"Death Fog"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, the Vikings of old used to sail the seas in oared galleys that were hardly bigger than the motor cruisers in which we plough through our lakes and rivers today. I'll give them a lot of credit for their nerve. But they had oars to row with and sails to carry them along. They knew where they were going and they had a pretty good chance of getting there. I'm betting a lot that there wasn't a Viking in any age who would have put himself in the spot Pete Gear of Sunnyside, L. I., found himself in. Not for any amount of money.

It happened in September, 1927—and here's how. Pete got a job on a coal barge. And one of the first trips that barge was sent on after Pete joined the crew, was a low out to sea with a load of coal for a ship that was to meet them a hundred and ninety-five miles out in the Atlantic.

The rendezvous at which they were to meet was southeast of Block Island. A tug was to take the barge out. Five men composed the barge's crew. Four of these fellows—Pete included—had never been out to sea before. The fifth man was a regular sea-going bargeman.

They Couldn't Find the Boat.

On the afternoon of the day appointed, the tug came along and the barge was hooked on behind it. Pete says the trip up Long Island sound was like a moonlight excursion. But after they passed Montauk point, the sea was mighty rough. The four landlubbers immediately got seasick.

It was a hard night for those lads—but it was going to be a lot harder before they got back. The next day, when they arrived at the appointed spot, there was no sign of the boat they had come to meet. The tugboat captain told the bargeman to drop anchor and he would circle around and see if he could find the other boat. He cast off the tow line and the tug steamed away. Soth it was out of sight. There was nothing in sight, as a matter of fact, but water and more water. They were nearly two hundred miles from the nearest land. Then, half an hour later, a thick fog settled down over the anchored barge.

Anchored in the Shipping Lane.

Says Pete: "We were lying in our bunks, too sick to move, when the regular bargeman came in and told us about the fog. He explained that we were anchored in the shipping lane, and that was a dangerous position."

Pete Yanked Away On That Bell.

tion. We would have to keep the fog bell ringing as long as the fog lasted. Otherwise we would most likely be run down by one of the liners which were continually passing through that part of the ocean."

And that was only the beginning. The troubles crowded thick and fast after that. It was night now, and the bargeman went about to hang a riding light. He was hardly up there when he fell to the deck and lay still, his leg broken. "Then," says Pete, "the nightmare began."

Pete Had to Keep Ringing the Bell.

Pete picked him up and carried him to his bunk. The other three men were still lying in their bunks, the ghastly pallor of seasickness on their faces. When he had done what little he could for the injured man, Pete went out and started ringing the fog bell.

The night wore on, and the fog showed no sign of lifting. Pete yanked away rhythmically on that bell, telling a monotonous dirge. His arm was getting tired. His hand was shaking from its constant contact with the bell rope. Every minute he expected to see the bow of an ocean liner looming over the barge. Every minute he expected to hear a thud and a crash of splintering timbers as some huge craft cut them in two.

Pete began to feel that he couldn't hold his arm up to pull that bell rope any longer. He went into the cabin and tried to rouse one of the seasick men. Not one of them would get up. Pete was seasick himself, but these fellows felt a lot worse. In vain he told them of the dangers of leaving that bell unmanned. They didn't care whether the barge went down or not. In fact, one or two of them hoped it would.

Pete dragged himself back to the bell. He was sick—sleepy—aching. But he couldn't quit. His life depended on it. And so did the lives of those other four men in their bunks. Dawn came, and still he was jerking away on that rope. Still the fog hadn't lifted. All morning long—all afternoon—he stuck to his post. Both his hands were so raw now that he had to hook his elbow through the bell rope and pull it with his arm.

Night came—and still Pete was at it. His whole body was stiff now. He ached in every muscle and joint and bone. His arm was working mechanically now. He scarcely realized that he was pulling that cord.

And for TWO NIGHTS AND A DAY Peter rang that bell. Never will he forget the nightmare of that experience. On the morning of the third day he couldn't take it any longer. He didn't quit. He just fell asleep—right where he was—from sheer exhaustion.

Found by an Airplane.

When Pete awoke again the sun was just disappearing over the western horizon. But the fog had lifted. There was no sign of the tug. When the fog came down it had been unable to find the barge—and it still hadn't found it.

All that third night they waited. On the fourth day Pete sighted a plane. It circled around in the skies and then headed back toward land again. "When it turned around," says Pete, "I thought that pilot hadn't seen us." But the plane had spotted the barge. It had been sent out from New London for that very purpose. And on the fifth day the tug boat came out and reclaimed its lost tow.

