

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consistent Features—Who's news, new, to get something on Ho-ratio Alger. Here's a boy who won his way to eminence by watching a clock, all the time.

Alger's Theory though he was 38 years old and had been just a clock-puncher instead of a watchmaker before this hair-pin turn in his career routed him to fame. We cite Dr. Frank Conrad, the "father of radio broadcasting," recently awarded the gold medal of the American Institute for his "guiding genius in developing the world's first radio broadcasting system."

The master clock which ticked off his higher destiny hung in the plant of the Westinghouse company in Pittsburgh. It was a highly reputable old clock, but Mr. Conrad didn't altogether trust it. He said that an employee made a bet as to which had the more accurate watch, through a week of time-keeping. Mr. Conrad refused to accept the decision of the office clock. In an unused garage near his home at Wilkensburg, he rigged a crude receiving apparatus to catch time signals from the naval station at Arlington, Va. He taught them, but he also caught some added starters which he could not at first explain. Employing a primitive direction-finding device, he located them as apparently springing from a slag heap about a block away. He didn't find the source there, but he did find it a few steps farther on with one John Coleman, among the lonely impresarios of the first feeble birth cries of radio.

That was in 1912. Mr. Conrad incidentally won the bet on his 25 watch against its $40 rival, but he forgot all about more time signals. He and Coleman teamed their researches and began filtering ghostly phonograph recordings through the intervening slag heap. The rest is an old story—the historic KDKA Harding broadcast. Dr. Coleman's 200 radio patents, his honorary doctorate from the University of Pittsburgh and his award of the Liebman, Edison, John Scott, and Lamme medals.

He is still curious and will take a sharp look at anything interesting or important, which alerts him to his into diligent research in botany, biology and astronomy. He has a lined, leathery face, steel-gray hair and, naturally, ever-watchful eyes.

IF THERE are any good ball players among the European refugees, they can get good jobs and nice pay in the Caribbean league.

General Trujillo After Players for Caribbean Team

Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo, boss of the Dominican republic. He has been angrily accused of raiding the American National Negro league, and the Pittsburgh Crawfords have been mourning that no dark-skinned shortstop in safe when the general starts building up his infield.

The little, brown, diligent head-man of Santo Domingo is unpredictable. Since he took power 10 years ago, the Junta of exiles here has been stacking him up as another Hitler. But just now, he signs a contract admitting 500 families of exiles from Germany and Poland, donates them 30,000 acres of land and says provision will be made for 100,000 additional settlers in the future. The contract grants citizenship to the newcomers and pledges their freedom from "mobsterism, discrimination or persecution."

He was a farm boy who learned fighting and ball-playing with the marines, during an eight-year period, ending in 1924 with the end of occupation. He's a fast shortstop. In the Dominican army he romped up through grades from private to general.

In 1928, he tipped over old President Velasquez and took the country. In the framework of a democracy, he made himself a 100 per cent dictator and the enemies admit that he has made a tidy little nation out of a jungle. He put the opposition to jail.

He has the cleanest of the Latin-American countries and boasts that there is neither crime nor unemployment in Santo Domingo. He decreed that all automobiles should have letters on their license plates, "Viva Trujillo!" He also had congress officially proclaim him, "benefactor of the fatherland."

He has a beautiful residential estate, patrolled night and day by the army, and three country estates, where meals are served on schedule, as he has implanted the tradition that he is apt to appear anywhere, any time—and be really is.

Star Dust

THE new radio program sponsored by Westinghouse is one of the most interesting and significant on the air. It is broadcast from Pittsburgh every Thursday from 8:00 to 8:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, on 97 stations of NBC's blue network. It is beamed to Europe, South America and other foreign lands.

Its aim is an important one. When Kenneth Watt, who produces and directs it, was asked to make up "Musical Americans," he had three things to remember. Primarily, he was to give American music to his audiences. He was to try to please all musical tastes; to win over those who look down on popular music, and inspire a sharper appreciation of serious music in those who think they can't understand it. And he was to give young American musicians a chance.

