

GOLDEN PHANTOMS

Fascinating Tales of Lost Mines

By Edith L. Watson

LOST DUTCHMAN MINE

TO SHIRERS concerning golden phantoms would be complete without a story about the famous Lost Dutchman mine. In fact, a book might be written about it, because in the century that has elapsed since its discovery legends have sprung up about it that would furnish a volume of interesting—and often exciting—even blood-curdling—reading.

The very location of the mine is unusual. It lies somewhere in Superstition mountain, that great, picturesque labyrinth which stands out of the desert forty miles from Phoenix, Ariz.

Yet, somewhere among these hiding-places where anything beautiful, gruesome, or strange might be concealed, at least one person lives. Who it is, how he manages to exist, what he knows of the secrets of Superstition, and why he is alone can answer. But there he is, self-constituted guardian of the mountain. He is armed, and those who venture near his place of concealment realize that fact very soon, though all of them have not lived to warn others.

1549 is nearly a century ago. It was in 1549 that a young Mexican, Carlos, the illegitimate son of Don Miguel Penalo, fled from his father's wrath up into the winding ways of Superstition. He was followed by two Indians who had orders to bring him back, but at last, after many weeks had passed, only one returned.

This Indian had much to tell. Carlos had discovered one of the incredible riches, and had started for home with the news, hoping to soften his father's heart. One of the Indian mountain foods which sometimes catch wayfarers had swept him away, however, before he had come far, and with him had gone the other Indian and the horses. Carlos had lived only long enough to tell the survivor his story, and to point out the location of the mine.

The Indian was able to show Don Miguel the place, and the old don worked the mine for five years, becoming rich from its proceeds. Then the United States became the owner of all that territory, and Don Miguel decided to start one last enormous expedition, to take out all the gold possible, and then to retire gracefully. Four hundred men, accordingly, and a thousand mules, were sent to the mine.

There were Apaches in the region in those days, as soldiers of a later generation could relate. The Mexicans were unable to stand against them. Only two boys crawled away and managed to keep out of sight. All the rest perished.

Carlos gave the mine its first bloody baptism; the four hundred miners wrote the second chapter with their gore. But that was only the start of the story.

Several years later a German prospector named Jacob Wals lost his way among the twisted canyons of the eerie mountain. Wandering about without any idea where he was going, he finally stumbled onto a camp where three Mexicans received him with native hospitality and gave him food and water. Two of the men were the boys who had escaped from the Apache raid; the other was a companion who was to share their labor and their riches. They were working a wonderful mine, they told Wals.

The German pretended to be remarkably ignorant of such things as mines. He acted indifferent, but he looked and listened avidly, and watched for a chance to do something that should make the mine his—alone. The chance came; he caught up his rifle and fired three times. The third cartridge chamber was written.

And now, having gained sole possession of the golden secret, the "Dutchman" did a characteristic thing: he gathered up a load of nuggets, took them to Phoenix, grew garrulously drunk, and told all.

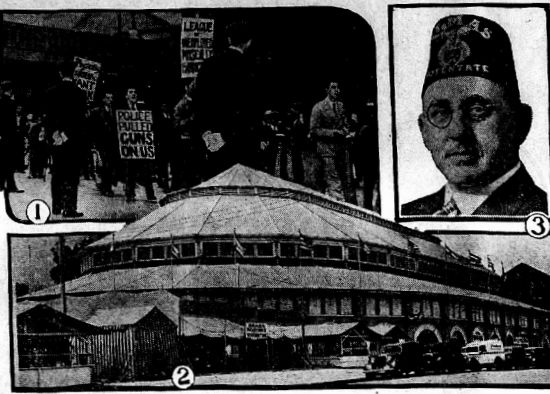

Naturally, every one wanted to know where—when—how. This he would not tell. The mystery pleased him. The fatality excited him. But when anyone tried to follow, he became a stubborn old fellow who would not lead.

Even murder did not keep back the increasing number who tried to trail Wals to the mine. He began to feel worried; what if some one should find it? The only safe thing was to hide the place so thoroughly that no one would know where it was. He covered the opening with logs and concealed them with rocks. So he went to Phoenix, and there he grew ill and died.

As he felt himself going, the old man tried to tell a friend about the mine. He gave him a lot of hints, and tried to describe where they came from, but who can describe one place in that mysterious mountain and be understood?

The friend spent the rest of his life hunting the place. His son is carrying on the search, and so are the hundreds of others. But the mine remains hidden.

Midwest Opens 1936 Campaign

First shots in the 1936 campaign were fired by 5,000 Mid-West Republicans gathered at Springfield, Ill., in a "grass roots" conference, which they think sounded the keynote of the G. O. P. 1936 fight for the Presidency.

"Save the Constitution and democratic government in America," was the prevailing theme from the opening keynote of Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois. With this as a basis, the delegates declared they have formulated an expression of Midwest thought.

At Excelsior Springs, Mo., James Roosevelt, son of the President, departed from a prepared address to charge that the Republican party is dead and that the Springfield convention "is looking for the body." The Republicans are seeking to raise a false issue in the Constitution, Roosevelt said.

Republican leaders, however, assert that the Constitution will be the leading issue of the Presidential campaign, and that New Deal principles will be repudiated by the voters. Only time can tell which is right.

Children of "Pioneers" Already Play Baseball

Living in a wilderness does not deter the future Babe Ruths and Dixie Denaas from playing the grand old game of baseball. No sooner had their pioneer fathers and mothers erected the tent city of Palmer in Alaska than the children of the group had laid out a diamond and begun to play baseball. The children are part of the party of pioneers who recently went to the fertile Matanuska valley in Alaska where they will seek to establish new homes. The government is financing them in their move from unproductive farms to the north country. Not all of Alaska is the dreary Arctic region one usually imagines. The climate is not much different from that in our northern states, and since most of these came from this section of the country, they should suffer no undue hardships. Reports from Palmer indicate that these people have already begun breaking soil for their new crops.

CLEAN BROODER IS CHICK INSURANCE

Sanitary Quarters a Safe-guard Against Disease.

By Roy E. Desautels, Head Poultry Department, North Carolina State College.

Protecting baby chicks from coccidiosis will go a long way toward reducing their death rate. The chicks are infected by picking up the tiny eggs of the parasite which causes the disease. The eggs are frequently found on the ground and in the brooder houses when older birds of the flock have been infected.

To control the disease all infected chicks should be killed and buried or buried deeply. Thoroughly clean out the litter or sand from the brooder house at least every other day and replace with clean dry sand about one-third of an inch deep. Continue this frequent cleaning until the disease is checked.

Feeding and drinking containers should be sterilized every few days with boiling water, since ordinary disinfectants are of no practical value in controlling this disease. If the weather is not too hot, confine the chicks to the brooder house for at least seven days to keep them from picking up coccidial eggs from the ground outside the house where diseased chicks may have ranged.

Meanwhile, plow or spade the infected runways, if possible, so as to bring uninfected earth to the surface. Otherwise, the chicks should be provided with an uninfected range by some other method.

Avoid tracking germs into the brooder house or placing in the house any material which may be infected. Keep up the chicks' vitality by feeding a balanced ration and caring for them properly.

Treating for Worms Is Necessary for Summer

Raising chickens on clean ground is the recommended practice to keep a flock free of round-worms, and to reduce infection of tape, caecal and gland worms. Nevertheless, a lot of flocks have more or less serious worm infestations at this time.

Late summer treatment means that if a good job of worm removal is done, the pullets will mature much more rapidly than those which only mildly infested. Also, they will flesh up properly if well fed and not only be ready to lay during the high price period, but will lay regularly instead of only now and then, as the thin pullets must.

Individual bird treatment with the standard drugs for killing the worms present (which should be determined by examination by one who knows poultry worms) is the recommended practice, though flock treatment may be effective—Walden Farmer.

Off-Colored Poults

In the best of Bronze turkey flocks, a few light-colored or slate-colored poults occur each year. There has been much speculation among turkey breeders as to the cause of this variation. It can scarcely be due to atavism because White or Slate turkeys have not been used in the making of the bronze breed, the Bronze having been derived from the wild turkey, and the White and Slate in turn established from sports of the Bronze.

Many breeders believe that they are the result of an intensive breeding for color and it is alleged that they are used as brooder chickens, their offspring usually are of better color than those from the better colored breeders—Missouri Farmer.

Cross-Breeding Poultry

Cross-breeding of pure-bred fowls for the purpose of securing greater vigor and vitality in the first generation of the progeny, and of making it possible to distinguish the males from the females at hatching, has become a measure of considerable popularity within recent years. Both increased vitality, leading to greater gains in weight in the male chicks kept for broilers, and better production in pullets kept for laying are claimed as a result of such crossing. There is more question of the validity of the latter claim, however, because of lack of evidence in sufficient volume to lead to positive conclusions—Rural New Yorker.

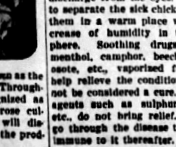

Bronchitis in Chicks

Infectious bronchitis of poultry frequently attacks baby chicks. There is no cure. Sick chicks will gasp for breath and have watery discharges from the eyes. It is best to separate the sick chicks and keep them in a warm place with an increase of humidity in the air.

Soothing drugs such as menthol, camphor, beechnut essence, etc., vaporized from water will relieve the condition, but cannot be considered a cure. Irritating agents such as sulphur, chlorine, etc., do not bring relief. If chicks go through the disease they will be immune to it thereafter.

Chivalry Toward Mate Evincing by Male Rat

We have been libeling the rat. When we called a man a rat we felt that he was given the lowest designation possible. But we were wrong, says a writer in the New York Herald Tribune. We have the word of a scientist for this fact. Dr. A. M. Hain of the Institute of Animal Genetics, Edinburgh, Galton is not infrequently, he stated, forced to show incompatibility in their cages, but he described an unusual case of an attack by a female on a male that was placed in her cage. She forced the male to the corner of the cage on his hind legs. She attacked him if he tried to let his forepaws down. She then carried lay to that corner and filled it to the full height of the cage, completely incasing the male rat and shutting him from her sight. The situation continued for about six or seven hours when a "truce" was apparently arranged. "The male made no protest, manifesting a gallantry which is invariable in the male rat," stated Doctor Hain.

South Sea Natives Go Back to the Primitive

One of the most favored of the glamorous South Sea islands, Puka Puka, an atoll with a lagoon and sandy beaches fringed with palms, was picked as a paradise by white settlers who established a trading post and coconut estates there. But since the depression the white settlers have abandoned their enterprises and left for home. The result is that the natives are reverting to their former style of living. The grass skirt and the loin cloth are taking the place of the calico motherhood and the denim trousers, the kerosene oil lamp is supplanting that which burned kerosene and the natives are using shell hooks for fishing instead of steel ones. Ten, bread and coconut must be being discarded for native food.—Brooklyn Eagle.

SAVE THE CONSTITUTION

In the face of all the theorists who like to subject the United States to fascisms, communism, and what-not, the Lone Star State seems to still believe that the Constitution, under whose guidance we grew from an unimportant pioneer nation to a world power within a century, is still good enough. On June 8th, the Young Democrats of Texas went on record as being aggressively opposed to any change which would "destroy the Constitution." At the same time, the organization went on record as favoring abolition of child labor, state codes of ethics to cover working hours and wages and other reforms of a social character, which shows that the Young Democrats are not opposed to changes which can be achieved within the limits of the Constitution. They simply realize that the kind of reform activity favored by many present-day officeholders would mean the end of State's rights, the rise of a virtual political autocracy, and the destruction of individual liberties.

On the same day, Democratic Governor Murray of Oklahoma, who "always has taken his coffee black and his democracy straight," said: "The United States will disintegrate unless the constitutional safeguards of liberty are preserved. . . We are already going to Washington for everything. The trend toward centralization of government will lead ultimately, unless checked, to centralization of wealth and privilege and the establishment of only two classes of citizens—the very rich and the very poor."

The statements from the Young Democrats and from Governor Murray will be seconded by other states. The issue is not one of partisanship—it is one of Americanism. Those who would destroy the Constitution and discredit our Supreme Court, would destroy all that the founders of the country fought and bled for, and left us as our most precious heritage—personal liberty unshackled by official tyranny.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT NO HELP TO FLORIDA

Two Barriers Prevent Citizens Of This State From Benefiting

Tallahassee, June 28.—(FNS)—The passage of the federal social security measure, carrying provisions for an old age pension brings no aid or relief to Floridians of 65 or over whom the legislation was intended to care for.

Two barriers, one legal, the other financial, now stand in the way of preventing Florida from participating in the pension plan. Under the resolution passed by the legislature recently, Florida citizens will vote at the next general election on the question of legalizing an old age pension system in the state by a constitutional amendment. The constitution now makes the care of the aged a county responsibility and the state has no authority to match the federal government's offer of $15.00 per month for needy persons over 65 years of age.

If the amendment passes, the state will have the authority to act, for the legislature also enacted a bill setting up the legal machinery but it is without funds to operate and financial provisions must be made by the 1937 legislature.