It didn't take Pete long to get over the effects of his adventure. Now he looks back on it as quite an exciting experience. There's one thing, though, that makes Pete mad. He worked himself to exhaustion, trying to keep some vessel from meeting that barge to the bottom. "But in all that time," he says, "I didn't see a single one of those big liners that I was in such fear of."

Where Yale Is Buried

All around the Welsh village of Bryn-Eglwys, writes H. V. Morton in "In Search of Wales," lies property which once belonged to the Yale family, one of whom, Ellyn, died so much toward founding Yale university. Ellyn lies buried, however, not in the Yale chapel attached to the church of Bryn-Eglwys, but at Wrexham, ten miles away. Both places are much visited by Americans traveling in Wales.

Spelling "Coconut"

The people of Trinidad spell coconut without an "a"—that is, cocon. The original derivation comes from the Spanish word "cocon" applied to a monkey's face, the three eyes on the nut giving it the appearance of a monkey's face, the lower eye seeming to resemble a mouth. The coconut tree, here to within a few feet of the tangle-line top, is the only tree to resemble a monkey in the West Indies. The trade winds keep it always waving.

British Demand Indemnity for Jap Bombs

Demand for full satisfaction for the bombing of H. M. S. Ladybird, British gunboat which was damaged during the Japanese airplane bombardment of the U. S. S. Panay, has been made by the British government. Photograph shows the shrapnel-scattered vessel. An earlier "explanation" was rejected by the British cabinet and a blunt demand was made that a full explanation and indemnity be forthcoming.

Carbo Enjoys Stay in Sweden

Greta Garbo, the screen's number one glamour girl, is shown at her home at Gothenburg, Sweden, where she is spending a vacation

Simple or Sophisticated?

A PRETTY girl is like a melody and her frock is the swing in it that makes you remember her—and never lets you forget. Sew-Your-Own puts that "remember me" ingredient into all frocks, from its simple all-occasion models to its more exclusive fashionists. You, Milady, have an exceptional opportunity today to choose an engaging frock from this taking trio. Just send for your pattern and Sew-Your-Own will do the rest—see you through every step to a happy, successful finish, or, in other words, to a thrilling frock fortified with much "Remember me."

Five Shipshape Pieces. Start your day in an attractive morning frock if you would leave a bright all-day impression on the family. Sew-Your-Own suggests the new, young-looking dress at the left for creating a really lasting impression. It will impress you, too, for the five pieces fit together so effortlessly and produce such shipshape style that you'll be not only pleased but thrilled. Gingham, percale, or seersucker is the material suggested for this popular frock.

Exclusive Looking. A beautifully styled frock that will lend a festive feeling and a note of glamour to every occasion is the smart new piece, above center. It is modern in line, gracious of detail, and flattering beyond belief. The new tucked skirt looks important, yes, even exclusive, but happily for you, Milady, it's as easy to sew as any you've done. Note the little button trim and youthful collar and cuffs to add that telling touch of good taste. Make a copy for now in satin or silk crepe.

Come-Get-Me Look. Winter is here, but Spring is packaged up for an early delivery, which would behoove the fastidious young woman to now turn her gentle thoughts to the problem of what-to-wear. The slimwaisted model, above right, should set one straight, both in matters of thoughts and actions, for it has that come-and-get-me look that's so typical of the modern Sew-Your-Own. The "act" of sewing is most simplified in this little number, as the seven pieces and the cut-away diagram clearly illustrate. Make this frock in duplicate for your complete chic and resistance to clothes worries.

The Patterns. Pattern 1431 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4 3/4 yards of 35-inch material. The collar in contrast requires 5/8 of a yard.

Pattern 1436 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 3 3/4 yards of 30-inch material, plus 5/8 yard contrasting. With long sleeves 3 3/4 yards are required.

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if a cold is not cleared up. Calotabs help nature throw off a cold. First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the virus-laden mucus and toxins. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds. Calotabs are quite economical, only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package.—(adv.)

THE FOLLY OF WAR

Now that the air is full of war talk, the following, written by Francis Doolan, in Newsworld, seems very appropriate:

"Remember the last war and what fools we were to enter it. Go to your nearest library and get the Congressional Record for April, 1917. Read the debate on President Wilson's request for war. "Those farsighted congressmen who objected so strenuously were indeed statesmen and prophets. Then they were called slackers. Today they are heroes. They predicted almost to a word what history later proved to be true. They were interested in their mothers, wives, sweethearts and sons. They were interested in the American tax payer and the country. They were not interested in selfish groups. "Why doesn't the state department reveal the secret correspondence between Washington and England and between England and the House of Morgan during the World War period? It's dynamite. It is correspondence that will prove conclusively how England took us for a tragic ride."