So, on "Musical Americans," Deems Taylor is commentator, Raymond Paige conducts the orchestra of 102 men, from the Pittsburgh Symphony; it is the largest orchestra on any sponsored broadcast. And each week a solo musician of exceptional talent is featured. The principal music schools of the country have been asked to recommend their star graduate students for these appearances.

Deems Taylor, Raymond Paige and Kenneth Watt are top men in their fields; Westinghouse has spared neither time nor effort to give us a superb program, made up of the music of our own country. Thursday should be "Musical Americans night" in its homes.

"Musical Americans" may play no small part in international relations. Mr. Edward C. Johnston of New York feels that it is tremendously significant that the program is broadcast to South America in Portuguese and Spanish. When you hear the American announcer speaking, in South America a native announcer speaks at the same time, the American announcement being cut out for those few moments. Mr. Johnston feels that a cultural exchange between the two countries aids greatly in developing the mutual understanding which is so desirable.

Stuart Erwin's mother cut his hair the last time in 25 years just the other day. Erwin started work as the milkman in Sol Lesser's "Our Town." He plays the milkman. "I want you with a home-made haircut," Director Sam Wood told him. "You know, one of those ragged, mud bowl ones."

So Stuart Erwin went home and talked it over with his mother. She whipped out a pair of scissors, put a towel around his neck, and went to work.

The trained nurses of America have felt that those Hollywood producers had a lot to learn about nurses, judging by some of the pictures in which they have appeared. So they formed a committee to judge all moving pictures having nurses in them. The first picture to win their approval is RKO's "Vigil in the Night." Carole Lombard and Anne Shirley are the actresses, who, according to the American Nurses' association, really look and behave as they ought to.

Do you want to take a free trip to New York? Every week about 3,000 people who do, write to Dave Elman, of "Hobby Lobby," and about 3,000 more write to "We the People." If you believe that you'd fit into either of those broadcasts, here's your chance.

During 1939 Elman brought some 200 people to New York, an average of five for each "Hobby Lobby" program. An average of $150 was spent on each guest.

"The Name Is Familiar"

BY FELIX B. STRECHMEYER and ELMO SCOTT WAYTON

Tom and Jerry TAKE some egg whites, egg yolks, powdered sugar, brandy, rum and whiskey, mix it all up, and you have a Tom and Jerry. Take the name of America's greatest bartender, Jerry Thomas, mix that up, and you again have Tom and Jerry. Yes, it was Jerry Thomas, head bartender of the old Metropolitan hotel at Broadway and Prince street in New York city who concocted the drink that immortalizes his name.

Because his name wanted him to become a minister and because he was the author of a book—the famous "Bartender's Guide"—wastards, was called Professor Thomas. That was not such a far-fetched title for a bartender of the 1860s who could write a book—imagine a bartender of that era who could just write!

Jerry Thomas was born in New Haven, Conn., in 1825. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Daniel Thomas, sent him to college so he could be a preacher. But, at the age of 20, he quit school and left parental influence to carry on an experiment to determine whether or not college men could imbibe alcoholic liquors in unlimited quantities. His conclusions were in the negative but he stayed close to the subject he loved by becoming principal bartender in a New Haven saloon.

In later years he became head bartender at the famous El Dorado in San Francisco where he invented the Blue Blazer, then he went to St. Louis where he invented the Tom and Jerry. He tended bar all over the United States, Central America and parts of Europe, starting the Europeans especially with his $4,000 worth of silver bar utensils and his unlimited repertoire of mixed drinks.

Butterick Patterns LITTLE more than hundreds of millions of Butterick patterns have been used all over the world. They have been a boon to hundreds of thousands of mothers in making clothes at home for their families. Now whom do they have to thank—Miss Butterick? No, not her. The inventor of this low-cost dressmaking aid was a man, Ebenezer Butterick.

After some experiments he cut his first salable patterns June 16, 1853. The first patterns were folded by members of his family. In September he had to take extra rooms in a building nearby and five girls were hired to do the folding—but Ebenezer still managed to keep his beard out of the way and kept on with the cutting.

The business moved to New York and continued to grow to the point where single cutting machines cut thousands of patterns of each size at a single stroke. The word "Butterick" in electric lights on the top of the 18-story Butterick building, completed in 1904, was then the largest electric sign in the world. But the building was not finished until a year after Ebenezer Butterick died.