Senator Tillman who made the subject of old age pensions while the subject was before the legislature estimates that between 25,000 and 30,000 Florida residents would be eligible and that a state appropriation of from two and one-half to three million dollars would be necessary to provide a joint state and federal pension of $25.00 a month. In providing old age pensions the state would relieve counties of a present expenditure of about $750,000 a year which would cut the actual cost of the pension plan to approximately $2,000,000 on the basis of Tillman's figures.

A surprising fact found in his study of the situation, Tillman said, was the large number of people 65 years of age or older who are gainfully employed. Statistics show 28,000 in Florida to be in this class, which tends to bear out the contention of Townsend pension exponents that the retirement of these old folks from the field of labor would make room for thousands of younger workers.

The fact that Florida's aged will secure no relief from present old age pension measures will probably tend to strengthen the Townsend plan and drive thousands of them into the ranks of those who will demand more liberal and certain security for the aged.

New Bulletin On Forest Fire Laws Of 1935 Is Available

The seven forest conservation laws passed by the 1935 Florida Legislature form the basis for the bulletin. Forest Conservation Laws, State of Florida, 1935 Legislature, recently released by the Florida Forest Service.

This bulletin calls attention to our State-wide forest fire problem and shows the part played by President Roosevelt, Governor Sholtz, the Forest Conservation Committee, and all agencies concerned which put over this very constructive legislative program. County-wide Fire Control, Forest Protection, State Forests and State Parks, and Teaching of Conservation of Natural Resources are the more important and more far reaching of these acts. These acts provide definite stepping stones for a plain view forest conservation program.

The bills passed are brief for easy reading and, for the more studious and legal minded, a complete text of the laws is included in the back of the bulletin. Copies can be obtained upon request from the Florida Forest Service, Tallahassee.

Frostproof Theatre Man Says Patronize Home Shows First

"Patronize home concerns first, including your home town theatre. Then, if you go out of town in search of further amusement, visit out theatre," invited R. H. Palmer Jr. of the Ramon Theatre of Frostproof, who visited the Times office this week.

Mr. Palmer authorized a series of ads, the first of which appears in this issue. He complimented the Avon Theatre management on the selection of high class and entertaining programs.

"It is to those people who enjoy the inclusion of an out of town spin with their theatre-going that we especially extend this invitation to the Ramon," he added.

Next Sunday the Ramon features "Gold Diggers of 1935," that Warner Brothers' smash hit that has been receiving such tremendous response throughout the country. Pathe News and selected short subjects will also be exhibited.

Nothing else will pep up a room quite as much as a vase filled with a big bunch of gladioli.

"Well," said the Marconi man, "I might, really, Miss Kearney, work ashore at Port Said. Advise communication agents—or something of that sort."

"That'll do," said Rattray. "It's sure to send a message to me when he gets it. In the meantime, I shall have to think how I'm going to reply. But don't be surprised, my lad, if you hear the sound of a loud splash in the Red Sea. It'll only be Doctor Oester."

Dawson Haig had heard every word of the conversation between Mohammed and Joseph. It had been conducted directly above his head, as he crept below the trap. Since he knew no eastern tongue, he was grateful to both for speaking English.

The creaky tones of old Mohammed were unmistakable. Mohammed was the proprietor. And he suspected Joseph to be none other than the fortune teller whom he had followed around the Red Sea.

Later, he was to consider this matter of language again—more coolly: the curious circumstance that these two did not address each other in Arabic. It was destined to play a big part in his lone campaign against the powers of Y'u'an Hoo See.

He detected the presence of Joseph as he knelt above the trap, listening. . . . he heard his retreating footstep. Then he inhaled again, cautiously, and standing there in that drag-laden pit, thought hard and swiftly.

The light shining through the chink aided his calculations that the hinged end of the trap was to his left, and that which opened to the right. There was no ring on the underbar, but he was not deterred. He carried a pocketknife which was a kind of small armory, containing amongst its armaments a strong corseweb. It was pitifully short, but since it represented the difference between life and death, he decided, grimly, that it must suffice.

He groped about above the trap. The plank on right and left parallel with the ladder, and he could find two loose cross-battens. The planks were strong but roughly joined. He selected a spot and set to work with the corseweb.

The wood was tough, and his implement fragile. The tool snarled in the test, but his lungs were jibbling badly, drenched as they were with fumes from the pit.

Inhalant slowly and cautiously, he held his breath and descended one step of the ladder. He pulled gently on the steel handle of the knife. The trap responded with a little effort. He descended a step lower—and realized that his legs were plunged into the festery, jelly mass. But now he could grasp the edge of the trap. . . .

It proved to be carefully oiled, and its opening was almost smooth. Seeing above him a dimly lighted passage, his first natural instinct was to abandon the knife and to climb out into cleaner air. But above all, Dawson Haig was a conscientious worker; and a scheme which was to have far-reaching consequences in this very moment of peril took form in his brain.

Holding the trap with his left hand, he detached the corseweb, and, balancing perilously, slipped the knife into his pocket. Then, pulling the wooden frame fully down, and ducking to avoid it, he climbed up and reached the passage above.

Gently, he allowed the trap, operated by spring hinges, to rise again into place. He stood still, exhaling and inhaling, to free his lungs of those poisonous fumes. He looked, right, along the dimly lighted corridor. He saw a closed door. He looked, left, into the room of the carpets. There was no sound.

Quietly he stole out. Pocketing the spectacle of "Mr. Smith," Dawson Haig set out cautiously to explore. And five minutes of exploration ensued. There was no one out himself in the room of Mohammed—and it was quite impossible to get out. Heavy locked doors, iron-barred windows, and a heavy door at the end of the corridor, he slipped back to the room of carpets, draped behind a bundle of rug and, automatic in hand—

Snatching a cigarette, and succumbing to his aim, the fortune teller whom he had followed from the Wallaroo walked along the room. Joseph Haig crouched, ducking his head. The man came to the middle of the room, where he lay the death trap, beyond which lay the death trap. Behind it was a big bowl of cut roses.

Wildly she stared across the room toward the balcony; but beyond she could see nothing but a cloudless sky, the sun was shining brightly, and a sudden breeze stirred the leaves of the trees. Her limbs, too, had a sudden feeling. But, as the truth of her surroundings crashed in upon her mind, she threw her coverings and sprang to the door.

CHAPTER VIII

DAWSON HAIG stared down at the long oblong box lying upon a and brick floor. Respect for the efficiency of the Hoo See gang began to claim him. Jo Lung of Limehouse was no more than a spoke in the wheel. Doctor Oester was merely another. There was a directing intelligence greater than any of these, by whom the smallest detail was never neglected.

He marveled at the man's knowledge of psychology—the man who had laid this trail for him. How could he have anticipated that his Haig's professional curiosity would have led him to seek for that other entrance upon the pretext of leaving the shop by a shorter route? This oblong box was ready for him. It was packed with straw; a loose lid rested upon the floor beside it. A tin of nails, he saw, and a stout hammer.

He turned and walked to the door beyond, tried it and uttered an impatient exclamation. Haig ducked behind the pile of carpets. The man circled the open trap, went back again by the way he had come, and in a few moments returned.

He walked past the raised trap and inserted a key in the lock of the closed door beyond. Whereupon: "Hands up!"

Haig stood still, listening. To his knees in a flash, whistled around, drew a pistol from his pocket with miraculous agility, and fired as he crouched!

Crack of two shots came from Joseph dropped his automatic half rose, and toppled forward into the "Bath of Feathers."

A stifled cough came up from the dragged pit.

Haig stood still—listening. To the sickly sweet fumes had been added the tang of powder. Clouds of feathery dust were swirling in the air. He crept around to the door. The key was still in the lock. He opened it. A flight of wooden steps led downward.

Descending, he found himself in a small square cellar. On his right was a stout low wooden door communicating with the base of the pit. Before him he saw a narrow packing case—undoubtedly designed as his coffin!

Eileen woke from a troubled dream, vaguely wondering what was obstructing the porthole of her cubicle. Something to do with Doctor Oester. Was it that Doctor Oester was standing between herself and the door there came a hitch. He read just the iron. And so, presently, through that mound of feathers—covered with feathers—suffocated in feathers—came the victim.

One glance sufficed to show that the man was dead. His contorted face was horrible to see. But Dawson Haig had little compassion to spare.

First—the keys! He found them. Next, he emptied all the dead man's pockets, transferring the contents haphazard to his own. Finally, he threw the body into the straw-lined box and set the lid in place. He closed the box, and the two men were already bored in.

Then, lowering the heavy trap, he stood still, listening. Footsteps sounded in the courtyard above. Haig darted lightly up the stairs, regained the passage, and there stood still, waiting.

Two men entered. They talked together in subdued voices in Arabic. He knew that they were reporting the chest. Presently, heavy dragging footsteps told him that they were carrying it up the stairs to the courtyard beyond. He saw a dull lamp as they laid it down. One of them returned and closed the door.

Muffled sounds, voices; and, finally—silence.

The Wallaroo had left her berth, and the pilot was taking her down the Canal when Dawson Haig burst into the office of Shale, the British consul. The consul, standing just behind his desk, looked up.

"Thank God!" he exclaimed. "Inspector you have found her?"

Dawson Haig shook his head sadly. "But I know where she was kidnapped," he replied. "What I don't know is where she has been taken. But first of all, it is most important that my presence here shall not be known to a soul outside this office. Not a word that anyone has seen me! The game we are up against think me dead, and I intend them to go on thinking it. Do you understand?"

The four men in the consul's office signified that they understood.

Steam Engine Made by Watt Is Still Running

More than 160 years ago James Watt built a steam engine for a plant at Broseley, in Shropshire. It must have been about 1775.

Watt has been dead for many years, but the engine is still working, probably the oldest operating steam engine in the world, says a London correspondent of the Detroit News.

The engine was originally used to sink the shaft of what are known as "The Deep Pits" at Broseley, and it has driven the pit cage ever since. Apart from the fact that it was made at the Broseley foundry, now in the hands of the Birmingham and Black Country Engineering Co., Ltd., it is known that the stationary engines designed by James Watt were being made at Broseley years before the first locomotive was built and this is believed to be the last working survivor of these engines.

Every part of it is cast iron; cast and assembled from iron are that was mined in the locality. There was a

Quick, Safe Relief For Eczema, Itchy Skin, To Sun, Wind and Dust

MURINE EYES FOR YOUR EYES

Alone in the single, rocking coach of the special train chartered by the British consul, Dawson Haig sat, grim-faced, planning—planning—planning. That the duty appointed to the fortune teller, now nailed in the box destined for himself, had been to dispose of his body, and then report to a certain Hassan es-Suk in Keneh was clear enough.

A brief note—presumably that "letter of travel" referred to—had been in the man's inside pocket. It consisted of an unsealed envelope simply addressed, "For Joseph."

The superscription was typed, and the note also was typed. "Report at once to Hassan es-Suk at Keneh. This is your introduction. It is a very nice boy!" And it was signed in ink: "Chief."

A second glance, Port Said to Cairo, and another Cairo to Keneh, were followed inside the note. "The girl is safely on the way."

"Those words, overheard, Haig had never forgotten. They drummed through his brain in tune with the clatter of the train.

There was no other clue amongst Joseph's possessions, but Haig had removed and retained the man's greasy turban.

Eileen, perhaps, had been taken to Keneh. That she had been taken into the "Bath of Feathers" Haig was not prepared to believe. Y'u'an Hoo See had not ordered her death. What had ordered her to be taken living.

What for?

The answer was one which Haig had not the courage to admit. He was in possession of evidence indicating that Y'u'an Hoo See was a slave dealer on a large scale, possibly the most important slave trader now left in that evil traffic. Stories had reached his ears of horrors perpetrated from Central Africa, round ed up by the fierce Arabs who from time immemorial have looked upon black-slavery as a legitimate trade.

But that white slaves were bought and sold by this organization he had never even suspected; even now was not prepared to believe. What, therefore, remained to his question?

To sell a cultured woman, daughter of a United States official, as black slaves were sold, would be utterly impossible. The most reckless buyer would hesitate to bid for such merchandise. And there would be difficult to retain, impossible to subjugate. And the risks were incalculable. Only one being man and the power and audacity to perpetrate such an outrage. . . .

Dawson Haig clenched his fists and gritted his teeth at the thought. He stared out of the window, striving for composure. . . . And there, streaming slowly along the Canal on her way down to Suez, was the Wallaroo! He stood up in his excitement. The passengers were waving their hands.

Jubilee Tree on Exhibition

An exhibit representing the Jubilee tree, which although introduced on a small scale in the United States is still almost unknown in this country, is being shown in the hall of plant life at Field Museum of Natural History, according to a bulletin from that institution.

The Jubilee is a small tree of the buckthorn family, native to northern India and China, where it has been in cultivation for thousands of years. Its cultivation has spread to the East Coast of Africa, and to Zanzibar, and it is well known in the Mediterranean region. It produces a fruit about the size of a plum, something like an apple in flavor, which is used for the making of a fruit being preserved in that way, according to Dr. R. E. Dahlgren, curator of botany.

WITH AUNT LUCY'S BLESSING!

IT WAS NICE TO MEET YOU, MRS. KINGSTON. YOU KNOW, I THINK YOUR SON IS A VERY NICE BOY!

