

ENGLANDS MAKE TRIP FROM HERE TO CAPITAL FOR $66.00

From Avon Park to Washington for $66.63 for three persons, stopping at hotels and taking meals at restaurants is believed to be a record for auto tours north. The result was accomplished by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. England and son, Bobby, who left here July 30 in their Buick.

A summary of their trip, showing troubles encountered and desirable routes follows:

First day—Avon Park to St. Augustine, 223 miles. By route of: Frost-proof, Lake Wales, Haines City, Kissimmee, Orlando, Sanford, Deland, DeLeon Springs, East Palatka, Hattiesburg, St. Augustine.

Comments on first day—Left Avon Park 11:20 a. m.; arrived St. Augustine 8:30 p. m. Stops made: Haines City, Orlando, Crescent City, Hattiesburg. Actual driving time 7 hours 35 minutes. Roads very good except for detour between DeLeon Springs and East Palatka. Tolls paid crossing St. Johns river at Sanford, $25.

Second day—St. Augustine, Fla., to Macon, Ga., 431 miles. By route of: Jacksonville, Lake City, White Springs, Jasper, Valdosta, Tifton, Ashburn, Cordele, Vienna, Perry, Macon.

Comments on second day—Left St. Augustine, 6:55 a. m.; arrived Macon 7 p. m. Driving time, 11 hours 5 minutes. Stops made: Jacksonville, Lake City, Valdosta, Tifton, Ashburn, Cordele. Tolls paid crossing bridge going into Jacksonville, $25. On arriving at Jacksonville, had intended going north by way of Waycross, but found that roads between Jacksonville and Waycross were in bad condition, which necessitated a detour about 14 miles. This was very rough, therefore we decided to go by way of Lake City and Macon, which made the distance over 100 miles farther and if we had known that the roads were in this condition, previous to leaving Avon Park, we would have taken route direct from Avon Park to Lake City. Roads from St. Augustine to Jacksonville were rough; roads from Jacksonville to Lake City, exceptionally fine; from Lake City to Georgia state line, fairly good; from Georgia state line to Macon, in good condition, but very dusty as there had been no rain through Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina for some time previous to our trip.

Third day—Macon, Ga., to Rockingham, N. C., 338 miles. By route of: Gray, Milledgeville, Sparta, Warrenton, Thompson, Augusta, Batesburg, Columbia, Camden, Cheraw, Rockingham.

Comments on third day—Left Macon 7 a. m.; arrived Rockingham 7:40 p. m. Driving time 11 hours. Stops made: Sparta, Augusta, Columbia, Camden. Tolls in crossing bridge at Camden, $25. Roads over this route, dirt roads, with the exception of those into towns; all very good.

Fourth day—Rockingham, N. C. to Richmond, Va., 200 miles. By route of: Sanford, Pittsboro, Chapel Hill, Durham, Oxford, Clarksville, Keyville, Burkeville, Amelia, Richmond.

Comments on fourth day—Left Richmond 7:40 a. m., arrived Richmond 9:40 a. m., driving time 9 hours 40 minutes. Stops made: Sanford, Durham, Oxford, Clarksville, Keyville, Burkeville, Amelia, Richmond.

Rockingham 7:40 a. m., arrived Richmond 9:40 a. m., driving time 9 hours 40 minutes. Stops made: Sanford, Durham, Oxford, Clarksville, Keyville, Burkeville, Amelia, Richmond. Roads very good, we were required to make detour about 4 miles between Oxford and Clarksville, but on return trip road had been completed and detour was not necessary, the new road being an exceptionally good road. On arrival at Clarksville, was advised to make trip through Richmond by way of Keyville and Burkeville. Found roads in very good condition but cross roads poorly marked which necessitated delay in making inquiries as to proper routes, so therefore on return trip south, made trip from Richmond to Clarksville by way of Petersburg, Dinwiddie, Lawrenceville, South Hill, Boynton, Clarksville. Found roads on that route little rough but believe it advisable on account of marked road as one saves time by going that route. Parties taking route as outlined for this day from Rockingham to Richmond, should also be careful in taking route by way of Durham Chapel Hill, Pittsboro, instead of going by way of Raleigh as we were informed that the road between Raleigh and Henderson is in bad condition, and the other route which has been outlined above is not only shorter but better roads.

Fifth day—Richmond, Va., to Washington, D. C., 137 miles. By route of: Ashland, Bowling Green, Fredericksburg, Stafford, Quantico, Alexandria, Washington.

