Led by a Harvard History Professor, A Party of 'Scholarly Navigators' Is Retracing the Voyages of Columbus

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

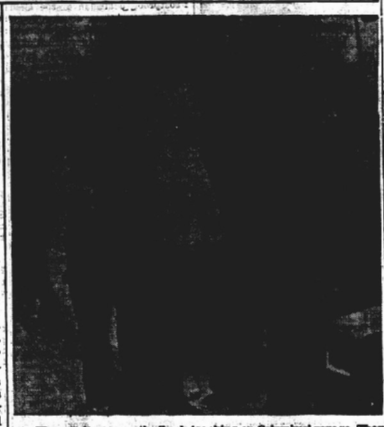
HOW good a navigator was Christopher Columbus, whom a large part of the world honors on October 12 as the "discoverer of America"?

So far, most of the men who have attempted to answer that question have been scholars who had no knowledge of seamanship or navigation. Writing in their cloistered retreats or in libraries, they have indulged in fruitless speculation and inaccurate guesses as they dealt with the really vital part of the career of the great Italian explorer.

Recently one of these scholars, who for many years has combined historical scholarship with practical seamanship, decided to try to answer the question in a really practical way. He would make a definite estimate of Columbus as a seaman and discoverer by sailing the seas he sailed and visiting the places he visited.

This scholar is Professor Samuel Eliot Morison of Harvard university, official historian for that famous institution of higher learning and author of the prize-winning history of Harvard for its tercentenary celebration three years ago. But, more important than that to his newest piece of "research," is the fact that in 1937-38 he sailed among the Lesser Antilles in a yawl and checked up on the route of Columbus' voyage. In January of this year, he followed the route of the explorer's first voyage along the north coast of Haiti and identified the approximate site of Navidad, the first European settlement in the New world.

To follow up on that experiment in "retracing the voyages of Columbus," Professor Morison set out two months ago on a more ambitious project. One morning in August a 160-foot three-masted steel ketch put to sea from Oyster Bay, L. I. She was the Capitana—named for the flagship of Columbus' third voyage. She was captained by Paul Hammond, famous racing skipper and ocean cruiser who served in the World war, but the most important figure on her deck was Professor Morison, leader of the "Harvard Columbus expedition."



These ladies are on the "back-tracking-on-Columbus" voyage. They are (left to right) Mrs. Samuel E. Morison (wife of the Harvard history professor who is leading the expedition), who is a stewardess on the Capitana during part of the trip; her daughter, Miss Elisabeth Morison, who is also serving as a stewardess; and Mrs. Paul Hammond, wife of the commander of the ketch Mary Otis, who is chief stewardess.

Rendezvous in the Azores.

Several days previously the ketch Mary Otis had set out from Portland, Maine, under the command of Capt. William D. Stevens, who served as ensign in the United States navy during the World war. Headed for Flores in the Azores where she would join the "flagship" of the "modern Columbus." This smaller vessel, like Columbus' Nina, is expected to be most useful for poking into harbors and up rivers that the Capitana with her 15-foot draft cannot enter.

On the first leg of their voyage the Capitana and the Mary Otis picked up the course of Columbus' return passage of 1493 near the Azores, called at Santa Maria, where the Nina put in after a bad storm, and visited the little chapel, where Columbus' men heard mass. The expedition then made for Lisbon, concluding the route of the first voyage of the Italian navigator, and spent some time there identifying and photographing places associated with Columbus. After that, the plans of the expedition, as announced before it set out, were as follows:

From Lisbon the party was to sail to Huelva, opposite the Convent of La Rabida and the seaport of Palos whence Columbus set forth on his first voyage. The next objective will be San Lucar de Barrameda, where Columbus' third voyage started. The Mary Otis will sail up the Guadalquivir river, the route of the Spanish treasure galleons to Seville. The historians in the party will study Columbus' marginal comments in his books on the Columbian library at Seville, look up certain points in the Archives of the Indies, and visit Casa Mova, where Columbus first met Ferdinand and Isabella, and where his son Ferdinand was born.

The next objective will be Porto Santo, the island near Madeira where Columbus married the daughter of a Portuguese gentleman, and lived for some time. After a call at Puchal, the expedition will proceed to the Canaries, the jumping-off place for three out of four of Columbus' voyages.

From San Sebastian, Gomera, Canary Islands, the two vessels will follow approximately the route of Columbus' third voyage to Trinidad, and identify the landfall of the three hills which gave him the idea of naming the island after the Holy Trinity.

(From an illustration in De Bry's "Voyages," 1590.)

Voyage Ends in 1940.

After calls at Port of Spain, Curacoa and Cartagena, they will pick up the route of his fourth voyage and follow it along the Central American coast, as far as Honduras. This party of the second most important of Columbus' voyages, for he discovered a large section of the mainland, began the first European settlement on terra firma (Santa Maria de Belem), and paved the way for the discovery of the Pacific. Yet it is the least known; and a number of the places such as his refit harbor in or near the Gulf of San Blas, the Rio de Veragua, and the site of Belem itself, have never been certainly identified. The vessels will probably spend Christmas at Puerto Limon, Costa Rica.

From Central America the expedition will stretch across the Caribbean to the northern coast of Jamaica, where Columbus spent over a year; and if time permits will clear up some doubtful points about his course around Hispaniola. The voyage will end in Haiti about February 1, 1940. This is not intended to visit the Bahamas because Columbus' landfall at San Salvador has been identified and his course through the Bahamas accurately traced by the late Admiral Murdock, Rudolf Cronau, Glenn Stewart, and George B. Massey.

As the expedition includes at least eight experienced navigators there will be constant analysis of Columbus' work as a seaman and navigator in connection with the existing accounts of his voyages. Some historians have hailed Columbus as the greatest navigator of all time, while others claim that he was a mere landlubber with a big idea; yet none of these authorities ever took the trouble to follow his courses themselves, and few knew anything about navigation. This revaluation of Columbus as a seaman and navigator will be the most important part of the expedition's work. A second part of the work will be to identify the American places touched at in his four voyages; and a third will be to obtain photographs of the coasts that he followed.

The party does not expect to find anything new or startling about Columbus. It will supplement the excellent research on portions of his life by scholars such as Von Humboldt, De Lollis, Charcot, Harrisse, Vignaud, Magnaghi, and Windsor by investigations in the ocean field. A select library of about 300 volumes of Columbiana will be aboard to aid the navigators in their work. The expedition does hope to achieve a better understanding of the most momentous voyages of modern times, and accurately to rewrite the opening chapters of American history. It will attempt to do for Columbus what Francis Parkman did for the history of France in the New World.

The Capitana, Commodore Morison's "flagship" has had an interesting history. She was built in South Bristol, Maine, in 1936, is only 45 feet long but she has already made two ocean crossings under Captain Stevens.

Both vessels are manned by a distinguished crew of scholars and practical seamen, all of whom will take part in the work of operating their respective ships and all of whom, except those in the steward's department, will take turns "standing watch."

The expedition has been largely financed by those who are accompanying Professor Morison on the voyage, with the aid of grants from the Mellon Educational foundation of Pittsburgh, the Carnegie corporation of New York, the Milton fund of Harvard and several other companies and individuals who contributed such supplies as sails and gear, a direction finder, a two-way radio set, a surgical kit, heraldic designs and flags.

Most Americans are familiar with the story of Christopher Columbus but how many of us have a clear picture of what took place on that historic October day 447 years ago in a little island in the West Indies? Modern scholarship has found but little to correct in the record as it is set down by Washington Irving in his "Life and Voyages of Columbus." He wrote, in part, as follows:

"It was on Friday morning the twelfth of October, that Columbus first beheld the New world. As the day dawned he saw before him a level island, several leagues in extent, and covered with trees like a continual orchard. Though apparently uncultivated, it was populous, for the inhabitants were seen issuing from all parts of the woods and running to the shore. They were perfectly naked, and, as they stood gazing at the ships, appeared by their attitudes and gestures to be lost in astonishment. Columbus made signal for the ships to cast anchor, and the boats to be manned and armed. He entered his own boat, richly attired in scarlet, and bidding the royal standard; while Martin Alonzo Pinzon, and Vicente Yanez, his brother, put off in company in their boats.

"As he approached the shore, Columbus, who was disposed for all kinds of agreeable impressions, was delighted with the purity and suavity of the atmosphere, the crystal transparency of the sea, and the beauty of the vegetation. On landing he threw himself on his knees, kissed the earth, and returned thanks to God with tears of joy. His example was followed by the rest, whose hearts indeed overflowed with the same feelings of gratitude. Columbus, then rising, drew his sword, displayed the royal standard, and assembling round him the two captains, with Rodrigo de Escobedo, notary of the armament, Rodrigo Sanchez, and the rest who had landed, he took possession in the name of the Castilian sovereigns, giving the island the name of San Salvador.

The earliest engraved likeness of Columbus (from Paulus Jovius "Elogia Virorum Bellicum," 1575.)

"The feelings of the crew now burst forth in the most extravagant transports. They had recently considered themselves devoted men, hurrying forward to destruction; they now looked upon themselves as favorites of fortune, and gave themselves up to the most unbounded joy. They thronged around the admiral with overflowing zeal, some embracing him, others kissing his hands. Those who had been most mutinous and turbulent during the voyage were now most devoted and enthusiastic. Some begged favors of him, as if he already had wealth and honors in his gift.

"The natives of the island, when, at the dawn of day, they had beheld the ships hovering on their coast, had supposed them monsters which had issued from the deep during the night. They had crowded to the beach and watched their movements with anxiety. When they beheld their boats approach the shore, and a number of strange beings clad in glittering steel, landing upon the beach, they fled in affright to the woods. Finding, however, that there was no attempt to pursue or molest them, they gradually recovered from their terror, and approached the Spaniards with great awe. During the ceremonies of taking possession, they remained gazing in timid admiration at the complexion, the beards, the shining armor, and splendid dress of the Spaniards. The admiral particularly attracted their attention, from his commanding height, his air of authority, his dress of scarlet, and the deference which was paid him by his companions; all which pointed him out to be the commander. When they had still further recovered from their fears, they approached the Spaniards, touched their beards, and examined their hands and faces, admiring their whiteness. Columbus was pleased with their gentleness and confiding simplicity, and suffered their scrutiny with perfect acquiescence, winning them by his benignity.

"As Columbus supposed himself to have landed on an island and at the extremity of India, he called the natives by the general appellation of Indians, which was universally adopted before the true nature of his discovery was known, and has since been extended to all the aboriginals of the New world."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

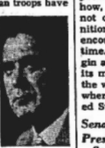
President Roosevelt was reluctant to call congress into special session this early . . . He wanted to postpone it until much later . . . Sure to be long debate, especially in the senate, over the neutrality act . . . Senator Bridges, just now, is the most active candidate for presidential nomination.

WASHINGTON.—There were three big reasons why President Roosevelt reluctantly called congress into special session at this time, instead of postponing the call until much later, as he had hoped.

The three reasons, in the order named, were Russia, Italy, and a group of senators including notably William E. Borah of Idaho, Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan and Arthur Capper of Kansas.

Russia and Italy figured for obvious reasons. Russian troops have invaded Poland. Nobody knows what she plans to do—how far her agreements with Hitler will carry her. Italy is not neutral, but prepared for war up to the hilt. The British and French are trying their best not only to keep Italy from joining Germany, but to bring her in on their side. This last is not so much for the assistance Italian soldiers would render, but to provide an open path through which the British and French could attack Germany, thus short-circuiting the Siegfried line, and also to prevent the flowing of food and supplies into Germany. This last is vital because the British and French governments are counting on eventual victory through strangulation more than military triumphs.



