MRS. PARDEE BREAKS WRIST IN FALL

Friends of Mrs. S. C. Pardee will regret to learn that she sustained a broken wrist on her right arm, when she fell at her home on Wednesday. The accident occurred when she evidently fainted and fell down the back steps. An x-ray showed the small bone in the wrist to be broken, and the injured member appears to be healing nicely.

Five Candidates File in School Trustee Election

Five candidates filed up to the closing date, Monday, for trustees of the Avon Park school district in the election to be held November 4. They are Irving Ford, T. J. Ward, Mrs. M. V. Pilcher, Mrs. S. J. Pendleton and Francis Shockley. Ford and Ward are running for re-election. Mrs. E. G. Todd, other member of the board, will not be a candidate.

Voters will also determine the millage for the Avon Park special district. Last year the millage was set at 10 mills, the limit allowed by law. But due to the increased valuations under the new state law, the levy will probably be reduced in proportion to the increased assessments.

All qualified electors who have paid 1940 or 1941 taxes either on personal property or real estate will be qualified to vote in the trustee election.

The demonstration, held under the Highlands County Defense Council training for civilian defense, is made possible through the cooperation of Lt. Albert P. Sights, commanding officer, who will be in charge of the flight. Other army officers to fly with him are Lt. Donald T. Bennink and Lt. Earl Caton.

"O. K., let me have it" was the quick response. After making two circles of the new auxiliary airport, Wright Field, on the Fort Meade-Avon Park road, he brought his Continental powered Stearman trainer No. 2 down to a graceful landing, and received the congratulations of Flight Commander Johnny Abbott. When he returned to the Lodwick Inn being used as barracks for the cadets his fellow classmates threw him into Lake Lillian in honor of the occasion.

Last Rites Held Sunday for Mrs. McNicholas

Large Gathering of Friends Attend Services

Funeral services for Mrs. Myrtle McNicholas, 46, wife of County Judge T. A. McNicholas, who died in a Tampa hospital Friday, were held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the First Baptist Church. The Rev. Jack P. Dalton, pastor of the church, conducted the services. The entire chancel and choir loft and each window in the church were banked with a wealth of beautiful flowers, in silent tribute to a beloved friend and neighbor.

Preceeding the services, Mrs. J. B. Coen, Jr. played softly several hymns, special favorites of the deceased. E. L. Roberts sang as a solo, "Shadows," and a quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Garber, Mrs. T. J. Ward and E. L. Roberts sang, "Christian's Good Night" and "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

Active pallbearers were W. D. Dorminey, John H. Hood, E. G. Todd, C. E. Lanier, Howard Maddox and Earl W. Hartt.

Honorary pallbearers were Mayor M. E. Covington, William Hauptmann, Dr. W. C. Touchton, L. D. McGiboney, C. H. Shepherd, Dr. I. W. Chandler, A. O. Kinsey, Roland Droit, W. H. Martin, Avon Park; Mayor M. F. McGee, Brward Coker, P. G. Gearing, H. T. Piety, Steve Hancock, E. G. Long, F. T. Haskins, Sebring; Col. F. N. K. Bailey, DeSoto City; Lee Crews, A. B. McNicholas, to which union three daughters were born, Mary, Dorothy and Martha. She came to Avon Park in December, 1924 to make her home. She was a loyal member of the First Baptist church, the Woman's Club, and the P. T. A.

The entire county felt a keen sense of grief and loss when the news reached Avon Park Friday afternoon that this beloved woman had passed away shortly after a major operation at a Tampa hospital. To many her death meant the passing of a sincere friend, one ever ready to lend her services in time of need, and one who could always be counted on to do her part in the various organizations in which she held membership. She was a staunch and faithful helpmate to her husband, and a devoted and loving mother. Truly she lent herself so fully to life itself, going about her duties in her home until the last, that one can scarcely believe that her passing is a reality, it seems more like a dream and that she is not gone, "she is just away".

The deceased is survived by her husband, and three daughters, the Misses Mary, Dorothy and Martha; and a half-brother, L. R. Reynolds of DeLand.

The funeral service, Sunday afternoon were attended by hundreds of sorrowing friends from all over the county, and by several families from about the state, including Mr. and Mrs. J. Group Formed For Recreation Service Men

Will Hold Tag Day Saturday to Get Funds

The Avon Park Defense Recreation committee, working in connection with the Highlands County Defense Council, was organized with the election of officers at a meeting at the Jacaranda hotel Monday afternoon.

The committee's first activity will be a tag day Saturday, October 25, to raise funds to finance its activities. Tags will be sold by a bevy of young girls under the direction of the committee, and the public is urged to contribute liberally to assisti in the worthwhile program.

Mrs. Harold Worden was elected chairman; F. E. John, co-chairman; and Mrs. Julie Johnson, secretary. Set up for the organization was outlined by Raymond Novarine, field recreation representative, who explained the object of the recreational movement among service men. He was accompanied by Bob Hall WPA director of the Sebring recreation project.

Hall offered his services in cooperation with the local committee, and expressed his willingness to work with the local group in planning dances and entertainment for service men both in Avon Park and Sebring. Joint dances may be planned as a result. Ben T. Stewart, county defense chairman, presided over the meeting.

Mr. Novarine, who works under the Federal Security Agency, presented an outline of plan of organization, which called for an executive committee, secretary and staff, and the following sub-committees:

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Methods of Providing Aid to Russia Before Nazis Win Complete Victory Is Big Problem for U. S. and Britain; Japanese Move Again in Indo-China

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

—Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Disconsolate Russian prisoners are shown marching through an unnamed town on their way to a prison camp behind the German lines, reads the caption accompanying this picture from Berlin. The caption further states that this is a part of the huge bag of prisoners taken on the far-flung Russian front.

RUSSIANS:
Deep Trouble

As the Nazi blitz moved into high gear on the central and south fronts of the great battle of the east front, the question began to be seriously asked whether Russia, like France, Greece and so many other nations, was going to be forced out of the war as a combatant, wilting before the heat and ferocity of the Nazi war machine.

Indeed, when the German spearheads had been announced 65 miles away from Moscow, the stories of peace and truce offers began to come over the cables, and one of them even declared that Stalin was considering an armistice.

However, these rumors were promptly denied from Berlin, Italy, London and Moscow, the Axis denials stating that objectives were far from being reached, and London and Moscow sources declaring the Russians were still able to fight.

Be that as it may, it was obvious that the crisis was being reached, and that once again the great manpower of Russia must decide if it were better to give in to the Nazi, or to battle it out as the Chinese did against the Japs.

Few believed that Germany or any group of European powers could finally defeat Russia with the backing of England and the United States, provided Russia were willing to fight the sort of rear-guard action that China used with such success.

But whether the willingness was there, or the philosophical temperament needed for such a defense was a question.

Harriman, American envoy to the U. S. mission to Moscow, answered it this way:

"I believe the leaders of Russia will lead the people to fight on." Beaverbrook felt the same way.

MATERIAL AID:
But How?

The Soviet crisis left the lease-lend ideas of Britain and this country very much "out on a limb."

That both countries were dispatching aid was apparent. But how much and how long were difficult problems.

"Barkis was willin'," but the Iranian railway from the head of the Persian gulf to the shores of the Caspian sea, thence into boats and again to Russian railways and roads in the Caucasus seemed the only practicable route.

Britain had material to give and was giving it—not only planes but squadrons and pilots and gunners. Much of this was of the heavier types which could be flown direct to the scene of service, put into action and, if surviving an eventual Russian defeat, presumably could be saved.

But much of it, such as tanks and guns, had to be shipped in. The British took the attitude that they were not only willing to give of their own store, but of the American lease-lend store. They said, in effect:

"We get it from the United States this way, and we shall do for Russia what the United States is doing for us."

Britain felt that the Americans should give what they could, but the task they wanted this country to take over, the keeping of Soviet's "Burma road" open seemed a task that it was a little dubious how we could accomplish.

LEASE-LEND:
Second Edition

Everyone had expected the second lease-lend bill of six billions of dollars to pass the house, but the vote, 328-87, was considerable of a surprise to the anti-interventionists, who had made part of the fight a battle against aid to Russia.

The smashing victory for the proponents of the President's lease lend policy, and for implementing it with a huge sum was repeated in the defeat of the no-aid-to-Russia amendment.

NAVY:
Takes Prisoners

The United States came its closest to actual participation in the war when the navy announced that it had taken prisoner about 20 "Nazis," whether actual German citizens or Norwegians under German domination was not immediately clear.

The American naval patrol, including Iceland and Greenland in its orbit, was searching the coastline of the latter island for an alleged German submarine base when it came upon a small Norwegian vessel.

The ship was stopped, questions were put to its crew and the vessel was thoroughly searched. Not only did the navy announce that it was determined that the men were Nazi agents under the direction of the Gestapo, but the questioning led to the finding of a radio station set up on the mainland of Greenland.

This station, apparently, was being set up by the Germans, the report had stated, for the purpose of broadcasting weather information to the Nazis.

The purpose might have been for the flights of planes that had been "strafing" shipping in the north Atlantic; it might have been for guidance of submarines; it might have been to give locations of lease-lend ships to surface raiders, planes or U-boats.

At all events ship, crew and radio station were all taken over by the navy, which announced that all were on their way to the United States.

It had been the first move of this type since President Roosevelt had issued the "shoot on sight" order.

JAPAN:
Moves Again

Considerable alarm about the Pacific situation was caused when Tokyo made another move associated with her expansion into Indo China.

The Japanese demanded control of the Indo Chinese railway system. They also had demanded the right to control customs collections and postal censorship.

At the same time the Japanese demanded the arsenal at Saigon, and this was considered highly significant because at this arsenal the French had set up what was regarded as the most powerful radio direction-finding outfits in the Orient.

The Japanese armed forces in Indo China were continuing their maneuvers along the Thailand frontier, back of which, and in Malaya, there were heavy concentrations of British troops.

The Saigon moves, the British said, were being closely watched, because of the likelihood that if any plane attacks were to be made against Singapore or Manila, Saigon would be the proper hopping-off spot.

VIERECK:
Revelations

What many believed to be true, that Nazi agents in the United States were using the non-interventionists, the isolationists and other enemies of the President's foreign policy for their own ends was declared to be a fact by George Sylvester Viereck, author, poet and registered Nazi agent.

Viereck was being tried in Washington on charges that he had not told the state department the whole story about his activities.

It was perhaps a joke, but at all events a sensation when, at the outset of his trial, he was asked to "name his associates" and he listed two assistants of Secretary Hull, Joseph Davies, former ambassador to Russia, and William Phillips, now ambassador to Rome.

The nub of the case against Viereck was that he listed his activities only as an employee of the German library of information; as correspondent for a Munich newspaper. The library had been closed down by the government for alleged improper activities.

Guess Who?

Mr. Winston Churchill of Natick, Mass., is the above pictured gentleman's name, and he is a paper-hanger and painter by profession. Although he is not related in any way to the British prime minister, he could boast about his ancestors who landed in America, way back in 1670. Anyway there's another paper-hanger that THE Winston Churchill is at present more worried about than this one, say the local wags.

STRIKES:
Menace Again

Though the strike front in the United States had been at a quiet ebb for some time, the labor situation was anything but peaceful in the United States, and seething under the surface were many difficulties that had not yet flared into strikes.

Barring a couple of rubber factory troubles and a small row in an airplane accessory plant, the Mediation Board was having a relatively easy time of it.

But the type of thing that was worrying the OPM was the Detroit case, in which on Sidney Hillman's recommendation, a contract was withheld from the low bidder on the ground that he was unfair to the building trades.

Now came the protest from C.I.O. quarters that Hillman favored the A.F.L. building unions and the working out of this case in Detroit was envisioned by many labor leaders as packed with dynamite for labor peace.

An oddity in the situation was an article in the Daily Worker, Communist daily, entitled "Every Factory Part of the Battle Front Against Hitler," and continuing:

"Interference with production of needed war materials can only help Hitler and weaken the United States."

This was a loud outcry against strikes—and coming from the chief Communist paper.

All union circles agreed that a Hitler victory would mean a disaster to organized labor, yet during Russia's partnership with Hitler the Communists had been accused of obstructing the defense effort—now they were not only aiding it, but eschewing strikes.

CHINA:
On the Move

Chungking issued reports showing that her military effort was beginning to shove the Japanese back toward the coast.

The town of Ichang, high-water mark of the Japanese advance into China was reported recaptured, and the garrison of 1,000 Nipponese surrounded and placed under artillery fire in a fortress.

A Japanese plane passed overhead, dropping eight men in parachutes, evidently with orders for the garrison. The Chinese said they captured two and shot six to death before they landed.

Subsequent reports had declared that the Japanese were on the retreat in Hunan Province, and that the drive toward Changsha, Important objective, had been put into reverse.

Two-thirds of the Japanese advance in this province had been wiped out, the reports stated. Chungking was in a state of wild celebration at the news.

BRIEFS:

Rome: It was predicted in Rome that Myron C. Taylor would be made a full-fledged ambassador and would represent the nation at the Vatican.

New York: Helen Morgan, famous singer, who drew repeatedly salaries as high as $3,500 a week, died penniless, it was revealed. Friends raised $600 to pay her hotel bill.

Baltimore: The duke and duchess of Windsor (the duchess a former Baltimore debutante, Wallis Warfield) were welcomed by thousands on their visit to this city. It was the duchess' first trip to Maryland in more than 20 years.

* * *

New York: In the navy were all sorts of youths—including a South Carolina legislator, Stratton Christiansen; Robert Train, famous Yale end; Maury Maverick McGarragh, nephew of the former mayor of San Antonio.

With Ike and Mike

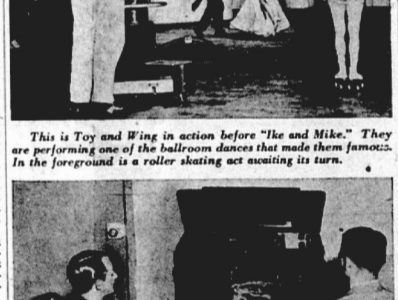
A few years ago television was a distant prospect. Today it has emerged from the realm of the maybe and is an accomplished fact, with regular programs on the air daily. The television camera is known as "Ike" while the familiar microphone is "Mike" in television parlance. These pictures take you to the Columbia Broadcasting system's television studio in New York.

View of the control panel where television programs are directed and monitored out to the transmitter atop Chrysler tower, then sent through ether.

Here you see a television cameraman in action, with a "dolly-man" assisting. The "dolly" is used to work the camera into any desired position.

Telecast of a children's hour at the studio finds Lydia Perera telling the story to little Ann Francis as John Rupe (left) illustrates "Jack and the Beanstalk" with drawings.

This is Toy and Wing in action before "Ike and Mike." They are performing one of the ballroom dances that made them famous. In the foreground is a roller skating act awaiting its turn.



And here is a typical scene in a home equipped with a television receiver. The family sits around and enjoys its own little theater.

Freezing of Farm Prices and Wages Seen Necessary to Prevent Inflation . . . Tax Issue Looms as Important in Local Elections . . .

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON. — Anyone who thinks that inflation—and unbridled inflation at that—can be prevented without freezing farm prices and wages should read one of two, preferably both, recent observations.

One of these was the testimony on Capitol Hill of Bernard M. Baruch. The other is a pamphlet issued by the Brookings Institution entitled "Effects of the Defense Program on Prices, Wages and Profits." The latter is by Dr. Meyer Jacobstein and Dr. Harould G. Moulton. Dr. Moulton is head of the Brookings Institution.

They are interesting chiefly because they demonstrate, emphatically and without beat, that nothing the government is doing or proposes to do will prevent runaway prices, and partial destruction, through this cutting of the value of the dollar, of all savings accounts, life insurance, social insurance benefits—in fact all forms of savings which are measured in dollars and not in goods.

It hits the government bond and the sock under the mattress equally in proportion. It hits the very defense bonds the public is being told are a good investment.