SUPPOSE HE'S TOLD YOU I'M RICH, SO YOU THINK HE'S A QUACKER! I WILL HURT!

GOOD! IF SHE REALLY LOVES HIM, SHE'LL HURT! I'LL HURT!

SHE PUT ME THROUGH COLLEGE AND LAW SCHOOL, HONEY, AND KNOWING HER AFFAIRS IS THE BIGGEST JOE I HAVE.

WELL, THEN WE'D BETTER GIVE IT ALL UP, JACK! I LOVE YOU... BUT YOUR AUNT... WE COULD NEVER BE HAPPY!

POOR AUNT LUCY, SHE DOESN'T MEAN TO BE CROSS. BUT HER HEADACHES AND INDIGESTION MAKE HER SO TERRIBLE!

PROMISE ME YOU'LL TELL HER WHAT I TOLD YOU. DEAR... IT REALLY MAY BE COFFEE-NERVES!

MARY'S MOTHER HAD YOUR TROUBLE ONCE! SHE CUT OUT COFFEE AND TRIED POSTUM. THE CHANGE WORKED WONDERFUL! DON'T YOU TRY IT, AUNT LUCY?

OH, MERRY! I WILL... IF YOU'LL JUST STOP RAVING ABOUT POSTUM! NOW I'LL HAVE TO DICK!

I DIDN'T suppose coffee was bad for anyone... except, of course, children! Oh, yes... many adults, too, find that the caffeine in coffee can upset nerves, cause indigestion, or prevent sound sleep!

If you suspect that coffee disagrees with you... try Postum for 30 days. Postum contains no caffeine. It's simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It's easy to make... and costs less than half a cent a cup. It's delicious, too... and may prove a real help! A product of General Foods.

FREE! Let us send you your first week's supply of Postum free! Simply mail the coupon.

COMMISSIONERS APPROVE DELAY COUNTY TAX LIST

Extra Work Necessitated By
New Law; Millage May Be Higher

Acting on the authority of Comptroller J. M. Lee, the county commissioners Tuesday extended the time for accepting the 1935 tax roll from Assessor Cyril Baldwin. The roll was supposed to have been presented at Tuesday's meeting of the board but owing to considerable changes having to be made under authority of bill 889 of the recent legislature the date was postponed. This bill calls for "live" or "paying" property to be listed separately from delinquent property and according to a recent ruling of the state supreme court only the "live" property assessment can be used when the commissioners figure the millage. The ruling set forth that the millage must be computed at 95 percent of the assessed value of the property on which the tax is levied. The homestead exemption amendment will also act towards a raise in millage as considerable property has been removed from the paying class through this amendment.

The commissioners discussed correspondence from Gov. Dave Shotts relating to relief funds and the need of counties to raise funds to be matched by federal money for this purpose. According to some of the letters and information the counties would be expected to pool their funds but it was not clear if the administration of the money would be under the direction of local officials. N. H. Felt, clerk to the board, was instructed to get information on this matter and report at a later meeting.

Ray Greene informed the board that the DeSoto State Forest Park Association had recently been incorporated and asked that a resolution be passed recommending certain lands that would be acquired for park purposes. The board complied with the request. The park in question is located near the present Highlands Hammock and the Arboretum and also to take in a great deal more acreage.

DeSoto City Limits Reduced By Court Order Monday

Under a decree handed down Monday by Judge W. J. Barker in circuit court, the city limits of DeSoto, Fla., were reduced by some 500 acres. The petitioners, M. M. Payne et al, sought exclusion from the town of DeSoto, City as they claimed they did not receive any municipal benefits. The case has been pending for some time and Judge Barker granted the petition Monday. M. R. McDonald was attorney for the petitioners and P. A. Naylor for the town of DeSoto.

Shaken Up In Auto Wreck Sunday Eve.

The Misses Kate and Mattie Tompkins were bruised and severely shaken Sunday evening on state road 9 north where their car was wrecked in a collision with one driven by T. C. Hart. The accident occurred in a severe rain and it is alleged that Hart drove out of Pleasant street in front of them, the rain obscuring his vision.

L. Henderson Has Resigned As Trustee

L. L. Henderson has resigned as trustee of the Lake Placid schools. His resignation was contained in a letter to the county board of public instruction Monday. Mr. Henderson stated he could not devote the necessary time due to his heavy duties as chairman of the board of

Istokpoga Loan Is Refused; Trustees Intend To Reapply

Dr. E. J. Etheredge of De Soto City, chairman of the board of trustees of the Istokpoga Consolidated Sub. Drainage District, stated Thursday that the FWA loan for the district had been refused. It had been denied on the grounds that not enough people would be benefited. Dr. Etheredge said that he would ask the federal authorities to take into consideration the development that would result if the loan were granted. Approximately $700,000 has been spent on the project so far and the loan asked for was for $200,000 in order to complete the work and make 200,000 acres in Highlands and Glades available for farming.

Dr. Etheredge said the trustees intend to reapply for the loan and that Congressman Hardin J. Peterson and Senator Duncan U. Fletcher are doing their utmost and fighting hard before the federal committee in Washington in order to have the loan granted.

COURTS NULLIFYING ACTS OF LEGISLATURE

Declaring Chain Store Tax
Unconstitutional May Cause
Extra Session

Tallahassee, July 3. — (FNS) — Florida's chain store tax passed by the recent legislature to provide $4,500,000 from graduated occupational license and gross receipts tax was declared unconstitutional by Circuit Judge J. B. Johnson last week.

In a verbal statement, Judge Johnson termed the entire bill to be arbitrary and the tax so high that he did not think any citizen could reasonably be expected to pay it. Nearly a score of Florida's ablest attorneys participated in the court proceedings.

Judge Johnson granted injunctions to five companies preventing Controller Lee from enforcing the tax against them until validity of the law is finally determined by the Supreme Court.

The Attorney General's office representing Controller Lee in opposing the injunction suits stated that it would appeal to the Supreme Court. Senator Tillman, Tampa, who sponsored the bill, pleaded his efforts to fight the suit, saying he was going to stay with it all the way through, he stated.

The revenue from this tax was to go to the schools. In addition to the measures have been declared unconstitutional, school officials are opposing the public and the University of Florida and the Florida State College for Women will be forced to operate on a short term basis until the suit is decided.

Application for an injunction to prevent Controller Lee from enforcing the law, has been asked by J. B. Patterson. A time has not been set for a hearing on the Patterson application. For the time being the injunction applies only to the firms which brought the case, namely Russ J. Davis, Chrysler, Dunlop Tire & Rubber Company, Jacksonville Bond-Store, Lumber Company, Jacksonville Paxon, Inc., Jacksonville, and Whidden's Cash Stores, Jacksonville.

Free School Books Provided Next Fall

As provided by a new state law, pupils in all grades in the public schools through high school, will be furnished with textbooks without charge, beginning next fall.

Free text books have heretofore been provided for pupils in the kindergarten through the sixth grade, and the new law extends this to include the junior-senior high schools.

May Survey Everglades Park. Washington, D. C., July 2. — (FNS) — Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, in an amendment offered to the Everglades National Park bill, has asked that a survey of the Everglades National Park be made, at an expenditure of $100,000, on an expenditure

CHARLIE LANIER ASSUMES GAVEL OF ROTARY CLUB

Names Committees And Their Duties At Meeting
Wednesday Noon

C. E. Lanier, newly installed president of the Avon Park Rotary Club, took over the gavel at the weekly luncheon Wednesday at the Jacaranda Hotel. In his opening talk, Mr. Lanier named the new committees and outlined various phases of their work. The names of the committee members were displayed on a large board and showed how the committees were related to each other.

The committees and their members are: board of directors, C. E. Lanier, O. C. Wilkes, A. McKee Elwell, W. T. Coates, E. G. Todd and Paul Jones; aims and public relations, C. E. Lanier, A. McKee Elwell, J. C. Francis, Paul Jones, D. B. Perry and Walter Betts; club service committee, E. G. Todd, A. McKee Elwell and Col. C. R. Head; vocational service committee, D. B. Perry, R. S. Sappington and J. L. West; membership committee, Walter Betts, Dr. W. A. Davidson and J. B. Coen; international service committee, J. S. Francis and C. E. Lanier; classification and membership committee, Col. C. R. Head and J. C. Ragsdale; program committee, Paul Garber, H. M. Johnson, C. E. Crabtree and J. P. Pendleton; boys work committee, J. C. Ragsdale, E. G. Todd and O. C. Wilkes; crippled children committee, Dr. D. A. Davidson and Dr. George Scott McKnight; Rotary information, A. McKee Elwell and W. M. Hetherington; permanent address, S. J. Pendleton and music, Paul Garber.

Mr. Lanier spoke on the six object of Rotary, classification and the trusteeship of classification. Building Rotary is like building a house, he said, you must have the plans and material to work with. Have the same faith in the committee that others have agreed.

W. J. Churchill, financial secretary of Southern College at Lakeland, was present and spoke briefly. Other visitors were Rev. H. L. Louth of West Palm Beach, W. H. Hargrave of Cocoa and W. C. Beckett, Avon Park.

Judge Barker Rules Wauchula Ordinance Unconstitutional

Judge W. J. Barker, ruled on the ordinance of the city of Wauchula, prohibiting the use of "sound waves" within the city, as unconstitutional. It is a law which prohibits the use of a loudspeaker or other device for the purpose of making a noise or sound within the city. The ordinance was passed by the city council last week.

Dr. E. C. Burch, Arcadia, and Mr. Carson of Wauchula, had been arrested in Wauchula and held in jail for using sound amplifying equipment to deliver religious lectures to the streets. Their attorneys, W. D. Bell brought proceedings after a hearing that lasted most of the day. Judge Barker ordered their release.

Four Houses Rented During Past Week

According to Dr. W. A. Davison real estate broker, there is a demand for the first class furnished houses in Avon Park and he has several applications on hand. He has rented four during the past week at $100 per month. The V. R. House to Walter Betts, the Prince home at Highland Lakes to Mr. H. G. Shumme of Wauchula, the home of the V. Y. Rouse to Mr. and Mrs. Powell of Arcadia, and the home of the V. Y. Rouse to Mr. and Mrs. Powell of Arcadia.

Fla. Public Service Changes Manager

The Florida Public Service Co. has transferred John Gravier of Winter Garden to take charge of the local office here. He succeeds R. F. Marx who will be in charge of the local plant. Mr. Gravier has resided the last month in Winter Garden and will be moving his wife and two children here.

Ball Team May Be Reorganized; To Sponsor Show

According to Briscoe Willis new faces may be seen in the lineup of the Avon Park ball team in the near future. Briscoe says that negotiations are under way to secure players from other towns and big surprises may be in store for Avon Park baseball fans in the immediate future.

In order to help the club treasury a picture is being sponsored at the Avon Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. A large variety of prizes will be given away Wednesday night, Willis says, but the tickets on sale will be good for either night. The prizes will include groceries, gas and oil and also some surprise packages.

The ball players will also be in person and the public is asked to purchase tickets before the show dates as the club gets a half of the advance ticket sales.

N. KENNEDY NAMED FISH AND GAME CHIEF

Eustis Man Long Identified
With Conservation Work
In State

Appointment of Hon. I. N. Kennedy of Eustis, as secretary and executive officer for the state game and conservation commission was made public last week. Dr. Kennedy has been a member of the legislature for many years and his chief interest has been in roads and in game and fish conservation measures. He sponsored the black bass protection act which passed the recent session.

An act of the 1935 legislature separated the game and fish and game department from the state geological division with which it was combined in 1933. George W. Davis is conservation commissioner and remains in charge of the shell fish commission and the geological department.

The new water fish and game commission, whose five members serve without compensation, decided election of its chairman until next week. George W. Davis, a hatter and banker, was named to replace Frank Winthrop of Tallahassee, who said press of private business prevented his acceptance of the appointment. Governor Shotts met with the new board and told its members:

"I realize you want to see conservation in this state. You have a fine chance for a real game commission now without any political interference."

The governor said the board must continue operation of fish hatcheries and game breeding farms at Wauchula, Winter Garden and Wewahatcha. The shell fish commission, which owns the hatcheries, offered to lease the properties to the new commission for $1 a year, and the board was expected to accept the proposal.

As executive secretary, Kennedy will direct the game and fish and water fish commission and will report to the five-member commission.

Revival Beginning At Nazarene Church

Beginning Monday, July 8th, and running through July 21st, revival services are to be held at the Church of the Nazarene by Rev. Mrs. Ada Redmon and son, Penion.

Mrs. Redmon is the district evangelist of the Florida district and her messages are characterized by a spirit of love, sympathy and sincerity that comes only from experience with sorrow, suffering and heartache.

Rev. and Mrs. Redmon are the "South's own" and unquestionably have done more for Florida in a spiritual and moral sense than probably any other couple.

The community is glad to have Mrs. Redmon and son here, considering it an honor and a privilege, not only to the church, but to Avon Park.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend these services. Her ministry is up-to-date and those who will be helped, can be helped. "A Mother in Israel," as she has been called, is a truly a fitting title.