Sen. Borah

The biggest single factor which could be brought to play on both Russia and Italy, obviously, would be some convincing evidence that, in the long run, Germany must certainly be defeated. Anything which convinced either Stalin or Mussolini of that would be sure to keep Stalin neutral, and to induce Mussolini to play along with London and Paris.

Obviously, also, a very potent factor in convincing Stalin and Mussolini of this would be a forceful demonstration that the United States was so strongly on the side of Britain and France that it would take only a little push to bring this country into the war on their side.

Roosevelt Dreaded Idea of Long Tirades in Congress

Roosevelt disliked the idea of an extra session, at first, because he feared speeches would be made which would misrepresent this picture—would do a great deal of harm, in fact, in their effect on the European situation. He dreaded the idea of long tirades, making frontpage headlines in Berlin, Rome and Moscow, by such senators as Gerald P. Nye, Borah and Vandenberg.

But—Borah, Nye, Vandenberg and Capper burst out on the front pages of the country's newspapers anyhow, with strong statements which were represented in Rome, Berlin and Moscow not as minority views, but as the platform of the political party in the United States which probably would win the next election!

Which removed the objection to the extra session, and intensified the reasons justifying it.

Repeal of Arms Embargo Desired Early as Possible

There is no way, so far as can be seen at present, to prevent a very long debate in the upper chamber.

This is important, both to the administration and to business. The White House is anxious that business men in general, and prospective manufacturers of guns, ammunition, airplanes, etc., in particular, should be sure of fairly speedy repeal as soon as possible. The point here is to prevent a wholesale rush of capital seeking such war profits to Canada.

The President's interest in this is, strangely enough, in line with his general interest for years, in the workers rather than in the capitalists themselves—as the capitalists involved would say—who provide the jobs for the workers.

As the administration sees the picture the obvious course for a capitalist interested in selling about the manufacture of arms, ammunition, airplanes or anything else on the embargoed list, would be to have a plant constructed right here—provided he was sure the embargo would be lifted speedily.

Otherwise, that obvious thing for that capitalist to do would be to build a plant in Canada, where he would be sure of a friendly government, no restrictions on his exports, all sorts of concessions, such as priority for his shipments of material, and a firm policy by the government against any strike tending to slow down his production.

So the capitalist, the White House figures, might be even better off if he did move to Canada. But American workmen would not be. For obviously in Canada idle Canadian workers would have first call. Their government would see to that.

Wants Capital to Confine Operations to United States

The other side of the picture, and one that the President wants stressed, is that the capitalist in question would be much better off in the days to come if he confines his operations to the United States and thus gives employment and buying power to this country. This is true, the White House believes, whether the United States should later become involved in the war or not.

If the United States remains neutral, there is no doubt about it. Certainly, as Canada gives more and more aid to Britain in the war, she must raise taxes, even on visiting munition makers. Much of the profits will thus be lost through war taxes.

Also, it is pointed out, what is to be done with the plant after peace finally comes? If the plant is inside the United States, inside our customs barriers, there will be an incomparably greater opportunity to turn it to some peacetime occupation that will be profitable. This problem will be tough enough, anyhow, as many production industries not connected with "arms, ammunition and implements of war" will encounter a sharp letdown at that time. Presumably Europe will begin a feverish competition to regain its markets, lost for the duration of the war, in Latin America and elsewhere in the world, which the United States will have been supplying.

Senator Bridges Is Out for Presidential Nomination

Sen. H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire is the most active candidate for the presidential nomination in any party, if one is to judge by the mass of boosting material received by newspapers and magazines from his publicity bureau. Oldtimers are unable to remember any candidate who was ever nominated by that route, but every now and then there is an interesting point, and one with merit, in the Bridges handouts.

For instance, a dissertation on the notion that a man must come from a big, pivotal state in order to have a chance. The Bridges press agents riddle this hoary political maxim very effectively. They are perfectly right that state pride, on which politicians count so much, functions only spasmodically when it comes to delivering electoral votes.

Sen. Bridges

The Bridges press agents fail to mention it, but it actually did deliver electoral votes if one goes back to 1896. In that year the Democratic national convention defied the big pivotal state notion and named William Jennings Bryan as its candidate. Bryan was crushingly defeated, of course, but he did carry his own state of Nebraska, with eight electoral votes.

However, when he ran again, in 1900, McKinley carried it. The tide was too strong, just as it was too strong in 1936 for Alfred M. Landon to carry his own small state of Kansas, which seemed to be seething with state pride during the campaign.

Nor did the addition of "Brother Charrie" Bryan to the Democratic national ticket in 1924, for second place, result in Nebraska's going for Davis and Bryan. It went overwhelmingly for Coolidge, as did West Virginia, the birthplace and political background of John W. Davis, head of the ticket.

Some More Examples Out Of the Political Past

New York state voted heavily for Alfred E. Smith, giving him prodigious majorities when he was running for governor, every time at least except in 1920, when the Harding landslide pulled him down. In that election he ran 1,000,000 votes ahead of his ticket, but was beaten. Yet when he ran for President in 1928 New York gave its electoral votes to Herbert Hoover by a small but safe majority.

The truth is that politically New York has little state pride. It is almost too big to care. There is no such feeling as exists in some of the smaller states where the local boy who has made good is regarded, frequently by his neighbors. Pennsylvania, up to 1934, was so heavily Republican that neither party thought of looking there for a candidate. Yet the late Philander C. Knox could have been nominated for President by the Republicans if Hiram W. Johnson had been willing to run with him as vice president! In which event Johnson would have been President, for Knox died shortly thereafter.

One has to skip the next state in electoral strength, Illinois, and get down to Ohio to find real local pride. There is plenty of that in the Buckeye state, but also plenty of bitterness as between factions, as when enemies of Warren G. Harding fought him so bitterly in the primaries that they captured some delegates for Leonard Wood, and when enemies of Sen. Frank B. Willis, in 1928, fought him when he was trying to land the delegation to the convention that named Hoover.

Tax Adjustment In Highlands Bad Policy, Lee Says

Tallahassee, Oct. 5—(Special)—The State of Florida met its $350,000 payroll Saturday and Comptroller J. M. Lee announced that after making allowances for advances to circuit court clerks for jurors and witness fees to be made next week, he will be able to pay $75,000 on past due bills which now total $588,769. Writing of the checks on the past due bills was started Monday and payments will be made on bills in the order of their receipt in the Comptroller's office.

Comptroller Lee pointed to action of the Highlands County Commissioners who have initiated another program of tax adjustments and compromises under a special local law as significant among the factors contributing to the fiscal plight of the state, the schools and counties.

"We can't continue to cancel taxes honestly levied and continue to pay our bills," Comptroller Lee stated. "We have thought that the Murphy Act was the ultimate in tax cancellation, wiping out as it did close to $50,000,000 of the State's assets and accounts receivable from which the State has been netting close to $1,000,000 annually.

"But for any county to continue that policy through the tax years of 1934 to 1938, when taxes levied have already been reduced far below the boom time tax bills, seems unthinkable to me for such a policy spells fiscal suicide to the counties and the schools, all of which aree in a serious plight."

The Comptroller stated that the State was still unable to pay the deficit in the school allocation due Sept. 15th when the amount distributed fell $255,000 short of the allocation due. "It will be October 15th before funds are available to make up that deficit, he stated, declining at the same time to make any statement as to possibility of meeting the allocation due that date except that the amount available would be far short of requirements.

Miss Louise Etheridge and Miss Linnie Estes, both members of the faculty of the Punta Gorda school, were the attractive guests of Miss Iva Phillips and Miss Elisabeth Green, the past week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilkes, who have been residing in Wauchula, are moving to Lake Wales, where Mr. Wilkes, will be connected with the Peninsular Life Insurance Company. Mrs. Wilkes is spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gough.

The fourth annual "Yankee" edition of the Melbourne Times will make its appearance this month. It is published each year to honor the northern visitors who winter in Melbourne and the surrounding territory.

Larson Makes Announcement For Treasurer

J. Edwin Larson, who resigned recently as collector of internal revenue, announced this week that he would be a candidate in the Democratic primary for the office of state treasurer. W. V. Knott recently announced that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself.

Mr. Larson's statement follows: The Democrats of Florida will be called upon in the Primary Election of 1940 to elect their candidate for the office of State Treasurer. Believing that my experience and training qualify me to discharge the duties of this important office acceptably to the people of Florida, I hereby announce that I will be a candidate.

If elected, I pledge myself to the upright and efficient discharge of the duties of the office.

(signed) J. Edwin Larson.

Larson has served as a member of both the Florida house and the Senate. Previously, he taught school in Clay County, having been principal of the Keystone Heights high school for two years. He is a graduate of the University of Florida law school and represents the Alumni as a member of the committees on athletics. He is a Methodist, being chairman of the board of stewards of Ortega Methodist church.

Membership of Highlanders Is Aim of Drive

Pointing out that "memberships provide the motive power for any organization", Guy P. Ruhl of Frostproof, chairman of the membership committee of the Scenic Highlanders, today urged residents of the ridge section to "seriously consider the value" of the group in the task of the welfare of this area.

He said that concerted effort would be made to sign up 5,000 to 8,000 members in the organization for the new fiscal year and that the dues received would be utilized in maintaining the contacts developed by the Highlanders and in the program to get work started on road No. 8.

From Haines City came word that because of the absence of the state of high state officials, plans for a celebration to mark the formal opening of the new overpass and entrance to the city were indefinite.

However, members of the Haines City committee in charge of the program believe they can prevail on road officials and others to participate in the ceremonies, probably about Oct. 21. It is hoped that an exact date will be ready for announcement next week.

Members of the board of governors of the Highlanders will perfect plans within a few days for a meeting to be held at Sebring, at which time the work of the group will be fully outlined and explained to Highlands county.

"We are vitally interested in all the ridge country, not just Polk county—but in every foot of the way from Haines City to Lake Placid and in all things pertaining to the welfare of this section," Ruhl said.

"We have had wonderful cooperation from Highlands county residents and we know that will continue to the point where we can be of mutual assistance," Ruhl said.

Judge Robert T. Dewell of Haines City explained that because of a crowded criminal court docket at Bartow during the last 10 days or two weeks, he had been unable to make as many contacts as he had planned, but that he had been successful in "getting with" certain individuals who can be of assistance to the Highlanders in carrying out the program for the improvement of roads No 8 and No. 19.

"This task of contacting prominents is a slow one at best, but I believe the legislative committee of the Highlanders has been unusually successful in obtaining actual commitments of assistance," Judge Dewell said. "However, we must build the strength of our organization as much as possible so that when we contact others we can point to the fact that practically every man and woman from Haines City to Lake Placid is a due-paying member. Honary members, "free rides" and complimentary membership cards don't mean a thing when it comes to weeding out the folks who can be of assistance to us—it's the fellow who pays his 50 cents a year because he thinks it is a good investments, that actually has the power."

Thursday Club Has Delightful Party

Mrs. H. A. Vickery was hostess Thursday afternoon at a delightful party at her home at Highland Lakes, her guests including members of her contract club, and a few other friends. Lovely bouquets of vari-colored zinnias, pink vine and other early autumn flowers decorated the party rooms.

High score prize, a pretty linen guest towel, in a pastel shade was awarded to Mrs. Katherine Bristol. Delicious refreshments of sherbert, cake, and coffee were served after the games.

