elastic, as when he asks $200 for an embroidered tablecloth and accepts $12. An English official claims of an instance when adjusting claims of the allied subjects for damages in the Near East after the war. An Armenian asked for $500,000 damages, was awarded $600 and insisted he should have $200. "But you asked for $500,000," they told him. "That's nothing," with a shrug of his shoulders. "My lawyer just added a few zeroes."

What S. Cobb Thinks about

Tomlinson Inscriptions.

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—A gentleman took me sightseeing through a cemetery that abounded in proud mausoleums and stately shafts.

I figured he wanted to show me that rich folks continue to enjoy the utmost luxury even after death.

How futile and how vain are most tombstone inscriptions. They give the dates of birth and death—events in neither of which the departed had any say—unless he committed suicide. And just as the av.

Irvin S. Cobb crags grave-side eulogy is a belated plea for the defense, offered after the evidence is all in, so an epitaph is an advertisement for a line of goods which permanently has been discontinued.

Somewhat this burying ground stuff reminds me of hired critics of other men's efforts. The difference between professional book reviewers and the other obituarists is that the latter do their work after you pass on, but the reviewers can't wait until you're dead to write your literary death notice for you.

Maybe critics are to authors what dead were to David Harnes's dog; they keep authors from brooding on being authors.

Catching Baracuda.
LEO CARILLO is quite a yachtman when not acting for the screen or leading parade. It's got so they don't dare let a colored feral go past his house for fear he'll rush right out and head the procession.

On one of those days when there wasn't a parade, he took Victor Moore and me out on his boat. We caught a mess of slim, yet fragrant fish. Leo called them baracuda, but, with their low retreating fins, fast, and greedy jaws, they looked more like shy lawyer to me—the kind who chase ambulances and eventually get discharged.

Glad, Mad Artists.
HERRITOFFER, the glad, mad genius, who produces some of the most beautiful sculpture and painting which resemble nothing on heaven, earth or in the waters below except possibly some bad dream which these parties had once while feeling pretty bilious, have depended upon ultraviolet light for the intellectual for support.

But now here divers millionaires may end for them an academy or a gallery—possibly it's an asylum for the more violent cases. Anyhow, there's money behind the cult, and what money behind a thing in this country, it usually flourishes, provided the money doesn't get too far behind, as happened in 1929, when the rest of the country was trying to figure out what had become of the deposits and investments, which, we of the sucker class, had entrusted to our leading financial wizards.

Still, we of that same ignorant nation do not have to know anything of this new school. We don't even have to look at them unless we're in Germany and are escorted to the official stateside display by a regiment of Nazi storm-troopers.

And aside from their ideas of what constitutes art, it's said that some of the artists themselves are not really dangerous, merely annoying in an icky sort of way. In other words, they're all right if you don't get one of 'em on you.

Pugilist Authors.
I'M ALWAYS missing something.

On the occasion of one really historic battle between a brace of distinguished writers, I yawningly left the scene before Moxter, Sinclair Lewis and Theodore Dreiser cut swapping hard words and started swapping soft blows.

And it was just my luck to be out here recently when Ernest Hemingway threw a book—or maybe it was a publisher—or maybe some such hard, knobby object—at Mr. Max Eastman and Mr. Eastman returned it with tremendous force which damaged Mr. Hemingway not at all.

The typical writer, no matter how red-blooded his style may be, picks up his pen and writes and never in his fat. There have been exceptions. Once Rex Beach chased out a night club all by himself, but his opponents were boxing such well-known writers. He had something substantial to work on.

Some of my blundering brethren in the writing game never lose an argument, but on the other hand, none of them ever won a fight. Neither do they have any sense. In fact, next to the average professional pugilist, I can think of no one who, in the heat of combat, equals a writer for showing such magnificent self-control when it comes either to inflicting personal injury or sustaining same.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—More and more newspapers throughout the country are demanding that the President invoke the terms of the American neutrality act with respect to the war—undecided though it is—that is, on Chinese soil. These editorial expressions obviously will have considerable weight and will convince a very great number of American citizens that President Roosevelt ought to, by so doing, proclaim that Japan is the aggressor. That, in simple terms, is what a presidential announcement of application of the neutrality act would mean.