Sandwich JOHN MONTAGU, fourth earl of Sandwich, English politician, gambler and sportsman, born in 1718, was English ambassador to Madrid and lord commissioner of the admiralty—but his only contribution to posterity was the invention of the sandwich.

His private life was a very immoral one and he was so intent upon games and gambling that he neglected his duties. He was ordered to dine on bread, and put it between two pieces of bread, follow him with several of them and hand one to him when he was hungry. John, Earl of Sandwich, how the sandwich came into being and where it got its name. And it practically makes the Earl of Sandwich the father of the American picnic.

He was a very contemptible person, hated more by the English people than any other nobleman of the eighteenth century. Among other things, he was guilty of murdering his mistress—an even greater crime than inventing the thing that has made picnic possible—but not much greater. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Several thicknesses of old Turkish towel together for hot dish or pot holders.

Carving lamb roasts is much easier if they have been boned and tied before cooking.

Felt hats can be cleaned by rubbing with a not too fresh or too stale piece of bread.

French fried potatoes will be more crisp if allowed to stand in cold water for half an hour before frying.

To keep plants cool from turning yellow, expose them to light daily.

Tarnished egg spoons can be quickly cleaned by washing with a rag dipped in salt.

To clean a clock, saturate a piece of absorbent cotton about as large as a hen's egg with kerosene oil and place it in the bottom. Close the door and let the cotton remain for three or four days. Then take it out and swing the pendulum. Unless something is broken the clock will go all right, as the fumes from the oil clean the works.

Threading curtains on to their rods again after washing is difficult—and if they are the blunt end of the rod may tear them. Avoid this by fitting a smooth thimble over the end of the rod before threading.

Save soap scraps, all of them. Put into a pan and cover with cold water; simmer until every bit is melted and the liquid is clear. Put in a jar and keep near sink. It will set into a jelly.

1940 Congress Sets the Stage For Executive-Legislative Battle

Both Republican and Democratic Congressional Members Are Ready for Tussle Over President Roosevelt's Budget and Spending Plans.

By WILLIAM BRUCKHART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Congress soon will have completed the second month of its 1940 meeting and the most significant thing to come out of the session is a situation containing all of the elements necessary for another good battle between the legislative and executive branches of the government.

It is much too early to enter a forecast that President Roosevelt and his opponents—Democrats and Republicans—will come to grips. But a slip of even small caliber on the President's part would throw him into the path of a substantial section of the congressional membership. That is exactly what some of the opponents hope will happen. It is, conceivably, a thing which Mr. Roosevelt and the New Dealers hope will be avoided.

The condition stems from Mr. Roosevelt's budget message. As I reported to you early in January, the President's budget declarations sounded of a good many folks suggested, however, that these pronouncements had come at the very beginning of the session and predicted a change in the scenery before the end. Those opponents hope to feel that the President was playing a bit of politics with the general subject of economy—spending.

But congress, generally, decided to take the President at his word. "If," they appeared to be saying, "the President really wants economy, if he wants to reduce government spending, boy, old boy, we will be with him in a big way."

So it has come to pass that the President's own proposal conceivably can throw out of a place where plainly he does not wish to be, at least from a political standpoint. Hereafter, it will be recalled that there have been frequent declarations for reduction in government spending and each time it has been overcome by backdoor operations of New Dealers.

Economy-Minded Legislators Dominate the Scene

As far as the way progressed on the open stage, the economy-minded members of the house and the senate appear to dominate the scene. They have cut deeply into several of the President's pet projects. They have cut, or have proposed to cut, deeply into the President's program for national defense for which Mr. Roosevelt has been costing billions as against former years when the cost of army and navy development was measured in hundreds of millions. Moreover, the legislators have shown courage in nipping agricultural spending for a good many millions, and that hurt Secretary Wallace and his crew.

Now all of this has been going on under the "inner circle" of the President. He is clamoring for continuation of the fun they have been having in spending taxpayers' money. There is some doubt, too, that Mr. Roosevelt has changed over completely.

