NEW YORK.—It just happens that a specialist in bankruptcy law is the co-partner of General Trujillo of the Dominican Republic in installing the first of the European refugees in their island haven under the Trujillo plan. But, this specialist, John M. Rosenberg, New York lawyer, has, since the World war, been occupied with the large-scale human-ware bankruptcy of war and famine in Europe, so he is entering no new field. He is president of the Dominican Bankruptcy association, which is co-operating with General Trujillo in what appears to be an absolutely unique experiment in giving 800 refugees a new start in the western world, with houses, roads, land, cattle and farm implements ready for them.

Mr. Rosenberg has helped liquidate and rebuild all sorts of financial and social wreckage, including the New York National Match company, which he is the author of "Corporate Reorganization and Financial Control," but he is also the author of another book called "Funchella."

Funchella, or at any rate, a play of the imagination, has occupied quite as much of his time as law and bankruptcy. He has painted hundreds of pictures, many of which are hung in great galleries at the Fort Museum of Harvard. He is an actor, lithographer and playwright, and he has produced his plays. For six years he was associated with Kenneth Macdonald and Sir George Macdonald in the Provincetown theater. His short stories have appeared in various magazines. All this time out to be counsel for the Irving Trust company.

The foregoing might suggest the activities of a tramp-dancer. But he is, instead, literary and moderate, an ever-going pipe-smoker who always seems to have a bit of time on his hands. Another of his books is "Pastel Expression." He is busy in commercial, civic and philanthropic enterprises and in the immediate post-war years was head of the American Joint Distribution Committee in Europe. This took him to Russia, and he wrote a book about it, "The Road to the Stars." There is to be a general European reorganization—financial and cultural—he might as well take over. He is a native of Albany, N.Y., educated at Columbia university.

THIS decade, it appears, will feature flaming youth among college presidents. The recalcitrant and unorthodox, and comparatively young, Maynard Hutchinson of Chicago College Methods and Stringfellow Barr of St. John's college are shelling the academic ramparts in their drive against what they consider outworn educational techniques. President James B. Conant of Harvard scores an assist in his observation that many college graduates can't read and write fluently, and Dr. Mary Ellen Chase, of Smith, finds undergraduates who don't know their ABCs. She says they find it difficult to use the dictionary because they don't know the alphabetical sequence of letters.

Memor. Hutchins and Barr would scrap much of the present school curriculum and start rubbing in the great books of the ages, in which they find strong support by Mortimer Z. Adler, with his challenging new book, "How to Read a Book."

In 1937, Mr. Barr burned his bridges behind him, when he and young Scott Buchanan, dean of St. John's, started their revolution. A native of Suffolk, Va., Mr. Barr attended the University of Virginia, was a Rhodes scholar and pursued post-graduate studies in Paris and at the University of Ghent, Belgium. He was in the ambulance service in the World war and taught at the Universities of Virginia and Chicago before becoming president of St. John's.

IN THE earlier days of the Nazi movement, young Josef Terboven of Basel was up against stiff competition in his desperate language. For several years he headed the department of throwing a scare into small countries. He was governor of the Rhine Province.

DEDUCTION

Something

Two sailors were shipwrecked.

"Say, Bill," said one of them.

"Can you pray?"

"No," said the other.

"Well, can you sing a hymn?"

"No."

The first sailor thought hard for a moment.

"Well," he said at length, "we'd better do something religious. Let's have a collection."

Customer—He told me that this life was guaranteed to go 10,000 miles. I have only gotten 9,100 miles out of it and look at it.

Salesman—Well my dear sir you forget that that tire traveled 1,000 miles coming here from the factory.

HOW HE DID IT

"You say that you got the same for your old broken down car that Bill got for his new one?"

"Yes! You see Bill's wife ran his car into a ditch yesterday and we had to sell our car to the junk man."

The spread is made of green and white checked gingham trimmed in bands, monogram and frills of white muslin. The bed is an old iron one that has been cut down and then padded and covered with the gingham (detailed directions are in Book 3). The orange crates for the tables are lined with green oil cloth and each wears a green and white checked skirt; and a top cover trimmed in white.

