Round About Avon Park

by W. C. Beckett

Wayne Maynard

Anthony Wayne Maynard is gone, killed by one of the planes he loved so much. His life was devoted to aviation and he had done much to further this fast progressing branch of transportation in Avon Park and this section of the state.

His reputation as a pilot was known from one end of Florida to the other, as well as in other states. He knew planes and their engines and contributed much to the development of the Avon Park airport.

Back in 1930, flyers were few and far between and about that time he came to Sebring. He tried to prove that flying was not dangerous and piloted the heavy and awkward planes of that era. Landing fields were small and scattered, full of holes, stumps and other hazards, but this did not stop Wayne's activities.

He flew from the old field on Lake Angelo and also from the old field midway between Avon Park and Sebring and later he came to Avon Park and did his part to build the municipal field here.

Now he is gone and may the wings he won while serving in the U. S. Air Corps carry him to those heights from which there is no return.

Hallowe'en

Saturday night is the big night. The witches will witch, the goblins will gobble, the spooks will spook and everyone will have a good time. The annual carnival sponsored by the Woman's Club, with the parade as the big event, will provide fun for all. There will be plenty to eat and last but not least will be the soap drawing contest for which the merchants are providing the windows. Don't forget, the parade will start at 7:15 p. m. from the Jacaranda filling station. There will be prizes for young and old, so be there and enjoy the fun.

Clean-up Week

The white schools of Avon Park will be dismissed at noon Monday in order that the older boys can help start in the clean-up campaign scheduled for next week. The colored schools will be let out Wednesday afternoon for them to do their part in the work. The campaign is sponsored by the community service committee with the Rotary Club and other civic clubs and the city authorities are cooperating to the fullest extent. As Earl Ware, chairman of the campaign says, "Let's all make Avon Park a more attractive place in which to live and for our visitors and guests to enjoy."

Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Campaign Plans

Extensive plans for the tuberculosis Christmas seal drive have been started under the direction of Mrs. E. A. Ricketts who has been named county chairman. Mrs. Georgia Forbess is the county president and S. F. Longbottom, the local chairman. The following committees have been named to carry on the work:

Resolution, urging public to buy Christmas Seals: Mayor Covington.

An illuminated double bar cross: Mrs. C. E. Lanier.

Publicity: Mrs. E. G. Todd, Mrs. C. R. Ginn.

Card Index: Mrs. M. V. Pilcher, Mrs. E. P. Loomis.

Ordering of material: Mrs. E. H. Hartt.

Mailing List: Mrs. R. I. Brown, Mrs. D. G. Perry, Mrs. E. H. Ware, Nelson Smith, Walton Touchton.

Trailer Display in movies: Mrs. M. E. Covington.

Christmas Seals Boxes: Mrs. R. R. Brown.

Sale of Bonds: Mrs. Francis Shockley, C. E. Lanier.

Poster Display: Mrs. S. S. Thayer.

Early Orders: Mrs. J. P. Garber, Mrs. Ted Ward.

Notice to Churches, Dec. 3: Mrs. W. C. Touchton.

Booths, Dec. 16th: Mrs. Walter Betts.

Organization of colored quarters: Elizabeth Ellerbee.

Dime Shows Continue

"Scotty" Rutherford, manager of the Park Theatre, said today that the policy of ten cent shows every Saturday will be continued during the winter months. The admission to everybody, young and old, will be one dime until further notice, he says.

TO HOLD STATE WIDE PASTURE TOUR NEXT WEEK

Highlands County Will Be Included; Cattle Ranches Will Be Visited

The Florida pasture tour sponsored by the Florida State Cattlemen's Association and various local cattlemen's associations and the Extension Service of the University of Florida, starting Tuesday morning, October 31 and continuing through Friday, November 3, is assuming vast proportions and its success seems assured. The tour will start at the University of Florida at Gainesville and then visit pasture and beef cattle at successive stops in Alachua, Marion, Osceola, Polk, Highlands, Glades, Hendry, Charlotte, DeSoto and Hardee counties and the last stop will be made at 4:30 p.m. Friday at Ft. Meade.

The first stop each morning will be promptly at 8:30 and points have been arranged conveniently in the various counties so that cattlemen, business men and others can join in the tour at any point they may desire. They can participate and see as much of any part of the pasture and beef cattle work as they desire.

The agricultural committee of the Florida Bankers Association has approved the plans for the tour and has sent out invitations supporting those sent by the State Cattlemen's Association. Invitations for the latter organizations were sent out by the secretary, J. F. Gunn, county agent at Kissimmee. In commenting on the tour, the association president, P. E. Williams stated that this tour would do much to show the citizens of this state and other states the progress and stability of our Florida range cattle industry.

The committee to handle this tour as appointed by President P. E. Williams of the state cattlemen's association is composed of County Agent Louis H. Alzmeyer, chairman, W. J. Sheely, Extension Animal Husbandman, W. T. Nettles, District Agent, J. Lee Smith, Extension Agronomist, W. E. Stokes, Experiment Station Agronomist; H. G. Clayton, Administrator of the A. A. A. Program; J. E. Williams, of Kissimmee, Tom Lykes, of Tampa; W. P. Ward, Secretary, Experiment Station at Chinsegut Hill, as well as all county agents in the counties which will be visited by the tour and counties adjacent to them.

The first step in Marion county will be at the Simonton ranch at 11:30 about a mile south of Micanopy.

The first stop on Wednesday morning, November 1, will be at the Kissimmee Live Stock Market where visitors will have an opportunity to see this excellent market and equipment. The next stop in Osceola County, under the direction of County Agent June R. Gunn, will be at the Henry O. Partain ranch, south of Kissimmee. Here they will see one of the largest and finest herds of Brahma cattle in this state, feeding on carpet grass pasture.

At 2:00 p. m. the first stop in Polk county, under the direction of County Agent W. Paul Hayman, will be at the P. E. Williams ranch. Here visitors will see a large area of improved pasture which has been developed during the past several years by P. E. Williams, president of the Florida Cattlemen's Association.

The next stop will be at the Cuni-Citrus Production Plant at Haines City, where the process of manufacturing cattle feed as a by-product from the citrus industry will be demonstrated.

On Thursday morning those making the tour will meet at the Court House at Sebring at 7:30. The first stop will be at the Carey Carlton ranch at 8:30, 12.2 miles west of Lake Annie corner on the Lake Annie-Arcadia road, State Highway No. 18, or about 22 miles east of Arcadia and two miles east of the DeSoto County line. This is adjacent to the old land mark, "Blue Head." The first stop will be indicated by a large green cash fence.

Those on the tour will then travel eight miles east to the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. Albert DeVane, which will be on the south side of state road No. 6 and about four miles east of the Lake Annie corner toward Okeechobee. Mrs. DeVane will be present to explain the set up they use to mow carpet grass and show the equipment they used successfully in harvesting 12,000 pounds of carpet grass seed this season. Then a mile further east on the north and south side of the road will be seen the carpet grass pasture of T. J. Durrance and Mrs. Albert DeVane.

Four miles east will be seen the excellent para grass pasture of T. J. Durrance and J. C. Durrance, some of which was planted in the

Sebring Firemen To Play Special Ball Game Here Sunday

"Take me out to the ball game," will be the theme tune Sunday afternoon when the Sebring Firemen will play a picked Avon Park team. The place will be Head Field and the time 3:30.

The battery for Avon Park will consist of C. W. Meriwether, hurler for the Easton, Md. club in the Eastern Shore League and C. B. Martin, catcher for Union City, Tenn. in the Kitty League.

The Firemen will have "Lefty" Jenkins pitching. He was pitcher and manager of the Augusta Tigers champions of the South Atlantic League.

IMPROVEMENTS TO STATE RD. 8 WAIT ON FUNDS

Shortening and Resurfacing Of Scenic Highway To Be Done

LAKE WALES, Oct. 26—(Special)—Last week's telegraphed announcement from Tallahassee by officials of The Scenic Highlanders that Chairman Arthur B. Hale of the state road department had ordered the widening and repaving of state road No. 8 from Lake Wales to Dundee and the elimination of several dangerous curves from Frostproof north got a big hand in the ridge country.

The announcement was sent down from the capital by O. A. Brice, secretary of the Highlanders who visited Hale with John D. Clark of Waverly, president of the organization, and John Maxcy of Frostproof, chairman of the road committee.

"We received a splendid reception," President Clark said today in commenting on the trip to Tallahassee. "In a general discussion of road affairs we learned that the road department is faced with a serious problem in maintaining its present system and providing for badly needed improvements under present financial conditions.

"However, Chairman Hale assured us that work would be started immediately on eliminating curves and that rebuilding would start, Lake Wales to Dundee, not later than Jan. 1. The entire stretch, Frostproof to Haines City, will be worked over as quickly as funds are found."

At the suggestion of Chairman Hale, the Highlanders took their auditor, Jack Comer, to the state capital to check over the financial situation; after a complete check Highlanders' officials agreed that the department is doing everything possible under present conditions to provide Florida with suitable roads.

In reviewing the situation as the Highlanders found it in Tallahassee, President Clark said: "Coming into office in 1937, the Cone administration faced a $5,000,000 deficit in the road department alone, but since that time all bills have been paid up and the department is operating on a 'pay as you go' basis, taking all discounts and cutting the costs about 20 percent. This means new construction.

"The diversion of gasoline taxes to purposes other than road building is a dangerous practice, and is holding back construction of needed roads. We must have adequate roads to care for our tremendous tourist business, and every citrus grower knows how important good roads are in decreasing transportation costs of fruit to shipping points, packing houses and markets. Chairman Hale is anxious to give us these roads as we are to have them, and we are today, more than ever, convinced that we will get the roads as soon as the state road department can find money with which to pay for them."

In a bulletin sent out this week to members of the board of governors of the Highlanders, President Clark said there has been

ROTARIANS GIVE IDEAS TO HELP AVON C. OF C.

Impromptu Program Wed. Brings Out Many Good Suggestions

A number of suggestions for the chamber of commerce to improve Avon Park were given at the Rotary Club luncheon this week. The program was of impromtu nature, taking the place of State Senator Spessard Holland of Bartow who was unable to be present.

The question: "Where, in your opinion, can the chamber of commerce perform the best service to Avon Park and the people?" was asked by Walter Betts, president of the chamber, who added that the function of the chamber of commerce to a community is primarily economic and to promote the welfare of business.

Many of those answering, said the attracting of more tourists is one most pressing needs. Others thought making Avon Park a better place in which to live, thereby attracting more citizens and industries. Some method to prevent people from doing so much trading out of town was another idea. Others thought advertising the advantages and the Mall more extensively should be done. Better roads from the north, rebuilding of the present road 8 and completion of 19 were also urged.

Commenting on the window soap drawing contest, Chester Yates said:

"I think that something like the window soaping contest you are organizing at the present time is one of the greatest things you can do for Avon Park. It has been so widely publicized and will be even more so. The advertising angle of this is almost unlimited. We are already profiting a great deal by it. The big advantage in this contest is that it is unique. Avon Park is doing something different. That is the secret of successful advertising. Each town in Florida can offer its advantages; they all have something, but when the people of the country read something about a town that is doing something different, the name of that town will stick with them. The people who come to Florida will give consideration to the advantages of each town, but we also have our advantage and doing something unique will make Avon Park register with them.

"My suggestion is that the chamber of commerce continue along this line and plan more things that will be just as effective as an advertising medium."

John Francis said the reaction among citizens to the present chamber is very fine. He said:

"The reaction to this year's chamber of commerce is very, very gratifying and I want to bring this to your attention. You do not know how this set up that you have now has reacted among the people, and I mean all of the people, not just

City Council Held Lengthy Session Monday Evening

Avon Park's city dads held a lengthy regular session Monday and disposed of a number of routine matters including reports from various committees. The suggestion was made by W. M. Reck that the municipal airport be called the Wayne Maynard Airport in the future in commemoration of the aviator who lost his life in the fatal crash at the airport Sunday morning. Council did not take immediate action on this, saying they would sound out public sentiment.

The airport committee report was deferred and Miss Mattie Tompkins reported for the uniform committee, stating what had been decided on as to what the well dressed policemen and-firemen will wear in Avon Park as well as the park, street, sanitary and other employees.

The light and water committee reported that the Florida public Service Co. would donate cable to repair the White Way lights and also furnish an expert man at cost for the work if the city would furnish the park employees for the trench digging. This proposition was accepted.

Council agreed to allow tax adjustments without penalty until November 1. They also agreed to allow the use of city owned land to the north of the Freed Peden residence for an experimental quail farm to be sponsored by the Avon Park Conservation Council.

Steps will be taken and Mayor Covington given authority to stop the indiscrimate throwing of trash on the streets, especially in front of the post office. The public is asked to cooperate in this work and help keep the city clean.

The city will also cooperate with men and equipment in the clean-up campaign next week sponsored by the community service committee of the Rotary Club.

The fence at the Head Athletic Field was ordered repaired.

Alton Elder was named custodian of the trailer park at a salary of $60 per month. Other applicants for the position were Clifford Craft and Rex Reed. In the secret balloting Elder received four votes and Reed one.

Headed by Walter Betts and Charles Lanier, a small chamber of commerce delegation conferred with council regarding the work necessary to be ready for the trailer convention in December. The park is in good condition with the parking spaces marked out but additional toilet and shower facilities are needed. This question was turned over to special committee consisting of Max Wild and C. P. Anderson with power to act.

Bob Maynard New Airport Manager

Bob Maynard, popular young flyer, has assumed the duties of assistant airport manager here, taking the place of his brother Wayne who was fatally injured Sunday morning. Maynard holds several licences including transport and instructors and will continue the work started by his brother.