Attention might be called in this connection to the fact that, in the national budget itself, Mr. Roosevelt left numerous avenues of escape from what appeared to be a definite commitment toward retrenchment as stated in the budget message. Secretary Wallace looked off the match on one of these. Mr. Roosevelt said the agriculture appropriations had been squeezed down by the budget bureau to the very limit. If the funds were sufficient, according to the President, there had to be a continuation of good business. A good many of the folks in the department of agriculture have been saying both publicly and privately that the volume of business is going to slide off during the late winter and spring. Thus, more money will be needed.

Wallace Wants Share Of Government Spending

In the complaints by Secretary Wallace is another tipoff. The secretary feels that there is no logic in cutting the total expenses of the government completely out of his share of the swing. He fails to understand why the cuts have not been made proportionately in amounts of estimates for other agencies of government. I think he has his teeth in the budget.

STAGE IS SET

While William Bruckhart feels it is a bit too early to enter a definite forecast that the President and congress will come to blows over governmental items like the budget, economy, war and spending, he feels that congress has set the stage for such a battle. Formerly, the President doesn't want such a battle but his opponents don't mind, says Bruckhart.

Sheerest Black Lace Is Used In Unique and Fetching Ways

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

INTO the story of modern costume design the black magic of exquisitely sheer lace is writing a chapter of fascinating interest. The latest discovery about black lace is that instead of being "oldish" looking, as we were once led to believe, it really is as flattering to the debauche as it is to the woman who registers in the "live-gown-at-for" class.

Note how artfully handsome black lace is introduced in the fashion picture. If you are invited to an important function you could not make a more suitable choice than a gown of shimmering, crisp yellow tulle jacketed with a basque of fine black lace beautifully fashioned and daintily transparent, as shown in the illustration, to the left. A flattering lace jacket of this type is a grand possession, for you can wear it with various costumes. Being high necked and having three-quarter sleeves, it is not too formal for your "at home" reception nor too informal for an important party elsewhere. The quaint use of wide black lace to border the yards and yards around hemline adds industry to the chic of this adorable gown.

With a dress so distinctive as this of course one will want a few superb jewels to finish the look and beauty. The ornament worn at the hairline in Hollywood style, is a new "headring" worth noting, being a yellow diamond set in Spanish gold. It is suspended on a ribbon

Ornate Detail Flower Jewelry Is Harbinger of Spring

If you want to feel the entrance of spring tingle through your veins and if you want to cause others to feel just like that at night of you, wear a flower jewelry. One of the prettiest designs is a bracelet of yellow-tinged white enamel daisies. And here's good news—you get a bracelet and clips to match. With the new pastel tones you are wearing under and over a necklace of pearl material blown up into featherweight colorful flowers that are delectable. These perfectly charming flower gadgets do wonders for black or navy frocks. Add these gaily colorful jewelry flowers to flatter! Well, just look in the mirror and see.

Spring Fabric-Call For Twill Effects

"I will take so many yards of twill," that's the way our grand-nieces used to say it when they were buying material for the new suit or dress and the prospects are we are going to be saying just that as the spring season comes on. Repp is one of the worsted that is being heralded as ever so fashionable for the coming month.

In fact the trend is decidedly toward twill effects. There is every indication that navy will be competing with black. So look for a season of handsome suits, coats and dresses, some of them featuring some one or other of the new twill weaves.

Amber Toned Frock Has Strong Appeal

A delicate sheer fabric and heavy silk jersey, both in a creamy appeal, are combined in a romantic evening gown designed by Edith Head. The dress itself is made of sheer silk, cut with a swirling circular skirt and a bodice styled like a basque sweater. The bodice is embroidered in rope-like bands of gold threads and the whole creation is worth over a slip of matching silk jersey.

PLAN REFRESHMENTS TO SUIT THE SEASON

When You Serve a Crowd
Whether it's your responsibility to provide unusual eats for the Senior skating party, or an inexpensive menu for the church supper, cooking in quantities does present problems!

Unless you have recipes designed to serve large numbers, it's safer to make quick breads, cakes and cookies, according to standard family size recipes, doubling them, perhaps, but no more. Proportions of ingredients change as recipes become larger, and it's no simple matter for an amateur to guess at them.

