Welcome Rains

The rains of the last few days have been very welcome after the prolonged drought. The rains have been worth thousands of dollars to the citrus growers although much damage has been done by dry weather. More rain is needed and it seems as if the long dry spell has been broken. Besides helping the growers, the rain has quenched the woods fires that have been raging all around and doing untold damage to timber, wild life and other natural resources.

The Canal

The cross state canal seems to have been revived again, the Jacksonville crowd seeming determined to cut off the water supply from this section of the state. The drought was not enough for those birds. We are in receipt of an elaborate colored folder mailed from Jacksonville by the Ship Canal Authority of the State of Florida. It contains a great deal of misleading data, and is propoganda of the worst kind and it would be interesting to know who is putting up the money for this. Congressman Lex (Headline Hunter) Green seems to be back of the canal revival and is receiving the support of Senator Claude Pepper. Pepper's stand on the canal during the primary was one of the main reasons why we were against him. But then, what does he care about South Florida. If it becomes a desert he should worry. North Florida will take care of him.

The Election

We believe the voters of district two and five showed good sense in returning Commissioners Bell and Jackson to office. They have both proven their worth on the county board, but, of course, have not been able to please everyone. We are also glad to see Judge Elwyn Thomas nominated for the Supreme court. We are informed he is an able man

Chevrolet Sponsors Free Moving Picture Show Here Tonight

The worlds largest Theatre on wheels is visiting Avon Park today and will present a program of sound and talking pictures tonight at 8 p. m. on the Mall at N. Butler St., the show is absolutely free and everyone is invited to attend the program and inspect the traveling Theatre, as guest of the Main Street Chevrolet Co.

The Chevrolet Motor Company, a division of General Motors has sent this traveling Theatre on tour, it is twenty seven feet long and seven foot wide, besides having a seperate engine to generate its own power for the showing of the films, it has a complete moving picture projector and sound talking machines.

A four picture program will be presented tonight which features a film entitled "Safety Patrol", this picture presents a splendid safety lesson illustrating the daily work of the schoolboy safety patrols and has one of Americas finest little boy actors. The next two pictures are "Soft Pedal" and "Head On" both are real thrillers, the closing picture on the program is a very funny technicolor cartoon "One Bad Knight" a comedy which will appeal to both the old and young.

In many Florida cities this program has been shown in the public schools and has been sponsored by safety Groups, Lions, Rotary and Kiwianas Clubs. This traveling Theatre will show a return date in Avon Park on July ninth and September Thirty at the same location. Roland Douglass is managing the tour of this Theatre on wheels for the Chevrolet Company.

MAY GET POST OFFICE

According to advices from Washington, Avon Park has been approved for site of a new post office. In a letter to Postmaster D. G. Perry, Congressman J. Hardin Peterson says it may be some time before it materializes and promises to do everything he can to expedite the work. At the suggestion of Mr. Perry the Rotary Club at their meeting Wednesday authorised a resolution expressing a desire for the new building.

MORGANS LEAVE TUESDAY

Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Morgan and daughter Nancy will leave Tuesday morning for Key West where they will make their future home. Dr. and Mrs. Morgan have been active in all civic affairs, Mrs. Morgan having been president of the St. Margaret's guild for the past year, program chairman for the P.-T. A. and president of the American Legion Auxiliary for the past year. They have a host of friends here who regret to see them leave.

JACKSON-BELL RE-NOMINATED LAST TUESDAY

County Commissioners For Sebring and Venus Both Returned

The second primary election held last Tuesday resulted in the renomination of Chairman of the Board of County Commisioners, N. B. Jackson, of Venus, by a majority of 25 votes, and the renomination of W. W. Bell, county commissioner of District No. 2, by a majority of 232 votes.

Judge Elwyn Thomas of Ft. Pierce candidate for member of the State Supreme Court, was given a good majority over his opponent, Tom Watson of Tampa, in this county, carrying all but one precinct in the county. Incomplete returns from over the state indicate he received the nomination by a majority of over 40,000 votes.

Highlands county gave Judge Thomas a total of 845 votes and Watson 615. Watson carried Venus by a vote of 77 to 41 but lost all other precincts.

The vote throughout the county was light even in districts two and five where there were local contests, the total vote for county commissioner in Sebring being 1082 while the vote for the three candidates in the first primary was 1180. The total vote in District No. 5 for county commisioner was 197 while the vote in the first primary with four candidates was 214.

In district two, Bell picked up 83 votes in the second primary, while his opponent, J. W. Schumacher, picked up 43 votes.

In district five, Jackson picked up 14 votes and his opponent, Bert Crawford picked up 41 votes, but Jackson carried both precincts in the district, the voters giving him a majority of two votes in Venus and 23 in Hicoria.

The vote for county commissioner in District No. 2, by precincts, was:

	2	2-A
W. W. Bell	266	391
J. W. Schumacher	203	222

For county commissioner District No. 5:

	5	6
N. B. Jackson	74	37
Bert Crawford	72	14

Eugene Matthews unopposed candidate for nomination for the office of state railroad commissioner received a total of 332 votes in the county.

Aged Resident Died Here Sunday

Mrs. Louise C. Carlos, 83, a resident of Avon Park for the past 12 years, died Sunday, May 22, after a long illness. Mrs. Carlos, at her home here, was a sister of the late Mrs. Mary Dart and made her home with the Dart family when they resided here. The body was shipped to Utica, N. Y. Tuesday night for burial.

Scout News

With Rally out of the way, the Scouts have turned their attention to archery. As soon as the necessary arrangements can be made the course will be started.

At each scout meeting champions of various phrases of scouting and athletics will be selected. These champions will hold their crowns until defeated by a challenger. Any scout may challenge the champion providing he gives one week advance notice. If the champion refuses to defend his tilte the challenger automatically becomes the champion.

There will also be a championship contest between the staff officers with the Scoutmaster also participating.

The first contest was held Monday in knot tying. The winners were Billy Heim of the Alligator Patrol and Charles Lawhon of the Eagles. The championship will be decided at the next meeting. The elimination for signalling championship will also be held at this time.

RETURN TO AVON PARK

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Krause who have been living in Frostproof for the past several years, have returned to Avon Park to make their home. They have opened their fish market on Prospect street and will be glad to again greet their many friends and customers.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to sincerely thank our many friends for their assistance, and many kindnesses and sympathy and the flowers during the illness and death of Mrs. Daisy Adams. They all helped to soften our grief and soften the blow of the bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. DeLaney.
Mrs. J. C. Clements.

Cattlemen And Growers Discuss Woods Fires Problem At Meeting Tuesday

Over seventy cattlemen, citrus, truck crop growers and prominent citizens of Highlands County attended the meeting at the court house on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock with reference to fire control on the present emergency and a future program suited to the County needs.

The meeting was called by the Cattlemen's Asociation and upon request of that organization County Agent Alsmeyer acted as chairman of the meeting. In stating the purpose of the meeting he said that there had been considerable planned fires which had been set during the past couple years and which had done damage of many thousands of dollars to pastures, timber lands and citrus groves. It was brought out that the cattle industry together with the other agricultural industries have undergone radical changes during the past ten years. 59% of the acreage of Highlands County is now under fence and either owned or definitely leased by a cash lease by the cattlemen. Experiences and experiments have proven that it is necessary to burn certain types of grass during the fall to secure the best results from grazing. This must be done when the soil is very moist and climatic conditions are favorable to the burning of only the dead grass and with the smallest amount of injury to the plants and small trees. It was reported that the large number of fires started by hunters and others where same was very destructive and responsible for the big increase in pastures being posted against trespassing.

In discussing the responsibility of fires, Mr. Alexander Blair brought out the fact that published reports listing responsibility for fires set during the last few years and his contacts with men interested in fire control had convinced him that the old statement that cattlemen were not setting the fires they formerly had and that anyone could see that the fires which had been set during the past several months were not located in areas where cattle had grazed. Fires from areas adjacent to public roads have spread in many directions and caused great injury to land owners from loss of valuable pasture and timber.

Fire Chief, Hal Long, of Sebring, reported that many fires were being caused by carelessness while others were apparently set with malicious intent and presented evidence to show that on Monday night about mid-night fires were set at three different times near the entrance to Lake Sebring and were put out each time. At four o'clock Tuesday morning there was a report that the fire had broken out again and his crew worked hard to save property in that area. They were forced to back-fire to protect that property and found some one during the time they were there had set back-fire in another place. They found one lightwood-knot still burning and laying in the paved road near where the fire had been set, plainly indicating the intent of someone to set the fires.

Mr. C. Parke Anderson of Avon Park stated that each year they had plowed and cut fire guards in all of the Avon-Citrus Corporation groves, involving about 3800 acres of citrus. On Monday afternoon severe fires were headed towards one of their groves and would have caused severe damage if a heavy shower had not come at the proper time and stopped the fire at about 150 feet from the groves.

Mr. I. C. Hart, a prominent cattleman of Sebring, stated that the proper handling of pasture land was as important to the cattleman as the fertilization and cultivation to the citrus groves and stock to a ranch. Mr. Hart also stated that he and other cattlemen appreciated the fair attitude of growers in letting them decide what was the best range practices. He further stated that continuation of the fires which have been prevelent these past years would be disastrous to cattlemen and if continued would force cattlemen to take a very drastic action to protect their property.

Mr. John Watson, another cattleman, stated that he had always cooperated with the Forestry Service and Hammock officials in the control of fires and was greatly surprised and severely injured by recent fires which have come into his property from other areas.

Mr. Allen Altvater, Project Supervisor of the C. C. Camp, stated that contrary to popular belief, the camp located west of Sebring is not established for fire fighting purposes. The enrollees can be used in cases of emergency where an organization or a group of property owners are using men

Rotarians Told Of Utility Company's Advertising Plan

A larger program of reciprocal advertising for Central Florida than last year is being planned by the Florida Public Service Co. and an outline was given at a meeting and banquet Friday night at Orlando attended by city officials and newspaper men. The utility company was host for the occasion and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

The plan was again outlined Wednesday noon at the Avon Park Rotary Club luncheon at the Jacaranda Hotel by B. G. Duncan, advertising manager for the company. His talk was illustrated with moving films ad charts.

Under the plan, dioramas advertising New England resorts will be placed in Florida Public Service co. offices this summer and next winter, the same as last, dioramas advertising this section of the state will be placed in offices of the New England Gas and Electric Association.

This reciprocal advertising has proven results and is known to have brought many visitors to Florida the past season.

In connection with the plan and in order to get typical Florida scenes the Florida Public Service Co. is sponsoring a photographic contest, full details of which will be announced next week. A total of $175 will be given as prizes and all amateurs living in the territory served by the company will be able to compete.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Malipiero Was Person to Remember

NEW YORK.—Meeting Francesco Malipiero at a party in the Royal Danielli in Venice soon after the World war, I thought he was one of the most charming and brilliant, and, at the same time, most cryptic men I had ever seen. There was in the company another Italian musician, a famous conductor, who was the lion of the evening. I have forgotten his appearance and his name, but everything about Signor Malipiero is vividly remembered.

On the way home in a gondola, I asked the conductor for an appraisal of Signor Malipiero as a musician. There was considerable condescension in the reply.

Malipiero was gifted but erratic, it was even hinted that he was "unsound," in some deeply subversive sense. But my Virgil eagerly agreed that the signor was a most extraordinary human personality.

As recently as four years ago, a Malipiero opera threw the Royal opera house of Rome into a tumult of howling and cat-calls. Mussolini banned it as "inimical to the faith and sound teachings of the new Italy." But, by this time, Malipiero had become a world-famous musician, and he was soon restored to favor.

"Outlaw" of Music Now Is Lionized

This status is unquestioned as his symphony, "Elegiaca," was given its first performance in New York, with John Barbirolli conducting. For many years, critical opinion discounted him as somewhat of an outlaw and disturber. Now it has caught up with him, as it did with Stravinsky and Richard Strauss. Both the "Fire Bird" and "Salome" were met with cat-calls when they were first produced.

Critics note some mysterious "enervating influence" in Malipiero's new symphony. It may be an afterthought, but the explanation seems clear as I recall my conversation with him. His face saddened and he seemed ten years older when I mentioned the war.

For his ballet, "Pantea," he had written of "the struggle of a soul hurling itself into the struggle for liberty, only to find oblivion and death." The war had been to him a tragic and devastating experience. He said it had profoundly shaken both his art and his life.

Never again would the suave fluencies or banalities of music have meaning for him. He was impelled to a deeper search.

Suspected of Sabotage in New Opera

This disillusionment was sublimated in irony. He was suspected of slyly sabotaging the grandiose new Italian state. It was in March, 1934, that his opera, "The Fable of the Exchanged Sons," with the text by Luigi Pirandello, all but caused a riot in the Royal opera house.

So far as I could learn at the time, there was no brash heresy in the work, but, as elaborated by the text, a subtle hint that ultimate truth is forever elusive and supreme power dead sea fruit. That, of course, is dangerous doctrine in a totalitarian state, and it was quickly and savagely resented. The next day, Il Duce forbade another presentation.

Malipiero is a poet and a mystic. Of dominant presence, with sharply cut Roman features and hair brushed back in a thick pompadour, he is at the same time extraordinarily gracious, friendly and unassuming.

He lives in a quaint stone villa, forty or fifty miles from Venice, centuries old, rambling and tumbledown. Cut in the stone door lintel there is a Latin text, "To the obscene, all things are obscene." That was his answer to the critics of one of his operas.

Has Gift for Friendship With Animals

The art of living engrosses him as much as the art of music and he studiously maintains a relationship of courtesy, dignity and friendly intimacy with the creatures in his retreat—he has a gift for friendship with animals and thinks that much of the trouble of mankind is due to its insensitiveness to the subhuman and superhuman. His music is apt to range into those zones.

He was born in Venice in 1882, beginning his violin studies in his sixth year. His father was a political exile and the family was in Germany for many years. Wagner was a crashing strain of modernity which profoundly affected his work.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Monster From the Swamps"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, if I seem to be continually harping on the fact that adventures are things you meet up with most frequently at home, you can put it down to the fact that I am continually being reminded of it. Just the other day, while looking through a sheaf of letters I came to a story by a woman who had an adventure on a farm. Well—of course, there's nothing unusual in that. The funny part of it was that the farm was in this country, and the adventure was of a sort you'd only expect to run into in the jungles of Africa or South America, or to read about in some account of the grim battles between men and animals that the ancient Romans used to stage in their gladiatorial arenas.

The woman is Lottie Hawco—Mrs. John Hawco, of New York city. And the animal she fought with was a wild boar. I'll bet a lot of people—including me—didn't know there were wild boars in this country. But there are, as any South Carolina farmer can tell you. How they got here is an interesting story.

