THE SEMINOLE INDIANS ARE BEING GROSSLY MISTREATED

(Jacksonville Messenger)

Few people in Florida who have not had occasion to view their plight by close and intimate touch can begin to realize the really serious situation which is now confronting the remnants of the once famous Seminole tribe of Indians.

The rapid encroachment of the white man and his modern improvements, of which the drainage of the Everglades is among the foremost, has continued to press the Indian back and back into the fastnesses of what remains of the Everglades, until today he has little, if any, dry land upon which to grow crops or to raise cattle and where he is unable to maintain himself on game and fish as of old. It is not so easy for the Indian of today to catch his game. He is not permitted to roam about where game abounds at accessible points.

A report prepared recently following an investigation of the Seminoles' condition by competent authorities, says:

"The dried-up condition of the soil, natural water causes having been removed, has caused fish and game to become extinct and the agricultural conditions so changed that the Seminoles lost their pumpkin and corn crops and at this time are eking out an existence by using up the rest of their hogs. Still, they retain their old time stoicism and are making no complaint. The old medicine man or head of the Istopogan canal band of 125 is silently waiting the call to the happy hunting grounds, where he believes that game and cool water will be abundant."

The federal government has been pitifully lacking in its attention to the Seminoles and it is to be hoped that the state has not been much better. It is a crime that the government should permit absolute wiping out of the famous tribe. This is the prospect unless some liberal appropriation is made for their future.

FLORIDA NEWSPAPERS AVERAGE HIGHEST OF ANY STATE IN UNION

"Taken as a whole Florida's newspapers are superior to those of any other state in the Union," in the opinion of Professor Bristow, agricultural editor and professor of agricultural journalism of New York State College of Agriculture, Cornell University.

Professor Adams made the statement in the course of a lecture on "Standards of Journalism" to the class in agricultural journalism of the Florida College of Agriculture in Gainesville. He was invited to lecture to the students by Dean Wilson.

After having acted as judge in the recent Florida newspaper contest at the state fair in Jacksonville, he also declared "the exhibit made by the University of Florida at the state fair is the finest thing of its nature I have ever seen."

Turning his student audience to think, he said well before threading aside their desire to become interested in newspaper training, Professor Adams asserted the calling is as lofty as that of any other profession and is as much dependent upon high standards as law, medicine or the ministry.

"In fact," he continued, "it has been the high standards and the lofty ideals of the newspapermen of this country, and of your state in particular, which has raised the journalism of this country and of your state to the very high level to which it has attained."

Maternal Method
When little Percival arrived at school on the opening day, he carried the following note to the teacher: "Dear Teacher: Our sweet little Percival is a very delicate, nervous child, and if he is naughty—and he is apt to be naughty at times—just punish the boy next to him and that will frighten him so he'll be good."—Wayside Tales.