Those enjoying the afternoon with Mrs. Vickery were Mrs. William Hauptmann, Mrs. W. H. Kempton, Mrs. C. A. Clark, Mrs. Katherine Bristol, Mrs. L. E. Bass, Mrs. S. Y. Hartt, Mrs. George Voorhees, Mrs. G. S. McKnight, Mrs. S. V. Hunnings

Let the DRESSING glorify that simple SALAD suggests Dorothy Greig

ONE of the smartest tricks I know for heightening the appetite appeal of a simple salad is to serve with it an extra special, glorified salad dressing.

One of my best "glorifiers," for instance, contains cream cheese and condensed tomato soup! It does an smooth and creamy, is delicately sharp in flavor and has a lovely cheerful color. This dressing gives zest to plain green salads, and is tartly delicious over fruit salads.

The other day I served it with a salad of pineapple slices and wedges of grapefruit, topped by dried prunes rolled in ground nut meats. (The day before I'd ground the nuts for a cake icing and had some left over.) The dressing is made this way:

Rosy Cream Cheese Dressing
1 package of cream cheese
1 teaspoon of lemon juice
¼ teaspoon of salt
½ cup salad dressing, or mayonnaise
¼ cup condensed tomato soup

Cream the cheese and to it add the lemon juice and salt. Blend in the salad dressing or mayonnaise and the condensed tomato soup. This is delicious and colorful with fruit or green salads.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Myers Will Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary, October 10

Miss Mildred Myers, and her sister, Mrs. L. S. Moody of Augusta, Georgia will hold Open House at their home, 308 north Lake avenue, on Tuesday, October the tenth from three until nine o'clock, in honor of the Golden Wedding Anniversary of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Phillip Myers. No formal invitations will be issued but all friends are invited to attend, during the designated hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Myers, beloved residents of Avon Park for the past 26 years, were married in Huntingburg, Ind., Oct. 10, 1889. They came to Florida 30 years ago, and resided in Lakeland for four years, moving to Avon Park in 1913, where they have since made their home. Another daughter, Mrs. Ray Brown of New York City, will be unable to attend the celebration.

League Officers Are Installed

The Methodist Intermediate League installed their officers, who were recently elected, at an impressive Candlelight Service at the church on Sunday evening.

These officers are: Caroline Holland, president; Helen Jarrett, vice president; Glenn Mingledorff, secretary and treasurer; Josephine Brown, program chairman; Faye Lake, recreation chairman; and Walter Martin, publicity superintendent.

Methodist Society Has Luncheon

Officers and chairmen of standing committees of the missionary society of the First Methodist church held an executive board meeting and luncheon at the hut on Tuesday. Following the delightful luncheon, that was held at one o'clock, and the board meeting that met immediately afterward, the regular monthly business and program meeting was opened at three o'clock in the church.

Officers and chairmen of the society, most of whom attended the luncheon are: Mrs. A. C. Wester, president; Mrs. M. L. Rogers, secretary; Mrs. C. H. Pardee, general treasurer and circle leader; Mrs. John D. Raab, assistant treasurer; Mrs. A. McKee Elwell, program chairman; Mrs. L. M. Orr, spiritual life chairman; Mrs. I. L. Hall, superintendent of supplies; Mrs. Chas. H. Harris, chairman of missionary and Bible study; Mrs. Harry Jackson, superintendent of baby specials; Mrs. R. A. Gerrard, social relations chairman and circle leader; Mrs. W. M. Hetherington, publicity; Mrs. W. S. Rawlings, circle leader; and Mrs. C. R. Mingledorff, pianist.

In addition to the above mentioned, members attending the afternoon meeting were Mrs. Floyd Hougaboom, Mrs. A. R. Clark, Mrs. M. W. Davis, Mrs. Taylor, and Miss Furlow Anderson. Billy Elwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. McKee Elwell, was presented a life membership in the society, this honor being bestowed as a gift from his paternal grandfather, George Elwell of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Wester presided at the business meeting, the topic being "Lighting Our Horizons in Fields of Fire." The scripture, that was taken from Phil 3,7-15, was read by Mrs. Harry Jackson, and Mrs. Mingledorff led the meditation, choosing as her topic, "Seek and Find." Mrs. Raab and Mrs. Gerrard each gave short talks, on the topic of the meeting, and Mrs. Harris closed the program with prayer.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. J. D. Raab, chairman, Mrs. C. H. Price, and Mrs. I. L. Hall were named, and will give their report at the November meeting.

Miss Rose Abramson New Club President

Miss Rose Abramson was elected president of the B. P. W. Club at their regular meeting, Monday evening at the club room in the city hall. Other officers elected were Mrs. Phillip Boardman, vice president; Mrs. Freed Peden, recording secretary; Mrs. Katherine Bristol, corresponding secretary; Miss Sarah Browning, treasurer. Members of the nominating committee were Mrs. Pearl Spink, Miss Hettie Hundertmark, Miss Kate Tompkins.

Plans for winter activities were discussed and suggestions were invited from members, as to ideas that they thought would be constructive. The next meeting, which will be a social affair, will be held Oct 16, with Miss Hettie Hundertmark and Miss Millie Pearson, as hostesses.

Those attending the meeting were Mrs. Phillip Boardman, Mrs. Katherine Bristol, Mrs. Freed Peden, Mrs. C. A. Clark, Mrs. C. R. Ginn, Jr., Miss Millie Pearson, Mrs. Pearl Spink, Mrs. Olive E. Anderson, Miss Margaretha Vogt, Miss Hettie Hundertmark.

Dr. and Mrs. Reeves Entertain Club

Dr. and Mrs. Stanley N. Reeves were hosts at bridge on Thursday evening, their guests on this enjoyable occasion being members of their bridge club. The rooms were tastefully decorated with bouquets of roses and zinnias. A delicious dinner was served at 7:30 o'clock and was followed by several interesting progressions of contract.

High score prize for ladies was won by Mrs. H. E. Keller, who received a pair of modernistic book ends; gentleman's high score award, a novelty carved ash tray was given to Walter S. Betts.

Those enjoying the dinner and bridge were Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Betts, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. C Parke Anderson, Mrs. J. Paul Garber, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lanier, Dr. and Mrs. D. G. Perry, and Dr. and Mrs. Reeves.

If you have a child in school, it is your duty and privilege to become a member of the PTA.

W. M. S. Observes Week of Prayer

The W. M. S. of the First Baptist Church observed the Week of Prayer, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday by special services. A short business meeting was held Monday afternoon, Mrs. J. D. Sherman reading the treasurer's report. Mrs. W. W. McFarland, new president, had charge of the business meeting.

Circle number one had charge of the Monday meeting, with Mrs. C. W. Pabor as leader. The theme for the week was "Building the Kingdom in Florida". Devotional by Mrs. Pabor, the subject being "Foundation and Cornerstone". Songs, "How Firm a Foundation", "Tell Me The Old, Old Story" and others were sung.

Those having parts on the program were Mrs. S. F. Longbottom, Mrs. R. H. Lawhon, Mrs. Otto Skipper, Mrs. Ben Fussell. Prayers were offered by Mrs. W. C. Touchton, Mrs. S. F. Longbottom, Mrs. J. D. Sherman, Mrs. Frank Costine, Mrs. J. L. Collins, and Mrs. J. P. Dalton.

Those present on Monday were Mrs. C. W. Pabor, Mrs. J. E. Crosby, Mrs. W. C Touchton, Mrs. Otto Skipper, Mrs. Mark Smith, Mrs. David Stuckey, Mrs. J. D. Sherman, Mrs. H. L. Bishop, Mrs. B. F. Lockett, Mrs. Lena Clements, Mrs. Paul McFarland, Mrs. J. L. Collins, Mrs. Ben Fussell, Mrs. W. W. McFarland, Mrs. Frank Costine, Mrs. H. H. Shepherd.

TUESDAY'S PROGRAM

Mrs. S. J. Pendleton was the leader of circle number two which had charge of the meeting on Tuesday. The devotional was led by Mrs. Pendleton, and was taken from I Cor. 3, and I Peter, 3, 5. The theme was "Building Material". Those taking part on the program were Mrs. E. Spencer, Mrs. J. E. Crosby, and Mrs. J. E. Coen Jr. A song was sung and prayers were offered by Mrs. Pendleton, Mrs. Dalton, Mrs. McFarland and Mrs. Longbottom.

Those present were Mrs. J. D. Sherman, Mrs. S. J. Pendleton, Mrs. J. E. Crosby, Mrs. W. C. Touchton, Mrs. S. F. Longbottom, Mrs. E. Spencer, Mrs. J. P. Dalton, Mrs. W. W. McFarland, Mrs. J. B. Coen Jr.

WEDNESDAY'S PROGRAM

The young people of the church had charge of the meeting Wednesday night. It was announced that the Association meeting will be held Oct. 23 at New Hope, and will be an all day meeting.

Jordon - Lovier Wedding Saturday

Miss Ann Elizabeth Lovier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lamar C. Lovier of Lake City and A. Eugene Jordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Jordon of Avon Park were quietly married on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock at the court house in Orlando, the county judge performing the ceremony.

The bride wore an early fall suit in grey, with black accessories.

Mrs. Jordon was graduated from the Lake City high school, and attended the University of Miami, where she was pledged to Tri Delta sorority. She made her home in Avon Park last winter with her aunt, Mrs. C. L. Hood and her cousin, Miss Barbara Eaton. While here, she was employed in the office of the Lake Byrd Packing Co.

Mr. Jordon was a member of the graduating class of 1938 of the Avon Park high school. He is employed by the Florida Public Service Co.

The young couple are receiving a shower of congratulations from their many friends.

Guild Members Have Luncheon Meeting

Members of St. Margaret's Guild of the Episcopal church spent a profitable morning on Wednesday, when they met at the parish house at 9 o'clock, and sewed on garments for the mission box. Mrs. S. S. Thayer, president, presided at a business session. It was announced that the next meeting, on Wednesday, Oct. 18 would be held at Lake Byrd lodge, with Mrs. Sue Gregory, as hostess, and would be an all day session.

At noon, a tempting luncheon was enjoyed by those present who were Mrs. Sue Gregory, Mrs. Walter Betts, Mrs. R. I. Brown, Mrs. Alexander Gilmour, Mrs. M. E. Covington, Mrs. J. A. Johnson, Jr., Mrs. Denos Mandis, Mrs. E. G. Todd, Mrs. Norton Smith, Mrs. S. S. Thayer.

A WPA allocation of $11,300 for construction of cattle pens, weighing scales, and other facilities at the Plant City State Farmers' Market, was announced the week by Representative J. Hardin Peterson.

CHURCHES

METHODIST CHURCH

C. R. Mingledorff, Pastor

The young women of the land may be a tremendous force if they will throw their influence and example in favor of regular church attendance.

The young men develop a wonderful interest in the church when the young women are regular in attendance.

What this country needs is to follow the footsteps of the fathers instead of the footsteps of the dancing masters.

Beginning Monday, October 16, Rev. Jesse E. Jones of Titusville, will do the preaching in a revival at this church. Please keep open on your slate, October 16 to October 30 and read your local paper next week for further news concerning this event.

We will be expecting you at church school at 9:45 a. m., when we shall study the topic, "Making ready for the king." Are you making ready for his appearance? Come study with us and profit by the experiences of those who lived in the years gone by.

"Getting Ready To Go" will be the subject of the pastor's Sunday morning message at 11 o'clock. Special music by the choir. Please help your church to help others by attending its services.

The Senior, Intermediate and Junior Leagues meet at 6:30 p. m., an hour of interesting study with these fine young people will gladden your heart.

