Holland and Whitehair In Run-Off

Speedard Holland ran like a thoroughbred Tuesday to top all opposition in the governor's race by over 2500 votes. Whitehair got the nod for the second primary, and will enter the final lap May 18 with the Barrow man.

Senator Andrews ran away with the senate race, finishing some 80,000 ahead of Jerry Carter, who took second place and will face the Senator in the run-off.

Burns Macfadden made a whirlwind finish to take third place, slightly under Carter and Governor Cone finished fourth.

Patry Warren took third place and Patry ran fourth in the governor's race. Unlike a horse race however, neither third nor fourth pay off.

Patry, who failed to make the grade four years ago, and was making his last bid, says he is through for keeps. On the contrary, Fuller Warren is just starting.

Most people say he is the wildest and the staying qualities and will undoubtedly be groomed for a later entry. The other seven candidates ran about as expected.

Latest Associated Press figures Friday:

Holland 112,317
Whitehair 111,317
Warren 74,824
Patry 74,495

These figures are 118 out of 143 state precincts, and show Warren and Patry neck and neck. Latest returns will affect Holland and Whitehair's position, however.

Lee Big Winner
Col. Lee was the big winner in state contests, sweeping his two opponents for re-election as comptroller in the first primary, with a majority of nearly two to one over both. The figures give Lee: 171,661; Fraser, 60,857; Brown, 50,117.

Realty and Watson must go to the second primary to decide the attorney general. Douglas seems safely ahead of Peacock for another year as railroad commissioner. Larson and Wainwright appear headed for the second primary for state treasurer.

Warren High Hope
Fuller Warren, who made his bid for Avon Park votes, after all of the leading contenders had been here and gone, tore up Patry and Whitehair and was high in Avon Park with 485. Patry was second with 385; Holland third, 145; and Whitehair disappointed the "faithful" with only 187. Holland was second highest in Avon Park due to a local condition, but carried the county with 1221. Patry was second, with 807; Warren third, 654; and Whitehair fourth, with 488.

Andrews beat Carter in Highlands county some 200 votes. Andrews received 1304; Carter 1084. None of the others were in the running, although Governor Cone came through with 545.

Col. Lee got the highest vote of any man on the ticket on a county or county. He topped everybody with 1614, his two opponents got 1006 a few over 1000.

Bentley and Watson ran neck and neck in Highlands, Larson and Wainwright were close, and so were Douglas and Peacock.

Electoral Returns
Furnished by Alex
Cafe and The Sun

Electoral returns were tabulated and broadcasted from Alex Cafe election night, and a large crowd stayed on hand through most of the night as the reports came in. The returns were sponsored by Alex Cafe and The Sun. John DeGaul installed a special phone and handled returns from all points of the county. The Sun and a corps of able assistants got the figures together, which were put over the air by Al Rogers, local radio man, and posted on a large blackboard.

Principal point of interest the next day.

Sans Souci Club Enjoys Party

The group of members of the Sans Souci club, who make their home at the Jacaranda hotel during the school year, were entertained at an original and delightful "sans souci" party and dinner on Tuesday evening given by the "sans souci" club.

The tempting menu served at the various homes consisted of fruit cocktail, new potatoes, buttered English peas, hot omelette, and flambéed peach. MY DREAM MOTHER
(By Gladys Holland)
(The Gladys Post)
I'm writing this for a woman
A woman most beautiful and
I wish that she were my mother
Since God has taken mine.
I think of her in the daytime
I dream of her at night
I have never seen another
That to me seems so good and Right.
I saw her first at a ball game
With her husband so good and True;
And I have thought of her daily
Never forgetting the whole night
Through.

She sees me as a stranger
Although I wish that she
Would see me with her
Nobody but motherless me.
I know she thinks I'm crazy
Although I don't not to be;
And I hope that she will know
When next she sees me.
I want to compliment her again
Upon her very kind face
And I hope that someday I will be
At home by her own fireplace.

TRAILER GIRL

By VERA BROWN

WFSU Series

THE STORY TELLER

Lynn Warren, beautiful blonde, was sitting on the porch of the trailer when she saw a man in a suit and hat. He was looking at her with a curious expression. Lynn looked at him for a moment, then she turned away. She was a girl of about 20, with a sweet, innocent face. She was sitting on the porch of the trailer, which was parked on a dirt road. The trailer was a simple, one-room affair, with a small porch. Lynn was the only person living in it. She was a girl who had been abandoned by her mother and was now living on her own. She was a girl who was used to being alone, and she was a girl who was used to being looked at with curiosity. She was a girl who was used to being treated like a curiosity, and she was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing. She was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing, and she was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing.