There probably has never been a brutality comparable to the unprovoked outrage which Japan is committing in China, certainly never in modern times. It is a stain upon the name of the Japanese people and the smooth working of the Japanese military machine will never be able to offset the hostility which the subjects of this Rising Sun are creating by this display of brutality.

Although the Tokyo government has yet to say it is fighting a war, the Japanese aggression in China is just as much a war as though the United States and Canada had taken up arms against each other and had proclaimed to the world that they were belligerents. The very fact that there has been no declaration of war, however, complicates the situation as regards the United States and Great Britain. Unless these nations, along with some others which have intervened, are willing to shoulder the responsibility that comes when an outside nation says openly to the world that it is at war, neither nation can afford to endanger its neutral position by saying to the world that Japan is trying to subjugate portions of China.

That is exactly what is happening. In spite of the declaration of the Japanese statement that the military machine is only protecting Japanese nationals, the whole affair may be regarded as pure hypocrisy—a movement to gain control of new resources, new land, over which the leveling millions from Japan may run as the hordes of Genghis Khan.

The whole thing shows how deep we have been fooled by the strutting and posturing of the Japanese statesmen.

You may ask: What can we do about it? The answer is exceedingly simple. It is to demand that the United States government, through the international policies that the United States has followed since the Hoover and those that are continuing under President Roosevelt.

Only once in recent years did the American government express its firmness concerning the apparent Japanese plans and on that occasion the United States gave the United States by Great Britain and France, as well as the United States, must favor China over Japan in sentiment even though it may never be voiced in an official pronouncement.

Now the patience of a great many people is wearing rather thin. I think also, from what I hear in diplomatic circles, that the British has begun to bare his teeth and unashamed his claws. Again, to what purpose I do not know, because the United States and Great Britain thus far have discussed only plans of acting in union. Certainly, without concerted action between them and including France, little can be accomplished. It does seem that they would get together because of the community of interests but either the United States lacks leadership in the circumstance, or there are some bugs under the British and French chips about which we do not know. I repeat that in the face of Japan's devastating actions and the ever-growing threat of her overlordship in the Far East, these three powers ought to work out an understanding by which they can trim the wings of the Japanese war birds.

As the fighting continues on Chinese soil as one disturbing act after another is committed by the Japanese, I imagine many persons are going to be very busy.

In that eventuality, there ought to be a clear understanding of the various implications and results that would flow from such an American action. In the first instance, Japan is not a self-sufficient nation in the matter of munitions. If we declare an embargo against shipping nations, I believe it is generally agreed the action would hurt China more than it would hurt Japan.

It would mean that Japan would be forced to rely on the supplies which the Chinese were selling to them, and the Chinese would be forced to supply the Japanese with the Chinese currency.

Further, if our President declared that he existed between Japan and China, doubtless Japan would be encouraged to declare war on China formally. In that event the Japanese immediately would establish a naval blockade of the Chinese coast.

In some quarters in Washington, one will hear arguments that the United States ought to keep its hands off the Far East situation. That school of thought takes the position that the United States is not obligated either from a moral standpoint or from the necessity of protecting American interests, to use force in putting Japan back within its own borders.

The basic reason why these thinkers argue against a firm American attitude, however, is that China never has been subjugated. China has been attacked; it has been overrun from its provinces and it is now being overrun again; but it has never been conquered. That sounds like a broad statement but history proves its truth. The Chinese through all of their thousands of years of history have managed to survive and maintain their racial characteristics and traditions. They never have sought additional territory. They have been content to do their own way as to the absorption of Western civilization slowly. In other words, the Chinese have generally allowed human nature to change at its own pace and does change through the years.

But what of other world powers? Lately, the Chinese have entered into a treaty with the Soviet Union. What of Soviet Russia by Other Powers? Which that nation participate in war against China. The treaty is simple enough and yet what is written there is only a shadow of what it means. The Soviet, while apparently not desiring to engage Japan in hostilities, is unwilling to let Japan go too far in extending her frontier. It is only a short while since Japan set up the puppet state of Manchukuo. It borders on Russian territory and the feeling along that border has been too harmonious. It seems quite likely that the Soviet will see a danger of showing to Japan the possibility of an attack from two sides if Japan forces her tentacles too far into central Asia.