Highland Lakes Golf Course Now In Playing Form

The golf course connected with the Highland Lakes Hotel is opening with nine holes in excellent condition for play, Joseph H. Swan, said this week. Very reasonable fees will be in effect and attractive rates will be made for parties to play and also enjoy lunch at the hotel.

Swan will also be in position to give instruction to anyone seeking his advice, both beginners and mature players and also, every week in this paper will have something of interest on different aspects of the game. This week Swan says:

I find that most beginners or novices take up the game of golf with the thought in mind that all they have to do is chop upon their power to slam that little white ball far down the fairway. Of course there is more to it than that. Golf is a science.

A great deal of golf is mental. I would say about 80% is on the mental side. However, before the mental complications come, there is one very important detail that presents itself, that is, the grip. Gene Sarazen maintains that the proper grip is the most important qualification in golf. I do agree with him that there is nothing more important, but there is a great deal more to it than that.

I recommend the use of the Vardon Overlapping Grip. It is used by 90% of the Professional Golfers. Today I will describe the Vardon Overlapping Grip so that you can get started on the first step toward a good golf swing and consequently a good golf game.

The club is taken first with the left hand on the shaft, placing the flat surface of the thumb on the top center of the shaft. The right hand is placed just below the left with the flat surface of the thumb on the left top center of the shaft. Move the right hand up close to the left until the little finger of the right hand fits over or overlaps the index finger of the left hand. This is done to permit the hands to work as a combination, to work as one. The palms of the hands should now be facing each other. The right should be facing toward the cup.

I might add that if you have trouble using this grip, it is just as important that you practice it, as it is that you practice any other difficulty in your game. A pianist insists upon a pupil placing his hands on the keyboard properly before he plays a note. It should be the same in golf. Learn the proper grip before you even take that club back over your shoulder.

Most every golfer thinks of one or a dozen things when he approaches the ball. If you have ever wondered just what is in the mind of a professional golfer or major champion at such a time may learn by reading this column next week.

Turtle Catching Jobs Go Begging

Tampa, Jan. 13, (FNS) — Does anyone want a job catching turtles?

Russell Kay, secretary of the Florida State Press Association, received a cry for help from a Cleveland, Ohio, company which sells hand painted decorated baby turtles stating that it had placed ads in a couple of Florida papers for turtle catchers but had not received a single response and asking for his assistance.

According to this hand-painting-baby-turtle-decorating company, there are plenty of baby turtles in Florida, but that all the potential baby turtle catchers are on relief and can't be interested into invading the turtle lairs in search of material for the marts of decorated turtle trade.

Here is a chance for some patriotic Floridians with turtle catching instincts to build up the commerce of the state, answer an appeal for aid from a sister state, add to the nation's art wealth and incidentally garner a few shekels for grift.

FORD OFFERS TWO NEW CARS and keeps their PRICES LOW

Right—the Standard Ford Sedan 60 or 65 horsepower
Below—the De Luxe Ford Sedan 85 horsepower

THERE are two new Ford cars for 1938—the De Luxe and the Standard—differing in appearance, appointments and price—but built on the same dependable Ford chassis.

Both bring you the basic advantages of a V-type 8-cylinder power-plant—smooth performance and compact design. The De Luxe Ford has the 85-horsepower engine. The Standard Ford provides a choice of 85 or 60 horsepower.

Both new cars are economical to operate. The Standard, with thrifty "60" engine, costs less to run than any other Ford car ever built.

And both new cars are priced low. Low price, like economy, is a Ford tradition. Ford founded the low-price field 30 years ago and keeps Ford prices low.

The De Luxe Ford costs slightly more than the Standard Ford, but provides more style with extra room in the closed sedans. Both cars, in proportion to price, represent unusual values. Both are built to the same high standard of mechanical excellence. There's a dealer near you.

People in New Bedford, Massachusetts Viewing Florida Window Display

Here's a Persuasive Combination Suggesting Florida

Last week our Florida window display moved from Somerville, Massachusetts, to New Bedford, Massachusetts, a city of over 100,000 people, in the centrally located office of the New Bedford Gas & Edison Light Company at 693 Purchase Street, the summer warmth and charm of Florida are vividly portrayed while outside frigid breezes and cold gray skies are in direct contrast. It's a persuasive combination suggesting a winter visit to the Florida communities served by the Florida Public Service Company.