TWO LOSE LIVES IN PLANE CRASH HERE SUN. A. M.

Wayne Maynard and Alva Hendry, Prominent Aviators Are the Victims

Wayne Maynard, well known Avon Park pilot and flying instructor, and Alva C. Hendry of Tampa and LaBelle were killed instantly about 10:30 Sunday morning when their plane crashed at the Avon Park municipal airport. The plane, a new Stinson owned by H. B. Delaney of LaBelle, was being flown with Maynard at the controls and went from a barrel roll into a nose dive and crashed with terrific force into the ground between the hangar and the Avon Park-Wauchula road.

The fuselage of the plane was telescoped and the engine driven back into the cockpit. The plane had to be cut apart before the bodies could be removed.

The crash was the second one for Hendry within a week. His own plane had hit a tree while landing near La Belle and the ship was being repaired at the Avon Park airport.

Earlier in the morning Delaney had flown Hendry from LaBelle to Avon Park in the three passenger Stinson. On arrival, Delaney had stayed on the ground and Maynard and Hendry tried the plane out in a series of stunts. Witnesses said the plane had been up for about 15 minutes and while upside down at about 500 feet, the motor sputtered and the plane nose dived into the ground.

Both bodies were removed to the Stephenson undertaking parlors and that of Hendry taken to Tampa the same afternoon.

Funeral services were Monday afternoon for Maynard with services at the Stephenson funeral home and interment in Bougainvillea cemetery. Rev. J. P. Dalton, pastor of the Avon Park First Baptist church, officiated and special music was rendered by Mrs. Frank Castine who sang "Abide With Me" and "Does Jesus Care" accompanied by Mrs. J. B. Coen, jr.

Pallbearers were: Nelson Smith, Chester Gibbons, S. C. Pardee, jr., Everett Hammond, Crosby, Bert Turner and Paul Ohlinger of Babson Park and Phillip Correll of DeSoto City.

A pilot's salute was given at the cemetery during the graveside services, five planes flying overhead and scattering flowers. The planes were piloted by L. Wells, D. G. Perry, Firman Church, Roy Marr and Sam Belcher.

Wayne Maynard was born at St. Paul, Minn., on July 23, 1902. He was known as one of the most experienced pilots in Florida. He earned his wings at Kelley Field where he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in 1919. He later transferred to Dorr Field near Arcadia where his father, Capt. W. R. Maynard, who had seen considerable air service overseas, was commanding officer. In 1922 he entered commercial flying and had been connected with it ever since.

Maynard had also done considerable parachute jumping, having made nearly 400 regular jumps and 87 delayed jumps.

He had been operations manager and mechanic of the Avon Park airport for the past three and a half years and contributed greatly to the growth of aviation in this section.

There survive the widow, Mrs Edna Mae Maynard, two children, Anthony Wayne, jr., 11 and Norma Jean, 7; his father, Capt. W. R Maynard of St. Petersburg and formerly of DeSoto City; his mother Mrs. Thomas Welsh of White Bear, Minn.; three brothers, Robert of Avon Park, Fred of New York City and Bert of Fresno Calif.; and one sister, Mrs. Gail Pagel of Dennison, Minn.

Funeral services for Hendry were held Tuesday at Tampa with burial in the Providence cemetery.

Hendry was born in Tampa and formerly was manager of the J B. Hendry Meat Packing company He attended Norman Junior college at Norman Park, Ga., and had received the Atwater Kent medal for voice two different times in state wide competition.

He took up flying last summer receiving much of his instruction from Maynard, and just recently had received his license. For the last two years he had been in charge of the J. B. Hendry ranch at LaBelle.

Survivors are his parents, Mr and Mrs. J. B. Hendry; a sister Mrs. W. B. Barron; two brothers Earl and J. B. Hendry, jr., all of Tampa.

The Woman's Club is planning a flower show early in the spring and would like all citizens who are fond of flowers and interested in them to plan to have as many flowers as possible by the latter part of March.

JOHN NANCE GARNER FOR PRESIDENT IN 1940

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the maritime commission, says the proposed safety belt around our shores is a "nice idea," but seems to concede nothing more. He wonders what will happen when "somebody sticks his nose inside the zone."

Our 'Sub' Zone Is 'Nice Idea,' Says Adm. Land

Admiral Land's opinion is that of a technician and expert on obtrusive noses, particularly those of submarines, and, to be more explicit, German submarines. He got the Navy cross for his work in designing and building submarines in the World war, in which he served as commander of the construction corps, and, in 1919, he turned in a searching technical study of what German submarines had done and what they might do in the next war.

The spirited little admiral, a cousin of Charles Lindbergh, has a most important business on hand just now, with something like $400,000,000 staked out for building a merchant marine. This business of new ships, and how good a risk they may be on sub-infested seas, is decidedly in his department.

He is a native of Canon City, Colo. born in 1879. After his graduation from Annapolis, he did postgraduate work in naval architecture. Football has engrossed him almost as much as the navy. He was the garrison finish star of that famous "crap game" match between the Army and Navy in 1900, a gridiron hero, and thereafter a successful conciliator in the long-drawn-out army and navy athletics row.

His suavity and persuasiveness are always effective, as when he invited some C. I. O pickets of the maritime commission into his office and talked them into good humor. He succeeded Joseph P. Kennedy as chairman of the commission in February, 1938. He's in a critical goal-keeper's spot just now, and everybody is satisfied.

WORD comes from Paris of the demobilization of Lucien Le Long, the famous dressmaker. The government puts him back on the job designing gowns. "Grace swirl and freedom" has been his rallying cry as a designer. This isn't that kind of war, and perhaps the French think they are wasting his talents as a soldier.

Lucien Le Long Back to 'Grace, Swirl, Freedom'

However, soldiering is one of the best things that M. Le Long does. In the last war, a shell blew him out of a trench into the dressmaking business. Severely wounded, his hearing impaired, he borrowed $2,500, employed 50 midinettes and seamstresses, married the cousin of the late Czar Nicholas of Russia, and ran his business up to a daily gross intake of 1,000,000 francs, employing more than 1,000 women. He took with him into the business a Croix de Guerre and two citations. He had been a liaison officer with Allenby in Palestine.

Brisk and businesslike, although still boyish-looking, he says the happiest day of his life was when he freed women from tubular gowns. He has visited this country frequently and is widely known and popular here. His is one of the most interesting of all "between war" careers.

THIS department gets word from a Washington ringsider that Dr. William M. Leiserson, summoned by the President several months ago to unscramble the National Labor Relations board, has been making swift progress and that, just as a matter of war preparedness, the outlook for labor-employer peace is much better. Previously a member of the national mediation board, he was appointed to the labor board to succeed Donald Wakefield Smith, center of bitter controversy. He is said to have greatly clarified and expedited procedure under the Wagner act.

Dr. Leiserson Loosening Knots In Labor Tieup

He is one of millions of American citizens who in late years have seen their native countries taken prisoner. Born in Estonia, he was brought to this country when he was a small child. At the University of Wisconsin, he was schooled in economics. He obtained his doctorate at Columbia in 1911 and made his career in Wisconsin in various state industrial, employment, labor and workmen's compensation posts.

He personalizes and particularizes each case and sees no hope in "legalistic" solutions of labor problems.

Star Dust

★ Too Many Good Ones
★ 'Gang Busters' Do

— By Virginia Vale —

THAT argument between Bette Davis and Warner Brothers should set a record of some kind. Usually a star protests because she either wants better stories or more money. Miss Davis didn't want either.

She gets the best stories that the studio can find; in fact, the executives can't hear of a good one without trying to buy it for her. The latest purchase is "No Time for Comedy," the play that Katharine Cornell has been doing so successfully for so long on the New York stage. It's said that George Brent will play opposite Miss Davis, in the role done in New York by Laurence Olivier.

Miss Davis' complaint is that they buy too many of these good stories for her—in other words, she works too hard. Since last January she has made "Juarez," "Dark Victory," "The Old Maid," and "Elizabeth and Essex," which makes an impressive record.

Loretta Young, in "Eternally Yours," has a chance to wear chinchilla and orchids and look beautiful against a luxurious background. The picture is light and amusing, and some of your favorite people are in the cast (at least, they deserve to be among your favorites). Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Graves and David Niven have combined to give you something to laugh at in this one.

Andrea Leeds begged off from playing opposite Gary Cooper in "The Outlaw" so that she could get married; she wants a real wedding and a real honeymoon, instead of one of those hurried ceremonies that motion picture actresses usually participate in. She may decide to give up her screen career altogether, in favor of matrimony.

Jimmie Cagney's sister, Jean, who's twenty, has landed a movie contract for herself; starts her new career with a salary of $250 weekly—not bad for a beginner, though in Hollywood language that's barely pin money.

"Gang Busters" starts its fourth year in a decade as a crime on an enlarged network that includes 61 CBS outlets. Since its debut it has presented more than 150 dramas of actual cases; through clues presented near the end of each broadcast, it has been credited with the ultimate arrest of more than 130 suspects. Its producers work with law enforcement authorities, and each case that is dramatized is based on facts supplied by official agencies.

During each program Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, former head of the New Jersey State police, interviews officers connected with the case just dramatized. It adds a thrill to Saturday evenings.

Artie Shaw, whose clarinet playing practically makes history, has been starting people—especially his sponsors—by saying what he thinks about the jitterbugs. Band leaders have wanted to say what he has, in times past, but haven't dared, because the yelling, shouting mobs who stormed the theaters where they appeared were "the public." They didn't dare pause to consider the rest of the public, who went to hear them play.

So Shaw has come out into the open, rebelling against being goaded into writing autographs when he's due on the stage, resenting being jeered at when he doesn't do as he's asked. His radio sponsors feared that it might affect his popularity. Far from it—he attracts more people than ever.

ODDS AND ENDS—Lanny Ross likes "Over the Rainbow" the best of the popular tunes . . . A print of "Intermezzo" has been sent to the King of Sweden, requested by the president of the United Swedish societies . . . Merle Oberon wants to start Hollywood's feminine contingent knitting for the soldiers of the Allies—watch for a flood of publicity pictures of the girls with their needles . . . And look out for a flood of spy pictures, with "Espionage" as a sample, though Brenda Marshall is above the average heroine you can expect to see.

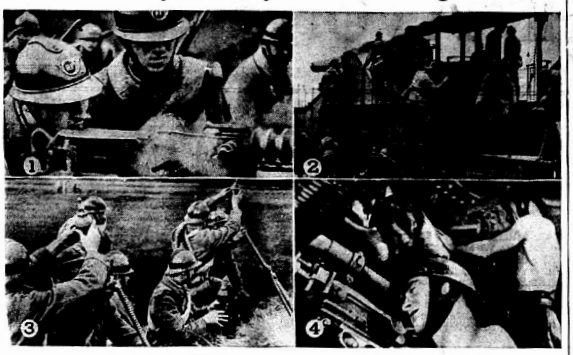
France's Heavy Artillery Trains on Siegfried Line



Shown here are the more powerful guns used by French troops in front line combat. No. 1 shows machine gunners in action, preparing to back up the Maginot line. No. 2 is a huge railway gun, run out on its spur track and aimed at some point in Nazi Germany. No. 3 is a trench mortar in action. The missile resembles a small aerial bomb. It is fired from the mortar on a high trajectory to drop down upon its objective, firing upon contact. No. 4 shows the interior of giant tanks carrying field guns, preparing to bore toward the Siegfried line into German territory.

Nazi Bombs Wreck American's Auto in Warsaw

Not at all pleased was Julien Bryan, noted American lecturer-photographer, as he looked over the ruins of his automobile in a shell-shattered Warsaw street. The picture was taken at the height of the siege by German troops. Bryan was the last American to leave the battered Polish capital before its downfall.

Danger Zones in Possible Air Conquest

Here's how German, French and British bombing planes would go about their errands of destruction, endangering the life of every civilian living in that territory within one of the enemy bombing "circles." From Wilhelmshaven, No. 1, and Mannheim, No. 2, would go German bombers to raid Paris, London and other cities. In retaliation, French fliers would start out from Metz, No. 3, and other bases behind the Maginot line, and British airmen would set out from Harwich, No. 4, on their egg-laying expeditions.

LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for October 29

Lessons subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND SOCIAL PROGRESS

LESSON TEXT—Micah 2:9-11; Luke 21:29-31, 34-36; I Corinthians 6:9-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God?—I Corinthians 6:9.

"International Temperance Sunday—October 29, 1939." Let us join with people the world over in making our protest against the sale and use of intoxicating liquors. If every Christian would declare himself on this matter now, there would be a tremendous impact made on this universal problem and notice would be served on the liquor industry, on politicians, and on unbelieving mankind that Christianity intends to do something about it. We are far too docile and quiet on such matters, when we ought to speak up for God and for our country.

The lesson portions may seem a little unrelated, but study of them yields three important truths regarding the use of wine and strong drink.

I. Lovers of Wine and Strong Drink Destroy Their Nation (Mic. 2:9-11).

That statement may surprise some of our self-styled patriots who like to wave the flag and speak swelling words of devotion to our country and who at the same time love their intoxicating drinks. Micah rightly points out that his people had come to the place where they chose men to be prophets because they encouraged the people in the use of wine and strong drinks (v. 11). They must therefore expect the result which follows, namely, the destruction of the home and of the nation (vv. 9, 10).

We are all familiar with the claim that prohibition retarded the advancement of our nation and that its repeal would bring a return to higher moral standards, reduce crime, bring in prosperity, etc. The facts reveal that none of these have come to pass. Crime has increased by leaps and bounds under repeal, a situation so well known as to call for no proof. Moral standards have gone rapidly downward with the free use of liquor. If you don't believe that, ask a policeman what goes on in our taverns, or just keep your eyes half open and you can see for yourself.