You see, the ordinary barnyard breed of pig is nothing in the world but a descendant of the wild boars you read about in tales of old-time Merrie England. Those boars were tamed and fattened and domesticated until, over the space of six or eight hundred years they became the fat, lazy, gluttonous animals you see in hog pens the country over.

How Pigs Get Wild and Dangerous.

But a pig will stay fat, and tame, and lazy only so long as he's kept in captivity and stuffed with chop suey from that well known galvanized iron can out on the back porch. Once he gets loose and goes back to the woods again and has to rustle for his own food—well—then he gets thin and tough and rangy. His tusks grow out, and in a generation or twm he becomes a boariagain—just as wild and as dangerous an animal as ever he was when he roamed the marshes and forests of old England in the days of Robin Hood.v

There are plenty of those backsliding wild hogs in the back country of South Carolina, and the farmers hunt them down and round them up because they destroy the nests of the wild turkeys in the neighborhood.

The Boar Viciously Attacked Lottie's Mother.

And that brings us to Lottie Howco who, on February 16, 1931, was visiting with her mother and her sister, Inez, on a farm near Osborn, S. C., where a wild boar hunt was in progress.

A bunch of men from the neighborhood had been out all day, combing the marshes with packs of dogs, roping boars and herding them—alive—into a big high-sided farm wagon. They had just returned home with six or seven boars—big, vicious fellows, waisthigh to a man and weighing three or four hundred pounds—animals that could break a man's leg with their huge, crunching jaws and which frequently did disembowel the fierce dogs that hunted them with one sweeping blow of their long, protruding tusks.

The men backed the wagon up to a strong enclosure and were untying the boars one by one and cautiously prodding them into the pen. Lottie, her mother and sister were standing nejr by, watching the proceedings—and then—suddenly—a terrible thing happened.

Attack by a Savage Boar.

The men had unloosed the largest boar and were prodding it toward the pen when it turned, squeezed between the wagon and the enclosure, and rushed out into the open, gnashing its great teeth and foaming at the mouth. It headed straight for Lottie's mother, who was standing nearest the pen, and before she could turn to run, it was on her, throwing her in a heap to the ground, biting at her savagely.

It was the most terrible sight Lottie ever beheld in her life. Charlie, the foreman, stood with his mouth agape, too surprised for a moment to even move. Sister Inez, paralyzed with fright, clapped her hands over her ears and began to scream. Lottie herself was numb with terror, and for precious seconds—seconds that seemed like a lifetime—she stood rooted to the spot. All the rest of the men were on the other side of the pen, or on the wagon, too far away to reach the spot in time to do any good.

Then, all of a sudden, Lottie came to life. .She can't explain what happened, but it seemed as if a spring inside her had suddenly been released. She sprang forward, threw herself on the snarling, screaming, rolling jumble of woman and beast, singled out the boar and began beating and mauling and scratching it with insane frenzy.

Surprised Him, So He Fled.

The boar could have killed Lottie with one thrust of its sharp, pointed tusk. Lottie's mother had been saved from death thus far only by her long skirts and thick clothing. But taken by surprise, the boar couldn't quite figure out this wild new menace that came beating and kicking at his flanks—tearing and scratching at his eyes. It was a thing of fury. It didn't seem one whit afraid of the boar. And an animal will often reason that if you are not afraid of him, then he must have good cause to be afraid of you.

This one did just that. Snarling and grunting, he turned to flee from this inexplicable new attack. He got about three steps, and then he found himself tangled up in the ropes of the men who, by this time, had come around from the other side of the pen to deal with him.

The next thing Lottie knew, she was back on the porch of the farm house with her mother, looking over herself for injuries. She doesn't even remember helping her mother to the porch, and to this day she can't figure out how she came out of that fight without a scratch on her body.

Barratry in Shipping

Barratry in shipping and navigation includes every wrongful act committed by the master or crew to the prejudice of the shipowner. The master must have deliberately violated his duty to his employer and acted against his better judgment, says Tit-Bits Magazine. Deviating from the ship's course to engage in smuggling is barratry. No act of negligence, inadvertence, or mistake amounts to barratry.

Name Percival Is Greek

The name Percival is of Greek origin and means "courteous." Sir Perceval was a knight of King Arthur's round table. Percival Lowell (1855-1916) Boston astronomer, wrote books and made important discoveries in astronomy, also established the Lowell observatory.

Cheerfulness Has Dual Value

Cheerfulness has a dual value in life. First, it helps you—then it helps you to help others—and it keeps on spreading out into the great throng of humanity, stirring the hearts of men as the gentle breeze stirs the leaves of the forest—returning to you in its endless course and all the while making the heavy load lighter and the dark road brighter for all.

Oldest Lighthouse in America

The oldest lighthouse in America is Boston light station. Built in 1716, it was knocked down during the Revolution, rebuilt in 1783. It was then 69 feet high, lit by four whale oil lamps. The tower, 90 feet high, contains the original stones, in use more than 222 years, plus additions.

Lesson for May 29

MAINTAINING PERSONAL EFFICIENCY

LESSON TEXT—Dan. 1:8-16, 19, 20; I Cor. 9:24-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. I Cor. 9:25.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How Daniel Pleased God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ten Times Strong.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—In Training for the Game of Life.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Liquor's Effect Upon Working Efficiency.

Personal efficiency is a subject which is receiving much attention in our day. There has never been so much accurate and usable information as we now have regarding diet, exercise, and medical care. The mind as well as the body has come in for attention and scores of books are available on the development and full use of the powers of personality. Some of these are trash, but others are helpful. Business is co-operating with the school and the home in giving boys and girls the opportunity to grow up to be useful and happy members of society. The church adds its important contribution, although we must confess that it is far from what it might be by the grace and power of God.

Having done all these things for the good of the people, we then largely destroy their value by permitting the use and sale of intoxicants which destroy personal efficiency and dull moral perception.

I. A Sound Mind in a Sound Body (Dan. 1:8-16, 19, 20).

Daniel and his three Hebrew companions had been brought to Babylon as captives, and were there chosen to enter the royal school for future service at the court. Every provision was made for the students chosen for that school. Their diet, however, included not only meat which was unclean to the Jew but wine, which Daniel knew to be undesirable. It took holy boldness to ask to be excused from that which the king had prescribed, but Daniel was blessed not only with courage, but with tact and courtesy. A ten-day test of a simple diet and water proved so successful that the plan was continued. At the end of the three-year course the Hebrews were not only physically stronger but mentally and spiritually superior.

The experience of Daniel and his brethren is not just an incident eagerly grasped at by "blue-nosed reformers" to prevent their neighbors from "enjoying" intoxicating liquor. The testimony of science, of business, of experience in all ages, proves that the use of even an amount of alcohol so small that the user does not feel its presence materially "reduces endurance, accuracy, and rapidity of muscular action of all kinds" (Emerson). It so cuts down the ability to think clearly and to react promptly to danger that it is absolutely taboo with such responsible workers as railroad engineers. It is not a stimulant, but a narcotic, which dulls the nerve centers. Dr. Edward Rosenow says, "The use of alcohol as a beverage is never justified. There is no such thing as the right use of beverage alcohol."

Such information as the above is available in publications of temperance organizations, books by various writers, and even in publications by state liquor commissions. It is published in newspapers and magazines and circulated by safety organizations and insurance companies. Yet, unbelievable as it may seem, the use of liquor is on the increase, and the rising toll it is taking in our country is simply beyond our ability to understand and describe. Who is there that will

"Dare to be a Daniel
Dare to stand alone,
Dare to have a purpose firm,
Dare to make it known."

II. Success in Life Calls for Self-Control (I Cor. 9:24-27).

Paul delighted in illustrations taken from the athletic field. He talked of running a race, of fighting a good fight. He knew the athlete's need of keeping his body under.

The one who serves his school or athletic association in physical competition gladly surrenders his personal liberty to the guidance of the coach. He eats carefully, sleeps full nights, exercises consistently, and above all does not use alcohol in any form. Listen to the words of great athletic coaches—Yost: "I would not waste my time trying to train or develop one who uses alcohol." Stagg: "Coaches and trainers are dead against the use of alcoholic liquors, even beer." Mack: 'All the umpires together have not put as many players out of the game as old man booze."

Paul rightly points out that all these sacrifices are made by men for what is but a transient earthly crown. How much more should we do for the sake of our souls. Temperance instruction may well stress the physical and mental degradation that follows the use of alcohol, but above all let us teach boys and girls that its use has sent countless souls to eternal punishment and separation from God. We should be deeply moved by the loss of personal efficiency, but what shall we say about the loss of a soul?

★ Movie Whereabouts
★ How to Kiss a Girl
★ Toys for Crosbys

By Virginia Vale

HAVEN'T you frequently felt, when you were at the movies, that you'd like to know where some of the scenes were taken? Harry Sherman, producer of the "Hopalong Cassidy" pictures, has solved that long-standing need.

Beginning with "Beneath Western Skies," each of these films will carry an announcement of the location where it was made.

It's a grand idea. But probably it won't be taken up to any extent, for imagine the shock if you were told, at the beginning of a picture whose scenes were laid in France, for instance, that it was filmed right along the good old California sea coast. Parts of that coast have been used so often that old-timers recognize them instantly.

It looks as if Metro had a winner in "Three Comrades," the sequel to "All Quiet on the Western Front." Robert Taylor really had a chance to be dramatic in this one, and he had to be good, for the other leading roles are played by Margaret Sullivan, Franchot Tone and Robert Young.

Wayne Morris has found, to his sorrow, that kissing a girl for the movies is pretty complicated and decidedly difficult. For instance, the director tells you to look down at the girl. Maybe you're not tall enough; then you have to stand on a box. (That doesn't worry Wayne, because he's plenty tall.) "You have to take the girl in your arms and kiss her," he says, "while the hairdresser stands by, glaring if you muss the girl's hair, and you mustn't wrinkle the collar of the girl's dress, and you must raise your arms so that your own coat doesn't hike up in back; if it does, everything stops while the tailor is summoned to see what's wrong with the coat. Screen love is the bunk—but it's a living."

Peg La Centra is the joy of radio program directors. Not only does she sing (probably you've heard her on the "For Men Only" programs,) but she acts the female character parts in the dramatic sketches as well. She's been women and children with southern, Scotch and Swedish accents; all she needs to do when a different dialect is required is to hear someone who speaks it—she's a born mimic.

Jerry Belcher has in broadcast interviews with interesting neighbors from almost every fair-sized town in the United States, and from some in Canada, but so far he hasn't interviewed any of the ones he knows best of all—those in his own corner of Texas.

Bing Crosby's wife went to New York to have a lot of fun and do a lot of shopping. And what do you suppose she bought? Clothes and toys for those four small Crosby boys! Somehow, the stores' other offerings just didn't seem to be very interesting.

ODDS AND ENDS—Gloria Blondell has been learning to sail a boat, with her brother-in-law, Dick Powell, doing the teaching . . . Edward Arnold was weighed the other day at the studio and beamed when he found that he'd lost four pounds, due to the hot weather . . . And then along came Lionel Barrymore and he beamed because he'd gained five . . . James Stewart has 17 harmonicas, but he's still in the market for more . . . Joan Bennett collects salt and pepper shakers . . . Universal's budget for Deanna Durbin's next picture, "Cinderella," is $1,000,000—which will buy a lot of glass slippers . . . Have you a good idea for a radio program for children? A certain big cereal company is in the market for one . . . Joe Penner recently escaped injury while broadcasting—and from a wooden box, of all things! He was supposed to be thrown out of the ring by a wrestler. A splinter from the broken box used in sound effects missed him by a fraction of an inch.

Crop Law Bogs Down

Washington.—Almost before its operation is well started, the new federal crop law appears to be bogging down. From what I hear around the offices of senators and representatives at the Capitol, there is plenty of rebellion against the law which is supposed to plan agriculture on a scientific basis. Indeed, if one reads some of the letters, the conclusion is inescapable that Secretary Wallace and his "scientific planners" are going to have more trouble than a one-armed paper hanger in administering that law.

It is difficult to provide a clear analysis of the trouble because of the complex character of the law, the confusion as to what can and can not be done under its provisions, the varying attitude of the farmers who are its "beneficiaries" or its "victims," according to their views. The problem of telling what is wrong is made the more difficult because practical people seem to be unable to get anywhere in their efforts to get the "scientific planners" to recognize human nature as well as the material forces that must be considered in farming.

I have talked with a number of Department of Agriculture people; individuals who are supposed to understand the crop control law. They are most convincing; the pen-and-ink sketches that they have made leave only the question as to the reaction of human beings. The department propaganda surely is sufficient to smother any criticism. It is formidable. But it, also, leaves that question of human relationships, wind and weather, to be determined. Even in that regard, every now and then Secretary Wallace issues a statement or makes a speech which seems to do away with any possibility of trouble from those influences.

In the meantime, however, the cotton growers of the South went into a rebellion about the acreage allotment. They succeeded in getting, rather in forcing, Secretary Wallace to obtain congressional action allowing for an increase of 2,000,000 acres of production this year. He went after that legislative action as an emergency, and there was plenty of sentiment in congress for it, because as a matter of cold fact there is a very large majority in the house and senate who doubt that the new crop control law is going to work. To the request for additional acreage, therefore, there was only a little objection since additional acreage meant an obvious increase in general production with the chance for increased return to the farmers who grow the cotton.

Only lately, another tidal wave of rebellion developed. It came from the corn farmers. They had received their allotments of acreage and, like the cotton farmers, they found themselves between the upper and nether millstones. Their rebellion surely lent credence to statements in debate when congress was considering the bill that it conferred more power on a federal agency than ever ought to be conferred in a free country, and that there was no possibility of this power being exercised wisely since none knew its scope. The cotton and corn revolt, therefore, would seem to support assertions in the senate that the two chief sponsors of the bill, Senators Pope of Idaho and McGill of Kansas, had no understanding of the measure they were fighting for. At least, the explanations they made never were able to permeate what I am pleased to refer to as my brain.

Farmers Protest

The corn protestors made their first concentrated move only recently at Macomb, Ill., and the sum and substance of that meeting seems to be that those farmers have had their bellies full of compulsory crop control. They called it un-American; they described it as ruinous and pledged united action against its continuation.

Of course, no one in Washington can tell exactly how many farmers are in sympathy with the position taken at the Macomb meeting. There are 566 counties in what is designated as the corn area. Whether there is a large majority against the compulsory, dictatorial type of law, or whether there is only a sizable minority can not now be accurately stated. It can be stated as a definite fact, however, that farmers do not spend their money to go several hundred miles for a meeting of protest unless they are being badly damaged. Communists and other radicals would go dashing anywhere to hold a protest meeting, but farmers are not built that way. So the Macomb meeting must be taken seriously. It must be given additional weight as well because it followed on the heels of heated protests from the cotton growers.