IMMENSE CROWD AT VENUS PICNIC ON JULY FOURTH

Nearly 2,000 Attend And Local Residents Provide A Bountiful Feed

All roads apparently led to Venus Thursday when the Young Democrats League of Highlands County staged a Fourth of July barbecue under the big oaks of the picnic ground. The crowd started to come early and stayed late, during the height of the festivities it was estimated there were nearly 2,000 people on the grounds. As customary the people of Venus had everything prepared in excellent style, including barbecued beef and pork and fried fish with all the trimmings. The entertainment features were also taken care of with gopher races in the morning and other sports, including races for young men and in the afternoon, evidently intended as an aid to digestion after the bountiful meal. Music was furnished by the Selwyn boys band under direction of Prof. J. J. Gattat and everyone far and wide knows the excellence of this aggregation for dispensing music.

Of course there was speaking with Claude Pepper of Tallahassee as the principal welkin ringer. His discourse was on the patriotic order, politics being barred for the day. Selwyn Ives, president of the Highlands Young Democratic organization also spoke and introduced various county Democratic officials. E. J. Peters opened the proceedings with the reading of the Declaration of Independence.

There were many visitors of note from adjoining counties as well as from other sections of the state. Although politics were supposed to be taboo, many candidates and prospective candidates for next year's elections were busy building and mending fences and airing their sentiment and getting acquainted.

Taking it all in all a good time was had by all and everyone returned home tired but happy. The weather was good and the weather was ideal with a tempering breeze under the massive shady oaks.

4-H Club Members To Camp In Ocala Forest

Highlands county boys who are members of the 4-H Club will be in camp in the Ocala National Forest next week of July 8th to 12th. An 800-acre camp has been taken over for club work and all boys interested are asked to get in touch with County agent, J. W. Williams, Winter Garden, Fla. The cost will be two dollars per boy for the week's camp. The transportation to and from the camp will be a little extra but this has not been definitely decided at present.

The 4-H Club girls will be in camp in the same place the week of August 12 and the cost will be the same as for the boys' camp.

Ralph Jackson Is Injured By Shotgun

Ralph Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Jackson, was severely injured when he received a charge from a 12 gauge shotgun in his right hip Thursday. With his father and others he was picnicking and fishing on the Kissimmee river and was crossing the river in a boat when the accident happened. The gun was in the boat and was discharged from some unknown reason. The boy was rushed to a Selwyn hospital where he is said to be resting easily with a fair chance for recovery.

Vacation Bible School At Methodist Church On Monday

A vacation Bible school will be held at the Methodist church for two weeks beginning Monday at 9 a. m. Children of all denominations are invited to attend and the classes will be graduated to children from five to seventeen years of age. The faculty will include Rev. J. B. Reid who will conduct classes on "Problems of Youth."

Attend Methodist Picnic. Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Reid and family attended the picnic at Kissimmee Springs on Friday of last week. The picnic was attended by a large number of members and families of this district.

Committee Named To Handle Vesper Services In Future

A committee consisting of Col. F. N. K. Bailey, Ray W. Green and Alexander Blair has been named to arrange for the speakers and music and make other arrangements for the vesper services at Highlands Hammock next season. They will relieve Dr. W. A. Davidson who has had charge of all the arrangements handled for the past three years.

This action was taken at a meeting of the executive committee of the Highlands Hammock Association, the Arboretum and Botanical Garden Association and the trust fund committee held Monday afternoon at the office of Col. Bailey in Sebring. Dr. Davidson presided and asked to be relieved of the vesper service responsibility as he felt he could not handle it next season.

The committees were in session for three hours discussing plans for closer cooperation between these organizations and the state and federal governments. It is hoped that the properties can be transferred to the state and handled by the forestry and park service in the near future.

ADVERTISING IS NEED OF RETAIL BUSINESS

Merchandising Expert Says
Courage In Advertising
Will Aid Recovery

The only shackles retailers wear today are the ones they have fastened on themselves — shackles of fear, of inertia, and of mental laziness, especially in the field of advertising, according to Kenneth Collins, advertising executive and author of the book "The Retailer's Magazine."

"I can name only one daring move in the whole field of retail advertising this year. One single interesting, exciting experiment," he says in analysis of what's wrong with retailing. "Advertising, the motive power in business, has become all clogged up with doubts and fears. It's pretty nearly dead for Dr. Freud and his psycho-analytic brethren. I can name only two or three really outstanding sales-producing campaigns in national advertising. A few years back almost anybody could name hundreds."

"Did these exciting, interesting, daring efforts pay? Of course they did. So has practically every effort of the past few years. It's not so low small, that I have seen. For now, especially when the competition of exciting advertising is so negative the advertising campaign with anything 'on the ball' stands a huge chance for success. And what I said about the advertising campaign with sparkle, I say of any business plan with punch, with courage. It will have less competition today than in many years. This is the time for the business man with vision, with ideas, to make a cleanup."

"Pretty nearly every manufacturer and retailer with whom I have talked of late," he continues, "has as his 'ailis' for all business lethargy 'the government.' He overlooks the fact that practically every industry, no matter how small, is up and running on an upward trend for two years. Instead of accepting the challenge of the new conditions—whatever they may be—we are sitting on our hands. We are taking an excuse for a do-nothing attitude and a conservatism which smacks of complete inertia. Too many of us have been waiting, like Micawber, for something to turn up."

"We are playing the game so defensively that we are doing almost nothing to help in the great work of business recovery. We are afraid to speak out a good ringing 'Yes, let's try it!' to anything different or novel or unusual or experimental. The only thing that is hindering us is lack of courage."

Post Office Rules Forbid Writing In Packages - Bundles

According to Mrs. Ola I. Head, postmaster, the post office regulations forbid any kind of writing being placed in packages, bundles or rolls of newspapers that do not come under the heading of "letters." Mrs. Head said that she also placed under this ruling. Mrs. Head requests that all post office patrons observe this ruling and that those who violate it be avoided.

AVON PARK CITY COUNCIL MEETING TUESDAY NIGHT

Fail To Approve Resolution
To Form Delinquent
Tax Body

Avon Park's city council failed to take action Tuesday night on a resolution whereby they would form themselves into a delinquent tax adjustment board under authority granted by the recent legislature. The resolution was introduced by Councilman Fred Smith and called for the adjustment of taxes for the years 1933 and prior in a similar manner to the adjustment of state and county taxes by the county board. Action was deferred until a full council could be present, Messrs. Smith and Fred Hall being the only ones present. The resolution caused so much discussion, the sentiment of council being mostly against the proposal. Several citizens including, Charles Clements, Percy Loomis and John Hood were present and appeared to favor the resolution.

During the discussion Councilman Hall cited newspaper reports that the act is unconstitutional according to court action taken at Leeburg, Mississippi. He added that the resolution required much thought and it should be postponed until a full council were present. He considered the present set-up, whereby delinquent taxes could be settled with bonds, as more advantageous to the taxpayer and that adjustments were made as proposed the balance unpaid would have to be distributed among the other taxpayers in the city. In addition, he said, a higher millage, He also considered the property taxpayer is penalized under the resolution as presented.

Councilman Smith said the proposal would do what is now being done in settling delinquent taxes but without the necessity of court action. He said the tax and get the property back on the tax rolls, he said.

The resolution was tabled until a later meeting.

Lost Chance For Scouts To Attend Camp This Year

The last opportunity for Scouts to attend Camp Flaming Arrow comes when the fourth period opens on Sunday, July 7th.

The camp, which is one of the best in Florida, has had Scouts from nearly all the troops of the Flaming Arrow Council, participating in the activities. The Scouts who are to attend the Jamboree were well represented this week where they were given training so that they will be ready for the big event in Washington.

There are a lot more Scouts, who have not as yet, taken advantage of the camping opportunity and they are urged to come for the final week of the season, which will be an outstanding one. Scouts who are planning to attend camp should immediately register, by writing to Camp Flaming Arrow, Auburndale, Fla.

Story - Wolff Wedding Sunday.

Coming as a surprise to her many friends was the announcement this week of the marriage of Miss Louise Cruchton Wolff to DeWitt Story of Clearwater. The marriage ceremony was performed Sunday morning at Clearwater by Rev. McNew, pastor of the Baptist church there. The witnesses were Mrs. Laura M. Story and Miss Lavonne Story, mother and sister of the groom. The bride was attired in a light blue traveling gown and following the ceremony the happy couple left for Nebraska on a wedding trip during which they will visit relatives of Mr. Story. They will be at home at Clearwater in September.

Mr. Story is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Wolff of this city and is a graduate of Avon Park high school. She attended Southern College at Lakeland where she was a member of Chi Delta Nu sorority, the Sports Club, Serpents Glee Club and was secretary of the junior class.

Mr. Story is a native of Nebraska but has lived in Florida nearly all his life. He is a graduate of Clearwater high school and also attended Southern College where he met Miss Wolff. He is a member of Theta Kappa Psi fraternity.

NEWS and VIEWS ON ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

The President's new tax program was greeted with amazement by the nation-including practically all Congressmen, save for the Administration floor-leaders who had been informed of what was coming.

The amazement was due less to the terms of the program, than to the fact that the President should put it forward for consideration at the Congress, now for the Administration far behind schedule, it weighed down with half a dozen or so other proposals of the first importance, and which seem to have little chance of adjourning before the middle of September, in spite of industry's devout wish that it would wind up its business and go home. Experts say that it would take at least a month to properly draw such a bill as the President proposes, and as much or more time to get it through the Congress.

The President's plan belongs in the "share the wealth" category. It includes increased income taxes in the higher brackets, and stiffer corporation, gift, inheritance and estate taxes. And it would do away with tax-exemption of government bonds.

Of great significance was the attitude of the principal American newspapers, all of which expressed their views in editorials on the following day.

The more extreme opposition papers said that the President's proposal definitely aligned him with the left-wing Long-Coughlin school of national economy. Middle of the ground papers, for the most part, simply said they believed the bill was wrong in principle, and that the President was treading on dangerous ground. Some papers were non-committal, printing parts of the plan and criticizing other parts. Relatively few papers approved of the proposal in toto. Representative opinion was expressed by the Atlanta Constitution, which said that the plan "conflicts with the promise oft-repeated that there would be no tax increases during this session of Congress. . . . For Congress to remain in session for the length of time necessary to enact the program . . . would be a national calamity."

Many observers said that the higher taxes on income, etc., would simply stifle industrial initiative, frighten investors, and thus further retard recovery. On the other hand, the majority of commentators seem to favor the provision for taxing government securities. Senator Byrd of Virginia, a conservative Democrat, also introduced a bill and a constitutional amendment to make that possible.

All in all, response to the bill is not what the President might have expected-and it is extremely doubtful if he will be able to muster his usual Congressional support behind it. Congressmen are being deluged with letters protesting the existing burden of taxation, and they will naturally be chary of increasing it further. In the opinion of the well-informed Wall Street lawyer, the bill will go into committee, will be treated as if it were on the "must" list for the current session-but it will be put over until next year when it is found that it will necessitate too long a delay.

There was one other important legislative act during the week in review. The House Committee came out with approval of a Public Utility Holding Company bill which is in sharp contrast with the bill that passed the Senate. Where the latter provided for the elimination of holding companies, the House measure seeks to strictly regulate them. Immediate results of this was a rise in utility security values.

On June 15, a number of notes went out from the State Department in Washington. Addressed to the principal foreign powers, they politely informed them that their annual installments on the war debt were due and payable.

Everyone knew, all the notes, with a single exception, represented a waste of postage and effort. Every major power owing this money had previously informed us, directly or indirectly, that the installments would not be paid. Exception, as in the past, was Finland, which remitted $185,453. It is doubtful if anything in history has done so much to promote respect for that little nation in the United States as its promptness in meeting its debt. The Senate showed its gratitude by passing a bill to appropriate $300,000 for erection of a diplomatic and consular building in Helsinki, Finland.

America made war loans to twenty nations, for a total of $10,338,000,000. $2,747,000,000 of that has been returned. However, overdue interest payments continue to increase the debts which will probably remain in the category of repudiated obligations.

During May, the long-lagging construction industry reached its high point of the year. Residential awards were larger than for any month in 3 1/2 years and ran 81 per cent ahead of a year ago. In spite of the lack of public works building, non-residential construction registered a 22 per cent advance over April.

"Keeper of the Bees" At Avon Sun. - Mon.

Gene Stratton-Porter's famous novel, "Keeper of the Bees," comes to the screen of the Avon Theatre Sunday and Monday with Neil Hamilton and Betty Furness in the featured roles. Laid against the colorful background of a seacoast California community, the new Monogram film is a faithful transcription of the Porter novel which has sold more than 1,500,000 copies since its initial publication and is estimated to have been read by nearly twenty million people. Mrs. Porter is probably the most famous of American novelists, and has more best-sellers to her credit than any other American writer.

The current presentation marks the second time that this gripping novel has been brought to the screen. The silent version, produced many years ago, was one of the pictures which lifted Clara Bow to stardom. All of the flavor of the Porter original has been preserved and the Monogram production officials had the assistance, throughout the making of the picture, of Mrs. Jeanette Porter Meehan, only daughter of the famous novelist.