Just now much is being made of the many jobs which are supposed to have been created by the liquor industry. What are the facts? The Christian Herald tells us, "A million dollars spent for furniture would employ 339 persons, spent for boots and shoes 336 persons, for home furnishings 191 persons, for booze just 95 persons." And remember that jobs making the stuff that destroys other jobs, are not worth having. The man who drinks is helping to destroy his nation.

II. Christians Do Not Drink, Because They Look for Christ's Return (Luke 21:29-31, 34-36).

If we are really "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus 2:13), we should consider whether any of the things mentioned in these verses have gained control in our lives: the cares of this life, surfeiting, or drunkenness. But why speak to Christians about that! Surely they do not use intoxicants. Sadly enough, some do. Taking advantage of the fact that the Bible speaks of temperance rather than of abstinence, they seek to justify an indulgence in these things, which they (and their neighbors) know is dishonoring to God and destructive of their testimony and usefulness in the community.

Christian, Jesus is coming again! He may even today! In fact, the fig tree (vv. 29, 30), which is the nation Israel, has long been shooting forth new branches and bearing green leaves. The indications are that Christ is coming soon. Are you ready to meet Him?

III. Drunkards and Other Sinners Need to be Saved (I Cor. 6:9-11).

Being drunk is not a joke, even though thoughtless people laugh and cartoonists and writers of jokes use such unless as their stock in trade. Drunkenness is a foul and sinful thing, classed by the apostle Paul with the lowest of human vices. Review the list as it is given in verses 9 and 10 and by the way, notice that covetousness is mentioned there too) and place drunkenness in its proper classification. Call it what it really is—sin, and then call on the One who can save from sin and then you will be washed from your sin, sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus (v. 11). In Christ there is hope for the drunkard. A spiritual revival is the real answer to the liquor problem. Let us seek to promote it even as we at the same time give ourselves to an intelligent and constructive battle against this destructive force in the life of our nation.

It Pays to Advertise In the Newspaper

"Advertising in the newspaper sells the goods," writes the Creomulsion Company, makers of Creomulsion, one of the largest selling cough medicines on the market today, in releasing a new series of ads on their product.

Creomulsion, acknowledged by thousands of satisfied customers as a superior prescription for the relief of stubborn Coughs, heavy Chest Colds and Bronchial Irritations, is sold by all drug stores on the basis that if the desired results are not obtained the entire purchase price is refunded.—Adv.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Biscuit Pans.—A shallow pan about one inch deep is the best to use in baking biscuits; otherwise the biscuits will not brown evenly on all sides.

"The Tale of the Galloping Tooth"

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You may have been in France during the unpleasantness that went on there in 1914-1918. You may have seen towns shelled to a crumbling ruin. You may have seen regiments decimated by poison gas. You may have seen men torn to pieces by bursting grenades and families pauperized and turned out of their homes by the onward plunge of the great German war machine. You may think you know all the horrors of war, but Don Aspinwall of Rochelle Park, N. J., will tell you you haven't seen anything.

Don was somewhere in the Villers Cotteret area on special duty with the Second division. A deafening barrage had been rolling back and forth across the lines for more than two hours. The Germans were tossing every form of pyrotechnic display in their bag of tricks. Huge 9.2's roared overhead like great express trains. Machine-gun bullets zipped by. An occasional ash can from a minie werfer battery would tumble lazily through the early morning haze to spread itself with a devastating roar in front of the barbed wire. It was a swell time to be someplace else. But horror? Horror, nothing! The real horror was going on right inside Don Aspinwalls face.

Don Had a Toothache.

It was undoubtedly the outstanding disaster of the whole war. It had been going on for 24 hours and Don was convinced that if it went on two hours longer nothing could keep the Germans from taking Paris. And Don was miles away from any possible agency of relief. The only thing that could have stopped that ache would be a well-placed bullet, and Don was all in favor of that. "I tell you," he says, "the actual Gospel truth. I poked my head over

"He had no anesthetic, but glancing behind me I knew the worst. A stolid-faced six-foot Yorkshire orderly had sneaked in."

the top of the trench several times and gave Jerry the Bronx Salute in the sincere hope that some German officer might take offense and order me erased with a machine-gun, field battery or some other similarly effective weapon."

Attempts at Suicide Came Back Labeled "No, Dice."

But no German officer would have been sucker enough to halt such an effective blow to the Allied cause. All Don's attempts at suicide came back to him labeled, "No Dice." He had to wait until he was relieved from duty and then, in a semi-delirium he lit out for the nearest British medical unit two miles away. Eventually he got there and was ushered into the presence of a brass hat who turned him over to a young medical lieutenant. "It took him five minutes to diagnose the case of acute toothache," says Don, and then he seated me in an improvised dental chair and looked worried. It seems there wasn't any local anesthetic in that part of the country and—well—what to do?

Don told him what to do. He told him to get that tooth out of there and to hell with the anesthetic. That didn't seem quite cricket to the young Englishman. He demurred for a moment. Then he seemed to have an idea and said, "All right, Yank. But I say, it will be bally-well hurt you more than it does me."

"With those words of comfort," says Don, "he stepped out for a minute. When he came back I watched him open a shabby black bag and produce a none-too-clean pair of ordinary gas pliers. He had no anesthetic, but glancing behind me I knew the worst. A stolid-faced six-foot Yorkshire orderly had sneaked in. He stood at my back toying with the barrel of a massive British Webley navy type revolver and gauging the distance to certain sections of my skull with a practiced eye. I didn't have long to think about that though."

Don didn't have any time to think about it at all. The minute he turned his head he felt something hit it that felt like a nudge from a howitzer. There was a blinding flash and a million stars, pin-wheels, constellations and blue lights danced before his eyes.

"I began to fall into a deep, black void," he says. "At last, I thought, the Germans had planted a nice, juicy shell under the dental chair, and I was all ready to put forth my head and receive my harp and halo. Then I began to be aware of a disconcerting fact. I could still feel a dull throb where my toothache had been, and now there was another dull throb in the back of my head."

Gradually both old and new throbs increased in intensity. The black before Don's eyes faded to a gray haze, and through it he began to see the features of the young British medical attendant. There was a large moving blur behind the attendant. The haze cleared a little more and Don could see it was the Yorkshire orderly. The orderly was calmly wiping the butt of his Webley and Don distinctly remembers noticing that several brown hairs still adhered to that butt. Don's hair is brown, too. He says that might, or might not, have been a coincidence.

And What a Climax.

And then the doctor spoke.

Don couldn't hear what he was saying very well, but the picture of what happened was beginning to take shape in his brain. That Yorkshire orderly had been the anesthetic. He had socked Don on the coco with the butt of that revolver. And now the medical attendant seemed to be apologetic about it.

Don stopped him. "Don't worry, doc," he said. "It's all right with me. It was a swell job, even if your anesthetic was a bit rough."

The attendant shook his head and began to repeat his words. "Then," says Don, "my confused brain began to function as I heard that Englishman say, 'Oh, I'm sorry, Yank, but I haven't done anything yet, you know. You see my orderly worked too fast and I had to wait until you came out of it SO YOU COULD TELL ME WHICH TOOTH IT WAS!'"

Scientists Find 2 Distinct Kinds of Locusts

There are two races of the periodical cicada—the seventeen-year race and another that appears every 13 years. Scientists have found no differences in the two except that one remains underground in the larva and pupa stages four years longer than the other.

Every year is known year in some part of the country. There are 17 different broods of the 17 year race and thirteen broods of the 13-year race, writes a correspondent in the Chicago Tribune. The broods have been catalogued by Roman numbers. Broods Nos. 1 to 17 compose the 17-year race. The 13-year race is numbered from 18 to 30. Broods are thus easily distinguished.

There is overlapping of the territories occupied by the two races and also by the different broods. In some sections, however, the locusts only appear at 13 or 17-year intervals, indicating the presence of only one brood.

The periodical cicadas are not found in the western part of the United States. They live mainly in the wooded regions from the Atlantic coast westward to central Kansas.

Public Sentiment Grows Insistent To Keep Out of European Muddle

Unmistakable Change Is Going on Throughout the Country; People Make Known Their Feelings and Their Thought Is Reflected in Congress.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—While the Roosevelt administration continues to subordinate everything to the general subject of the European war, there has been an unmistakable change in sentiment going on throughout the country and in the capital city. It is inescapable to the merest tyro of an observer. It represents a crystallization of that foggy thing called public sentiment.

The senate has debated the issue of repeal of the arms embargo to the fullest, but the debate has fallen short of telling the whole truth. There was an entire lack of any truly great speeches. Much additional light has been thrown on the whole question of a neutrality policy, yes; but I believe the senate failed to do the job in a way that history will measure as statesmanlike. The amazing fact is, therefore, that public sentiment should have solidified so definitely in such a short time, with a verdict that says: "We will stay out of that European mess; it is not ours, and we will not play their game."

It is always difficult to describe what takes place in the matter of public sentiment, powerful as it is in the United States. But it is easy to describe the condition, the status, of national thought as represented by an overwhelming majority of the citizens. In the current case, it can be told in two sentences. A few weeks ago, the big shots of government were saying: "possibly" we can keep out of war; the present statement is that "probably" we can keep out of the war. It is a vital difference.

The reason for this is obvious. People have made known their feelings. They have made clear that whatever else they may differ about, they are determined and united on the one proposition, namely, that we must not get tangled up with Europe's power politics. Further, existence of this sentiment has been thoroughly reflected in congress and those who would willingly toss our armies into the flame have begun to get scared about their own hides.

Clark Takes Wallop at Assistant Secretary of War

I must qualify that statement that all of the big shots have toned down their remarks. Several continue to shout in an inflammatory way. The best known of these is Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war. It is unnecessary for me to discuss Johnson's unwise statements. I can quote a real authority, for Senator Bennett Clark, the Missouri Democrat, dealt quite fully with the assistant secretary's utterances—especially that in which Mr. Johnson said that "if the United States were not fully prepared for war, it would be overrun like Poland." Of that remark, Senator Clark had this to say, during the arms embargo debate in the senate:

"In my judgment, no more idiotic, moronic or unpatriotic remark ever has been made by a man in high public office . . .

"This is the same Louis Johnson who has been flying around the country in an army airplane for the last several years, preaching the inevitability of war and the certainty of our being drawn in and dropping horrific pictures with grisly prophecies of our shores being invaded and our own land being laid waste."

But after Senator Clark had streamlined the assistant secretary of war, he proceeded to fall off into the deepest water of demagoguery by attacking President Roosevelt's selection of members of the war resources board. To make that eagle screech in its shrillest notes, Senator Clark described it as a "Morgan-duPont board," which, to anyone who knows the facts, is a rather silly statement.

With respect to the attack on Mr. Johnson, I only wish that Senator Clark had gone ahead with the pressures so that the long-continued row in the war department could have had an airing.

Johnson Reported Seeking Job of Secretary of War

It is no longer a secret in Washington that Mr. Johnson has been trying for months to get the job of secretary of war. He and Mr. Woodring do not get along, and have not for much of the time the assistant secretary has been on the job. The result has been continual friction, a handicapping of department policies and a general fear among army officers. They are afraid they will get tangled up in departmental politics and every officer knows if he guesses wrong, the chances of getting top flight assignments are nil.

As can readily be seen, such a situation in a policy-making agency of government certainly does the nation no good. It is said that President Roosevelt sees Assistant Secretary Johnson more frequently than he confers with Mr. Woodring, the head of the department. Whether that is true or not, it is a fact that the President has done nothing at all to settle the long-standing row.

Getting back to the senate debate, attention ought to be turned momentarily to the defeat of the motion to separate the arms embargo question from that involved in the "cash and carry" sections of the bill. Senator Tobey, New Hampshire Republican, proposed that the bill be split up, because there was virtually an unanimous vote in prospect for a law that would let American business sell ordinary supplies to both sides of the European struggle, provided the buyers came here in their own ships, paid cash for their purchases and hauled them away in their own vessels.

Short shrift was made of that motion. It was licked by more than two to one. The reason: if the "cash and carry" section were disposed of, there would be so much less interest in the arms embargo repeal that its eventual defeat would be entirely possible.

Old Party Whip Is Used To Keep Followers in Line

Which brings us back to the subject of politics. It will be remembered that President Roosevelt called for an "adjournment of politics," during the dangerous period. No one made the open charge in debate, but there were plenty of senators who felt that the President exerted pressure to keep his own followers in line. The administration's leaders were quite well aware that a titanic struggle confronted them to obtain repeal of the arms embargo if it were cut loose from the "cash and carry" section. So the old party whip was brought into play.

But all of the changes that have taken place in the country's thought have had one reaction in Washington that is not obvious to those living outside of the capital city. I have reported to you before how the little clique that surrounds the President—extreme radicals and men with ideas who know how they will disappear if Democrats instead of New Dealers are in control—saw in the possibility of war an assurance of President Roosevelt's election to a third term. They were rubbing their hands and licking their chops because they saw themselves certain to continue in their jobs, exercising great power. The lack of enthusiasm for their plans has left them with nothing to do but mope and sulk. Their strategy has been blown up under their own noses. They do not know what to do about it.

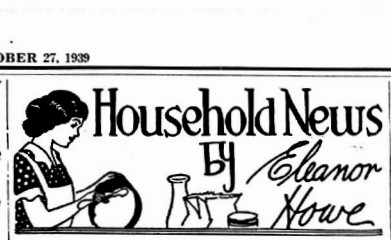
The question that now confronts the country, from a political standpoint, is whether the European war will run six months or a year or six years. The answer to the question is vital to the politicians.