As to the number of farmers represented in the Macomb meeting; that is to say, the farms and farmers represented by that protest, it might be enlightening to quote here the published statement of Claude R. Wickard. Mr. Wickard is a divisional AAA director and one of the really close advisors to Secretary Wallace. Said Mr. Wickard:

"Complaints have come against the corn allotments as high as 1,100 from one county."

Obviously there could not be that many complaints from more than a limited number of counties. But even if there are only half that number of protests from any considerable number of counties, the representatives and senators who voted for that legislation are bound to get plenty of kicks in the pants next November. And the plight of those members of the house and senate appears to be made worse by the statement attributed to the Department of Agriculture by Representative Andresen of Minnesota. Apparently, Mr. Andresen had been getting baskets full of kicks about the acreage allotments and went to the department to find out the facts. He returned to tell his colleagues on the floor of the house:

"The administration (AAA) will not yield an inch. The allotments have been made according to law and the farmers can take them or leave them."

In that statement, it seems to me, there is unbounded arrogance and Mr. Andresen did the country a service when he repeated it to the house of representatives. It is an attitude of the dictator, of the worst sort of regimentation and it bears out the very thing which Senator Borah of Idaho predicted would happen when he opposed the legislation. Senator Borah's blast in the debate was, of course, branded as the criticism of a Republican, and it was his colleague, Senator Pope, the Idaho New Dealer, who was running about the country last year as the chief member of a committee of senators which was drumming up sentiment for the legislation before the extra session of congress called last November.

By way of prediction, I think there can be no doubt that the wheat farmers will find themselves shocked, instead of their wheat, when they get their acreage allotments later. They will find that the law is compulsory, not one of free co-operation as advertised when the bill was being debated in congress.

• • •

Why the Rebellion?

What is the reason for these conditions? Why is there rebellion among the farmers when, according to Secretary Wallace, there was a great majority for application of the crop control provisions?

Frankly, I believe there are several factors to be considered as having influenced the passage and subsequent application of the compulsory regimentation.

In the first instance, it is quite apparent now that many representatives and senators were subjected to red hot steam from professional farm lobbyists, from Secretary Wallace and his lobbyists and from the minority of farmers who wanted something, anything, that would cause the government to pay them money. That belief is predicated upon a knowledge that the vast majority of the farmers are too busy with their own affairs to be active in politics. The legislators thought they were doing what the farmers wanted them to do.

In the second place, there surely was much misrepresentation about the legislation. At all times and on all occasions, Secretary Wallace and those who were seeking to put over the legislation vigorously stressed the statement that the provisions of the plan were voluntary. There was to be no compulsion in it; the farmers themselves were to decide; the department here in Washington would do exactly what the farmers wanted. All of which is very well and good, except that the farmers were not informed how much pressure could be exerted to make them volunteer. They either had to "volunteer" or find they could market none of their product without being penalized.

What is the result going to be? Congress soon will be quitting for the year, and there is no liklihood of any amendment that will alter the situation—unless something intervenes to keep congress in session far into the summer months. The only thing to look forward to, then, is the result of the fall elections. If the revolt that is represented by the protests of the cotton and corn farmers is widespread, it will show up in the votes at election time. Those who fought so hard for it in congress will meet trouble in primaries and in the election as well. To me, however, there is an added significance. These protests reveal a growing sentiment among farmers, a resentment, against having the federal government bureaucrats run the farms from Washington.

Men of the Mounted

"GUNBOAT" INVENTS THE SNOWBALL BRAND

"GUNBOAT" CHARLIE, so named on account of his big feet, sat down by his little branding-fire puffing and winded, for he had just thrown and tied a young white-faced bull that would fetch a handsome price once he met up with anyone who really knew anything about that sort of animal. And, as he regained breath and poise, he gave some attention to the iron rod in the fire, moving the end of it well down into the red coals, for it must be plenty hot for the job he had on hand. And, as he waited, hemmed in by the blackness of a cloudy Saskatchewan night, he patted himself on the back for the way in which he had escaped detection. They were all plain dumbbells, even the Men of the Mounted, or they'd have caught up to him long ago. On the other hand, he was right smart, was "Gunboat," for he was wily and cunning, and he knew how to hide a branding-fire in the recesses of a gully or coulee. He just used his head, that's all, and as long as he did that, he'd be able to carry on. Moreover, he knew just where to find a buyer.

A few minutes later, red-hot rod in hand, he scooted rapidly over to the prostrate young bull and the bluish-white smoke from burning hair and hide was coiling upward into the night. With all the care and precision of a surgeon doing a difficult operation, "Gunboat" moved that red-hot iron over the original brand until he had made a nice round spot. "When that heals up it'll be kinda whitish, so we'll jist call it the Snowball Brand," he muttered as he finished. Within the hour he had performed a like operation on the three fat steers, and then rolled into his blankets with the satisfaction of a man who had done a real workmanlike job. Every bit of the original brands had been burned out, and no one would ever know the difference. They'd sell, easy.

Nor was "Gunboat" overestimating his ability as a cattle salesman, for at the end of a month he had turned the deal at top prices and had a belt full of good Canadian cash. Well-heeled, "Gunboat" disappeared into the nowhere whence he had come. Buyer and seller had parted good friends, and everyone was satisfied until a Man of the Mounted looking for a hot meal and a night's lodging, chanced to meet up with the four animals carrying the "Snowball" brand.

"Bought 'em from a feller thet passed through here 'bout a month ago," replied the homesteader, a newcomer, to the Mounted Man's inquiries.

"Those scars look mighty suspicious partner," opined the Man of the Mounted. "It wouldn't surprise me if you had unwittingly bought some stolen cattle . . . looks like the original brands have been burned out. Did he say where he bought them?"

"Yep . . . sed he got 'em in the Willow Bunch country . . . an' as fer the 'riginal brands bein' burned out . . . why . . . say . . . I'm a law-abidin' man an' if ye think they's somethin' wrong . . . I'll git saddled up an' help yer run him down . . . I ain't buying stolen cattle if I know it . . . not me."

"Well, hang on to those cattle until you hear from me," said the Man of the Mounted as he rode off next morning. Inside of a week he was back at the ranch.

"The only way we can find out the original brands is to kill one of them."

"Yo're plumb crazy . . . Mr. Mounted Policeman, how're ye goin' ter find out anythin' by killin' em? Moresoever, what 'bout me? I ain't gonna take no loss. Paid money for them animals, I did."

"I'll see about that part of it. You won't lose a penny. Let's get busy," replied the Man of the Mounted as he dismounted and walked toward the nearest steer. Inside of half an hour the homesteader learned a lot about cattle-brands. In spite of the very thorough job of burning and searing "Gunboat" had done on the outside of the hide, the original brand showed up all too plainly on the flesh side.

Several weeks later "Gunboat" Charlie was apprehended in another province, and was soon on trial. It was a great day for the dignified and bewigged judge as the Man of the Mounted, spreading the steer-hide over the judge's bench, proved his point, that "Gunboat" had disfigured the original brand by the outside burning, but had failed to go more than half way through the hide and thus spoil the original brand that now showed up all too plainly on the flesh side of the skin. On top of that, the owner of the original brand was in court, and he identified "Gunboat" as a man who had worked on his ranch for a couple of days and had then disappeared about the same time as four head of cattle. "Gunboat" was sentenced to two years at hard labor and, needless to say, from that time on no cattle or horse thief used the "Snowball" brand in that particular region.

New Camouflage Makes Planes Invisible

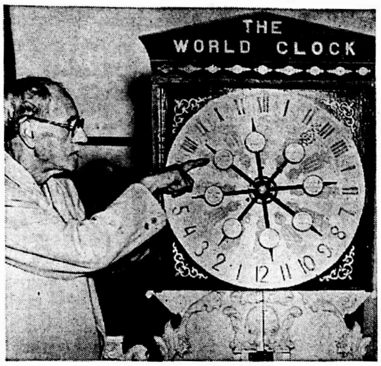
World Clock Tells Time Anywhere



Whether it's midnight in Miami or high noon in Nanking, this world clock will tell it. With eight hands and two sets of numbers on the face, it tells time all around the world. It was made by Prof. Hirsh Yankelwitz, Russian scientist now living in Miami.

McGRAW'S NEPHEW

Handicaps of lack of speech and hearing have not prevented John Gray, seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gray of New Canaan, Conn., from following in the footsteps of his famous uncle, the late John McGraw, former manager of the New York Giants. Gray is a natural ball player both in the field and at bat. In addition to playing first base for the school team, he captained the basketball team.

Charlie McCarthy Learns Swedish

That gabby wooden Irishman, Charlie McCarthy, had to learn Swedish as a result of his selection as "chief spokesman" at a celebration in Hollywood, Calif., marking the three-hundredth anniversary of the arrival of the first Swedish settlers in America. Charlie is shown getting some tips on the language from boss Edgar Bergen, whose mother, Mrs. Nellie Bergen, was born at Hassleholm, Sweden.

March of Progress Detours Forest Giant

Engineers surveying northern Jefferson county, N. Y., for approaches to the new Thousand Islands International bridge near Watertown, were almost forced to remove this giant cottonwood tree, for which Clinton Hedge, seventy, Si D. Ball, ninety-one, and Lorenzo Vanderwalker, seventy-four, left to right, have a sentimental attachment. Last survivors of a large group, they pay their sixtieth springtime visit to the tree which has records since 1799 and measures 33 feet in circumference and rejoice that the march of progress has not been inexorable.

BOOKS IN BRIEF

How Prisoner Used Rats to Cheat Death

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

THE prisoner opened his eyes to blackness. Fears shook him as he thought of the Inquisition Judges. Feeling painfully about him he discovered that his clothes had been changed while he was unconscious and he now wore an unfamiliar robe. Thus does Edgar Allen Poe set the stage in "The Pit and the Pendulum."

What manner of place was this? Perhaps he was dead and this was eternity. Perhaps he was entombed alive. Panic seized him. He must know the size and shape of his prison! Cautiously he felt his way until he found the wall. Ripping a piece from his robe to mark the starting place, he began to creep along, counting the paces. A circuit of 50 yards indicated that it could not be a tomb. Now he would cross the cell. Boldly he started away from the wall, but his feet tripped in the robe and he fell prone.

Elizabeth James

Taut he lay. A queer sensation stole over him, for his head seemed to be touching nothing, to be in space. Reaching out he found a well or pit. Pit! Almost swooning he recalled stories of the Inquisition pits which the people in Toledo had lately heard.

Some time later and with an effort, his benumbed mind saw that the prison was now lighted. He saw walls of metal, a stone floor, and a high ceiling. In the middle of the floor yawned the pit. How strange he felt—he could not move. Lying on his back he was bound to a wooden bench.

TURBULENT LIFE

The life of Poe is more turbulent than any story that he wrote. Scores of biographers have attempted to reveal something of the spirit of this lonely and passionate man. Although Poe died in his fortieth year, he left literary criticism that is excellent, and short stories and poems that are unexcelled for sheer artistry.

Later biographers have stated that Poe's reputation was worse than Poe. His difficulties at the University of Virginia and at West Point, and his being disinherited by his foster father gave him a name for recklessness when he was very young which the events of his later life did nothing to offset.

Poe lived from 1809 until 1849, attaining a literary fame in Europe as well as in America.

Pendulum Appears.

From the pit crept rats. The prisoner looked about him for some weapon. Only his arm was free from the elbow down, so that he could reach the plate of food on the floor. As the rats crept toward the plate he waved them away.

Again a noise, this one sounded like steam. Looking upward, he saw the silver object to be a pendulum that dropped slowly with each stroke. Then he divined the cunning of his captors. A blade of steel was descending slowly toward him. With days of mental torture and hours of physical torture, his death would be slow and horrible.

Time passed but he could not reckon how much. His mind alternated between fascination and insanity. Sometimes he laughed. Sometimes he cried. Sometimes he shrieked.

Now the blade was only a yard above him, then two feet above. Then one foot.

Rats Save Life.

Only inches separated them. Then desire for life surged through him so that he cried to heaven for help. Grasping the scraps of food he smeared the meat over his bonds as far as he could reach, using every drop of grease. Then he lay still. The rats had not before seen him lying so. They watched, crept closer, then jumped onto the bench. They were over his body in a flash. Voraciously they gnawed and chewed the bands of cloth. Greedily they tore it, trying to get the last drop of food.

The pendulum swung in long arcs, even closer. There was a pressure as the knife cut his robe. He did not dare move yet. Seconds passed, and he knew that his robe was cut through. As the blade reached the height of its arc, he lunged with all his force and fell free.

The pendulum stopped and swiftly rose to the ceiling. The prisoner lay as one lifeless, waiting for the next mode of death.

He did not wait long. The walls changed color, revealing hideous pictures which might have come from hell. Oppressive heat choked him as he saw that the walls were being heated and were coming together so that the cell was growing smaller. Their purpose was clear: to push him into the pit.

A crash sounded. The walls jerked away as with thunder. An arm clutched him. The French had conquered his enemies. He was saved.

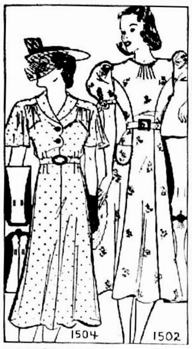
New, Lovely Dresses For Early Summer

MAKE yourself something very pretty and smart to wear as soon as the bland summer days are here. These are so easy—each is a diagram frock, which means the pattern is amazingly easy to work with.

Slenderizing Lines.

Everything about this dress is flattering to large women—the v-neckline, the short, rippling sleeves, the smooth shoulders, front fullness, and waistline, snugged in by darts. You'll want to wear it all the time, when you see how becoming it is. In georgette, chiffon, voile, or thin silk print.



Frock With Slim, Crisp Lines.

Cleverly fitted in to minimize the waistline, puffed high and wide as to sleeves, full at the skirt and with a demure round neckline, this is one of the most charming new dresses you could choose. A bit of ricrac braid and two little bows are all the trimming it needs, the lines are so perfect. Make it up in silk print, dimity, dotted Swiss.

The Patterns.

1504 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5¼ yards of 39-inch material; collar in contrast (if desired) takes ⅝ yard.