DEVILS TO TRY HORNETS HERE IN RIDGE DUEL

ENCOURAGED BY RECENT SUCCESS, CAGERS
FEEL PEPPY

After running up a score that exceeded the last victory mark against the Brewster Tigers Monday night, the Red Devils will attempt to take the sting out of the Haines City Hornets on the local court tonight.

The girls' sextet will take the court at 7:30 against the Haines City girls and try to ring up another victory such as they handed the Brewster team Monday night.

"The Hornets have the best team in several years," state some of the spectators who have seen the Hornets play this year. The Hornets, trimmed the Brewster team on the latter's home court.

Besides their close victory over the Tigers, they also trimmed the Plant City Planters, coach Blum's team by a score of 24 to 19.

The Devils have gone through three stiff practices for this game since Monday.

"You boys have a tough conference game," stated Coach Arthur Wagner, "but with your hard playing, I think we will come out on the good end of the game."

The starting line-up for the girls' team will be: forwards—Nancy Betts, Mary Jane Sundstrom and Marian Wever; guards—Jean Carroll, Nell Rutledge and Jane Hart.

The line-up for the boys' team will be: forwards—Ed Touchton and Earle Lynn; center—Eugene Jordan; guards—Eugene Martin and C. W. McCrewe.

"Twelfth Night" Will Be Given January 20

One of Shakespeare's best comedies, "Twelfth Night," will be presented in the Avon Park high school auditorium Thursday night, January 20, by the Federal Theatre players.

Two tangled love affairs furnish the main plot for this comedy. The main complication in the plot arises when the young Olivia falls in love with another young lady who is disguised as a man.

This furnishes laughter for all those who see it.

"High comedy," remarks Chester Yale, English instructor, "is developed by two minor characters in the story. These characters are Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Aguecheek who are practical jokers and perpetual asses."

This play, though full of the author's puns and hilarious scenes, still has literary and dramatic merit of the highest with great beauty and poetic purity in its verse.

For those who are enthusiastic followers of Shakespeare and the who wish to become better acquainted with him, this play offers a priceless opportunity.

Besides Earle Lynn who is the other star athlete who falls for every new girl who comes to dear old A. P. H. S. You needn't worry Earle, you're in the lead. Henry Wild and James Ward seem to be doing well with the Sebring feminine department. Hold 'em down boys.

Clarence Wild, tall, dark, and ugly junior perk-up, seems to be having a hard time trying to get to school on time. Keep trying, you will make it some day.

Watch out Coach, Ray Mathis is trying to jump you for your job. Keep trying Ray.

Juniors Will Give Play February 10

Members of the junior class, under the instruction of Miss Erres Arant, are planning to put on a three act play instead of a one act play, as they have been presenting in past years. They are as follows: "The White Phantom," a mystery play, by Wilbur Braun; "Emile," a comedy, by Beatrice Hamilton McNeil; "The Front Door," a dramatic play, by Barbara Busse.

The characters for the three plays will consist of twenty-one actors. The other members of the class will be used on costumes, property, programs, scenery and stage committees. James Jordan has charge of the advertising and ticket sales. Edgar Lewis Smith has charge of the line painting.

The juniors are trying to save some money by letting the boys of the class paper the scenery themselves. They meet Saturday morning for this purpose.

Miss Iva Phillips is working on the entertainment that is going to be used between acts.

Miss Erres Arant has stated that there will be prizes for the person selling the most tickets for the play, February 10.

A TREMENDOUS TROOP

From a single good turn done in 1917 by an unknown English Scout in England to the present date, scouting has been marching on to the tune of over seven million Scouts.

We see that if numbers mean anything, scouting is becoming a tremendous organization, and also a worthwhile organization.

"Why?" you say. What is scouting; what does a boy see in it; what good does it do him; how can it ever help him?

A boy joins the scouts because of the thrill of out-door life, the hope of romance, the prospect of making and doing things with his own hands, and helping others to lead a clean life. We see from these things, that a Scout really must have a good time, and at the same time may help others.

More is done by the scouts than camping and doing turns, however. He may work for merit badges, of which there are over a hundred. These badges cover almost every walk of life. When a Scout meets the requirements of 21 of these he is made an Eagle Scout, the rank of which is equal to a two-year college course in any Civil Service examination. Working for merit badges holds tremendous possibilities, particularly if one attains the rank of Eagle Scout. We think that it is an excellent chance for a boy who thinks that he may be unable to go to college.

All red-blooded American boys should jump at the chance to enter into the ranks of this symbol of healthy young American manhood!