Comments on fifth day—Left Richmond, 7:45 a. m., arrived Washington, 1:30 p. m., driving time 5 hours 30 minutes. Stops made: Fredericksburg, Stafford, Quantico, Alexandria, Washington.

Comments on sixth day—Left Richmond, 7:45 a. m., arrived Washington, 1:30 p. m., driving time 5 hours 30 minutes. Stops made: Fredericksburg, Stafford, Quantico, Alexandria, Washington.

By routes taken, the distance from Avon Park, Florida to Washington, D. C., was 1,329 miles. Actual driving time on the trip was 45 hours. The expenses of the trip were as follows:

Hotels and Meals $22.19
Tolls $1.43
Miscellaneous Auto Expense $8.75
Miscellaneous personal expenses $2.10
Total $66.63

The return trip was made with 4 in the party and over the same route as the trip going north, with the exception of road between Richmond, Va., and Clarksville, Va., this route was by way of Lawrenceville and South Hill, instead of Keyville and

No chance of advertisement in current issue copy must be in our hands by 5 o'clock a. m. Wednesday.

It is gratifying to see a girl who isn't just named awarded the crown of Miss America.

All are not honors that gladden. For instance Williamson county was named after Tomlinson.

No wonder lots of folks don't appreciate the K. K. K. Very few of us can outlive over politicians.

Governor Daves' "ambitions" for his Florida State Journal offer a worthy platform upon which to aspire for favor.

St. Augustine is "cashing in" on nightly band concerts through the summer. What a racket! Avon Park trying it this winter?

To B or not to B is merely the abbreviation for to bond or not to bond, and old Hamlet's soliloquy is just as potent now as then.

All things come to those who go get 'em. Avon Park's charter in Rotary is being engrossed, says word from the district governor.

With its charter being engrossed and almost ready for delivery the Avon Park Rotary Club will be a full-fledged infant, pretty soon.

"God made legs but man made the knicker," said the element of humor," says Thorne in the Palatka News. Thorne is getting his addition and subtraction mixed up.

Have you noticed the real estate advertisements of successful developments? If not look them over and you will get a great many pointers on how we can sell Avon Park.

Have you noticed how the old Ridge is moving? Hardly a day goes by that some Florida paper hasn't got something to say about progress in the scenic Highlands.

Governor-elect John Martin still says he's going to see that some roads are built with Florida road funds. Apparently he isn't the 100 per cent politician lots of folks said he was when he made similar remarks five months ago.

Southern Construction no sooner advises us that "hollow tile is now within reach" than the war-loving and esteemed T. U. rises to protest but the boneheads that make it still refuse to make it in a handy size and therefore the brick will continue to be the weapon of the modern day even if the tile is within reach.

Lake Wales is preparing to dress up with a marvelous new park plant—athletic field, golf links, playgrounds and a lovely spot around Crystal Lake. One reason Lake Wales is growing is because those folks aren't afraid to send out "missionaries" with Uncle Sam's imprint on them.

With our $2,000,000 assessed valuation, we are still letting folks off mighty easy.

If you were to ask folks here to sell their property for what it is assessed, you'd have no trouble finding that all this holler about taxes is just man's natural desire to get rid of a surplus something "on his chest."

NATIONAL DEFENSE DAY PLANS

Progress is reported in almost every part of the country, with the making of plans for National Defense Day, September 12. When the idea of calling the roll and demonstrating possibilities was first exploited, there were many who felt that it was not advisable or timely. Some have contended that this would be practically a call to arms and a display of force, perhaps with the intention of frightening some nation or parading before others, says the Times-Union. The promoters of the plan have spent some time since in explaining that the matter to the roll on September 12 will mean nothing more than to read the statement: "I am a loyal citizen and would do whatever was best in any emergency."

From the scattered notes concerning preparations it now appears that throughout the nation, with few exceptions, the states will see their sons and daughters giving a few hours perhaps to a demonstration which means faith in the Stars and Stripes and a readiness to defend the flag in time of trouble. Parades and speech-making will be the features of the day, practically everywhere, and crowds which witness and applaud the long lines of men and women on the march, will be testifying to their loyalty and willingness also. It is not to be expected that all should march, but a smiling face, a cheer or kindly word means approval, and that is highly important.

A matter that was not at first very well understood and caused hesitation when organizations and individuals were asked to march, was the notion that appearance on Defense Day in any active participation of the program involved some definite obligation of service. A recently declared that this is not the case. Pledges and approving speeches will be on the same terms as any other patriotic demonstration.

