For years I have been listening to tales of tourists and winter visitors about how Florida ticks them for hotel accommodations, for meals and in other ways, and while in a few instances such complaints may be justified I've found from personal experience, as have many other Floridians, that our state is no worse than at other places. I got a big kick out of listening to Burton Schopf, president of Tamiann Trail Tours, tell me of his experiences in Louisville last week during the Kentucky Derby.

Being called north on business, he found his suitcase packed and sent him to stop off and take in the Derby at Churchill Downs. He arrived in Louisville to find every hotel filled and, in the best kind of a time getting a "cubby hole" of a room at the nominal rate of $25—in fact the clerk assured him he was lucky to get that. Food was as hard to get as was room, but he managed to satisfy his hunger with a plate of plain old fashioned ham and eggs which set him back one buck, and the coffee was extra at 15c a cup, take it or leave it!

"What?" I asked. "No 6c orange juice?"

"If there was anything in Louisville being offered at 6c," he says, "I didn't run into it." Then he launched into a description of his experience at the race track. The taxi from his hotel to Churchill Downs was $5. All grandstand seats were sold for $3.50 and an admission ticket for standing room only.

With some 50,000 people milling about the grounds, the problem of finding a vantage point to view the race was something to worry about. After being pushed and shoved by the milling mob, he finally managed to work his way to within about 75 or 80 feet of the track, where he was jammed so tight it was all he could do to breathe.

By this time the first race was on, and, according to Burton, all he saw of it was the tops of the jockeys' caps as they flashed by. Noting that some folks were standing on boxes to gain a better view, he made inquiries and managed to rent a box from a kid for $1.00. Climbing up on this for the next race, he did better, for while he still couldn't see the horses, he discovered that the jockeys had on bloomers as well as caps.

During the excitement of the race, he had the box knocked out from under him, and before he

Queen of Jacarandas Crowned in Pretty May Day Ceremonial

As the softening shadows of the sun's last rays deepened into twilight, Miss Elizabeth Hetherington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Hetherington, was crowned Queen of the May in a beautiful ceremony, held at six o'clock at the afternoon Donatelli Park. The ceremonies were in an impressive observance of Jacaranda Day, and took place before a stately setting of greenery with an aure blue sky for a background.

Preceding the arrival of the queen and her attendants, the high school glee club, accompanied at the piano by Miss Betty Tooth, sang several selections. Little Miss Opal Henderson, attired in a striking black and white satin costume, wearing a series of clever acrobatic numbers.

Long streamers, in the many pastel colors of the rainbow, decorated the tops of the two main May poles on either side of the green lawn, and were played by a group of young girls. Singing as they danced happily and gracefully around the May poles, the participants included: Mary Mott, Hazel Mott, Iris Landrea, Bernice Page, Joan Hill, Thelma Williams, Claribel Welch, Betty Koch, Barbara Lawton, Helen Edwards, Helen Welch, Betty Jo Wells, Joanne Crews, Evelyn Brown, Betty Landrea, Ruth Holloway, Imogene Mingleford, Virginia Bell, Virginia Spencer, Winifred Archer, Neitha Mifson, Helen Foster.

Miss Elizabeth Vandewende, herald, in a colorful red and black suit, announced the appearance of the queen and her party, who walked the length of the green pathway to the stately throne. The four attendants, proclaimed by Miss Jane Clements, Miss Betty Sherman and Miss Gail Cook, entered first and took their places on either side of the throne. They were dressed alike, in dresses of could get on his feet again some body had swiped his foot stool. Trying to say anything over his head, he was charged $5 a question, so he pushed his way to a lunch stand where, with a holding in one hand and a bottle of Coca Cola in the other, he enjoyed the rest of the races even though he couldn't see 'em.

The folk dance by the children, representing the Germans, was given by Karl Crowley, L. R. Regal, and others. The folk dance by the children, representing the Germans, was given by Karl Crowley, L. From Scotland, folk dances were given by Mary Frances Carroll, Margaret Harper, Faye Garg, Lillian White, Jeanette Barker, Pauline Flowers, Betty Lynn Helms, Virginia Bell, Geraldine White, Ruth Holloway.