Plan refreshments to suit the season and your guests. When equipment is limited, the help limited, and the number to be served is large, select foods that are easily prepared and served, and foods that won't be hurt by standing.

For the simplest sort of refreshment, select a hearty, satisfying and substantial dish to serve after a sleigh ride in the frosty air. Spaghetti or macaroni make inexpensive, mainstay dishes for a church supper or midwinter meeting of the P. T. A. Served with a crisp salad, hard ring and fresh fruit for dessert, Italian spaghetti makes an unusual and easy-to-serve meal.

You'll find the tested recipes below practical when you entertain a crowd, and if you're planning a smaller party, my booklet entitled "Easy Entertaining" will give you suggestions for menus and recipes, too.

"WHY NOT SELL FLORIDA'S"

A salesman in New Haven, Connecticut, in replying to the Citrus Market Survey sent out by the Florida Public Service Company, has this to say: "Would suggest to you to print Florida out where anyone interested can see it very plain." A housewife in Wareham, Mass., comments, "Consumer has no way of identifying (Florida Fruit)." Northerners say why not sell "FLORIDA'S," as well as selling by brand.

The Florida Public Service Company wishes to express its appreciation for the encouragement and cooperation given by local organizations and individuals identified with the Citrus Industry. Without their active support the above suggestion and scores others made available through the Citrus Market Survey would not now be available to interested parties in Florida.

SEEK CHANGES IN KENTUCKY HIGHWAY LAWS

Increase in Weight Limit for Trucks Would Help Citrus Industry

LAKELAND, Feb. 22.—(Special)—Florida citrus interests were watching closely development in the Kentucky legislature in connection with a bill which would permit the passage over Kentucky highways of trucks weighing considerably more than the present limitation of 18,000 pounds. The initiative has been taken by the Florida citrus commission to have the new law enacted.

Truck shipment of Florida citrus to the territory north of the Ohio river and into the United States is a line drawn from Buffalo to Pittsburgh is practically prohibited because of Kentucky's present stringency of truck weight laws. Another factor of importance involves the inability of the Florida citrus industry to seek a better rail rate to that territory until competitive truck rates are established.

J. R. Crenshaw, secretary-manager of the Growers and Shippers League of Florida, testified before the motor transportation committee of the Kentucky lower house of the legislature a few days ago. His organization has been retained by the Florida citrus commission, which has been fighting to have Kentucky loosen its truck weight law for several years.

Mr. Crenshaw in his testimony emphasized that Florida citrus trucks cannot and do not operate into or through Kentucky at the present time, except to a limited extent.

"Thus," he pointed out, "a great industry in one of your sister southern states is being kept out of your markets here and beyond here to the north, losing its rights to other states further removed from you."

The commission is of the opinion that the citrus industry of your state and those of your sister states to the north are deprived of the opportunity of having fresh citrus fruits at a lower cost to themselves.

Mr. Crenshaw told the Kentucky legislature that 187,314 cars of citrus fruits, melons, berries and vegetables went into interstate commerce during the 1938-39 shipping season. With a crop of this thousands of acres of citrus groves yet to reach their maximum, he said "it can very readily be foreseen that as to citrus fruit alone Kentucky will within the next few years be faced with a much more serious problem of distribution than it has at present. Even now we are seriously handicapped by a lack of distribution in the smaller cities and towns of the country. Within recent years motor truck transportation has done much to relieve the situation. Trucks can come into our state, purchase fruit and distribute it to the smaller towns and villages that do not have the advantage of other modes of transportation; or shippers, many of whom own their own trucks, can distribute fruits to these smaller communities."

After describing the territory lost to Florida citrus because of Kentucky's virtual barrier of trucks, Mr. Crenshaw pointed out that in that area are located such large fruit auction markets and consuming centers as Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit, and hundreds of smaller cities, towns and villages that could and would annually take several million boxes of Florida citrus at prices the consuming public could afford to pay, and which "at the same time would return a profit to our growers and shippers if we were favored by a more liberal size and weight law."