Declaring that feeling toward the country which they represent. The patriotic Day program, says the Times-Union, has been brought into vogue for consideration by the special committee. It should be a happy and memorable occasion. It is proposed to mobilize of mind as well as physical force, and in view of the program already made for its carrying out, should serve to aid in the nation's defense and counter the nation's enemies.

Avon Park has one pretty thing to show you, and that is the city hall. It is a new one, and the city hall is a new one at the same time we vote bonds for improvements. There is no denying that there has been lots of criticism of folks by other folks. We have heard men called selfish and other men called grasping, but we have had our doubts.

There is one thing all must come to learn—and that is this: Lots of men seem selfish when they are only standing on their own convictions. Our job is to change their convictions. But those days are other days. There is no room for criticism of selfishness, stubbornness nor of unfairness in the reaction that has met the suggestion for extending the limits.

Opposition from all sides was expected—and there has been none. The largest property owners affected have been almost unanimous in their hearty support of the suggestion, and though we realize there is going to be some opposition, we must not be too ready to jump to the conclusion that selfishness accentuates this opposition.

Let us rather admit every man's right to his own opinions—and will have to admit the right of the majority to rule.

Let us proceed to show him that none of the bonds already voted by Avon Park will stand against his property. None of the new extensions can be taxed to pay interest or principal on the old bonds. The only thing that can be assessed against the new property is new bonds and expenses of city government. On such a basis a levy of taxes would hardly run more than $1 per acre per year.

Let us convince the doubting that it is only fair that they make some contribution to the expenses of building the Ridge metropolis. But let us be fair with everyone, and bitter towards none.

ASK A DEMONSTRATION. Officials of the Florida Public Service Corporation appeared before the council Thursday night asking payment for fire hydrants just because they were fire hydrants.

The council very correctly informed the visitors that the city wanted fire protection. The city isn't renting fire hydrants. What the city is supposed to pay for is fire protection. We can't buy all the fire hydrants we want for $1 per year that the company asks for mere rental.

So if it was just the hydrants, we'd buy them.

We hardly believe the company or its officials is anxious to deliberately fool the city, and when they come here Thursday with a written proposition or agreement, perhaps the council will do them a favor as well as the city, to ask for a demonstration of the fire protection these hydrants offer.

We don't think that Mr. Ellis or Mr. Coyt realize that there isn't enough pressure in the water mains to throw a stream of water fifteen feet from the nozzle of a garden hose. Perhaps if this fact was presented to them, they would remedy it before asking for any rental.

If the council will bring these two gentlemen to ye editor's home just two blocks off of Main street they can discover that they can't throw over the top of a six-year-old grapefruit tree, much less over the roof of a one-story bungalow. The writer knows because he tried it Monday evening and with full pressure at the faucet, and the nozzle wide open, he couldn't get the chimney on a one-story, low-roofed cottage. And had there been a fire burning his house down, the writer couldn't have gotten close enough with the hose nozzle to throw a drop of water on the flames.

What the city is supposed to pay the public service company for is fire protection, not hydrants.

TRUE OR UNTRUE. Motorists are complaining again at the treatment being received from police officers of Avon Park. Charges of "high-handedness" and charges of "profane language" are being made.

Charges like these must not be allowed to go unheeded. Thorough investigation should prove or disprove them. If they are not true, the police officer is entitled to exoneration, publicly. If they are true he should resign.

But the council has no right to permit the charges to drag along without taking notice of them.

The situation is getting into print again, much to the disadvantage of Avon Park. We reprint one article on this page today. It comes from a reliable business man of a neighboring city. Only a few days before another visitor comes with a bitter treatment, and though circumstances sometimes lie, and though one side of the question is not all of the story, the stories told don't look well for Avon Park.

If enemies of Avon Park are lying about the city, it is strictly up to the council to find it out and "give them the lie" publicly and demand that such articles as we reprint today are retracted. If the reverse is true and they are not lies—but the truth then it is strictly up to the council and the mayor to remove the cause.

It is not fair for men or women to accept one side and pass judgment with only the complaint before them.

It is just as fair for men or woman or council or mayor to refuse to get both sides.

And having both sides it is rank injustice if proper judgment is not passed.

Give Consumer His Money's Worth And Be Sure of Future Business

True—fruit brings a high price as the season opens.

But consider this. Shipments of green or immature fruit kick the bottom out of the market wherever they go—and ALL growers suffer during the remainder of the season.

Why? It's simple.

