WOMAN PRESIDENT? NOT YET. WORLD GETTING SMALLER. THREE AGES OF BARBARISM. STONE, BRONZE, IRON.

This is the political stage of "roxy reports." They pour in on La Follette, Davis and Coolidge. It is told that Ohio, Iowa and Kansas are already his.

Davis is told that with the South and New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, etc., he is ELECTED NOW. La Follette's followers say they have "twenty-five States sure." The "roxy" days are pleasant, only some one is sure to be disappointed.

The Government has ordered a group of flying machines that can travel through the air, on the water and on land. Only one step remains, the amphibian and submersible flying machine pulling in its wings and becoming a submarine. That will come last.

John R. Voorhis, oldest officeholder, aged ninety-five, predicts a woman President. She will come, but not in fifty years. Many women in the United States would make Presidents better than any, with two exceptions, since Thomas Jefferson. But man, proud man, dressed in a little brief authority, will take a long time to give up his SUPREMACY COMPLEX.

Men of low intelligence sincerely believe that they are in some mysterious way women's superior, and such men defeat Presidential elections. If a woman becomes President before 1950, it will be through promotion of a Vice-President. That might happen within a generation.

The world really is becoming a small place. American fliers, coming home by the shortest route, get on Arctic clothing as they left England.

Their trip was from England to Greenland and then they will be getting Summer thins ready for their joyous, triumphant landing in warm America. Around the world in eighty days? was a fairy story. Around the world in six days or less will be REALITY, before 2000 A. D.

The scientific world notes the discovery in France of a new anesthetic called "somnifera." With no bad after effects this anesthetic makes possible the longest operations. It is injected into the blood, causes the patient to remain half asleep for thirty hours, which is excellent for major operations.

It is hard to believe as you read of scientific methods for avoiding pain that when anesthetics were first used they were savagely denounced as works of the devil. Earnest preachers declared that God WANTED us suffer and it was a sin to thwart His divine will.

Joseph Greenberg, of New York, will return to his home with new knowledge of this country and greater respect for the size of Texas. He left Brooklyn in a little automobile to bring his son back from "somewhere in Texas," and told his wife he would be gone "about three days." He will be surprised to find it will take him about as long to cross Texas as to cross all the rest of the American continent. When you've entered Texas on one side and come out on the other, you have covered almost half the distance from ocean to ocean.

When historians write of the three great periods of barbarous development, the stone age, bronze age and iron age, they will say: The full industrial development of the iron age, reached at about the year 2000 of the period humorously called the Christian Era, may perhaps be called the beginning of civilization.

Men had developed faint ideas of right and wrong. But while they had begun to leave their great fortunes to education and science instead of seeking to bribe their deity and buy eternal bliss for their own worthless souls, they retained the worst features of earlier barbarism. The discoveries of science in chemistry and physics were used for war murder on a gigantic scale.

The drags of the race committed murder with their own hands. The so-called upper classes lived in shameful luxury, utterly indifferent to poverty, disease and ignorance around them. They even herded young children of the poor into factories and mills, graining them into profits for their own use.

On the whole, that culminating period of the iron age was inferior in dignity and decency to the stone age.

WOMEN OUTSIDE THE HOME

Miss Ann B. Chincholl, who took a position with a publishing house in Topeka, Kansas, eight years ago to pay her way through college, is now treasurer of the company.

Mrs. Sarah Friedman is New York's fourth woman official. She was recently appointed Deputy Secretary with a salary of $4,500 per year.

Mrs. Golda Wesella of Emeryville, Calif., just completed painting a smokestack 150 feet high. She is considered one of the newest steeplejacks in the country.

His Honor Decorates Beauty

Miss Allen Riggan, American swimming star, was one of the Olympic athletes to receive the New York City Decoration at the hands of Mayor Hylan. Both seemed to enjoy the occasion.

BOB HARRIS SELLS BIG "PINEAPPLE RIVER" TRACT FOR $100,000

The sale of the R. I. Harris holdings along the Alapattine some four miles out from Punta Gorda, while not the largest from the standpoint of the money involved, is probably by all odds the most important real estate transaction recently consummated in Charlotte county.

It involves about 1,500 acres of fine land lying along the beautiful creek between Adline and the lower bay, a thirty-two room club house in close proximity to the Miami Trail.

This is the first piece of the deal that has become a valuable, though negotiations appear to have been under way for some weeks. With the name of the purchase as is withheld, it is said that they are known to nearly everyone in the eastern part of the United States as representing one of the largest and wealthiest concerns on the coast. It is understood that the price paid to Mr. Harris approximates $100,000.