The difficult role of James MacFarlane, the young veteran, who finds death and happiness in the little seaside community, is Neil Hamilton, while appearing opposite him in the leading romantic role is pretty Betty Furness. Symphonic performance are rendered by such capable players as Hobart Bosworth, Emma Dunn, Edith Fellows, Helen Jerome Edie, Marion Shilling, James Burris, Barbara Bedford and Lafe McKee.

Christy Cabanne is to be complimented for his skillful direction of Adele Buffington's adaptation of the Porter novel. Harry Newman's photography is excellent, particularly in the seashore scenes.

Orange County May Increase Millage For "Relief" Work

Orlando, July 3.—(FNS)—Contending that the problem of relief is placed flat on the county's doorstep with the discontinuance of direct aid to some 120,000 citizens of Orange county, Mayors Baker of Winter Park and Estes of Orlando, advocate an increase in county millage to provide for a countywide relief organization.

"A millage setup to care for chronic indigents and relief cases is the answer to the problem," Mayor Estes said. "I see no reason for the duplication of effort that will materialize if each community in the county attempts to set up its own relief organization."

"The welfare bill itself says that the relief setup be placed on the county unit basis," he continued, "and there is no question in my mind but what that is the proper way to do it."

This same problem confronts city and county officials throughout the state and it is probable that mayors of other Florida cities will promptly concur with those of Orange county, that the matter is for County Commissioners to solve rather than city administrations.

AVON PARK, FLORIDA, FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1935

[PRICE: FIVE CENTS]

ELECTRIC RATES HERE ARE AMONG LOWEST IN STATE

Federal Power Commission Makes Survey of Florida Rates

Avon Park enjoys very low electrical rates compared with other cities in the state according to a report just received from the Federal Power Commission. In fact it enjoys the lowest rates of any town for 25 kilowatt hours among cities ranging from 2,500 to 5,000 population. For 100 kilowatt hours Avon Park ranks fourth in the same city classification and is second in the same classification for 250 hours.

The report shows typical bills charged by 12 private companies and 30 municipally owned plants for various quantities of electricity in the State of Florida and is published by the Federal Power Commission's Electric Rate Survey. Florida is especially interested in this survey as Hon. Herbert J. Drane, of Florida, is a member of the Federal Power Commission.

Compiled in the form of typical net monthly bills, this report consists of two tables. Table 1 is an alphabetic list of the rates for which rates were available, and presents the billing in cents for 15, 25, 40, 100, 150, 250 and 500 kw. hrs. of electricity as of January 1, 1935.

Table 2 presents 59 communities divided, according to population, into five groups. These communities are arranged with each group according to the size of the bill, from low to high.

In this latter table, the Jacksonville municipal plant is shown to have a 77.7% less rate for 25 kw. hrs. than is charged in Miami, and Jacksonville consumers may buy 250 kw. hrs. at 32.5% less rate than is paid for this amount by customers in St. Petersburg. Pensacola has a 29.6% cheaper rate for 100 kw. hrs. than is charged in Jacksonville.

In communities of from 10,000 to 25,000 population, customers of the Tallahassee municipal system pay 62.5% less for 25 kw. hrs. than is charged customers of the municipal plant at Lakeland and the Gainesville municipal plant bills its customers 49.9% less than the bill in Key West for 100 kw. hrs.

The greatest variance is found in communities of from 5,000 to 10,000 population in which the billing for 100 kw. hrs. is 122.2% greater in River Junction than the bill for the same quantity in Panama City. Users of 25 kw. hrs. may buy it at 64.3% less in DeLand than customers for the same quantity in Lake Worth.

In the 2,500 to 5,000 population group, Quincy is shown to have a 56.9% less rate for 25 kw. hrs. than Appalachicola and a 77.7% less rate for 250 kw. hrs. than Jacksonville Beach and Sebring.

During its year of duration, the Survey, acting under the direction of Congress as a purely fact-finding agency, has compiled the data from more than 15,000 communities throughout the nation.

The Florida report and similar reports for each State may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., at five cents a copy.

Rotarians Hear Paper By The Club Service Committee

The club service committee had charge of the program at the regular Rotary Club luncheon Wednesday noon at the Hotel. The committee had prepared a paper on the aims and objects of Rotary and this was read by the committee. The paper was read by Mr. Todd. There were a number of visitors at the meeting and they included:

Marvin E. Bram, of Sanford, Edward Keenan and J. B. McLendon of Frostproof, John G. Gravelle of Winter Garden, J. Reed Curry of Winter, William W. Loeferle of Winter, H. L. Louttit of West Palm Beach, H. V. Weems, Mike Kahn, Gen. S. E. Sebring of Sebring, Harry W. Loeferle of Winter, and William W. Loeferle of Winter.

The paper read by Mr. Todd covered an exceptional interest to Rotarians and the general public, giving the latter a comprehensive idea as to what Rotary is and what it stands for. The paper was both locally, nationally and internationally.

Florida Receives Excellent Publicity From Aviation Angle

Florida has received excellent publicity, especially from an aviation viewpoint, in the current issue of the New National Aeronautic Magazine and published by the National Aeronautic Association of which William G. McAdoo is president. The article on Florida is entitled "Alfaring over Florida," and is descriptive of an airplane trip over the state taken by Charles F. Hornet, an executive of the association.

The article is not only an aviator's idea of Florida, but it also tells of many historical and important cities and landmarks. The writer gives some of the state's early history and is very readable and interesting from several angles.

Mr. Hornet pays a special tribute to Major A. B. McMillen, director of the aviation division of the state road department. It tells what he has done for aviation in Florida, the number of airports and their facilities but it also tells what is planned for the future.

The article deals with Florida from an angle hitherto untouched and should be extremely valuable to the state.

SHERMAN LUMBER CO. REBUILD AFTER FIRE

Will Have Planing Mill Back In Operation This Week

M. M. Glasgow, local manager of the Sherman Lumber Company at Sebring, announced this week that the planing mill which was recently destroyed by fire will be rebuilt and in operation by the last of this week.

The fire occurred June 22. The prompt action of the fire departments of Sebring, Arcadia, Red Hill, Lake Placid, Sebring and Avon Park, Mr. Glasgow stated, prevented the complete destruction of the mill and thousands of dollars worth of lumber, which would have been thrown 160 men out of work, temporarily at least.

Not a man was laid off, Mr. Glasgow stated and work on rebuilding the planing mill was started as soon as the debris could be cleared away. The main part of the mill was not damaged by the fire.

The prompt work and valuable help of the firemen from the various towns is greatly appreciated by the company, Mr. Glasgow said, and although the loss of $25,000 is only partially covered by insurance, the mill will be back to normal production in a short time.

Highlands County Singing Ass'n Being Organized

The Highlands County Singing Association is being organized and will meet Sunday at the Sebring Baptist church at 2:30 p. m. On Sunday July 21, the members of the South Side Baptist church here and plenty of good singing and instrumental music is promised. The association will not meet on the same days that the Ridge Singing Convention meets in the county.

Good Interest In Nazarene Revival

The revival services at the Nazarene Church are progressing nicely and the attendance and interest is excellent. Rev. Mrs. A. Redmon and son, Penon, with their inspirational singing, clear, logical and spirit-filled preaching are proving to be an attractive and a blessing to the people.

There will be a service each night except Saturday at which time there will be an outdoor meeting on the Mall.

The revival meeting will continue through next week.

Urge Cleanup To Control Mosquitoes

Due to the prevalence of mosquitoes here at this time several groups of citizens are urging a cleanup of yards and vacant lots around the city. They are asking all householders and a property owners to remove all standing water, such as in old cans and similar objects that collect water and become breeding places for the pests. A cleanup of this kind will reduce the risk of malaria to a considerable extent, it is stated.

FLORIDIANS ARE ASKED TO aid LEE MEMORIAL

Help Wanted To Develop Virginia Memorial To General Lee

Miami, July 10.—(FNS)—Under the able direction of Mrs. Ralph Worthington, state director for the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc., Floridians are asked to join in the movement to develop a memorial to General Lee at Stratford Hall, Westmoreland County, Virginia, into a National Shrine in memory of the great Confederate chieftain.

Colonel Thomas Lee, native born governor of the Colony of Virginia, built Stratford Hall between 1728-1738. His wife was Hannah Ludwell of Old Williamsburg whose parents were buried at Jamestown. At Stratford Hall were born their patriot sons: Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee, leaders in the first constructive session of the Continental Congress and signers of the Declaration of Independence. William Lee and Arthur Lee, Commissioners to European courts during the Revolutionary period, and Thomas Lee, Jr., all of whom materially aided in the upbuilding of this country and the creation and maintenance of its institutions.

Stratford Hall was also the home of "Light Horse Harry" Lee, Washington's favorite officer, grandnephew of Colonel Thomas Lee, and his sons, Commodore Sidney Smith Lee, distinguished sailor and one time commander of the United States Army, for three years superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, who, in the war between the States became the great Confederate Chief. It is with the special object of honoring this man that Stratford Hall is being developed into a national shrine.

Three Sentenced By Circuit Judge Barker This Week

Two men were sentenced to county jail and one to a year at Balford, by Circuit Judge W. J. Barker this week.

Willie Mitchell, colored, charged with being a "peeping Tom," drove one year in jail at hard labor.

Maudey, colored, guilty of stealing a Ford car from a negro in Avon Park, and drove three months.

Perry Boyd, of Avon Park, pleaded guilty to a murder and was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. He is said to have attempted to kill Senator Parker in Avon Park June 3. It was rumored at the courthouse that because of his extreme youth the judge may reconsider and give him a lighter sentence.

Naming New Arrival Develops Argument

It did not go so far as anticipated for two at sunrise, by accident to all reports the naming of Policeman Jim Cravens' new baby was the cause of serious discussion between His Honor, Mayor M. E. Covington and Dr. L. W. Chandler, attending physician.

Jim wanted to name the baby Marcus Wayne, after both of the distinguished citizens. That was alright except as to which name took precedence. The doctor wanted his first and said it should be Wayne Marcus and the mayor took the opposite view. Doc says that as compared to the young hopeful will be named Wayne Marcus, but the mayor when last heard from was not so certain.

Wells' Little Girls Have New Pet Pig

"Pork Chop" is the name of a pet pig recently presented to Marjorie and Betty Jo, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wells. The pet is a little white pig and is very tame. It is very tame and takes nourishment from a bottle, being very partial to milk. It is of an acquiring nature and is very intelligent, everything besides following them around like a dog.

Garden Club To Meet

The Garden Club will meet on Friday morning of next week at the home of Mrs. M. E. Covington. The meeting will convene at 9 o'clock and all members are asked to be present.

Work To Start Soon Improving County School Buildings

Specifications are being prepared for the purpose of receiving bids on the installation of improvements in the various schools of the county. Funds for the improvements have been arranged for through the F. W. A.

The projects have been approved and it is planned to install steam heating plants in the Sebring and Avon Park school buildings and the water supply and sanitary equipment of the Venus and Lake Placid schools are to be improved.

The specifications will be completed before the opening of school next September, according to information obtained from the Superintendent of Schools, Col. F. N. K. Bailey, yesterday.

TAX REVISION LEAGUE STARTLING FIGURES

Issue Bulletin Stating Cost of State Government Increased 31%

The Florida Tax Revision League, an organization which has as one of its objects the elimination of all ad valorem tax system, in a bulletin mailed out to some of its members and officials, which according to the list appearing on their stationery, is composed of many prominent men throughout the state, gives some startling information about the increase in cost of state government.

In some quarters it has been stated that this organization has endeavored to tear down the tax structure of the state in order to force the passage of a sales tax and eliminate the tax on property. Regardless of their plans or activities the statements appearing in their bulletin are startling and prove that something should be done to stop the mounting cost of government.

The bulletin states in part: "Developments within the past 30 days demonstrate conclusively that it is the desire of the taxpayers of Florida that the activities of this organization be continued. This bulletin is to definitely advise that the organization will continue its efforts for a sane revision and modernization of our tax structure to reduce the burden of taxation and effectively reduce our cost of government."

"The per capita cost of government in Florida today is approximately double the average cost in seven nearby southern states. This excessive cost is completely thrilling progress and efficiency in the state. Whether you are a large 'property taxpayer' or not this enormous burden is directly threatening your very existence and every citizen of the state should co-operate fully in an organized effort to curb the rampant increase in the cost of state and local government."

"In spite of the more or less organized demands of the people for economy the 1935 session of the legislature has determined opposition of a small minority group of that body, passed an appropriation bill for the support of the state government which shows an increase of 26.6 percent over the appropriation bill passed two years ago. We are attaching herewith a memorandum showing the enormous increase in the cost of certain departments of state government."

Figures tabulated below show appropriations made by the 1935 Legislature for the operation of the major departments of state government as compared to the appropriations by the 1931 Legislature for the operation of these same departments.