Also, it ought to be mentioned that the treaty between the Soviet and China may be influential in Europe. The aid which Germany has given the aid of Japan if the Soviet moves against the island power. Besides this, the Soviet is not willing, if one may judge circumstance of the last two years, to encourage the ill will of Great Britain.

Dictator Stalin does not want to have Great Britain and France arrayed against him and he can see obviously that Great Britain and France, as well as the United States, must favor China over Japan in sentiment even though it may never be voiced in an official pronouncement.

Word comes by cable from Paris that the French government has nationalized the French railways.

Takes Over the railways in the borders of that nation. It may be that this news item will be passed over by many persons with the remark that the condition is several thousand miles across the Atlantic. It is, however, a most significant step because France, along with the United States and Great Britain, long has held to the idea that private initiative and private brains always are better than government initiative and government brains.

I call attention to this development for another reason. It happens that about three years ago members of President Roosevelt's so-called Brain Trust were planning exactly the same thing for the United States.

Strangely, the terms by which the French government, which is now completely socialist, look over the railways of France are identical with those which were under consideration by the Roosevelt Brain Trust.

It may be news to many persons to learn that the bunch of theorists who insist our government once actually drafted a bill for action by congress to nationalize the American railroads. That bill would have taken over the rail lines for their operation by the government and would have left nothing at all for the stockholders. The French radicals have done exactly that thing in nationalizing the French railroads.

It may be that "I can't happen here," but I must confess a very deep interest in the news item that has arrived for those who believe in ownership of their own money—acquired by legal means or by any means—even to the trend of world events.

Silks Most Sumptuous This Fall

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THIS fourth annual silk parade is on in country-wide pagantry and during this time your favorite stores will have an unusually wide selection of silk merchandise and the smartest new silk fashions. Plan to do your shopping for your fall wardrobe at that time when the highlights of the season will be available.

For the important evening wear, silk and metal brocades in quaint beautiful colorings or exotic tones are in high favor. These are often elaborate in texture and include silk and metal facoon as well as exquisitely colorful metal brocaded flowers. For a floating light-skirted frock, silk and metal marquisette that reminds of oriental sheers that veiled harbor beauties, is new this season.

terring sequins to match the gown. For evening there is nothing more breath taking than the colorful lacquer-printed silk satin. These feature flowers, geometrics, Indian and Persian designs, and they are very new and important. See to the left in the picture how dramatically printed satin of the glamorous type drapes to the figure.

Describing the swatches of handsome silks shown in the insert below, the one to the left is a multi-color stamp printed silk satin for evening. It will prove charming for a short-skirted young dance frock. It is also the type of silk that makes a fetching deep giraffe for a black velvet dress—which is one thing about these more elegant silks: if your allowance does not permit buying yards and yards just a mere slat of them used in a trimming way on a monochrome frock will give it an aristocratic air.

To the right is a black silk satin with self and metal facoon richly interwoven into a leaf pattern. It ranks high among silks that are done in a grand manner.

Centered in the trio of insets is a black faille with silver metal bandings, suitable for trimmings, blouses, dinner gown or evening jackets.

SEABOARD RAILWAY

WHICH would you take service from?

These two pole lines and their equipment may look identical to many people but one is old-fashioned—the other modern.

You can't see that one transformer box contains the latest type of equipment. You probably don't recognize the lightning arrester and the automatic reclosing switch. The difference in the quality and size of the wire is hardly visible from the ground.

It isn't surprising that many people think giving electric service is as simple as ABC. Electric service is just as easy. And there are the poles and lines just standing there giving the impression that all to be done is to set them up and forget about them.

The first cost is, however, far from being the last cost.

$20,000 a Month for Streamline 1937 Style Electric Service

The Florida Public Service Company spent $241,895.00 last year for the improvement of electric service. Much of this total was for new equipment to keep the system up to date. Our record of service interruptions shows that this new equipment is paying dividends in better service for you. We are constantly striving to give you a quality of electric service second to none.

The Constitution Speaks

George: When I asked Mr. Franklin to tell me about the new Constitution he said: "Why not let the Constitution speak for itself?" I wrote down as well as I could what he said. Here are copies of it for us to read. It is written in the Constitution itself, we speak.