7:30 p. m., evening worship, sermon by the pastor, "Three Great Questions of Any Age." Special music by the junior choir under the direction of Miss Alma Harrell.

8:15 p. m. Wednesday junior choir rehearsal.

7:30 p. m. Wednesday, mid-week prayer service. Forty-five minutes of Christian fellowship, followed by choir rehearsal.

If absence makes the heart grow fonder, then a lot of people surely do love the church.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Dr. Alfred C. Elliott, Pastor

Sunday, October 8—The annual fall Rally day will be observed, both in Sunday school and church, on Sunday. Sunday school will convene at 9:45 a. m., when a program of recitations, solos, and duets will be presented by the children, and the yearly promotions will be made. Rally Day exercises are always interesting, and the messages given by the children in songs and recitations are greatly enjoyed by the adults. Come, and help to make this Rally Day a great success. Your presence will be an inspiration to the children and you will be glad you came.

Morning service of worship at 11:00 o'clock when we hope to see one hundred per cent attendance of our church members and friends. The summer weeks greatly reduce the attendance at the regular services of worship. Vacations handicap every branch of our activities. Rally Day should bring us all home church again. Seats that have long been empty should be filled, and in a spirit of loyalty we should revive habits of regular worship and re-consecrate ourselves to the service of Christ and His church. In this service on Sunday the children's vested choir will sing "Serve Ye Him," and the processional and recessional hymn will be "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Dr. Elliott will give a story-sermon, "Fisherman's Luck" for the children, and will also speak on "A Royal Religious Reformer."

The Young People's Pilgrim Fellowship will meet at 7:00 p. m. Ruth Wild will lead the meeting and Mildred Wray will introduce the topic, "The Herdsman of Tekoa—the Prophet, Amos." Young people are specially invited to attend.

The Ladies' Aid will hold an all day sewing meeting and covered dish luncheon on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. C. P. Anderson. All members are urged to be present to help with the work for the Christmas bazaar.

The "Quiet Hour" sericees will be resumed on Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. This is a 45 minute service for Christian fellowship, praise, and prayer, with a brief address by the pastor. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend this and all other services of this friendly church.

The senior church choir will meet for rehearsal at the church on Saturday, at 7:30 p. m.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

Joe Cooke Van Dyke, Minister

Where Christianity has gone we find an enlightened people, a high type of civilization. This is accounted for by the fact that Christianity rests upon the great gift of God and calls forth the best that is in man as a gift to God and humanity.

"Send forth love and it will be
Love reflected back to thee.
Give out joy and ye shall find
Joy returned by all mankind.
Radiate light of truth, divine,
And back into your soul 'twill shine.
Give and gain what ye have given;
Lose thyself and find God's Heaven."

In keeping with this thought Mr. Van Dyke is using as his subject Sunday morning, 11:00 a. m., "A Series of Gifts."

History is divided into certain periods by outstanding events and persons. "Before and After" is a title which might be applied to it. This is Mr. Van Dyke's theme for Sunday evening, 8:00 p. m.

Attend all the services of the Church of Christ:

Bible school 10:00 a. m., Sunday.
Preaching 11:00 a. m. Sunday.
Young People's Class 7:00 p. m., Sunday.
Preaching 8:00 p. m., Sunday.
Singing Class 7:30 p. m. Tuesday.
Prayer Meeting 7:30 p. m., Wednesday,
Ladies' Bible Class 3:00 p. m., Friday. (cottage.)

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

Woman's Club Building
Sunday school—9:30 a. m.
Services—11:00 a. m.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject for the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world on Sunday, October 8.

The Golden Text is: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases" (Psalms 103:2, 3).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And a certain woman, which had an issue of blood twelve years, When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and touched his garment. And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague. And he said unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole" (Mark 5:25, 27, 29, 34).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The procuring cause and foundation of all sickness is fear, ignorance, or sin. Disease is always induced by a false sense mentally entertained, not destroyed. Disease is an image of thought externalized." (p. 411:20-23).

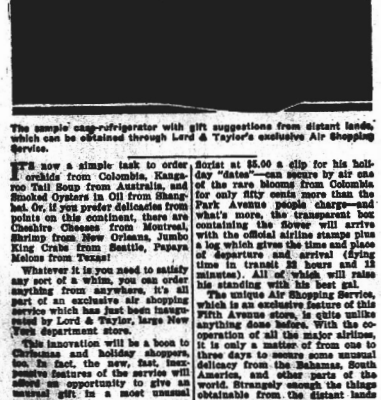
Southern Women Reply to Query

Wherever they go, the "Touring Reporters" find eager answers to their question, "Were you helped by CARDUI?"

Of 1297 users queried among those of 12 states, 1206 stated CARDUI benefitted them. That is 93 out of every 100!

Users everywhere are glad to tell how CARDUI has made them want and enjoy food; how, with its help, they gained strength, energy, were thus relieved of the symptoms of "functional dysmenorrhea" due to malnutrition. Many also say that, when symptoms indicate the need, CARDUI is larger doses helps "at the time" to soothe pain.

Exciting Gifts by Air From Far Away Lands



The sample case-refrigerator with gift suggestions from distant lands, which can be obtained through Lord & Taylor's exclusive Air Shopping Service.

It's now a simple task to order orchids from Colombia, Kangaroo Tail Soup from Australia, and Smoked Oysters in Oil from Shanghai. Or, if you prefer delicacies from points on this continent, there are Cheshire Cheeses from Montreal, Shrimp from New Orleans, Jumbo King Crabs from Seattle, Papaya Melons from Texas!

Whatever it is you need to satisfy any sort of a whim, you can order anything from anywhere. It's all part of an exclusive air shopping service which has just been inaugurated by Lord & Taylor, large New York department store.

This innovation will be a boon to Christmas and holiday shoppers, too. In fact, the new, fast, luxurious features of the service will afford an opportunity to give an unusual gift in a most unusual manner.

For instance, the gay, young Miede, who ordinarily charges Dad for the orchids from a Park Avenue florist at $5.00 a clip for his holiday "dates"—can secure by air one of the rare blooms from Colombia for only fifty cents more than the Park Avenue people charge—and what's more, the transparent box containing the flower will arrive with the official airline stamps plus a log which gives the time and place of departure and arrival (flying time in transit 32 hours and 15 minutes). All of which will raise his standing with his best gal.

The unique Air Shopping Service, which is an exclusive feature of this Fifth Avenue store, is quite unlike anything done before. With the cooperation of all the major airlines, it is only a matter of from one to three days to secure some unusual delicacy from the Bahamas, South America, and other parts of the world. Strangely enough the things obtainable from the distant lands are reasonably priced, gift boxes range from $2.50 to $5.50 plus a fifty cent delivery charge in all cases of separate addresses.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Buchanan are announcing the arrival of a baby daughter, weighing seven pounds, who arrived Saturday morning. The little lady lady has been given the pretty name of Barbara Allen. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Cannon.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, and Pepsin-ize Acid Stomach Too

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, blasting, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and poisons that should move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up that thick undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach-relief, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how Pepsin-izing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

Lynn stared: "Do you think I could persuade Rundhia to try to prove Captain Norwood's innocence?"

"But Lynn dear, if Captain Norwood has been guilty of taking a bribe—"

Lynn interrupted: "I don't believe Captain Norwood is guilty."

"But what do you know about him?"

"Maharanee dear, what do you know about me? How do you know I'm not a criminal?"

"Lynn—"

"Maharanee dear, even if Captain Norwood could be guilty of an ungentlemanly, mean thing like taking a bribe, it was I who betrayed him and I want him to know it. If he isn't guilty—"

The door opened suddenly. Rundhia entered, followed by an attendant in the Maharajah's livery.

"Yes," said the Maharanee, "that man can be trusted. Lynn dear, I will give him both your letters. He will find Captain Norwood, even if he has to hunt all over Kadur."

She gave the man emphatic orders in his own language, told him to go at once, watched him along the corridor and led Lynn through the brass gate to the women's quarters.

Rundhia waited, standing. When he heard the messenger's footfall returning along the corridor, he opened the door, admitted him, closed the door, held out his hand, received both letters, glanced at them and returned to the messenger the one that was addressed to Mrs. Harding.

"Deliver that one. After that, keep out of sight for an hour. Then return and say that you have delivered the other letter to Captain Norwood. Go."

Rundhia opened the letter that was addressed to Norwood. He smiled. There was no heading:

"Your unkindness about what you saw this morning does not make me wish to hurt you in return. There is something I wish to tell you. It is important. I hate myself for something that I said unintentionally, under great strain. I can explain it. Won't you see me?

"Lynn."

CHAPTER XIII

The Bengali doctor entered Rundhia's suite at the palace with the air of a crook who is afraid of a master-crook. He assumed an air of self-importance that he didn't feel; of confidence that didn't exist. He didn't wait for Rundhia to tell him to be seated, and he began to speak in Bengali.

Rundhia interrupted him: "You may discontinue dosing Mrs. Harding. Miss Lynn Harding has accepted an invitation to remain here at the palace, so the sooner the aunt clears out of Kadur the better. Let her get well."

"She has refused medicine. I had to put it on her breakfast food. And now she won't eat. She will recover quickly enough! There is nothing much the matter with her. I am relieved. I do not like to do such things to western people."

"Could you get at Captain Norwood?"

"No."

"I think you'd better. Last night at supper, Norwood watched your clumsy by-play when you gave that pellet to Mrs. Harding. The way you switched the pellets wasn't clever. Norwood suspects you."

"Captain Norwood is himself under suspicion," the Bengali answered. "He stands accused, does he not, of having accepted a bribe? You told me to say so to Mrs. Harding. And I did."

"Yes. I was coming to that," Rundhia interrupted. "I thought the news might influence her to keep Norwood away. Now, look here: officers caught taking bribes, especially if they're popular and well connected, very often commit suicide. Norwood's suicide would be appropriate, convenient and, in the circumstances, not suspicious. How do we go about it?"

"We don't!" the Bengali answered, without a second's hesitation.

Rundhia stared at him scornfully: "Well," he remarked at last, "it might be dangerous to do. You and I must be careful."

The Bengali folded his hands across his stomach: "Very careful."

"Things mustn't be traced back to us," said Rundhia. "There is nothing, so far, that can be traced back to me. But I have the goods on you; and by God, if you don't do what I tell you, you're in trouble."

Fear looked forth from the Bengali's eyes, but he said nothing. He crossed his knees and waited.

"Norwood has got to be killed," said Rundhia. "He is in love with Miss Lynn Harding. He hates me. He is suspicious by nature. He is on the defensive. And he is the type of person whose idea of self-defense is to attack with every scrap of energy he has. That kind of person is much too dangerous. You and I can't afford to let him live. If we can blame his death on the priests, that could be made to hold water. The priests bribed him. By this time, they probably know that the news of the bribe is out. It would be natural for them to murder Norwood, to stop his mouth."

"Well, why not let them! Why not leave it to them?" the Bengali retorted.

"Because they won't do it, you fool! Did you ever know a priest to do a thing at the right time to suit someone else? It will have to be done for them. Now here's the idea: they keep a hospice where mendicants may live as long as they please, for no payment. There are three men in that hospice, who would kill their mothers and anyone else for an ounce of opium. For two ounces, they would murder ten children apiece. You know my man Gulbaz?"

"Too well. Some day that bedmash will turn on you."