The fellow who eats your fruit wants what he pays for. That's natural. If he buys Florida fruit at the beginning of the season, and is stung with some green stuff, he won't buy any more, no matter how we may advertise or try to sell it. That's natural, too.

He's going to tell his neighbors and friends how poor Florida's crop is this year. That's certain.

And the grower, at the end of the season, does his figuring in red ink. That we've seen happen.

Don't ship green fruit. Give dollar for dollar value. It pays.

Growers can make certain that their fruit is marketed properly if shipped under the Seal of the Florida Citrus Exchange. Seal of the Florida Citrus Exchange is Federal Inspection—guaranteed by the Florida Citrus Exchange to conform to the purposes of the law.

Sallie's Temptations

SALLIE CHANGES HER PLANS

"You don't approve of flappers, do you?" I asked Mr. Wright, as we left the driveway and he turned my roadster into the dim-bowed road.
"As far as I know," he responded, whimsically, "I don't believe I've ever known one of the home-wrecking heart-devastating creatures at close range enough to pass judgment." Once again I felt that he was ridiculing me, or either he preferred not to commit himself on the subject.

"Oh, you needn't think you can crawl out of it," I persisted. "I've heard all that you've said about us. I was determined to have his opinion so that I could quote him to the girls who would be clamoring for news when they reopen an unpleasant subject, it is almost necessary that I ask you which side that will bring us to the Davis'."

"Honestly, Mr. Wright," I implored, "after hearing the family discussion on that subject, did you really have any idea that we were going to be hurt?"
"But your father—I am his guest—I recall his insisting and telling you—"

"Did YOU ever do everything your father told you to do?" Mr. Goody-Goody interrupted. "And as for your being implicated, I guarantee to protect you. If father finds out that we ditched the Davis funeral, I won't let him scold you for leading his little, bitty baby-girl astray. Really, I won't. I'll protect you," teased, with maddening solemnity.
"All right; you win," he announced with a sort of I-can't-stand-much-more-of-that in his resignation.
"Where, then, Mr. Princess? I am at your service."

"To the right," I commanded, and moved over as I gave the direction.

"We're going to the party at Atlantic Beach. The bunch knew I'd get there some way or other."

He faced me for a moment, and I noticed from the rays of an arc-light that there were little lines around his eyes, caused, not so much from laughter but from a keen, appreciating gaze.

I asked him to raise the windshield. I loved the breeze through my hair. It always gave me the thought of freedom and the wide world.

"Wish you'd step on it," I moved over a bit closer. The road stretched ahead with beckoning fingers, and there swept over me the strange, no-mad emotion that comes when you follow a road that leads on and on with no turning.

"Yates' will be an oasis," I said enthusiastically. "Slowly but surely I am sinking. By the way," I continued, "how many did you and father have before dinner?"

"Fifty bitty girls shouldn't ask so many questions," he mimicked me perfectly, but I noticed that the speed of the car increased slightly. At last the light of the road-house! The subdued yellow glow reached through the darkness—friendly and alluring.
"Good-bye, and I'll introduce you to some of those notorious flappers," I tried to look like a deacon and, taking his hand, started toward the aurora cast by the wrought-iron lanterns.

"Hurrah, its Sallie!" yelled one of a group standing on the verandah. I could see that the party was well under way, and that it needed no assistance on our part to keep up its hilarity. They crowded about us, and, although I knew I was one of them, I realized that some of their enthusiasm was of the half-fellow-well-meet variety that makes even an unpopular arrival at a party feel welcome and a popular person a riot.

"Hear ye all!" I announced, hopping onto a chair and drawing my words like a State Fair squawker, "is the famous Mr. Wright I'm introducing the well-known architect who builds the floors of his houses with women's hearts—to tramp on." I ended. Mr. Wright laughingly threatened to pull the chair from under me and there was one thing I observed about him: while he was certainly not at ease in our crowd, he had evidently made up his mind to enter into things as whole-heartedly as possible. The way he took my "Good-bye" was nothing short of splendid sportsmanship.

"Drink anything, Sallie?" asked Ted Billings, who had been standing by my side since our approach was signalled.
"Yes, anything!" I responded, and we moved toward the well-known room at the far end of the Inn, overlooking the ocean. The pleasing sound of cracked ice against the rest of the crowd, and soon there prevailed a spirit of gay camaraderie.
"I'm famished," I sighed dejectedly, holding out my glass to the "bar-tender." "Refill the prescription. That was a pretty good sample."

I began to feel relaxed. Then the unexpected happened.