All take turns reading

The Constitution reminds that in the people of the United States are speaking. They are telling how they wish to be governed. And so it begins. And the words: "We, the People of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

But you shall these things be done. You ask, "Through a Government divided into three branches—the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judicial—can the people own their word to do?" say the people. "Then no one official or department shall have too much power and we shall never again need to fear tyranny."

Article I: I tell how laws for the nation are to be made. Each of my sections explains the further details. Section 1: The laws are to be made by a Congress consisting of a Senate and a House of Representatives.

Section 2: The House of Representatives shall be composed of members elected for two years by the people of the States. Their number shall be based on the population of each State. A Representative shall be at least twenty-five years old, a citizen of the United States at least seven years, and a resident of the State that elects him. The House of Representatives alone may impeach a Government official. That is, it may demand that he be tried by the Senate.

Section 3: The Senate shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the Legislature of the State. A Senator must be at least thirty years old, a citizen of this country at least nine years, and a resident of the State in which he is chosen. The President of the United States shall preside over the Senate. The Senate alone shall try Government officials for crimes committed in office in impeachment trials.

Section 4: Congress shall convene on the first Monday in December unless it chooses another date.

Section 5: Each house of Congress must have its rules. I tell you what these are.

Section 6: The pay of members of Congress shall be fixed by law; members of Congress shall not be subject to arrest except in cases of offenses, nor shall they hold any other Government office while they are members of Congress.

Section 7: All bills for raising revenue shall start in the House of Representatives, but the Senate must act on them also. I explain how bills become laws. If a law, a bill must be passed by both Houses of Congress and must be signed by the President. If the President vetoes a bill, it may still become a law provided each House passes it again by a two-thirds vote.

Section 8: What powers shall the people give to Congress? I name them. The principal ones are: To collect taxes; to pay the nation's debts; to provide for the general welfare of the United States; to borrow money; to coin and regulate the value of money; to regulate commerce with foreign nations and between States; to establish post offices and provide for the carrying of the mail; to promote science and useful arts by granting patents to inventors and copyrights to authors; to declare war; to maintain an army and a navy; to organize the State militia (citizen soldiers) and to call on it when needed; to govern the District in which the seat of government is located as well as Indian reservations, national parks, yards, forts, etc.; and to make all laws that may be necessary and proper for carrying into effect the powers and the other powers mentioned in effect.

Section 9: There are some powers that the people shall not give to Congress to have. They do not, for instance, want Congress to have the power to take away their right to a fair trial or their right to know under what charge they have been arrested. I forbid Congress to do these things. I also forbid it to tax one State more heavily than another; to place a tax, or duty, on any article exported from any State; to draw money from the United States Treasury by passing a law stating what will be used; or to give titles of nobility.

Section 10: I state the powers to the States. They may make treaties or alliances with one another or with foreign countries; coin money; make laws making contracts (agreements) with; place taxes, or duties, on exports or imports; or engage in war without the consent of Congress, unless in Article II: I tell how the laws made by the Legislature branch of the Government shall be carried out by the Executive branch, and by the heads of the Government. The President and the Vice President shall be chosen. See how each of my sections does its part.

Section 1: The President and the Vice President shall be elected for a term of four years by electors chosen by the people of each State. Any person who has been born in this country, who is at least 35 years old, and who has lived in this country at least 14 years, may be elected President. The President shall speak to you again and tell you what these are:

Section 2 and 3: We name the duties and powers that the people of the United States wish the President to have. He shall be Commander in Chief of the army and of the navy. He may ask the heads of the Executive departments for their opinions on any matters relating to their work. He shall approve or veto laws. He shall make treaties, shall appoint ambassadors, and shall select judges of the Supreme Court and of the lower Federal courts. He shall also appoint other Government officials and shall commission military officers of the United States. He shall pardon for offenses against the United States. From time to time, he may remove from office any official of the state of the Union and shall recommend that it consider certain measures that he thinks necessary.

Section 4: The President, the Vice President, Justices of the Supreme Court, judges of the other Federal courts, and all other officers and other civil officers of the United States (but not members of Congress) may be impeached and removed from office if found guilty of wrong conduct. Their trial shall be conducted by the Senate.