Rundhia smiled: "Long before that, dear doctor, he shall swallow one of your prescriptions! Summon Gulbaz. Give him money. I will give you three hundred rupees, and you may keep the change. Tell Gulbaz he is to hire those three men to assassinate Norwood tonight. I don't care how they do it, and I hope they get caught. They have been living for months in the temple hospice. Everyone will believe they are in the pay of the priests. Do you understand?"

"No, he didn't ask me to promise."

"I understand you. I won't do it. I have done what I have done, because you knew of former indiscretions, for which you could have betrayed me to the law. And I will do what I will do, because I need the money. There it ends. I wish you wouldn't keep me waiting. I am becoming nervous. I have drugged his medicine until he needs it five times daily. Now he is demanding one at bedtime. Why wait?"

"Are you sure of the poison?"

"Quite sure. It is the same that I gave you to test on the monkey that you packed in ice and sent to Delhi to be autopsied. It is a vegetable poison. It escapes analysis by all known methods. It is one of five poisons that baffle analysis, once it has become absorbed by the blood. They will find in your uncle's stomach, if they look, some traces of marijuana, which it can be proved that he himself bought, and which I added to his tonic at his own written request. I advise you to act quickly."

Rundhia nodded: "If you will attend to the killing of Norwood, I will let you do the other job tonight. But I want Norwood out of the way."

There was a chill at Lynn's heart. As she walked beside the Maharanee into the room, that was called the boudoir but retained the sumptuous, old-fashioned splendors of a royal bibi-khana, she felt more self-critical than ever before in her life. Not even Aunty Harding's cruelest accusations had made her feel as guilty, and as impotent to undo wrong.

"Lynn darling, why are you silent? I can almost always count on you for chatter when I feel despondent."

"Maharanee, did you ever betray anyone?"

"Let us sit here by the window," said the Maharanee. "Tell me how it feels. Perhaps I can help you to feel differently. You have helped me in so many ways. There is a law of compensation. Perhaps comes now my opportunity to do for you what you have done for me."

"I hate myself," Lynn answered. "You can't change that. I don't want it changed. If I didn't hate myself for what I've done, I shouldn't be fit to live. The dreadful part is, that I can't undo what I did. Oh, my God—" she put her head between her hands "—I didn't mean to do it. If I could cut out my tongue! But I said it. I can't unsay it."

"Lynn darling, did you promise Captain Norwood not to speak about those diamonds?"

"No. He didn't ask me to promise. He took it for granted that I wouldn't mention what any idiot could guess he hadn't wanted me to see. Captain Norwood saw me kissing Rundhia. I know he did."

"Did he say so?"

"Of course he didn't. And of course he won't mention it, ever, to anyone else. The man is a gentleman. I don't want him to despise me, yet it wouldn't bother me if Rundhia did."

"Perhaps you don't yet understand Rundhia."

"Oh, yes I do. Rundhia is a beautiful savage."

"Darling, did you ask him not to tell?"

"I made it quite clear I was sorry I had told him."

"Well, you must remember that you told him something that concerns the State of Kadur. You unconsciously bribed the existence of a bribe that might have changed the destiny of Kadur by legalizing the priests' possession of the diamond mine. I haven't told you much about the diamond mine. It is supposed to be a secret. Do you call it a betrayal that I have mentioned it to you?"

"Don't worry. I won't tell!" Lynn answered. "I never want to hear diamonds mentioned again. How long will it take that messenger to reach Captain Norwood?"

"That depends on where Captain Norwood is. The messenger will have to look for him. He has gone on horseback. I ordered him not to spare the horse. It might take him half an hour—an hour."

"I can't wait for an answer! I wish I had gone in search of him, myself. I haven't any pride left. His career will be ruined, won't it?"

"But darling, he deserves to be ruined if he accepts bribes. And if he is innocent he can prove it."

"Do you believe that? I can easily doubt it," Lynn answered. "I have never once been able to prove my innocence, against Aunty's accusations. Not one single once! Not one time—ever. To this minute, she believes everything she has ever said against me." Then, suddenly: "What is Rundhia doing?"

"I don't know."

"Does he like to be despised?"

"Lynn dear, if you should despise him, I don't know what might happen. Rundhia loves you."

"Does he? You think so? Tell him I despise him! And I will, until he proves to me that he has done his absolute, utmost best to undo the cowardly wrong he has done to Captain Norwood."

"Lynn—"

"Maharanee dear, won't you please tell him? I mean it. He might believe you."

The Maharanee sighed. She left Lynn and walked out of the room to find Rundhia.

Lynn was seated in the armchair by the window, staring at an illustrated magazine, when the Maharanee came back.

"Darling, Rundhia has promised."

"What did he promise to do? What can he do?"

"I mean that Captain Norwood can be cleared of the charge of bribery, if the Maharanee answered. "However, Rundhia made a condition."

"Maharanee dear! Tell me. Don't prepare me for it. I can take it without our pretending it's something else."

"Very well," said the Maharanee. "Let us be quite frank with each other. Rundhia loves you."

"So says Rundhia."

"And I love you."

"I can believe that," Lynn answered. "Why else should you be so kind? I haven't influence or money."

"You have personality," the Maharanee answered. "You have imagination and spirit. You can redeem Rundhia. So that when the day comes that he shall be Maharajah of Kadur, he will be a great man. Rundhia will do anything for you—anything. Your influence will persuade him to do good things, of that I am sure. Even now, having known you only one day, for your sake he is willing to save Captain Norwood. But he makes conditions."

"Can't he tell them to me?"

"He has gone in search of that creature Gulbaz. Rundhia has taken it for granted that you will accept the conditions, since he has accepted, as a monument, your wish that he should help Captain Norwood."

Lynn almost lost her temper. She retorted: "I was treacherous. So was Rundhia. I don't believe Captain Norwood has been! I won't believe it until they prove it."

The Maharanee returned to her subject: "Rundhia insists that you mustn't tell Captain Norwood whose influence it was that saved him. He demands—and I think that is fair, isn't it?—Rundhia can't afford to be compromised—he demands that if Captain Norwood should characteristically force his way into your presence, you will not answer Norwood's questions."

"But I have asked Captain Norwood to come and see me."

The Maharanee's perplexity looked genuine. Lynn didn't doubt it:

"Lynn dear, Rundhia thinks that Captain Norwood probably believes you told about the diamonds because you knew that Captain Norwood was embarrassed by your having seen them, and you wished to punish him for remarks he had made, in the garden, last night. Rundhia thinks that perhaps Captain Norwood won't answer your letter."

Lynn was silent for a long time, thinking. The Maharanee watched her, reading, on Lynn's face, the course of the struggle between pride, humiliation, anger—and some other, western emotion that not even Lynn could have put into words. It was too simple. Too elementary. It escaped analysis. At last Lynn spoke:

"I promise. I won't tell Captain Norwood that Rundhia is helping him. But will Rundhia do it?"

"For you he will do anything," the Maharanee answered.

Norwood sat in his tent and checked Sloddart's survey figures, found a couple of errors, corrected them, admonished Sloddart and gave the sergeant instructions for the following day. Nervously he walked the distance between the horse line and his tent.

After the third of his pacings to and fro, he sat at the table in his tent and wrote a letter to Lynn Harding, tore it up, and made several more attempts. He tore up the last one, gathered all the scraps of paper into one heap, carried them to a cook-fire and burned the lot.

He returned to his tent, scraped out a pipe, wrote another letter to Lynn Harding and tore up that one. It was getting on toward dark. The Kadur River was a splurge of crimson. He heard the hoof-beats of O'Leary's horse at about the hour when he had first seen Lynn Harding in the Maharanee's carriage. Norwood's servant came and lighted the lamp in the tent.

Bicycling Has Become a Popular Pastime in France

So popular has bicycling become in France that the French railways make up entire trains of bicycle cars, the same as mail trains, to handle the more than 7,500,000 bicycles now running rampant over the hills and dales, towns and countryside of that nation, where one out of every six of the population owns a bicycle and stays on it most of the time from the cradle to the grave.

Increased production of low-priced cars, the vast network of motor busses, reduced rates on railways, have all failed to lure the French, men, women and children, from their favorite sport, bicycling. And, where they go, near or far, with them goes their bicycle, until, literally, they crowded the passengers right off the trains during week-ends and vacation seasons.

Bicycle vacationists go directly by train to the center of the distant region chosen for the tour and their bicycles will follow by special train within 24 hours. Or, by shipping one day ahead, will be awaiting the owner. After the holiday is over, the bicycle can be sent back the same way.

In Paris the visitor cannot help but be amazed at the thousands of bicyclists who weave their blissful way through traffic, single or tandem, in groups of 10 or 20, apparently with no thought of all the motor traffic around them. In the Seine department in the Paris area alone, there are more than 400,000 bicycle owners, but the north of France has even more, 430,000. The revenue from the bicycle owners in France is nearly 100,000,000 francs in taxes.

Meaning of Name Vincent

The name Vincent, of Latin origin, means "conquering," which makes it an auspicious name. Vincenzo is the Italian form, according to Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. St. Vincent Ferrer (d. 1419) was called "the angel of judgment" and preached throughout Europe. St. Vincent de Paul (b. 1576) devoted his life to the care of the poor. Vincenzo Catena (d. 1531) was a Venetian painter whose contemporaries ranked him with Titian. Vincenzo Campi (d. 1591) also an Italian, excelled in small figures, fruits, etc. Vincente Espinel (d. 1624) was a Spanish poet whose stanzas came to be called espinelas. Vincent Bourne (d. 1747) was a noted English poet of his day.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT

SEWING CIRCLE

EVEN house dresses must flatter your figure this fall—like No. 1822, cleverly dart-fitted at the waistline. It's really pretty enough to make up in street materials as well as in household cottons like gingham, calico and percale. Deep armholes and belt-less waistline make it supremely comfortable to work in. As you see from the diagram, it's so easy to make that you can finish it in a day.

So Feminine and Charming.

Here's a grand double value, in No. 1827, that gives you a dress, with two-way neckline, in the seductive new silhouette, and, besides, a flaring, frill-edged petticoat! The flare-skirted dress, with broad shoulders and a waistline slimmed in by side sash belts, can be made either with the youthful collar and cuffs, or with a plain round neckline. You'll love it both ways. For this, choose taffeta, wool crepe, flat crepe or faille.

The Patterns.

No. 1822 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 35-inch material. Two yards of trimming.

No 1827 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material with short sleeves; 4¾ yards with long sleeves; ⅝ yard for contrasting collar and cuffs; 3 yards of braid. Size 14 requires 1¾ yards of 39-inch material for petticoat, with 2½ yards of pleating.

Strange Facts

Amused the Ladies
Life Stage Contract
Mongolians Marked

As late as 1921, twelve hundred clergymen, representing fifteen denominations, met in Philadelphia to choose and promote a "moral gown for women." The creation finally selected was somber in color, sacklike in design and reached from the neck to the ankles, where the flounce ended.

The longest term theatrical contracts made at the present time are those issued by the Comedie Francaise, the French national theater in Paris. An artist who becomes a member of this company is obliged to sign an agreement to remain for twenty years.

The ticking of a watch may be heard at a distance of fifty feet by placing it in the proper position before a parabolic mirror and having the observer stand at the point where the reflected sound waves converge.

"The Mongolian spot," is a patch of pigmentation appearing on nearly all children of Mongoloid peoples. It occurs at the lower end of the spine, has a dark blue or mulberry color, is about the size of a silver quarter, and disappears before the fifth year.—Collier's.