It is especially important to those who would "draft" Mr. Roosevelt to run for a third term, and I think it is being studied with great care by such men as Postmaster General Farley and Vice President Garner. It is being studied with equal care by Senators Taft of Ohio, and Vandenberg of Michigan, each of whom has a whole flock of Presidential bees swarming inside of his Republican bonnet.

Farley Has Party Control Locked Up in His Own Safe

It has been noted, repeatedly, how the arms embargo debate has found many of the anti-administration Democrats aligned with the President, favoring repeal. Most of the senators whom President Roosevelt sought to "purge" from the Democratic party believe with the Chief Executive that the embargo ought to be repealed. Some few of the arch Roosevelt supporters are standing against repeal. The interesting fact is that the intra-party row, among the Democrats, has had no effect upon the stand taken by the party members in the embargo controversy. And, thus, there has been considerable speculation whether there is to be a healing of the wounds. I think there will not be. The differences seem too deeply seated.

However, that may be, it can be said now that "Big Jim" Farley, who is chairman of the New York State Democratic committee in addition to being chairman of the National Democratic committee, has control of the party locked up in his own safe. If he chooses to align himself with the Garner-Harrison group, Mr. Roosevelt and his followers are through, washed up. If he decides to support Mr. Roosevelt again, the anti-Roosevelt Democrats will be tossed about like a straw in a whirlwind. It appears to this observer as of this time that the swing of public sentiment definitely against anything in the nature of American participation in the European war probably will mean a Farley swing to the Garner-Harrison side of the line.



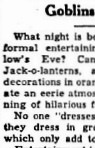
PUMPKIN PIES FOR HALLOWEEN
See Recipes Below.

When Witches and Goblins Roam

What night is better suited to informal entertaining than all Hallow's Eve? Candlelight, leering Jack-o-lanterns, and crepe paper decorations in orange and black create an eerie atmosphere for an evening of hilarious fun.

No one "dresses"—or, if they do, they dress in grotesque costumes which only add to the festivity.

Entertainment is simple, and easy to provide. Old fortune telling games and bobbing for apples are always fun, and a trip through a "chamber of horrors" is as much a part of Halloween as are good things to eat.



For variety, and a lull in the excitement of wilder entertainment, you might try a "paper and pencil game"—a prize to be given to the guest who can list the greatest number of superstitions, or answer the greatest number of questions in a "Cat Questionnaire" (for example), "What cat is an ancient burying place?" (catacomb) and "What cat is a plant of the mint family?" (catnip).

Food for a Halloween gathering is simple and substantial—baked beans with brown bread, cabbage slaw, and coffee; doughnuts with mulled cider, or pumpkin pies a la mode. You'll find among the following suggestions some that are old and some that are new.

Caramel Pecan Tarts.
(Makes 6 tarts)

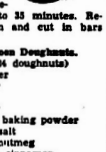
1 can sweetened condensed milk
2 tablespoons hot water
6 small tart shells
½ cup nut meats (cut fine)

Place the unopened can of sweetened condensed milk in a kettle of boiling water, and keep at boiling point for three hours. (Be sure to keep can covered with water.) Remove the caramelized milk from the can and blend with two tablespoons hot water, beating until smooth. Cool. Pour into baked tart shells, and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Cut pattern of cat from stiff white paper. With a sharp knife, carefully cut cats from pastry, using the paper pattern as a guide. Place on cookie sheet and bake in hot oven (450 degrees). Cool and place one on each tart before serving.

Chocolate Indians.

½ cup butter
1 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
2 ozs. chocolate (melted)
½ cup bread flour
Dash salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup nuts (broken)

Cream the butter and add sugar slowly. Add the eggs and beat well. Add the melted chocolate, flour, salt, vanilla extract and nuts, blending lightly. Bake in a shallow layer in a well greased pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 to 35 minutes. Remove from pan and cut in bars while hot.



Harvest Moon Doughnuts.
(Makes 24 doughnuts)

¼ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
4 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Fat for deep fat frying

Cream butter and sugar. Beat in eggs. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with milk. Add vanilla. Roll dough ¼-inch thick and cut with doughnut cutter. Fry in deep fat at 385 degrees until doughnuts are brown.

Sausage Roll-Em-Ups.

4 small pork sausages
4 long slices bread
Prepared mustard
Melted butter

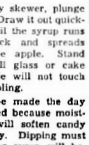
Cook pork sausages until lightly browned. Spread bread with prepared mustard. Wrap the sausages in the bread and fasten with a toothpick. Brush with melted butter—covering outside entirely. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) until brown. Garnish with crisp bacon and parsley.

Taffy Apples.

2 cups granulated sugar
⅓ cup light corn syrup
¾ cup water
Red liquid coloring (few drops)
12 red apples
12 skewers

Few drops oil of peppermint, cinnamon or cloves

Wash apples thoroughly and dry them. Insert skewer in blossom end. Put sugar, corn syrup and water into a saucepan and cook, stirring until the sugar is dissolved. Continue cooking without stirring until the temperature 300 degrees F. is reached—crack stage.



Wash crystals away from side of saucepan as mixture cooks. Cook slowly during latter part of period so that syrup will not darken. Remove from flame and set saucepan into boiling water. Note: A double boiler may be used for this. Add coloring and flavoring and stir just enough to mix well.

Holding apple by skewer, plunge it into hot syrup. Draw it out quickly and twirl it until the syrup runs down to the stick and spreads smoothly over the apple. Stand skewer in a small glass or cake rack so that apple will not touch anything while cooling.

Apples should be made the day they are to be used because moisture from apple will soften candy and make it sticky. Dipping must be done rapidly or syrup will become too stiff for coating.

The football season is in full swing! One of these chilly Saturdays it would be a grand treat to let the youngsters bring "the gang" home from the game for a football supper.

Desired Extra Bathroom Need Take Little Space

Few houses are being built today without two bathrooms, or at least a bathroom and extra lavatory. In the modernization of an old house, consideration should be given to this feature.

Plumbing authorities have found that the essential fixtures of a bathroom can be installed in a floor space which measures five feet one way and six feet the other. Space at the unused end of the hallway often may be converted into an extra bathroom, and in some cases an oversized bedroom may be converted into a guest suite by partitioning it and including a bathroom.

Buckram and Tacks To Stiffen Valance

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: A friend gave me a copy of your Book 3 and I can't tell you what a transformation is taking place in my home because of it. For a long time I have wanted living room curtains with smoothly fitted valances stiffened with buckram. Could you give me step-by-step directions for making them?"

A four-inch valance shelf; buckram and thumbtacks are the only "extras" needed. 1: Cut the buckram the exact size of the finished valance—no seam allowances. The chintz for the valance and the facing material are cut larger as indicated. 2: Outline the scallops by drawing around the buckram. 3: Stitch the chintz and facing with right sides together. Steps 4, 5, and 6: Trim the scallops; clip between them; then turn and press. 7: Insert the buckram; fitting it smoothly into the scallops. Turn in and stitch the top; allowing ½ inch to extend above the buckram. 8: Tack this soft edge to the shelf.

NOTE: If you have had Mrs. Spears' books 1 and 2, you will want No. 3. It is full of new ideas for homemakers, and step by step directions for making important pieces of furniture. Also newest styles and methods of making slip covers and curtains. Original designs for rag rugs; gifts and bazaar items. Send 10 cents in coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

OUR HALLOWE'EN PARTY!

Avon Park is apparently getting much excellent publicity from the window soap drawing contest to be conducted Saturday, which will take the place of the former haphazard use of soap. With the cooperation of the Proctor and Gamble Co., makers of Ivory soap, the contest is being staged under the auspices of Mayor M. E. Covington and the chamber of commerce.

Already three editorials, one up in Ohio, and a feature story have appeared commending Mayor Covington for his Hallowe'en ideas. Others may have been printed which have not come to our attention. In addition to this the Proctor and Gamble Co., in a recent letter to the mayor state they hope to have a newsreel cameraman here and are also contacting several noted news commentators and columnists.

The editorials which have already appeared, two from Tampa and one from Ohio, read as follows:

PREPARING TO PREVENT HALLOWEEN DESTRUCTION

Tampa merchants and the Police Department have greatly reduced Halloween destruction by giving a downtown street party, parade and prizes for the most unique costumes, but Mayor Covington of Avon Park believes that he has hit on a plan which will be nearly 100 percent perfect.

He will follow his usual custom of giving a talk to the boys at school, urging them to make all the noise they want to on Halloween and even to draw funny pictures with soap on downtown store windows—but not automobile windows. He concludes by telling them that he will treat them fairly and he expects the same from them. "They have responded most generously," he writes, "and it gives me a great deal of pleasure to know that not five cents' worth of damage has been done in Avon Park in eight years."

But in addition to his school talks, this year he wrote a soap company asking if it would provide funds for prizes for the best pictures drawn with soap on store windows and for the best carvings of soap statues. The company wired $25 and the contests are on. The Avon Park city council is requiring the use of a particular kind of soap, both because the company provided the prizes and because the soap doesn't contain grit or grease which might damage windows; but any good soap would serve the same purpose just as well.

All this, of course, is intended to give the children some constructive or harmless activity in which to express their Hallowe'en enthusiasm, rather than leave them free to cause destruction either thoughtlessly or purposely. It is the same general principle which makes playgrounds and boys' clubs valuable civic investments.

The responsibility for the conduct of boys and girls rests primarily with their parents, of course, and parents could save themselves and their community much trouble and loss if they kept closer supervision over their children. But even something more is necessary and Avon Park, Tampa and other cities are apparently trying to supply it.—TAMPA DAILY TIMES.

HERE'S A SUGGESTION

Mr. M. E. Covington has been mayor of Avon Park, Fla., since 1931, having recently been re-elected by a vote that was almost unanimous. Prior to the time Mayor Covington was chosen to head the town government, Avon Park, like practically every other community, was greatly annoyed by the pranks of youngsters at the Hallowe'en season. Soon after his first election and every year since that time, Mayor Covington has visited the public schools and talked to the pupils regarding property destruction. He has spoken to them in their own language, telling them to go ahead and have a lot of fun, to make as much noise as they wished but suggested that they confine their pranks to soaping store and residence windows and automobile glass. The response to the mayor's plea has been highly gratifying.

This year the mayor went a step farther and obtained from Proctor & Gamble a sum of money which will be given as prizes for the best soap pictures drawn on the down town windows. Further, the boys and girls are to be given free samples of Ivory soap with which to do the decorating. Then the city council passed a resolution prohibiting the use of all soap except Ivory. Mayor Covington naturally is quite proud of the fact that Hallowe'en depredations in Avon Park now are a thing of the past since he has found a harmless way to let the youngsters have a lot of fun without doing any serious damage to property.—NEWARK (OHIO) ADVOCATE.

PAINLESS HALLOWEENS

Mayor M. E. Covington, of Avon Park, has attracted wide attention by his success in dealing with Halloween rowdyism and vandalism in his progressive little city.

Each year since he became Mayor he has gone to the public schools in advance of Halloween and talked to the boys about the danger and damage of the usual Halloween pranks, giving them permission to do certain things and warning them against doing other things. As a result no damage has been done to property in Avon Park in eight years—a remarkable record.

This year, Mayor Covington, to avoid scratching of store and car windows by pranksters, has adopted the plan of giving prizes for the best soap drawings on the windows; and an enterprising soap company has offered the prizes, provided its brand of soap is used. This may develop latent artistic talent in the Avon Park youngsters, as well as save a lot of plate glass from defacement. The Mayor says his plan "has proved so satisfactory for the past eight years that some of the other towns who are still having those Halloween headaches might copy our scheme with good effect."—TAMPA TRIBUNE.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

By RUSSELL KAY

And now it seems that a lot of folks are all stewed up over Thanksgivin' and when to observe it. The football bowl games just naturly runnin' 'round in circles tryin' to determine when to schedule the Thanksgivin' Day game. The army and Navy teams, bein' more or less Federal, will probably have to play their Thanksgivin' game on the 23rd while Florida, bein' a state institution, will have to play theirs on the 30th.

The banks, to be on the safe side will observe both the 23rd and the 30. The post office will close on the 23rd and remain open on the 30th. Newspapers considerin' a Thanksgivin' Day edition are in a tough spot—no matter which day they decide on it will be wrong to some of their subscribers.

Farmers, poultrymen, and butchers are bitin' their finger nails and runnin' their hands thru their hair wonderin' which day to make plans for delivery. Folks are gonna eat turkey two weeks runnin' or become so fed up with the whole mess that they'll quit worryin and mix up a mess of beef stew.

It has occurred to some folks that if we can up and change the date of Thanksgivin' after all these years, why most anything can happen, and they are afraid to pick up the mornin' paper for fear they find that Independence day has been changed to December 25 while the 4th of July will be celebrated the first Monday in September.

Uncle Fred told us he was 100 per cent for Roosevelt, but just the same the old boy ain't lettin nobody mislead him into gettin' thankful a whole week ahead of time. Some timid souls are worried for they are afraid if they don't observe the 23rd they'll be considered Conservatives or Republicans or something. At the same time, in the face of Brother Fred's Official Proclamation, they can't very well ignore the 30. Of course, if a guy likes holidays and turkey he can go ahead and take two Thursdays off and give a couple of grobler dinners a good home, only it just don't seem to make sense and on top of that is more or less expensive.

One chap I know is sore with both Fred and Roosevelt. It seems he got a letter from his mother-in-law, who always comes over for Thanksgivin' dinner and brings a mess of relatives with her, sayin' on account of the mixup this year and not knowin' for sure which day is which, she's plannin' to come the 23rd and stay through the 30th.

Even the preachers are upset. I asked one the other day what he proposed to do about his Thanksgivin' service and it seems his congregation is pretty much divided on the issue and he was downright worried. He said he guessed the only thing he could do was follow the scriptures in such a case and render unto Roosevelt the things that were Roosevelt's and unto Cone the things that were Cone's. He just naturally ain't takin' no chances and is workin' up two Thanksgivin' sermons.