Modest Applicant Was Not a Bit Superstitious

The smiling, confident young man stepped up to the bank manager's desk.
"Good day, sir," he said. "Have you any need for a highly intelligent and trained man just out of college?"
"Well," said the manager, "what kind of a position are you seeking?"
"I want something in the executive line," replied the young man. "Say a vice presidency."
"I'm really sorry," said the manager sarcastically, "but we have twelve vice presidents."
"Oh, that's all right," came the eager response. "I'm not afraid of thirteen."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY ROGER SHAW

Allied Troops Leave Norway
As Spotlight Turns on Italy;
Germans Hold Vital Air Bases

(EDITOR'S NOTE:—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union

THE LONGEST WAY AROUND was the shortest way home for British ships in Italy, entering when England, fearing Italy was getting ready to enter the war on the side of Germany, ordered the vessels to head for home ports via the Suez canal and Cape of Good Hope. This route, indicated by the broken line on the above map, is a distance of 15,000 miles. Normal route (indicated by solid line) is only 2,000 miles.

WOTAN WINS:
In Norway

Following Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, came now Norway. Said one neutral statesman, nervously, "The king of England is the king of death." Frightened Swedish, Netherlands, and Balkan leaders were inclined to agree. Norse writers and generals denounced John Bull, while the English cabinet was torturing.

The Allied troops debarked from Andenes and Namsos, in the strategic Trondheim area, and sailed away, under a terrific hammering from the German bombers. Much of their equipment was abandoned, and the Norwegian troops, poorly armed and trained, as in natural in a small democracy with no impact of a stand in isolated sectors. The English expeditionary force had been out-shot, out-manned, and out-generated. Low down middle, and half-trained regulars, had to face toughened German veterans of the 18-day Polish war, last fall.

The British regulars, too, were not trained for landing operations, to be followed by a land war of maneuver. Good many of their duties had been aboard ship, and as transport troops in far-flung colonies. U. S. Marines had been given the right training for a "Norse" operation, and would have given the Germans a far more telling battle, according to American army and navy men. This was a technical matter of elite.

Anti-Italics

English and French battleships were concentrated in the faraway eastern Mediterranean, and the British merchant marine was ordered out of the blue Mediterranean waters. The English literary to Italia—the imperial Italian—was routed around the African horn, the Cape of Good Hope, to escape Italian submarines, airplanes, and sea-

Not only is there a Dies committee. There is also a Smith committee, and its purpose is to investigate the heavily slanted-around National Labor Relations board. The board, which was created to work with a will and discovered that the well-known Harry Bridges (from Australia) had been elected president of the International Longshoremen's union—over, apparently, by not water—had been the general habit of consulting with the labor board when it "took steps." It also turned out that certain labor board members helped the C. I. O. organize the steel industry back in 1938.

The Supreme court held that a group of seven "Little Steel" corporations had no standing to sue the board. Justice Black wrote the decision, and Justice McHugh dissented. "That must be a mistake," the usual dissent.

Eighty Years Ago Chicago's Wigwam
Was the Scene of an Historic Event:
Lincoln's Nomination for Presidency

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union)

"MR. CHAIRMAN, I wish to announce that the Chicago Wigwam convention transfers four votes from Mr. Chase to Abraham Lincoln."

Eighty years ago these few words touched off a thunderous round of applause and sent word speeding across the nation that Abraham Lincoln was the Republican choice to run for President of the United States.

The scene was the Republican Wigwam in Chicago, where delegates had gathered from 24 states to choose their candidates for President and vice president. Now, 80 years later, on May 18, Republicans of Chicago are holding a commemorative ceremony at the building which stands on the site of the Wigwam, to mark this momentous occasion four decades ago.

The Wigwam, 60 years ago, was a metropolis of 100,000 persons, according to the census takers. It was a place where the leading candidates for the Republican nomination, William H. Taft, Charles D. Ives, and others, were gathered. The Wigwam was a place where the leading candidates for the Republican nomination, William H. Taft, Charles D. Ives, and others, were gathered.

poor of anyone named in connection with the nominations. A week later the paper suggested organization of Lincoln clubs to build his candidacy.

Editorially in the period from early February until April came was made from time to time that Lincoln was the leading candidate, but the Press and Tribune urged that Lincoln was the better voter.

The Illinois Republican convention was held on May 9 in Des Moines, Lincoln was chosen as this body's choice for President.

The Democratic split. Great attention centered on the Democratic convention, held in Charleston, S. C., beginning April 20. Douglas was the most prominently named candidate as the Democratic nominee, but his opposition to his selection was heard on all sides. The Democratic convention battled through two weeks. No candidate could be named. The rump split off and joined to meet in New York on May 18.