As the impressive folk dances continued, the herald read from the scroll a message to the queen from her subjects:

O Queen, the month of May, yes, even the season of Spring, are honored to have you succeed their thrones. Because you bring honor to the subjects who serve you, we have pledged to you our loyalty and fealty and allegiance.

We are proud of the attributes which have made you the Queen of the May, the beauty, love and peace. Because you possess these qualities to a rare degree and as an expression of our devotion to you, I in behalf of the people of Jacaranda Land, crown you as our Queen—Queen of beauty, love and peace. SITTING IN WITH LAWMAKERS

(By GILBERT D. LEACH)

Well, I've been threatening to write about the lobby for a long time, and now I seem to be about the best time to do it.

In the first place, there are at least two major divisions among the lobbyists for something for their own associates. It pays its own expenses and always wears a surprised or a harassed look.

Then there is a class that is always headed northwest, looks well fed and comfortable—as it is. That class is on a salary and/or commission if you know what that "and/or" means you get the idea.

Every one alive in the Capitol is so busy that you have to raise your voice when you get a lobbyist. Not any more so than a lobbyist.

And these lobbyists, although they make life a hell for the legislators, are not so bad as they are made out to be. They are really some of the best people in the state. They are really some of the best people in the state. They are really some of the best people in the state.

However, just so the writer of this column, I think being president of the Senate or Speaker of the House is a grand honor, don't you? Well, it is a way, but I mean work. It's a way, but I mean work. It's a way, but I mean work.

Along with lobbyists the mass mind reverts to attacks. Much has been said and written about attacks. In story form all of them are exciting books and there is a witching redhead thrown in for contrast. Truth of the matter is that the attacks are not so much as they are made out to be.

There are a dozen applicants for the best committee in the Capitol. The best committee in the Capitol is the one that has the most power. The best committee in the Capitol is the one that has the most power. The best committee in the Capitol is the one that has the most power.

"Investigations" but when they're over there's nothing about them and you would be just as well off if you hadn't read a line about them.

There's a lot of humor developing up here late in a committee meeting. I spent a couple of hours attending one day last week when Senator Maples hadn't anybody to argue with and started on himself on a bill he was "fathering" in the committee. Being a newspaper man himself, Senator Maples was used to seeing both sides of a situation, so his argument was understandable to me but it puzzled the other members of the committee.

Senator Hodges who daddied our newspaper bills, had me speak for him in committee the other day. He told the other members of the committee he'd stand for anything I said and in effect he introduced me. I don't think I'm humbly, but he's honest. Struck me as a good slogan, maybe I'll run for State legislator when George Westbrook says he doesn't want it any more.

Next week I'll give you something a little different. Probably by that time our affairs up here will come to "jell" and we can tell what the product will look like. Till then—

Woman's Club Installs Officers

The last meeting for the year of the Woman's Club was held at the club house last Friday and was in the form of a beautifully appointed luncheon with covers laid for the members.

The luncheon table for the officers was elegantly decorated with bouquets of roses and radiantly beautiful summer blossoms in a soft blend of colors. Members were seated at individual tables for four where they were served the tempting luncheon.

Mrs. Walter Betts, president, presided over the business session after the one o'clock luncheon and all yearly reports were given by officers and chairman of the committees. Members were slated over the many things they had accomplished.

Mrs. W. M. Sands of Bartow, vice-president of section nine of the Federated Women's Clubs, installed the new officers. Mrs. Walter Betts, president; Mrs. J. Paul Garber, first vice president; Mrs. Parker Anderson, second vice president; Mrs. Earl Hartt, recording secretary; Mrs. C. E. Crabtree, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lester Armstrong, treasurer; and Mrs. Jack Head, registrar. Mrs. Sands gave an interesting talk to the officers and members, her subject, "Service to the Club."