Issued on the Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposal of a boost in the social security tax from 2 to 6 per cent was announced, the authors of the Brookings pamphlet could not have been meaning to hit it. But they did. One of the admitted reasons for this proposed tax boost was to cut private purchasing power as a partial check on inflation.

Brookings' Statement

Say Drs. Jacobstein and Moulton:

"The price advance cannot be directly attributed to the increases in mass purchasing power. If the general rise in prices had been due to competitive bidding by consumers possessed of increased incomes, one would expect to find retail prices increasing at least as much and as rapidly as the prices of manufactured products and raw materials. The facts show, however, that the increase in retail prices has been relatively small. The price rises began at the producing and not at the consuming end . . .

"The facts clearly show that the active forces leading to price advances in the present situation have been operating on raw materials and manufactured products, gradually spreading from there to the retail end . . .

"The prevailing belief in government circles that price rises could not occur so long as there remained a large volume of unemployed labor and capital goes far toward explaining why no deep concern was manifested until fairly recently over the price question, and why the Office of Price Administration was not set up until the spring of 1941. Had the nature of the price inflation process been clearly perceived, steps would doubtless have been taken at a much earlier date to control the sources of price disturbance.

No Control Provided

"The Office of Price Administration has no authority over the farm price program and no authority over wages . . . The price control bill now in congress does not provide for any control of wages, and control of farm prices cannot begin until 110 per cent of parity is reached. Since as this analysis has shown, the upward movement of prices is chiefly due to increases in the prices of agricultural products and in wage costs, it is obvious that the Office of Price Administration has no effective control over the price system as a whole."

Tax Issue And Local Elections

Joe Martin's conclusion that the folks in the West are keenly worked up about the new taxes, and his hope that the G.O.P. may win the next house as a result, may be discounted by the possibility of an appeal by administration leaders not to give the world the impression that the American people are not in sympathy with the war against Adolf Hitler. But if Martin is right about the interest in taxes, as would seem very logical, look out for primary upsets next spring and fall!

Outsiders aspiring to seats in the house and senate are likely to find taxes a heaven-sent issue. There is hardly a senator or representative who will not be pitifully vulnerable to a sharp attack by an opponent who studies the sitting member's record on appropriation roll calls.

Remember that these will be local contests. The sitting members will always be attacked for voting for appropriations in which their own constituents are not interested, but which can be made to appear heavily responsible for the boost in taxes.

Immortal Third Strike

IT WAS just a couple of weeks ago that the mighty voice of Brooklyn was swelled into an ear-splitting roar. Supporters of the Dodgers were berserk. Catcher Mickey Owen had just dropped that immortal third strike to give a World series game to the hated Yankees.

When the shouting and the tumult died—when Brooklyn became normal again—Catcher Owen had escaped with his life. Flatbush fans, stifling any urge to commit mayhem, admitted that in baseball as in every sport, there is great chance for error. Owen's mistake occurred during a blue chip game. But that's a part of baseball—an unhappy part.

Owen isn't unique in his position. John Miljus' wild pitch in the 1927 series between the Yankees and the Pittsburgh Pirates was just as disastrous. It was in the ninth inning of the fourth and final game of the series. The score was tied at 3-3. Combs walked, Koenig beat out a bunt, both men advanced on a wild pitch. Ruth was walked purposely to fill the bases. Miljus fanned Gehrig and Meusel. Then Miljus wild-pitched the winning run over the plate as Tony Lazzeri stood with bat in hand.

It wasn't a complete surprise to Lazzeri. Miller Huggins, Yank pilot, had cautioned him: "Watch Miljus—he's getting anxious and he's going to throw one away."

$100,000 Error

Fred Snodgrass made his famous mistake in the 1912 series between the Boston Red Sox and the Giants. He muffed a fly ball in the eleventh inning of the seventh game. Called the $100,000 error, it gave the Sox two runs, the game by a score of 3-2 and the series, 4-3.

The Yankees are not without blemish. Ancient baseball history reveals that Jack Chesbro, a famous spitball pitcher for the Yanks in 1904, threw the pennant away with a wild pitch.

It's true, of course, that most of these errors lacked the drama of Owen's muff, for this game, it seemed, was ended. The developments taking place after the third strike were enough to break the heart of a stoic.

However, Owen is made of stern stuff. Time will ease the strain and it won't be long until Brooklyn forgives. But Mickey might as well know that Brooklyn never forgets.

Bowling—the Right Way

By LOWELL JACKSON

(This is one of a series of lessons in bowling by Lowell Jackson, one of the country's outstanding bowlers. Mr. Jackson has eighteen 300 games to his credit and has a 12-year league average of 210.)

PROPER EQUIPMENT. Standard bowling equipment consists of a well-fitted bowling ball, a pair of good bowling shoes and a bag to transport the ball and the shoes.

For men, the ball should weigh 16 pounds. The ladies ball can weigh 12, 14 or 16 pounds. A bowling ball must not weigh more than 16 pounds, or be more than 27 inches in circumference, but it may be lighter and smaller.

There is no recommendation as to the use of a ball with two or three finger holes.

Grips are measured on a "grip ball," containing hundreds of combinations of holes of varying sizes and spaces. To determine your proper span, place your thumb in one of the thumb holes to the depth desired and then lay your hand flat on the surface of the ball with your middle finger extended over the finger hole. The second knuckle joint of the finger should extend about one-quarter inch past the inside edge of the finger hole, making it possible to insert the finger comfortably. The finger hole should fit snugly and the thumb hole should be fairly loose.

U. S. Is Active in Newfoundland

American Workmen Make Rapid Strides on Naval Plane Station.

ARGENTIA, NEWFOUNDLAND. —A huge United States naval air station has begun to emerge in the last two months on this lonely shore, a third of the way from New York to London. A corps of more than 1,000 American engineers and workmen is rapidly building the base, one of the eight in the Western hemisphere which the British leased to the United States for a period of 99 years.

The base already is the center of extensive United States naval operations. On one day this summer there were 60 war craft in the harbor. Three were troopships, and subgnarines and supply ships were among the rest. American freighters and airplanes also were present in large numbers.

Recreation for the Men.

Work of building the base began in earnest eight months ago, but the greater part of the first six months had to be given over to housing and otherwise providing for the workmen and to preparations for permanent construction.

Barracks had to be erected. Mess halls, laundry, shoe shop, food refrigeration plant, bank, newspaper, compressed air-power plant and even a post office had to be put up. A theater, too, was built. Recreation for the men in this far-away spot was a serious problem.

Dredging and the removal of the layer of peat which covers this part of the Newfoundland coast also were necessary preliminaries. In some places the peat is 20 feet deep, and there were times when the great shovels removing it were out of sight in the holes they were excavating.

As the base begins to take shape, more measures of secrecy are being taken.

Now Part of U. S.

Under the agreement with Great Britain this little part of the Newfoundland coast has become a part of United States territory for all but a year of the next century. The American flag flies here, and American stamps are used at the American post office. Imported materials from continental United States come in duty free.

Despite this, many of the workmen have become homesick for the States and have left, to be replaced by others from the United States or, in a few cases, by Canadian citizens.

The weather has been one cause of grumbling. It was still snowing in mid-June and not until mid-August did the temperature creep above 60.

Cabbage appears to be the only vegetable that grows on these peaty shores. Flowers are scarce, too, although one workman found seven or eight varieties, including white and deep-pink mountain laurel, buttercups, moss tulips, wild pansies, dandelions and rush flowers. These were put on display in a beer bottle, the first flowers many of the workmen had seen since leaving the United States.

Balancing such drawbacks is the fact that there are no mosquitoes, black deerflies, snakes or reptiles of any kind. The climate is supposed to be good, too, for sinus trouble and hay fever. Salmon fishing also is good here.

Buster Bear Series by Thornton W. Burgess

PETER RABBIT CALLS ON BUSTER BEAR

When you would a-calling go,
You should look your best, you know.
Wash your hands and wash your face;
See that every hair's in place;
Brush yourself from top to toe
When you would a-calling go.

THAT is just what Peter Rabbit did before he started out to call on Buster Bear. Little Mrs. Peter was very proud of him as she sat at the edge of the dear Old Brier Patch and watched him out of sight. She was very proud of him, was little Mrs. Peter. She was very sure that there never was another rabbit half so handsome as her Peter. And how brave he was to dare to go call on Buster Bear! The very thought made her shiver. She didn't altogether approve of that visit. In fact, she wasn't sure that she approved of it at all. But Peter had made up his mind, and when Peter does that there is no changing it. Besides, he wasn't making that call for pleasure. He was doing it to try to help others, and what could be braver or more splendid than that?

Now Peter himself didn't feel so very brave as he hopped through the Green Forest to find the darkest, deepest, most lonesome part where Buster Bear had made his home. The truth is he wasn't much afraid of Buster Bear. He was a great deal more afraid of Old Granny Fox and Old Man Coyote. He could keep out of Buster's way. He could dodge him without any trouble if he had to. But he didn't believe he would have to. Buster was fat with good eating, and too lazy to do anything so foolish as to try to catch anyone so lively on his feet as Peter Rabbit.

Peter had quite a hunt to find Buster Bear, but at last he found him prowling along the edge of the pond made by Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest.

"Good evening, Mr. Bear," said Peter, making a grand bow in his most polite manner.

Buster Bear sat up with his hands on his hips and grinned down at Peter who was also sitting up. Mistress Moon, looking down on both of them, also smiled.

"Hello, Peter Rabbit! What are you doing here? You must be lost!" exclaimed Buster Bear.

Peter shook his head. "I came to call on you," he replied. "It's a fine night, isn't it?"

"It certainly is," returned Buster Bear gravely, though his eyes twinkled. "I certainly feel very much flattered by this call. I hope you are feeling your very best, Peter."

Peter sighed. "I'm feeling very well, thank you, very well indeed, everywhere but in my mind."

Buster Bear looked puzzled. "What's the matter with your mind, Peter?" he demanded.

Peter sighed again. Then he told Buster about the hunter who had been making life so miserable for some of the little people in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows.

"Hello, Peter Rabbit! What are you doing way off here?"

"And now I've come way up here to ask you to help us," Peter concluded.

A scared look came into Buster Bear's eyes and chased out all the twinkles.

"I'm very sorry," said he, "but I couldn't possibly be of the least bit of help in such a matter."

'Death Ray' Proves Able To Cause Brain Fatigue

BERKELEY, CALIF. — A death ray developed by an American naval officer—it kills bacteria at a distance of six inches—can cause mental fatigue in humans, it was revealed.

It is a magnetic device which produces 9,300 vibrations a second. This frequency is just within the upper limit of human hearing. It produces an extremely high-pitched shriek which can be heard a block away. There are several other types of vibrator which can kill microscopic life at short distances.

The machine was built by Commander A. P. Krueger, head of the navy's first mobile medical research unit.

Individuals who stand close to the machine longer than a few minutes at a time become mentally weary, Commander Krueger said. They lose some of their ability to do mathematical problems. This effect persists for several hours.

New Zealand Army Chief Minimizes Nazi Forces

WELLINGTON, N. Z.—New Zealand's new chief of the general staff, Maj.-Gen. Edward Puttick, who is back here after commanding a brigade in Greece, described the Greek campaign as "pretty easy going."

He said the principal maneuver was one of bluffing the enemy. Getting the men away from beaches for embarkation to Crete, he said, was "pretty hot stuff" but that, heavy as the New Zealand casualties were, they were worth while.

General Puttick insisted that the Germans the New Zealanders met were not equal to their fathers in the last war, not so tough or well trained. He said his men captured nine Nazis who attempted to hide behind one olive tree.

Jail Trusty Celebrates With Unusual Ill Luck

PAINESVILLE, OHIO. — It was "in-again and out-again" of jail for a local youth.

The young man, a trusty at the county jail, was sent to the bakery on an errand for the sheriff's sister. Several other prisoners wanted some errands performed. In all the young prisoner had $3.

With the money in his pocket, he decided to pay a visit to near-by Cleveland and see a movie. As he was coming out of the theater he was much surprised to meet the sheriff, who was in Cleveland on business.

The young man went back to his jail cell.

Bees Are Livestock by Edict of Wyoming Board

CHEYENNE, WYO.—Pigs are pigs and cows are cattle, but bees are livestock in Wyoming.

You can't rope 'em, ride 'em or brand 'em, but they can be vicious and they're stock in trade for beekeepers, so the state board of equalization has decided they're livestock.

It made the ruling to save itself from beekeepers who criticized the board because they had to pay sales tax on sugar bought in the winter.

OLD TOWN WELL NOW SPOUTING GASOLINE IN MYSTERY

TAYLOR, MISS.—Threats of a gasoline shortage are not worrying citizens of this community since the old town well, after more than a century of loyal service as a thirst-quencher, suddenly began producing gasoline.

All efforts to explain the enigma have failed.

First indications that all was not right with the old well came when an unmistakable odor of gasoline was noticeable. "Some boy playing a joke," residents said. But the gasoline odor kept getting stronger and stronger.

A Negro was lowered into the well to investigate the trouble and the fumes were so strong that he was overcome. When he was revived, he reported gasoline was two feet deep in the eight-foot depth of water.

It was decided to experiment further by tossing a lighted match into the well. The result was an explosive roar and a tower of flame that surged high into the air. Buckets were lowered, and when brought up to the surface, were filled with fire.

Members of the state geological survey were summoned and after an investigation, they reported the fuel was seeping into the well from a nearby filling station. The filling station owner, however, said a three weeks' check on his tanks revealed no shortage.

Once more the well was emptied and a thorough check was made on the walls of the 50-foot shaft. The second report declared there was no seepage of "gasoline or anything else" through the walls.

"Whatever is in the well is either coming in from the top or bottom," Mayor J. E. Walker said.

Buttonholes in sweaters should be sewn up before sweater is washed. Treated in this way buttonholes will not stretch.

Beat eggs only slightly when used in custards, puddings, sauces etc. Beat well when used to make food light, as in sponge cakes, puffy omelets, etc.

When stringing beads or pearls of various sizes place them in order in one of the grooves of a piece of corrugated paper. It will then be much easier to slip them onto the needle.

Brooms and sweeping brushes should be hung up when not in use. If left standing on the bristles, the bristles get bent and will not do their work.

Stuff centers of apricots, pears or peaches, with cubes of mint or currant jelly. Brush with melted butter and broil five minutes. Serve with meat, fish or fowl.

Pour a cup of cold water over cooked cereal before leaving it for the night. This prevents a hard crust forming on cereal. Pour off water in the morning and reheat cereal.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist throughout the world on Sunday, November 2.

The Golden Text is: "Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people" (Proverbs 14:34).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting" (Gal. 6:7-8).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine Science reveals the necessity of sufficient suffering, either before or after death, to quench the love of sin. To remit the penalty due for sin would be for Truth to pardon error. Escape from punishment is not in accordance with God's government, since justice is the handmaid of mercy" (p.36: 4-9).

Party on Thursday At Methodist Hut

Mrs. Orville Wyckoff was the honoree at a lovely party given by women of the Methodist church at the Hut Thursday evening. Mrs. Wyckoff has been active in musical circles of the church, having served as director of the choir for some time, and has been superintendent of the primary department of the Sunday School during the summer months.

The large room was particularly attractive for the occasion, quantities of pink vine, blue plumbago, and wild babybreath being combined into bouquets and placed at points of vantage. An array of dainty gifts, presented to Mrs. Wyckoff, were arranged on a prettily appointed table, which held a large basket of the colorful blossoms. Pink and white crepe paper bows at each window lent an additional touch to the chosen color motif.

After several enjoyable contests, refreshments of individual iced cakes, each decorated with either a pink or blue rosebud, and nuts, mints, salted nuts and iced tea were served. The napkins were in a pastel floral design.

Friends sharing the affair with Mrs. Wyckoff were Mrs. Walter Martin, Mrs. S. E. Booth, Mrs. C. H. Harris, Mrs. Clifford Craft, Mrs. Reason Shivers, Mrs. Ray Murphy, Mrs. C. H. Don't be a Cookie Rookie!