1502 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4 yards of 39-inch material. 1¾ yards of ricrac to trim.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

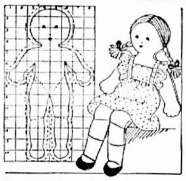
This Rag Baby Sits Down Gracefully

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE charm of a rag baby depends upon her figure. She may be molded with your fingers if the cotton stuffing is pushed into place very tightly a little at a time with the blunt end of an ordinary pencil. Leave the opening for stuffing under one arm. Stuff the legs up to the knees, then sew across. Stuff up to the hips and then sew through the body again, as shown, before the upper part is stuffed. This makes the doll jointed at knees and hips.



To make a pattern for the doll, rule an eight by fourteen inch piece of paper into one-inch squares. Number the squares, as shown, then outline the doll so that the lines cross the squares exactly as they do here in the diagram. Back and front are cut alike. The dotted line around the doll in the diagram indicates the seam allowance. Eyes, nose and mouth are embroidered, yarn is used for the hair, and the dress is made of straight pieces.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' latest sewing book contains three pages of doll clothes; 90 embroidery stitches; fabric repairing; table settings; gifts; many useful articles to make for the house, yourself and the children. Price 25 cents postpaid, coins preferred. Just ask for Book No. 2, and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines, St., Chicago, Ill.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

Ripe Sliced Strawberry Jam

4½ cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit	7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar
	½ bottle fruit pectin

TO PREPARE fruit, cut about 2 quarts fully ripe berries in halves lengthwise; cut large berries in quarters.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit, solidly packed, into large kettle; mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 3 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

HIGH TAXES DECREASE EMPLOYMENT

(From Winter Haven Daily Chief)

Receiver H. D. Pollard of the Central of Georgia railway recently declared that high taxes are actually destroying jobs for men and women in Georgia. In order to meet taxes that must be paid currently out of earnings, he says that this railroad has had to reduce forces and throw out of employment additional workers to those necessarily laid off on account of decreased earnings . . . .

"During the year 1937 the Central of Georgia had an average of 5,486 employes. It paid them $9,009,981" said Mr. Pollard. "This is an average of $1,541.22 per year per employe, or $5.05 per day per employe. The tax bill for 1937 was $1,052,802.09, or $2,884.39 per day. The taxes averaged $180.09 for each employe, or 49.34 cents per employe per day. For each dollar of wages paid, the tax-gathers demanded 11.68 cents for taxes. . . .

Mr. Pollard showed that the Central of Georgia is called upon for property (ad valorem) taxes, for Railroad Retirement taxes, license taxes, fees for the support of state public service commissions, fees for the use of city streets, and other special taxes. At present its revenues are barely sufficient to meet its reduced payrolls and purchases, plus certain taxes which must be paid currently out of earnings. It cannot pay its property taxes. . . .

The railroads are indicated as realizing that they are not alone in this situation. It is shared to a degree by every employer and every property-owner, indeed by everyone who has anything. With the railroads, however, the taxes have reached the point of destroying jobs. With only a limited amount of money at their command they are compelled to turn it over to the tax-gatherers instead of putting it into payrolls.—Fla . Times Union.

PUBLIC FORUM

The second piano recital by pupils of Mrs. J. B. Coen, Jr. took place on Friday, May 20, as scheduled.

From the very first tones of the opening selections, played by dimple-cheeked Nita Bryant with perfect ease and facility, to the climax of the Bolero by Ravina rendered with gusto by Betty Touchton, the program was interesting and instructive.

Everyone of the young performers bore witness to the paintaking, earnest hard work by the teacher and student; the correct, often graceful hand position, the lovely touch were remarkable, the tone always full and clear. All admired the playing and marveled at the results obtained in such short time as some of the performers had taken up music only a year ago, more or less. Many played by heart, sure of themselves and with poise. The technique was good and often brilliant, like in the little Heller study, (Betty Moffett).

The older students exhibited good understanding and pretty four-color contrast. The Great Spirit, for instance, (Martha McNicholas). Occasionally, the piano sang; the lyric slow intermezzo of the Andalaise (Nancy Betts) being a fine example.

It was an enjoyable evening, marred only by the sudden indisposition of Peggy Mandis who did so nicely at rehearsal.

It is greatly to be wished that we have more of these m[illegible]ical exhibitions for the benefit of both pupils and listeners.

The final recital in Mrs. Coen's series will be given on June 7 and, no doubt, will be equal to the two preceeding ones.

Cattlemen and Growers Discuss Fire Problem At Meeting Tuesday

to control their fires. He stated that up to the present, regulations had not permitted them useing the men except in fire protected areas. He further stated that where the men from the camp were used it is best for them to designate two of the enrollees to one man employed by an organization or a group of property owners.

Mayor Amos Tyree of DeSoto City, discussed the progress which had been made in the DeSoto City area and complimented the C. C. Camp in the excellent manner in which they have fought fires.

Fire Chief McCarthy of Avon Park, stated that for the past several years his organization has fought fires covering many types of conditions but that the attitute of the people in reporting to the authorities their plans when rubbish and other materials were burning had caused them to make great number of trips weekly which were absolutely unnecessary. The watchman in the fire towers, of course, spot the fires and send in the call and the Fire Department preceeds to eradicate same and then find some property owner is merely burning some waste material. Those who were at the meeting agreed that anyone wishing to burn trash or rubbish or materials of any type which constitutes a fire hazard should notify the iFre Department officials in their area.

WNU SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

Alan Cameron, young trapper, Noel, his Indian partner, and Rough, husky Ungava sled dog, look in vain for the Montagnais trappers' camp in the desolate Big River country of Northern Canada. Their supplies destroyed by wolverines, they are forced to subsist on wolf meat until they come, amazed, to a substantial log house in the wilderness of Talking River, where they are greeted by a big blond man with a gun. Introducing himself as John McCord, hunter, the big man asks Alan if he dares go with him next year to the River of Skulls beyond the Sinking Lakes, where no man is said to have been before. Heather McCord, the daughter, who had come with him to the wilderness, wins the immediate devotion of Rough. On the eve of Alan's departure for Fort George, McCord suddenly tells him to bring him back some dogs, and to keep his mouth shut to questions. He gives the boy money, warning him not to show it at Fort George, and promises to explain all later. Returned to Fort George, Alan meets McQueen and Slade, Provincial police, with Arsene Rivard, clerk, and Alan's rival for Berthe Dessane, with whom he is in love. The two police are looking for a guide to the Big River wilderness. Accidentally Alan drops one of McCord's bills.

When the door of the trade-room closed behind Pierre, Noel turned to Alan. "Why you drop dat monee?"

"I've done it, Noel," groaned the other. "I forgot I had that bill in my pouch when I got the tobacco."

"Mebbe dey not see eet," comforted Noel.

"They saw it; they couldn't help it! Pierre didn't see from where he stood but Rivard and the others—they saw."

"Dey spik togedder; mebbe dey not see."

"If they did see it, how am I going to account for it? They'll learn that I drew no money here last summer—never touched our balance with Gabriel or the Hudson's Bay. Nobody takes money into the bush so they're bound to suspect we met somebody. He trusted me and this is how I repay him."

The return of Pierre from his cabin interrupted the conversation. Later, when the sound of voices outside the trade-house announced the return of Dessane and the strangers from supper, Alan slipped out of a rear door and went to the factor's house. A black-eyed mite of a girl opened the door to his knock and, with a shriek of joy, threw herself at the returned wanderer who caught and tossed her high in his arms.

"Petite Manon! What a great girl she has grown!" he cried, as the delighted child clung to him. "All winter long Alan has missed his playmate and wondered if she ever thought of him far away in the snow."

"Alee, Alee!" laughed the child. "We all miss Alee! Berthe she miss him too, but Arsene, he try to make her not miss him. How is Roughy?"

"Oh, Roughy's fine."

Kissing her on each of her brown cheeks as he held her in his arms, Alan suddenly reddened with self-consciousness. Smiling in amusement at the man and child, in an inner room stood a girl of eighteen with large dark eyes and a wealth of blue-black hair.

"Welcome, M'sieu le voyageur!" Berthe Dessane ran to him and impulsively grasped his hands. Her straight, thick brows met for an instant in a frown as she noted the leanness of his face. "Oh, but you've not taken care of yourself, Alan, as you promised!" she protested. "You look tired and thin."

He laughed at her solicitude over his leanness. "We haven't starved, Berthe. I'm going to Pierre's for supper."

"Oh, I'm so glad," she said with relief. Then her face suddenly sobered. She sent her little sister protesting from the room, closed the door and returned to the puzzled Cameron.

"Arsene saw you drop some money in the trade-room," she whispered. "I overheard him tell father just now at supper. They have gone to the trade-house to talk with the police."

Police! The bronzed features of Alan Cameron went slowly gray. He suddenly felt weak and cold. These strangers who had arrived only the day before and of whose presence Duncan McNab, at the Hudson's Bay Company, seemed to have no knowledge; these men who wanted to go to the head of the river were government men—Provincial Police! So Rivard had seen him drop that bill! And how was he to explain it?

"Alan, what is the matter?" Berthe demanded, shocked by his stricken face.

"Nothing, nothing at all!" With an effort he regained his self-possession. "That's a good joke on Rivard," he continued, forcing a laugh. "I've had that money in my pouch two years—got it at Whale River when I went with the goose boats that fall."

"I'm glad, Alan. Arsene was so mysterious with father, I wanted you to know because—he—does not like you."

Seizing her by the shoulders Alan searched her dark eyes. "Do you still like me?" he demanded. "Has Arsene changed you?"

The long-lashed lids of her black eyes winked hard as she smiled back at him. "You know I do—Alan. I'm so glad—you've come back—so early."

"Thanks for what you told me, Berthe! I'm going to Pierre's house—for supper," he said at the door.

No, he reassured himself, as he walked away through the wet snow, Rivard hadn't poisoned her mind yet.

Over the hot supper at Pierre's the two boys talked with their host of the winter on the headwaters.

"Pierre," said Alan, at length, as he pushed back his chair and lit his pipe, "you are my friend and will tell me. What did Rivard say when he came back with those strangers to the trade-room?"

A smile lit the broad face of the head voyageur. His small eyes twinkled as he answered: "He pull dose poleece ovair een de corner and whisper. He know Pierre ees your fr'en'."

"So they're Provincial Police from Quebec? Who are they after?"

Pierre shrugged. "I do not know; M'sieu' Dessane tell dem you know de headwater country, you and Noel, so dey want you to guide dem."

"How did they get here?"

"Yesterday dey come een ovair de shore ice by dog-team. Dey got two half-breed wid dem—bad lookin' feller."

"But father says the coast is not clear!"

"And Gabriel told them I was the man they wanted."

"Ah-hah, dey say dey pay you well to guide dem."

"Well, Pierre, Noel and I are going up the coast for dogs. They'd better get someone else for a guide. I might lose the way."

Back in his own house at the Hudson's Bay settlement, Alan and Noel considered the situation.

Suddenly the great dog lying at their feet lifted his head. His throat swelled in a low rumble as he stalked to the door on stiff legs and sniffed at the crack. The eyes of the two men met as they nodded significantly. Shortly there were low voices outside which were answered by the sniffing dog with a snarl. There was a knock and a voice called:

"Tie up that man-eating husky, will you?"

Alan ordered Rough to lie down in a corner of the room, then opened the door. McQueen and Slade entered, casting furtive glances around the room for the dog.

"I don't like that dog," said McQueen. "Put him outside, will you! He might jump on us."

"Yes, he might. He's a good judge of men—that dog."

Alan realized that he was going pretty far. These men were Provincial Police, with wide powers. But they had not as yet identified themselves to him, and he had that excuse for his actions. He opened the door and let Rough out.

"We want a word with you, alone," said McQueen.

"Noel, here, is my partner," replied Alan. "We have no secrets from each other."

"But you sometimes have a secret together, eh?" broke in Slade.

Alan gazed blankly into Slade's leering eyes. Police or no, he didn't like the cut of the jibs of these two men. "Secret together, what do you mean?" he asked.

"Well, my lad, I'm kind of curious to know what a hunter just out of the bush is doing with a piece of Canadian paper money," said McQueen. "I suppose you got it from a bear."

To the horror of the watching Noel, Alan calmly produced his pouch from a pocket and drew out the bill. "You mean this?"

Cameron's cool audacity took McQueen and Slade by surprise. The former hesitated, swallowed, then demanded excitedly: "Where up river did you get that money? Who gave it to you?"

Alan yawned, then calmly surveyed the exasperated McQueen from head to foot. "When you show me what business it is of yours, I may tell you."

McQueen's pale eyes flamed with anger. "We're Provincial Police! Didn't you know that? You'd better keep a civil tongue in your head, young man!"

"Why didn't you tell me who you were?" countered Alan, revelling in the discomfiture of the thick-set officer. "Rivard didn't say a thing about it when I met you, and neither did you! I suppose you've got something to prove it?"

McQueen threw open his outer and inner coats, displaying a badge of German silver on his heavy shirt. "That satisfy you? I'm a sergeant of Provincial Police, Province of Quebec. I thought they'd told you. Slade, here, is a corporal."

"I haven't seen Gabriel since I got in and Rivard said nothing about your being police," avoided Alan, truthfully. He realized the danger of further antagonizing his callers. They had wide powers in the hinterlands when in pursuit of wanted men. They might even force him to accompany them to the headwaters. But remorse over his carelessness flicked him as a whip flicks a harness-sore dog.

"Now will you tell us where you got that money?"

"I got that money from Neil Campbell, at Whale River, two years ago."

With a shrug and a smile of impotency McQueen turned to Slade. "Guess we'd better let these boys get some sleep," he said good-naturedly. "They're tired and cross, need plenty of rest and grub—then we'll have a talk with them."

"You'll have plenty of time to talk," said Alan, winking at the stiff-faced Noel. "After the ice from the upper river passes, the river will run high with snow water for weeks. You'll have plenty of time."

"Well, good-night, boys, no hard feelings! See you later!"

Alan stood motionless in the doorway until the two callers disappeared in the gloom, then closed the door and turned to Noel.

"I've got to see Neil Campbell before anyone else from Fort George reaches him. As soon as the ice clears the coast we head for Whale River."

CHAPTER IV

The vanguards of the marching spring had reached Fort George and swept on up the East Coast of the great salt bay of the north.

It was late in May and two men waited while the lifting sun and the rain winds from the foot of James Bay warred with the floe-ice that blocked the bleak East Coast. Not yet might a canoe hope to pass the treacherous Cape of the Four Winds and reach Whale River.

And while the anxious Alan fretted to be off, Officers McQueen and Slade made repeated attempts to entangle him in the details of the story of how he happened to have Canadian money in his possession.

It had been bitter news to Alan when Gabriel Dessane told him the details of the mission of the police.

"Alan, I don't blame you for being a little stiff before you knew who they were," said Gabriel, "but the law requires that we give the police any help possible. Their papers order us to furnish guides, supplies, whatever they require. They're after a man who went in to Nichicun by way of Rupert House, last summer—a man charged with murder."