Lynn was in the driver's seat and Rene, beside her, directed operations. Things went along smoothly for Lynn took the road at a slow, even pace. Before they got to the small town, Rene came back with a small town, and she stopped in front of the first garage. She was talking to a man who was standing there. Lynn smiled and waved her hand. Rene came back with a small town, and she stopped in front of the first garage. She was talking to a man who was standing there. Lynn smiled and waved her hand. Rene came back with a small town, and she stopped in front of the first garage. She was talking to a man who was standing there. Lynn smiled and waved her hand.

"I'll drive carefully, honestly I will," Lynn said. "I want to be sure we get out of Florida tonight. We'll go on and stop before dark. We're not to stop anywhere. There isn't anything to eat in the place." They picked up some groceries in a small town where they were allowed to park on the street for ten minutes. When Rene came back with her arms full of purchases, she threw a New York paper into Lynn's lap. "Four days old, but we'll know what's going on in the home town!" "Home town? I came from Vermont."

"I'm from Ohio, myself, but I'm a New York painter just the same," Rene said. "They finally halted for the night ten miles out of Kingsland, Ga. Both of them were tired, but Rene was a good day's run. Rene pulled the trailer over on a side road. "I've got steak for supper and some potatoes," she said.

Lynn set to work, while Rene read the New York paper. He was deep in the sport page when Lynn was setting the table. She glanced over his shoulder as he read there on the settee. There was a large picture of a smiling young man receiving a golf trophy. "Oh!" Lynn cried out startled. "What's the man?" "Wait man!" "The one who followed us last night?"

"You mean this guy?" Rene demanded, pointing to the picture on the sport page. Lynn nodded. "Listen, child, you made a mistake! 'Wild' Austin has all the money in the world! You should have stayed in Florida!" Rene looked up at Lynn speculatively. She had heard an explanation of the matter of the night before. "You aren't an heiress running away, are you?"

"Of course not! You saw 'It Happened One Night'! You saw the movie. And as for 'Wild' Austin, I have him! I never want to hear his name again." Lynn had to rush and rescue the smoking steak. "The steak's swell. Best meat I've had in weeks," Rene declared as he fell to it.

"When they had finished and were sitting with their coffee, Lynn heard a sound on the table, brushed back her hair and remarked: "Why do they call him that?" Rene, knowing quite well what she meant, said: "Wild, Wild Austin."

"Because he is, I guess," Rene said as he lit his pipe. "He's been in a lot of scrapes. I know some women used him for breach of promise or something. His brother's just like him, having a big fight with his wife. There was a lot in the papers about it before I left." "I suppose I should explain about last night—" "It is not necessary," she told him her story.

"I know what you're thinking—three strange young men in one day." "And such young men! That Melvin is a big shot, too. Lynn was a girl who was used to being alone, and she was a girl who was used to being looked at with curiosity. She was a girl who was used to being treated like a curiosity, and she was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing. She was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing, and she was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing.

"Well, it was pretty tough on you, for me, I needed a cook," Rene began to laugh. "It is funny!" "Well, it wasn't very funny to me," Lynn said. "I mean your being left in a bathing suit, fat in Florida."

"I haven't the faintest idea," Lynn said. "I mean your being left in a bathing suit, fat in Florida." "I wonder why Mrs. Warren went off and left you?" "I haven't the faintest idea," Lynn said. "I mean your being left in a bathing suit, fat in Florida."

"I know. My mother died last year. I kept my nose to the grindstone. I was older than I, and, well, I couldn't ask her husband to support me, too. Besides, things aren't going any too well with them."

"I want to show you some of my sketches," he said. "What did you call them?" "Lynn opened one of the deep drawers under her bunk. They were piled there neatly. Rene handed her a sketch of a girl in a bathing suit. "Let's go down there. We can buy fresh milk, and maybe they'll have a telephone. I think we can make it."

"Lynn thought afterward how different things might have been if she'd never visited the Lovell farm. When they came limping up the edge of the big farmyard, the farmer who was pumping water at the well came out to the road. "How far to town?" Rene asked. "About five miles."

"Can I get you to tow me?" Rene asked, getting out to indicate his car from the trailer. "The man got his own car out of the garage, and they hitched Rene's sick automobile on with a chain. "Will it be all right to leave my trailer here?" "We'll probably be stuck overnight."

"Sure. You and your wife can stay at the house if she wants to," the man added. "The picture, full of white sunlight and wind, arrested Lynn. It was a water color of some bathers on the beach. It was a slight thing, and until that moment it had not occurred to Lynn to wonder whether or not Rene was a good painter."

"The picture arrested the girl. It was full of white sunlight, and wind. "It's good!" she exclaimed taking it nearer to the oil lamp. "Oh, I'm not much of a critic, but I've always loved pictures. Let me see some more."