Mrs. E. G. Todd gave an interesting report on the recent State Women's Club convention held in Orlando.

The luncheon and meeting was enjoyed by a large attendance of the members, which closed the club year for the summer months.

Shirley Temple Is Coming to Park In 'Just Around Corner'

Three times voted the nation's favorite screen star, Shirley Temple may be said to have several usual Hollywood futures already behind her. Yet competent observers are as one in agreeing that Shirley's greatest triumphs are still to come—that as she goes on she will be even more amazing than over, and that her career will set a mark never attained on stage or screen before.

J. P. McEvoy—newspaperman, humorist and scenario—crystallized the opinion of most moviegoers when he predicted new marks of achievement for the Number One star in a widely discussed article in The Saturday Evening Post.

McEvoy points to Shirley's latest 1938 Century-Fox picture, "Just Around the Corner," to illustrate his conviction, set forth in the Post article, that Shirley is a consummate actress with a definite love for the art of acting and a talent that amazingly increases as she gets older.

McEvoy speaks on good authority. Always close to the theatre and the screen. He collaborated with Ethel Hill and Darrell Floy in writing the screen play for "Just Around the Corner."

Opening at the Park Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday, and announced as having the most original scenario thus far conceived for a Shirley Temple picture, the film depicts the hilarious but happy consequences which arise when Shirley confuses a wealthy old banker (whose name is Uncle Sam) with the lean and bawled-up gentleman who is the symbol of our national character.

Production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck has surrounded his Number One star with a fine cast, including Charles Farrell, Joan Davis, and a new cast of supporting players. (a newcomer to films about whom you will probably hear much more later), Bill Robinson, Bert Lahr, Franklin Pangborn, Gus Witherpoon, Benjie Bartlett and others.

Terrible stock market crash is predicted if war should break out in Europe

... Democratic primary in Mississippi in August sure to arouse national attention

... Illness of Harry Hopkins most important factor in the political situation

WASHINGTON—A very shrewd stock market operator, recently in Washington in connection with the government's concern over what might happen to our security value in the event of the outbreak of war in Europe, was talking to an friend.

"If war should break out in Europe tomorrow," he said, "there will be a terrible crash in the stock market. If you want to make a big profit without any trouble whatever, wait for that crash. Then buy any good stock to the limit of your financial ability. Hold it a little while and then sell it."

Most of us remember something about what happened in 1914. When the World War broke out the collapse of the stock market was so terrific that it was necessary to close it. Ignoring what the real value of stocks is, or was, the performance then was remarkable.

Actually, most stocks which dropped to record lows in the autumn of 1918 afterwards made record highs.

Some folks are pointing out that this logic is faulty now because of the "take the profit out of war" movement. They are saying that congress would impose such terrific taxation, in the event that the United States got into the war, that no profit could possibly be made.

War in Europe would Mean Unusual Prosperity Here

This is obviously true as far as prospective "war babies" are concerned. There will probably be no period, should there be another world war, resembling from a financial viewpoint, that which ended shortly after the outbreak of the last World War, when the entry of the United States into that war nearly three years after it began.

Neutrality laws today might prevent that sort of profits. But it is just possible that they might not. The theory in Washington at the moment is that the administration would not be "neutral in thought."

If a world war should break out in Europe tomorrow, Best judgment today is that the administration has made up its mind that in the event of a European war this country would be in strong sympathy with the democracies—Britain and France—from the first day.

If this is true, and it is difficult to deny it, the probability is that there would be "war babies." It is true that they would be subject to a higher rate of taxation than applied in 1914 and 1918. It is scarcely reasonable to believe that they would be taxed to the point of diminishing returns.

Leaving the war babies aside, the best financial opinion is that war in Europe would mean the end of prosperity for the United States for a substantial period—prosperity not only for the manufacturers of war supplies, but for wheat and cotton farmers, for everybody.

Later on, assuming—as most observers do—that the United States would be dragged into the war, the taxation might be terrific. But, just as the rate falls on the just and the unjust, so must war taxation fall. And most business men figure that high taxation and good business is better than low taxation and poor business.