BURDEN IS LIGHTENED

Twelve additional students have been selected to serve as members of the student council of the Avon Park high school.

The council became involved in work which it was unable to cope with in its regular capacity. This is the reason for its new members.

Everyone tells us that the council has been doing a remarkable amount of work this year. Their work must not be judged wholly by the amount, however. Whatever the council does, whether in a small or large way, is done in the spirit of trying to do something for the good of the school.

The new members may well follow in the footsteps of the older members. Responsibility is sometimes hard to bear, but we feel confident that the new members of the council will not stagger under the load.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

Lincoln Library, A Reference Book.

The Lincoln Library is considered one of the most outstanding encyclopedias on the market. For persons unable to purchase one of the larger encyclopedias such as the Americana, New International or Britannica the Lincoln Library is much to be preferred.

This book is found to be dependable, concise, and easy to use because of a full index.

The Lincoln Library is an adult reference book, and while very valuable in its field, should not be considered by parents interested in purchasing books for children's recreational reading. It cannot be considered in the same class with Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia.

The World Book or the Book of Knowledge, which are recreational encyclopedias, written at a child's level of understanding.

At last the journalism class has found that they have a few readers of the school news.

Students Rebuild Armory Benches

The benches in the New Armory are being enlarged to increase the "foot room" for the people who will sit on the top-most seats. This addition will allow the persons sitting on the lower benches more room, and will approximately increase the seating capacity from 250 to 350.

Work was begun last Friday by Coach Arthur Wagner, instructor in the vocational department, and the fourth period work-working class. On Saturday the work was continued by Coach Wagner, D. D. Smith, Odell Skipper, Francis Skipper, Billy Meriwether and Walter Ward.

Coach Wagner says he regrets the seats were incomplete for the Brewster game, but they will be ready for tonight's game.

Eight Grade Sec. 1 Composes Poetry

Poetry! Poetry! You wouldn't believe it but the eighth grade, section 1, boys and girls have fooled you by writing poetry.

They put every tiny might of their brains together and wrote 93 poems which they have made into a book.

Each student is represented in the book by one or more poems.

The book is dedicated to the eighth grade of 1938-39. To make the person know what to expect before he begins to read the poems they put this on the fly-leaf:

The letters on our book are "scrap" There's a reason, we admit: They're made to match the bits of rhyme We've written and put into it.

Dr. A. C. Elliott, pastor of the Congregational church, led the devotional exercises in chapel Wednesday morning.

News Booklet Made From Daily Papers

Mrs. Virginia Cloud's third grade has started a reading project. Each member of the class brings news items from the daily newspapers.

Mrs. Cloud is planning to have the pupils make a booklet of this material. Roland Dilley, Charlotte Marr, and Pauline Gillard are the pupils who brought in the most interesting news items during the past week.

Instructor Roberts Orders New Music

Mr. E. L. Roberts, music instructor, has ordered the following music for the mixed grade club: "Give A Man A Horse He Can Ride," by Geoffrey O'Hara; "Country Gardens," by William Rieggier; "Looking For The Last Chord," by Ellen Jane Larran; "Dark On The Prairie," by Zdenko Fibrich.

This music is expected to be here in a few days.

Dot. McNicholas Has Appendix Operation

Dorothy McNicholas was taken to Weems hospital, Sunday evening about 9 o'clock for a major operation for appendicitis.

She complained about her side hurting Sunday afternoon and later, found she had to have her appendix removed.

Dr. H. V. Weems, of Sebring, performed the operation, with the assistance of local Doctors.

A late report was received, saying she was improving and doing fine.

Four New Pupils Enter School Here

Four new pupils entered school here. They are: Beatrice and Lorraine Barrett, of Portland, Maine, 11th and 10th grade; Ophelia Dean of Gainesville, Ga., 10th grade; Juanita Mott of Wauchula, Fla., 5th grade.

Everyone attending the performance of the two wonder workers will be given free, a complete personal interview.

New Vestry For Episcopal Church

The Episcopal church of the Redeemer held its annual parish meeting on Monday evening at 6:30. After an enjoyable supper served by the members of St. Margaret Guild, the Rev. Richard L. Brown reviewed the accomplishments of the past year, and stated that prospects are even brighter for the present year. He reminded the members that the 40th anniversary of the consecration of the church occurs in March and said that he hoped it would be observed by fitting ceremonies.

A new vestry to serve for 1938 was announced, consisting of M. V. Pilcher, senior warden, Philip Boardman, junior warden, W. M. Reck, secretary, F. M. Smith, treasurer and S. S. Thayer.