The greatest significance of the deal lies in the fact that the new owners have acquired this property as a business development, it being understood that they will shortly begin the carrying out of an extensive and aggressive program. This program it is stated will follow somewhat similar lines to the Coral Gables enterprise on the east coast, and other like undertakings elsewhere.

Particulars of the plan are not yet available, but it is gained from reliable sources that when the property is placed on the market, buses will be run between Punta Gorda and St. Petersburg, Tampa, Lakeland, Orlando and other important towns, and "the state, in bringing prospective buyers to the coast, and other like undertakings elsewhere."

tempted to acquire this property and it has been reported that they were the purchasers and while they may have attempted to purchase the Harris holdings they were not successful.

The tract involved in this deal, is one of the most desirable for development purposes to be found anywhere in the state and without doubt will find ready sale in whatever form it is offered when placed on the market.

It is recalled here that this property was purchased by Mr. Harris about two years ago and that at the time he began operations he offered to allow any one who wished to become interested with him in the project, but at that time apparently there were few who had money to invest in such an undertaking, and perhaps fewer who had the vision to foresee the possibilities. Mr. Harris' friends and associates in another section attempted to discourage his investment in the property at that time when there was practically no sale for real estate locally. Not at all discouraged, however, Mr. Harris went ahead with his plans, cleared up a large acreage along the watercourse and erected a handsome thirty-two room club house, literally having the material for the latter out of the timber found on his property.

It was his plan to promote development such as will be undertaken by his successors, but before he had proceeded to the point of actually offering the property to the public, the opportunity presented itself to dispose of his entire holdings to advantage.

LAKE STEARNS

Mrs. J. M. Guest returned from an extended visit with relatives near Atlanta last week. She is now making plans to go with her husband, Rev. J. M. Guest to New Orleans, where he will enter a special Baptist school for young men preparing for the ministry.

L. T. Johnson motored to Arcadia last week.

Thorney Rogers visited his parents last week. Thorney is an engineer on a boat running from Lake Okechobee to Palm Beach and Miami.

It was gathered from reliable sources of another real estate deal being closed here last week for about two hundred acres of citrus land, same to be developed at once.

With hard surfacing material pouring in Lake Stearns in a steady stream, it is fast closing the gap of the Josephine-Lake Stearns five mile stretch. The contractors having some two miles complete, it looks now that they will finish before schedule time.

L. B. McLeod, of the Mickler & McLeod Construction Co., is on the job with an army of men, trucks and other machinery and reports that he will finish the job in six weeks and be gone. From the looks of his equipment he will make good his statement.

Some Hike

The above picture shows Joseph Frank Miler of New York starting his hike around the world with an album in which he will gather the signatures of royalty. The volume will be carried in a push cart. President Coolidge was the first to sign his name in the book.

3,000 COSTUMES USED

IN MAKING "YOLANDA"
 Marion Davies, the Star, Wears
 Seventeen in Course of Play,
 One of Which Cost $2,360

More than five thousand costumes will be seen in "Yolanda" the new production in which Marion Davies is starring and which will have its premiere in this city Thursday, Sept. 4 at the Avon theatre.

Miss Davies herself wears no fewer than seventeen costumes. One costume which she wears when she meets her betrothed, the Dauphin, son of Louis XI, cost $2,500 and is so heavily laden with gems that it weighs thirty-three pounds.

In preparation for the production of "Yolanda" Miss Davies devoted several months of research to acquire herself with that period of history to be reproduced on the screen. She studied prints and books in New York, London and Paris in order that the gowns she wears might be authentic.

Everything worn by Miss Davies in both roles of Princess Mary and Yolanda, from the flare of a head-dress to the buckle of a shoe, has been reproduced in exact detail. The lace used in embroidery was crocheted in France and copied from exhibitions in the museum of Cluny and the Louvre.

DESOTO CITY TO LEVY MILLAGE FOR PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS

The City Commissioners of DeSoto City called a mass meeting of the residents and tax payers of the city, which was held at Red Beach Lake picnic grounds. The matter of public improvements was taken up by those present, and it was decided to instruct the commissioners to assess the property and arrange a budget, to be taken care of by a sufficient millage to cover the present needs. The commissioners consist of Dr. E. E. Etheredge, mayor-commissioner; L. T. Farmer, commissioner of finance; Percy Etheredge, commissioner of public works.

by Uncle John

The joy of renderin' service to our patient feller men has met with God's approval since it ain't no tellin' when, So, I greet the August mornin' with rejoiced pluck, an' devote my artist-energy to raisin' garden truck.