It looks to me the whole thing is screwy. As far as I can see, we were gettin' along very well observin' the last Thursday in November, and if we'd just gone on doin' it and left well enough alone everything would have been all right. But now we've started a controversy that will get worse from year to year and the first thing you know some screwball will be findin' fault with a lot of other holidays and he'll be startin' a movement to have 'em changed to suit his own particular fancy.

The wife thinks it would be grand to have Easter Sunday next week so he would have a legitimate excuse to go hog wild and buy a mess of new clothes, and a Legionnaire friend of mine thinks it would be a good idea if we would celebrate Armistice Day on April Fool's Day, which would be a lot more practical considerin' how "Safe for Democracy" the world wasn't made by the last so-called "War to End War."

One of our local merchants defendin' Mr. Roosevelt says the reason the date was changed this year is because Thanksgivin' came too close to Christmas and by puttin' 'em further apart it gave folks a chance to kind of have a breathin' spell in between and would make business a lot better and that all the merchants were strong for it.

Well, maybe I'm crazy, but you know I always had a foolish notion that the big idea behind the whole thing was to provide the people of this nation an opportunity to stop and take stock of their blessings and sort of count their change and give honest and sincere thanks to their Creator. But it seems that this is old-fashioned. Now it has developed into a hardboiled commercial proposition like Christmas and there ain't no sense in stickin' to the last Thursday in November if by movin' it up a week or so we can give the old cash register a little more exercise.

Well, I don't know about you, but for my part I'm gonna be plenty THANKFUL every day in the year that I'm an American and privileged to enjoy all the blessings and advantages that that implies.

PUBLIC FORUM

All I know is what I read in the newspapers:

I trust and hope that no offense will be taken, but today the human family is stricken with two living diseases—jealousy and empty selfish conceit.

Jealousy is a disease which lingers with you and gives you great grief. The empty selfish conceited individual who poses as a paragon becomes obnoxious, who at times may lose all power of good judgment, as was the case with Colonel Lindbergh in the unfortunate recent speech to the American people.

In 1935 he left this country mysteriously and landed in London, England, where they received him with open arms, took him in, clothed and fed him in royal state. He remained in England for about two and one half years, when he embarked to an island in France. There the "Lone Eagle" perched until he returned to this country with the Hitlerian Medal of mockery and hypocrisy, to bite the hand that fed him; when he said, in his speech, that sooner or later the United States would have to demand the freedom of this continent and its surrounding islands. This means our good neighbor Canada, which has a larger area than the United States, with a boundary line of over three thousand miles, and on that boundary line there is not a gun or soldier; the good neighbor has taken their place.

I was in Detroit, Mich., 1927, when the "Lone Eagle" made his flight from New York to Paris, and when word was flashed around the world "That the Lone Eagle arrived in Paris," you well know what happened. It gave me such an inspiration that I wrote him a letter, which is, as follows:

Detroit, Mich., June 13, 1927

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh,
New York Citw, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Lindbergh:

Please accept my congratulations on your bold and noble flight from New York to Paris. Without criticism you have done more to unite the ties of friendship between the Old and New World than all the ambassadors of the past. You have done more—you have aroused the ambitions of thousands of young Americans, and long after you have taken your Heavenly Flight, the Lindbergh signals will flash from shore to shore across the mighty ocean.

May God bless and protect you in all your flights.

In reply to this letter he sent me the picture of the famous "Spirit of St. Louis," and his picture standing beside it, and I assure you that I was very proud of the same, but to-day I am turning the "Lone Eagle's" face toward the West from the rising Sun, as he has lost his tail feathers.

Now, comes along a man who picks up the feathers, whose name is Lundeen, who claims he is farmer labor senator from Minnesota, and on the floor of the Senate, in Washington, D. C., he strewed the feathers, and demanded that the United States sieze all the British possessions in the Caribbeans. I will leave it to the readers if this man Lundeen is a Hitlerite or not, and one who wants to break into the home and rob when the owners are gone.

Thank God, the United States is a government of democracy which never invades another country or domain without just cause; yet, should this great man Lundeen insist in conquering the world, give him a letter to that savage Hitler, of Germany, and when he finds his lights on Mr. Lundeen, he will say —"I believe you are a brave man, to the front trenches you go," "but Mr. Hitler, I am a sick man." "That is the place for two faced Americans." That is the only time I saw fit to give this savage Hitler credit.

Sincerely,
A. J. MAY.

Don't call the world dirty - because you have forgotten to clean your glasses. There are some ugly spots in the world, but instead of calling the whole world ugly let us seek to make beautiful the ugly spots. Come study with us in the Sunday School at 9:45 a. m. about one of the worlds most hideous evils and let us see what we can do about it.

Some men live in the basement of their being and leave the upper stories unoccupied. At the eleven o'clock service the pastor will preach on the subject: "The Grounds for Christian Optimism." Seek to free thyself from the life of the basement by attending this service. Special music by the choir.

At 6:30 the Senior, Intermediate and Junior groups of the young people's division meet in their respective buildings for the presentation of an interesting program. The youth of today is the strength of tomorrow. Help them to grow.

7:30 p. m. Evening Worship. Sermon by the pastor. Subject: "What Shall I Do To Be Saved." Special music by the Junior Choir. A special 10-minute sermon for the children. Subject, "The Story of the Dipper in the Sky."

7:30 p. m. Wednesday, mid-week prayer service. forty-five minutes of Christian fellowship, followed by choir rehearsal at 8:30.

Most folks are unhappy because they do not always get what they want, but are happy over what they get.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

The patient is very sick. She is in need of a special type of blood. Many have offered their blood to no avail. She is nearing death. The call is sounded forth by radio. One young man, far away, answers the call. His blood types. The patient lives. God sent his only son, Jesus Christ, to this world. His blood alone could atone for the sins of mankind, condemned to death. Christ died on the cross, gave all of his blood. You and I may live. Hear Mr. Van Dyke Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock as he discusses "The Blood of Christ."

Attend the following services at the Church of Christ:

Bible School, 10:00 a. m.
Preaching, 11:00 a. m., "The Blood of Christ."

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Dr. Alfred C. Elliott, Pastor

Sunday, October 29—The Sunday School will meet at 9:45 a.m. when International Temperance Sunday will be observed. The topic for the Adult Classes will be: "The Drag of Liquor Upon Social Progress."

This is an age when the social conscience is very much alive, and when social welfare is receiving the earnest consideration, not only of the leaders of the nation, but of the people generally. Has our national liquor bill any bearing on many of the social problems confronting us today? Have the drinking habits of the American people improved or become worse since the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment? Does the money spent on liquor have any effect on the housing conditions of our people? Is liquor in any way responsible for the foul and filthy slums of our large cities? Have the brewers and distillers any sympathy for the women and children whose husbands and fathers make their lives so full of sorrow and misery because they spend their wages on the products of the breweries and distilleries. Come and discuss these questions with us on Sunday morning. Most people have some opinion regarding the liquor trade. We would like to know what you think about it. Our adult classes will give you an opportunity to express yourself.

Morning morship service at 11 a. m. when Dr. Elliott will speak on "The Gentle God." Anthem: "Lift Up Your Heads!" and selection: "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me," by the Senior Church Choir, under the direction of Mrs. George E. Symonds. Come, and get the inspiration of this hour of worship. It will lift your thoughts to higher things and help to make the going easier during the following week. "They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength."

The Young People's Pilgrim Fellowship will meet at 7:00 p.m. Mrs. A. C. Elliott will lead the meeting and Miss Alice Davidson will present the message.

The Children's Vested Croir will meet for rehearsal at the Church on Wednesday at 4 p. m. under the direction of Mrs. J. P. Garber. The "Quiet Hour" service for praise and prayer will be held on Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. Brief address by the pastor. This is a service you will enjoy. Join us in prayer for our country and the world. The Senior Church Choir will meet for rehearsal at the Church on Saturday at 7:30 p. m. under the direction of Mrs. George E. Symonds.

Red Devils Play Haines City Eleven Tonight Away

By Bud Bella

After ravishing a 28-0 victory last week, the Red Devils will travel to Haines City this Friday and try to repeat the example on a top-notch Hornet team in the third Ridge conference contest for the Devils.

Last year the Hornets beat the Red Devils 40-0, but due to more experienced men the Devils will look much better this year.

Last week the Hornets were beaten by Mulberry 18-0.

"Although the Hornets have played good ball this year and have us outweighed by at least five pounds to the man," stated James Ward, "I believe we can win if we play hard ball. I know we will play hard."

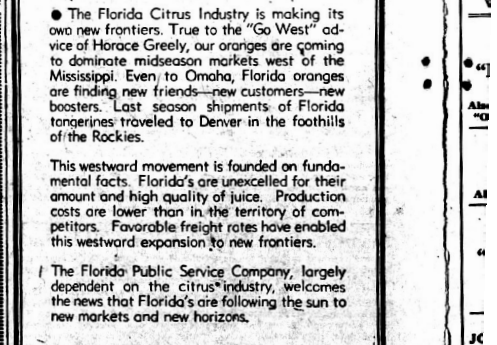
WESTWARD...
The Course of an industry



● The Florida Citrus Industry is making its own new frontiers. True to the "Go West" advice of Horace Greely, our oranges are coming to dominate midseason markets west of the Mississippi. Even to Omaha, Florida oranges are finding new friends—new customers—new boosters. Last season shipments of Florida tangerines traveled to Denver in the foothills of the Rockies.

This westward movement is founded on fundamental facts. Florida's are unexcelled for their amount and high quality of juice. Production costs are lower than in the territory of competitors. Favorable freight rates have enabled this westward expansion to new frontiers.

The Florida Public Service Company, largely dependent on the citrus industry, welcomes the news that Florida's are following the sun to new markets and new horizons.

Those assisting with the entertaining and chaperoning included: Miss Jannette Cook and Miss Evelyn Clements, the class sponsors, and Coach Stevens, Mrs. W. W. McFarland, Mrs. Lena Clements, Miss Jane Clements, Miss Mary Clements and Doyle Perry.

PERSONAL

Al Darling:

Your most thoughtful letter received and was so happy, dear, to hear that your business is beginning to open up. You always have had the ability to produce, and with just a break or two, you'll be on top of the world.

Honey, it is sweet of you to think ahead about Xmas. You know I don't want you to spend a lot of money on me, but I know that by buying now you have a better selection. Honey, since you asked me to tell you what I want most I'll do so.

Last week, Harry bought for Berta a darling 14-kt. gold-filled 17 jewel Bulova, small size ladies' wrist watch. A simply beautiful watch. Berta told me she saw the same watch at Jordon's, and that Mr. Jordon told her that it sold for only $33.75, and that he would give an absolute guarantee with it. You know, dear, you can believe anything Mr. Jordon tells you, so please go by Jordon's, Monday and reserve one of these Bulovas for me. You can pay him a small deposit and the balance a few dollars per week. Dear, here comes the boss, so must close. Lots of Love.

BETTE

P. S. Don't forget the price, $33.75 for a 17-jewel, 14-k. gold-filled Bulova ladies wrist watch.

Miss Browning Was Hostess Tuesday To San Souci Club

Miss Sarah Browning was a charming hostess Tuesday evening to the members of the Sans Souci Club at a dessert bridge in the Customer's Room of the Florida Public Service Company. An interesting Hallowe'en motif was carried out in the decorations. Each of the tables was crossed with orange streamers with a jolly pumpkin in the center. At each place were favors of a candy mint cup filled with mints in holiday shades.

At the beginning of the evening, a delicious course of pumpkin pie topped with whipped cream shaded orange and brown carrying out the color scheme and coffee was served to the guests.

Miss Mary Key received a lovely decorative tray as holder of high score and Mrs. Charles Sherman was recipient of a pair of book ends as second high. Mrs. John Bunting received the guest prize.

Those enjoying this affair with Miss Browning included: Miss Mary Key, Miss Millie Pearson, Miss Mildred Myers, Miss Alma Harrell, Miss Julia Norfleet, Miss Virginia Cloud, Mrs. Raymond Dilley, Miss Hattie Hundertmark, Mrs. Anne Johnston, Mrs. Virginia Cloud, Mrs. Charles Sherman, Mrs. C. E. Crabtree, Miss Elizabeth Green, Miss Iva Phillips, Mrs. John Bunting, and Mrs. Freed Peden.

Legion Auxiliary Met At Betts' Home

The American Legion Auxiliary held its regular monthly business meeting at the home of Mrs. Walter S. Betts Monday evening. The meeting rooms were gaily decorated with autumn flowers.

During the business session, the Auxiliary decided to have a booth for the sale of ice cream and other edibles at the Hallowe'en Carnival, the proceeds of the booth to go to the St. Petersburg Hospital for Crippled Children for the purchase of surgical equipment. The group also voted to make scrapbooks for the children of this hospital during the winter at its regular meetings.

At the close of the evening, Mrs. Betts served pumpkin pie with whipped cream and coffee to those present, including: Mrs. Earl W. Hartt, Mrs. Ruth Clowe, Mrs. Bob Adams, Mrs. S.Y. Hartt, Mrs. John H. Hood, Mrs. Floyd Johnson, Mrs. David Stuckey, Mrs. Charles Sherman, Mrs. D. G. Perry, Mrs. Nan Rouse, Mrs. Walter Martin, Mrs. Demos Mandis, Mrs. W. H. Ladies' Aid With Mrs. John Hood

The Ladies' Aid of the Congregational Church met on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. John Hood for an all-day sewing meeting and covered dish luncheon. Plans were made for the coming bazaar and turkey dinner which is to be held December 14, and a chicken dinner was also planned for November 17. A White Elephant Party is to be held at the home of Mrs. C. O. Pinch on November 8.