Murder! John McCord with the straight gazing eyes and the big heart—a murderer!

"His Indians came out at East Main in December—deserted him," continued Dessane. "He had hired them to go in with him to trade for fur. They came out to get dogs and supplies but he wanted them to go into the interior, this summer, and they were afraid to go. That was his plan—to lose himself in the interior. That was why the police were suspicious when you dropped that bill you got from Neil Campbell," the stunned Alan heard Dessane say, as if from a distance. "They know there's no money used in the back country and they suspected you might have run into him."

Alan's level eyes met the friendly gaze of the factor as he replied: "Yes, I understand. But I don't go up river with these police. I've got to get some good dogs from the Huskies. That will take me weeks."

"Well, I'll tell Sergeant McQueen that you must get your dogs from the Eskimos first, if he insists on taking you to the headwaters instead of some of our Indians."

But while the laggard spring touched the East Coast slowly with its magic, to Alan who chafed at the delay, harassed by his problem, there was one great consolation in his enforced idleness, Berthe. Far away, indeed, seemed the man and the girl on the Talking River, when he sat with the small Manon on his knees while he watched the busy fingers of her sister at her sewing. But equally far seemed the day when Alan Cameron, humble trapper of fur, could take this black-eyed girl in his arms and tell her his love.

So the days passed while Alan and Noel made frequent trips to the mouth of the river to watch the condition of the floe-ice along the coast. Then, one day, they learned from Andrew Christie, Hudson's Bay factor, that McQueen had hired a York boat. That meant that the police were going to try to slip up the coast to Whale River to check his story.

"Noel," said Alan, as the two sat in Alan's cabin, "ice or no ice, we leave for Whale River tonight! We must beat McQueen to Neil Campbell or they will know we met John McCord and compel us to take them to the headwaters."

"You t'ink Neil weel tell dem he geeve you de monee?"

"He'd die for me, Noel. I pulled him out of the river here when he was clerk at the Hudson's Bay."

Early that evening Alan walked with Berthe along the high shore of the river near the Revillon Freres post. He would not see her again in weeks for his quest for dogs would take him far north of the Whale.

"It won't be long, now, Berthe, before we can start," he said, watching the breeze whip a plume of her black hair across her face.

"But father says the coast is not clear!" she protested. "It would be very dangerous for you to start in a canoe in all that drifting ice."

"I may have to go to Richmond Gulf, Berthe, before I meet the Eskimos. They won't reach Whale River until too late. I've got to find them, you know, if I want to get good dogs."

She laid her hand on his arm. "There's something I want to tell you, Alan. The police are going to Whale. I heard Arsene tell father."

"Yes, I know that. They don't believe I got that money from Neil and are going to find out."

"But I believe you, Alan, and so does father."

"I know you believe me, Berthe. You're a wonderful friend—you don't know what that means to me. And I can't sneak away without saying good-by. I may not see you—again—for weeks."

Forty-Acre "Fort," Inclosed by High Cliffs, Once Was a Cache of Bandits

Nestling in the hills near here, a freak of nature, a high-walled circular fort containing 40 acres, has been publicized by the Shawnee division of the United States forest service to the extent that thousands of persons have visited the place during the last year, writes an Equality, Ill., correspondent in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The fort, a walled-in mystery to the present generation, is, according to tradition, an inclosure that early Nineteenth century horse thieves used as a cache for stolen horses, cattle and other things. It is almost round in shape and its walls are perpendicular cliffs from 60 to 120 feet high all around except on the south side where there is a narrow winding way by which one may reach its top. Across this narrow way there is a tumble-down stone wall erected by unknown hands in the distant past.

Because the high-walled enclosure is well watered by an overflowing spring and heavily vegetated, cattle and horses could be held here for an indefinite period without fear of discovery.

Many Indian graves are found inside the fort, from which numerous relics have been taken. Some think that the artificial wall on one side of the grounds was erected by the Indians, and that the 40-acre tract or inclosure served as a herding ground for deer and other animals. When deer wandered through the narrow passageway that leads to the top, the Indians might close the gap and chase the deer off the vertical cliffs, causing them to strike the rock-strewn hillsides below with broken necks.

Since the forestry service has improved the road that leads to this walled-in mystery, it has become a favorite sightseeing spot in the Shawnee unit of the national forest.

The Achyranthes

Achyranthes is known in Hindu mythology. It is a plant indigenous to India. The legend attached to this plant is that Namuchi, a monster, was slain by Indra, one of the gods. The Achyranthes sprung from the skull of this monster and with this plant Indra flogged all other demons out of existence.

WHAT TO EAT AND WHY ★

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Describes the Need for IRON and COPPER

Shows How You Can Help to Avoid Anemia by Including These Blood-Building Minerals in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City

OF ALL the nutrition problems that challenge the homemaker, none is more important than supplying her family's need for iron. This mineral is sometimes described as the supreme element in nutrition because it is an essential constituent of the blood.

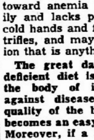
How Blood Is Constructed

If you should examine a drop of blood under the microscope, you would observe that it is composed of red cells and white cells. In normal blood there are about 25 million times a million red blood corpuscles, owing their color to the iron-bearing protein hemoglobin. They carry oxygen to all the body tissues, and remove the carbon dioxide formed during the combustion of body fuel.



A reduction in the amount of hemoglobin in the blood may cause shortness of breath, quickened respiration and an accelerated heart action. Lack of appetite, weakness, and a slowing of all vital functions may also result from the diminished supply of oxygen to the tissues.

Lack of Iron May Lead to Anemia

In many young people the blood does not function normally, though frequently parents are unaware that anything is wrong. You may scold them for being lazy, for lacking interest in their work, or never heeding the things you tell them, when the real trouble is due to iron starvation which, if long continued, may lead to anemia.

The person who has a tendency toward anemia usually tires easily and lacks pep; complains of cold hands and feet; worries over trifles, and may have a complexion that is anything but rosy.

The great danger of an iron-deficient diet is that it deprives the body of its chief defense against disease. For when the quality of the blood is poor, one becomes an easy prey to infection. Moreover, if a serious illness occurs, lowered resistance makes it difficult to fight it off.

Two Forms of Anemia

Anemia may be due to loss of blood, deficient blood formation, or to increased blood destruction in the body. The different forms of the disease are sometimes classified as primary and secondary anemia.

Primary anemia is usually known as pernicious anemia. It is a grave condition in which the marrow of the bones has lost its power to make red blood cells.

Secondary or nutritional anemia may result from loss of blood in an accident, or it may follow a long, infectious illness. For any infection lowers the iron reserve in the body. But the most common cause is a diet lacking in sufficient iron over a long period of time.

How Much Iron?

It is believed that about 10 per cent of the total hemoglobin in adults is destroyed daily. And for this reason iron-rich foods must be included in the diet every day.

Investigators have found it difficult to determine the exact iron requirement, but according to the latest estimates, from 12 to 15 milligrams a day will not only provide adequately for bodily requirements, but will allow a reasonable reserve.

Women Need More Than Men

Women require more iron than men, in proportion to the body weight, to make good the losses that occur during the menses. Expectant mothers need a generous amount of iron, not only to provide for their own needs and for the normal development of the fetus, but to create a reserve supply in the baby's body which will last through the period of lactation.

The percentage of iron in the baby's body is about three times that of the adult. Nature has wisely designed this reserve to make up for the low iron content of milk which constitutes the chief food during the first six months of life. Nutrition authorities believe, however, that better health results when an iron-rich food, such as egg-yolk, is introduced very early into the diet. This helps to prevent the slight anemia which was formerly regarded as unimportant, but which is now recognized as making the baby more susceptible to infection and retarding growth.

Children's Requirement High

It is desirable to keep the iron intake at a high level throughout childhood, for it has been discovered that better health results when a surplus is allowed above the daily requirement. But there is a very special need for iron in girls from the beginning of adolescence through the eighteenth year.

Iron-Rich Foods

To maintain top health and prevent the possibility of nutritional anemia, the homemaker must learn to meet the daily iron requirement of her family and not leave this vital matter to chance.

Iron-rich foods include egg yolk, liver, molasses, dried beans and peas, whole grain cereals, lean meat and green leafy vegetables. While milk has only a small amount of iron, experiments show that its iron is readily absorbed and is utilized to good advantage.

Eggs are such an excellent source of iron that one egg yields about one-tenth of the standard requirement. Lean meat furnishes a considerable amount, but liver is so much richer that it should be eaten frequently. Dried beans are inexpensive and when baked with molasses become a good source of iron.

It is a pity that parsley is so often used only as a garnish, because it has a higher iron content than most green leafy vegetables. Though potatoes contain only a moderate amount of iron, they are usually consumed in sufficient quantities to make them a significant source.

Copper Also Necessary

Investigation has demonstrated that adequate iron alone is not enough to prevent nutritional anemia, for the body cannot convert iron into blood pigment unless copper is also present. Therefore, in order to obtain the full benefits of iron, the diet must contain sufficient copper. Foods that supply copper in abundance are liver, nuts, dried beans and peas. Smaller but significant amounts are provided by whole grain cereals, dried fruits and poultry.

I shall gladly send to every homemaker a list of foods rich in both iron and copper, and also sample menus showing how to plan a balanced, blood-building diet.

I urge you to write for this material and keep the blood-building foods in mind when planning menus. Never forget for an instant that good blood is the best form of life insurance.

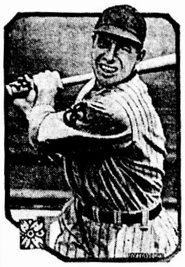
Sign Stealing Called Asset To Ballplayer

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY

CONNIE MACK sits in his dugout and fans himself with a score card. Nice way to keep cool on a hot day. Perhaps. But an even nicer way to flash signals to batters or base-runners, for a casual flip of the cardboard may mean "bunt," "take a long lead off first," "hit and run" or "squeeze play."

John McGraw sat in his dugout and by a cryptic telegraph system commanded the actions of his players on the field as if they were robots operated by remote control.

That's how the sign language of baseball works. A yank at the peak of a cap, the wink of an eye, a shoe lace carelessly tied, a shift of the coach's feet, a slight turning of the hips—all may have a hidden significance.



LEFTY O'DOUL

The ability to detect the signs and mannerisms of opposing players is therefore an asset that pays big dividends in the major leagues. Of the old-timers, Chief Bender, the doughty Indian who pitched for the Athletics a generation ago, was said to be the most cunning in decoding enemy's signals. Of the moderns, Lefty O'Doul credited his ability to steal signs with helping him to win the National league batting championship a few years ago. Now he's manager of the San Francisco Seals and makes life miserable for his Coast league rivals by his uncanny knack.

Picks on Pitchers

One of his tricks was to take advantage of the mannerisms of two pitchers who invariably tipped off the kind of ball they were preparing to throw.

"Flint Rehm, the Cardinals' big right hander was one of those pitchers," Lefty said. "When he threw his curve he looked at the ball as he drew his arms over his head in the windup. When he threw his fast one he didn't look at the ball.

"Then there was a pitcher named Watson with Brooklyn who had a habit of sticking his tongue out of the corner of his mouth when he threw a curve. I didn't tell anybody about those fellows, or the word would have got around the circuit and Rehm and Watson would have covered up their give-away signs."

Larry Woodall, once a star catcher for the Detroit Tigers and now O'Doul's chief aid at San Francisco, is also handy at sign-snatching. Between them they had a lot of fun last year at the expense of Catcher Cooper of Sacramento. They got his signals to the pitchers regularly and the Seal batters laid for every pitch. Cooper unwittingly held his glove with the fingers pointing down when a curve was being thrown and gave his target for a fast one with fingers pointing up.

BUCKY HARRIS

It might occur to you that managers and coaches would use word signs sometimes in much the same way as football quarterbacks bark out directions for the next play. But they won't work, according to O'Doul, who cited Bucky Harris' experiment as an example.

"Harris tried verbal signals for a while when he was managing the Washington Senators a few years ago," Lefty recalled, "but he gave them up after a fair trial. It's tough getting over spoken signs when 20,000 fans are yelling themselves hoarse in a tight clinch. Then if a ball player misses a signal, he has a fine alibi."

After the Derby

THE sixty-fourth Kentucky Derby won by the long shot Lawrin with Jockey Eddie Arcaro up may be remembered in history as a Derby of disappointments. The disappointments started even before the race was run. Stagehand, favored to lead the field all the way, and a horse with an uncanny ability to win, had to be scratched a couple of days before the race because of a bad cold.

The next disillusionment came with the fold-up of Fighting Fox. A full brother of the famous Gallant Fox, this horse was favorite when "They're off!" rose from the stands. Fighting Fox fought it out for about a mile and then quit. Bull Lea provided the next series of heart-aches to his fans. He was second choice in the betting and greatly touted ahead of time. But in the pay-off Bull Lea wasn't there.

Dauber gave perhaps the greatest demonstration of the futility of what might have been. In actual performance this horse did enough running to win the race. He simply encountered a load of trouble and tough luck. A slow get-away and the necessity of dropping to last place to avoid a pile-up en route were things Dauber had to contend with. But in the face of these hurdles he made up all but one length on Lawrin and was crowding the winner at the finish line.

Lawrin himself reserved his disappointments until after the race. Then it was discovered that this unexpected winner would not have a chance to show his stuff in either the Preakness or the Belmont. His owner had neglected to enter him for either of these classics. So Lawrin, the Derby winner, becomes just another three-year-old until he has a chance to demonstrate his worth further on some of the mid-western tracks this summer.

Tennis Grand Slam

WITH three of the world's choicest tennis crowns perched on his sorrel head, John Donald Budge, America's No. 1 tennis player, hopes to make a clean sweep of the major championships in the sport by annexing the one remaining title still at large—the French National championship, recognized in some quarters as the world's hard-court championship.

The French tournament occurs before the Wimbledon classic in England, so Don will have plenty of time for both. At Wimbledon, Budge will defend his world's championship against all comers.

The redheaded genius of tennis now holds not only the Wimbledon crown which is the all-England title as well as the world's, but the American national championship and the Australian national title. Only Fred Perry, now a leading pro, has ever succeeded in winning all four of these titles in a single season.

DON BUDGE

The betting is brisk that Budge will equal Perry's score by breezing through the French tournament. He still has some distance to go, however, before he equals Perry's traveling record. The Englishman maintains he has covered more ground than anybody in the history of tennis, for he has campaigned through South America and Africa and in one season held the national championship of no less than 11 different countries.