Chink to Mick in Flash

Hollywood tycoons are betting drums and singing words of praise these days for a man by the name of Jack Dawn. They jubilantly claim that Mr. Dawn has extended the possibilities of the screen a thousand-fold by creating a plastic makeup that makes any film characterization effective. It is accomplished by the use of rubber-like masks that are sensitive to all facial movements. By using the new makeup it is no unusual occurrence to make a Chinaman into an authentic Irishman in a few minutes. Writing in the Woman's Home Companion, Mr. Dawn says that if you will give him 10 minutes you won't recognize yourself in the mirror.

A Question Only Smith Has the Right to Ask

Jones was strolling down the street when he saw ahead of him what he thought was the familiar figure of a friend. He hurried up to him and hit him a hearty thump on the back.

The other turned round, and, to Jones' horror, presented the face of a complete stranger. "I beg your pardon!" he exclaimed. "I thought you were a friend of mine, Smith by name."

The stranger recovered his breath, and answered with considerable heat: "And suppose I was Smith, must you cripple me?"

But Jones was ready for this. "And what business of yours is it," he cried, "what I do to Smith?"

SOUR TEMPERS MADE SWEET

When you are cross, irritable, and grouchy; when you find fault with folk and the ways the Powers send the cook, you may well suspect that you have a touch of biliousness or "spoiled stomach." Then a little excitement in hot weather. All you may need is a little calogel, or better still, Calotabs. The tasteless calomel compound tablets that make calomel-taking a pleasure.

Calotabs give you the combined effects of calomel and salts, helping Nature to expel the sour, stagnant bile and waste matter of the system. Now or two Calotabs at bedtime with a sip of water—that's all. Next morning your system feels clean and refreshed, your head is clear, your spirits bright, and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish and go about your work or pleasure.

Genuine Calotabs are sold only in checker-board (black and white) packages bearing the trade mark "Calotabs." Refuse imitations. Trial package ten cents; family package, only twenty-five cents, at your dealer's (Adv.)

WINTERSMITH'S TONIC

Curtains That Will Fit Your Color Schemes

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE first curtains of this kind I ever saw were made of the long pieces of good material left at each side of a sheet after the center part had begun to wear. These were dipped in dye to make a soft cream color for the foundation part of the curtains. Wide stripes of gingham and narrow bands of prepared bias trimming were then stitched in place to make stripes. The chart shows the colors that were used and gives the widths and spacing of the stripes.

Of course, you will have some ideas of your own about the stripes and colors. Perhaps you can copy the color scheme of the rug in the room or the wall paper. Or colors in a picture may offer a suggestion for colors for the whole room.

Whatever the materials used you will have fun planning the stripes. In case you should want to use short lengths of goods for the foundation part of the curtains, stitch these together with the seam on the right side; then place a stripe over the joining.

There are 32 other homemaking ideas in the booklet which Mrs. Spears has just prepared for our readers. All directions are clearly illustrated. You will be delighted to own one of these new booklets. Enclose 10 cents in coin with name and address, to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., and booklet will be postpaid by return mail.

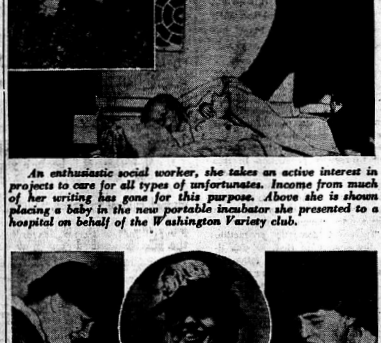
HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

Mrs. Roosevelt Becomes 56; Dubbed 'Public Energy No. 1'

On October 11, Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt marks her fifty-sixth birthday. No longer surprised at her amazing energy, the nation has grown to admire her. Above: She introduces her husband at the New York World's fair grounds.

A favorite with photographers, Mrs. Roosevelt has few inhibitions. At the left she swings mightily to christen the transatlantic Yankee Clipper. At right: She presented diplomas at Arthurdale, W. Va., school, then swung her partner in the dance that followed. More active than any previous President's wife, Mrs. Roosevelt has shattered precedent. U. S. polls have rated her more popular than her husband.

She came to the opening performance of the "Lost Colony" at Manteo, N. C., riding with her party in a CCC truck. At left is the Spanish refugee lad, 12-year-old Lorenzo Murias, for whom she agreed to act as foster parent. He is one of many refugee children living in France, supported partly through private contributions.



An enthusiastic social worker, she takes an active interest in projects to care for all types of unfortunates. Income from much of her writing has gone for this purpose. Above she is shown placing a baby in the new portable incubator she presented to a hospital on behalf of the Washington Variety club.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, and Pepsin-ize Acid Stomach Too

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to be the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach relief, while the laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how Pepsin-izing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerve and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to take this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

Lynn stared: "Do you think I could persuade Rundhia to try to prove Captain Norwood's innocence?"

"But Lynn dear, if Captain Norwood has been guilty of taking a bribe—"

Lynn interrupted: "I don't believe Captain Norwood is guilty."

"But what do you know about him?"

"Maharanee dear, what do you know about me? How do you know I'm not a criminal?"

"Lynn—"

"Maharanee dear, even if Captain Norwood could be guilty of an ungentlemanly, mean thing like taking a bribe, it was I who betrayed him and I want him to know it. If he isn't guilty—"

The door opened suddenly. Rundhia entered, followed by an attendant in the Maharajah's livery.

"Yes," said the Maharanee, "that man can be trusted. Lynn dear, I will give him both your letters. He will find Captain Norwood, even if he has to hunt all over Kadur."

She gave the man emphatic orders in his own language, told him to go at once, watched him along the corridor and led Lynn through the brass gate to the women's quarters.

Rundhia waited, standing. When he heard the messenger's footfall returning along the corridor, he opened the door, admitted him, closed the door, held out his hand, received both letters, glanced at them and returned to the messenger the one that was addressed to Mrs. Harding.

"Deliver that one. After that, keep out of sight for an hour. Then return and say that you have delivered the other letter to Captain Norwood. Go."

Rundhia opened the letter that was addressed to Norwood. He smiled. There was no heading:

"Your unkindness about what you saw this morning does not make me wish to hurt you in return. There is something I wish to tell you. It is important. I hate myself for something that I said unintentionally, under great strain. I can explain it. Won't you see me?

"Lynn."

CHAPTER XIII

The Bengali doctor entered Rundhia's suite at the palace with the air of a crook who is afraid of a master-crook. He assumed an air of self-importance that he didn't feel; of confidence that didn't exist. He didn't wait for Rundhia to tell him to be seated, and he began to speak in Bengali.

Rundhia interrupted him: "You may discontinue dosing Mrs. Harding. Miss Lynn Harding has accepted an invitation to remain here at the palace as the scarlet fever aunt clears out of Kadur the better. Let her get well."

"She has refused medicine. I had to put it on her breakfast food. And now she won't eat. She will recover quickly enough! There is nothing much the matter with her. I am relieved. I do not like to do such things to western people."

"Could you get at Captain Norwood?"

"No."

"I think you'd better. Last night at supper, Norwood watched your clumsy by-play when you gave that pellet to Mrs. Harding. The way you switched the pellets wasn't clever. Norwood suspects you."

"Captain Norwood is himself under suspicion," the Bengali answered. "He stands accused, does he not, of having accepted a bribe? You told me to say so to Mrs. Harding. And I did."

"Yes. I was coming to that," Rundhia interrupted. "I thought the news might influence her to keep Norwood away. Now, look here: officers caught taking bribes, especially if they're popular and well connected, very often commit suicide. Norwood's suicide would be appropriate, convenient and, in the circumstances, not suspicious. How do we go about it?"

"We don't!" the Bengali answered, without a second's hesitation.

Rundhia stared at him scornfully: "Well," he remarked at last, "it might be dangerous to do. You and I must be careful."

The Bengali folded his hands across his stomach: "Very careful."

"Things mustn't be traced back to us," said Rundhia. "There is nothing, so far, that can be traced back to me. But I have the goods on you; and by God, if you don't do what I tell you, you're in trouble."

Fear looked forth from the Bengali's eyes, but he said nothing. He crossed his knees and waited.

"Norwood has got to be killed," said Rundhia. "He is in love with Miss Lynn Harding. He hates me. He is suspicious by nature. He is on the defensive. And he is the type of person whose idea of self-defense is to attack with every scrap of energy he has. That kind of person is much too dangerous. You and I can't afford to let him live. If we can blame his death on the priests, that could be made to hold water. The priests bribed him. By this time, they probably know that the news of the bribe is out. It would be natural for them to murder Norwood, to stop his mouth."

"Well, why not let them! Why not leave it to them?" the Bengali retorted.

"Because they won't do it, you fool! Did you ever know a priest to do a thing at the right time to suit someone else? It will have to be done for them. Now here's the idea: they keep a hospice where mendicants may live as long as they please, for no payment. There are three men in that hospice, who would kill their mothers and anyone else for an ounce of opium. For two ounces, they would murder ten children apiece. You know my man Gulbaz?"

"Too well. Some day that badmash will turn on you."

Rundhia smiled: "Long before that, dear doctor, he shall swallow one of your prescriptions! Summon Gulbaz. Give him money. I will give you three hundred rupees, and you may keep the change. Tell Gulbaz he is to hire those three men to assassinate Norwood tonight. I don't care how they do it, and I hope they get caught. They have been living for months in the temple hospice. Everyone will believe they are in the pay of the priests. Do you understand?"

"No, he didn't ask me to promise."

"I understand you. I won't do it. I have done what I have done, because you knew of former indiscretions, for which you could have betrayed me to the law. And I will do what I will do, because I need the money. There it ends. For you wouldn't keep me waiting. I am becoming nervous. I have drugged his medicine until he needs it five times daily. Now he is demanding one at bedtime. Why wait?"

"Are you sure of the poison?"

"Quite sure. It is the same that I gave you to test on the monkey that you packed in ice and sent to Delhi to be autopsied. It is a vegetable poison. It escapes analysis by all known methods. It is one of five poisons that baffle analysis, once it has become absorbed by the blood. They will find in your uncle's stomach, if they look, some traces of marijuana, which it can be proved that he himself bought, and which I added to his tonic at his own written request. I advise you to act quickly."

Rundhia nodded: "If you will attend to the killing of Mr. Norwood, I will let you do the other job tonight. But I want Norwood out of the way."

There was a chill at Lynn's heart. As she walked beside the Maharanee into the room, that was called the boudoir but retained the sumptuous, old-fashioned splendors of a royal bibi-kana, she felt more self-critical than ever before in her life. Not even Aunty Harding's cruelest accusations had made her feel as guilty, and as impotent to undo wrong.

"Lynn darling, why are you silent? I can almost always count on you for chatter when I feel despondent."

"Maharanee, did you ever betray anyone?"

"Let us sit here by the window," said the Maharanee. "Tell me how it feels. Perhaps I can help you to feel differently. You have helped me in so many ways. There is a law of compensation. Perhaps comes now my opportunity to do for you what you have done for me."

"I hate myself," Lynn answered. "You can't change that. I don't want it changed. If I didn't hate myself for what I've done, I shouldn't be fit to live. The dreadful part is, that I can't undo what I did. Oh, my God—" she put her head between her hands "—I didn't mean to do it. If I could cut out my tongue! But I said it. I can't unsay it."

"Lynn darling, did you promise Captain Norwood not to speak about those diamonds?"

"No. He didn't ask me to promise. He took it for granted that I wouldn't mention what any idiot could guess he hadn't wanted me to see. Captain Norwood saw me kissing Rundhia. I know he did."

"Did he say so?"