"They spent an hour over the sketches, and then Rene declared he was tired. They had agreed on an early start in the morning. With nine hours' sleep they felt they would be ready to forge ahead through Georgia. Rene got some blankets together, to go out into the car, when Lynn looked out the door. "It's raining hard, Rene," she said. "I don't think you should sleep in the car tonight."

"No, that is not fair. I'm crew. There are two bunks here. I saw a curtain rolled up in the clothes closet today." She went and got out some crumpled yards of gingham. "We'll rig this up. That's what Mrs. Warren always did. It makes complete little rooms."

Rene patted her arm. "Good girl! You're a real sport. I'll fix that. Lynn, I'll admit I didn't read of sleeping in the back seat of that car. I'm dead for sleep. So that was the way it was arranged. Lynn kept her bunk at the front of the trailer, Rene's was on the sofa at the dining table. Lynn folded away the table, made up her bed while he went out to check everything for the night, to throw a piece of canvas over the motor. "I have to nurse the old wreck tonight," he said. "If it gets wet, we'll never get her started."

and began rattling dishes in the galley. "How long before breakfast?" Rene called in a sleepy voice. "Ten minutes, thirty!" Rene got up, called for the bathing robe, which Lynn threw to him over the breakfast partition. "That brook's a nice place for a bath," she said.

"I won't be five minutes," he promised. Rene was in great spirits. The weather this morning was perfect. Rene was a girl who was used to being alone, and she was a girl who was used to being looked at with curiosity. She was a girl who was used to being treated like a curiosity, and she was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing. She was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing, and she was a girl who was used to being treated like a thing.

"What I want more than anything in the world is to go about for a year to study. I've got to get to work and make some money somehow." He lapsed into silence. "One I better let you tell me about yourself."

"I just want a job, that's all!" "What kind of a job? What's your ambition?" "Ambition for me is foolish. I can't paint. I can't sing or dance. I can only work with my hands. That's about all. I'm through high school and I can type a little. That's the extent of my accomplishments."

"Wouldn't you like to go into the movies?" "No." "What do you want?" "Lynn hesitated. "What most girls want deep in their hearts, I suppose, is a home, a husband and children."

"At lunch time Lynn got their food ready as Rene drove, and then they stopped on the roadside and ate it. It must have been his afternoon when they crossed into South Carolina. The wind was colder, but the sun was still bright. They were discussing where they should stop for the day when the motor began to knock violently. "Lord, something's wrong with this car!" Rene stopped and got out and examined the hood. Lynn looked at his hopeless air. She could imagine what Rene would be as a mechanic. They pulled out of the way and re-considered. There was a farm house about a quarter of a mile down the road.

"Let's go down there. We can buy fresh milk, and maybe they'll have a telephone. I think we can make it." "Lynn thought afterward how different things might have been if she'd never visited the Lovell farm. When they came limping up the edge of the big farmyard, the farmer who was pumping water at the well came out to the road. "How far to town?" Rene asked. "About five miles."

By DR. JAMES W. BASTON
Chronic Pains May Be Aided By Body Brace

A PREPARATORY school reports that while the parents of the present pupils were a little taller than their parents (the grandfathers of the present pupils), the present pupils are so much taller.

Longer beds have become necessary. And physicians having to do with the examination and care of previous and present generations of preparatory and university students report that the average height of the present students is between one and two inches more than the previous generation.

This increase in height was accompanied by an increase in width and strength. It was often accompanied by a great boom, but unfortunately the increase in height is often accompanied by a lack of fat to hold up the abdominal organs, allowing the stomach, intestines and kidneys to drop more or less thus interfering with digestion.

In describing a case before the International Assembly of Physicians in Philadelphia, Prof. Peter Z. Hoban, University of Kansas school of medicine, said:

"A chronic pain suffered. When a woman came to me complaining of pain in the right lower side of the abdomen; diarrhea and constipation. The pain had been present for months and was worse after a period of weeks. At the time I saw her it had been almost constant for the longest part of the day for over seven years and was worse when she was overtired. She also had a headache for 20 years. She consulted me over a year ago and the first thing I did was to take her history (which in her story and have her answer my questions) which required three hours. I gave her some advice and a back rub. She had had no pain and her bowels and general health are better."

Epileptic Attacks Greatly Reduced
PATIENTS now look back but a few years to being to mind the large number of patients suffering with epilepsy who "hook their" on the street, in their homes, churches and theaters or anywhere else they happened to be. Today it is as common to see a patient undergoing an epileptic attack.

Here are a few simple rules to be followed:
1. Cutting down on all starch foods—bread, potatoes, etc.
2. Cutting down on all liquids—water, tea, coffee, milk, soft drinks, etc.
3. Increasing the fat foods—butter, cream, fat meat, egg yolks.

The use of a tablet of phenobarbital (1/2 to 1 1/2 grains), as prescribed by a physician, every 30 hours. However, the body pays for its relief by giving up some of its good blood.