Section 5: I tell the questions about the laws passed by the Congress shall be decided by the Judicial branch of the United States Government.

Section 1: There shall be one Supreme Court and such Federal courts as Congress may establish. We at least thirty years old, a citizen of this country at least nine years, and a resident of the State in which he is chosen. The President of the United States shall preside over the Senate. The Senate alone shall try Government officials for crimes committed in office in impeachment trials.

Section 2: Congress shall convene on the first Monday in December unless it chooses another date.

Section 3: Each house of Congress must have its rules. I tell you what these are.

Section 4: Congress shall convene on the first Monday in December unless it chooses another date.

Section 5: Each house of Congress must have its rules. I tell you what these are.

Section 6: The pay of members of Congress shall be fixed by law; members of Congress shall not be subject to arrest except in cases of offenses, nor shall they hold any other Government office while they are members of Congress.

have just enacted the above drama and are about to enact Part II. Pupil: One hundred and fifty years have passed and today the American people, now numbering 128,000,000 people, is celebrating the sesquicentennial of the signing of the Constitution at Washington, D. C. The President, the Vice President, and the other members of the Constitution could be here to see how well the people have worked out the government. We have become a prosperous, happy, and free nation. As the years have passed, the people have changed the Constitution to meet the needs of the times. It speaks to you again and tell you what these are:

The Constitution speaks again. If the local can with the best team they will be off to a flying start. Coach Wagner feels that with this non-conference game under way, the team in the line-up for the conference games to follow can be made in time to place the full strength on the field against Brewster and Lake Wales on the local field the two successive week ends.

The largest number of boys yet to report for this season's practice reported Thursday as additional new equipment came in and was checked out. The forty-three boys are now in uniform. The squad was divided into two squads, A and B, Thursday for the purpose of giving beginning training to the new arrivals. As some of the boys in the B squad developed and got into condition they will be shifted into the A squad and some of the A squad probably will be displaced. Assistant Coach Smith is in charge of the B team while Coach Wagner is devoting full time to developing a team to start against Ft. Pierce Friday night.

The A team is beginning to show some form but no positions have definitely been won. At left end, T. J. Smith is the best player. He is aggressive, but his property defense. Left guard Jimmie Ward, centering Helm and right guard, but his property defense. Center seems to be the chief weakness and it is one of the key positions on the team. Todd holds a slight edge, but Carney, who is fighting, may get the call. At the tackle, the Wild boys have the call in size and fight but Henry might be the better player. The back in the event the position fails to develop properly. Odell Skipper is contesting for one tackle while at right guard, Carney and Covington are contesting and Covington shows lack of practice. Right end, Dick Sherman holding court but he may be brought up to relieve him. In the backfield, better blocking must be found. Lynn and Meriwether and for right guard, but they are fighting it out. Lynn and Meriwether have the speed while Foster is at present in the blocking position.

Hard work is in store for the football team the early part of next week with tapering off from Wednesday on to the night of the game.

Payments to Aged By Welfare Board Growing Rapidly

Jacksonville, Sept. 16.—(FNS)—The State Welfare Board hopes to complete investigations of approximately 25,000 pending applications for old age assistance within the next six months, according to Clayton C. Cordington, state welfare commissioner. District staffs have been instructed to speed up investigations "right of way" insofar as possible, the commissioner added, in order that eligible persons may be paid on the rolls as soon as possible.

Much of the time which elapses between the filing of application and the making of a name on the rolls is due to the necessity for assembling the type of proof, as to age and residence, as will be accepted by auditors of the Social Security Board, Mr. Cordington declared. A periodic check of all cases is made by federal auditors and federal funds are disallowed on cases which do not meet requirements.

Old age assistance payments jumped from approximately $125,000 in July to slightly more than $170,000 in August and indications are that September payments will be in excess of $200,000, the commissioner said.

District boards will hold meetings before September 18 to certify new cases for September payments, it was announced.

First Grapefruit Of Season Sold For $3 in Baltimore

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 16.—(Special)—The first carload of Florida grapefruit of the season, shipped from Palmetto, Fla., was sold today in Baltimore for $3 a bushel, according to the Baltimore Exchange Friday (Sept. 16), and was taken readily by the trade at prices ranging from $2 to $3.50.