"Of course he didn't. And of course he won't mention it, ever, to anyone else. The man is a gentleman. I don't want him to despise me, yet it wouldn't bother me if Rundhia did."

"Perhaps you don't yet understand Rundhia."

"Oh, yes I do. Rundhia is a beautiful savage!"

"Darling, did you ask him not to tell?"

"I made it quite clear I was sorry I had told him."

"Well, you must remember that you told him something that concerns the State of Kadur. You uncovered to him the existence of a bribe that might have changed the destiny of Kadur by legalizing the priests' possession of the diamond mine. I haven't told you much about the diamond mine. It is supposed to be a secret. Do you call it a betrayal that I have mentioned it to you?"

"Don't worry. I won't tell!" Lynn answered. "I never want to hear diamonds mentioned again. How long will it take that messenger to reach Captain Norwood?"

"That depends on where Captain Norwood is. The messenger will have to look for him. He has gone on horseback. I ordered him not to spare the horse. It might take him half an hour—an hour."

"I can't wait for an answer! I wish I had gone in search of him, myself. I haven't any pride left. His career will be ruined, won't it?"

"But darling, he deserves to be ruined if he accepts bribes. And if he is innocent he can prove it."

"Do you believe that? I can easily doubt it," Lynn answered. "I have never once been able to prove my innocence, against Aunty's accusations. Not one single one! Not one time—ever. To this minute, she believes everything she has ever said against me." Then, suddenly: "What is Rundhia doing?"

"I don't know."

"Does he like to be despised?"

"Lynn dear, if you should despise him, I don't know what might happen. Rundhia loves you."

"You think so? You think so? Tell him I despise him! And I will, until he proves to me that he has done his absolute, utmost best to undo the cowardly wrong he has done to Captain Norwood."

"Lynn—"

"Maharanee dear, won't you please tell him? I mean it. He might believe you."

The Maharanee sighed. She left Lynn and walked out of the room to find Rundhia.

Lynn was seated in the armchair by the window, staring at an illustrated magazine, when the Maharanee came back.

"Darling, Rundhia has promised."

"What did he promise to do? What can he do?"

"I mean that Captain Norwood can be cleared of the charge of bribery," the Maharanee answered. "However, Rundhia made a condition."

"Maharanee dear! Tell me. Don't prepare me for it. I can take it without our pretending it's something else."

"Very well," said the Maharanee. "Let us be quite frank with each other. Rundhia loves you."

"So says Rundhia."

"And I love you."

"I can believe that," Lynn answered. "Why else should you be so kind? I haven't influence or money."

"You have personality," the Maharanee answered. "You have imagination and spirit. You can redeem Rundhia. So that when the day comes that he shall be Maharajah of Kadur, he will be a great man. Rundhia will do anything for you—anything. Your influence will persuade him to do good things, of that I am sure. Even now, having known you only one day, for your sake he is willing to save Captain Norwood. But he makes conditions."

"Can't he tell them to me?"

"He has gone in search of that creature Gulbaz. Rundhia has taken it for granted that you will accept the conditions, since he has accepted, as a command, your wish that he should help Captain Norwood."

Lynn almost lost her temper. She retorted: "I was treacherous. So was Rundhia. I don't believe Captain Norwood has been! I won't believe it until they prove it."

The Maharanee returned to her subject: "Rundhia insists that you mustn't tell Captain Norwood whose influence it was that saved him. He demands—and I think that is fair, isn't it?—Rundhia can't afford to be compromised—he demands that if Captain Norwood should characteristically force his way into your presence, you will not answer Norwood's questions."

"But I have asked Captain Norwood to come and see me."

The Maharanee's sympathy looked genuine. Lynn didn't doubt it:

"Lynn dear, Rundhia thinks that Captain Norwood probably believes you told about the diamonds because you knew that Captain Norwood was embarrassed by your having seen them, and you wished to punish him for remarks he had made, in the garden, last night. Rundhia thinks that perhaps Captain Norwood won't answer your letter."

Lynn was silent for a long time, thinking. The Maharanee watched her, reading, on Lynn's face, the course of the struggle between pride, humiliation, anger—and some other, western emotion that not even Lynn could put into words. It was too simple. Too elementary. It escaped analysis. At last Lynn spoke:

"I promise. I won't tell Captain Norwood that Rundhia is helping him. But will Rundhia do it?"

"For you he will do anything," the Maharanee answered.

CHAPTER XIV

Norwood sat in his tent and checked Stoddart's survey figures, found a couple of mistakes, corrected them, admonished Stoddart and gave the sergeant instructions for the following day. Nervously he walked the distance between the horse line and his tent.

After the third of his pacings to and fro, he sat at the table in his tent and wrote a letter to Lynn Harding, tore it up, and made several more attempts. He tore up the last one, gathered all the scraps of paper with one heap, carried them to a cook-fire and burned the lot.

He returned to his tent, scraped out a pipe, wrote another letter to Lynn Harding and tore up that one. It was getting on toward dark. The Kadur River was a splurge of crimson. He heard the hoof-beats of O'Leary's horse at about the hour when he had first seen Lynn Harding in the Maharanee's carriage. Norwood's servant came and lighted the lamp in the tent.

Bicycling Has Become a Popular Pastime in France

So popular has bicycling become in France that the French railways make up entire trains of bicycle cars, the same as mail trains, to handle the more than 7,500,000 bicycles now running rampant over the hills and dales, towns and countryside of that nation, which turns out of every six of its population owns a bicycle and stays on it most of the time from the cradle to the grave.

Increased production of low-priced cars, the vast network of motor busses, reduced rates on railways, have all failed to lure the French, men, women and children, from their favorite sport, bicycling. And, where they go, near or far, with them goes their bicycle, until, literally, they crowded the passengers right off the trains during week-ends and vacation seasons.

Bicycle vacationists go directly by train to the center of the distant region chosen for the tour and their bicycles will follow by special train within 24 hours. Or, by shipping one day ahead, will be awaiting the owner. After the holiday is over, the bicycle can be sent back the same way.

In Paris the visitor cannot help but be amazed at the thousands of bicyclists who weave their blissful way through traffic, single or tandem, in groups of 10 or 20, apparently with no thought of all the motor traffic around them. In the Seine department in the Paris area alone, there are more than 400,000 bicycle owners, but the north of France has even more, 430,000. The revenue from the bicycle owners in France is nearly 100,000,000 francs in taxes.

Meaning of Name Vincent

The name Vincent, of Latin origin, means "conquering." which makes it an auspicious name. Vincenzo is the Italian form, according to Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. St. Vincent Ferrer (d. 1419) was called "the angel of judgment" and preached throughout Europe. St. Vincent de Paul (b. 1576) devoted his life to the care of the poor. Vincenzo Catena (d. 1531) was a Venetian painter whose contemporaries ranked him with Titian. Vincenzo Campi (d. 1591) also an Italian, excelled in small figures, fruits, etc. Vincente Espinel (d. 1624) was a Spanish poet whose stanzas came to be called espinelas. Vincent Bourne (d. 1747) was a noted English poet of his day.

PATTERN SEWING CIRCLE DEPARTMENT

EVEN house dresses must flatter your figure this fall—like No. 1822, cleverly dart-fitted at the waistline. It's really pretty enough to make up in street materials as well as in household cottons like gingham, calico and percale. Deep armholes and belt-less waistline make it supremely comfortable to work in. As you see from the diagram, it's so easy to make that you can finish it in a day.

So Feminine and Charming.

Here's a grand double value, in No. 1827, that gives you a dress, with two-way neckline, in the seductive new silhouette, and, besides, a flaring, frill-edged petticoat! The flare-skirted dress, with broad shoulders and a waist-line slimmed in by side sash belts, can be made either with the youthful collar and cuffs, or with a plain round neckline. You'll love it both ways. For this, choose taffeta, wool crepe, flat crepe or faille.

The Patterns.

No. 1822 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 35-inch material. Two yards of trimming.

No 1827 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4¼ yards of 39-inch material with short sleeves; 4½ yards with long sleeves; ⅝ yard for contrasting collar and cuffs; 3 yards of braid. Size 14 requires 1¾ yards of 39-inch material for petticoat, with 2½ yards of pleating.

A Question Only Smith Has the Right to Ask

Jones was strolling down the street when he saw ahead of him what he thought was the familiar figure of a friend. He hurried up to him and hit him a hearty thump on the back.

The other turned round, and, to Jones' horror, presented the face of a complete stranger. "I beg your pardon!" he exclaimed. "I thought you were a friend of mine, Smith by name."

The stranger recovered his breath, and answered with considerable heat: "And suppose I was Smith, must you cripple me?"

But Jones was ready for this. "And what business of yours is it," he cried, "what I do to Smith?"

As late as 1921, twelve hundred clergymen, representing fifteen denominations, met in Philadelphia to choose and promote a "moral gown for women." The creation finally selected was somber in color, sacklike in design and reached from the neck to the ground. The ladies were merely amused.

Chink to Mick in Flash

Hollywood tycoons are beating drums and singing words of praise these days for a man by the name of Jack Dawn. They jubilantly claim that Mr. Dawn has extended the possibilities of the screen a thousand-fold by creating a plastic makeup that makes any film characterization effective. It is accomplished by the use of rubber-like masks that are sensitive to all facial movements. By using the new makeup it is no unusual occurrence to make a Chinaman into an authentic Irishman in a few minutes. Writing in the Woman's Home Companion, Mr. Dawn says that if you will give him 10 minutes you won't recognize yourself in the mirror.

SOUR TEMPERS MADE SWEET

When you are cross, irritable, and grouchy, when you have no joy with the coffee, the eggs, the bacon, and the cook, you may well suspect that you have a torpid liver, sluggish or so-called "Torpid Liver," so prevalent in hot weather. All you may need is a little relaxed, or better still, "Calotabs," the tasteless calomel-containing tablets that make calomel-taking a pleasure.

Calotabs give you the combined effects of calomel and salts, helping Nature to expel the sour, stagnant bile and washing it out of the system. One or two Calotabs at bedtime with a glass of water,—that's all. Next morning your system feels clean and refreshed, your head is clear, your spirits bright, and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish and go about your work or pleasure.

Genuine Calotabs are sold only in sealed packages bearing the familiar "Calotabs" design. Insist on this safe, proper package; ten cents; family package only twenty-five cents, at your dealer's (Adv.)

Curtains That Will Fit Your Color Schemes

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE first curtains of this kind I ever saw were made of the long pieces of good material left at each side of a sheet after the center part had begun to wear. These were dipped in dye to make a soft cream color for the foundation part of the curtains. Wide stripes of gingham and narrow ones of prepared bias trimming were then stitched in place to make stripes. The chart shows the colors that were used and gives the widths and spacing of the stripes.

Of course, you will have some ideas of your own about the stripes and colors. Perhaps you can copy the color scheme of the rug in the room or the wall paper. Or colors in a picture may offer a suggestion for colors for the whole room.

Whatever the materials used you will have fun planning the stripes. In case you should want to use short lengths of goods for the foundation part of the curtains, stitch these together with the seam on the right side; then place a stripe over the joining.

There are 32 other homemaking ideas in the booklet which Mrs. Spears has just prepared for our readers. All directions are clearly illustrated. You will be delighted to own one of these new booklets. Enclose 10 cents in coin with name and address, to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., and booklet will be postpaid by return mail.