Mr. Crenshaw estimated that a profitable pay load could not be hauled on a truck with a weight limit of less than 30,000 to 35,000 pounds. The bill under consideration also would increase the length limit of trucks from 28 to 32 feet and the total truck and semi-trailer limit from 30 to 35 feet.

Kentucky and Tennessee have proved difficult states for citrus trucking, although Tennessee some time ago raised its weight limit to 24,000 pounds, which has helped considerably.

Among others who testified in favor of the Kentucky bill was the assistant attorney general of Kentucky who stated it would produce considerably more revenue than the present law, and an engineer of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, who said it would place truck weight, height and length limits more in line with other states and that it would impose no additional hardships on the roads because of gross weight.

The citrus commission approximately two years ago filed suit for an injunction to force Kentucky to raise its truck weight limits, but before a hearing could be held the United States supreme court reversed a three-judge federal court which had upheld such an injunction granted in South Carolina. This demolished the commission's case in Kentucky and the litigation was stopped.

Andrews Family 100 Years in Florida

ORLANDO, Feb. 22.—(Special) Supporters of United States Senator Charles O. Andrews are not content with his determination to remain on duty at Washington while aspirants for his post increase their activity throughout the State.

They point out he not only has won new friends by his devotion to duty, but that those who have stood by him through the years are certain to continue steadfast. Senator Andrews' record alone, they insist, fully justifies their loyalty, and they add there are many other reasons for his numerous lasting Born and reared in West Florida, the Senator gained part of his education in South Florida, in Polk County. He taught many hundreds of Floridians in public schools of Florida and thousands of Floridians in the State while financing his education. He served as a member of the judiciary in Walton County, as well as in Central Florida, where he also practiced law. He also served as a Supreme Court Commissioner at Tallahassee.

While a pioneer Florida family, which has paid taxes in Florida for more than a century, Senator Andrews not only knows Florida and its people, but he knows their problems. This his supporters assert, accounts for his ability to give them understanding service.

Beattys Open Zoo At Ft. Lauderdale

Florida has acquired another well-known personage as a permanent resident—not one, but two—for the Beattys, Clyde Beatty, the world's most famous trainer of animals and his charming wife, Harriet, have chosen Fort Lauderdale as their future home.

The Beattys have secured a large tract of land, just north of that city on Highway No. 1, which is to be known as "Clyde Beatty's Jungle Zoo." Here will be exhibited to the public at all times a fine 100,000 zoological collection. Here, daily, Clyde and Harriet Beatty will present their thrilling and spectacular animal acts. At the zoo, a large steel arena has been set up, and here Clyde Beatty will present the greatest group of jungle-bred lions and tigers ever assembled together at one time.

Harriet Beatty presents her thrilling—tiger riding on the back of an elephant. There will be other exciting acts—clowns, acrobats, dancing elephants, aerialists, performing bears and chimpanzees.

In the unique zoo, the visitors may stroll through a reproduction of the African veldt where lions roam about in various dens behind water barriers; tigers, deer and antelope, lion, zebra, and water buffalo graze together in one open corral; monkeys chatter and scold in their rows of cages; elephants weave back and forth begging for peanuts. One may ride through jungle trails on low Swans, geese, ducks swim gracefully about on shaded pools, and flamingoes stand so still, Phasants, peacocks, and demolese cranes wander at will about the garden paths. Tinkling waterfalls sparkle and gleam in the sunlight. Rows and rows of palm trees, gorgeous flowers of every hue, crotons, ferns, reeds, water plants, and blooming shrubs are everywhere in abundance. Don't miss seeing this wonder jungle zoo. See Clyde Beatty in action.

Where are the Cars of YESTERYEARS?

Do Fords ever wear out?—built in value to give years of good service at low cost. You probably don't expect to drive your new Ford for the next ten years, but it is good to know that the endurance of the very best materials is there. This, too, is one reason why Fords command such a high resale value. Today more than ever before Ford is the Quality Car in the low-price field. Only Ford methods could build a car so fine to sell at such a low price.

Well, ten years is a long time in the life of any automobile. Yet...over one million 1939 Model Fords are still in operation. This is more than twice the number of any other low-priced car of the same Model year. It is almost as many as all other makes combined—regardless of price!

Here again is evidence of Ford quality