Red Devils Play First Game Friday With Fort Pierce

The Avon Park Red Devils are swinging into their last week of preseason practice before their opening game with the Fighting Eagles of Ft. Pierce. Thirty-one boys are now reporting for practice. The team is getting better and better. The Avon Park grid team opens their 1937 season on their home field entertaining Ft. Pierce of the S. E. Conference. Ft. Pierce will bring over a fast team but probably will be lighter than the Avon Park team. If the locals can with the best team they will be off to a flying start. Coach Wagner feels that with this non-conference game under way, the team in the line-up for the conference games to follow can be made in time to place the full strength on the field against Brewster and Lake Wales on the local field the two successive week ends.

STATE FRUIT CROPS FAR BELOW AVERAGE

Early Shippers of Grapefruit Get Poor Reception In New York

Washington, Sept. 16.—If estimates by the Agricultural Department are correct, Florida orange and grapefruit crop outlook as of September 1 is below the ten year average.

The orange condition was stated to be 75 percent compared with the ten year average of 79 percent, while the grapefruit condition was given as 51 percent against a ten year average of 79 percent.

The September 1 condition in California for oranges is given at 74 percent with a ten year average of 80 percent. California grapefruit reported as "only fair."

Texas grapefruit crop was reported to be below that of a year ago but better than the previous two years.

An orange picture indicates a somewhat larger orange crop for the season now opening, due to the fact that California's crop was curtailed this year by heavy losses from cold.

Lakeland.—The question of whether the juice standard in the maturity test for grapefruit should be raised or lowered for the current season, as the standard has been raised in the Florida Citrus Commission this week.

Under the state law, the commission is empowered to raise or lower the required juice content of grapefruit as much as ten percent if abnormal seasonal conditions exist.

The first carload of Florida grapefruit shipped to the New York market last week was reported to have appeared but poor eating quality.

The average price paid by auctioneers for the crop was $3.76 with a top for choice of $4.35. The shipment was from Wabasso on the Indian River.

On September 12, 23 cars of Florida grapefruit have been shipped, compared with 121 cars for the corresponding date last year.

Melons, peaches, and other fruits, are still plentiful on eastern markets and little activity is expected on grapefruit at this time because of the poor eating quality of fruit arriving. If too much green fruit is shipped at this time it will hurt markets for several weeks and it is hoped no effort will be made to flood the market.

Huge Crowds Throng Florida Exhibit

Cleveland, Sept. 16.—The largest week-end attendance at Florida Manor during Great Lakes Exposition history was reached during the recent Labor Day holiday with a two-day record of more than 102,500 visitors in the grounds.

Storming exhibition gates before opening time today drew more than 100,000 visitors in during the day, making a crowd of only 768 persons less than the largest day's attendance for the 1927 holiday.

Performance was repeated Monday with 87,000 guests; and both days a solid stream of visitors flowed through wide doors of the Florida Exhibit from morning until late at night.

Something from Florida to eat sent visitors flocking to the exhibit to send the folks home seems to have been the primary thought of these thousands of visitors, as according to the members who handled the throngs.

During the two days, 1400 gallons of Florida orange and grapefruit followed a close second according to reports from the juice bars maintained in the manor house.

Familiarization of potential northern buyers with Florida food, decorative and other products during the holidays was afforded one of the best opportunities in the history of the exhibit, say heads of merchandising departments.

Shell lamps, shell ash trays and novelties, coconuts, limes, blossoms preserved, crystallized fruits, jellies and preserves, soups, boxes of Tampa cigars, and other articles for sale to get souvenir and gift seekers.

"Merchandising of Florida food, fruit, and novelty products made possible the success of the exhibit in doing much to open up new markets for Florida manufacturers," says Curtis Penney, head of the exhibit's merchandising department. "Sample sizes of products new to them," continues Mr. Penney, "for which visitors are glad to pay a small price, are directly creating demand in this area. Much of these goods are sold on a cost basis and in some instances at an actual loss in order to get them introduced in northern markets. We have many daily inquiries, both personally and by mail, as to where our various products can be purchased, both for private and merchandising purposes."