Cookies may come and pies may go, but the cookie goes on forever being the favorite of yet-to-grow-up and grown-up alike. The ones here have Health Club baking powder inside and citron, nuts, and sugar on their outside in a union stated in detail in this recipe:

Sugar Cookies

2 cups sifted flour	⅔ cup shortening
3 teaspoons Health Club baking powder	1 cup sugar
	2 eggs, well beaten
½ teaspoon salt	½ teaspoon vanilla
Milk, still flour, Health Club baking powder, and salt. Cream shortening, add sugar slowly, and cream until fluffy. Stir in well-beaten eggs and vanilla. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with the milk. Blend well and chill. Roll ¼ inch thick on lightly floured board. Cut in round or fancy shapes. The cookies may be brushed with unbeaten egg whites, decorated with candied cherries, citron or chopped nut meats, and sprinkled with sugar. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in a moderate oven (375° F.) 10 to 12 minutes. Makes about 3½ dozen cookies.

Better Company

During a lesson on elementary composition a little girl read the following as her effort:

Once a Penny and a Dollar met in a man's pocket. The Dollar turned up its nose at the Penny, and said scornfully: "Why, I am worth one hundred of you."

"Yes," said the Penny, "but even at that I am a good bit better than you are. I go every Sunday to church and Sunday school both, and you never get to either one."

PARTED

"You say that you and your husband have separated?"

"Yes, he spends his vacation in the country and I go to the sea shore."

Recreation Building for the Army

Architect's drawing of hospital recreation building under construction at 65 army hospitals. The buildings will be furnished and operated by American Red Cross, which will provide motion pictures and other entertainments, and through its own staff carry on social service and recreation program. Each building will contain a theater, recreation room, small kitchen and guest-rooms for relatives summoned to bedsides of soldiers. Living and office quarters for Red Cross staff also will be included in the building.

WASHINGTON.—The hospital nurse smiled as she held the telegram before the eyes of the woman on the bed.

It said, "Red Cross and my commanding officer say o. k. for me to come, will arrive hospital twelve hours, Red Cross lending train fare keep your chin up Mom." It was signed "Pete."

The nurse tried to describe the effect of that telegram on the anxious mother.

"Sort of like a blood transfusion," she said.

Telegrams like Pete's are making people realize more and more these days just how much the Red Cross manages to do for Uncle Sam's army and navy. American mothers are learning that the Red Cross will give their sons in camp definite practical help in time of trouble. Back in 1905 congress named the Red Cross the official link between the men in the American armed forces and their families at home; since that day the Red Cross has been the trouble shooter or "worry buster" of every soldier.

If there is illness at home, the Red Cross, through its local chapters and its field directors in each camp, will keep the boy posted with up-to-the minute news. It will verify home conditions and, as in the case of Pete, help him obtain emergency furlough, or perhaps a dependency discharge. It will keep him well supplied with reading matter, entertainment and comfort articles while he's sick in the hospital. It will help him find employment when he returns to civilian life and it will give assistance to his family when they are in trouble.

There is little that the Red Cross will not do for a serviceman. Recently a soldier was brought into a military hospital with both eyes totally and permanently blinded in an accident. A volunteer Red Cross worker there spent half a year teaching the boy to read braille.

Another army camp reports the case of a veteran's widow who was refused government compensation because officials lacked evidence of her husband's disability. During the next few months, a busy Red Cross field director wrote more than 200 letters on her behalf, finally unearthing the evidence which meant her livelihood.

Right now the Red Cross is busy constructing headquarters buildings for its staff at 62 army camps, and has undertaken to furnish and operate hospital recreation buildings in 65 army stations and general hospitals. Furnishings for the latter will include a theater and motion picture equipment, as well as offices and a lounge. Thanks to the Red Cross, American mothers can be perfectly sure that their convalescent sons will have plenty of medically approved entertainment while they are laid up.

Red Cross service to the armed forces covers a lot of ground. The army and navy recruit their nurses from the nursing reserve of the Red Cross. The present drive to collect 200,000 units of human blood plasma for the armed forces is another Red Cross assignment. And just to top things off, the women of this country, as volunteers in the ranks of the Red Cross, this year handed over to the United States army and navy over 28,000,000 surgical dressings, and are now starting upon a batch of 500,000 sweaters.

As one soldier put it, "Uncle Sam's our commanding officer, and he looks out for us the best he can. But the Red Cross—well, the Red Cross is Mrs. Sam."

Million Words Weekly

NEW YORK.—Daisy Bacon is just about the "readin'est woman" alive. She reads carefully and weighs with judgment more than 1,000,000 words every week. Miss Bacon is editor of three national magazines and studies each line that goes into them. She is the only woman in the world who is active editor-in-chief of such a trio and the one woman who edits an all-fiction weekly book. She publishes only about 800,000 words a month, but must read the astounding total to find what she wants to print. For relaxation she reads "a few books" each week.

Thoroughly feminine, tall, slender, blonde, her hobbies are perfect clothes and cats. Her costumes are of her own design and have resulted in her being called one of the best dressed women in the country. Her love for cats is exemplified by pets at her apartment at 40 Fifth avenue, New York, and by a parade of about 200 modeled figures of felines across the top of her editorial desk.

A descendant of Gov. William Bradford of Plymouth Colony, and the family of Sir Francis Bacon, she loves the West and usually spends her vacation there. One of her great-uncles, John Holbrook, was one of the noted sheriffs at Fort Dodge, Iowa, in early days, helping to bring about peace in a turbulent area. An earlier ancestor was Deacon John Holbrook of Vermont, one of the first American publishers. Miss Bacon has an uncanny faculty of quickly choosing stories and articles favored by her readers.

Ortmeyer Humorous Verses Free to Blind People Anywhere in U. S. A.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Arthur H. Ortmeyer, well-known writer of couplets, who conducts a column in the Indianapolis News called "Hoosier Homespun," has widened his field of homespun philosophy and humor into braille. Any sightless braille reader in the country may borrow for reading, the book "Life Lines" postage free, on application.

Alabama and Mississippi state libraries have asked for rights in publishing the book and the Library of Congress will begin issuing Ortmeyer's couplets soon. A few selections from the couplets follow:

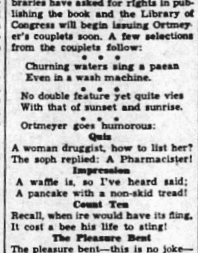
Wright Cadet



From all appearance Cadet Richard M. Wright, of Richmond, Ind., is about to board an airplane at the very site where his famous cousins, Wilbur and Orville Wright, once conducted a flying school. This photo, taken at Maxwell Field, Ala., in the Southeast air corps training center, where Cadet Wright is now enrolled in the Pilot Replacement wing, might be called "Wishful Thinking." Keen to start flying like 700 other cadets in his class, Wright will not be allowed to enter an airplane until he has completed an initial five-week training course, which will condition him to enter flying school.

Rural Folks Go to Church

The rural sections of the country are better promoters of Sunday School attendance than those in cities, according to a recent survey by the International Council of Religious Education. The chart above pictures the situation today, in accordance with figures released by the council. (1) 14,500,000 crimes in 1940. (2) 1 crime in 5 by boy or girl. (3) 185,000 U. S. Sunday schools. (4) Criminologists say church training prevents crimes.

CHICAGO.—Rural Americans have proven to be better Sunday school promoters than their city brothers, a survey made public here by the International Council of Religious Education discloses.

The first nation-wide survey of Sunday school distribution and attendance showed that 72 per cent of all church schools in the United States are found in rural areas of less than 2,500 population.

In attendance, however, the urbanites have an advantage. Sunday schools located in cities have an average enrollment of 210 compared to the rural church schools' 65. A nation-wide average of 114 is maintained.

Thirty-six Protestant denominations, co-operating through the International Council, operate Sunday schools in the United States and now have a total of 180,430 schools. Total pupil enrollment for these schools was announced as 20,772,141.

Dr. Mary Leigh Palmer, associate director of leadership education, made public the statistical findings of the survey.

Witness Finally Admitted Stronger Force's Influence

Cross-examining a witness on the other side, an attorney tried by every means possible to discredit him.

"You tell us you came to the city in search of work," he said meaningly. "I put to you that there was another, a stronger, motive which brought you all that distance. Isn't that so?"

The witness hesitated a time, then slowly replied, "Well, yes, there was."

"Ah!" exclaimed the barrister triumphantly, "Now tell the court what it was."

"A locomotive," replied the witness blandly.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LeMAY

WNU RELEASE

INSTALLMENT THREE

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, San Francisco girl, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, arrives in Honolulu to attempt to gain control of the property. One evening while she and Colt are dining and discussing plans for pressing her claims, Richard Wayne, or Tonga Dick, as he is known, enters their dining place. He is a member of the Wayne family that has been in control of her grandfather's island, Alakoa, since the old man's disappearance. Karen meets him, and believing that he is unaware of her identity she accepts an offer to go sailing with him the next day, hoping she can get some information from him. Later that night Dick goes to the home of his half-brothers, Willard and Ernest, and a conference is being held regarding the validity of Karen's claim.

Now continue with the story.

On an impulse Karen said, "I'll tell you why I have to go. I have to go because I'm afraid of those Waynes."

"I always heard," Tonga Dick said, "that Garrett Waterson was a great old boy—quite a character."

"Character be damned," Willard fumed. "He had no character at all. He was an outrageous old brawler, always at the center of every disturbance of any kind. He was always doing incredible, outlandish things."

"And he sold Alakoa for fifteen thousand dollars," Tonga Dick commented. "What's it worth today? Three million?"

"Ridiculous," Ernest snapped. "The assets, as we carry them on the book—"

"Maybe," Dick said, "after all, Garrett Waterson was a little fuzzy at the edges, when he did that!"

"Right there," Willard said morosely, "is the whole point. If they can show that Garrett Waterson was incompetent, it follows that his granddaughter was left destitute by this single incompetent act."

Tonga Dick considered; and presently allowed himself a slow grin. "You believe it's just possible that the girl really has you!"

Ernest flared up. "You have just as much interest in Alakoa as we have—or ought to have!"

"I guess," Dick said speculatively, "I'd better have a talk with this Waterson girl."

"Ridiculous!"

"Can't see how it can hurt anything."

"She won't talk to you," Willard said shortly. "She won't do anything at all without consulting John Colt."

"Oh, yes, she will. Tomorrow, I'm going to take her on a cruise up the coast—sight-seeing, you know."

"She won't even see you," Willard said again.

"She already has. I talked with her nearly an hour tonight."

"You what?"

"I said, I've been talking to her all night. Can't you understand plain—"

"Did she know who you were?"

"Naturally. Do you think she's a dummy!"

His two brothers stared at him for a little while in inarticulate outrage.

"I absolutely forbid this sailing trip," Willard got out at last.

"And so do I," Ernest echoed. "Any parley that is made with that adventuress will be in full consultation with us and our attorneys. I absolutely forbid you to see this girl again without the full concordance of—"

"Go ahead and forbid," Tonga Dick encouraged him. "After all here isn't a thing in the world you can do."

John Colt came to take breakfast with Karen Waterson next morning. Their brightly silvered breakfast table overlooked the beach, where the warm sea was breaking in emerald combers shot through with the early sun. Looking out at the lazy sea, Karen Waterson knew that she was afraid.

The exultant assurance of victory which she had felt the night before was gone, suddenly unable to live in all this sunlight.

She could hardly remember what had persuaded her to make an incognito date to sail with the one man who had most reason to be her enemy. In spite of the evening, Tonga Dick remained a shadowy and mysterious figure — an unaccountable stranger whose very name was outlandish according to any standards she knew.

In this mood she found it pleasant to sit across a breakfast table from John Colt. It did not happen very often, and was the more helpful because it did not.

Some day, she knew, John Colt would make love to her; whether they won or lost, that time would come as inevitably as the falling of Hawaiian rain. Often she speculated curiously as to whether this would happen before or after their trip with the Waynes was closed, and amused herself by imagining what she would do about it when it came.

"I am very much at a loss to imagine," he said now, "why you have committed yourself to this peculiar arrangement."

On an impulse Karen said, "I'll tell you why I have to go. I have to go because I'm afraid of those Waynes."

"They're people," Karen said, "from whom we are about to take everything they have."

"What you're taking is yours," John Colt said.

"Sometimes I wonder if it really is."

"I think," she said, "we'd better go back, hadn't we?"

There was defeat and admission of defeat in that; but, knowing what she now knew, she could hope for nothing in the world here, except a means of return. "We'll be very late into Honolulu."

"A little," Dick said.

"But if you'll turn now—"

"The funny thing about it," he said oddly, "is that we can't turn back. At least not yet."

"You mean—you mean—"

"Don't worry," Dick said: "there isn't anything to worry about. Meanwhile—if you'll look across the starboard bow, you'll see Alakoa—Karen."

Alakoa, as seen from this approach, rose steeply from the water; the folds of her hills were of a shadowy and unearthly blue, but the rays of the sun, slanting low now, struck her tall up-thrusting ridges with traceries of red gold. There was something terribly appealing about Alakoa as Karen saw it then. In one way it seemed so little in that vast expanse of salt water, the very intensity of whose deep blue seemed to speak of a vital strength, a vast living will which nothing could withstand nor deny. Yet Alakoa rose bravely from the heart of the sea, so tall that it seemed slenderly tall.

Tonga Dick stood up, rising lightly on one heel instead of two, and reached for her hand. When she did not give it he took her wrist, and pulled her to the forward rail, beside the reaching bowsprit.

"Of course," he said, "you don't see much of it from here. There's four thousand feet of rise in those highest hills. The cane fields, the rice paddies, and the little fishing villages are all on the other side."

"And now what?" she asked.

"We'll land in another hour," he told her.

"In another hour? But Honolulu is—"

"I mean, on Alakoa."

When Karen was certain of what he had said, angry tears sprang into her eyes. "You mean you're not going to turn back?"

"I'm afraid I can't."

"You can't what?"

"I can't turn back. You see, I have received an extremely urgent radio from Alakoa. It will be necessary for us to land. I think, Karen, you had better plan to spend the night as Alakoa's guest."

"This is preposterous," Karen said. "I certainly shall do nothing of the kind."

"Now, now," Dick said soothingly, "I was hoping you would enjoy it."

"This is kidnap," Karen said. Her voice was steady now; the anger was still there, but leveled now by something very like a calculating hate.

Tonga Dick smiled. "Shanghai," he corrected her. "We call it shanghai, at sea."

"I can't imagine," Karen said, "what you can possibly expect to gain by this."

"I'm very much surprised that you're not more interested," Dick said. "Inasmuch as you have set out to take possession of Alakoa, I should think you'd like to see what it looks like."

"I can see it perfectly plainly from here."

"You see a rock sticking out of the sea," he admitted. "There are a good many thousands of them in the Pacific. But you can't see from here any of the things that make Alakoa desirable to you and to your friend John Colt. What is really interesting, from a financial standpoint, is the development that the Waynes have made—the flumes that make the cane fields possible, and the mills. Those things have taken a good many years to build; without them Alakoa would still support only a handful of fishermen, and would certainly never have come to the attention of Mr. Colt."

Karen cried out, with a passion strange to herself, "If you've brought me out here to preach at me—"

"Be sure of this," he said crisply. "I preach to no one. I brought you here for the same reason that you came. I wanted to know what you were like. Isn't that what you wanted of me?"

"Yes," Karen Waterson said. Her voice was suddenly quiet.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—During his 16 years in the house, Representative Lindsay Warren of North Carolina used to lie back in his chair with his eyes closed, seemingly asleep. But he never was. When he snapped into action, his mates noted that he had missed nothing of even the most complicated goings on. To them he was known as "The Fox."

Deceptively Sleepy Eyed, Warren Is Alert as Watchdog

Similarly, not much has been heard of him since he became comptroller general two years ago, but here he is suddenly in action with a brief against the National Youth administration, accusing it of playing politics to keep up its membership rolls and get appropriations. Characteristically, he goes into details.

