PROPOSED LAW WOULD LIMIT CITRUS COLOR

Citrus Fact-finding Institute Headed by Drane Makes Recommendations

Orlando, March 16 — (FNS)—A move to control the number of house oranges and grapefruit mar-

be kept in coloring rooms has been announced as one of the first objectives of the Florida Citrus Fact-finding Institute, recently founded

In a report to trustees of the organization, Frank Hammett of Orlando, Institute manager, pointed out that data collected by the fact-finding institution proves that it is not green oranges and grapefruit that consumers and retailers complain of, but cooked fruit held too long in coloring rooms, so that

In his report, Hammelt states that a bulletin issued by J. B. Allen, director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture, advised that the taste is destroyed and the fruit spoils quickly in retail stores.

R. W. Tilden, United States Department of Agriculture, "clearly proves that Florida has strayed a long way from the correct method."

The Institute manager showed that the present maturity law of citrus deals only with the ratio of soluble solids to citric acid, and that this does not prevent poor fruit from being marketed. Commenting on the situation, F. J. Drane, of Lakeland, chairman of the Institute, said that growers have within their power the means to prevent "such disastrous practices." Drane stated further that "the growers must demand the

Drane added that Florida orange growers' market advantage over 60 to 90 cents per box. Any other industry enjoying such an advantage in the three-dollar unit sale would have a monopoly. Corect the maturity law, and Florida's orange crop will be absorbed at a profit to the grower, and grapefruit will regain the consumer good-will that has been lost.

Merrill P. Barber, another trustee of the Institute, told the group that a resolution endorsing the Florida Citrus Fact-finding Intute, had been passed by the Indian River County Citrus Growers Association. "The Indian River Organization offers full cooperation to this group in its attempt

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Lester P. Barlow, a temporary inventor of bombs and other war weapons, recently said he wasn't going to concern himself with the general public's interest in his work. But his story gets into the Record, via Senator Bennett C. Clark, who relays to Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold the news of the work, as he had it from Mr. Barlow, and asks the general what about it. The general tells of army reports that the German bombs in Barcelona "killed every human being within the range of a quarter of a mile."

The U. S. A. was supposed to have used about $100,000,000 worth of Barlow bombs and weapons in the World War. Several weeks ago, the senate voted him $50,000 in royalties for the wartime use of his patents. He is a prolific inventor, now consulting engineer for the Glenn L. Martin Co. of Baltimore, builders of bombing planes. He describes the new German bomb as truly horrendous, basically a combination of liquid oxygen and carbon, but with other ingredients, such as magnesium and aluminum. He thinks he can just about match it with his L. O. X. bomb.

In 1932, he offered to President Hoover a simple button-pressing rig which would wipe out a city hundreds of miles away. Even with the backing of Senator Frazier of North Dakota, he failed to get the government interested and was said to have offered his device to Russia and Germany. Later, he had other disappointing encounters in congress, offering, among other things, a shock-proof battleship, on whose ribs the heaviest projectiles could be just the pat of a powder-puff.

BIG, Bucko Giuseppe Creature, puffing smoke from a cigar as regal as Vesuvius, makes a grand comeback, as he nears 70, to the stage as Back in Opera complete satisfaction for the masses. The creature recently celebrated his 200th birthday with a big splash of 40-cent grand opera, with Signor Creature finding in "Aida" something in the range of his titanic energies. The opera company will be permanent, financial wind and weather permitting, to be supplemented by series of symphonic concerts.

As a band conductor, Signor Creature used to earn as much as $5,000 a night. He slipped out of sight, and then, in June, 1935, was conducting one of the park bands of the New York Emergency Relief bureau. His cigar and his baton were still bold and unwavering and he told the reporters he was passing the country back to better times. He had with him about half of the players in his old band of the days of their tattered and triumphant national tours.

He arrived in this country from Italy in 1902, with a lush black mustache and a heavy nose, but little else worth mentioning. Two days later, he was playing on Hammerstein's roof. A contemporary of Sousa, he became one of the country's most famous bandmasters, only temporarily clipped—or eclipsed—by the depression, it is to be hoped.

Modernized Cavalry Practice Wartime Maneuvers

Weather conditions and rough terrain do not stop the mounted soldier. He operates as well in fog or rain as when atmospheric conditions are favorable. To the horse cavalry the passage of bad terrain is all in a day's work—rocks and hills, sand and mud, forests and rivers never stop them. Graphic illustration of this is furnished in the picture at the left where a 75-mm gun battery unit nears the top of a steep hill during First Cavalry division maneuvers at Fort Bliss, Texas. IT'S an ill censor that blows the picture some good. Warner Brothers' "Yes, My Darling Daughter" is the latest picture to profit by censorship. And anyone who saw the play of the same name on which the picture was based is likely to suspect that the movie moguls who were responsible for the film rather hoped that a little censorship, though a dangerous thing, might result in plenty of publicity.