Those attending the meeing were Mrs. H. Dilley, Mrs. C. O. Pinch, Mrs. A. C. Elliott, Mrs. C.A. Clark, Mrs. Katherine Bristol, Mrs. Lulu Bass, Mrs. C. H. Moffett, Mrs. C. R. Ginn, Jr., Mrs. Blanche Williams, Mrs. E. L. Thomason, Mrs. D. G. Perry, Mrs. Alice Tuten, Mrs. Pearl Spink, and Mrs. John Hood.

Trump-It Club Recently Organized

Mrs. Roy Felknor was hostess to the members of the newly organized Trump-It Club at her home Wednesday afternoon. The party rooms were attractively decorated with vases of roses placed at vantage points throughout the rooms.

At the close of the progressions, Mrs. Nelson Smith was holder of high score and received a lovely brown and gold pottery tea pot and Mrs. Hubert Milton as holder of second high, received a novelty pickle dish.

After the games, Mrs. Felknor served a delicious salad course and iced tea to those members and guests present, who were: Mrs. Zed Scarborough, Mrs. Paul McFarland, Mrs. T. J. McGinnis, Mrs. Hubert Milton, Mrs. Nelson Smith, Mrs. Letha Kirkwood, Mrs. Reba Haynie and Miss Dorothy Deshong.

Mrs. J. Lawler Wells and daughters, Marjory and Betty Jo, combined business and pleasure on a trip to Lakeland Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Forbes, who have been spending the summer in Nebraska, have returned to their home here on State Street for the winter.

Enjoyable Party At Mrs. Voorhees' Home

The home of Mrs. George Voorhees was the scene of a delightful bridge party Wednesday evening when Mrs. Ann B. Geer was hostess to a number of her friends. Mrs. Geer has been the guest of Mrs. Voorhees during the past month.

The house was most attractively decorated in the Hallowe'en motif with a profusion of exoris, autumn leaves, and pink vine flowers.

Limeade was served during the evening and at the close of the progressions Mrs. J. B. Hart held high score and received a lovely double deck set of playing cards, and Dr. George Scott McKnight held high score for the men and was awarded shaving cream.

At the close of the evening, ice cream and cake were served by the hostess to the following guests: Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Able, Dr. and Mrs. George Scott McKnight, Mrs. Stella Fry, H. J. Maummau, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hart, Dr. A. Steiner, Mrs. A. E. Hollingsworth, Mrs. F. Godwin, Miss Marjory McKnight, and Mrs. George Voorhees.

Bridge Club Met With Mrs. Church

Mrs. Marjory Church entertained the members of her club at her home on Tuesday afternoon. The party rooms were attractively decorated with fall flowers.

At the close of the progressions Mrs. J. B. Hart held high score and was awarded a yellow bath towel and wash cloth set.

After the awarding of the prize, a delicious refreshments course of salad and iced tea was served.

Those enjoying the lovely occasion with Mrs. Church were: Mrs. S. C. Hartt, Mrs. G. S. McKnight, Mrs. C. H. Pardee, Mrs. J. B. Hart, Mrs. Alexander Gilmour, Mrs. W. H. Kempton, Mrs. W. H. Yates, Mrs. Stella Frye, Mrs. P. L. Rumpsa, Mrs. Olive Anderson, Mrs. J. E. Brick and Mrs. Lulu Bass.

Mrs. Mandis Hostess To Luncheon Club

Mrs. Demos Mandis entertained the Wednesday bridge luncheon club at her home this week. The attractive decorations carried out a Hallowe'en motif.

High score went to Mrs. Paul Rumpsa and second high went to Mrs. Stuart Thayer.

Those enjoying the afternoon with Mrs. Mandis were: Mrs. Stuart Thayer, Mrs. J. A. Johnson, Jr., Mrs. Earl Hartt, Mrs. Paul Rumpsa, Mrs. Marjory Church, Mrs. Percy Loomis and Mrs. Earl Ware.

Avon Park Club Will Observe Art Week

American Art Week will be observed by the Avon Park Art Club November 1 to 7. An Exhibit will be held in the Jacaranda hotel arcade room formerly occupied by Mandis Dairy.

Members of the club will have exhibits of paintings in water colors and oils, also the schools, such as drawings, pictures and manual training work.

The club desires to have any local talent exhibited, especially original work, such as pictures or other works of art.

How To Avoid Baldness In Four Easy Lessions!

A Hollywood actor has succeeded where scientists failed. He's perfected a way to grow hair on a bald head.

Cliff Edwards is the man and he offers his own head as proof of his discovery. In the past eight months he has grown an inch of new hair on the top of his head, and he offers the proof publicly for the first time in "Maisie," in which he appears with Robert Young and Ann Sothern at Park Theatre, Sunday and Monday. A year ago the top of Edward's head resembled a billard ball. Now . . . well you'll have to see him in "Maisie" to be convinced.

Here's how he did it:

1. Massaged his head with warm cocoanut oil fifteen minutes every morning.
2. Exposed his head to the sun or an infro-red lamp ten minutes a day.
3. Before retiring each evening, applied a warm towel to his head to open the pores.
4. Then rubbed the yolk of a duck egg very lightly into the scalp.

summer of 1937, some in June and July 1938, and the balance in June and July 1939. A half mile further east and on the north side of the road will be seen the pasture containing over 400 acres of para grass which was planted by Jim Hargrove this past June and on which are grazing a large herd of cattle at this time. A mile further east on the same side of the road will be seen the giant Bermuda grass which was planted by Jesse Durrance in 1937.

After crossing Indian Prairie Canal, the first field on the north side of state highway No. 8 contains over 400 acres which were seeded to Bermuda grass in April 1939 after the pesty muck had burned off during the drought in 1939. Three miles further east on the north side of the road is the old Palm Circle Dairy, where carpet grass seed was fed to dairy cattle along with commercial dairy feed in 1936 and 1937 and where an excellent stand of carpet grass was established this month.

At the stop at Brighton at 12:00 o'clock, N. B. Jackson will display some of the registered Devon cattle which he is raising on his ranch at Venus. The results of crossing purebred bulls with Florida native cows will be shown.

The stop at noon for lunch will be in charge of a committee appointed by Pres. Roscoe Bass of the Highlands County cattlemen's association and composed of Mrs. Albert DeVane, Fred Montsdeoca, and T. Jesse Durrance. Messrs. Smith Rudasill and Elmer Nichols are also cooperating on the noon program.

The first stop in the afternoon in Glade county under the direction of County Agent Grover C. Hodge will be at the 200 acre field of carpet grass which was sown by the famous aviator, the late Glenn H. Curtis, in 1924. This was the first seed ever distributed by plane.

The stop at the Lykes Bros. ranch about two miles further south will show the excellent para and carpet grass pasture which they have developed and part of their fine herd of beef cattle.

The next stop will be made to see a large field of para grass which was planted by Lykes Bros. between Lakeport and Moore Haven.

At the next stop they will see the pasture work being done by Joe Peeples. Mr. Peeples is planting a considerable area to carpet grass.

The last stop for the afternoon will be in Hendry county, under the direction of County Agent Grover C. Hodge, on the Joe Hendry ranch just east of LaBelle. Here about 200 acres of Para grass is being planted under contract by the South Florida Contracting Company of Sebring.

At 2:45 the tour will turn west by the Hendee County Court House and visit pastures in that county under the direction of County Agent H. L. Miller. Stops will include the Doyle D. Carlton ranch, where pasture improvement has been going on successfully for several years. The last stop of the tour will be made at 4:45 in Polk county, under the direction of County Agent W. Paul Hayman, where a herd of beef cattle will be seen which have been improved during the past several years and which have been grazing on improved pastures.

Five Dogs Left In Field Trials Sunday

Out of a total of 25 dogs entered in the field trials Sunday five were left for the finals to be held next Sunday. These trials are being held under the auspices of the Avon Park Conservation Council and the winners will be entered in the trials to be held at Okeechobee in the near future.

There were 14 old dogs entered Sunday and 11 young ones. Birds were scarce and the dogs rather wild, not having been worked for some time.

The Hallowe'en Parade will start at the Jacaranda Filling Station, Saturday night, at 7:15 sharp.

Prologue to Love

By MARTHA OSTENSO

THE STORY THUS FAR

Lovely, independent Autumn Dean, returning home to British Columbia from abroad without her father's knowledge, stops at the home of Hector Cardigan, an old family friend. He tells her that she should not have come home, that things have changed. Arriving home at the "Castle of the Norns," she is greeted lovingly by her father, Jarvis Dean, who gives her to understand that she is welcome—for a short visit. Her mother, former belle named Millicent Odell, has been dead for years. Autumn cannot understand her father's attitude, though gives him to understand that she is home for good. Her father gives a welcoming dance at the castle. Autumn meets Florian Parr, dashing, well-educated young man of the countryside. Late in the evening Autumn leaves the dance, rides horseback to the neighboring ranch where she meets Bruce Landor, friend and champion of her childhood days. He takes her to see his mother, an invalid. His father is dead, thought to have killed himself. As soon as his mother sees Autumn she commands Bruce to take her away, that death follows in the wake of the Odells. Autumn is both saddened and perplexed. Bruce, apologetic, can offer no reason for his mother's attitude. Autumn calls again on Hector Cardigan—this time to find out the reason for Mrs. Landor's outburst. From his conversation she inferred that Geoffrey Landor killed himself because he loved Millicent Dean, her mother. Meanwhile, Bruce Landor rides to the spot where his father's body was found years before. There he meets Autumn. Autumn and he talk of their families. They agree that her mother and his father loved each other deeply—and that their love is the cause of present antagonism. Florian Parr, at the castle for dinner, proposes to Autumn. She refuses him. The next day Autumn meets Bruce in a herder's cabin. There they declare their love for each other, and determine to stand together against everyone who might come between them. Autumn tells her father that she is going to marry Bruce. She is aghast to see his reaction, and is agonized to hear him whisper that Geoffrey Landor did not take his own life. He tells her the story. Millicent, his wife, and Geoffrey Landor had fallen in love with each other.

Autumn heard Jarvis' hands moving slowly up and down the arms of the chair.

"I must have gone a little mad then," he went on after a pause. "There was no use in my trying to hold her. I knew that. She was gone already, you see. But I couldn't let her go. I hoped that I might do something to win her back, perhaps. The weeks went by, but I soon knew it was hopeless. She was kindness itself to me, but she would forget sometimes and go about the house like one in a dream. She would sit with me throughout a whole evening and never speak a word. I became bold one day and went over to see Jane Landor when Geoffrey was in town. I asked her if she knew what was going on between Millicent and her husband. She denied that it was so, but I knew she was fully aware of it. She was too proud to admit it. I was a little unreasonable, I guess. I told her what I thought of a woman who could not keep her husband to herself. She told me to go home and look after my wife. That was the last time I spoke to Jane Landor, except for politeness when we met in public."

His voice had become very low now, but strangely controlled.

"Spring came, and I knew Millicent and Geoffrey were having rendezvous, but there was not a breath of scandal. I said nothing at first. I said nothing until I could stand it no longer. Then I—I gave orders. I made Millicent a prisoner in her own house. I forbade her going anywhere beyond the grounds unless I went with her. Perhaps I was foolish in that. At any rate, I kept them apart. Millicent didn't protest. If this had been one of her silly flirtations, you see, she would have died rather than give in to me. But it wasn't. This was real to her—and she didn't utter a word of protest. She obeyed me to the letter. Presently I heard that Geoffrey was drinking heavily and neglecting his work. The gossip of that was on every tongue. Where he was found—shot to death by his own gun—it was easy enough to suppose that it was either suicide—or accident."

Autumn gathered her hands together tightly about her knees.

"I had gone up north to look at some wolf traps I had set the day before. I had told no one I was going there, for I wished to be alone in the woods and think over my problem. It was early summer and I went on foot. I carried a fowling-piece with me in the hope that I might raise a partridge along the way. Millicent was very fond of the breast of partridge. It was still early afternoon when I went sul—along the way we go to Absolom's camp—but down the gully you wanted to follow that morning after you came home. At the farther end of the birches I flushed a couple of partridges and brought them down. I went on and inspected the traps I had set. I found them empty and returned the same way I had come. As I entered the birches, I came upon a brood of partridge chicks that kept running before me and hiding under leaves and keeping the woods alive with their ceaseless chirping. I realized then that they were the brood that belonged to the brace of birds I had bagged only an hour before. I was sorry for them, I remember, even then."

He paused for a long time, and a sigh of unutterable weariness seemed to pass all through his body. Autumn turned slightly and clung to his knees.

"It was there that Geoffrey Landor rode down upon me," Jarvis said at last. "He had evidently been drinking. I don't know what it was that brought him down there just then. He couldn't have known that I was there. No one knew. He seemed surprised at first, and looked at me as if he did not know me. Then he got down from his horse and came to where I was standing. He confronted me with an insolance that put me beside myself. I shall hear that taunting laugh of his to my dying day—and into eternity. I tried to quiet him, knowing that he had been drinking, but it only angered him the more. When I turned to go away from him, he stepped suddenly in front of me and whipped out his revolver. He told me he could not go on living without Millicent—that it had to be either him or me. It took me a minute or so to understand what he meant. He was actually challenging me to a duel. He looked magnificent as a god as he stood there instructing me with cool arrogance what I must do. Even then I did not believe that he meant to go through with it. To me it seemed an insane thing, even in those days. Then he called me something—it was an epithet that not only involved my own honor but Millicent's as well—and I struck him. I struck him with all my might. I wanted to kill him. He lifted his hand quickly—the one with the revolver in it—probably to guard against the blow—perhaps to kill me. I do not know what was in his mind. I saw him fall face downwards—and I heard his gun explode at the same instant—a sort of muffled sound. I watched him then, and waited for him to get up. But he didn't rise. I kneeled and turned him over. Geoffrey Landor was dead."