The Press and Tribune repeatedly cited election trends in many states and cities in the spring of 1860 as a trend toward Lincolnism. In Chicago, the city elected Lincoln.

The townpeople who were working on the Republican convention obtained the site from the Garrett estate and started construction of the great Wigwam in April, 1860. The structure was 100 by 180 feet, with its main entrance on the street known as Wacker drive.

A gallery was built on three sides of a stage constructed across one end. The stage would seat between 600 and 700 persons and the hall itself was constructed to seat between 10,000 and 11,000 persons.

The Wigwam was lighted by gas. Its interior was left in a rough, unfinished state, to be decorated by the light, graceful and entirely successful handiwork of Republican ladies, to quote the Tribune of that day. The ladies banked the walls with freshly cut evergreens. Seals of the states were hung around the walls, and busts of prominent men of early American history were placed on the supporting pillars. Over the stage was suspended a huge gilt eagle.

The cost of the Wigwam was $6,000 and $7,000. There was a deficit to clear, so on the night of the dedication, Saturday, May 13, an admission charge of 25 cents was assessed. Between 1,000 and 4,000 persons came to the dedication, which seems to have taken care of the deficit since no further assessment is found on the subject.

The Wigwam building was used for various meetings during the next few years, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1871.

An interesting coincidence is noted in connection with the building now standing on the corner where the Wigwam was built. The building today is occupied by district headquarters of three divisions of the R. M. Goodrich company, which this year is marking its 100th anniversary. The building was built on the site of the Wigwam site, both the Republican and Democratic parties were conducting their headquarters in the building which both played significant parts in the history of the city.

one of the first two frame buildings ever erected in the city. There is a dispute as to which of these two buildings was the first. Some claim the Langhamian was the first frame building, but others claim it was the second.

In any event, the Langhamian was famous far and wide. It had been built by Mark Benson when he came from Detroit in 1828. Benson's grand name which occurs repeatedly in early Chicago history and still is frequently seen in the news columns of Chicago papers.

Chicago's First Election. Here on August 10, 1837, came the entire list of qualified voters (all 24 of them) to select the town trustees for the City of Chicago, the first election held in the city's history. Here likewise was the first drama in the West produced, in late October of 1837.

Benson sold the building in 1854. It turned to the ground on March 3, 1861. It had been abandoned as a hotel in the late forties, apparently, and was occupied by only two men, the time of the fire. The property in 1861 was owned by the Garrett estate which later founded the Garrett bible institute and provided the foundation for establishment in later years of Northwestern university.

Tin Can Mails Slow but Sure Postal System

Currents, Tides and Ships Assist in Delivery of Letters.

PARADISE, CALIF. — From V. Flannery of this city office of the efficiency of the "tin can mail service" that is now operated regularly from the little island of Hawaii, which lies between Hawaii and Australia.

After eight months, a letter which was addressed to himself and was fully enclosed in a tin can and mailed via the "tin can route" has been delivered.

Another one, which he addressed to his mother at the same time, has not yet arrived, but he is confident it eventually will as sometimes two years are required for the delivery of a "tin can letter" from Honolulu Island. Few, he declared, are ever lost.

The island of Nantou, a British possession with a population of 35,000, is described by Flannery as being the only one in the world where a can opener is a part of the standard equipment of the post office department.

Perfect Unique System.

Mail is received and sent from here in tin cans, and the system has been developed to a high degree of perfection.

The cans used for mailing letters are canceled or stamped with the phrase "Tin Can Mail, Nantou, Hawaii, Tonga," in eight tongues.

This is done so crews of foreign vessels, which may pick up the cans at sea, can decipher the address and carry the letter to at least one more port nearer its destination or throw it overboard at a point where the winds and currents may be more favorable.

Currents, tides, and ships and the post office system of the country of that destination are counted upon to help the letter to its destination.

A sighting of the service on the island itself is in connection with mail that arrives there, either via ship or by being washed up by the ocean, Flannery said.

When the stamp is canceled, "poor expressive riders," in the form of notices in cans, peddle out to sea to launch the cans again and get them started toward their ultimate destination with the least delay.

Get Supplies That Way.

The development of a tin can mail system, Flannery said, is about as common in the early days when supplies were brought to the island by ships it was impossible for the vessels to get closer than several miles to coral reefs.