Bulky, bull-necked, pompadoured and of a general leathery makeup, Mr. Warren liked to go fishing in old clothes at Hatteras or Kitty Hawk. He didn't want to be bothered with this comptroller general job, although it pays $10,000 a year for 15 years. His predecessor, the penny-pinching John Raymond McCarl, who once nicked a pullman berth item on General Pershing's expense account, was known as "the watch dog of the treasury." Mr. Warren didn't want to be a watch dog, and after Mr. McCarl quit, in 1936, President Roosevelt offered Mr. Warren the job three times before he took it.

One of his three children, Lindsay Jr., aged 16, is ailing. The importance of getting the best medical care for the boy, and his desire for a permanent home is said to have induced him to accept. He had been one of the most popular men in congress, and watch dogs aren't altogether popular.

His post carries more power than almost any in the federal job portfolio, although no quiz entrant would be apt to list it. He passes on government appropriations, audits governmental accounts, settles claims and in numerous other ways polices hidden or furtive charges in federal expenditures. He had valuable training for this in his long experience as chairman of the house committee of accounts.

He is 51 years old, a native of Washington, N. C., up "through channels" in politics, as county attorney and state senator. He has been regarded as one of the ablest political strategists of the Democratic party. Furthermore, there is a legend that he once trimmed the President handsomely in a weekend poker game. Being deceptively sleepy-eyed, and at the same time alert makes him a formidable poker player.

Heydrich Possibly Has Cost-Finding System on Killings

REINHARDT HEYDRICH, setting up drumhead justice in the former Czech provinces, with more than 100 executions to date, has improved greatly on the comparatively loose and casual techniques of the Germans after the Franco-Prussian war.

In the latter instance the French Francs Tireurs gave the Germans a lot of real trouble. The reprisals were ruthless and widespread, but unsystematic, and quite amateurish compared to Heydrich's highly professional exploits, for the fatherland and the iron heel.

Old Baron Constantin von Neurath, whom Heydrich succeeds as "protector" in the Czech region, liked to shoot wild boars, but held back on shooting so many people. So they give a younger man a chance. The new "protector" was Hitler's finger-man in the 1934 blood-purge, one of his principal victims being his friend Ernst Roehm, with whom he had risen to Nazi party eminence in the SS organization. They immediately afterward made him director of the Berlin office of the Gestapo.

As he rose in the Gestapo, Heydrich established precise and up-to-date methods for killings and mayhem.

It was in 1938, when the Gestapo took on the activities of the "International Criminal Police commission," that he foreshadowed the wider outreach of his espionage system. He said: "We are aware that the criminal activities of the world can only be fought internationally." It was reported at the time that in his office there was built up a dossier on "criminals" all over the world, who had spoken disrespectfully of Nazi Germany. One exploit which won him increased power was filching Schuschnigg's private letters and papers.

Lodwick School One of Sixteen in Training Center

The Lodwick Aviation Military Academy at Avon Park is one of the 16 civilian primary flying schools under the jurisdiction of Brig. General Walter Reed Weaver, commanding the Southeast Air Corps Training Center, according to Major L. H. Roderick, project officer of the air corps basic flying school at Sebring.

The Sebring school, incidentally, is the only Florida basic station in the training center.

There are 32 units under the General's command, including the primary schools at Arcadia, Lakeland and Ocala, as well as here. There are 11 additional primary units in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Arkansas, and Mississippi, and five other basic schools in addition to the one at Sebring. They are located in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina.

Seven advanced schools also are under the command of General Weaver in Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, and Mississippi; also the gunnery school at Panama City, Fla., the replacement center at Montgomery, Ala., and the negro pilot training school at Tuskegee, Ala.

A questionnaire sent out recently to former Navy men, picked at random, showed that 86 per cent were working in skilled trades which they learned in the U. S. Navy.

THE BIRTHDAY OF THE U. S. NAVY

One hundred and sixty-six years ago a committee of three men, John Adams, Silas Dean and John Langdom purchased the merchant ship Black Prince of Philadelphia. Renamed the Alfred, this vessel had the distinction of being the first ship in the United States Navy. These men were appointed by Congress, through the efforts of George Washington, as a Naval Committee responsible for the purchase of two vessels. An original appropriation of $1,000,000 was increased several days later, making possible the purchase of four ships in all—the latter three named the Columbus, Cabot and Andrew Doria.

The date October 27, on which Congress in 1775 acted to establish our Navy, is celebrated annually as Navy Day. The purposes of Navy Day are to pay a deserved tribute to the splendid service the men in the Navy have rendered in making and keeping us a nation and to better inform the American people of what our Navy is and does for them. When originally chosen, October 27 marked not only one of the most important dates in U. S. Naval history, but also the birth date of Theodore Roosevelt whose life was devoted to furthering a sound naval policy for the United States.

In its early days, the history of our Navy was a turbulent one. During the revolutionary period 73 vessels of all descriptions were used, but through sale, capture and destruction only one was left in 1785 and during that year Congress abolished the Navy, leaving the burden of our protection of our country in the hands of an army of only 80 men. In 1794 our Navy was revived by a Congressional Act authorizing the construction of several frigates to deal with the Algerine pirates and the first U. S. Navy Department was established four years later. One of these new frigates purchased as a result of this act of 1794 was the Constitution—with the Constellation, United States, President, Congress and Chesapeake making up a Navy, which through successful encounters with French cruisers and privateers, established an enviable reputation for itself. In 1801 a series of engagements with the Barbary states and the ensuing treaties rendered commerce in the Mediterranean safe from attack and ended the payment of tribute by Americans.

The outstanding performance of our Navy and privateers during the War of 1812 insured freedom of the seas for our commerce and further increased our national prestige abroad.

The effective work of the Navy during the World War is still fresh in the minds of most of us. The astonishing fact that no American soldier escorted by the U. S. Navy lost his life in transit across the Atlantic amazed even those in the highest positions of authority.

All American foreign relations, all American participation in the life of the community of nations must find its expression through traffic on the seas. Ships, both commercial and naval, are the means of giving effective outlet to America's right to participation in international trade and politics.

Children's Home Makes Appeal For Assistance

Apparently most of the money, practically all children's wearables and all canned goods, foodstuffs, etc.—that used to be given to The Children's Home Society of Florida—to aid its big family of utterly homeless children—have been and are being given to the various War Relief agencies during the past nine months, according to a statement just received by the editor of this paper which reads as follows:

"Because of the great reduction of gifts in money, food and wearables for the care of the 1265 utterly homeless, orphan and "lesschanced" little Florida children that have received the aid and care of The Children's Home Society of Florida—"Florida's Greatest Charity", during the past nine months—The Home Society is facing desperate and immediate need of financial and other aid.

"We have been compelled to borrow $13,250.00 to provide the barest necessities of life—food, shelter and clothing for these poor little youngsters—most of whom are really homeless and entirely dependent upon our Society for their existence.

"We must not—we cannot continue to conduct our great Statewide, and Undenominational Child Placing Service on borrowed money. We must secure immediately money, food and clothing if our absolutely necessary service, which during the past 39 years has aided over 43,000 Florida children in need—is to be continued.

"We are not complaining about the large amount of money, children's wearables and foodstuffs that have been given so generously all over Florida for the aid of war sufferers of England and China and other foreign lands—we are glad that Florida citizens have been so generous—but we do plead in all earnestness — for money, food and clothing for the hundreds of little Florida refugees and sufferers—right here on our own door steps—for we must care for our own children as well as those in war torn areas.

"Gifts of money, food or clothing will be gladly welcomed at our State Headquarters—403 Consolidated Building—Jacksonville—or at any one of our Receiving Homes in Miami, Pensacola, Lakeland or Jacksonville."

The above statement was received from Marcus C. "Daddy" Fagg, State Superintendent of The Children's Home Society of Florida—who has just recently started on his thirty-second year of service to Florida's needy childhood. We trust that our many readers will come to the rescue of Florida's own orphan and needy children—through the Children's Home Society. No gift can be too small to be of real help at this moment of critical need.

Good homes are also badly needed for the Home Society's, homeless children—particularly for older boys and girls. The Society has a long waiting list continuously for babies and run-a-bouts up to 6 years of age.

To make enough potato salad for 100 soldiers, the Fourth Corps Area Quartermaster estimates that it takes: 25 pounds of Irish potatoes, two dozen fresh eggs, 12 ounces of pimentos, two bunches of celery and one pound of onions.

Highlands County is fortunate: Senator Pepper announces President Roosevelt's approval of a WPA project in amount of $155,325 to build an access road to Army Air Base; also a grant of $16,750 for recreation facilities for Defense workers and soldiers. Now we can work and play and no longer need Jack be a dull boy.

Bright blue and yellow Army training planes of Avon Park-Lodwick Academy are buzzing over the county like huge hornets.

An auxiliary field of the Academy is now in use and several others are in process of construction, all within a radius of 10 miles of the port.

Rural youth of our County will receive Defense training under supervision of Ken Willis, County Agricultural Instructor. Better get in on this farmer-boy, you know many trainees of the Defense schools receive mighty good jobs in National Defense projects.

The United States Navy spent the week end with us complete with mobile recruiting unit of car, large trailer and inspiring banners over all. It traveled out of Tampa south down west coast then up through center of our state. When it arrived in Highlands County it had 33 recruits 16 of which were polled at that he-man's cow town of Arcadia. Who ever heard of "Cow huntin'" in the Navy, but ride 'em cowboy here we come.

Boys of our CCC Camp No. 453 are doing their part for National Defense along with all their other duties. Some 15 strong volunteered for Navy service.

Avon Park, with its characteristic Southern hospitality, brought the Navy in to town with police escort of honor and thrilled it in a prominent place with water and lights available.

Some 8 boys volunteered from Avon Park and Ralph Lee, age 17 was immediately accepted.

The trailer of the Navy unit is privately owned and loaned this patriotic service by Mr. C. L. Barrell a Veteran of Foreign Wars, Legionnaire and assistant in this work.

Chief Petty Officer O. J. Purdom in charge of the unit is another Florida Cracker taking an active part in National Defense. He hails from Miakka City where his folks live, and he says I've been in the Navy for 15 years and realize its great advantages to the youth of our country. I wish every Florida boy could enlist, especially those standing idle on street corners. Our Navy offers wonderful opportunities and you can't go wrong in the Navy."

But to return to the arms of the Army:

Commanding Officer, A. P. Sights, of the Army at Avon Park-Lodwick Acedemy is Captain Sights to you now having just received his promotion. Lieutenant D. T. Bennink, Public Relations Officer is now a First Lieutenant. Congratulations are in order, but in times like these we don't know whether a higher rating with so much more responsibility attendant upon it calls for congratulations or sympathy. Anyway, these fine young officers have the well wishes of our County in their splendid Defense work.

Cadets at the Academy are enjoying recreation facilities at Head Field and the armory while those at the post are in process of construction.

G. S. McKnight, M. D., beloved physician of Avon Park, who so thoroughly conducted the council's first school in First Aid in our county was born in Pittsburgh, Pa. He received his A. B. degree from Princeton and became a Doctor of Medicine at the University of Penn. He is a member of the Rotary Club and has lived in our land of flowers for so long that he is one with us now, a real Cracker.

Captain A. P. Sights, Commanding Officer of the Army at the Academy is a native of Clinton, Oklahoma. He received his education in Clinton High School, Oklahoma University, and West Point where he graduated in 1938. He was then sent to the Advanced Flying School, Kelly Field, Texas, and after graduation there served as Instructor. He is delighted with Florida and the pleasing setting of the Army at Lodwick Inn.

Lieut. D. T. Bennink, public Relations Officer of the Army at the Academy says: "Life here in Florida is ideal." He is from Chautauqua, N. Y. was educated at Chatauqua High School, University of Alabama, Randolph Field (West Point of the Air) and Kelly Field, Texas where he graduated from the Advanced Flying School in 1939.

Continuing his talk of Florida he said: I was raised inPenn. and New York, lived 3 years in Ala., 2 years in Texas. I made several flights to Florida and in 1936 visited my brother in St. Petersburg and ever since then I've been trying to get back to Florida.

VIRGIL STILL CRITICALLY ILL

Virgil Still is critically ill at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Still, having been taken ill last Sunday night, friends will regret to learn. He is suffering with a severe case of mastoid trouble, probably a recurrence of a similiar illness which he had several years ago.

ATTEND ANNUAL MEETING

Several members of the W.M.S. of the First Baptist Church were in Zolfo Monday to attend an all day meeting of the annual W.M.S. of the Orange Blossom Association. Those attending the meeting were Mrs. J. P. Dalton, Mrs. R .H. Lawhon, Mrs. J. L. Collins, Mrs. S. E. Longbottom, Mrs. L. D. McGiboney, Mrs. C. W. Pabor, and Mrs. David Stuckey.

MR. RABB IN HOSPITAL

J. D. Rabb, who was taken to an Orlando hospital last Friday for observation and treatment, is improving each day, friends here will be pleased to learn. Mrs. Rabb accompanied him to Orlando, and is remaining there to be near her husband. While the Rabbs are away, the Poinsettia hotel is under the capable supervision of Mrs. Katherine Bristol.

Lake County will have what is claimed to be the largest citrus by-product plant in the state as a result of the recent purchase of the Lowery canning plant by Dr. A. H. Court of Santa Anna, California. $30,000 will be spent on enlarging and improving, and operations are scheduled to begin on Jan. 1.

Reports on a recent inquiry sent out to former Navy men who were still following the skilled trades they had learned in the Navy showed that the average salary of these workers to $165.00 per month. Ninety-seven per cent said their time in the Navy was of great value in civilian life. Eighty-three per cent said they would do the same thing if they had it to o over again.

The National Rivers and Harbors Congress will convene in a special session in Miami, Nov. 13 and 14. Purpose of the meeting, according to Representative Pat Cannon of Miami, is to consider present and future plans for river and harbor development, flood control, maritime and inland navigation, with special reference to projects ealing with national defense.

Pharmacist Plays Important Part in Community Life

This week, October 19 to 25, is being observed as National Pharmacy Week and pharmacists here and elsewhere are participating in a program to establish the prestige of pharmacy as a profession in the minds of millions of American citizens. The theme this year is pharmacy's place in the defense program.

Your pharmacist faces a tremendous responsibility in the part he plays in cooperation with the medical profession. Many are prone to look upon the pharmacist as just another merchant, when in reality his profession dates back to the time of Socrates in the civilized era, and before that to the medicine men of the stone ages.

The man who serves you a cup of coffee at the soda fountain is a versatile man, made so by the demands of modern business. But foremost of all he is a scientist. Upon his skill depends in large measure the outcome of the treatment your doctor prescribes. For his careful and painstaking effort is needed if you are to derive the full benefit of medicine.

How well do you know your pharmacist? He works long hours day and night alongside your physician, dentist and all those concerned with the protection of your community health. Probably you just know him as the corner druggist—but he is a trained scientist, too. A registered pharmacist must be a high school graduate; a graduate from a four-year college course in Pharmacy School, must have at least two years practical experience, pass a rigid board examination; renew his registration each year.

Visit your pharmacy during National Pharmacy Week. See the interesting and instructive windows of your drug stores.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt appreciation to the many kind neighbors and friends for their words, messages and expressions of sympathy at the time of our recent bereavement. We thank each one also for the beautiful floral tributes. Your kindness and consideration was a great source of comfort to us.

Tom and The Girls.

DR. PERRY IMPROVING

Postmaster D. G. Perry is convalescing in the Veterans hospital at Bay Pines, following an emergency operation for appendicitis last Friday night. Friends here will be glad to hear of his improvement each day since the operation.

Florida continues to receive publicity in the press of the nation as a direct result of the visit to this state of the National Editorial Association last spring. Several hundred lines of copy appear each week, a check of clippings reveals.

Each bit of tape, braid and embroidery on the uniform of a member of the U. S. Navy has a meaning all its own. It tells how long the wearer has been in the Navy, the branch of the service to which he has been assigned and his pay.