Autumn's burning eyes were burled against his knees, but no tears came. The image behind her lids seemed to have seared away all emotion.

"What I did immediately after that I do not know," Jarvis continued. "My memory there is a blank. I think I dragged his body to the water to revive him if possible. When I saw he was past all help, I left him in the shallow water, face downstream at the sound of the shot. I looked around me and wondered what I should do. And in the stillness came only the chirping of the partridge chicks. I turned and ran out of the gully. When I reached the open, on the top of the hill there where the trail turns eastward to the sheep camp, I sat down and thought of what I must do. I became very calm. I soon knew there was but one thing I could do. If I had gone to the authorities and told my story—just as it all had come about—I would probably not have been believed. I wouldn't have minded that, although life meant much more to me then than it does now. What I did not want was that the whole story involving Millicent should be brought to light. So far as anyone knew, Millicent and I were as happy together as we had always been. For her sake as much as for my own, I think, I resolved to say nothing about it to anyone. I came back home. Late that night, I saddled my horse and left word that I was riding down to Absolom's camp. Something drew me back to the spot where I had seen Geoffrey alive. I think I expected to find him alive still. I don't know. I rode as far as the entrance to the gully and halted to listen for some sound that might reassure me. As I stood and listened, I heard nothing but the mad chirping of the partridge chicks. I have never gone back there since. The next day, one of his own men found Geoffrey's body where I had left it. I went to Millicent that night and told her that I was sorry. She had been weeping. I told her exactly what had happened. She did not look at me. She said, 'Your secret is safe with me, Jarvis.' Before the end of the summer she died of a fever."

His voice was emotionless now as the stark tale came to an end. He leaned forward slightly and clasped his hands.

"Now you know why I did not want you to come back here," he said simply. "I did not want you to come back—to this."

"You have nothing to fear, Da," Autumn murmured.

"Nothing to fear? God in heaven! Geoffrey Landor destroyed my life. It was not enough for him that he robbed me of my wife's love. He laid upon me the responsibility of his own death. I have never recovered from that, Autumn. I have borne it all these years in secret. And now you tell me you want to marry the son of the man. It will kill me."

As though she were suddenly invested with a strength not her own, Autumn got to her feet and smiled down at Jarvis as she extended her hands.

"Come, Da," she said softly, "it must be as though it has never happened. We shall never speak of it again."

He looked up at her and smiled in whimsical sadness. "My poor little Autumn," he said, and the hand that had lain inert on the arm of the chair brushed across the stricken eyes, "my poor little Autumn—there seems no end."

She lifted her head proudly. "You are wrong," she said. "There is an end—even to this." Her breath caught her, in spite of herself, like a barb in the throat. "I must have been mad tonight—but I didn't know."

She threw her arms fiercely about him, all the pride and loyalty of her blood in the embrace. He patted her hand, and his lips moved without a sound.

Presently they got up together and walked in silence out of the room, Autumn's arm about her father, his hand leaning heavily on her shoulder.

CHAPTER VI

Throughout the interminable night Autumn knelt at her window in the darkness, watching the stars wheel across the sensuous velvet of a sky lately cleared of rain, until at last the blood red sail of a waning moon stood in the west, and she knew it was only a brief hour or so before dawn. Cramped with chill, she crept back into bed in the fitful sleep that came to her, she dreamt that Bruce Landor was dead, and that somehow she had caused his death. She awoke to a thin, gray daylight, to find that her face was wet with tears. In the reality of her dream, she turned over on her pillow and gave herself up to despondent weeping.

His voice was emotionless now as the stark tale came to an end.

Later at their early breakfast table, which Hannah had made lovely with a centerpiece of daisies and cowslips on a yellow linen cloth, Autumn met her father with a mood as fresh and bright as Hannah's flowers. She had dressed in a skirt and jacket of bright blue wool, with a gay ruffled blouse of sheer batiste, a costume which had once before drawn from Jarvis one of his rare expressions of pleasure.

"I'm all ready to leave for Kelowna, Da," she said. "I do wish you were going along. It would do you heaps of good."

He looked at her with surprise. "I didn't think you were going till this afternoon," he said.

"I've changed my mind," she replied.

Hannah brought in the steaming cereal. As the old woman busied herself about the table, Autumn stole a glance at her father. It was apparent that he had had a sleepless night. Haggard lines underscored his eyes, and his stern mouth was set in a straight line of pain. But his manner betrayed nothing of what he had suffered during the night.

He glanced up with a heavy frown at Hannah.

"Did you remember to salt the oatmeal this morning?" he asked with elaborate severity.

Hannah glanced at him disdainfully. "Salt causes hardening of the arteries," she retorted. "There's plenty in yon porridge for you, sir."

Autumn laughed, and Jarvis pretended to heave a deep, patient sigh. The meal progressed with small talk of things about the ranch, the children of Tom Willmar, the foreman, of the likelihood of a good fruit and hay crop. If Autumn had never before been grateful for the presence of old Hannah, she gave silent thanks now to that homely, faithful body who sat at table with them, unconsciously helping to tide them over a painfully difficult hour.

The meal finished, Autumn prepared at once to leave for Kelowna. She did not again urge Jarvis to accompany her, but before she got into her car she threw her arms about his neck and clung to him for a long moment without a word.

"So doldrums now, Daddy," she whispered.

He smiled at her, a grim, twisted smile, and she slapped him mannishly on the shoulder and then was obliged to turn away as she saw the tears start to his bleak eyes.

"So long, darling!" she sang and jumped quickly into the car.

"Take care of yourself," he said huskily, "and don't drive too fast Good-by—good-by!"

Unheedful of the Laird's warning she drove with reckless speed over the winding road, shutting out from her senses the painful beauty of the morning, with its assailing colors and perfumes of wildflowers that carpeted hill and glen. Where the sun slanted across a smooth hillock, violets, buttercups, larkspur and blue-eyed grass would be shining under dew as though beneath a great glass dome, and if she glanced aside in a sweet, leafy dell, there would be lily-of-the-valley and iris and lady's-slipper. But these were not for her now, she thought bitterly, as she stared at the road that ran crazily before her, uncurling like a toy serpent of painted paper.

Where the trail branched southward to Kelowna, she swung her car to the left and followed the road to Kamloops. The morning was young and there would be plenty of time to run in upon Hector Cardigan before going on to the Parrs'.

Old Hector was at work among his flowers in front of the house as she drove up. She blew her horn — he lifted his head and looked at her.

"Well, well!" he greeted her as she came through the gate. "You're abroad early."

"I'm running away, Hector," she replied with a laugh.

He cast an anxious glance at her. There was no way of telling what notions these youngsters might take. Besides, the girl was an Odell.

"From whom—this time?" he enquired, half banteringly.

"From myself, of course," she stated. "Who else?"

Old Hector shook his head. "You'll not find that easy, my dear," he observed. "But come along into the house."

She ran before him up the steps, through the open doorway, and into the drawing room, where all the shades were drawn to exclude the morning sun.

"Let's have light, Hector!" she cried and hurried from one window to another to lift the shades. "One would swear you were trying to hide something in this old house of yours. It's positively spooky!"

He watched her, a helpless expression in his eyes, then smiled faintly as she tossed her gloves and hat upon a chair and helped herself to a cigarette from a box on the table.

"There's little a man of my age has to hide from the world," he said slowly.

"But you keep that little very well hidden, don't you?" she countered, lighting her cigarette and tossing the match into the fireplace.

There was something in the girl's mood that made him apprehensive. He moved uneasily to his accustomed position with his back to the open fireplace and clasped his hands behind him as he looked down at her.

"One never knows how well a thing is hidden, my dear, until someone attempts to seek it out," he replied evasively.

Autumn looked about at the tapestry-hung walls, then flicked the ash from her cigarette.

"Nor how poorly it is hidden—until someone blunders upon it," she added.

He smiled and rocked back and forward on the balls of his feet. He wondered what the girl was getting at. "Quite so," he agreed, "quite so."

Autumn got suddenly to her feet and tossed her cigarette away. "What a romantic old fraud you are!" she said abruptly.

"Me? I have never thought of myself—"

"Hector," she interrupted him, "why didn't you tell me everything you knew when I came here to talk with you last week?"

He regarded her suspiciously. "Did I withhold something?" he asked.

She eyed him narrowly. "I am asking you why," she replied.

Hector's look was a challenge. "I prefer to be my own judge, my dear, as to what I shall tell concerning other people—or concerning myself, for that matter," he said.

Autumn stepped close to him and laughed a little shrilly, he thought, a little bitterly. "Don't you get hotty-toity with little Autumn, now," she chided mockingly. "You can keep your old secrets. I know all that's worth knowing about them, anyhow."

Damn the girl's taunting mood, Hector thought to himself. She was her mother all over again. How often he had seen Millicent turn suddenly flippant when she wanted to conceal her true feelings, whether of disappointment or a trivial thing or of grief so deep that it broke her impetuous, wild heart.

"The gesture seems oddly familiar," he observed.

Autumn's anger flared suddenly. "I will become even more familiar, then," she retorted. "I have discovered who I am. From now on, I'm through with trying to be what I was never meant to be! It can't be done. I'm going to be myself, Hector Cardigan!" The old man's face had gone strangely pale. "Don't look startled, Hector. Your secrets are perfectly safe with me—just as Jarvis Dean's secrets. If men choose to fall in love and kill each other over a woman, it's an affair of mine. Let the tradition go on. It's the Basque bell, Hector, and nothing that you or I can ever do will ever stop it ringing!"

Lace by Day and Lace by Night Continues Its Magic Dominion

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION is growing increasingly lace-inspired. As the style picture for the winter social season unfolds the importance of lace is emphasized throughout every phase of the mode.

Time was when lace was considered a special-occasion item but as regarded today, lace becomes a positive fashion "must" in every well-planned wardrobe. It's as good style to wear lace in the daily routine of affairs as it is to array in lace for those dramatic highspot moments when every woman seeks to look her loveliest and most alluring.

To be sure in the interest of good taste discrimination must be exercised in choosing the right lace for the right place.

With suits as popular as they are this winter the call for a collection of blouses becomes imperative. Of course there should be at least one lace blouse included in the list and several of varied-type lace will prove none too many. The lace blouse pictured to the right in the foreground of the illustration here with is styled to a nicety, with a softly draped front, wide full sleeves and a peplum which has a slight bustle treatment in back. Wear it with a velvet skirt and a cunning velvet vest for any afternoon occasion which calls for a dressup costume.

The new metallic embroidered laces make up beautifully into fitted jacketblouse types such as you see centered in the group, and if you are going to dinner dances this winter or banqueting with socialites, a formal jacket and skirt dress becomes a necessary luxury these times. Perhaps the charming model here shown will help you in making a selection when it comes to "looking up" a correctly styled evening dress. A truly beautiful lace is this in creamy beige embellished with metal threadwork achieving that air of elegance so characteristic of this season's fashions. The classic simplicity of the handsome flared skirt of monotone net sets off the glory of the superbly beautiful metallic embroidered lace basque to perfection. The resplendent bib necklace and wide bracelets are just such as fashion decrees shall be worn on gala occasions with one's handsomest gown.

When a very voluminous skirt is of black lace with a deep flounce of matching lace about the very wide hemline, when the bodice blouse worn with it is of cerise red satin with a mantillalike lace fichu enveloping the shoulders as pictured to the left in the group, you sense, and rightly so, that the costume reflects Spanish influence. You know also that the ensemble interprets the "last word" in high fashion. Also the message of exquisite black lace for evening wear is conveyed to you in unmistakable terms. The separate little shoulder cape or fichu is a decided feature of evening dresses this season.

The fair for lace is, however, not confined to formal dress. On the daytime program lace is assigned a leading role. One of the cleverest uses of lace is to trim sheer black wool or crepe afternoon frocks with black lace edging in exactly the same manner as val lace edging is used on lingerie dresses and blouses. You will find these lace-trimmed blacks very flattering and youthful in aspect as they are styled with naive simplicity.

Evening Glamor

There is no limit to the wealth of jewelry fashion urges ladies who are style-ambitious to wear this season, especially when it comes to attending night-time functions. In the picture hand-fashioned gold plated beads strung on heavy knotted silk cord, designed by Simonne Gerli, as new as the world of tomorrow, contrast dramatically with the old world elegance of an evening bag of ancient Egyptian silk brocade which is re-embroidered in gold thread. The dynamic young designer medallions the hundred-year-old Egyptian frame with butterfly motifs in Italian mosaic. The story of handbags for this season promises to be a thrilling one.

Hooped Peplum

Designed to fit over the newest wide-hipped evening frocks is the white crinkle wrap shown by Bruyeres. The coat is about finger-tip length and has a peplum fringed with white silk and held out with a wide hoop.

Sober Hues Found In Fall Clothes

The independence of 1940 fashions is further emphasized in its colors. Sober, discreet hues—browns, blues and greens tinged with gray—are much used, and new near-black shades—such as emerald and ruby black—have appeared. A gay Robin Hood red, often paired with dark forest green is the brightest shade on the winter color card.

The fabrics of which the new daytime clothes are made give important play to smooth supple wools of the duvetyn type, jerseys and mat crepes. Silk and rayon jerseys, lace, velvet and such stiff fabrics as brocades, satins, moire and faille are ready to go places at night.

Gold Braid Favored For Accessories

Collar and cuff sets of gold braid are being displayed in the neckwear sections. You can also buy gold braid millinary looking frogs and epaulets for shoulder decoration on your tailored black dress.