	1931	1935
Department of State	$5,000	$10,500
Governor	65,000	72,700
Sec. of State	280,500	298,000

STEALING FRUIT IS CLASSED AS FELONY

Rating of Supreme Court Will Help Curb Fruit Stealing

Tampa, July 9.—(Special)—For a long time in Florida it has been only a misdemeanor to steal citrus fruit from a grove. But now the grover gets a break in that the Florida Supreme Court has ruled that the theft of citrus fruits from a grove constitutes larceny, punishable by more than five years in the state prison or by a fine of not more than $1,000.

Says one prominent fruit man, "I have personally had the experience of many cases where fruit had been stolen from the grover and even though he would catch the thief, there was very little that could be done." Says the Florida Supreme Court now, "Persons who steal such fruit from groves are committing a crime and can be punished, the same as burglary or any other class of thieves."

Eighteen thousand growers in the state of Florida will welcome the new legal protection over their citrus fruits, in which they have invested considerable time, money and hard labor. It does begin to look as if the citrus industry of 1935 would be a year of greater prospects for growers, that is if legislation can accomplish anything.

Mrs. Parker Speaks At Wesley B'Hood Meeting Wednesday

An interesting story was told of child-life and child-marriage customs in India, which was the subject of Mrs. W. J. Parker, who was guest speaker at the regular monthly meeting of Wesley B'hood, last Wednesday night at the Hotel of that city. Mrs. Parker, who is a missionary in India, and can speak and write Bengali as well as English, told of the custom of child-marriage in that far-off country. Castes, she asserted, were the great obstruction to the spread of the gospel in that country. The education of females is a very unusual thing, and much of the education that is obtained is through the pictures on the wall. The education of females is a very unusual thing, and much of the education that is obtained is through the pictures on the wall.

The same extent of acquaintance exists on the part of her husband. The father of the bride must pay all expenses of the wedding which consists of payment of all traveling expenses of relatives of both bride and groom and the entertainment of guests. A dowry is also paid by father. On account of this great expense, a daughter in the family is not regarded as much of an asset, and the father of the girl is sometimes hopelessly in debt for many years, in the matter of wedding expenses incurred in marrying off his girl. In recent years, women are receiving more attention; some of them are being educated and a very few hold political positions.

The betrothed would contribute $2 per month to benevolence during the ensuing year. The bride of the church prepared and served a bounteous supper, which was attended by 38 members and friends, observing "husband and wife" night. C. H. Parker offered the invocation and L. M. Orr pronounced the benediction.

Apples Growing Near Avon Park

Apples, the nice red, rosy kind, are growing about three and a half miles north of Avon Park. Harry Byrge has two young trees that are bearing a fine crop and has a very appetizing appearance. The trees are of the Red Delicious variety and are doing well in this climate.

Bank Statement Shows Conditions To Be Good Here

Judging from the report of the Barnett National Bank of Avon Park appearing in this issue and comparing it with the report of March 4 conditions in this community show a decided improvement. During the period under consideration deposits had increased $50,098.49, from $294,040.06 to $344,074.55.

Cash and money due from other banks have shown a big increase from $91,015.27 to $137,393.87 as have United States and bonds and securities held by the bank. In March these were shown to be $191,200.00 and today they total $222,342.31, an increase of $31,082.31. The total resources of the bank are shown to be $422,608.54.

W. T. Condes, vice president of the bank, considers the report indicates a healthy condition here and believes the present summer will be much better from a business standpoint than any in the past several years.

The Tropical State Bank at Sebring shows a nice increase in deposits, indicating that money is more plentiful in the country than formerly.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR MUSICAL STUDENTS

Stetson University Offering Scholarships To Outstanding Students of Music

DeLand.—For the fourth consecutive year Stetson University's music department will award a $100 scholarship to an outstanding music student in each Florida county for study in piano, voice or other orchestral instrument at the DeLand institution during the coming academic year.

County contests will be held throughout the summer to determine the scholarship winners, according to Dr. W. E. Duckwitz, head of Stetson's music department, who is supervising the work of selection in each of the sixty-seven counties.

In commenting on the Stetson policy of awarding young musicians through scholarship awards, Dr. Duckwitz said: "A great opportunity exists for teaching the public to appreciate music. All over the country there is growing demand for instructors in class or group teaching of piano and other musical instruments."

"The increased interest in music is due in large part to the attitude of educators. Universities are giving more credit in music for the A. B. and M. A. degrees than heretofore, while public school authorities are requiring teaching of music for their teachers in musical subjects."

Theatre Building Is Struck By Lightning

During the storm of Thursday evening the Avon Theatre building was struck by lightning and a corner of the roof torn away, all the water to pour in. The electrical equipment was undamaged but due to the amount of water the show was closed the audience received "rain checks."

There was a false alarm of fire during the storm and while hunting for the alleged fire, the Ford truck was drenched out at the west end of the Mall and one of the big fire trucks collided with Mayor M. E. Covington's car near the Jaccard Hotel but little damage resulted.

Nazarene Church Recalls Pastor

The annual recall meeting of the church was held last Monday night by Rev. J. E. Redmon, district superintendent, at which time the present pastor, Rev. W. J. Parker, was called to serve for another year.

According to the policy of the Church of the Nazarene, a two-thirds vote by the membership present and voting is required to elect.

The pastor expressed his appreciation for the confidence of the people and stated that he would stay and would do his best for the people and the church.

Col. Walker Leaves Far North. Col. G. Edwin Walker, prominent attorney, is planning to leave Sebring for a month's vacation in Tennessee and other points in the north.

ROBERT ROBERTS KILLED IN WRECK THURSDAY MORN

Companion, Roy Lee Allen, In Sebring Hospital Severely Injured

Robert James Roberts, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Roberts was killed about one o'clock Thursday morning on the road to Wauchula, east of the Highlands and Hardee county line. His companion, Roy Lee Allen of Washington, D. C. and in whose car Roberts was riding, received a dislocated hip and a broken pelvis and is confined at Weems' hospital at Sebring. The funeral arrangements for Roberts were completely wrecked.

The boys were returning to the Roberts' home in Hardee county and the car apparently skidded on the wet road and was out of control. The car turned over several times, Allen was thrown clear and Roberts was pinned beneath the car when it crashed. Roberts received a crushed skull and other injuries to the head.

Roberts was born at Zolfo and was 22 years old at the time of his death. He received his education in the Avon Park schools and at the A. and M. College, Madison, Wis., and at the Georgia Military Academy. It was at the latter school that he met Allen and they became fast friends. Allen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Allen of Washington, D. C. and had been visiting Roberts for the past week or more.

Funeral arrangements had not been made this morning, but it is expected services will be held here tomorrow, Saturday, morning at the Methodist church with Rev. J. B. Reid officiating, with interment in Bonaventure Cemetery.

Besides the parents there survive two brothers, Washington and Francis, and two sisters, Mrs. Bernard Clark of Daytona Beach and Miss Anna Dee Roberts.

Mrs. Cora Luxton Died Here Thursday

Mrs. Cora Kinsley Luxton died at her home on Summit Avenue on Monday, July 11, after three weeks confining illness. The memorial service was held at 2 p. m. in the local funeral parlors, conducted by her pastor, Dr. A. P. Vaughn, of the Congregational church, the musical numbers sung by Mr. and Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Vaughn. The pall-bearers were intimate friends of the family, Martin Huebner, Theo Weisleyer, J. L. Masters, Chas. H. Stephens, M. H. Grubbe and E. L. Thompson. Interment was in Bonaventure cemetery, attended by many friends.

The deceased is survived by her husband, James M. Luxton, her father, H. M. Kinsley, residing here, and only brother, Arthur M. Kinsley, of Elkhardt, Indiana. The brother was here for a brief visit, returning north only a week ago.

Cora Ellen Kinsley, daughter of Harley M. and Emma Bender Kinsley, was born June 2, 1875 in Cass County, Mich. In her early life she was married to the late Mr. Kinsley, who moved to the vicinity of Elkhardt, Indiana. After finishing her schooling she taught school for a short time, then held a position in the office of the Miles Medical company for many years. She visited Florida with her parents, and after the death of her mother, moved to Avon Park with her father in 1917. On Oct. 4, 1919 she was married to James M. Luxton, Rev. Benjamin Stock of this church officiating, and this has been the family home from that time.

Mrs. Luxton united with the Church of the Nazarene but was really interested in a Sunday school class, the Golden Rule Girls, which has maintained its organization, its yearly meetings and regular correspondence between members to the present time. She received a letter from the class during her illness, and was greatly comforted by it. Bringing her membership to this church, she was active in its work as an officer in the Sunday school, and in the various organizations. With her husband she was for some years a member of the local Eastern Star.

Quicker than lightning in her good works, warm and loyal in her friendships, courageous and uncompromising in suffering, she was saddened by her loss is mourned by very many friends.

A special meeting of the Women's Club has been called for Monday afternoon at three o'clock at the club rooms in the city hall.

Anglo-French Rift
Surprise for Blue Eagle
Uncle Sam is looking to spend a few lines tell you that the bank-

head bill, making the government guaranteed a loan of one thousand million dollars to help tenant farmers pay their taxes, has passed. No tax or excitement about it.

Senator King wanted to cut the one thousand million to two hundred million, but was "shouted down."

Do you recall the excitement when Theodore Roosevelt wanted to build the Panama canal for two or three hundred millions? Now "one billion" is almost "small change."

Some young criminals, apparently, can be adequately managed only by the electric chair. In their case it seems useless to talk of reform, or "another chance." They are distinctly of the rattlesnake class. Consider a twenty-five-year-old machinist, captured in Peoria, who confessed to murder when the clothing of a dead girl was found in his lap. "Yes, I did it," he sobbed. This young murderer kept a diary, which in one month recorded 18 attacks on young women. The electric chair should cure his sobbing.

In the lute of Anglo-French friendship and understanding there comes a rift, wide enough to let a coach and four drive through. England, dealing directly with Germany and Hitler, now rejects the French suggestion of a "consolidated pact," which would commit Britain to consult France before reaching any important diplomatic conclusion.

"That ought to interest this country, which agrees to consult Germany on earth before building more ships, or fitting its big guns to the most effective angle."

It is stated, bluntly, by British officials: "Britain is placing greater stress on friendly co-operation with Germany, closer consultation with the British dominions, and a steady drift toward co-operation with the United States."

News from the Department of Commerce would surprise the recent deceased Blue Eagle, and others: "Business shows sharp upturn throughout country since death of Blue Eagle."

This is the skeleton announcement; the details show retail sales increasing, in spite of abnormal spring weather. In some of the big cities.

Union labor demands that all United States railroads be nationalized, owned by the people, run by the government. Reason? Private owners do not know how to run them. The roads are run by men, not confederated, presumably, which would mean twenty to thirty more billions of national debt.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. and Laura La Plante—surely you know her—after work on the set met Monte Carlo's gambling room dressed up and presented themselves for an evening's entertainment.

The doorknocker said bluntly: "You work in Monaco, so you may not enter the gambling rooms. That's the rule."

Monte Carlo wisdom is in that rule. The Casino spends money among Monaco's inhabitants, but will not take the inhabitants' money, and so avoids trouble.

Another wise ruler is Mr. Bradley, who owns the tourist "side open" gambling house at Palm Beach, but will not allow natives to lose in his place. When you gamble, you know your loss. If you do not know it, try.

Musell has a habit, annoying to Britons especially, of dishing up past history. He is expected to tell the British: "I want a protectorate over Ethiopia, with two hands, and I invite you to remember what happened to Germany's colonies after the war. You promised to give Italy her share if she joined the allies, which she did. The war ended, and you British gobbled up all the German colonies worth having."

Sheriff Miller of Martinez, Calif., knows that the weakest thing in superstitions men is his mind. An actor that you have him. An actor Torrest said he had not killed Area Cabrera. In a locked drawer in a cell occupied by Torrest the sheriff concealed a loud speaker, muffled to make it sound ghostly, and continually Torrest, not knowing when it came, heard a voice saying in Spanish: "You killed me, I am Area's ghost. You had better confess. You know you killed me." Torrest thought it unwise to ignore the advice of a ghost and confessed accordingly.

NEW'S COMMITTEE STRIKES AT SHIPYARDS—NEW DEAL BILLS GO FORWARD.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

SENATOR NYE of North Dakota and his committee on unanionous do not have a very high opinion of American shipbuilders and they feel that strong legislation is needed "to keep them from confusing public defense needs with their private pocketbook."

Therefore the committee, in a preliminary report, asks that laws be enacted to do these things:

1. Prevent "collusion" in bidding for army construction jobs.

2. Prevent American patents from getting into the hands of foreign powers.

3. Limit profits to 8 per cent of the total cost to the government in cases where the government assumes the risks of the enterprise, or to 10 per cent where the government does not.

4. Requiring the shipbuilders' "lobbyists" register with the government and disclose their income and expenditures.

The committee finds, in the matter of collusion, that there was "an enormous amount of money" so that in bidding for many contracts each concern was able to get the contract it wanted at a price that was as high as 30 per cent.

It says the navy has been at the mercy of the shipbuilders in preparing plans for war vessels and also in determining what were fair prices.

"A series of bids are put before the navy," the report recites, "and the navy has to take the low one and the taxpayers have to hope and pray that the low one is somewhere within a million dollars of being reasonable."

Construction of naval vessels is declared to be more costly in private yards than in government yards.