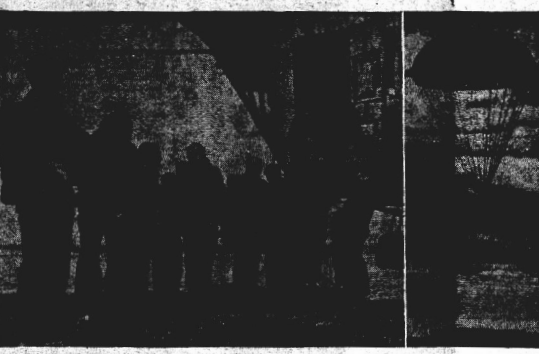

Since then all supplies were put into cans, thrown overboard, and were washed ashore.

Since then the natives have developed the habit of going out in canoes and taking off their supplies. They usually also take out their canned mail, and let the ship throw it overboard at whatever point it will catch the winds and currents most calculated to carry it swiftly to its destination.

Only one thing menaces the present tin can mail service, Flannery said, and that is that the demand from stamp collectors all over the world for the cans bearing the cancellation mark in eight languages has become so great that the natives are getting tired of so much excessive work. The letters are stamped only with the year to which they are "canceled" and mailed, as the day and date has no importance on the island.

Few white people live in that part of the world, Flannery said.

Parachute School Holds Graduation Exercises

At the parachute school of the Laboratory, N. J., naval air station, "graduates" casually take a very practical idea. Before students are awarded a diploma they must make a jump with a "chute" packed by themselves. Left: Members of a class hearing a plane ready to take their last lesson. Right: With breath-taking speed the ground comes up to meet the student jumper. He has finished the regulation training period. The jump is his final lesson—and he knows that he has packed his parachute correctly.

"We'll go look at it now," replied Mrs. Bully in a very decided tone, and led the way.

But just before they reached Drummer's house Drummer himself appeared in the doorway. Mrs. Bully took one look at Drummer's stout bill and then quite suddenly changed her mind. "Perhaps we better wait until there is no one at home," said she.

Bully's face brightened. "A very good idea, I think, my dear," he answered. "Now, suppose we look at the house of Skimmer the Swallow."

SOMETHING NEW AND DIFFERENT. (See Recipes Below)

New Recipes for Your File

"Something old and something new is just as important to a man as it is in a bride's costume."

It's a good idea, when you plan to experiment with something entirely new, to include in that meal one dish you know the family is really keen about. For instance, if the desert is something very new and different, be sure that the main dish of your meal is one that's familiar and well-liked.

Add it's an excellent idea, when most of a meal is composed of family favorites, to include one new dish for a touch of variety. It may be a cut of meat that you haven't used before, prepared in an unusual manner; or perhaps it will be a vegetable that's new and strange to you; or it might be just an out-of-the-ordinary conserve or relish to supplement last summer's supply, which, by this time is probably running very low.

"Pork chop treat," an assortment of recipes for foods that are unusual and delicious. There's a new way of preparing a shoulder of pork—one of those easy casseroles dishes you like to serve, where you don't want to spend too much time in the kitchen; serve the Baked Shoulder Steak with baked or scalloped potatoes, buttered green beans and rhubarb pie, and watch your family beam.

"Pork chop treat" served with a crisp, chilled salad of lettuce, apples, and dates, needs only a beverage, bread and a favorite dessert to make a completely satisfying meal and if you want to please the man of the family in any kind of weather, serve "pork chop treat" with cheese biscuits, a simple green salad, lemon meringue pie and coffee.

of Records

(By W. M. H.)

This man Whitehair and his cohorts are running on my friend Holland's public record when they get through committing mayhem on many things they have their own in the governor's mansion.

It appears necessary for their own record on Holland's public record, for the simple expedient that their own record is not a record. The guy has never done anything to make a public record.

Leads Win Two,
Lose One With
Ft. Meade Steers

Important though it is to our national life, baseball will have to go short in this season, due to the prevalent fever that is running on the loose, and should either be reduced to a minimum or eliminated for some time after next Tuesday.

Our Citrus Leas did right well for themselves last Sunday when they took a double-header from the league-leader Fort Meade Steers by scores of 2 to 1 and 9 to 4.

Leads had a setback Thursday, losing a heart-breaker at Port St. Joe, but they are still in the lead.

Democracy Is Facing Tests
Holland Says

Democracy is facing a test throughout the world today — in Florida, as well as on European battlefields.

For this reason, Florida citizens should go to the polls May 26th with one prime aim in view: to provide through their selection of officials the most stable, the best and the most permanent government possible to obtain.