The newly established Marine Engineering and Naval Architecture school of the University of Tampa has been flooded with requests for men from shipyards all along the Gulf and Atlantic coasts. Students in the school receive practical instruction from the Tampa Shipbuilding Company.

A sailor in the U. S. Navy gets first cuff-braid when he becomes an apprentice seaman. After 4 months in the Navy he is given the second stripe and when he attains the status of 1st class, he get the third and final stripe on his cuff.

Celebrating it seventh year of service, National Airlines last week inaugurated a third daily round trip flight between Jacksonville and Miami via Lakeland, making a total of 4,860 miles per day flown as compared to the 292 miles covered in 1934.

POPEYE, THE RECRUITING OFFICER, MEETS THE ADMIRAL!

Your pay in the Navy is gravy

No rent to pay. No food to buy. No doctor's or dentist's bills. Even movies and other entertainment are free. And when you first enlist, the Navy gives you $118.00 worth of uniforms!

And if you want to learn a trade, the Navy is the place to do it. There are forty-five odd trades you can learn . . . training that's worth hundreds of dollars the first year.

The Navy offers the chance of a lifetime to young men. If you are 17 or over, get a free copy of the illustrated booklet "LIFE IN THE U. S. NAVY," from the Navy Editor of this newspaper. Simply write or call.

Special Levy Is Made For Bond Debt Service

Compromise Reached Calls For Added Nine Mills

The city council has reached an agreement with bondholders to put $60,000 in the budget for total debt service, an increase of $20,000 over the original figure of $40,000 which was set up in this year's budget.

The increase will mean an additional levy of 10 1-2 mills in territory A, and 6 1-2 mills in each territories B and C. This plus levies already made will make the total levy in territory A, 55 1-2 mills; territory B, 43 1-2 mills and territory C, 19 1-2 mills.

While this is the highest millage for bonds in several years, it is however, much lower than it might have been. Federal court orders totaling nearly $300,000 have been issued, and if a levy had been made for the full amount, about 130-mill special levy would have been necessary. The brighter side of the picture shows that the council came to an agreement with bondholders, and as a result taxpayers will have a breathing spell for a year at least, during which time it is said strenuous efforts will be made by the city to work out some solution to the bond situation. A resolution will be passed at a recessed meeting Friday night to provide for the special levy.

The bond levy was the subject of discussion Thursday night, at which time numerous taxpayers were heard. At the first of the meeting, most of the speakers favored a high millage in order to "force the issue," as it was expressed. But after much discussion, it was generally agreed that the best procedure was to make the compromise levy. Walter Betts, Charlie Lanier, C. E. Crabtree and others opposed a compromise, saying it would be better to levy for all judgments and bring matters to a head. James Bowman, president of the taxpayers league, approved the compromise, to give time to work out a better solution.

Chairman Delaney explained that a conference with Crummer and Company had brought an agreement whereby nearly $300,000 in judgment would be suspended temporarily, and the bondholders agreed to an increase of only $20,000 be placed in the budget this year. This would require about a nine mill additional levy, he said. He urged acceptance of the proposal, as it would "open the door" for further negotiations he said.

Salaries for the ensuing year were set as follows: City clerk, $160; assistant clerk, $75; chief of police, $115; night police, $115; fire chief, $110; assistant, $90; street truck driver and helper, $70; park department, $65; clay truck help, $70; garbage, Willis $87.50, assistant $82.50; superintendent of public works, $100.

The tax assessor's salary was set at $400 per year but no appointment was made. The mayor's salary remains the same as formerly $50 per month, and the council is paid $2 per meeting.

Increases were made in clerk's salary, raised from $150; chief of police, raised from $100; night police, raised from $90; and fire chief raised from $100.

S. C. Pardee offered $125 on a four acre grove, to settle the city's claim on the property. Pardee said he has possession of the property, which was foreclosed in a friendly suit by the city to settle delinquent taxes, but the adjustment has never been made. No action was taken.

New Schedules for Park Theatre

According to the management of the Park Theatre, beginning Nov. 1., there will be four changes in the program each week, with new prices in effect. Price of adult admission to the show on Sunday and Monday will be 25c, Thursday and Wednesday, 20c, Thursday and Friday 25c, and Saturday, 15c. Children will be admitted for 9c at all times. A splendid schedule of pictures for the month has been released, and patrons are assured of many pleasant evenings of entertainment at the Park Theatre.

Provisions of Motor Vehicle Law Are Cited

L. R. Baird, supervisor of inspectors for the State Motor Vehicle license department, pointed out yesterday that a Florida certificate of title must be delivered within 24 hours after delivery of a used motor vehicle to a new owner.

Declaring that this provision of the state law had been ignored in many instances, Mr. Baird also pointed out that the law applies to the dealer as well as to the individual, who must apply for a transfer of title within 10 days after purchase of the car.

Any dealer who fails to issue a title certificate within the 24 hours, and any individual who fails to apply for a transfer within 10 days, is guilty of a misdemeanor, Mr. Baird said.

The supervisor pointed out that title must be presented and registered in owners name before you can secure tag. Application for title transfers may be made at the tag office in the court house at Sebring.

Legion Sponsors Radio Stars on Armistice Day

Planned on a larger scale perhaps than that for any similar undertaking in Avon Park or the Ridge Section for years and with groups of some of the most popular radio stars in the South to appear in person on the stage, announcement has been made for an all-day and evening Music Festival and Armistice Day celebration to be held at Avon Park, Tuesday, November 11. The affair will be staged at the ball park grounds, where accommodations are being provided for several thousands.

The program by radio stars at the ball park will be preceded by a parade and ceremony conducted by Highlands Post, American Legion. The high school band will lead the parade, which will include units of Legionnaires, soldiers, units of the county defense council and other organizations.

The Legion will have charge of booths inside the grounds at the ball park where drinks and food will be on sale, and varied forms of entertainment will be offered.

The event will be under the sponsorship of the American Legion in conjunction with promoters who have conducted similar large-scale out-door rural entertainment projects in Kentucky, Alabama and Tennessee including the famous Princeton (Ala.) homecoming celebrations and the colossal Sneed Grove meets or 25,000 and over. The program will include not only numbers and themes patriotic, it is announced, but will range from comedy to classic. There will be a night program.

The radio stars for the event, as so far announced, will include the widely known Norman Beasly group, with its variety of music and comedy and depicting manners and customs of the real cowgirl life. And suggestive further of the announced purposes of the managers to go to the top of the entertainment profession for the day's talent, arrangements have just been perfected securing the "Sunny South" vocal quartet of Tampa, perhaps the South's most popular and certainly among the topranking vocal artists.

From correspondence and from contacts with other American Legion bodies and otherwise an attendance is anticipated not alone from the home county but likewise from neighboring towns including Bartow, Sebring, Haines City, Lake Wales, Winter Haven, Fort Meade, Bowling Green and Wauchula. Thus in the project is provided the opportunity to many thousands for their first time to hear and see in person those figures of the air, magic or otherwise, whose names are household words and whose voices are familiar for a thousand miles, but to scores of thousands of people who have never seen them in person.

School Trustee Election Will Be Held As Planned

There will be no postponement of the school trustee election in Highlands county, as suggested for some counties by Governor Holland and State Superintendent Colin English. The election will proceed as advertised on November 4. The governor's suggestion applied only to those counties which have not had their budgets approved. Highlands county's budget has had official approval, and there will be no delay here, Col. F. N. K. Bailey, school superintendent, said today.

The county school board Tuesday recommended 3 and 1-3 mills for all school districts of the county and this millage will appear on the ballot. The assessment of real estate was raised in the county approximately three times the previous valuation, so the county board reduced the district school millage from 10 mills to three and a third to hold taxes at the same level as last year.

There will be two voting places in Avon Park. Voters in Precinct 1 (north of mall) will vote at the poll that will be located next to the Avon Park Cafe, Voters in Precinct 1-A (south of mall) will vote at poll located next to room formerly occupied by Roberts Pressing club.

Every shore station in the United States Navy has a barber shop, tailor shop, cobbler shop, pool and billiard room, and photography shop for the use of enlisted men.

Robt. E. Woodruff Named President Of Erie Railroad

Robert E. Woodruff, trustee and chief executive officer of the Erie Railroad company, since Oct. 1939 has been named the road's 23rd president, following his recent election by the Erie's new board of directors. Mr. Woodruff, whose home is in Cleveland, Ohio, is the brother of Mrs. Demos Mandis. He has visited in Avon Park on numerous occasions and has many friends here who will be interested in the announcement.

Mr. Woodruff, affiliated with the Erie since 1905, is one of the few Erie presidents who has devoted his entire career to the company.

Thirty-six years ago, upon graduation as a civil engineer from Purdue university, he started with the Erie as a section laborer. He was successively made foreman, transit superintendent, superintendent of transportation, general manager and assistant vice president.

Elected vice president in charge of operations and maintenance in 1929, Mr. Woodruff held that position until October 1939 when he was appointed trustee, 21 months after the road failed in bankruptcy in January, 1938.

In his tenure of service with the Erie, Mr. Woodruff has been stationed at 14 different points, including Cleveland, New York, Chicago and other cities. Widely known to the railroad personnel, Mr. Woodruff is acquainted with operations of the Erie through his wide experience at many positions and points on the road.

He was born Sept. 11, 1884 on a farm near Green Bay, Wis., and attended high school in Benton Harbor, Mich. He is married and lives at 18100 South Park Blvd., Shaker Heights, Cleveland.

Bondholders File Mandamus Suits Against City

Mandamus suits totaling, with interest, approximately $300,000 have been filed against the city by bondholders. These and other matters were considered at Tuesday night's city council meeting. The city has been required to file an answer in federal court by November 12.

The city went out of the water works business, when a motion was passed to notify property owners that the city will not be responsible for water service in Highland Lakes after November 12. The Florida Public Service company was also notified that the city would not be responsible for further power bills at the water works plant. The council had previously rescinded its action in purchasing the water works.

Discussion of the necessity for employing legal counsel to represent the city in suits pending brought a motion from Miss Mattie Tompkins to turn these suits over to S. C. Pardee who she said still held the office of city attorney as his successor has not been named. The motion failed for want of a second, and the matter of a city attorney or legal representative of any kind is still pending.

Gilbert Lester presented the annual audit to the city, which was accepted. Lester was employed as auditor for another two years.

A discussion of WPA work stoppage at the airport brought the suggestion from Councilman Cone that the city send a committee to Jacksonville to confer with Director Harkness and see if differences could be worked out. A conference with Albert I. Lodwick was suggested to determine if some agreement could be reached to reconcile Lodwick lease with WPA requirements. It is expected that this matter will be pushed in the near future.

The United States Sugar Corporation has purchased 3,300 acres on the St. Lucie Canal, between Indian Town and Port Mayacca, and is launching a $5,000,000 production program for national defense. The new development will be employed in the manufacture of sweet potato starch and vegetable oils.

Fred Touchton Opens Drug Store In Dade City

(From Dade City Banner)

Dr. Fred L. Touchton and associates are announcing this week the formal opening in Dade City of the Service Drug Store on the corner next to the Seaboard depot and in the building recently occupied by Seay's Drug Store. This announcement is received with much interest as Dr. Touchton is well and favorably known throughout this section from his former residence here where he conducted for eleven years, one of the state's finest drug stores. His return here from Avon Park where he has spent the past few years in a drug store there is a "homecoming" for the genial Dr. Touchton and his family as he has called Dade City home even while temporarily residing in another county.

The name chosen for the new drug store is most appropriate as Dr. Touchton's chief characteristic is service associated with friendliness. Desire to be of service has permeated his life and aside from his service in the business to which he has devoted his time for many years, he has served successfully in public office, being well remembered as state senator for this district in the term from 1934 through 1938. During his senatorship he did much for the district. One of his first acts was securing the passage of the "Fair Trade Act" which as Senate Act No. 1 had also as its co-sponsor, Gov. Spesard L. Holland, at that time a senator. Dr. Touchton who announced as a candidate for gov-

CCC Boys to See Service on Pacific

For the first time in a year, Highlands County youths are to have the chance to enroll in the CCC and see service in the camps of the Pacific coast.

Announcement to this effect was made today by C. Parke Anderson, Highlands county representative District 8, Welfare Board, who explained that young men who would be available for Western service should advise the nearest welfare office at once so that they may be reached when the special enrollment is authorized.

Only the usual requirements will be considered in determining eligibility for Western service, Mr. Anderson stated. Previous service on the Pacific coast will not render an applicant ineligible for reenrollment, provided three months have elapsed since the date of his last honorable discharge and the total of his previous service is not in excess of 18 months. Enrollment will be for six months.

Red Devils Are Winners Over Arcadia

Defeat Bull Dogs 15-0 In Fast Game Last Night

(By CLIFFORD CRAFT)

The Avon Park Red Devils over ran the DeSoto County Bull Dogs of Arcadia 15 to 0 here last night. Outplaying the Arcadia boys throughout the game, the Red Devils made eigth first downs to the Bulldog's none.

Avon Park pushed the DeSoto team against their goal several times as a result of their reverses and lateral passes. Charles Lawhon set the ball on Arcadia's five yard line early in the second period, and Buttercup Rutledge went over for the touchdown on two successive quarterback sneaks. Wendell Smith kicked the placement, the first kicked point of the season. A short time later Ab Wester on a reverse placed the ball on the Bulldog's three. A fumble on the goal line robbed the Devils of another touchdown.

A fumble on an attempted punt was recovered by Cecil Skipper, but a tight and hard defensive line backed by Permenter and Davis held the Devils at bay in the third quarter.

In the final period another attempt to punt was smothered by the Red Devils to give them a safety when the Arcadia team recovered behind their goal. Later Lawhon crossed the goal for the final touchdown as the result of a sustained drive from the Arcadia 45 yard line.

Last night's victory was the first win over DeSoto High in three years.

The high school band furnished music for the game and put on a colorful drill between the halves.

Mentally Healthy Soldier Needed for Modern War

High Selection Standard Required in Supplying Army With Men Equipped to Meet Hazards of 'Blitz' Tactics.

By BAUKHAGE

National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1341 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

At a recent White House news conference the President was asked whether he thought there ought to be a lowering of the physical, mental and educational standards for admission to the army.

The question came up at the close of a long dissertation by Mr. Roosevelt on a report from the army which seemed to reveal a shocking state of the national health. It was based on figures which showed that nearly 50 per cent of the selectees rejected for service were ineligible because of deficiencies in these three categories. It did look as though Americans, as a people, were pretty sick.

The President's answer to the question of lowering the standards of admission was an emphatic negative. Very little attention was paid to this response at the time and the stories which went out over the air and the wires that day were chiefly concerned with the program for healing the physical ills of selectees at government expense.

But that part of the picture, as I learned when I talked with a prominent psychiatrist, is only half of it—or less.

Lowering the standards of mental requirements would, in case of war, mean a terrific psychopathic casualty list, the taxpayer would have a terrific bill to pay and the efficiency of the American fighting forces would be immeasurably impaired.

Record of Last War

Let's look at the record of the last war, when the mental hazards were only a fraction of what they are today with a thousand machines harnessed for destruction.

Briefly, the story is this:

The government of the taxpayer has paid out nearly a billion dollars for the benefit and care of mental cases among veterans of the last war.

This sum represents 20 per cent of all benefits paid to veterans and their dependents.

There are 92,231 such mental cases and a third of all veterans confined to hospitals are mental cases. It is true that some 21,000 of these men cannot prove that their plight is traceable to their military service, but they are on Uncle Sam's expense list just the same, and they would not be if they had been kept out of the army in the first place.

Of course, all of these 9,000 mental cases could not have been spotted by the draft boards in 1917 and 1918. Not all cases of mental weakness or potential weakness can be spotted now. But the army now has a wealth of experience on the subject and the Veterans Administration is cooperating with many local boards in this effort. Twenty years study has made these government doctors expert in discovering hidden weaknesses in the human mind. Some of the nation's greatest psychiatrists have offered their services to the army.