So maybe the able financier is right.

Primary in Mississippi Sure to Be Top in Interest

Late in August most of the folks in the country will be more interested in the pennant races and the European situation than in domestic politics, but here in Washington there will be more interest in the Democratic gubernatorial primary in Mississippi than anything else—except the election of the President.

The reason for this is that the two contenders for the governorship have made the New Deal the issue. Former Gov. Martin Sennett ("Ritter") Comer is really responsible for it. He had not been attacking the New Deal it seems likely that local issues would have predominated. But since Comer began his attack his opponent, Paul B. Johnson, naturally took the other side.

To make the situation more complicated Sen. Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo is supporting Johnson. Sen. Pat Harrison has not moved into the fight as this is written, but his friends say that he will be found on the side of Comer. And on the same side as Bilbo in any fight is unthinkable for Pat.

Comer ran against Pat Harrison in the 1904 primary, and, though Pat beat him nearly three to one there was a state election which the senator was badly frightened.

As is natural in such cases, some bitter things were said. Comer attacked Harrison, among other things, for playing golf, intimating that he was wasting his time with this effete pastime instead of attending to the business of his Mississippi constituents.

Pat Harrison's Golf Story Went Well With Voters

"It's true that I play a few holes of golf every once in a while," Harrison told Mississippi audiences. "The truth is that I do it on doctor's orders. The doctor came to me a while back and said, 'I've examined you, and said that if I did not take some relaxation I would wind up in a hospital, or a cemetery.'"

"You are killing yourself," the doctor declared. I told him I could not help it; there was such a press of business that I must do for my country and for the people of Mississippi. Finally we compromised on my promise to play a few holes of golf every time I got a chance, just to give me some fresh air, and exercise, and sunshine."

Harrison's golf story went well with the Mississippi voters but it was his fear of being beaten in that campaign that tied him so close to President Roosevelt, and made him take so many steps in that really which were to embarrass him later.

So, adding together the fact that Bilbo, Pat's bitter enemy, is supporting Johnson, who is declining the administration, to the fact that Comer is attacking the administration, maybe Pat will not be so interested in Mississippi after all. He was hit pretty hard three years ago.

Health of Hopkins Takes On Political Significance

Perhaps the most important single factor in the political situation today is the state of health of Harry L. Hopkins. The secretary of commerce is a very sick man, according to several close friends. He is now being strongly advised to go back to Rochester, Minn., and undergo more drastic medical attention. If he should take this advice, he will not, of course, be at President Roosevelt's elbow, and hence the strength of his pressure for the appeasement of business program will not be so strong.

The tremendous importance of this, both as to business and as to the next presidential election, cannot be exaggerated. It is beginning to be obvious that in the whole so-called appeasement program it is Hopkins who is the key man. He can translate his ideas as to what should be done to encourage business into affirmative action by the President.

Hopkins' program for unshackling business was ambitious. It was tremendously encouraging. In fact, it was the first sunshine, as business men see it, from within the ranks of the New Deal. It was the first time in six long years. As unfolded to individual senators, and to certain groups having influence with the senate, it had many ramifications.

It was especially encouraging to business because it seemed to have sound political logic back of it, and Hopkins gave all and sundry to understand that the President approved both the political logic and the necessary steps involved. It looked, in short, to bringing about the revival of business which should reach full flood before the election to be held in November, 1940, when the New Deal is either to be continued, under Roosevelt or some successor satisfactory to him, or else voted into outer darkness.

First Step to Stop Scrap With the Electric Industry

The very first step of this program, as Hopkins painted the picture, was to stop the scrap with the electric industry—to have TVA pay a fair price for the Tennessee properties, and to take other steps which would release the piled up spending amounting to four billions according to William O. Douglas, which fear of government has been restraining. Before Hopkins had been in office a week the first move was made on this. TVA agreed to buy the Tennessee properties. Later came another step. TVA announced it would pay the state and local governments where it operates a sum more commensurate with the taxes they would receive were privately owned companies operating the properties. It even went further and proposed a study of whether the TVA should not make some return to the federal treasury in lieu of corporate income taxes that the government would receive from the properties if privately operated.