Here and There—

ONE of the most interesting names in the majors is Moore. Oddly enough, all four of them are in the National league. The last Moore in the American league was Wiley Moore, the Yanks' old sinkerball relief man. Last year the National league had six Moores, but Johnny Moore, Phillies' outfielder, and Randy Moore, Brooklyn handy man, have drifted back to the minors.

In case you get your Moores mixed up, here are a few tabs on 'em:

Joe Gregg Moore—New York Giants' left fielder, twenty-nine, born Gause, Texas, weight 155 pounds.

Gene Moore—Boston Bees' right fielder, twenty-seven, born Lancaster, Texas, weight 175 pounds.

Terry Bluford Moore—St. Louis Cardinals' outfielder, twenty-six, born Memphis, Tenn., weight 180 pounds.

Lloyd (Whitey) Moore—Cincinnati Reds' pitcher, twenty-three, born Tuscarawas, Ohio, weight 185 pounds.

Bob Seeds, veteran Newark outfielder and former major leaguer, belted out seven home runs in two days, recently setting a new mark for batters to shoot at. All of his wallops were hit over the left field wall which is 321 feet from home plate.

History Of The P. T. A. Here

The Avon Park Parent-Teacher Association was organized on September 9, 1927. Mrs. Mooney, of Jacksonville, State Vice President, met with a group of interested men and women and outlined the work of the Association. Mrs. T. C. Hobbs was named temporary chairman, with Mrs. J. M. Lee acting as secretary.

At the next meeting the following officers were elected:

President, Mrs. W. C. Touchton.

First vice-president, Mrs. T. C. Hobbs, (Publicity).

Second vice-president, Mrs. R. C. Epperson, (Recreation).

Third vice-president, Mrs. N. H. Trent, (Program).

Fourth vice-president, Rev. T. O. Baldwin, (Membership).

Fifth vice-president, Mrs. L. D. Roberts, (Hospitality).

Sixth vice-president, Mrs. J. L. Cloud, (Finance).

Seventh vice-president, Mrs. E. W. Hartt, (Social).

Recording secretary, Mrs. J. M. Lee.

Corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. E. Covington.

Treasurer, Mrs. Gilbert Stebbins.

Auditor, Prof. R. T. Fairey.

The standard by-laws were read and adopted at this meeting. The organization grew rapidly and at the first regular meeting the fourth Thursday in September 48 members were added to the charter membership. One of the first things undertaken by this organization was a reception for the teachers. This was held in the Jacaranda Hotel and was a pleasant beginning for the year's work. This courtesy for the teachers has been made an annual affair carried out in different ways. Another custom, that of giving room prizes to the grade having the highest per cent of parents present at P.-T. A. meetings, was begun in January, 1928 and has been carried out through the succeeding years.

The outstanding things accomplished the first year of the organization was furnishing emergency kits for both school buildings, reconditioning play ground equipment, arranging a room for storing costumes to be used for plays and entertainments and meeting with the local board concerning plan for a school band.

For the year 1928-29 the following officers were elected.

President, Mrs. W. C. Touchton.

First vice-president, Mrs. T. C. Hobbs, (Publicity).

Second vice-president, Mrs. O. E. Wolff, (Recreation).

Third vice-president, Mrs. E. W. Hartt, (Program).

Fourth vice-president, Mrs. F. E. Wray, (Membership).

Fifth vice-president, Mrs. E. P. Loomis, (Hospitality).

Sixth vice-president, Mrs. N. C. Langford, (Finance).

Seventh vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Lanier, (Social).

Eighth vice-president, Mrs. W. D. Dorminey, (Child Welfare).

Recording secretary, Mrs. J. M. Lee.

Corresponding secreary, Mrs. M. E. Covington.

Treasurer, Mrs. G. A. Stebbins.

Auditor, Prof. Fairey.

Historian, Mrs. W. M. Reck.

In September 1928 the P.-T. A. voted to open and operate a lunch room in the grammar school building. The local board agreed to give stationery equipment not to exceed $55.00. The P.-T. A. furnished china, silver, glassware, cooking utensils, stove and other necessities. Mrs. S. S. Saggus was put in charge of the lunch room, agreeing to pay the P.-T. A. $10.00 per month rent. This lunch room has continued to operate successfully with a change in management from time to time.

In October of this year the high school band had its beginning under the leadership of Mr. Nichols. The P.-T. A. gave financial and moral support to the band and has continued to do so each year. Professor Gustat succeeded Mr. Nichols as leader and for the last three years Mr. E. L. Roberts has been the capable leader of the band, and also a fine glee club.

The Child Welfare Work made its beginning this year under Mrs. W. D. Dorminey, the capable chairman of that committee. She was aided by Mrs. J. M. Lee.

Also, a reference set and a few new volumes were added to the school library this year, at a cost of one hundred dollars ($100.00).

The officers elected for the year 1929-30 were as follows:

President, Mrs. T. C. Hobbs.

First vice-president, Mrs. K. J. Bailey.

Recording secretary, Mrs. Cyril Baldwin.

Corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. E. Covington.

Treasurer, Mrs. T. H. McNicholas.

Program chairman, Mrs. Otto Skipper.

Financial chairman, Mrs. Phil Lacey.

Child Welfare chairman, Mrs. J. M. Lee.

Hospitality chairman, Mrs. E. W. Hartt.

Play Ground chairman, Mrs. J. L. Cloud.

Social chairman, Mrs. C. E. Lanier.

Mrs. E. W. Hartt and Mrs. Joe Lander in charge of lunch room.

During this year the Welfare Work was greatly enlarged under the leadership of Mrs. J. M. Lee, who secured donations from the other organizations of the town to help feed and cloth the many needy children. Also, the teachers' rest rooms were equipped with more comfortable furnishings.

'OPEN WINDOWS' COMMENCEMENT SERMON THEME

Rev. Dalton Was Speaker Sunday Night At High School Auditorium

"Open Windows" was the subject shosen by Rev. J. P. Dalton, pastor of the First Baptist church, for the commencement sermon which he delivered before a large audience Sunday night at the high school auditorium. His text, taken from the tenth verse of the sixth chapter of the Book of Daniel, was "His windows being open in his chamber towards Jerusalem."

In opening Rev. Dalton congratulated the graduating class for their achievements and Dr. Stanley N. Reeves, the school faculty and the parents for their triumphant hour. He said "surely you have raised your Ebenezer and the Lord has blessed us."

He said this is a challenging age in which we live, it is a unique and peculiar age. Man has reached into the mountains and found gold; he has laid tracks of steel on which locomotives haul huge tonnage of freight, he has irrigated the desert, ships of steel cross the oceans and lightning is our messenger boy over copper wires. It should be the golden age but is not as something is wrong.

Man, in the present mad rush has majored on brains and minored on his soul. He has big brains but peanut consciences. As a result many of life's windows are closed and after all is said and done we do not partake of the bread of life.

He hoped the young people would open the windows of their lives and walk in the way of happeness and success. Live like men, he said and not like animals. Conquer and subdue the world, be victors and not victims.

It takes faith to have open windows, Man was made by God to look up and man longs and yearns for something higher.

This country is great because our forefathers had faith in God, he said They had open windows and God blessed them and this country and made it great. If we are worthy heirs we can make this the golden age.

It takes intellect to have open windows, he continued. It is significant that the Wise Men saw the Star in the East and came to worship. So now the wise man sees his star and comes to serve Him also. Fools say there is no God and sin, in the final analysis is stupidity. Keep from doing things that hurt and cause defeat, he urged.

It also takes courage to have open windows. The question is "Shall I stand on my own feet and play the man or meekly surrender and follow the ways of evil?" Dalton said. Jesus said "Follow thou me." Be good soldiers of the Cross, enduring hardnes, lift high the banner of the Kingdom of God, cross over Jordan and take the promised land, he advised.

Addressing the graduating class directly, he said, be not weaklings, wade into life and be not content to wade in shallow waters. Go forth and seek to make the world a better place. Strive till the name of Christ covers the earth. He is the "Window Opener."

Other features of the program was the processional march, played by Minerva Perry as the graduating class entered from the rear of the auditorium, the invocation by Rev. A. C. Elliott, an anthem by the Glee Club, Bible reading by Fr. R. I. Brown, prayer by Rev. W. C. Fountain, another anthem by the Glee Club, a song by the entire audience, the benediction by Rev. H. C. Winnett and the recessional march played by Betty Touchton.

The stage was decorated for the occasion with palms and bowls of roses with the Stars and Stripes and school flag prominently displayed in front. Dr. Stanley N. Reeves was in charge of the program.

J. L. Greene Elected To The Phi Society

DeLand, June 2—Phi Society, recognizing high scholarship of freshmen at Stetson University, elected to membership recently the following students:

Marshall Arrington, Tavares; Corrie Lou Mires, David and Patricia Whitmore, DeLand; Dorothea Clarson, Jacksonville; J. L. Greene, Avon Park; Margaret Thomas, Cambridge, Ohio.

Mrs. Vickery and Mrs. Roberts Are Wreck Victims

Mrs. H. A. Vickery and Mrs. A. D. Roberts were injured in an automobile wreck Saturday near Ft. Myers when their car was forced off a narrow road by an approaching bus. Each of them received a broken collar bone and Mrs. Roberts also suffered a broken wrist. Mrs. Vickery's son, Raymond escaped with severe bruises. Passing motorists took them to a Ft. Myers hospital where Mrs. Roberts is still confined. Mrs. Vickery and son have returned to Avon Park.

The party was driving Mrs. W. A. Davison's car and were returning from Everglades where Raymond has been teaching school. When the car was forced off the road it hit the soft shoulders and turned over. They crawled out of the windows and stopped a passing car. The bus failed to stop, they said. The car was badly damaged.

PREPARING FOR OVERSEES H'WAY OPENING JULY 4

Expect President Roosevelt Present For Final Program, July 4

Key West, June 2 (FNS) — Elaborate preparations by the Overseas Highway Celebration Committee for inviting President Federico Larendo Bru and Colonel F. Batista, of Cuba, to attend the fiesta here July 2-4, in celebration of the formal opening of the $30,000,000 Overseas Highway, have been completed, Warren Smith, general manager, announced today.

A delegation comprising Mayor Williard M. Albury; John H. Costar, vice-chairman of the Bridge and Toll Commission and general chairman of the Celebration Committee; C. C. Symonette, also a member of both organizations; Senor Ramon Delgado, president of the Cuban Club; Senor Enrique Esquinaldo, president of the San Carlos Institute; and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Smith, will leave from Miami for Havana Tuesday night aboard the Steamship Cuba. The party will arrive in the Cuban capital Wednesday morning where Consul Berardo Rodriguez has already arranged interviews with President Bru, Colonel Batista, Secretary of State, Juan J. Remos and other cabinet officers and governmental dignitaries.

The delegation will remain in Havana until Thursday or Friday with the exception of General Manager Smith, who will fly back to Miami Wednesday and leave by Eastern Air Lines Thursday for Washington along with Paul Marks attorney for the Bridge and Toll Commission, B. M. Duncan, chief engineer of the Overseas Highway and others for an audience with President Roosevelt on Friday, June 3, which has been arranged by Senators Claude Pepper and C. O. Andrews.

It is understood that President Roosevelt will probably be fishing in Florida waters at the time of the celebration here, in which event he will participate in the ceremonies set for July 4, climaxing the 3-day fiesta. If he is unable to leave Washington, it is expected the president will open the highway by elecrical impulse and assign a cabinet officer to represent him here with a formal address.

Extensive participation by United States Naval vessels has already been promised Senators Andrews and Pepper, who requested that six torpedo boat desroyers, a light cruiser and three submarines be ordered here for the celebration period.

Already scheduled are a series of pageants, a track and field meet an aquatic show, outboard regatta, baseball games between Cuba and American teams, a golf tournament, several parades, two nights of fireworks, several boxing bouts, the whole program to be topped off by an all night street dance at which the Queen of the Fiesta will be crowned, and an official ball for visiing dignitaries at the Country Club. The entire city of Key West is enthusiastically cooperating to make the celebration the biggest thing of is kind ever held in Florida.

Dr. Fred L. Touchton spoke before the Frostproof Rotary Club on Thursday. His subject was "America's Ills."

STUDENTS TELL ROTARIANS OF FUTURE PLANS

5 Graduates Outline Plans of Action During Next Few Years

Five members of the 1938 graduating class of the Avon Park high school told of their plans for the future at the Rotary Club luncheon Wednesday noon at the Jacaranda Hotel. Introduced by Chester R. Yates, they each spoke briefly and indicated they had given considerable thought to what they will do in life. The speakers were: Barbara Betts, Virginia Cloud, Eugene (Jeep) Jordon, Marvin (Politician) Reddick and Charles Sherman.

Miss Betts' plans include a course at Brenau College, Gainesville, Ga. in public school music. This will include band and glee club directing and she humorously remarked she might, in the future, be able to take Prof. E. L. Roberts' place when he becomes old and feeble.

The plans of Miss Cloud include a business course. She believes it is a good foundation for later life and leads to a broader education. She intends to enroll in a good secretarial school.

Jordon said he intends to be his own boss and plans to be an engraver. He will take a course in his chosen profession at Lancaster, Pa.

The ranks of the lawyers will be increased if Reddick's plans bear fruit. He is planning three years preliminary college work, including journalism, leading up to a full course in law.

Sherman intends to become a Naval surgeon. This summer he will spend on his uncle's farm in New York near which is a minature grand canyon. Next fall he will enter the University of Florida at Gainesville and work for a pre-medical degree in pharmacy and later will take a regular medical course. He has two uncles in the Navy and likes the service and all it stands for.

Walter Betts introduced a resolution putting the club on record as endorsing the city beautification program by the planting of bauhinia trees. The cooperation of other clubs will be sought. The resolution passed without a dissenting voice.

Stanley Reeves, the incoming president, announced his committee appointments and the budget for the coming year, all of which were approved.

Visitors were Jim Melton, president of the Sebring club and J. O. Zipperer of Ft. Myers.

Baby Show and Beauty Contest At Park Theatre

On next Thursday night, June 9 at 7:30 the Park Theatre will present a Better Baby Show on the stage. Babies ranging in ages from one to five years will represent the different merchants and business firms of Avon Park and vicinity. There will be prizes to both boy and girl winners. Any mother who would like her child in the contest is invited to inquire at the theatre for details.

Then at 9 o'clock on the same night the prettiest and most attractive girls and young women of the vicinity will be sponsored by the same firms in a Beauty Pageant. There will be prizes and the winner will be crowned "Miss Avon Park". Out of town judges will preside and there will be no advance in prices.

The special entertainment is being given under the auspices of the Avon Park Woman's Club.