Today, of course, there are many reasons why mental qualifications count more than in the last war. In the first place, modern warfare requires greater self-discipline on the part of the individual.

Special Training Needed

In the old army the squad, composed of seven or eight men, was a unit. The squad has now been abolished. Modern ordnance—small and heavy arms—is much more complicated. Each man must be specially trained for a special task and frequently the responsibility formerly relegated to a group, falls on the individual.

Greater skill to operate modern arms and equipment is necessary. Also, the devastating effect of mechanization creates a greater mental strain. An example of this is the terrorizing effect of the noise of dive bombers. When the French troops first heard the stukas they threw down their arms and fell flat on the earth.

As Dr. Martin Cooley, consultant of the Veterans Bureau in Washington, puts it:

"When one considers how the warfare of today has stepped up in intensity and tempo with the stuka divers, the panzer divisions, the elements of deadly surprise and audacity and the dropping of bombs of high explosives weighing as much as a ton, it becomes evident that combat troops will have an immense strain on their morale, and it must be expected that a man with unstable nervous system or a flaw of character will crack under the strain."

In the last war an effort was made to weed out the men, who, from their medical histories or as a result of examinations, were considered unable to stand up under the strain of service. Strangely enough, it was the medical officers rather than the line officers who were inclined to be lenient in accepting questionable cases, and the medical department of the army records that 8,640 cases of record were discovered and the men retained in the army against the advice of the neuro-psychiatric officers.

Many of these men broke down when they reached camp before they heard a gun fired. With this record staring them in the face, it is no wonder that responsible war department officials are anxious that there be no let-down in the standards for admission to military service.

Pan American Child Congress

War and politics are no respecters of children. Bombs and shells spare neither nursery nor school. And politics, frequently, like the bad Samaritan, goes by on the other side, even in peace-time.

The Pan-American Child Congress, whose purpose is to build studier, happier, wiser future citizens of the Americas, was established in 1919. Plans are now under way for its first meeting since 1935 which is to be held next spring in Washington.

Four times during the last six years, the meeting of the congress has had to be postponed. The first came in 1936 when Nicaragua found that it could not go ahead with plans for being host to the conclave. Then, when the delegates were all ready to take the boat the next year for Costa Rica, where the postponed congress was to meet, it was cancelled again, indirectly because of war. The real reason for this last postponement, perhaps, was indicated in a headline in a San Jose, Costa Rica, newspaper, which read: "Is this a Pan American-German Congress?" Germany had announced that it would send exhibits and take part in the meeting and presumably Nazi influence in Costa Rica was strong enough to make it unwise for the local government to protest. In any case, the meeting was again cancelled.

On Gray Days—Meditation, Repose

The other day I sat on a bale of straw in a stable with the measured crunch and stamp of horses around me, waiting for the rain to stop. I watched the slanting drops with mixed desires. The earth was so thirsty for these few drops that it seemed more than selfish to hope the watery benediction would cease.

At last a rooster crowed and the rain thinned to a mist. The whole countryside seemed to look up in damp gratitude for its short cup of pleasure. The mists life and movement everywhere. The dog dug in the softened dirt for no particular reason. When I passed he looked up at me with mud on his whiskers and a foolish, happy grin on his face. Chickens energetically pulled at worms that they hadn't seen for weeks and then, suddenly, there was a bright flash of color before me. Eight bluebirds appearing out of the air like a bright light suddenly turned and alighted on the top rail of the fence.

Back in the city, skies were still gray, but the same muted feeling of relief that I had felt in the country spread along the streets.

There is always to me a beauty in gray days. I feel as though I had stepped from a garish world into a quiet cloister—I hear sandalled feet on cool stone, the light, subdued, comes through stained glass windows. It is time for meditation and repose.

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Jim Harlan, Iowa state conservation commissioner, and Jane Wilson were on hand to see an egret begin its flight back to the South by means of artificial wings. It was to be released at New Orleans and will be out of the northlands before winter sets in.

PRICES:
No Action Yet

While congress debated the setting of ceilings on wages and prices and rents, without taking any definite action, Canada stepped into the breach and moved to halt inflation.

Prime Minister King said "the government has decided to halt the rise in prices, to undertake the control of all prices, and where necessary, take any other steps to control civilian consumption in fair and equitable ways."

He said that ceilings would be set on prices. He admitted it was going to interfere with business, would impose irksome restrictions. Then he announced that all prices would be frozen after November 17 on the basis of prices charged for that merchandise during the four weeks from September 15 to October 11.

He followed this with a system of controlling wages. Wages also were to be "frozen" at the same level, but employers would be required to pay bonuses in amounts that would vary from time to time according to nation-wide conditions.

The first step in prevention of inflation had been thus taken by our neighbor to the north.

WILLKIE:
Again to Fore

Though the isolationists and non-interventionists constantly were pointing to President Roosevelt as the "big, bad wolf" that was leading this nation into actual warfare, it was Wendell Willkie, former Republican candidate, who "beat the gun," and in an address urged the country to "face war."

A coincident reaction with Willkie's announcement was that congressional leaders began to think in terms not of passing the ship-arming bill, but of scrapping the entire Neutrality act.

"Let's kill the whole darned thing," many of them seemed to feel.

Willkie told his listeners:

"Let us stop deluding ourselves. Berlin, Tokyo and Rome are irrevocably linked by the dangerous dream of world conquest. Victory for one is victory for all. Their aim is world domination, the destruction of liberty and the end of democracy.

"Our ships will continue to be torpedoed and sunk if we don't arm them fast. Axis victories will not end unless we deliver the goods.

"But even this is not enough. We must remove the show and deception of hypocritical neutrality laws. We must abandon the hope of peace.

"We can no more negotiate a peace with the war lords of Tokyo than with the conquering dictator of Berlin. On any continent, in every ocean, we can only stop these partners in piracy.

"They are winning now. Unless we act soon it will be too late."

Designed to make the American sailor the most physically perfect sea fighter in the world, the U. British Reported Expecting U. S. Expeditionary Force . . . Writer Believes Majority in United States Is Sympathetic to Russia.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—The latest inside news in regard to what the British think about the war is that it can be won in 1942 IF the United States comes in.

"If the United States stays out, you can leave the 19 and the 3 and put in any third numeral you wish, making it 1943 or 1963 or 1973," commented one Britisher.

Not only that, but the British EXPECT an expeditionary force, despite all the verbiage to the contrary. In this the same pattern that was followed by events and promises and propaganda in the last war seems to be working out.

It may be recalled that when America entered the last war, in April, 1917, it was thought our only function would be to be the "arsenal of Democracy." That has been the story THIS TIME until very recently. The next "push" in 1917 was for a "token" army—"just a little expeditionary force."

That was the start then and that is what is being advocated now. The British want the Americans to send a "token" force to co-operate with them and the Free French either to Africa or Persia or both. To Africa to wipe out and mop up the German forces still there, and to Persia to back up the Russians and prevent German capture, later on, of the Iran oil fields.

"Why will that be enough, this time?" the writer asked a prominent British spokesman here.

"To make a little play on words," he replied, "it would be important as a 'fact' rather than as a 'factor.' The news that American soldiers were fighting side by side with us would have a tremendous moral effect, not only on the German people, but on the peoples of all the conquered countries, including Italy.

Strength Not Known

"There is no way of telling, now, whether this spirit of revolt against the conquerors about which we have been hearing so much from Norway, Holland, France, the Balkans and Greece will continue and grow, or whether it will flicker out. The Nazis are ruthless in stamping it out, as everyone knows. They may succeed. No one can tell. We can only hope.

"But there is no great hope of the Germans' collapsing from within—not for a long time not until, for very satisfactory reasons they have concluded that by fighting on they were only postponing the evil day and were bound to lose in the end. That train of thought might easily be started in German minds by the arrival on some fighting front of United States troops. We know how important that particular moral factor was in ending the last war.

"At present the Germans are held together by a fear which cannot be exaggerated—a fear of what would happen to them if they lost the war. Every Dutchman and every Frenchman has in mind at least one German whom he is going to kill if and when. Every Pole has at least six Germans so marked. The Germans know this perfectly well. They are there in fear of that prospect than of any losses in ordinary fighting. And who is going to tell them they are wrong—convincingly?

Incidentally, the British are begging Americans in Washington not to be angered at what seems to be lack of gratitude, and what is obvious, impatience with America, as expressed in many British newspapers and by some British orators.

"They cannot understand how diversified in opinions your country is," say the Britishers here.

U. S. Attitude Toward Russians

There is an old saying that politics makes strange bedfellows. This is even more accurate with respect to war. When one is fighting for his life, and someone comes to fight by his side, there is no place for concern about the motives of the ally, his past performances or whether one thinks he has poor taste in architecture. He is there, for the time being, and one is very glad he is there. One hopes that he will land some good socks on the common enemy's nose.

Of the 60 to 80 per cent (at least) of our people who want to see Adolf Hitler smashed, a very large majority, perhaps more than 90 per cent, feel just that way about Russia's part in this war. These persons, who, it is conceded, are a majority of all the people in the United States, like hardly anything about Russia. They don't like Communist economics; they don't like Communist attempts to spread their doctrines in other countries, including the United States, and they don't like the Soviet's attitude toward religion.

But all of them are delighted every time they hear that the Red army has taken terrific toll of Hitler's forces in a strategic retreat.

Belgians Assail German Cruelties

Cite Killing of Family and Boy Who Called Soldier 'Dirty Hun.'

NEW YORK.—Baron J. van der Elst, counsellor to the Belgian embassy in Washington, and the Belgian commercial counsellor's office, at 630 Fifth avenue, made public the text of a cable from his government in London, charging acts of cruelty and injustice against the Nazis occupying Belgium.

The first case was that of a Belgian family of three allegedly executed because they sought to hide a British airman. The second was that of a 10-year-old Belgian boy who called a Nazi soldier a "dirty Hun" and was shot for it.

Family Put to Death.

The text of Mr. Spaak's message follows:

"In a case that came before a German military court in Belgium recently, several Belgians were accused of having given refuge to an English airman, whose machine had been shot down near Maesyck. One evening toward the end of May, a Belgian named Meltior knocked on the door of the house of the Fraipont family, in a suburb of Liege. The daughter of the family, Lucie Vis, opened the door. Meltior, telling her that he was an old friend of her mother, Constance Fraipont, asked her to give hospitality to an English airman who had made a forced landing in the neighborhood and who was there with him. The airman was not injured and hoped that, with the help of Meltior, he could avoid being taken prisoner. Lucie Vis said she would take the airman in, and her parents helped her to frustrate the search for him made by the German authorities.

"Despite the secrecy which surrounded the place where the British airman was lodged, the fact came to the knowledge of the German police, who, in the course of a search through the house, discovered him and arrested him, together with the members of the family: Lucie Vis, her mother, Constance Fraipont, and her father, Emile Fraipont, a manufacturer of Liege.

"These three persons and Mrs. Meltior, whose husband had meanwhile fled, were brought before the military court. The counsel for the defense pointed out that Lucie Vis and Mr. and Mrs. Fraipont had been moved to act by human sentiments. The court reasoned that feelings of this kind could not be taken into account. Lucie Vis and her parents were condemned to death.

"At Mont-sur-Marchienne, near Charleroi, on April 10 a 10-year-old boy, Maurice Van de Castel, was playing with two little playmates on the slope of the railway, which was guarded by German soldiers. One of the German soldiers chased the children away in a rather rough way. As the three children left the spot, one of them turned around and shouted at the German: 'A dirty Hun you are!'

"The soldier turned around and fired point blank at the little fellow, who fell dead. This happened at only a hundred yards from the spot where, 24 years ago, Yvonne Vieslet, a little girl, was killed by the Germans because she gave bread to a French prisoner."

Minute Make-Ups

WHEN your freshly laundered fabric gloves have been hung up to dry, give them a quick spray or two—with your eau de cologne. Let the light floral scent dry in. It takes away that slight odor of laundering suds. And your gloves are faintly fragrant next time you wear them.

Down—Down, to the Bottom of the Sea

Drama and tragedy lurk in all major world-waters these days and especially in the Atlantic, where the night and day battle between England and Germany results in common events, as pictured above. An oil-skin clad lookout on the deck of the submarine watches an oil tanker, bound for Britain, go down, after his craft had plunged a torpedo into her sides. The action above took place "somewhere in the Atlantic" and represents a severe blow for the English, for oil for them, in the same life-blood of modern war, as it is for the enemy.

PETER RABBIT CALLS BUSTER BEAR A COWARD

"Fraidy! Fraidy! You don't dare! You're a coward, Buster Bear!"

NOW you wouldn't suppose that anyone would dare to say such a thing to Buster Bear, would you? Anyway, you wouldn't suppose that anyone who couldn't fly would dare to say such a thing, and right to Buster's face at that. You know it is a pretty serious thing to call anybody a coward. Paddy the Beaver, floating lazily in his pond deep in the Green Forest, could hardly believe his ears. And then, when he saw who it was who dared to call Buster Bear a coward, Paddy just gaped foolishly with surprise and a little wavelet washed down his throat and made him choke and almost strangle.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Paddy, when he could get his breath. "What is this world coming to?" Then he laughed until he came very near to choking again. "To think," he gasped, "to think of anyone like Peter Rabbit, afraid of his own shadow, daring to call Buster Bear a coward!"

But it was true, as Paddy could see and hear for himself. Peter was dancing about in front of Buster Bear and shouting that little rhyme in the sauciest way. And Buster Bear was growing angrier every minute. No one likes to be called a coward, not even when they are very weak and small, and have reason to be afraid. And when one is as big and strong as Buster Bear nothing can be worse than to be called a coward.

"I'm not a coward," growled Buster Bear in his deepest grumbly-rumbly voice. "When I catch you, Peter Rabbit, I'll teach you to show more respect to your betters."

"When you catch me it will be a cold, cold day," retorted Peter, nimbly jumping out of the way as Buster rushed at him. "You ARE a coward, a great, big coward, and you know it. You're afraid of Farmer Brown's Boy, and you're afraid of that hunter who has been making so much trouble for the rest of us in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows, and you know it.

"Fraidy! Fraidy! You don't dare! You're a coward, Buster Bear!"

Peter nimbly dodged into a great hollow log, and while Buster worked himself into a great rage as he tried to tear the log open with his great claws Peter slipped out at the other end unseen and hid behind a big stump where he could peep and see what Buster was doing. He chuckled to himself as he watched Buster rip and tear the old log. Once he shivered at the thought of what those great claws would do to him if they ever got hold of him. But he didn't intend that they ever should.

"I'm not a coward," growled Buster Bear in his deepest, grumbly-rumbly voice.

By and by Buster paused to get his breath. "No one but a coward would waste his time trying to catch a little fellow like me," said Peter.

Buster Bear whirled and his face was all wrinkled with anger so that he showed all his great white teeth. He was just plain mad. He had lost his temper completely. He was just the maddest Bear ever was. It was worse to have that same little upstart fool him in this way. Buster just couldn't contain himself. He fairly roared with rage.

Now nothing is so foolish as to give way to rage. Peter didn't have any trouble at all in keeping out of Buster's reach because Buster was so mad that he didn't stop to think, and just rushed this way and that way blindly.

"You know you are a coward," taunted Peter. "If you weren't a coward you would drive that hunter out of the Green Forest. He will be sure to come hunting in the Green Forest soon and you'll have a chance to prove that you're not what I say you are—a coward. Good night, Buster Bear. I hope you'll have pleasant dreams."

With that, Peter Rabbit started back home as fast as he could go, lippety-lippety-lip. Getting Buster angry was all a part of a plan Peter had thought out.

What Torpedo Is

A torpedo is a self-propelling, cigar-shaped missile charged with up to 500 pounds of TNT which is detonated on contact. It may be as much as 21 inches in diameter and is usually 12 times the diameter in length. Torpedoes are capable of speeds up to 36 miles per hour for short distances. At lower speeds, some torpedoes have a range up to 10 miles or more.