New York's state censor board obligingly banned the picture. Whereupon the department of education's board of regents even more obligingly lifted the ban, and the public rubbed to the theater where the picture was finally shown, eager to see what all the fuss was about.

In fact, so much interest was stirred up in this daring picture that the theatrical producer who produced the original play is said to be considering reviving it.

To live for Christ one must be born again into the position of a true believer. Peter was not so foolish as to urge that his readers try to live a Christian life without first being born into the family of God. He therefore lays a foundation for his exhortations by discussing in the early chapters of his epistle the statement of Christ and the position of the believer. Then he gives specific instructions to certain groups, leading up to the general plea for Christian life and testimony.

1. Among brethren (v. 8). Knowing what Christ has done for us, it might well be assumed that all of us who are his followers would love one another and do nothing but that which would promote Christian fellowship. But human nature prevails even in the Church, and sometimes displays its worst side there. Hence we need to consider this instruction of Peter that we cultivate unity, sympathy, and love among the brethren. Observe that this is not just a pious platitude which we may just as well leave. It states our obligation to one another as Christians. Whatever others may do or say, let us be clear that we have obeyed this word of God.

2. With unbelievers (v. 8-11). God has called us to live peaceably with all men. We will not cure evil by returning for it more evil. If our ungodly neighbors or fellow workers mistreat us by word or deed, we are not to retaliate in kind. We are to control our tongues—how much we need to learn this lesson. We are not to be tricky and deceitful, not to look for a fight, but to seek peace.

3. For our own good (v. 12). What blessed assurance we find here for the believer. The eyes of the Lord are upon both the good and the evil in the world. He knows. Consider also the promise of "blessing" in verse 9, of seeing "good days" in verse 10, the assurance of peace in verse 11. It is not only honoring to God, but good for us to live as Christians.

4. Suffering for Christ (v. 13-16). Peter was writing to those who were being tried by persecution because they followed Christ. Perhaps some were tempted to say that they do now. "If there really is a God, if Christianity amounts to anything at all, certainly believers would not be permitted to suffer at the hands of enemies of Christ." Let us be clear that being a Christian in no way exempts us from the common experiences of humanity. Nor does it assure us that we will not have to bear persecution and suffering. But (and here is a point of greatest importance), we are able to meet such difficulties with the name of Christ without fear or discouragement, for God is with us.

1. Not afraid (v. 13, 14). The martyr spirit has not died out in the earth, and there are those in our day who stand unafraid before dictators and rulers who would destroy them because of their loyalty to Christ. "Be not afraid."

2. Not discouraged (v. 15-17). The one who knows God's Word (and every Christian ought to know it) can give answer (v. 16) concerning his faith. Note that if we are punished for our own wrongdoing we may well be depressed, but if we meet persecution with a clear conscience (v. 16) we need feel no discouragement.

3. Not alone (v. 18). The path may be dark and difficult, but one thing we know, our Leader, Christ, walks an even darker and more desolate road. He it is who is now with us, yes, in us. Remember that "Christ who has once suffered" (v. 18) and go on your way in victory.

PETER EXHORTS TO CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—1 Peter 3:15.

But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation. 1 Peter 1:15.

Christians are not only "called of Jesus Christ," but are also "called saints" (Rom. 1:6, 7). Peter had the same thing in mind when he said (in v. 9 of our lesson) that we "are thereto called." Let us remember that when we are tempted to say that we "do not profess to be saints," "Dr. James Denney once remarked how odd it would look to see in the New Testament the statement, 'I don't pretend to be a saint.' It would be tantamount to saying, 'I do not take the call of God very seriously, and I do not profess to live up to it.' When God calls, our answer is not a matter of indifference and . . . not a matter of presumption. 'It is not a life for which we volunteer, or on which we adventure of our own motion, or which we have to carry through our own resources; it is a life for which we have a divine summons, and that summons is our justification' (Arnold's Commentary). All believers are called to live a consistent, powerful, useful Christian life, and God makes such a life possible.