Patients Are Examined.
Dr. O. Mallard and Miss Jammet state in Paris Medical Journal that having observed anæmia (this blood is too thin) in two epileptic patients who had been treated for a long time with phenobarbital, they then examined the blood of 18 epileptic patients who had been treated with phenobarbital for several years. In eight of the patients they detected a more or less severe reduction in red blood corpuscles and also other changes. As the reduction of the red corpuscles (and the other changes also) came about very slowly, neither patient nor physician suspected that the symptoms—tiredness, paleness, rapid heart-beat, the swelling of ankles—were due to anæmia following the use of phenobarbital.

Now the epileptic attacks must be prevented and phenobarbital must be used, but these investigators state that the blood can be made thicker by reducing the dose of phenobarbital and by treating the patient with liver extract. It is really a very happy discovery—two to one—says a lady—would give satisfactory results.

Don't Become an Air Hostess If You're Afraid of Hard Work

Being an airline stewardess is romantic, but it isn't peachy and easy. Katherine Wilson, below, TWA's hostess, says: "I'm an American Airlines' hostess. I've been a stewardess for a year. I'm a Canadian. I must be registered as between 21 and 23 years old; not under 5 feet 5 inches; weight, between 100 and 125 pounds; cheerful disposition; attractive; unmarried. Training course lasts from six to twelve weeks, and it must be intense because the stewardess duties are legion."

She must know how to handle tickets; how to serve hot meals; make berths; to control heating and ventilating; to answer passengers' questions (flights and others); about airplanes and engines. During training she is paid $2.50 a day. Her starting salary on the run is $100 a month, gradually increasing to $125 a month plus $4 daily for expenses.

A linen or gingham pinafore, with small or dainty blouse, will be pretty for general wear. Plain or striped seersucker will be practical for pinafore and panties; it wears it as a sunbuck frock—can be tucked so easily, and needn't be ironed. The step-by-step new chart gives complete, detailed directions.

Pattern No. 8674 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 3 1/2 yards of 36-inch material for pinafore and panties; 1 1/2 yard for blouse, 3/4 yard ribbon. Send order to:

NEXT WEEK'S GAMES

Sunday, May 12—Avon Park at Protestant.
Thursday, May 14—Protestant at Avon Park.

(By CLIFFORD CRAFT)
Avon Park was looking for its 500 average again this week as a result of a split of two games this week with Bartow. Fort Meade moved into a tie with Protestant for the lead of the league. Leaving the teams of Avon Park, Bartow and Winter Haven still tied for third place. Protestant lost one game to Sarasota and Fort Meade won both of their games, while Avon Park, Bartow and Winter Haven again split their games. Sarasota and Lake Wales moved up into a tie for sixth place to leave the Sebring Pygmies losing down last place when they lost both of their games while Sarasota and Lake Wales split their games.

The Avon Park Citrus Leafs trampled over the Bartow Indians 8 to 1 in a rough-shod manner here Sunday. Ken Willis held the Indians to three hits while he and his team mates piled up twelve safeties. Bartow's lone score of the game came in the first inning when Porter, Indian leadoff man singled, advancing Porter to third. McLeod was safe at first when Stribbling threw wild at first letting Porter in on the play. Pitman then grounded to Willis for a double play when he threw. McLeod out at second, Stribbling who took the play threw Pitman out at first to complete the play, and retire the Indians.

Avon Park loaded the bases in the last of the first but failed to score. In the last eight innings Bartow put one man to third, one reached second, and two others got to first. The Leafs scored their first run in the last of the second. Car struggled on a fast ground ball down the third base line. Willis struck out Stribbling singled to center field. Car pulling up at second. Bradbury grounded out to the second baseman on a hit and run play when the other bases were occupied by three men standing. Landman started to center scoring Car and Stribbling. Stribbling went to second on a throw. McLeod walked. Forch grounded out to the second baseman for the final out.

Avon Park scored single runs in the next three innings but in the sixth they came through with three more. Pope, first man up for the Leafs, singled to right field. Car struggled to left field, advancing Pope to second. Willis then tripled scoring Pope out at first. Stribbling fanned. Bradbury grounded down the first base line where Lindner threw him out at first. Willis scored on the play. Landman fanned for the final out. That ended the Leafs' scoring. But it was plenty.

Ken Willis got eight strikeouts during the game apparently without extending himself. Parfisch struck out one, and Norris, with a side arm pitch and an underhand, threw fanned six.

Red Stephens led the batters with three hits in three innings. Bawa and Car came next with two out of four. Merle Landman and Ken Willis got the only extra base hits of the game when each hung up a three bager.

Score by innings:
Bartow 100 000 000—1 5 4
Avon Park .. 021 113 008—8 13 4