Boost Per Acre Crop Yield To Meet Defense Demands

CHICAGO. — How farmers can "enlarge" their farms to meet increasing defense demands without incurring the hazards of overexpansion was described in a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement committee.

"The secret lies not in buying more land but in making the present acreage do a better production job," the statement declares. "This means following a soil management program that will raise the land's fertility level.

"Even in the most productive areas the average farm can usually be enlarged the equivalent of 10 per cent, and sometimes as much as 50 per cent, through intelligent soil treatment.

"In combination with other sound farming practices the use of fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash is essential in stepping up the soil's productive capacity. Such a practice not only has an immediate result in increasing the per acre yield of crops needed in the nation's defense effort, but represents an important long range soil conservation measure."

Bridge Builders Toss Colonel Into the River

FULTON, ARK.—When the 168th combat engineers went to work on a 750-foot pontoon bridge across the Red river, the commanding officer, Col. Karl Hobart, casually remarked:

"If you finish her by noon, I'll let you throw me in."

The span was completed by midday and while the regiment cheered, a squad of privates tossed the colonel in.

When Allies Raided Spitzbergen

Canadian soldiers are shown helping the inhabitants there to gather their belongings on the jetty before boarding a ship that took them to England. The allies raided the islands to prevent rich coal deposits there from being used by the Nazis. Many of the citizens leaving Spitzbergen announced their decision to take up arms against the Germans.

WAR AND CUSTOMS PATROL DISCOURAGE SMUGGLERS

OGDENSBURG, N. Y.—No more are narcotics and gem smugglers the quarry of the United States customs patrol on the Canadian border, but instead cattle rustlers.

Usually considered only a problem in the badlands of the Southwest, the detection of cattle smugglers is an important job. The reason is that often the stock are infected with Bangs disease, which the United States is trying to stamp out to protect domestic herds.

"The war in Europe undoubtedly has cut down on smuggling of all types, including precious stones," explained Capt. Archie Denner, in charge of one of the largest territories in patrol jurisdiction, from Lake Champlain to Cape Vincent.

"Reduction of duties on most precious stones has been another factor in ending smuggling of that type. Narcotics smuggling today is virtually nonexistent among experts.

"Smuggling is down. Smugglers are discovering that it doesn't pay in the long run."

This condition contrasts with prohibition days when the customs men were busy night and day and often could get only 10 hours sleep a week.

The most sensational smuggling case along the northern border recently was an attempt in June, 1940, to carry $280,000 in silver fox furs across the line at Detroit. The plot failed and the pelts were seized.

Silver fox is the only fur with a heavy duty now, according to Denner.

Standards for the men of the patrol are kept high. They must stay in top condition and be excellent pistol shots. Teams from the local service have won many trophies for their marksmanship.

Don't worry about what to send the man in Uncle Sam's services for Christmas. He's told the country himself in any number of surveys. Cigarettes and smoking tobacco top the list of what he wants first of all from the folks back home—and first of all is Camel Cigarettes. Actual sales records from service men's stores—in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard—show Camels the largest-selling brand, with Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco a standout favorite. Local dealers are featuring Camels in a handsomely wrapped carton and in a novel Christmas package of four "flat fifties"—either way you give 200 cigarettes. CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist throughout the world on Sunday, November 2.

The Golden Text is: "Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people" (Proverbs 14:34).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting" (Gal. 6:7-8).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine Science reveals the necessity of sufficient suffering, either before or after death, to quench the love of sin. To remit the penalty due for sin would be for Truth to pardon error. Escape from punishment is not in accordance with God's government, since justice is the handmaid of mercy" (p.36: 4-9).

Mrs. Peden Hostess at Hallowe'en Bridge

The Hallowe'en motif was cleverly protrayed in the party rooms at the home of Mrs. Freed Peden on Tuesday evening when she was hostess to members of the Sans Souci club and additional friends at bridge. The colors of orange and black were evidenced in gay Hallowe'en symbols, such as black cats and witches, which were suspended from the mantel and various points about the room, the glow from candles burning in jack o'lanterns creating a subdued light. Bouquets of marigolds accented the charm of the chosen party details, and scores were kept on tallies in a Hallowe'en design.

After several enjoyable progressions, high score prize, a double deck of cards, was presented to Mrs. Raymond Dilley, second high, a novelty pencil, was given to Miss Millie Pearson, and the floating prize was won by Mrs. Brisco Willis, who received a box of fragrant dusting powder. The prizes were attractively wrapped in orange and black.

Delicious refreshments of hot gingerbread topped with sauce, whipped cream and nuts, and coffee were served. The tables were overlaid with strips of orange and black, and the napkins were in these colors. Each guest received a Hallowe'en favor.

Those enjoying the party were Miss Sarah Browning, Miss Millie Pearson, Mrs. Virginia Cloud, Miss Julia Norfleet, Miss Janet Cook, Miss Elisabeth Green, Miss Iva Phillips, Mrs. Raymond Dilley, Miss Mildred Myers, Mrs. Chas. Mr. and Mrs. Mac Poer, brother and sister in law of the bride, were the couple's only attendants, and Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Poer, witnesses.

The bride wore a beautiful fall model of delf green with matching accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of yellow button chrysanthemums.

When scores were totaled following several interesting progressions, high score prize was given to Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lanier, and second high, was won by Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Byown. Enjoyable refreshments of pumpkin pie topped with whipped cream, and coffee were served.

Tallies for the evening were in orange embossed with witch and black cat designs. Tables were arranged for bridge and pinochle.

High score prize for play was presented to Mrs. W. H. Kempton; second high was won by Mr. Speigel; and Mrs. Raymond Dilley received a huge golden pumpkin as the door prize. Tempting refreshments of doughnuts and coffee were served after the distribution of prizes.

The dining table presented a colorful appearance with the chocolate cake, iced with orange frosting forming the centerpiece, with gay festoons of orange and black crepe paper, and lighted orange tapers further emphasizing the chosen color note. The favor given each child was a novelty Hallowe'en lollipop designed in the shape of a cat.

Those enjoying the afternoon were Ivan Brown, Melvin Mann, Sonny Hagan, Jimmie Barrigton, ton, Chandler Evers, Zane Hill, Harry Carratt, Norman Todd, Pete Ragsdale, Lelia Johnson, Frankie England, Thomas and Tirzah Thayer, Carol, Shirley and Betty Hill, Patricia Smith, Sylvia Wright, Leah Jane Brown, and Johnnie Pilcher.

Mayor's Dinner Work of Art

Mayor Covington was host to a few of his friends at noon dinner on Friday, sharing the hospitality of his home and—a nine pound bass, deliciously baked. The fish, he announced, was the catch of a friend, from one of Avon Park's lakes, noted for these large bass and so, alluring to all good fishermen.

It is an occasion, a distinctive privilege, to be a guest, included, at one of the Mayor's dinner parties. Always gracious and responsive to stranger or friend, he creates a home atmosphere of good fellowship and charm; expresses a Southern hospitality in his warmth of welcome and generous thoughtfulness.

Ida, the faithful maid in the Covington family, demonstrates, too, the alluring ways of the Old South with typical service and food, pleasingly prepared. Her cornbread was cooked in true "mammy" style and served with greens, sizzling and tasty. The sweet potato pie, a favorite dessert of the mayor, was superb in quality and favored, too, by his guests.

The salad of swamp cabbage, garnished and trimming, was novel and emphasized appreciation of home products. Delicious grapefruit, too, "home grown," was baked to flavored brown—a seasoned delight.

For intriguing diet, I suggest that we see the Mayor.—One of the Guests.

ATLANTIC COAST LINE RAILROAD

Punishing "heavy duty" service reveals the strength and economy of CONCRETE ROADS

You've seen it happen—a road surface which seemed satisfactory in normal service, broken up rapidly under unexpectedly heavy concentrations of traffic. Soon traffic is paralyzed and an important highway is ruined.

● Such unexpected or emergency traffic spotlights the strength and durability of Concrete. Little affected by wet weather, concrete's high load-carrying capacity gives the extra margin of safety roads need to stand the gaff ...to keep traffic rolling, keep maintenance costs down.

● For its ability to "take it" under emergency or normal traffic growth, for safety, for lowest cost highway service, demand concrete for your roads!

CONSIDERATE

"I suppose your wife enjoys having you run out to spend the week-end with her?"

"Yes, they come right after pay day."

Thought Reversed

A man in South Carolina, who was saved from conviction for horse-stealing by the powerful plea of his lawyer, after his acquittal by the jury, was asked by the lawyer:

"Honor bright, now, Joe, you did steal that horse, didn't you?"

"Now, look a-here, judge," was the reply, "I allers did think I stole that hoss, but since I hearn your speech to that 'ere jury, I'll be dogoned if I ain't got my doubts about it."

ENOUGH SAID

"I notice he always speaks well of himself."

"Yes; he says that his friends will tell the bad about him."

Air Corps Tests New Food Ration On Desert Hike

DAYTON, OHIO.—A 100-mile hike across desert sands of New Mexico has just been completed by a 14-man experimental expedition from Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, army air corps test and research center, for the purpose of testing the efficacy of a new type emergency field ration produced by the Quartermasters subsistence laboratory at Chicago.

Trial of the ration resulted because air corps pilots are frequently confronted with the possibility of being forced down in areas away from civilization. More particularly is this the case in aerial patrol duties over the jungles of Panama, the frozen wildernesses of Alaska, and the desert country of our Southwest.

This new type ration which provides the user with 3,500 calories a day in three packages with an average weight of 12.5 ounces a meal, is designed for emergency use by air corps personnel who are unfortunate enough to be forced down at points where they must walk 100 miles or more to reach a settlement where aid may be obtained.

Biscuit Is Mainstay.

Mainstay of the experimental ration is a "pemmican" biscuit containing virtually all the essentials for a balanced diet, and said by scientists to be far superior to the original Indian "pemmican" made of buffalo meat and corn meal and to later "pemmicans" in flavor and dietetic value.

Each meal package also contains two graham crackers and—typical American touch—a stick of chewing gum.

Variety of diet is afforded by powdered soluble coffee with sugar, a supply of malted milk tablets, and a small tin of veal loaf, all on the breakfast menu.

Here one of the members of the expedition eats a portion of the new type of food ration tested by the U. S. army air corps on a 100-mile desert hike.

In addition to the ever-present pemmican biscuit the luncheon package contains a ham loaf tin, bouillon paste in a tube, and a supply of dextrose tablets, and the supper package provides a pork-beef sausage, some pieces of chocolate fudge candy and tablets for making lemonade.

Possible 'Variety.'

"In actual practice," explains Maj. D. B. Dill, chief of the experimental expedition, "the pilot could vary his diet a little by eating his breakfast package at lunch, or his supper for breakfast, but our experimental group followed the diet religiously, without variation."

Flying out to Albuquerque, N. M., in an army transport plane, the party landed at the army base one evening and early the next morning began a hike across the desert.

Accompanying the "hoofers" on their field test was an army truck carrying laboratory equipment and an extra water supply. Each hiker carried a 25-pound pack, including two blankets, mess kit, and three days of emergency rations.

Walking steadily, over rough country, at altitudes ranging from 5,000 to 9,400 feet above sea level, the party recorded mileage ranging from 13 to 21 miles a day. Since the average pilot wears an ordinary oxford shoe, instead of a heavy marching shoe, the hikers wore oxfords and uniforms or pilots' and mechanics' coveralls.

Testing Methods Used.

For test purposes the party was divided into two groups, one of which subsisted on the regulation army type C field ration, which includes meat stew which must be heated in order to be palatable, biscuit and coffee. Another group began the hike on a diet of another type of "pemmican" with three eight-ounce cans providing a day's rations. This all-purpose food, alone, however, proved so unpalatable that it was abandoned.

In summing up results of the field trip, Major Dill pointed out that the subjects used were men of only average physical condition, many of them laboratory workers, rather than persons engaged in physically arduous daily occupations. While camp fires were used and water was heated for coffee and bouillon, as a matter of choice, both coffee and bouillon were palatable when made with cold water, so that the ration could be eaten without heating any of it. In this respect the ration has an advantage over the Type C ration which must be heated.

Squeeze Play With India as Prize

New importance military experts attach to Iran, formerly Persia, is shown on above map. In addition to having a little oil of its own, Iran is the gateway on one side to the oil fields of Iraq and the Russian Caucases and on the other side is the logical gateway for Germany to India. As the pressure is applied from the west, Japan, playing her part as Axis partner, puts on the squeeze on the other end with ever-increasing demands in Indo-China and Thailand, and with a drive through Burma not impossible. Caught in the middle is India—pride of Great Britain and logical prize to be coveted by her enemies.

Farmer's Problems in National Defense Studied by Land Use Planning Committees

WASHINGTON.—The department of agriculture has issued a summary of the recommendations made to the department by land use planning committees of the 48 states which have been studying agricultural problems in national defense.

The recommendations of the state committees reflect the thought both of the thousands of farmer members of county planning committees and of field representatives of every department operating agency. The committees were requested by Secretary Claude R. Wickard to make the studies in order to assist him in shaping the course of the farm program during the defense and post-defense periods.

The state committee reports stress recommendations for the current defense effort, but also give thorough consideration to the problems of the post-war period and to long-range planning for agriculture.

To meet the special defense situations in agriculture, the state committees recommended: Integration of the agricultural economy with the total defense effort through such means as decentralization of defense industries, careful planning of military food requirements, increased federal aid for public services in areas of expanding defense population, and long-range planning of defense housing; development of priorities and price control policies in keeping with agricultural needs; and greater co-ordination of marketing and distribution of farm products.

Unified Program Recommended.

The state committees were virtually unanimous in recommending the development of a unified national educational program for health and nutrition. A hot-lunch program for all school children, expansion and extension of AAA payments for home food practices, and improved health and medical services in rural areas were some of the measures suggested.

Likewise stressed by nearly all state committees was the need for substantial enlargement of existing guidance and training programs for rural youth. Specific training for non-agricultural pursuits was widely recommended.

Other defense recommendations emphasized effective use of forest, soil, water, and range resources so as to minimize waste and assure sustained yield. Many of the state committees indicated that needed additional production should be obtained so far as possible by increasing production per animal or per acre of land cultivated rather than by developing new crop land. Expansion of old transportation facilities and development of new ones were urged to forestall the possibility of shipping bottlenecks. "Some form of price guarantee or support," with the guarantees or supports moving upward as the prices paid by farmers move upward, was recommended for both basic and non-basic crops. Expanded trade within the Western hemisphere was suggested by many committees as a means of fostering better Pan-American trade relations.

View Post-War Period.

Looking ahead to the post-war period, the state committees set forth three lines of activity which they believe will make easier the return to a peace-time economy: (1) a rural works program adequate to care for rural unemployment and underemployment; (2) curbs on possible uneconomic expansion of cropland and undue speculation in land values; and (3) shaping of present defense efforts in such a way as to promote desirable future changes or additions to the agricultural program. Recommended under item (3) were further emphasis on the family-sized farm and the absorption of excess farm population through expanded urban employment.

Woman's 'Place' In a Democracy Is Forum Topic

COLUMBIA, MO.—Three of the most important factors in determining the integrity of any American home—finances, health, and character—will be examined from the standpoint of charting a more practical way in which our educational system can contribute to their improvement, in a three-day forum opening on the Stephens College campus here November 6.

The forum on "the American woman and her responsibilities as a citizen in a democracy" will include afternoon sessions of open panel discussions and evening sessions addressed by authorities in the various fields. Attending the afternoon session as participants will be parents of the students, undergraduates, alumnae, housewives and representatives of numerous national organizations.

James Madison Wood, president of the college, who for nearly 20 years has pioneered in the field of "practical" education for women, explained that most of the elements entering into the success or failure of a family are covered by these three factors. It is his contention that a "refocusing" of the educational program for women, to equip them more adequately for solving the real-life problems.

Purpose Outlined.