2. Living for Christ (v. 6-12). To live for Christ one must be born again into the position of a true believer. Peter was not so foolish as to urge that his readers try to live a Christian life without first being born into the family of God. He therefore lays a foundation for his exhortations by discussing in the early chapters of his epistle the statement of Christ and the position of the believer. Needle Weaving for Blue Luncheon Set

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS
"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I had been wanting some really handsome velvet roses to pep up an evening dress I was thinking of finding in your Book 2, instructions for making them from materials I already had. I would also like to thank you for the knitted rag rug in Book 1. My Mother spent many happy hours making it last winter."
"I thought you might be interested in a luncheon set I have just finished. It was planned to go with a set of blue dishes. There are four mats and a long runner in medium blue linen with bands of old-fashioned needle weaving in darker blue across the ends. Two edges of the napkins are banded with the weaving.

We can imagine how attractive the table must be set with these mats and the blue dishes. Some of our linen napkins might like to try the same idea in tones of rose. Use a rather coarse linen. Prepare the work for the weaving by drawing out the fabric threads as for hemstitching. Each step is shown here in the diagram. Either hand or mechanized embroidery thread may be used.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY By RUSSELL KAY

While we all have a lot of fun "razzini" the WPA, the fact remains that in spite of the belief that WPA workers are alleged to spend nine-tenths of their time loafing on shovels, they somehow manage to complete a lot of worthwhile projects. And an outstanding example is the new State Farmers' Market at Plant City.

Last week during the Florida Strawberry Festival, this marvelous new market was officially dedicated and along with many other Tampanians I journeyed to the Strawberry City to participate in the event.

Having attended similar exercises in other sections of the state, I expected to find "just another market." But I want to tell you this Plant City affair has all the other markets, in or out of the state, beaten like little toy play-pretties alongside of it.

Nathan Mayo modestly refers to it as the largest in the south. Billy Wilson, director of State Markets, goes a bit further and claims it is the largest in the country. Plant City folks insist that it is the largest in the World. But my personal impression is that the darn thing is the biggest in the whole damned universe even if that doesn't take in a lot of territory.

I drove by it in the morning before the day's activities had started and viewing the four gigantic sheds, the several buildings, and extensive paved roads, drives and parking facilities, I was surprised to find market facilities sufficient for the whole state and just couldn't imagine the thing being used to even half its capacity.

But that afternoon I returned to find the entire place a beehive of activity. Several thousand farmers' cars and trucks were lined up, all loaded with berries and other produce, with buyers bidding on the stuff as truck after truck and car after car rolled in to display and sell.

While I have realized in a vague sort of a way that East Hillsborough and the neighboring area of Polk comprised a great agricultural empire, I had no real conception of its productive ability until I saw with my own eyes never-ending streams of vehicles that swarmed into this one great market.

Florida may well be proud of her achievement in the provision of this and numerous other splendid markets throughout the agricultural areas and these should stand as permanent monuments to those Federal, State and City officials whose courage, vision, faith and ceaseless effort have made them realities.

Such magnificent civic improvements do not come to a community without effort and usually reflect the tireless and too often thankless work of far-seeing, determined civic leaders and public who, despite criticism, discouragement and derision, hold doggedly to their purpose until the task is accomplished.

Plant City's long dream of a super-market might still be unrealized but for the fact that among her citizens were a small group of courageous city officials who, in the face of bitter opposition, used public funds to purchase the site on which this great market now stands.

Several of these men have passed on, but their work was not in vain, for behind them came others, equally as courageous and determined, who carried on ceaselessly striving toward the goal.

The task of selling such an ambitious plan to Federal and State officials was no easy one. It took years of earnest effort. When plans were laid before government officials and engineers they screamed "Ridiculous!" State officials, sympathetic, still saw "no chance" for such a project. But these men wouldn't take NO for an answer. They hounded congressmen and senators, camped on the doorsteps of state officials, and were so sincere and so insistent that in time they turned the tide.

Impressed, officials became interested. Wheels began to turn. Cooperation replaced opposition; the Federal government lent its help; the state gave aid; and the local department joined; the Railroad did their part. To the end that Plant City, the World's Strawberry Center, became also the home of the World's Greatest Farmers' Market.

This Is Not Ferdinand; It's Leo The Bull

With his partner, R. J. Hargrove, Jackson intends to raise only pure bred cattle in the future and has disposed of all the scrubs and cross breeds.

The bulls are very tame as is indicated by the top picture showing Bill Beckett, Jr. taking a ride. Leo did not object and afterwards investigated the camera and cameraman, showing much interest in the proceedings.

Grandpa's Corner Rev. F. N. Dexter, D. D.

Last to that bird! His song—what poor pens it! Brigid of birds, he's stolen every note.

Prince, though of thieves, hark! How the forest spends it! Pours the whole forest from one tiny throat!

"The Mockingbird," by Edna Proctor Hayes.