Which, incidentally, is quite a commentary on the majority report of the special congressional investigating committee, which actually approved the yardstick!

The majority of the committee disregarded the testimony of E. L. Liffenthal, who said the government had certain advantages as against private companies in fixing rates—that the government can charge off large parts of the cost to navigation and flood control, that it can borrow money on tax exempt bonds at 2 percent or less, and that its contributions in lieu of taxes on the side of owners of water companies would have to pay.

But Hopkins did pay attention to these facts since that is the way one move has been sick. And so has the rest of the appeasement program.

Lights of New York

By L. STEVENSON

Property: A few of Fifth avenue's largest stores, noticed a perfume set, just over from Paris, with doors which slide open and reveal three tiny vials of liquid almost as costly as molten gold. Was informed that French chemists experimented for two years with 800 cells and essences to perfect the perfume and that an American designer, due to a while back and out of a container resembling a dream tower from Arabian Nights with gold and crystal columns and inlaid with blue and mauve and which, when closed, may be locked with a little gold key. Not being a perfume addict, the writer's interest in the gadget is purely academic but it does seem to indicate that at least one merchant believes that the days of expensive luxuries have returned and that women will buy costly things if they have an eye appeal.

Opportunity: A few years ago, scientists, equipped with a detailed machine, toured the city and found that the town's noisiest spot was that fifth of an acre open space where Broadway and Sixth avenue come together between Thirty-Eighth and Thirty-ninth streets. Nothing was done about the matter until recently when the Sixth avenue elevated was torn down. With no more trains pounding over the tracks the noise has decreased noticeably. Possibly that is why the plot, known as Herald Square, is to be improved with plane trees and the return of Hurl and Graft, the two best things provided over by Minerva, goddess of wisdom, perched on a pylon made of granite salvaged from the old post office building. At least the labors of Hurl and Graft, imported by the late James Gordon Bennett who told the hours for 25 years stop the Herald building, may now be heard.

Jewels: These are New York's gems, according to songstress Joan Edwards, whose favorite gem, by the way, is the ruby:

Emerald: The green of the grass in Central park come summer.

Garnet: Geraniums in the windows of tenements.

Sapphire: The blue of the sky just at dawn as seen between skyscrapers.

Ruby: The flashing stop signal of traffic lights.

Diamond: The sparkling crystal of rain on the street during a sun shower.

Pearl: The silver, sleeky curves of a still summer day.

Pop: The yellow of the sun's rays as they are redirected from the heights of tall buildings.

Wood-Woot: The Dog Walkers Club of America, at its annual "How-Wow-Pow-Wow," decided to hold a contest to select "the glamour dog of 1938." "A glamour dog" was defined as one that has come to the attention of a high breeding or blue ribbon. The winner and its owner will be the guest of the club in New York during dog days. It was announced that no fee is required and any dog owner may enter his pet by submitting a 200-word summary of qualifications and a snapshot to Dog Walkers, Inc., 22 East Fort Street.

On the judges committee are Lowell Thomas, Tony Sarg, Jack Dempsey, Ben Lorber, Albert L. Ripley, Roosevelt Knorr, Captain Bob Hardell, James E. Knox and F. Darius Benham. Benham organized the Dog Walkers club three years ago. The only membership qualification is a dog, a leash and a muzzle.

Manhattan: A customer on the fourth floor of a department store hurriedly drops a dress on the steps on it and then calls a clerk. "Tell me," she asks with a winning smile, "how much will you mark this garment down—it's a trifle soiled." ... Two stout women stand over a man in a crowded subway car. "It's a wonder," snaps one quite audibly, "that a gentleman wouldn't get up and give us seats. It would be a kind deed." "Good deed," echoes the man who is so stout. "If you two women could sit down, it'd get up, it would be a miracle."