I reckon there is millions in the hole that reaches Oil—but, a feller sleeps lots sounder as a tiller of the soil—there's too blame many debits to a "pool" that ain't been struck—I'd rather handle credits as I hoe my garden truck.

With everything around me fairly leasin' to my taste, and with appetite so capable that nothin' goes to waste—if that ain't life's completeness, then I reckon I am stuck—but, I can't take time to any when I'm raisin' garden truck!

If we follow our ruthers—then our life is like a song—the cabbage plant and onion sett don't treat a feller wrong—then the crispy, crackly lettuce—on the sweet corn in the shuck—we can't ignore the dividends from raisin' garden truck!

YOU NEED NOT FAIL

There were just two things that Tom Kendall could do well. One was to share his father on Sunday mornings and holidays; the other to press the old man's trousers once a month. Tom's father, John, was a back woodsman in the hills outside of Lynchburg, Va. His mother and sister had been burned to death in a forest fire. He was scarred and partially crippled in the same flames.

In 1904 when Tom was 15, his father was killed. Tom made his way on foot to Richmond where he secured employment as a rafter, boy in the freight yards who opened the Southern Railway. He was paid

$5 a week and was allowed to sleep in the rear of a locomotive shop. Two years later with $96 he had saved from his scanty earnings he had in a stock of candy, cigars, magazines, fans and gum and was permitted to sell them on passenger trains. Tom took him to read and write and by the time he was twenty-one he had educated himself, equivalent to the first year in high school. Incidentally he had saved $1,425.

With this money he went to New York. He opened a small tailor shop on Broadway. In one year he built up a trade that encouraged him to open a larger shop.

Just before the world war he moved to Montreal where he opened a still larger tailor shop. On the day war was declared he sold his business for $2,100 and enlisted in a Canadian regiment. He was wounded in the Argonne and wounded in a later engagement. At the close of the war he returned to Montreal, drew out his money and bought a prize chicken farm in Ottawa. Today he is married, has a partial home, two growing boys and is called wealthy. He says he will eventually quit business and buy a home and enjoy the life of a country gentleman.

Sallie's Temptations

Meeting Mr. Wright—Woman Hater

I dressed leisurely and with unusual care. I always enjoyed getting into my flimsy silken underthings. Then I stood and surveyed my evening frocks. I decided that I would choose the most sophisticated of them all. I decided on an orchid georgette, starred with rhinestones that glinted like fire in the moonlight. A scarf of finest tulle with wispy ostrich ends and a bandeau of brilliants for my bob completed my attire.

Marjorie had said that Curtis Wright was an impetuous person who disliked all modern girls. It did not make the slightest difference to me what Mr. Wright thought, but the challenge from Marjorie was too much for my pride.

I heard Johnson let them in the front door and then voices in the hall. First I had thought of letting them find me curled up cozily on the chaise-longue in the sun-parlor, yet maybe that pose would be too suggestive of the clinging-vine. So I decided to walk down the steps that led into the living room was always effective. I walked down with satisfactory results, before.

"Sallie!" exclaimed Father, rising and coming forward. "This is a peculiar seldom bestowed upon your dear old Dad. I am especially glad that you decided to grace the table tonight because I have brought Mr. Wright home." He turned to the tall, immaculately groomed person standing at his side.

"Wright, this is my daughter." The guest bent low over my hand, with an air of courtesy, but the suggestion of a movement was tinged with satire.

"Do you say, Wright, would you like to drink?" he broke in at the wrong moment. "I've some excellent whiskey, or maybe you'd prefer a little rum." "I might as well and they moved over to Father's corner cabinet. In a moment Johnson appeared, in answer to Father's summons, with the interesting paraphernalia for making highballs.

I felt the need of a little boost myself, after the drinks I had had, and I felt the need of a little boost myself, after the drinks I had had, and I felt the need of a little boost myself, after the drinks I had had.

"Father would pass out of the picture if I did," I answered, "but I really need something to pick me up."

"Can you suggest any way that might be of service?" Although he was perfectly gallant in his faultless manner, I felt that he was laughing at me.

"Oh, it isn't a matter of life or death," I said flippantly. "I guess I can survive." I turned toward the radio and in a minute the room was flooded with the soft melody of a husky orchestra playing a fox-trot.

"Good, Sallie, we'll have music with our meals." Father said jovially, coming over to me and pinching my cheek. "Wright, she's a mighty fine little girl."

I was furious with Father and for the first time in my life, his "little girl" attitude irritates me beyond words. He might just as well have stripped off my dashing evening gown and clothed me in pinafore. I hated to be made ridiculous in the eyes of Mr. Wright, whose whole manner stamped him as a man of the world.