Be sure you put your feet in the right place and then stand firm.—Lincoln.

"It must be beautiful down South where Grandpa and Auntie have gone because that's where all the birds are!" The five years old child was right. It is beautiful here in the Southland. Do the birds know how very beautiful Florida is? Or is that knowledge reserved only for men, whose eyes have been open to see that, "This is our Father's world!"

We have two bird feeding trays, one of them fastened to the window sill in the kitchen, where we eat our breakfasts with birds for company, and the other about twenty feet away, near where bean poles with vines on them are growing. We seem to be more interested in our bird company, than they are in us. We are sure we can learn more from them than they can from us.

One thing we observe is that God feeds the birds. Beautiful birds from farther South have begun their trips North. They find eating and lodging places provided for them. All. We observe some of them very carefully over-looking the foliage, under the leaves, for insect eggs, which were unconsciously laid for them, all ready to be eaten. Who put out the crumbs, the seed, the corn, and the peanuts for them?

Many perish because of storms and cold, but most of them survive. God cares for the birds, even as He cares for the thousands of people fleeing in despair and fear from human enemies, and many perish, but God provides for them also, as He does for the birds.

Like men, birds are unreasonable and selfish creatures. Our sweetest singer of the season, is the most selfish of all. He not only comes to eat from the food laid out for all, but delights to chase them all away. Peaceful ground doves are far from peaceful among themselves, and not only fight their mates away, but lie down on the food trays, to keep others from eating. Like Edna Hayes, we do admire the mocking-

Breadfruit Is On Exhibition Here

A Breadfruit was obtained in Fort Myers on Monday by Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Armstrong and has been on display in the window of Jordan, the jeweler. The tree from which it came is probably the only fruiting one in Florida. This seed will later be planted and should it grow will eventually appear in the Mall. However, it is exceedingly tender only for men, whose eyes have been open to see that, "This is our Father's world!"

Charles Smith, Supt. of Parks, made a trip to the West Coast on Tuesday for plants and trees for the Mall. He brought home, among other things, thirty Dombeya trees (Rosania Punctata) which he dug by the roadside below Oneco. These were in the Mall one before. They produce masses of rich red flowers fully as handsome as the Royal Poinciana and have the advantage that they bloom all winter. People having children should not grow them, as the seed will kill them. The tree seldom grows over seven feet high. They have been planted between the City Hall and the furniture building.

Mrs. E. F. Armstrong and C. S. Donaldson spent Wednesday in Sebring as judges of the annual flower show in which the county sec always makes a wonderful display. In fact, the judges from Avon Park pronounce these flowers almost equal to anything in Miami or elsewhere in Florida.

Just Stuff-- (By W.A.S.)

Here we have a combination of popular lyrics jammed together by Miss Wills McGiboney and which produced very pleasing results.

"The One I Love" will "Always and Always" be "The Girl of My Dreams." Therefore, "One Hour With You" will make me "Deep In A Dream."

"I Love You Sweetheart" and I hope "The Love Bug Will Bite You" and we can spend "Sunday In The Park" with "Both White" and "Martha," then "You'll Make A True Confession" and "Tell Me That You Love Me" for "I Believe In Miracles," and I know that "You Mean For Me."

Now "My Lovely One," "You are 'The One I Love,'" won't you "Hold Me Tight" cause you've "Gotta Dance" because "Now, for as long as we will be 'Honey-mooning In Manhattan' eating 'Doughnuts and Coffee.' Then we must 'Hurry Home' and start 'Scraping the Toast."

WILLA MCGIBONEY

Dearest "Marjorie,"

"You're A Sweet Little Headache" but "I Love You Truly" I have many "Memories" that "Could Be" Sweetest As The Years Roll By" Since "You're The Only Star In My Blue Heaven" there will be a "Gold Mine in the Sky" When "My Dream Boat Comes Home."

"Marjorie, do you 'Remember' the 'Carolina Moon?'" It is still shining on "Two Sleepy People" "At Dawning" they will "Wake Up and Live."

"I Double Dare You," "My Own" "Stop Beating Your Head Against the Wall" and tell me that "I'm 'The One Rose' that 'The Fiat Foot Kicked' said that 'My Heaven and Earth' was 'Alone' with you at 'Star Dust'."

"Once In A While," "There's A Far Away Look In Your Eyes," but "The Unbelievable Man" says that "You Couldn't Be Cuter."

had a STRIKE. It was reported that last Friday afternoon thirteen members of a picking crew from the Exchange Packing house were unloaded at a company grove.