These were the observations here Monday of Speaker L. Holland, contender in the second primary race for the governorship, in an address before Highlands county citizens.

"The next four years will be critical years in the state's history, in view of the war situation, and we need a government that is clean, wholesome and efficient. I shall endeavor to support, if you believe, in all conscience, I shall give you that kind of government and I shall stand by it to the end."

Speaking further on the war situation, a matter, he said, he had of mind of the war situation, and we need a government that is clean, wholesome and efficient.

Early Work
On Route 19
Is Pledged

Construction of Federal Route highway No. 19—the new scenic highway—through Highlands county was pledged Wednesday by Francis P. Whitehair, replying to telegraphic inquiry.

One of the projects I will lay before the Road Department when I am governor will be Federal Route No. 19 through the scenic Highlands and I plan to insist that the department complete at least one link of the project per year in the scenic Highlands.

Summer
Recreation Program

Every year at this time, there arises the question of what to do with the children for the summer. The children will soon be out of school and they need some definite program.

Avon Park is sponsoring this program with the assistance of WPA and NYA help. Joe Stephens, assistant coach, and instructor in the school selection will be employed by the city of Avon Park to direct and supervise the entire program.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY ROGER SHAW

Nazi Drive Into Low Countries Is Marked by Terrific Fighting; Churchill Replaces Chamberlain

THE WAR:

Bigger and Worse

Domestic, presidential politics were driven, pro tem, into second place by the march of Mars. The Germans added Holland, Belgium, and Luxembourg—the three Little Low Countries—to their list of victims, which now includes Czechs, Poles, Norway, and (according to some) the Austrians.

Against the Dutch and Belgians, Hitler used much of the Norse blitzkrieg buildup. This included the big Junkers air transports (30 men per jet), parachute jumpers all armed to the teeth, aerial bombardment of "enemy" air fields and concentration centers, and mass movements of infantry against the frontiers, by land. The French came to the assistance of Belgium, as in 1914, and the English crossed the channel to Holland—that same channel that Hitler himself would so much like to use for a poke at John Bull's nostril.

"Toujours La Guerre!"

Lenzbourg did not resist (again) in 1914, but Belgium and Holland did. The Belgian army was considered fairly good, but the Dutch troops did not carry so high a rating. Nevertheless, the Belgians and Dutch put up a stiff fight against the masses—39 German divisions, including Field Gray, and the series of air attacks up above.

The Dutch anti-aircraft forces were able to shoot down a number of German planes, but the first volley, by poor, peace-loving Brussels took a bombing that killed or wounded more than five score citizens.

Simultaneously with the German-Netherlands invasion, came aerial bombing, by the Nazis, of French airfields, railways, coal mines, and factories. The Dutch East Indies interned all German ships over 18 years old, and seized German ships there. Japan—without surprising delay—announced its respect for the neutrality status quo—at least, in that Dutch quarter. Dutch colonies include nearly a million square miles.

QUARTER MILLION:

For Consolation

Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania introduced a bill into our upper house. The bill concerned itself with no less a sum than $145,341. This was to console the American ambassador to Poland, Anthony Drexel Biddle, for furniture, tapestries, pictures, and other odds and ends, lost during the Polish blitzkrieg of 18 days, last fall. The Biddle villa, outside Warsaw, also was damaged by German bombs, and it seems that somebody took the Biddle's silver, too. Biddle now is attached to the makeshift Polish government-in-exile in London.

Celebration of Its Centennial by the Illinois Medical Society Recalls the Heroic Service of Pioneer Doctors

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Editorial: The Pioneer Doctors

The 100th anniversary celebration of the Illinois

State Medical Society, which is being held in

Peoria May 21 to 23, is more than a local significance. Not only does it pay tribute to the founders of one of the first state medical associations in the country but it also serves to recall the heroic services of the pioneer physicians and surgeons during the frontier era of American history.

For whether that frontier was along the Atlantic seaboard,

in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, on the Great

Plains of the trans-Missouri

West or in Rocky mountains,

one of the most important figures in the pioneer community was the trained and skilled little black bag. It was he,

he, the undaunted by the perils of attack by savage Indians or wild animals, heedless of the danger, for a "frontier prairie or forest fire, and

indifferent to the discomforts

of blazing summer heat or raging blizzards in winter, cheerfully climbed into his saddle, or into a "frontier

prairie or forest fire, and

indifferent to the discomforts