Wolf's Store Has Opportunity Sale

Attention is called to the big Opportunity Sale now being conducted by Wolf's store on the Mall. A large variety of bargains are being offered and the sale presents a big opportunity for thrifty shoppers to supply their needs of quality merchandise at bargain prices.

WELLS SUPPER HOST

Commissioner J. Lawler Wells was host Thursday night at the American Legion home on Lake Lotela to his election workers during the recent primary campaign. A bountiful chicken supper with all the usual trimmin's was served to about 35 present.

GOT 'IM!

SPRING LAKE, N. J. — Charlotte Mount, athletic anglerette, holds a heavy black-fish in the surf at Allaire Beach as she waits for the gaff. Many of the fair sex have taken to surf casting here under instruction of the Allaire Beach patrol not only for the fun of feeling a heavy striped bass or blackfish on but for the exercise one gets in "heaving the lead."

FLORIDA PUBLIC SERVICE CO. TO GIVE BIG PRIZES

Prize Winning Photos Will Help Advertise Florida In The North

Chances are two to one in some musty box or frayed album residents of Central Florida have a "prize winning" photograph tucked away and forgotten. The local manager of the Florida Public Service Company recently announced that the photographs which will win the current contest will not be standard publicity shots. The judges are looking for the picture that's diffenent—the one that shows Central Florida's scenic beauties in an intriguing and unusual fashion. Your shot of Highland Hammock, Bok Tower, the lakes at sunset, Blue Springs or one of the myriad of other interesting subjects in Central Florida may be the one.

The Florida Public Service Company hopes that this contest will bring out a great number of different camera studies. The ordinary publicity photograph lacks the distinction that unusual treatment can provide. One international photographic contest held in New York this past winter produced as winner—a misty, romantic camera study of an English country lane. Here was a simple, unpretentious photograph which, in its simplicity, was irresistably compelling.

It is just such a picture as this—the picture you might take on your next Sunday ramble—that will be an irresistable drawing card when enlarged many times its original size and displayed in the New England Gas and Electric Association windows this fall and winter. Indeed, your heart might well swell with pride when your picture becomes the center of a display which will attract many new visitors to our beautiful Central Florida in coming years. Remember, the prize winning photographs automatically play an important role in the Florida Public Service Company's Florida Display which is to circulate through the large New England cities in the fall.

It costs you nothing to enter your favorite photograph or photographs. Simple obtain a copy of the simple rules and an entry blank from the local chamber of commerce or Florida Public Service Company office. Send in your snapshots, one, two or more. It costs you nothing to try and the first prize of $50.00 would be worthwhile with vacations just ahead. Don't be afraid of competition. Dig out that photograph you like so much and send it in.

Archeologists believe that the hardened gypsum sand mounds in White Sands National Monument, New Mexico, are caused by Indian camp fires.

Fred Smith Landed The Big Ones On Five Oz. Fly Rod

When it comes to landing the big ones of the black bass tribe on light tackle, it takes Fred Smith to do it. Shortly after the season opened last month, he landed four beauties in Arbuckle lake, using a five ounce fly rod. Their weights were 39 pounds and they tipped the scales at 8, 9, 10, and 12 pounds respectively. The heads are on display in the Smith Hardware Co. window and he also has photos to prove the catch.

These four were the biggest caught by the party at the Williams Camp. Others enjoying the trip were Mrs. Smith and daughter and Will Bennett.

CITRUS LEADERS ARE TOLD MUST 'HELP YOURSELF'

Retail Food and Drug Store Representatives Spoke At Orlando

Orlando, June 2 (FNS)—Urging harmony, mutual agreement and understanding as the greatest need of the citrus industry, four speakers representing the bulk of the nation's retail food and drug stores, guests of the Florida Citrus Commission at a testimonial dinner here, told assembled leaders of the industry "we're glad to help you, but for heaven sake, help yourself."

The dinner was given by the Commission as a testimonial in appreciation of the help in merchandising Florida's bumper orange crop in the season just closing.

John A. Logan, executive vice president of the National Association of Food Chains with 37,000 retail outlets throughout the country, said:

"Unless the Florida citrus industry devises some method of controlling the flow of fruit to market, you growers and shippers will suffer and your merchandising problems will multiply many times.

"When you suffer, we suffer with you, for unless agriculture prospers we can't profit and we are sincerely interested in helping agriculture."

Praising the Commission, Logan termed its efforts "praiseworthy" and lamented the fact that it was not given the wholehearted encouragement and support it justly deserved.

"Our problem," he said, "is to balance supply and consumer demand. We make more money at higher prices and higher prices will only come with some sort of control down here in Florida."

Charles E. Smith, president of the Independent Food Distributors Council and representing 153,000 independent retail outlets, voiced a similar plea, stating: "Independent merchants are glad to cooperate but we cannot deal with every faction within the industry, but must look to some central body to contact. The Florida Citrus Commission should get even more sincere backing than you are now affording it."

Harvey Baum, executive vice president of the Atlantic Commission Company, the buying branch of the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, gave a detailed account of what had been done in the orange drive by the firm he represents.

"We are not interested in buying fruit crops or any other crops at distress prices," he said. "We can make more money when we pay more for our merchandise, sell it for its real value."

H. C. Naylor, representing the National Association of Chain Drug Stores and president of the Lane Drug Company, told of results obtained by drug stores all over the country in pushing fresh orange juice and stated that it was developing a profitable repeat business.

Others appearing on the evening's program were Senator J. J. Parrish of Titusville, C. H. Walker of Avon Park, Russell Kay, Florida News Service, Tampa, and J. Ellsworth Davis, president of the Florida Chain Store Association.

Citrus Commission chairman John Maxcy opened the meeting, introducing toastmaster Jim Morton.

CHAS. SHERMAN WON TOP HONORS AT GRADUATION

Honor Students In Charge Of Graduation Program Thursday Night

One of the largest audience to witness a graduation exercise at the high school auditorium, last night saw thirty-five seniors, clad in caps and gowns, receive their diplomas and other awards. Out of the usual run of commencement exercises, the program was in complete charge of the honor students of the class, due to the fact that there wasn't a salutatorian or valediction. The five honor students gave interesting talks on well chosen topics which pertained to "How Avon Park High School Is Preparing Its Students to Meet the Real Needs of Life." Charles Sherman, was chairman for the occasion, having one of the highest averages of the senior class. Other honor students were, Dorothy Hughs, Eloise Dickinson, Barbara Betts and Jane Hartt.

The program open with the band playing the processional, while the seniors marched from the rear of the auditorium down the right and left aisles, taking their respective places on the stage. The invocation was given by Father R. I. Brown. Charles Sherman then took charge of the program and introduced the first speaker, Miss Dorothy Hughs whose subject was "Vocational Needs." As this subject covered a large field, the speaker touched on the most important points of the vocational work now going on in the school. She mentioned the work shop that the school has recently provided and how it has trained the young people for their future work. The speaker also mentioned the commercial and home economics departments of the school which gave the students a steady foundation to build their coming profession on.

"Mental Needs", a subject that volumes could be written on, was chosen by Miss Eloise Dickinson, whose scholastic achievements this year have been outstanding. Miss Dickinson stressed the fact that the three R's are not the only subjects one needs in this modern age, but that they act as a stepping stone to the accomplishments of life.

Miss Barbara Betts, who is well qualified for the topic she so graciously presented, "Social Needs", gave a clear picture of the school's government body and the different social events which have taken place during the school year. This is one of the most important points to consider when distinguishing between success and failure. Many a good man or woman has fallen by the wayside due to the fact that they were unable to meet and contact other people in a social-business manner. She stressed the point that many a business deal has been closed on a golf course.

For the next talk on the program the senior class couldn't have done a better job by appointing Miss Jane Hartt to present the "Physical Needs" of the students of the Avon Park high school. Miss Hartt received a medal for being the most athletic girl in the senior class. Athletics in the schools have as much place in the minds of the students as the three R's. She told of the different recreations the school has provided for the students and how important these relaxations were for the mind and body in achieveing the highest standards of life. She praised the coaches and student council for their work in these lines.

The senior girl members of the glee club sang, "The Dreamy Lake" which was enjoyed by all. Miss Mary Lydia Stebbins, talented piano player of the senior class, presented a solo, "Evening Star" (Wagner-Listz.)

Presentation of awards was made by Dr. Stanley N. Reeves. Charles Sherman, chairman of the program took his share of the medals last night when he received one of the Bailey medals, a medal for the highest scholastic average for boys in the senior class, won the "activity" medal and the Bausch & Lomb scientific medal.

Others who were honored were, Jean Correll, Bailey medal; Dorothy Hughes, Jane Hartt and Eloise Dickinson each receiving a medal for the highest scholastic average in the senior class for girls. Jane Hartt and Ed Touchton, athletic medals and Barbara Betts "activity" medal. Perfect attendance awards were received by Lucille

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Mrs. Kennedy Aids Father and Husband

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy has been an effective social and political ally of both her father, former mayor of Boston, and her husband, ambassador to the Court of St. James. But the news that, in accordance with her husband's decision, she presented only seven American women at court is one of her rare appearances in the headlines.

The 11 engaging Kennedys have been viewed more or less en bloc in the news and Mrs. Kennedy has never been in a very sharp lens focus.

She was one of the prettiest of Boston debutantes, 30 years ago, a rollicking girl with black hair and eyes of Irish blue. Back home from her convent training, she taught her father "Sweet Adeline."

He was John F. (Honey Fitz) Fitzgerald, and in his campaigns he sang his way to memorable political fame—riding like a surfboard the long, lingering "swipes" of the song taught him by his daughter—"the flower of his heart."

Fortune and Family Grew Up Together

Joseph P. Kennedy, her childhood playmate, was twenty-five years old when they were married in 1914. He borrowed $2,000 for a down payment on a $6,500 house. Their fortunes grew as their family, with Mr. Kennedy president of a bank, in a year or two after their marriage.

Mrs. Kennedy once told a Boston drygoods clerk that she bought 200 suits and dresses a year. It takes a heap of shopping to make a home, like the Kennedys', and she became known among her friends as a paragon of household efficiency comparable to the one in Solomon's offhand apostrophe to such skills and virtues.

Now she is mistress of the "castle" which was once J. Pierpont Morgan's home; also of a beautiful mansion in Bronxville, N. Y., a huge summer estate at Hyannisport, Cape Cod, and a villa at Palm Beach, built by one of the Wanamakers.

Has Diamond a Potentate Might Envy

She is slender and girlish, comely and vivacious, weighs 115 pounds and takes size 14 in dresses. Vionnet makes her gowns and she is envied by other women for her magnificent jewels—notable among them being a ruby and diamond bracelet which, it is said, is matched only by the one the Aga Khan gave his princess.

But she never lets the children run to unseemly display, holding them to restraint in regime and dress. Even without all these adventitious fixings, say her friends, she would be an admirable ambassador's wife, with her own quite adequate equipment of tact, charm and intelligence.

Yarns From Mt. Everest Ring True

MAN and boy, this journeyman has helped process a lot of explorers' and adventurers' copy through the news mill. If it was ghost-written, it had only slick and synthetic excitement, like Ersatz pastry, and if it wasn't it was usually dull. Happily in contrast are the doubtlessly authentic and personally written yarns of W. H. Tilman, leader of the British Mount Everest expedition, now getting under way.

These stories from the Tibetan base camp have a professional ease and fluency, along with a ring of integrity which gives assurance that Mr. Tilman is really writing them. There is no ghost on the job here.

Mr. Tilman is thirty-nine years old, a keen-faced, hard-muscled Britisher of medium stature, who has been exploring ever since he left college.

He has climbed mountains in the Alps and in Africa, including Mounts Kenya, Kilimanjaro and Ruvenzori. This is his fifth expedition to the Himalayas. The entrants in this high hurdle event are not youngsters. N. E. Odell is forty-seven, F. S. Smythre is thirty-seven and the others are all over thirty.

Rats Drink Ink at Night

Rats have been drinking black ink at night in the Swellendam, South Africa, city hall. Possibly they were blondes who wish to become brunettes, is one suggestion. P. Heyns, the municipal foreman, says he frequently has found his ink well, which he kept in a locked room, empty. Before leaving the office one afternoon he poured the ink into a saucer. Next morning it was empty

—Speaking of Sports—

Schmeling vs. Louis Bout Is Sports Riddle

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY

WHEN Joe Louis and Max Schmeling climb into the New York ring to fight it out for the heavyweight championship on June 22, you can be sure of one thing. The fight experts won't be out on a limb as they were two years ago when these battlers first met. In 1936 the prognosticators were unanimous in picking Louis. Columns were written about his superiority over the stolid Schmeling. Betting odds made Max a long shot. It was simply a matter of how few rounds it would take for the lethal Louis to do his stuff.

MAX SCHMELING

But you remember what happened. It was a pugilistic cinderella story. The underdog emerged as the lion. The crafty Schmeling got Louis off balance at the start, clubbed him repeatedly with his right, overawed and out-foxed him and wound up by knocking him out.

Louis Explodes

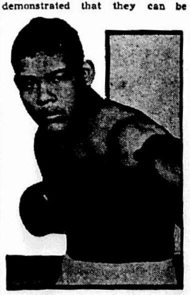
Louis looked bad. A seven-day wonder had exploded. Some who had been loudest in their paeans now solemnly insisted that Joe was all washed up. But he went on to lick a couple of set-ups, recovered his form and equilibrium and really showed championship caliber when he knocked out Jim Braddock a year ago and won the heavyweight crown.

So today there is an air of caution about predictions. It is an open and shut question. You can get "yes and no" answers, but few are willing to go unequivocally on record.

Everybody is agreed that Louis is fistically more grown up than when he met Schmeling two years ago. Everybody is likewise agreed that Schmeling is physically a good deal older than he was. At his time of life athletically a year or two makes a tremendous amount of difference in the performance of his legs, his wind, his timing. He has looked good in his recent fights, but it is a question whether he is now hitting as hard as he did when they met before.

But there are some imponderables involved and they can determine the outcome as well as anything else. Has Louis recovered psychologically from the beating Schmeling gave him? Will he be as confident against the German as he was against Jim Braddock?

Schmeling is probably as smart a fighter as Gene Tunney was. He studies his opponents and depends on what he learns about them to crush them. He made several trans-Atlantic trips in order to get first-hand evidence about Louis' strength and weakness before their last fight.



JOE LOUIS

Both Louis and Schmeling have demonstrated that they can be knocked out. It is a case of superior ringcraft, coolness and experience against youth and great natural ability. Gameness may be the determining factor.

But whoever wins, some interesting possibilities will be opened up in the way of future opponents. Three fighters stand out: Max Baer, who re-established his reputation as a big-time fighter by the way he polished off Tommy Farr; Tony Galento, the human punching bag; and Gunnar Barlund, the up-and-coming Swede.