Those boys had been promised a higher wage for "spot picking" grapefruit, for which they were receiving 3c per field box, and were under the impression that something had been done about this "promise" when told by the field foreman to "grab it." It wasn't long before the crew discovered they were working for the same old wage and it took even less time for them to do something about it. Eleven of the thirteen left the grove and reported the incident to the company office. It was reported that the men gave notice they would be ready to resume work when a check was had been provided. Latest reports were that the foreman is still looking for another crew.

a precedent. Usually it is the other way around. But you can bet your vest buttons that the Senate will have the last word and enact most of the important bills will be decided in conference committees.

The legislative pendulum is swinging towards economy. Taxpayers associations are putting the pressure on Senators and Representatives and the tax boost recommended by the budget commission has nearly thrown the bill overboard. But there is a danger that economy may cost too deep. Departmental consolidations are suggested on every hand. Nevertheless, the actual dollars and cents savings in most cases is trivial in comparison with the loss in efficiency and service to the public. The cause of conservation should not be hamstrung by footloose consolidations. Many of these governmental services are needed and serve a useful purpose. Governmental thought is needed and care should be taken that, in pruning the dead, the living are not killed.

Young Pitching Marvel Arrives

Dick Fowler Will Be Given Tryout With Toronto Maple Leafs

Dick Fowler, the 17-year-old pitching prospect of Toronto's sandlots who is being taken to the Maple Leafs camp in Florida this spring, won't have to worry about spending money while he is in the sunny south.

On his several visits to the ball club's headquarters during the off-season, young Dick has proved to be one of those tall, silent youths who effaces himself so completely that you've got to forget he's around. He smiles so pleasantly that it never occurs to you that he might have a worry. But Dick has been struggling with a problem; a big one. Now it is solved.

About a week ago, Trainer Tom Daly arrived at the baseball office, and young Dick was there, too. He had come to find out what arrangements had been made for the trip south. Trainer Daly, who is built a little along the lines of Tony Galento, slowly elevated his eyes until they took in Dick's complete six feet four inches of pitching suppleness.

"What are you, young fella," Daly inquired, "a shortstop?" Dick smiled and good-naturedly told Daly. "Have you got a job?" Then young Dick began to look worried. He looked more worried still when Daly followed up with: "What are you going to do for money down there?"

It seems Dick had asked himself the same question many times in the past few weeks and couldn't find the answer. Today help came from unexpected source. His teammates on the St. Mary's Juniors team he has pitched for these last two years, presented him with a purse of silver. When all the nickels and dimes were added up it came to $14. Dick is no spendthrift and he thinks it will look after any extras he may need during the six weeks training camp.

Florida will play host to liquor administrators from all sections of the country next week when the National Conference of State Liquor Administrators is held at the Miami Biltmore, March 20, 21 and 22. Thomas W. Long, Florida Administrator is chairman of the convention.

The Annual Convention of the Florida State Safety Council will be held at Bradenton, March 21, at which time the matter of State Safety Legislation will be the principle subject of discussion.

Highlands County Gets Large Welfare Fund In 20 Months

Jacksonville, March 16 (Special)—Florida recipients of public assistance received cash payments aggregating $8,075,885.74 from July 1, 1937, when the State Welfare Board assumed office, through February, 1939, according to announcement here today from the state offices of the Board.

State funds comprised $4,051,181.37 of the total and federal funds $4,024,704.37. The federal government matches state funds dollar for dollar in the payment of old age assistance and aid to the blind and one dollar for two in the payment of aid to dependent children.

Total payments in the three categories were announced as: old age assistance, $7,653,992.74; aid to dependent children, $79,431; aid to the blind, $302,462. The aid to dependent children program was retarded by a legislative provision that it must be financed from the General Fund, which was depleted.

In Highlands County a grand total of $36,444.70 was paid out by the State Welfare Board for public assistance during the 20 months covered by the report. This was subdivided as follows: Old age assistance $34,087.70; aid to dependent children $1,067.00; aid to the blind $1,290.00.

Public assistance grants in Florida have gradually increased since the beginning of this year had attained a total of $535,236, or at the rate of more than $6,000,000 per annum.

Black Walnut Trees Are Being Studied
The possibilities of black walnut trees in Florida is being studied, reports C. H. Coulter, assistant State forester. Seed for experimental plantings have been distributed to 23 agricultural high school teachers in as many communities representing 14 counties in the State ranging from as far south as DeSoto to Escambia County in extreme West Florida.

Mr. Coulter states that the walnut tree is native to the hardwood forests of a few West Florida rivers and has been successfully grown as a shade tree at several points outside of its native range. The nut of the tree is famed for its flavor, and the wood for its rich brown color and its grain which makes it a premier furniture material.