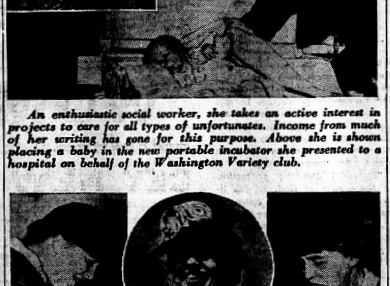
HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

Mrs. Roosevelt Becomes 56; Dubbed 'Public Energy No. 1'

On October 11, Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt marks her fifty-sixth birthday. No longer surprised at her amazing energy, the nation has grown to admire her. Above: She introduces her husband at the New York World's fair grounds.

A favorite with photographers, Mrs. Roosevelt has few inhibitions. At the left she swings mightily to christen the transatlantic Yankee Clipper. At right: She presented diplomas at Arthurdale, W. Va., school, then swung her partner in the dance that followed. More active than any previous President's wife, Mrs. Roosevelt has shattered precedent. U. S. polls have rated her more popular than her husband.

She came to the opening performance of the "Last Colony" at Manteo, N. C., riding with her party in a CCC truck. At left is the Spanish refugee lad, 12-year-old Lorenzo Murias, for whom she agreed to act as foster parent. He is one of many refugee children living in France, supported partly through private contributions.



An enthusiastic social worker, she takes an active interest in projects to care for all types of unfortunates. Income from much of her writing has gone for this purpose. Above she is shown placing a baby in the new portable incubator she presented to a hospital on behalf of the Washington Variety club.

Where's Club Been All These Years; Beat Lakeland 7-0

(By CLIFFORD CRAFT)

The Avon Park baseball team trampled the Lakeland baseball team 7 to 0 last Sunday afternoon at Head Field. "Lefty" Meriwether hurled the Avon Park boys to victory when he gave no hits for the first six innings. Bud Clark who relieved Meriwether allowed Lakeland their only two hits of the game.

Avon Park probably played their best ball when they collected three hits and scored two runs in the second frame. C. B. Martin singled through second. Red Stephens grounded to the pitcher who overthrew first. Martin and Stephens successfully completed a double steal, advancing to second and third. Merle Landress was safe on first when Toth, Lakeland pitcher, played the ball home to catch Martin at the plate. Martin was safe and Stephens scored on the error. Landress stole second but went out trying to take third also. Meriwether hit a triple deep into center field, but remained on third as Ray Mathis beat out a bunt, and died there when Spot Bunting failed to connect.

Meriwether, Avon Park's ace moundsman, fanned eight of the first nine men to face him. In the next three innings he eased up and fanned only three. The Lakeland boys seemed unable to do anything with C. W.'s fast breaking curve ball. Bud Clark fanned five of the ten men that faced him in the final three innings.

Spot Bunting led the batters with a double and a single in three times at bat. C. B. Martin hit a triple and a single in four times at bat next best.

Above: Eliza Peeples, as "Miss Spirit of Turpentine" symbolizes the rebirth of the age-old Gum Turpentine industry which has followed the formation of the American Turpentine Farmers Association Cooperative.

One of the youngest Turpentine farmers shows the modern can adopted by the AT-FA.

One of the first products of the New World to go back to England was the "juice" of the pine tree, containing marvelous healing powers and valuable in keeping water out of the English King's wooden ships. And as early as 1606, the French in America were producing Gum Turpentine. Captain John Smith, leader of the Jamestown colony in Virginia, gave the following directions for obtaining the gum of the pine tree:

"Pyne trees, or ffirre trees, are to be wounded within a yard of the grounde, or boare a hoal with an agar the third prte into the tree, and lett yt runne into anye thinge that may receyve the same, and that wch yssues owte willbe Turpentyne worthe 18 L. Tonne. When the tree begynneth to runne softelye yt is to be stopped vp againe for preserveinge the tree."

Today an aggressive advertising and merchandising program is setting the Gum Turpentine industry back on its feet and putting this reliable old product into the homes and on the houses of America, for Gum Turpentine is the original and best thinner and solvent for paints and has many household and therapeutic uses. The progress of this Southern industry extending from North Carolina through Mississippi and valued at $25,000,000 annually is of vital importance to the South. More than 90% of American Turpentine producers belong to the American Turpentine Farmers Association Cooperative.

World Series Sportscasters

GRANTLAND RICE (7), Edwin C. Hill (3), Lowell Thomas (8) and Gabriel Heatter (6), a quartet of famous broadcasters and sports experts, will treat baseball fans to the "color stuff", each appearing on a different game, during the World Series starting Oct. 4th at the Yankee Stadium.

Red Barber (1) and Bob Elson (5), two of radio's best known sportscasters will do the play-by-play descriptions of the games and Stan Lomax (4) will take his turn at the mike during each game for the Gillette Safety Razor Company who purchased the World Series broadcasting rights for $100,000 through Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball. These seven men represent the greatest galaxy of personalities ever assigned to cover one sporting event in radio history.

The Series will be heard exclusively over the coast-to-coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting System and throughout the Dominion of Canada. Through short wave facilities the play-by-play reports will be transmitted to Europe, South America, Africa, Cuba, Hawaii and the West Indies.

FLORIDA FLOWERS

BUTTERFLY LILIES:—

ORCHID ALAMANDAS:—

HAWAIIAN HIBISCUS:—Autumn usually means the fading of nature's beauty—but in beautiful Cypress Gardens near Winter Haven, fall sees the opening of a long season of blooming for some of the most beautiful tropical flowers in the land. The three varieties shown framing the faces of beautiful misses are but of a few that will be seen during the fall and winter.

HINTS TO AVON PARK FLOWER GROWERS

For those that are anticipating roses for winter blooming, florists say that the season for planting begins about October 15, depending on weather conditions. A number are already making up their orders for fall planting. Consult your florist.

Among the varieties suggested for this section are the following: Red and Pink Radiance, Talisman, Etoile de Holland, Briar Cliff, Caledonia.

Roses planted in early October may be expected to bloom about Christmas.

This is the month for planting Easter bulbs, also snapdragon and pansy seeds.

Remember the eflower show in March. Plant now!

AUXILIARY TO MEET MONDAY NIGHT

The American Legion Auxiliary will meet Monday evening, Oct. 9 at eight o'clock at the home of Mrs. Demos Mandis, with Mrs. Walter Martin, co-hostess. This is the first meeting, following the summer vacation, and all members are especially urged to attend.

FRED TOUCHTON, JR.

Fred Touchton, Jr., son of the former senator of this district, Fred Touchton, and Mrs. Touchton, now living in Avon Park, has recently been elected president of the senior class of Avon Park high school, a position he also held in the junior class. Fred, Jr., is also a valuable member of the Avon Park high school football squad known as the "Red Devils" and reference to him in the description of the team appearing in the "Scenic Highlands Sun" states: "Fred 'Governor' Touchton, Jr., came to A. P. H. S. in 1937, made his letter in 1938 and is trying hard to get two stripes on his senior letter. Fred weighs 150 pounds."

Fred has many school friends and other friends here of his family who are pleased to know of his interesting activities.—Dade City Banner.

Although everyone was supposed to have their driver's license prior to October 1, officials statede that no arrests would be made until all have had sufficient opportunity to secure them.

Florence Villa Throws Dusky Devils for Loss

Hopewell Junior High went down 6-0 before the Florence Villa high school when the colored elevens clashed Thursday night on the new Avon Park athletic field.

Florence Villa uncorked a passing attack early in the game to put the Hopewell boys on the defensive. Late in the second quarter with the ball near the 20 yard line a pass from R. Brooks to Fred Coleman resulted in a score. A dropkick for the point failed. Smith of Florence Villa proved the most potent ball carrier. The right end provided spectacular playing in the last two quarters of the game, breaking up several plays.

The Avon Park dark horses opened up an aerial attack in the last half. Lewis James, Hopewell left end, snagged a number of passes and was largely responsible for placing the ball on the Florence Villa 10 yard line. They were held for downs, after an apparent fumble by Smith of Florence Villa who pulled a quick kick and put the ball out of the danger zone. Again in the last quarter when Henry Adams rushed passes from F. Lull for substantial gains the ball was placed on the Florence Villa 13 yard line. However, a pass failed and the ball was lost on downs.

The Hopewell cheering section displayed the latest in rhythm cheering, this alone being worth the price of admission. A large crowd of white people attended.

The officials were: Spot Bunting, referee; Frank Andreu, field judge; Bud Belin, head linesman; Curt Lawhon, time keeper.

AMERICAN BOY MAGAZINE COMPANION TO THOUSANDS

Hundreds of thousands of boys and young men read THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine every month and consider it more as a living companion than a magazine.

"It's as much a buddy to me as my neighborhood chum," writes one high school senior. "THE AMERICAN BOY seems to understand a boy's problems and considers them in such a sympathetic and helpful way. It gives advice and entertaining reading on every subject in which a young fellow is interested. It is particularly helpful in sports. I made our high school basket ball team because of buying tips I read in THE AMERICAN BOY.

Many famous athletes in all sports credit much of their success to helpful suggestions received from sports articles carried in THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine. Virtually every issue offers advice from a famous coach or player. Football, track, tennis, in fact every major sport is coveded in fiction and fact articles.

Teachers, librarians, parents and leaders of boy'sclubs also recommend THE AMERICAN BOY enthusiastically. They have found that as a general rule regular readers of THE AMERICAN BOY advance more rapidly and develop more worthwhile characteristics than do boys who not read it.

Trained writers and artists, famous coaches and athletes, explorers, scientists and men successful in business and industry join with an experienced staff to produce IN THE AMERICAN BOY, the sort of reading matter boys like best.

THE AMERICAN BOY sells on most newsstands at 15c a copy. Subscription prices are $1.50 for one year or $3.00 for three years. Foreign rates 50c a year extra. To subscribe simply send your name, address and remittance direct to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich.

Sugar producers in Puerto Rico as well as those of the continental United States have been relieved through lifting of production quotas by the federal government.

Jumping from $34,141,180, assets of the 49 federal savings and loan associations in Florida increased more than 40 percent during the year ending September 1.

UNLIMITED SUGAR QUOTAS FOR DOMESTIC PRODUCERS ADVOCATED BY PETERSON

Asserts "Florida Can Compete With World"; Suggests Compromise for Beet Growers Who Want Benefit Payments

By Federal Service Syndicate

Washington, D. C.—Unlimited quotas for domestic sugar producers who are willing to forego benefit payments was advocated here today by Congressman Hardin Peterson, of Florida.

Declaring that Florida can compete in sugar production with any part of the world, Congressman Peterson advocated that unlimited quotas for domestic producers be written into any new sugar bill.

He said that if the sugar beet people feel the necessity for quotas, he thought that at least the Florida growers and others from domestic areas who are willing to forego benefit payments should be permitted to produce all they want to and can produce.

"In view of the fact that we are unable to produce anything like all the sugar we consume, I am strongly opposed to writing into any new sugar bill, compulsory restrictions on productions in any domestic area.

Rep. Peterson

"Let those who can produce and want to produce, do so to the full limit of their ability, and if necessary, let those who want to limit their production and receive benefit payments do so."

Congressman Peterson said he felt that the recent emergency which caused President Roosevelt to remove the quotas was ample demonstration of the fallacy of trying to restrict production in this country and making us so dependent on foreign nations. He pointed out that because of this program prices shot up and there was a price shortage scare.

"Increased domestic production is the answer to that, as was illustrated by the reaction following removal of the quotas," he said.

A number of other Congressmen are expected to enter into the fight for increased or unlimited quotas. While the sugar beet people are said to be concerned over what might happen under unlimited production, Congressman Peterson's suggestion that those who wish to forego benefits be permitted to produce without quotas might be a solution to the question.