Steinmetz Home Is White Elephant for N. Y. State

SCHENECTADY—Officials of the New York conservation department are uncertain what to do with the home of the late Dr. Charles Steinmetz, famed physicist and electrical wizard.

Filled with electrical formulas, cryptic penciled notes, crude machinery and broken tools, the home is the most fitting, according to the officials, was to petition engineering and science societies searching for a "home." History and scientific association associated with the man's life, however, have thought to make it ideal as headquarters for an engineering group.

Walker Issues Message to Fla. Citrus Exchange

constructive work in the national field is accomplished.

RESULTS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES

In the matter of sales and sales practices undertaken by the Florida Citrus Exchange, results speak for themselves. It is an undisputed fact that the Sales Department is given the refusal of at least 75 per cent of the 2, 0, 0, business originating in Florida's citrus markets, even though the organization handles less than 30 per cent of the crop. There is a reason for this preference for fruit under Exchange marks, particularly if the growers are lowered to competitive levels. That reason lies in the reliability and fair play built into Exchange operations which has created trade confidence throughout the North.

It may be well here to interpolate a comment in connection with the creation and maintenance of trade confidence in Exchange brands. Occasionally some associations, through circumstances possibly beyond the manager's control, permit cars to roll which are out of grade and considerably away from specifications in the sale. In such cases the entire organization suffers in reputation because of this one association's action. The Sales Department is hard pressed to make satisfactory delivery and still hold the customer.

Too great emphasis cannot be placed upon the necessity for all association managers to cooperate with the Sales Department to the fullest possible extent in filling orders to the specifications which confirm. This is one responsibility of the association manager which, if properly handled, will do more for the organization's marketing effectiveness of the Exchange than any other single activity it could undertake.

Auction markets fruit under Exchange marks averaged more than competitive offerings, grade for grade, and also sold more constantly throughout the season. Here are the only available public records where direct comparison may be made. That Exchange fruit has yielded the full market, plus a slight premium for preferable grade, pack and reputation, is confirmed by these records.

LOWER SHIPMENTS—HIGHER PRICES

In this connection, you are familiar with the fact that many growers sold their Valencia at from 40c to 60c until a determined effort by the growers to hold their crops for their own profit. These growers who cooperated with the organization today are realizing just about twice as much for their fruit as those growers who failed to heed this advice. Further, had it not been for this volume of cheap Valencias in the hands of speculators who could sell the fruit very readily at a slight profit to themselves, below the true market value, prices would have risen much more rapidly than they have.

COMPLETE INFORMATION

The Florida Citrus Exchange, from its vantage point of daily multi-market contact with all associations fully advised; by reports to directors, through daily and weekly bulletins, through its district managers, through direct contact in person, by phone or by mail from the sales department. Every pertinent item concerning operation is immediately relayed, together with comment and recommendation, to all member associations.

Obviously, no employee in the sales organization can make daily personal calls on each house. Such procedure is unnecessary. The association manager is in effect an assistant sales manager. It is his duty and responsibility to coordinate with the Sales Department and to conduct his house operations that his offerings conform to trade and consumer requirements as developed through the Sales Department. Where this is done, the association makes substantial progress.

GROWERS SHOULD BE INFORMED

Having access to all of the information available in this organization, it is the duty of the association manager to keep his growers adequately informed on matters pertaining to citrus market conditions and prospects. Correspondingly, it becomes your responsibility as a director to see that your manager performs these functions as assigned to him by this carefully developed organization policy.

STRENGTHENING ASSOCIATIONS

Present policy of the organization is to take care of the growers, the associations in every way possible, physically and financially. The objective is to build them by performance and through their performance attract tonnage. The most potent argument with which to attract a grower is an association of satisfied growers, and the most effective presentation of this association can be made by an association manager or director armed with records of efficient, economical grower service and packing house operation.