Dinner was announced. I was glad I had used candles for they create an interesting atmosphere. I can remember my mother having often said that any woman was more alluring in their radiance than that many romances were born under their faint and mellow glow.

"What's the program for tonight?" Father asked.

"A dance at the Willow Branch Club, Alma Davis' dance for her visitor. Then later I'm hoping that some of the crowd will go to Gong's and get glow men."

"Dear," Father began, "do you think you should be going about to these funny Chinese places at all hours of the night? I saw where a clo-suey house was raided a few nights ago because, as the paper had it, some of the society buds and their escorts had been going there and smoking opium in search of a new thrill. I know the place, you couldn't be anything like that and of course there's always a chapone."

"Certainly, Father, and hoop-skirts! For they go hand-in-hand." "Why, Sallie, what do you mean?" demanded Dad.

Before replying I noticed that Mr. Wright, though he had remained silent, was interested in the conversation. "Just exactly that, dear old fogie, Chapones aren't good this season—we aren't a bunch of kids, you know. Father and we are perfectly capable of taking care of ourselves." It wasn't often that I talked so plainly to Dad, but I was determined that Mr. Wright should not be under the impression that I was a child.

"Sallie, Sallie, of course I trust you, my dear," agreed Father. "I expect you to use your own judgment about such things, only please use discretion. Please don't misunderstand me now, darling, I know you do none of the things we have gossipied about town."

"As a rule, most of that is propaganda inaugurated by reformers who are past the age of being tempted themselves, don't you think?" suggested Mr. Wright.

Whether he thought so or not it was the polite thing, at that moment, for him to have said. However, his remark was surprising because, from what Marjorie had said, one would have thought he was in sympathy with the "Gossips." "Miss Sallie," Johnson appeared at my side. "There's a gentleman to see you. I told him you were all at dinner, but he said he had to see you at once, ma'am."

ADMISSION 10 AND 20 CENTS. MATINEE 3:30 P. M. — AVON PARK, FLORIDA

GEORGE SEBRING OFFERS SITE FOR AUTO TOURIST CAMP NEAR CIRCLE CITY

Secretary G. A. Nash who has just returned from a trip to the east coast where he has put up road maps directing traffic to Sebring, told at Friday's Board of Trade luncheon of seeing between St. Augustine and Daytona at least fifty foreign cars going south. In the twenty tourist camps he passed there were from four to six foreign cars in each one, showing the early exodus to Florida. He asked what provisions were being made toward securing proper accommodations for increasing tourists in this city. George E. Sebring replied that he had an excellent site, near the city within reach of electricity, water and other conveniences, which he would fit up for a camping party if the trades body or city would secure the proper management for it. This land is high and well drained, shaded with magnificent oaks, and most suitable for this purpose. No action was taken, but the matter will be given immediate attention.

The shortage of houses was discussed, and the pressing need for moderate priced homes was stressed by every speaker. In this connection, the necessity for securing building permits was brought up. It was urged that this be given publicity, as many were ignorant of this ordinance. At this juncture, Allen Altvalter, a city councilman, rose and said that the officials of the city themselves were often the worst offenders, and that recently much trouble had developed from this laxity observing the laws. No less an official than the mayor himself, who had, in his capacity of city attorney the preceding term, drafted the building permit, had been found guilty of gross violation of this law. Only at that morning, forced to pay his permit, and it was now ready for presentation. Secretary Nash then rose and presented to the mayor legal document with impressive seals and many yards of ribbon, giving him permission to build, erect, construct or make or to have built, erected, constructed or made, a building, barn, shed, coop or other structure, to house one red rooster and six red hens. Also at any future time, to have, hold, station or otherwise keep, or to register and six red hens if he so desired or found convenient. Col. Lawrence accepted the permit with due gravity, and said that, though he had served on the city administration for many years, he never before had any official been in his opinion, guilty of gross turpitude. However, on looking over the city books he had found no entry of the two bills which he had just received. Nothing but five empty bottles remained in the city office as evidence of the transaction.

ASSESSED VALUATION DOUBLE MILLAGE TO BE LOWERED

The tax roll for Avon Park was reviewed and accepted at their regular meeting held Thursday evening. The total assessed valuation has been raised from $1,000,000, in 1923, to $2,114,110, from which there will be deducted for churches, schools, fraternal organizations and widow's exemptions, $111,100. At the September meeting, the millage for the coming year will be levied and considerable reduction will be made. This places Avon Park in a more desirable position financially, and permits a higher bonded indebtedness for public improvements. This action on the part of the council is meeting with approval.