"While the evidence is not all in," the report says, "the indications are that the navy has lost the government from one to two million dollars more per cruiser than the navy yards."

The committee charges big shipbuilders with breaking up in the Navy naval limitation conference in 1927 and immediately launching price-increase campaigns.

"Made profits of 35 and 254 and 30.9 per cent on the cruisers."

EVEN President Long cheered when they roared. Roosevelt's unexpected message on redistribution of wealth and increase of taxation of the rich was read to Congress.

The Chief Executive offered a program that he hopes will pay part of the vast expenses of the New Deal and at the same time create huge fortunes and check the growth of big corporations. He doesn't expect congress to do the entire job at this session, and admitted that leaders at once set about stopping the radicals who wanted immediate enactment.

The President's taxation plan is frankly aimed against the wealthy, especially the men with million-dollar incomes. Of them there were 46 in 1933. In his message he said that existing tax policies have not prevented "unjust concentration of wealth and power" and added the warning: "Social unrest and a deepening sense of unfairness are dangerous to our national life which we must minimize by rigorous methods."

The following legislation he recommended for enactment during the present session in order to obtain ample revenue without hampering enterprise and to distribute tax burdens equitably:

1. High inheritance and gift taxes on "all very large amounts received by any one legatee or beneficiary." Segregation of this revenue for reduction of the national debt.

2. Tax levies to restrict "very great individual net incomes."

3. Substitution of a graduated corporate tax ranging from 10% to 16% per cent for the existing 15% per cent rate.

4. For conservation of the national debt, the President proposed:

1. Elimination "of unnecessary holding companies in all lines of business," by discriminatory taxation.

members, Democrats and Republicans alike, had argued earnestly that this measure never would stand up in the Supreme court, but when their names were called nearly every one of them voted for it. The only dissenting ones were Moore of New Jersey, Democrat, and Hastings of Delaware, Hale of Maine, Metcalf of Rhode Island, Austin of Vermont and Townsend of Delaware, Republicans. This social security measure will affect about 30,000,000 beneficiaries in the immediate future and by 1939, it is estimated, will cost the federal government more than $5,000,000,000 a year. These are its main features:

1. An appropriation of $38,400,000 for the fiscal year 1935, including $40,750,000 for grants in aid to states for old age assistance. In addition there are authorized annual appropriations for the old age reserve fund, graduated from $205,000,000 in 1937 to $2,150,000,000 in 1940.

2. Income tax on employers and excise tax on employers, for old age benefits, beginning in each case at 1 per cent of the pay roll in 1937 and reaching the maximum of 3 per cent in 1940. In addition there is a pay roll tax on employers for unemployment insurance beginning at 1 per cent in 1938, increasing to 2 per cent in 1939, and to 3 per cent, the maximum, in 1940.

3. Grants in aid to states on a matching basis for assistance to persons afflicted with Old Age Pensioners' contribution not to exceed $5 per month.

4. Old age benefits after January 1, 1942, ranging from $10 to $25 per month, depending upon the total amounts of wages earned after December 1, 1939, and before reaching sixty-five years of age.

5. A 50 per cent credit to employers for taxes paid into state unemployment insurance funds, the other 50 per cent to be apportioned among the states for administration of their unemployment insurance.

6. Grants in aid to states for an equal matching basis for material and child health service. An annual appropriation of $3,800,000 is authorized.

7. Grants in aid to states on an equal matching basis for the care of crippled children. An annual appropriation of $2,500,000 is authorized.

8. An annual appropriation of $4,500,000 through the children's bill for the care of dependent children, the federal government putting up $1 to the states for each child.

9. An annual appropriation of $4,500,000 through the children's bill for the care of dependent children, the federal government putting up $1 to the states for each child.

GREAT BRITAIN'S realistic government finds the best path toward general peace in Europe is conciliation of Germany. It has yielded to Hitler's naval demands and concluded a bilateral pact with the reds, disregarding the desires and fears of France. The agreement acknowledges Germany's right to build a fleet up to 35 per cent of the tonnage of the British fleet, and what is more important, permits Germany 45 per cent, and in certain circumstances, parity with the empire in submarine tonnage. Submarines were forbidden to Germany by the treaty of Versailles.

France, of course, entered an immediate and strong protest, and Captain Anthony Eden was hurried over to Paris to explain Britain's action and justify it. He didn't have much success, for Premier Laval told him the French national decision was to wait and continue to be that organization of collective security must precede any legitimization of Germany's rearmament.

LABOR policy in a democracy is not a program conceived by a government. It is a program of action which the people who earn their living as wage earners and those who employ them in production and distribution must work out together."

So asserts Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins in her annual report to congress, and she sets forth these six specific duties of the government in this respect:

1. To do everything in its power to establish minimum basic standards for labor, below which competition should not be permitted to force standards of health, wages and hours.

2. To further peaceful settlements of controversies and relieve labor of the necessity of resorting to force in order to secure equitable conditions and the right to be heard.

3. Through legislation and fostering co-operation between employers and workers to make every job the best that the human mind can devise as to physical conditions, human relations and wages.

Washable Silks of New Importance

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WASHABLE silks have a new importance because of the wide variety of types which are fashion fairs. No longer is it simply a decision between a dull silk crepe and a washable silk shirting, now that so many new and intriguing weaves have entered the field of silks that hamper.

First in the present fashion ranks are the new silks and the silk shirtings in versatile weaves. The silks are now a very simple light except that they have more luster, but being made of silk they have the natural elasticity of silk and therefore are easier to keep fresh and unrumpled. Then, too, the new silks have the advantage of taking strong dyes easily and are at their loveliest in the vivid peasant colors which are so popular this summer.

They also come in some very smart modernistic patterns. The latter favor bold plaids and geometric textures, the technique radically different from that used on silk crepes. For sports hats, belts and daytime bags, for belts and for separate scarfs, the checked and plaid silks are doing things with a dash and go that sit right in with the spirit of summer gaily.

Silk linens are particularly to be commended in all white. Its smartness is evident in the two-piece suit to the left in the picture, which has a black skirt and a jacket with white silk linens. A polka dot silk ascot is worn with it.

The very attractive two-piece modernistic dress centered in the group is fashioned of a gold colored silk linen. The ascot is a black skirt and a jacket with white silk linens. A polka dot silk ascot is worn with it.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

The future, the past, is going to be a concern for now on.

Future trying about mistakes you have made, big or little, try to arrange that those mistakes will not be made again. What is done, is done.

Profit by it if it has been beneficial. Forget it if it has been harmful. Try, after this, to do nothing that you will be forced to undo by and by.

If you have the hurry habit, and have suffered by it, proceed with a little more care next time.

If you have neglected your education, don't sit down and whine about it. There is still time to fit yourself for what you want to do.

I know of great many men who, because their early training has been neglected, and because they cared more about passing examinations than about what they might do with their futures have convinced themselves that they are failures, and that it will be futile to try to succeed.

But if they have the will to succeed, they will succeed, even if they have wasted years that should have been devoted to effort.

The important thing is to gain ground, to equip yourself more and more for the game.

Every time you make a serious mistake, resolve that that particular mistake shall not be committed again.

Every time you feel ashamed about the time you have wasted, work double-time till the waste has been made up.

I could cite dozens of cases of men who, late in life have begun all over again, and got away with it.

Mark Twain tried piloting till the railroad displaced the Mississippi river, then he turned to gold mining.

He was unsuccessful at gold mining, so he turned to writing. And at writing he made a great success, and soon was earning more money a year than he had made in many years spent "fodding himself."

If you try to analyze your own mental make-up, you will learn that there is one thing you can do, and will enjoy doing more than anything else.

"No man can succeed in producing great things who is not thorough in his own work."

Look to dealing with himself. —James Russell Lowell.

One human being you can control—if you try hard enough. One single career you can guide —if you try hard enough.

If you have children, you can influence them—for a time. But soon they will get out of your hands.

Don't fool yourself. Don't, considering somebody else's career, say: "I could do as well as he does, or better, if I tried."

Maybe you could. But you've got to find out. You have a troublesome person on your hands. That's you.

Look yourself squarely in the face every day. If you've done mean things, admit it. Don't make excuses.

Being human, you will be prone to criticize other people, but you have no right to think they are little about them. Restrain your judgment of them until you are sure what their motives are.

As for you, if you are misunderstood—and about half the people in the world imagine that they are—it is your own fault.

You can be frank and honest if you want to. That may not always be easy but it is a thing that can be acquired by practice.

Set a high mark for yourself. Before you condemn others for not being like you, think of the fact that you are not doing actions of very much the same kind.

Keep every action of your system. Keep your sympathy working. You doubtless expect it from others.

Keep your sympathy working. You doubtless expect it from others.

National Topics Interpreted

Washington.—President Roosevelt took the country by surprise when he suddenly dispatched a message to congress asking for a new tax law that would have the same effect, although in a limited scope, of the "share-the-wealth" program advanced by Senator Huey Long and Father Coughlin, the radio priest. It may be said that the President not only surprised but stunned congress by the proposal. It was more concerning which there has been no forecast and it has taken some research to show how it links with other New Deal reform plans. But a link does exist. Of that there can be no doubt.

Succinctly, Mr. Roosevelt has demanded that congress enact a tax law that will yield, according to estimate, something like $1,000,000,000 annually. It is designed to place the heaviest drain on the rich, whether they be rich corporations or rich individuals. In terms, the President observes that it was a program to tax "static wealth" and increase purchasing power of those not blessed with this world's goods.

The key to the program is the tax on inheritance and gifts. These two taxes must operate jointly if they are to succeed at all. If an individual of wealth wants to avoid already heavy income taxes, he has only to give away his property before his death. In the new Roosevelt proposal, those who receive these gifts would have to pay a tax upon them as they would on any other income. There is a question as to its constitutionality but many able lawyers believe the gift tax will be sustained by the Supreme court.

The second phase of the new tax bill boosts rates of taxes on income. At present, the individual with an income of $10,000,000 is taxed at exactly the same rate as the individual having an income of $5,000,000. Of course, the $5,000,000 income pays more total tax, but the point is the rate is the same on the smaller income. Mr. Roosevelt proposes that the rate should be gradually increased above $1,000,000, so that as it is graduated from the lowest income taxpayer to those receiving $10,000,000 annually. There seems to be little opposition to this particular item in the bill although it is natural to expect that attempts will be made to alter that suggestion since there is a school of economic thought which insists that tax rates can be high enough to discourage investments bringing a return to the individual of a size large enough for the government to take the bulk of that income.

The third major item in the President's program provides for a graduated tax on incomes of corporations. Corporations now are taxed at the rate of 15% per cent of their net income whatever it may be. Mr. Roosevelt thinks this basis is improper. He proposes to have the smaller corporations pay only 10% per cent and that, as the capital of the corporations increase, they be subjected to a gradually higher rate until a top of 10% is applied on the incomes of the largest corporations. Certain modifications or classifications were offered in this connection so that some types of corporations may not be compelled to pay the maximum rate.

The President's program for new taxes was received without protest. More groans than applause greeted the President's message was right down Senator Long's alley. The Louisiana senator has made hundreds of speeches advocating some part of the proposal now offered by the Chief Executive.

Congressional reaction to the President's message included more groans than applause. A political campaign is due next year. Democratic leaders in many instances face re-election. It does not require the services of a soothsayer to tell you that the new taxes are hard for a political candidate to defend.

Superficially, therefore, it would seem that Mr. Roosevelt was playing bad politics when he proposed a tax bill at this time. Such, however, is not the case. Editorial conclusions by dozens of newspapers which understand the political situation in this country at this time are unanimous in terms of a political maneuver. Their conclusions are based on the fact that a candidate seeking political office can go out and say to the people of small income "Look what we are doing to the rich." Thus it is made to appear that a new wave of anti-rich propaganda is about to engulf us.

Business interests naturally are alarmed over the prospects. Thousands of corporations have been busy for some time to make end meet in these depressing years. Now that there is a prospect for some additional business and more profits, they are concerned with a Washington program of taxation designed to go beyond the present tax burden.

It is true that some of them will be benefited by lower rates, but many economists are of the opinion that these corporations receiving the benefits of lower rates actually are in the best financial condition of any in the country. Contrary to the argument often heard, the truth seems to be that the smaller business entities have come through the depression much better than those units with great investments and great capital funds. The answer lies in the fact that in the case of the smaller corporations, the stock usually is closely held and they are units for the most part individually managed. In the case of the larger corporations, thousands of stock holders have a voice in selection of the corporate management and this management cannot be held as flexible as in instances where the word or direction of one man is controlling. In addition, small corporations are not subjected to great overhead expenses like the larger business bodies. The large corporation must maintain its organization and not even when work is slack cut down its fixed charges such as interest on debt and plant operation to the same extent. So, there are many who believe the high rate of tax becomes a penalty, the main object of which is to break up one of history's most noted spectacles when Pennsylvania Sons of the Revolution met at Valley Forge.