LANDSEN TELLS HOW PULLETS

DO NOT DEVELOP TO DEVELOP PULLETS. Do not let the pullet come into laying before she is from five to six months old. If she is allowed to lay before this age her eggs will be small much longer than if she starts later. The greater profit is to be made in the long run, when the pullet is not started laying too young. Her system is also better able to resist diseases when given plenty of time to develop. Do not be too ambitious to see young hens producing; give them time.

This suggestion is by H. B. Landsen, extension poultryman of the Florida College of Agriculture. Discussing this subject further, he says:

"Great care must be given to pullets that start to lay in late summer, to make sure that they do not go in to molt late in the fall and stop laying just at the time when eggs are most valuable. Any change in feed or severe change in weather without proper housing facilities will stop production enough to throw these early pullets into a molt."

"If your young stock is developing too rapidly, cut down on the animal protein. If you are feeding milk, take it away from them. If you are feeding a mash along with the scratch, cut down on the amount of mash."

"If you mix your own mash cut down on the amount of meat scraps, powdered milk or whatever protein you are using. Whatever change you make, go about it gradually so that you will not throw the birds off feed. By close observation of your flock you can tell just about how much protein to give them."

"Make sure that your stock, both mature and growing, has sufficient shade, green feed and fresh water. Keep the water fountain and mash trough under the same shade in warm weather. Cut the green feed and give it to the hens rather than make them run out into the hot field after it. They cannot stand the hot sun long enough to eat all the green feed that they should have."

PRIZES FOR PALM PICTURES

Mrs. C. M. Wilder, Daytona, chairman of the Natural Resources Committee of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, has announced prizes for photographs of the most beautiful group of palms or palm-groves, and also for the most magnificent oak in the state. The details of awarding the prizes will be announced later. This action is in cooperation with the state-wide beautification movement to challenge attention to the beauties of our palms and oak trees.

BEAUTIFICATION MEET OCT. 9

The third state-wide beautification meeting will be held in Tampa on October 9th and the Florida Development Board's Beautification Committee is preparing a very interesting program for the three sessions, noon, afternoon and evening.

EXTRA ONE SALE

Actually Giving Merchandise to You

Yes, we know this is a most unusual offering, yet we are making it to you without reservation

Here Is the Plan

During this sale upon the purchase of a half dozen of any item an additional one will be given to you free. For example, you purchase six towels at the same price and you actually receive seven. Likewise, if you buy six yards of material, silk or cotton, an extra one is added free.

Not only the things listed here, but every piece of merchandise in our store is subject to this plan. However, on items where buying in half dozen lots is not practical, such as dresses, blankets, etc., special price reductions have been made. All merchandise otherwise retains its original marking.

On the other hand, if you purchase a half dozen pairs of stockings at different prices—as a mother supplying a family would do—a pair of hose at the average price of the six will be given free, or an equivalent allowance in price will be made on a more expensive pair.

With the many needs Fall brings, such as preparing the kiddies for school and fixing up the home for those longer indoor hours, mothers will indeed find this a most economical way to amply supply their various requirements. That one extra will come in handy time and time again.

Children's Union Suits

Fresh, clean, perfect fitting underwear keeps the little folks physically and mentally comfortable. You'll want them contended during the confining hours of school. Plenty of changes in underwear will help to keep them happy.

New, fresh, dependable merchandise—no printed word can do justice to the remarkable savings we have in store for you. You must come and see for yourself.

NO MIXING OF INVESTMENT WITH CITY PARK PLANNING
Citizens urging the extension of the Mall have no idea of purchasing twice as much property as needed for parks in order to hold half of it for rise in price to eventually pay out the park purchase.

Through some suggestion of the idea, The Pilot has, certainly made it seem in the issue of Sept. 4 that the entire Brickell property west of the DeBordenne apartments was to be purchased and half used for park and half held for resale.

The park extension committee states that the entire tract is to be used for city purposes.

HOYT EWING PULLS IN THIRTEEN POUND BASS TO LEAD FOR FISH PRIZE

Hoyt Ewing, aged twelve, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Ewing of Istokopka, gathered Friday the second largest bass he has caught this year. This one, however, outweighed his previous catch by three pounds, tipping the scale at thirteen pounds even. He has entered his catch for the Highlands county prize for the largest fish caught in the county with rod and reel. The young fisherman who is small for his age, tells a vivid story of his fight to land his prize, and speaks professionally of the weight and style of his line and hooks. He is awaiting with much eagerness the return this winter of the crack fishermen of the north to his father's fishing camp, with whom he can now exchange fish stories, instead of being the silent listener.