Effective new neckwear shows intriguing collars styled of gold kid, to wear with your afternoon black sheer wool or velvet afternoon dress.

Wide Inset Belts Appear on Frocks

Many of the incoming frocks are styled with wide inset belts that accent high bustline and small waistline. The trend to jeweled girdles is also noted. Belts of gold or silver kid give a dramatic touch to black velvet gowns that stress utmost simplicity in their styling.

Jeweled Accessories

Four diamond clips in two sizes are the jeweled accessories shown by Ardanse for evening frocks.

Pattern 2210

When medallions are as easily memorized as these, there's no excuse for not having a variety of lovely accessories. And it's all accomplished by crocheting and joining these simple medallions in mercerized string or finer cotton. Pattern 2210 contains directions for making medallions; illustrations of them and of stitches; materials required; photograph of medallions.

New and Important Easy-to-Do Fashions

IF YOU take a large size, then 1835 is a pattern you'll thoroughly enjoy, and make up time and again. Excellent for housework, with darted, unconfining waistline and deep armholes, it is so neatly tailored and smart looking that you can receive your supper guests in it, too, and wear it for shopping and turnabout. For home wear, make it of gingham or percale. For street wear, choose thin wool or flat crepe, and omit the pockets.

Pleats Are Smart.

If you spend most of your hours in an office or at college, then a dress like 1814 is a joyful necessity. It's blithe, tailored, becoming and youthful, with box-pleated skirt and button-front bodice, finished with a crisp little collar to keep it always fresh and new-looking. Make it up in plaid wool or in bright-colored jersey—or in both. It's too good a design to make up only once!

The Patterns.

No. 1835 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4⅛ yards of 39-inch material; ⅝ yard of contrast; 2½ yards bias fold or braid.

No. 1814 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 3¾ yards of 54-inch material; ½ yard contrast.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, and

Pepsin-ize Acid Stomach Too

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach-relief, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

RING THE BELL

An Italian who was working on a railway in Florida had been told to beware of rattlesnakes, but was assured that they would always give the warning rattle before striking.

One day he was sitting on a pine log eating his dinner when he saw a big snake coiled a few feet in front of him. Keeping an eye on the reptile, he began to raise his feet from the ground, and as he did so the snake's fangs hit the bark beneath him, no warning having been given.

"Son of a gun!" yelled the Italian. "Why you no ringa da bell?"

Activities Of The Chamber of Commerce

By the Publicity Committee
Avon Park Chamber of Commerce

The fact that the chamber of commerce is entering upon a campaign of real development and progress for Avon Park was well illustrated in the bi-monthly meeting of the board of directors Thursday noon last week. This interest is further shown by the fact that at these meetings the full membership of the board is always present.

Among the more important items were the reports of the committee on the trailer park. Letters were read from Frank L. Van Sppa, Royal Chief, Tin Can Tourists of the World, asking that the town provide facilities for at least 200 trailers. His opinion is that there would be upward of 200 trailers, but for more than 100 the association itself would cooperate with the town in providing proper quarters. This is an annual event and the national association wants to establish Avon Park as one of the yearly stopping places.

These people pay a weekly stipend for the accommodations they get, and are asking nothing from the city except proper parking spaces, lighting, water and toilet facilities. It is reasonable to estimate that this will bring from 250 to 300 people for 10 days each year, a number of whom will undoubtedly stop for the winter. These people all spend money and the advantages to Avon Park in securing this as one of the designated stopping places are manifest.

The publicity committee reported on the coming Hallowe'en celebration, Saturday, October 28th. Telegrams and letters were read from the Procter and Gamble Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, makers of Ivory Soap, assuring the chamber of commerce of their hearty cooperation in connection with our window soaping contest. It is proposed to have each of the 14 rooms of the grades from the 5th to the 12th each nominate 5 candidates for drawing on the windows with Ivory Soap. For this the Procter and Gamble Company are offering suitable prizes.

Another item of interest was a discussion of proper marking of state roads throughout the State with Avon Park signs. This is something the state road department undertakes on proper request and proper steps have been taken to advise the department on this matter.

These were some of the many matters discussed by the board in this meeting. A city is like any other big business, it has many various items that should be properly looked after. It is impossible for a city council to handle all of these things and a chamber of commerce, well organized and well run, supplements the council in such things as publicity, advertising, tourist attractions and many other things that make for a complete and progressive town. This is pure patriotism on the part of the men who run the chamber of commerce and they deserve the hearty and active support of all citizens. The remarkable work of the Orlando and Miami chambers of commerce in South Florida show what can be accomplished by well-directed cooperation.

It is gratifying to note the approval of the community in the new chamber of commerce headquarters. It stamps the chamber of commerce as a permanent institution for the advancement and progress of the community.

A few enterprising men have carried this work on. The campaign for membership starts at a later date. It is hoped and expected that the community at large will respond effectively when approached by the various committees for membership.

By the way, it isn't necessary for anyone to wait until the campaign for membership starts. The lists are open and anyone desiring to become a member may do so now by contacting Mrs. Mackay the secretary.

NATION-WIDE CITRUS SELLING CAMPAIGN

Citrus Commission Plans To Stage Three Sales During Season

Lakeland, Oct. 26—(Special)—Three national citrus sales, one each in November, December and January, have been requested in an effort to increase consumption of fresh citrus fruits, and other sales may be held later in the season if found necessary.

L. H. Kramer of Lake Wales, president of the Florida Citrus Growers, Inc., and L. W. Merwin, advertising manager of the Florida citrus commission, represented Florida at a meeting of the national citrus merchandising committee held in Chicago a few days ago at which recommendations for the first three drives were made.

The special merchandising periods requested by the committee are November 16 to 25, December 18 to 30 and January 18 to 27. The first sales drive will feature oranges while the second and third will feature oranges, grapefruit and tangerines. Meeting again in January, the merchandising committee will discuss at least three additional national citrus sales during the remaining months of the season.

Food distributing organizations represented at the Chicago meeting indicated they intended featuring fruits of all varieties at popular prices thoughout the coming season. Special effort will be made, of course, during the citrus sales periods.

Florida, California and Texas joined in requesting the special merchandising periods, which will be similar to sales conducted in previous seasons and known to have resulted in the movement of large additional quantities of fresh citrus fruits. It was the concensus of those present that special sales efforts would be needed to dispose of the current crop. Mr. Marvin had gone to Chicago with instructions from the commission to make the strongest possible effort in having as many sales drives as possible arranged.

Porter R. Taylor, of the federal department of agriculture, presided at the meeting.

Visit In Texas

E. G. Todd, Earl Hartt, Will Ward of Brooksville and Ivy Futch of Lake Placid left Saturday by plane for McAllen, Texas in Mr. Futch's Cessna. They made the trip in order to study the Texas Citrus industry and are expected to return the first of next week.

A PROCLAMATION

Mindful of the noble army of Saints, Witches, Hobgoblins, sundry and diverse, I, M. E. Covington, Mayor of the City of Avon Park, do hereby proclaim and establish Saturday, October 28, 1939 as the First Annual Ivory Soap Window Contest.

In celebration of the event, I hereby order that all city offices be closed on that day and that all good citizens join in harmless and wholesome merriment, as a tribute to the festival of All Hallow'een.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal of the City of Avon Park, this 25th day of October, 1939.

M. E. Covington,
MAYOR, CITY OF AVON PARK, FLA.

Bank and Postoffice will close at noon.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, The American Artists Professional League has designated the week of November 1 to 7, inclusive as American Art Week, when the people of the nation will be afforded an opportunity of viewing the art works of Americans, in exhibits shown in all parts of the country.

AND WHEREAS, a proper appreciation of art in general and American art especially is much to be desired, and realizing that we have in our community artists of unusual and outstanding talent,

THEREFORE, in accordance with the national plan for making our people more art conscious, I, M. E. Covington, Mayor of Avon Park, urge our people to join in the observance of American Art Week by attending the exhibit of local artists, as arranged by the Avon Park Art Club in the Jacaranda Arcade, and do hereby designate the week of November 1 to 7 as Art Week in Avon Park.

Signed and sealed at the city hall in Avon Park, Florida this 26th day of October, 1939.

M. E. Covington,
MAYOR, CITY OF AVON PARK, FLA.

Huge Circus Has Air Conditioned Big Top

With the world's largest big top air conditioned and restyled in interior decor, the Big Show—Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey combined circus—boasting the finest performance in the finest setting in its impressive history as the foremost amusement institution of all time, will exhibit in Tampa, Monday, October 30.

Gargantua the Great, the giant gorilla, the mightiest attraction in this or any other country, is this season displayed in the world's largest traveling menagerie, where the crowds may gaze close up at him at their leisure. As an adjunct to the menagerie, a horse tent, displaying in decorative Kiku of the Kentucky equine beauties, bought by John Ringling North, president of the circus, in an around Lexington last fall, connects with it.

Performances start at 2:15 and 8:15 P. M. with the new streamlined inaugural spectacle "The World Comes to the World's Fair," created, costumed and produced by Charles Le Maire moving in iridescent magnificence under the blue ceiling of the Big Show. Backgrounds of drapes and tasseled curtains, gold and silver center and quarter poles enhance the beauty of the pageantry, in which 2000 people and animals take part.

Terrell Jacobs, mighty mentor of jungle-bred beasts, will present the largest group of performing wild animals ever seen in America—50 lions and tigers.

Gargantua the Great, the world's largest and most ferocious captive gorilla, has grown since last year, and stands 5 feet, 7 inches when erect, weighs around 500 pounds and has an arm stretch of over 9 feet. His huge air conditioned cage is a sight in itself.

Heading the roster of features newly imported from Europe are the Pilades, who do the leaps from the long ramp and springboard over a row of elephants, standing side by side; the Zerbinis, foremost teeterboard acrobatic act of the Continent and cousins of the famous Riding Cristianis, who again head the bareback riding numbers; the Great Arturo, fearless tumbler and comic of the high wire; Hubert Castle, acrobatic comedian of the tight wire; the Alzardis, amazing novelty jugglers of fire torches the Laludys, springboard somersaulting marvels; the Iwanows, stars of the aerial bars; Albert Powell, contortionistic thriller of the flying trapeze; Albertino of London, Europe's favorite clown, and Lulu, the greatest woman clown of the age.

And back to the Big Show comes the circus glamour girl—dashing Dorothy Herbert, whose exciting layhacks on rearing horses and fire hurdling equestrianism are the delight of audiences everywhere.

The big standard features—the Flying Concellos, the Riding Cristianis, the Walkmirs, the Torrence-Dolores, Dolly Jacobs and her riding leopards and lion, the Pallenbergs and their wonder bears, and all the rest of them are back.

And harness races have come to the big top for the first time in circus history — pounding hoofs, flying manes, flashing sulky wheels.

the so-called 'white collar class.'

"I have heard said by the man on the street, 'well, we have a chamber of commerce of our own now.' Our excellent Mayor is going to get for us more publicity than any paid Secretary.

"Now, if you can get the wholehearted cooperation of all of the merchants, not only on main street but in the 'quarters,' think of the fine impression this will make. Let's benefit by the friendship of the entire town."

Earl Ware reported on the progress made towards the clean-up schedule for next week and announced all the white schools would be out on Monday afternoon in order for the older boys to help in the work. He said they had the necessary trucks and drivers and asked for helpers along other lines. The quarters will be cleaned up especially and he hoped for a better looking town.

Louis Alsmeyer, county agent, told of the pasture tour to be held next week and said they would be in Sebring Wednesday night. He invited everyone to take part in the tour for at least one day and see the progress being made in the cattle industry.

Fred Touchton, Jr., president of the senior class was a guest of the club. Other visitors were: R. W. A. Duncan of Frostproof, C. J. Lewis, Louis Alsmeyer, F. T. Haskins and M. F. McGee of Sebring.

PLAN QUAIL FARM

The Avon Park Conservation Council is planning a quail breeding farm and has permission from the state to trap 20 pairs of birds for breeding purposes. The city is loaning land for the purpose north of the home of Freed Peden, president of the conservation council. The necessary pens will be built and at first the work will be of an experimental nature.

Florida's Sugar Harvest Started Last Monday

CLEWISTON, Oct. 26 — (FNS) —Florida's six-months sugar cane harvest started Monday when the United States Sugar Corporation started an army of men at work on their plantations here. Grinding operations started the following day, Jay W. Moran, vice-president and general manager, announced.

If the harvest can be carried through without restrictions from federal regulations, more than 4,500 men will be given continuous employment for a period of more than six months at wages higher than those paid in any other agricultural enterprise anywhere else in the world, Moran said.

The opening of European hostilities sent sugar skyrocketing because Continental producers, who had been supplying 30 percent of our sugar needs under provisions of federal law, chose to sell their sugar to European buyers and Cuba became reluctant to sell raw sugar to United States refiners, knowing that our refiners would have to pay Cuba's asking price in the end.

However, in spite of this situation, the price of refined sugar has declined within the past several days due to the fact that beet sugar factories in the west and Louisiana and Florida sugar factories are now making available American-produced sugar. Prices for sugar will be held at a common-sense level if the entire American market is opened to the American producer, Moran stated.

High School Band Has New Instruments

Through the generosity and cooperation of Avon Park's civic organizations the high school band is boasting the possession of several new instruments, Band Master E. L. Roberts announced this week. The new instruments are a Sousaphone, a baritone horn, a baritone saxophone and an oboe. The last two have never been used in the band here before.

Funds for the purchase of the instruments were donated by the former city council, the Rotary Club and the P.-T. A. There was also a balance on hand in the band fund but there is still owing over $100 on these new instruments and Prof. Roberts will welcome further donations from any source.