The Republican national committee is sitting virtually asphyxiated by its easy chair. But Mr. Roosevelt's recent challenge of Supreme court decisions and his demand for constitutional revision is not being allowed to die. Everywhere around Washington, opponents of the New Deal are making attempts to keep the issue alive. Their claim is that Mr. Roosevelt put himself on a political hook when he offered criticism of the Supreme court, a co-ordinate branch of the government. They are determined to keep him on that hook if they can.

It is interesting to note how Mr. Roosevelt, observing his reduction to his initial statements concerning the NRA decision, has maintained silence on the point since. It is equally interesting to note how some of his mainstays and advisers have kept the issue bobbing up here and there throughout the country. Such men as Senator Robinson of Arkansas, senate majority leader, and Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, probably the President's closest friend in the senate, have made speeches lately using much the same tone and language as did the President in that memorable press conference. Every other administration spokesman has done the same thing. These speeches, whether with the continual jabbing and poking by New Deal opponents are serving to keep the question before the country. New Deal opponents frankly are joyful at the opportunity they say the President provided them.

In the meanwhile, as said above, the Republican national committee has been doing next to nothing. The condition is serving to build a fire under Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the national committee, and is drawing criticism as well to Senator Hastings of Delaware, and Representative Bolton of Ohio, both chairmen of the senatorial congressional committee. Some Republicans are saying that the Roosevelt administration is being allowed to wander without guide or anchor and that a golden chance to gain important results is being wholly wasted because of the inactivity of these two committees.

An old tale about the Blue Eagle has just come to light. It was not disclosed until after the Blue Eagle had been buried under the avalanche of a Supreme court decision holding NRA edicts unconstitutional. The story involves the patenting of the design. Artists conceived the Blue Eagle as the NRA insignia. To protect it and prevent unauthorized use of the insignia the design was rushed through the United States patent office. The design was then turned over to an artist at the patent office with instructions to make the necessary prints required by law. He had proceeded only for a brief period on the work when he left his desk to notify the commissioner of patents of what he deemed to be a mistake in the design. The words were prophetic. He called attention to the fact that one wing of the Blue Eagle contained more feathers than the other and added:

"Any bird built like that can only fly in a circle."

To shorten the narrative, let it be said that the artist was not so much proved with his work. And let it be added, the Blue Eagle did fly only in a circle.

The "mups" called a close one again. Now they have a chance to hear such quawks from the other side. The league has made him an umpire!

BANNERS of Colonies Revived; Today's Jobless Women PARADE

The thirteen bright flags of America's earliest days unfurled to the breeze once more at the scene of one of history's most noted spectacles when Pennsylvania Sons of the Revolution met at Valley Forge.

It was the 157th anniversary of the evacuation of Philadelphia during the Revolutionary war. Pennsylvania's men of today dedicated an exact replica of one of the rude log huts occupied by the brave soldiers from that colony during the winter of 1777-78.

Almost at the same time another kind of warfare, serious but peaceful, was going on in another city replete with memories of the Revolution—Boston. Unarmed women, badly in need of jobs, picked the headquarters of the emergency relief administration in the home of the brown bread and beans, married women, prosperous and in their plenitude of work.

FARM POULTRY

POULTRY MUST HAVE PROPER ATTENTION

Several Valuable Pointers by Poultry Expert.

By O. C. Ufford, Extension Poultryman, Colorado State College.

The raising of turkey poulters is different in some respects from raising baby chicks, and there are a number of pertinent points that should be carefully considered. Suggestions to turkey raisers are:

1. Baby poulters are much slower in learning to eat than chicks, and a great deal of patience has to be practiced sometimes in order to get them started. Ordinarily a good mash placed before them will attract them. When milk is used as first feed, young poulters will not readily take it to other feeds.

2. Plenty of hoppers or feeding space is essential.

3. Poulters are rapid growers and require a ration that will analyze 25 to 30 per cent protein. They require a great deal more green feed than the start than do chicks, and its growth and condition at market time.

4. Any skimping of rations to poulters is a mistake. There is a close relationship between the amount and kind of feed a bird consumes and its growth and condition at market time.

5. Poulters are apt to crowd and pile up in corners at night and must be watched to see that the brooder house will help in keeping them spread out.

6. Burlap sacks spread around the brooder at night for poulters to rest on, and removed in the morning, are a great convenience in keeping the brooder house clean. Young poulters will start roosting at about three weeks of age if low roosts are provided.

Housed Birds Eat More Feed and Lay More Eggs

Experiments conducted in several sections of the United States indicate that if housing conditions, rations, and management are satisfactory, housed birds will lay more eggs than free range birds. Birds that are housed will eat more grain and mash which are necessary for high egg production.

The eggs produced by confined birds will probably have pale yolks and be held by birds on free range. Green feed adds color to the egg yolk. The egg buyer in the city prefers eggs with pale yolks.

Then, too, if the birds eat an excess amount of green grass, the flock may lay what we commonly call "grass eggs." The yolks of these eggs have a green cast and are rejected by the critical buyer, explains C. O. Dossin, poultry extension specialist of the Pennsylvania State college.

To Control Chicken Pox

Where chicken pox is present, all birds having the trouble should be immediately isolated, the house and utensils thoroughly cleaned, and a good germicide kept in the drinking water as long as new cases appear, advises an authority at the North Carolina State college. The entire flock should be given one dose of Epsom salts at the rate of one-half pound to three gallons of water. Vaccinate the well birds with plicon pox virus, as this material will not produce as severe a disturbance as chicken pox virus in the laying flock. Where a large percent of the flock has the disease or it has been present in the flock for some time it is unnecessary to isolate the birds. All other precautions should be taken for control.

Bloody Droppings

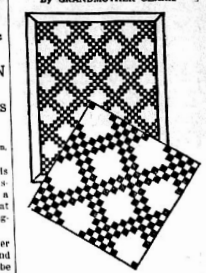

It is said that a dog's nose is his thermometer; if you want to test his health, put your hand against the tip of his nose which is always cold if he is well, and warm if he is sick. Poultry, too, have a thermometer—it is their droppings. If you want to gauge the health of your poultry flock, take a look at their droppings each morning while they are still fresh. They tell you the story, and sometimes it is a sad one. In your baby chick droppings, look for bloody droppings, and if you find them, the chances are one of three that it is the matter with them—worms, crowding, or coccidiosis—Missouri Farmer.

Poulters on Range

After poulters are put on range, management consists mainly of keeping the hoppers full of mash and grain, the watering tanks full of water, and watching for signs of disease, advises an authority in the Missouri Farmer. A good growing mash with a protein content of approximately 25 per cent should be supplied, together with a grain ration consisting of one-half cracked corn, one-fourth whole wheat, and one-fourth whole barley. Droppings under the roosts should be inspected each morning for signs of worms and disease.

Strong Favorite of Quilt Makers

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The "Irish Chain" quilt can be found in almost every collection, and quilt makers will make at least one of these simple chain patterns. The single, double, or triple Irish Chain has one, two, or three blocks in the chain. The background is white and the squares are a solid blue, red, or other dark mixed colors to give contrast. The squares in this quilt measure 1½ inches without seam, and they are appliqued on two different nine-inch blocks; one all checked, the other with a square in each corner. These are assembled alternately to give above effect. Seven block blocks are used across top and nine blocks on side. With a 4-inch border quilt will measure 42 by 56 inches. This quilt is simple to make but cutting of patches and blocks must be accurate to produce good results.

This quilt is one of the 23 popular quilts shown in book No. 23, which will be mailed to you upon receipt of 15 cents. Cutting charts, instructions and valuable information for quilt makers will be found in this book.

Pimples Completely Gone

After Using Cuticura Soap and Ointment

"My face broke out with pimples that came from surface irritation and were quite large. It itched and burned and at night would itch so badly I would scratch, and the pimples finally turned into eruptions. My face was disfigured for the time being; I looked as if I had the measles."

"Then I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I got great results so I bought more, and I used only two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and the pimples were completely gone."

Proclamation

"Our nation attained its position in the free competitive system. The pioneers literally hacked their way through the wilderness to develop this country, asked nothing of the government, and were rewarded. They did demand equal opportunity, and in a minute there are any number of industrial, commercial and financial leaders, who fought to get to the top from the most humble beginning. They didn't arrive there by leaving God out of their calculations; by side-stepping hard work and a rising thrift; nor by crying to a paternal god for 'social security' every time they were in a loss.

GROWER GETS BREAK

Mean of fruit from a grove, formerly thief, now constitutes larceny, with $50 or more designated as grand larceny as did by a fine or imprisonment of not more than the year. The supreme court has said: "Personal such fruit from groves are committing and can be punished, the same as burglary or other class of thieves."

The grower is at last getting a break. It is about as difficult in Polk county, for instance, to convict a gang for stealing fruit as for a murder. —Lakeland Ledger.

Loveborn Tell Goes To West. Ask Her Help

Mac West isn't worrying about what she is going to do when, and if, she ever leaves the acting profession.

Miss West plans to set herself up as an "advocate to the lovelorn" and answer the horde of letters she receives daily with romantic queries.

"How can I get a man?" "How can I hold a man?" "How can I make him pop the question?" "Did I do wrong?" make up the bulk of questions that are asked daily received by Paramount's "Goin' to Town," which comes Sunday and Monday to the Avon Theatre.

"It's just nothing to tell 'em," that they don't already know," says Mac West. "The only way to hold a man is to make yourself more attractive and more satisfying than any other woman."

"I got many letters from young girls, who tell me they'd like to go to school, returned to them. That's the wrong attitude. They're figuring in a baby they aren't good enough for the boys. When they change their attitude and start realizing he isn't so much after all, and let him know it, he'll come running."

"These great business groups employ in all about 17 million persons. The American home employs 25 million housewives and 25 million domestic servants, or 50 million persons in all. The seven largest industries have an investment of 117 billion dollars; the American home has an investment of 121 billions. These seven industries produce in normal times goods to the value of $7 billion a year. The American home in 1929 spent 55 billions on retail purchases alone."

Women In Charge of Biggest Business

The biggest business in this country isn't manufacturing or farming... it's the housekeeping business.

So much was brought out in a recent radio talk by W. J. Cameron of the Ford Motor Company.

"American women," he said, "manage the nation's largest single industry—housekeeping. It has a larger investment, employs more people, and makes a greater annual expenditure than our seven largest American industries combined."

There have been no definite plans announced as to how the University will participate in the commemoration, but it is believed the press, radio and public addresses will be utilized in interpreting the four centuries since October 4, 1585, when there came from an unknown great the final sheets of the first printed English Bible, in the text prepared by Miles Coverdale, later Bishop of Exeter.

The University will display an exhibit in its main library in connection with the commemoration, Dr. Tipton said.

400th Anniversary of Bible At University

Gainesville, July 10.—(FNS)—The Four Hundredth Anniversary of the printed English Bible will be observed this Fall in an appropriate manner by the University of Florida.

It has been announced by President John J. Tipton.

Dr. Tipton is a member of the national commemoration committee, composed of 22 distinguished leaders in American life.

"I got many letters from young girls, who tell me they'd like to go to school, returned to them. That's the wrong attitude. They're figuring in a baby they aren't good enough for the boys. When they change their attitude and start realizing he isn't so much after all, and let him know it, he'll come running."

"Honey, you're all right, but the others are there so I turn loose the old technique on 'em. And I use a different system with each one."

"That's what I want to tell all the lovelorn girls who write to me," concludes Miss West. "First you gotta know your man, and then go after him in the right way."

Federal Appraisal Plan Reduces Risk In Mortgage Market

Washington, D. C. — Substantial reduction in risks and the creation of a sound mortgage market are seen as eventual results of the standard appraisal system adopted by the Federal Housing Administration to carry out the mutual mortgage insurance provisions of the National Housing Act, according to Acting Administrator Stewart McDonald.

"The new and little-appreciated feature of the better-housing program," he said, "is the standard system of appraisals. This new system means a great deal more than what is generally expected of appraisal practice. The use of this system results in a real determination of risk and goes far beyond merely placing a valuation on a property."

As a consequence of the standard system it is his opinion that a substantial risk reduction will result. In fact, this highly developed system of appraisal is a basic element in the soundness of the mortgage-insurance plan."

By Federal Housing Administration practice appraisals are determined not only from the ordinary valuation of a house and lot, but also by taking into consideration conditions pertaining to the entire duration of the mortgage, such as land layout, neighborhood material, design, and like matters.

The use of the system, according to Mr. McDonald, will create fundamental conditions necessary to a broad mortgage market. Previous to the inauguration of the standard appraisal system no general standard existed, each lending institution making its own standard.

Under conditions existing heretofore, however, there was no method by which to determine which standards were good and which were bad. As a result, a broad mortgage market was impossible.

"With the basic conditions established by the standard appraisal system, a Nation-wide mortgage market is made feasible," Mr. McDonald said. "A consequence of which will be a flow of money from centers where money is plentiful and a dearth to localities where it is scarce and dear."

Farm Values Show Increase In 1935

Farm real estate values increased again during the year ending March 1, 1935, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. This index of value, according to the Bureau, was 79 on March 1, 1935, compared with 76 on March 1, 1934, and with the depression low of 73 on the same date in 1933. The period 1912-14 equals 100. Values increased in 39 states last year, were slightly lower in five states, and were unchanged in the remaining 13 states.