Versatile Umps

WHEN it comes to being versatile, the umpiring staff of the National league can hold its own with anybody. Its members have been distinguished for a long time for their prominence in other fields of activity as well as baseball.

Take Bill Stewart, for instance. For years Bill was the ace referee in the National Hockey league during the winter. Then he became manager of the Chicago Blackhawks a year ago and really began to make the headlines in earnest. He reaped more fame than an umpire ever dreamed of, when the Hawks swept through all their opposition to win the world's championship in the hockey league's Stanley cup playoffs a while back.

Then there's Ernie Quigley, supervisor of umpires for the National league. For 25 years he has been one of the most noted officials in intercollegiate football and basketball. He was chairman of the committee to select Uncle Sam's representative basketball team in the 1936 Olympic games in Berlin.

And don't forget Charlie Moran. Charlie won fame as a football coach. He coached the team from Center college, in Kentucky when the Praying Colonels were famous from coast to coast, beating a great Harvard team and earning for Coach Moran the title of football's miracle man.

Kid Golfers

A "KID" golf team is representing Uncle Sam in the Walker cup events in Britain this month. The eight lads on the team captained by the non-playing veteran Francis Ouimet, average less than 25 years of age.

Oldest member of the squad is Johnny Goodman of Omaha, a doddering campaigner of twenty-eight, who is national amateur champion and former national open crown-holder. Youngest is Fred Hass, Jr., of New Orleans, national collegiate title holder. In between come Ray Billows, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., runner-up to Goodman last year; Charley Yates of Atlanta; Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati; Chuck Kocsis, Detroit; Marvin Ward, Olympia, Wash.; and Reynolds Smith, Dallas, Texas. Two alternates, Tommy Tailer and Don Moe, figured they would be just wasting their time under any circumstances, so they did not accompany the team abroad.

JOHNNY GOODMAN

Francis Ouimet is an oldster of forty-five years and has been a member of every Walker cup team since the competition began in 1922. He has been captain of the last three teams.

Here and There—

HAL TROSKY'S robust batting average is attributed to orders from the new manager of the Indians, Oscar Vitt, to forget that short right field fence in League park and try for singles and doubles . . . Boston has not defeated Carl Hubbell since 1935 . . . Carl, however, pitched only one game against the Bees in 1936 . . . Texas Christian football players gained weight in spring practice but lost an average of two pounds each during examination week.

There may be nothing to it, but Managers Burleigh Grimes of the Dodgers and Gabby Street of the Browns insist on wearing uniforms No. 13 . . Boston baseball writers have presented Duffy Lewis, the old outfield star and now traveling secretary with the Bees, a wardrobe trunk . . . Roland Logan, University of Pittsburgh trainer, was Glenn Cunningham's first coach and Jim Potts, assistant coach of the Panthers, started the peerless miler in his first race when Glenn was thirteen years old . . . Max Baer never has been beaten in a return bout.

Six man football is the coming sport for smaller high schools, Iowa high school superintendents and coaches agreed at the first annual six man clinic held at Iowa State college recently.

Though only 19 Iowa high schools played six man football last fall several of its sponsors attending the clinic predicted that this number would be greatly augmented when the 1938 season rolls around. Several coaches from larger Iowa high schools also attended the clinic.

Phenomenon in Politics

Washington.—It is curious how trade winds blow in politics. We, here in Washington, have just witnessed what can well be called a phenomenon. It grows out of the primaries in two widely separated states, Florida and Pennsylvania. The fact that it was a Democratic primary in each instance, however, makes possible this analysis and discussion of details.

Taking up the primaries in their order, there was the primary in Florida where Sen. Claude Pepper, 100 per cent New Dealer, indorser of Townsend old-age pensions, and himself indorsed by James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President, licked the pants off of his challengers. He polled more votes than Rep. J. Mark Wilcox and former Gov. Dave Sholtz combined. It was, without doubt, a New Deal victory for which the President can claim justifiable credit.

The second primary was that in Pennsylvania where there were three candidates for the United States senatorial nomination among the Democrats and three for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. There were two candidates for the Republican nomination for each of these offices, as well, but that fact will be treated later.

Few party primaries in modern times developed the bitterness that flamed in the Democratic test in Pennsylvania. It was the first time that organized labor, as such, had come out into the open with avowed candidates and it was the first time Democratic National Chairman Farley has taken a hand in attempting to tell the voters of a state what to do. In addition, there was a state party committee which insisted upon selecting a slate of candidates in regulation boss fashion. So there were all of the elements of a rough fight, and it happened according to forecast.

Mr. Farley made an eleventh-hour public appeal to the Democrats of Pennsylvania "for harmony." He asked them to nominate Governor Earle for the United States senate. Governor Earle was the choice of the state committee faction. Mr. Farley also asked that the Pennsylvanians nominate Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, for the governorship. Mr. Kennedy was thrown overboard by the state committee but he had the open indorsement of John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O. labor union. He also had the backing of Sen. Joseph Guffey, who has constantly served as President Roosevelt's voice in the United States senate. The Farley recommendation thus cast out Charles Alvin Jones of Pittsburgh, state committee selection for the governorship, and it threw Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia into the discard as far as the Democratic senatorial nomination was concerned. Mayor Wilson was a Lewis-C. I. O.-Guffey candidate.

The Farley announcement, made on the day before the primary, built up resentment even from the men he indorsed. Governor Earle barked loud and long; so did Lieutenant Governor Kennedy.

Mr. Earle won. Mr. Kennedy lost. Mr. Jones won, and shouted about it. Mayor Wilson lost and bellowed about the interference. And after the smoke cleared away, Mr. Farley said promptly, in effect, "Let's all get together and elect our Democratic candidates."

• • •

Biting Words

John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, wrote a statement while the sun was coming up on the day following the primary. He bounced biting words right off of Mr. Farley's head. In substance, he said the Pennsylvania primary showed: 1. The voters of any state resent interference from the national headquarters as regards their party nominees. 2. The voters of Pennsylvania showed they will have nothing to do with John L. Lewis, despite the fact that probably that state is the most tightly organized for the C. I. O. of any state in the country. 3. The Democrats of Pennsylvania are tiring of the "crack-pot brains" of the Roosevelt administration.

Mr. Hamilton, further, called attention to the fact that two present Democratic members of the house of representatives were defeated for renomination. Representative Stack, an admirer of Father Coughlin, radical radio priest, and Representative Crosby, author of Townsend plan bills in the house, were supplanted. The Republican chairman sought to connect their defeat with a trend away from radicalism which he says is inherent in the New Deal, because Mr. Stack sometimes went beyond New Deal ground.

Now, as to the Republican battle: James J. Davis, present senator, was renominated over G. Mason Owlett, backed by the Republican state committee, and Judge Arthur H. James was nominated for the governorship over former Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who, like Mr. Kennedy, was approved by John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. as acceptable. So again, the voters took things into their own hands and their state committee selections were taken on where the voters liked the man.

But, to get back to the premise upon which I started, it has been most interesting to note the veering of the political winds. Shortly after the Florida primary, there was a hurrying for cover by dozens of Democrats in the house of representatives. They thought they saw in those results a swing again to the New Deal, a restoration of the President's popularity. New Deal spokesmen around Washington did not let any grass grow under their feet. They used the Florida results to advantage. In good political fashion, they whispered and hinted and sometimes said out loud that the boys who went against the New Deal would get their spanking.

And to their credit, it must be said they did a good job. For example, I am convinced the vicious wages and hours bill that was locked so securely in a house committee would never have been brought out except for the reaction from the Florida primary. Seldom, if ever, has there been so much haste in signing a petition for report of a bill as was observed in the case of that legislation. Generally speaking, I believe it is a fact that New Deal backbones were stiffened all along the line by Senator Pepper's renomination—which assures election in Florida.

• • •

Maybe, Maybe

Came then the Pennsylvania primary, a vote that was preceded by charges of graft, bribery, bossism, etc., and the Farley "harmony attempt" in the day before the polls were taken. And came then a sudden revival of the fight that anti-New Deal Democrats were making prior to Florida's vote. Maybe the Florida vote did not involve clear-cut New Deal issues; maybe it was Pepper's machine, maybe it was this and maybe it was that—anyway, their thoughts were running: Maybe Pennsylvania is a better barometer. And each one is analyzing that vote in an effort to apply the result to his own district.

Whatever their conclusions are, there is one thing definitely established. Organized labor's most ambitious political effort flopped. It was washed out of the road. The Pennsylvania rout of organized labor of the John Lewis brand is made the more significant because of the link with the White House disclosed through Mr. Farley's indorsement of Mr. Kennedy. It may be, of course, that President Roosevelt did keep hands off, but it is quite another matter to convince the average person that the White House was not involved. For one thing, the Pennsylvania results seem to show that the John Lewis claims of political strength can be discarded as so much hooey.

Another thing to remember about the Democratic primary results in Pennsylvania projects itself into the future—to 1940, to be exact. The victory by Mr. Jones in the fight for the gubernatorial nomination destroys the control of Pennsylvania Democrats so long exercised by Senator Guffey. He cannot be called the boss again under any stretch of the imagination. And when it is time for election of a successor to Mr. Guffey, the best political judgment available predicts Mr. Guffey's disappearance as an entrant. As to the 1940 projection, attention ought to be directed to the fact that probably Mr. Jones, and not Mr. Guffey, will determine what Democratic presidential aspirant shall have the great block of 72 votes in the national convention. This seems certain whether Mr. Jones wins or loses the race for governor. He is established as head of the party. All of the indications now perceptible promise an alignment of the Jones faction, now controlling, with the more conservative group nationally, including Sen. Pat Harrison, Vice President Garner and men of that type. So, it is seen that the Pennsylvania primary can, and is almost certain to, have an important reaction on national Democratic strategy.

Talk About Kentucky

In addition to these circumstances, there is talk going around now that the anti-New Deal faction in Kentucky is determined to do business. In that state, of course, Senator Barkley, the Roosevelt majority leader in the senate whose selection to the job was made in the famous "Dear Alben" letter, has a tremendous bulge. Cold analysis of the situation does not afford much comfort for the forces of A. B. "Happy" Chandler, who seeks the Barkley scalp. The point is, however, that anti-New Dealers among the Democrats think the Pennsylvania situation may possibly be reproduced in Kentucky.

Star Dust

★ Andrea Steps Along

★ Lone Ranger Craze

★ All-Age Shaggers

By Virginia Vale

ANDREA LEEDS has been stepping right along since she did so well in a minor role in "Stage "Door." She went on to do well in "Goldwyn Follies," is working now in "Letter of Introduction," and will play opposite Joel McCrea in a picture called, so far, "Youth Takes a Fling."

Which all goes to show that she was right when she refused to go on as just one more contract player. She felt that she wasn't getting anywhere, you'll remember, and got out of her contract, and all Hollywood said she was crazy, as she had just one performance to her credit at that time.

Andrea Leeds

And then—"Stage Door" and all the opportunity in the world!

✳

The "Lone Ranger" craze is growing every day. The actor who plays the "Ranger" in the screen serial may go on a personal appearance tour. National Broadcasting company has arranged for transcription rights of the radio program for the South, Canada and Australia—at present it's heard on a 42-station tie-up three times a week. There's talk of a circus stunt and of a cartoon strip for the newspapers. And the country will be flooded with books, cowboy suits, chewing gum, sweaters, and all the other merchandise that can be used in profitable tie-ups.

✳

Charlie Chaplin's latest discovery, Dorothy Cummingore, has been given a contract by Warner Brothers, and you'll see her first in "Three Girls on Broadway."

✳

The picture business being a bit slow at the moment, picture stars are doing quite a lot of vacationing. Miriam Hopkins and her husband, Anatole Litvak, the director, are at her charming little house in New York. Fredric March expected to have to cut his New York vacation short, and then got word that he might stay on indefinitely. Madeleine Carroll and Wendy Barrie are among the toasts of New York.

Bing Crosby

Bing Crosby can continue with his present radio sponsors for ten years if he wants to. It's said the advertising agency involved would like him to sign an agreement for that length of time, with the usual year to year options. His present contract still has eight months to run. Of all the Hollywood folks who have gone on the air, Bing has been the most successful and shows no sign of diminishing popularity.

✳

Benny Goodman recently gave his second concert in Boston, before a packed house; as in Carnegie Hall, in New York, the first thing anybody knew the younger set in the crowd was out in the aisles beginning to "shag." An usher hurried forward to stop them, whereupon a conservative looking, middle-aged gentleman stopped the usher. Seems he'd decided to learn the "shag" and thought that was as good a place as any to begin.

✳

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Paul Muni seems to be all set to do "The Life of William Tell" . . . When Frank Lloyd directs "If I Were King," with Ronald Colman, Frank's daughter, Alma, will play "Colette" . . . Joe Penner's new picture, "Go Chase Yourself," is his best one yet . . . Walt Disney divided $50,000 among the people who helped him to make "Snow White" . . . Max Baer is coaching Robert Taylor for "Knock Out" . . . The objection to Shirley Temple's making personal appearances has been that she was too young to appear behind the footlights . . . But Mary Pickford began when she was five, and it didn't seem to hurt her any . . . In "Four Men and a Prayer" you'll see Richard Greene, recently arrived from England, who, it is said, will be groomed for stardom . . . Now it's announced that Maude Adams' movie tests were so successful that she will not appear in "The Young in Heart," but in a production giving more scope to her talents.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Treating the Rubber Plant.—The gloss of a rubber plant is greatly increased by dropping about a teaspoon of sweet oil about its roots once a month.

• • •

Too Salty Soup.—A slice of raw potato added to soup to which too much salt has been added, and boiled in the soup for a few minutes will absorb much of the salt.

• • •

Preparing Rice.—Before boiling rice, wash it in hot water to remove any soil and also the fine starch powder that may be on the outside of the grain which makes it sticky.

• • •

Ironing Soft Collars. — When ironing men's soft collars iron on a Turkish towel doubled four times and they will iron much easier.

• • •

To Clean Picture Frames and Glasses.—Wash with warm water and ammonia (a teaspoonful to a quart of water). For gilt frames, use the water in which onions have been boiled, as it will restore their brightness.

• • •

After Peeling Onions. — Dry mustard rubbed on wet hands after peeling onions removes all odors.

• • •

Identifying Sheets.—If you use sheets of two different sizes, one for single and one for double beds, fold sheets for double beds in a large square and those for a single bed in smaller squares. You will then have no difficulty in finding the right sheets.

• • •

Improving Canned Fruits.—Always open canned fruits an hour before serving. Fruits become richer in flavor after they have absorbed oxygen.