PRODUCER-SHIPPIERS

In analyzing the organization problem of the Florida Citrus Exchange and the manner in which expansion, it is well to remember that a substantial portion of the State's tonnage today is in the hands of grower-shippers, too often organically tied in with distributive interests in distant markets. As this tonnage cannot be attracted to Exchange affiliation by any ordinary means open to our use, the Exchange has associated itself with the more progressive and constructive of these factors in the Florida Citrus Producers Trade Association. It has been the influence—directly and indirectly—of this association that has brought about the meeting current day-to-day operating problems.

LEGISLATIVE MARKETING

The Florida Citrus Exchange, even with increased tonnage, still occupies the same position as the California Fruit Growers Exchange. That organization, even though it controlled dominant percentages of the California crop, found it necessary to develop Federal and State marketing machinery in order that it could control its distributive machinery. Obviously, the Florida Citrus Exchange could hope to be in no better position with increased tonnage. For this reason, the fight for Federal and State marketing agreements as it believes that such legal machinery will be helpful in stabilizing the industry.

Under the State marketing act, the State Commission of Agriculture will be given power to enter into contracts with growers and handlers in order to control the movement of fruit in the channels of trade just as effectively as fruit may be controlled in interstate commerce under Federal marketing agreement provisions.

UNSURPASSED OPERATIVE ECONOMY

I believe that even the most prejudiced will admit that the performance record of the Florida Citrus Exchange, including as does some human mistakes of judgment, is one which is worthy of the largest operator in the Florida field. Yet, considering the volume of the exchange with these services have been rendered, RECORDS STAND COMPARISON.

PLEASE EXAMINE CAREFULLY

The data in the accompanying tables. Observe that, during the season 1938-39, the California Fruit Growers Exchange, shipping more than three times Florida Citrus Exchange volume, rendered service to its growers for only 100c a ton, one cent less than the Florida Citrus Exchange. Our district service for handlers for less money than theirs so that our total was about one-half cent below the California cost in spite of the much smaller tonnage over which these service costs could be spread.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

Every informed grower today knows that the citrus industry is facing economic threat of constantly increasing supplies. He knows that to maintain his investment in the use of these lowering crop returns, he must reduce his costs of production, of packing, selling and transportation.

As has been pointed out, many savings have been accomplished throughout the Florida Citrus Exchange organization looking toward these ends. The progressive association today offers the small grower through its grower service department cultivation facilities at a cost per acre which compares favorably with the largest operators in the State. The use of more efficient machinery, short cuts in packing operations, less expensive containers et cetera, are serving to reduce packing charges to an extremely low level. These reductions are increased still further by the greater volume which the economic and efficient management attracts to the association.

SALES-EXPANSION PLANS

From a sales standpoint, increased tonnage requires an even more far-reaching sales organization than that which has been maintained by the Florida Citrus Exchange to date. The opening of additional salaried offices, where a staff study of sales potentials over several seasons has been made, is being considered. Such expansion requires experienced active and loyal personnel. Your Board of Directors recognized the possibilities of these developments several years ago and anticipated personnel requirements by adopting a policy looking toward the training of responsible youngsters in dealer service and sales work in northern Florida and in packing houses and field service in Florida. Some of these men today have been advanced to responsible positions either in the sales organization or in the field. Others are trained and available for this added work.

PLANS FOR DIVERSION

The Exchange Board has not stopped here, however. It has undertaken the development of methods through which diversions of fruit volume may be made from normal fresh fruit channels. Not only must these diversions provide for the diversion of fruit, but they must be developed so as to operate primarily for the fruit of Florida Citrus Exchange grower-shippers. I refer to the orange juice vending machine and the orange flakes breakfast food.

THE JUICE VENDING MACHINE

The fresh orange juice vending machine has every possibility of becoming one of the most revolutionary factors in fresh juice dispensing methods. It will increase per capita consumption by using the two most potent merchandising factors—direct and indirect.

OUR WORK CONSTRUCTIVE

In conclusion, permit me to make this last statement: difficult as the season just closing has been, think how much less endurable the situation would have been for all growers had it not been for the constructive work of the industry rendered during the past years by the Florida Citrus Exchange organization.