Each of the three main topics embraces a number of subheadings which will receive attention in both the "roundtable" and the more formal discussions. He explained that problems under the head of finances, for example, include such things as budgeting, intelligent buying, care of property, investments, insurance and savings. Under health come all factors contributing to or detracting from personal efficiency. Character involves many factors, such as training in spiritual values, loyalty, patriotism, simple honesty, sportsmanship and willingness to shoulder responsibilities. Home atmosphere is the dominant influence here, Mr. Wood said, with parental example and proper guidance in choice of books, movies and radio being increasingly important.

"These things, to be sure, are not completely neglected in our present educational system," Mr. Wood said, "but so far as women are concerned formal education of today does not give the breadth or depth of training that each of the 65,000,000 women in America should have in terms of equipping her for her true responsibilities as a citizen.

Woman's Heritage.

"The 'general education' here discussed is the heritage of every woman. It should amount to a careful mastery of those facts and social experiences necessary to intelligent living—just as is now demanded by colleges and universities in the fields of scholarly and professional achievement. The latter deals with the specialist, the former deals with the layman. Our present interest is the layman, primarily the mother in the home, the only real teacher of children."

Defense Workers Avoid Wearing 'Flashy' Clothes

CHICAGO, ILL.—Although getting a big slice of Uncle Sam's billions, workers in defense industries, unlike those of World War No. 1, avoid flamboyant street apparel, nor do they go for $15 shirts. Restraint and good taste govern the choice of both dress-up and work clothes. These facts were revealed in a check-up of firms handling men's furnishings in Chicago's Merchandise Mart.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

WNU SERVICE

INSTALLMENT FOUR

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate and fortune of her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, arrives in Honolulu to attempt to gain control of the property. Here she meets Richard Wayne, or Tonga Dick, as he is known throughout the South Pacific. He is a member of the Wayne family that has been in control of her grandfather's island, Alakoa, since the old man's disappearance. Although Tonga Dick knows who she is, Karen attempts to conceal her identity from him. Dick offers to take her sailing and accepts. Dick goes to the home of his half-brothers, Ernest and Willard, for a conference regarding their interest in Alakoa. In the course of their discussion it is revealed that the Wayne family obtained the island for a small sum and under the direction of the boys' uncle, James Wayne, it has been developed to where it has assets of around three millions dollars. Not by as Dick takes Karen sailing she learns that he knows who she is and that he is taking her to Alakoa. She wants to go back to Honolulu but he refuses to take her. Now continue with the story.

A white blaze was in the old man's eyes and every muscle of his body seemed to tremble.

CHAPTER IV

She drew into herself, then. After a while Tonga Dick Wayne went aft to stand beside the man at the wheel, but Karen remained at the rail, her eyes on Alakoa.

For a long time the island drew no nearer. The Holokai seemed fixed at a given distance from her goal, racing across a restless sea which forever interposed itself. Under Karen's feet the deck of the little vessel pulsed between the steady boom of her Diesel and the shock of the smooth swells she was smashing to pieces as she drove.

Stealing a glance over her shoulder, Karen saw that Dick himself now took the wheel.

Very much alive with a definite concentration, Tonga Dick Wayne spun his vessel through Alakoa's treacherous shoals. A Hawaiian boy was in the bow with a lead line, his eyes turned to Dick's face, but Dick did not call for the lead. A great mound of water rose under the taffrail of the Holokai, slamming her shoreward like a surfboard before it broke and raced along her counter in a thrashing roar.

Then suddenly upon the little schooner there was silence—unexpected, but complete and final. The engine quit, and the voice of the reef diminished surprisingly, until it seemed no more than a whisper. Effortlessly, on so even a keel that she seemed to glide upon glass, the Holokai glitted under a single scrap of sail into Alakoa's little harbor.

So absorbing was her interest in the little port that for a while she forgot Tonga Dick; she was even unaware of the scrutiny of a hundred pairs of eyes—mostly those of small brown-skinned boys who swam beside the slowing Holokai. What occupied Karen now was this unfamiliar soil where her father had been born: this land which even yet, if John Colt was to be believed, belonged to her.

At one side, just behind the beach, an old warehouse ran, long and low, silver-gray from uncounted rains. It was half smothered in a tangle of sea grapes, and over one end hung a vast flame tree of the brightest crimson Karen had ever seen. Out from it ran a massive but crazily leaning pier; and all except the pier seemed lost in the riot of coconuts and hula palms, breadfruit trees and banyans, which made a veritable jungle behind the beach. This pocket development was the old Waterson layout.

But the pier that Garrett Waterson had built was not the principal landing any more. Farther to the west the Wayne landing stood, a modern concrete dock, long and clean-cut. Behind it a number of long, handsome stucco buildings stood, set in parallel. The roadways between them were ornamented with neat rows of date palms, and here everything was well planned, efficient, and clean.

One hundred yards from the beach the Holokai's anchor roared down, splashing water higher than her booms; and now Dick Wayne was standing beside Karen again.

He spoke to her with an impersonal courtesy.

"The ladder's down. If you're ready to go ashore—"

"No doubt that is very funny," Karen said incisively; "your jokes are perfectly killing. But meantime I am virtually your prisoner, for reasons of your own that I know nothing about. And I don't like it at all."

Dick Wayne spoke again, his voice very low and gentle. "I'm sorry it worked out this way," he said. "Of course, I understand how you feel. I promise you that things will be made as comfortable as possible for you while you're here. My brothers are in Honolulu, and there's no one you'll have to talk to here."

Karen Waterson's anger died out. This man could put her into white blazes of temper, but, curiously, she did not hate him when the anger was gone. Her tremendous curiosity about Alakoa came on her again, as strongly as if the heart of the island itself were pulling upon every part of her.

She glanced at Tonga Dick, who, as usual, was not looking at her; and, after a moment more, silently went down the ladder into the shore-boat.

"Well, cast your line, Hokano!"

Karen Waterson landed upon Alakoa fascinated, deeply stirred, and —afraid.

"Your uncle," Charles Wong said, "is very anxious to see you at once."

Ever since Tonga Dick and Karen had arrived, the tall Chinese, secretary to James Wayne, had been hovering near Dick—if Charles Wong could be said to hover. Charles Wong, who had never seen China, showed in his tall and bony frame the stamp of the Manchu, but about him was no mannerism belonging to the Oriental.

Dick was troubled because his uncle had not come out to meet him. "He's in bed?"

"No; he's supposed to be, but nobody can keep him there."

"Well—I'll go right in."

Yet Dick hesitated; he was wondering whether he had better ask the advice of Charles Wong. After all, it was two years since Tonga Dick had met his uncle face to face.

"This girl," Charles Wong said hesitantly, "this girl—" He stopped.

Dick Wayne was startled. It was as if the Chinese had read his mind. He remained silent, waiting.

"I was just thinking," Charles Wong said after a moment, "that perhaps it might be unwise, considering your uncle's condition, to introduce a stranger now. I mean, if perhaps we just said nothing—"

"Charles," Dick said, "that girl is Karen Waterson."

He went striding off through the big koa-wood rooms, leaving the secretary paralyzed under the weight of a hundred unanswered questions.

James Wayne, deeply swathed in blankets, sat behind a vast desk. His handclasp was quick and strong, as it always had been, though Dick thought there was a tremor in it now.

For the first time, Dick Wayne was looking at his uncle and seeing the old man. Hoarse, gray-skinned, deep-carved with the lines which the years had saved up for him, only to mark him with them suddenly, over night—the face of James Wayne was almost unrecognizable to Dick.

"I got your radio, sir," Dick said. "I came on under all power as soon as the message was in."

"I should think," his uncle said slowly, "you would have come anyway, without so urgent an appeal."

Even, Dick noticed, James Wayne's voice had changed; it sounded weary and dry. His old temperate manner of speech was there, and the courtesy, almost like kindness, which had marked his speech all his life, even when dealing with his enemies, was there; but a rustiness was in it now.

James Wayne's eyes were fixed hard on Tonga Dick's face, and those eyes, clear and direct as ever, now seemed to burn. "Is there any message?" he demanded sharply.

"No message, sir," he said.

"Despatches, then?"

"No, sir."

James Wayne stared at him, his eyes boring hard into Tonga Dick. "You mean to say—you mean to say —no message, no letter—no anything?"

"Nothing, sir."

"Yet—he got the despatch from me? He got the word, at the same time you did?"

"I'm certain of it."

For a moment more they looked at each other, the old man's eyes alight with anger, and in his face not disbelief, but an inability to accept the answer.

"This is incredible," said James Wayne, his unwinking eyes fastened hard upon Tonga Dick's face.

Dick said nothing, and the moments ticked by in such a silence that Dick thought he could count the pulsing of his own heart.

"If this is true," James Wayne said sharply, "then how does it happen that you are here?"

"I'm here against my orders."

Silence again; but now after a moment more Dick saw the light of anger and unbelief die out of his uncle's eyes, giving way to a bleak fatality.

"Name of God!" James Wayne said, his voice low and thick. "Name of God!"

He turned his head and looked out the window, across the darkening fog; and that slight movement emphasized the stillness with which he sat, hardly seeming to breathe. By clear daylight you could see the bay from that window, miles away and far below. Nothing was to be seen there now.

When James Wayne spoke again his voice was flat and dead. It was as if their interchange was over, with nothing more to be said, and that the words he now spoke were routine words, hopeless of result.

"If you've talked with your brothers," James Wayne said, "you know the situation here."

"Yes," said Dick.

"Have you seen this man John Colt?"

"Only at a distance, sir."

"I've seen him," James Wayne said, speaking without emotion. "An acquisitive and predatory type, almost a piratic type; but a man born to succeed, in his way."

"But the girl I have not seen," Dick's uncle said now. "This Karen Waterson — have you seen her, Dick?"

Tonga Dick hesitated. "Yes," he said at last.

"What does she look like?" James Wayne demanded, his voice rising a little. "Does she look hard? Does she appear grasping—predatory?"

Tonga Dick stirred uneasily. "No," he said after a moment.

"Yet she must be." James Wayne said, his voice vibrant. "That girl is evidently made of something harder than glass."

James Wayne had always spoken well; but at the same time he had always spoken briefly, choosing few words. Except for the curtness of anger, Dick had never seen him speak with emotion before. Now, as James Wayne fell silent, Dick wished that he were away.

"Dick," James Wayne said with a deep conviction, "I don't believe she's his granddaughter at all."

"My brothers told me," Dick said, "that they had thoroughly investigated that; they say that her claim of identity can be substantiated in any court."

"I suppose," James Wayne said wearily, "we may assume that the claim of relationship will be substantiated—at least to the satisfaction of the court. Beyond that—beyond that, what is your impression of her case?"

"My advice," Tonga Dick said, "is to settle at once, out of court, at the cost of any compromise which we like. This case must never come to trial. If it comes to trial, they will win."

A strange thing happened then. The immobile, apparently bloodless figure of James Wayne suddenly galvanized with such an explosion of energy as Dick had never seen James Wayne use. The old man shot straight up, and behind him the heavy chair crashed onto its back, and the blankets fell away to a muffle about his legs. A white blaze was in the old man's eyes, and every muscle of his body seemed to tremble.

"No!" he shouted. "No, I say! Never while I live! Not one cent—not one cent—"

The door opened and Charles Wong was there, and his thick glasses were beseeching upon Tonga Dick's face. In the moment's silence the blaze within James Wayne seemed to die away. Charles Wong picked up the chair, and the old man accepted it. Deftly the tall Chinese sought to rearrange the blankets.

"Dick," James Wayne said, "you know and I know there's a way to break this career."

Dick was silent; but it was the silence of a tentative assent.

"We've come to a showdown," his uncle said. "We've got to show down our cards—both yours and mine."

"Are you sure you want that?" Dick asked.

"It begins to look as if there isn't any other way."

"I'm afraid there isn't, sir. Although—although—"

"Later," Charles Wong put in. "There's plenty of time for this, Mister Dick, your uncle should not talk any more right now."

Dick attempted to speak, but was checked—partly by his own loss of words and partly by Charles Wong's shaking head. Silently, Tonga Dick Wayne left his uncle's room.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE

Releases by Western Newspaper Union.

WHEN Ted Williams, the willowy wallloper of the Boston Red Sox, won the 1941 American league batting title, he called to mind a couple of great swatsmiths of a bygone era—Hugh Duffy and Shoeless Joe Jackson.

Duffy has been called the greatest hitter of all time. Back in 1894 he was fashioning a truly great batting average, hitting well above .430. Toward the end of the season, Duffy's friends wanted him to quit in order to protect his great mark. Duffy turned thumbs down. He went up and took his cuts right in order. When the season had ended, Hugh had batted an unbelievable .438.

Williams boasted a .405 average this year when the Red Sox pulled into Philadelphia for the final three-game series of the year. Williams' friends, like Duffy's, urged him to sit the three games out. He had bested the .400 mark and would be the first American leaguer to do it since Harry Heilman hit .403 in 1923. In fact, he would be the first major league batter to turn the trick since Bill Terry hit .401 in 1930.

The Hard Way

Like Duffy years before, Williams said no. He went up to the first day and collected only one hit in four trips. For the first time in weeks his average dropped below .400. The future looked black for Ted, but at least he had refused to back into the championship.

The next day they played a double header. Ted stepped up to the plate for the first time and belted out a point winning hit. That happened four times in a row and a questionable decision robbed him of his fifth hit. In the second tilt, Ted collected two for three. Altogether it was six for eight and the average zoomed up to .406.

In the matter of style, Williams reminds one of Shoeless Joe. The latter, like Williams, was on the tall, loose and lean side. Williams is free of all tension at the plate. So was Jackson. All pitchers looked alike to them. Both have had almost perfect hand and wrist action and both hit anything and everything covered to them by baffled pitchers.

Jackson and Williams have other attributes in common. Both weighed 175 pounds when they entered the big time. Both were tall men—Williams six feet three and Jackson six feet one. Both hitters were born that way. They belong among the natural hitters, along with Nap Lajoie and Babe Ruth.

In handing out honors it is impossible to overlook Rogers Hornsby, holder of a five-year record that belongs among the all-time greatest. From 1921 through 1925 Hornsby averaged slightly more than .401. During those five consecutive years he batted .397, .401, .384, .424 and .403.

Bowling — the Right Way

By LOWELL JACKSON

(This is one of a series of lessons in bowling by Lowell Jackson, one of the country's outstanding bowlers. Mr. Jackson has eighteen 300 games to his credit and has a 12-year league average of 216.)

CORRECT—STANCE—A bowler should take his position on the approach from 10 to 15 feet behind the foul line, depending on the number of steps in his approach. The body is held erect with the shoulders squared at the pins.

The weight of the ball rests on the left hand (right hand if the bowler is left-handed) and the ball is held between the belt and the shoulders. Do not crouch or swing the ball at this point, because it is unnecessary and wasted exertion.

Your feet can be together in your stance or the off foot can be extended about six inches forward. Be careful not to stand with your feet pointing inward or outward. They should be pointed directly ahead at the alley. When in this position you are able to swing forward comfortably.

SPORT SHORTS

¢ Of the 134 freshmen football players at Michigan State college, only six weigh more than 190 pounds.

¢ Byron ("Whizzer") White, Detroit Lions' back, has been placed by the Detroit draft board in Class 1-A. He is subject to call in November.

¢ Joe DiMaggio's 19 putouts is more than any other outfielder ever snagged in a five-game World series.

¢ Coach "Muddy" Ruel has signed a three-year contract to continue with the Chicago White Sox.

Fred Touchton Opens Drug Store In Dade City

ernor, but later withdrew from the race, made friends throughout the state who will be interested in his newest business venture. Dr. Touchton served as city commissioner of Dade City for four years before becoming senator. In giving of his time for public service, he also gave his assistance in procuring a number of the county's main WPA projects.

The Service Drug Store is a Wahlgreen agency and as such will have the benefit of mass buying to give the lowest prices on all drug sundries as well as other articles of merchandise handled by the Wahlgreen stores. Over two tons of merchandise have been received this week and are ready to be offered to the public. The store will be operated on a cash basis.

The formal opening of the store Friday is being featured by the ever popular one cent sale.. Several weeks have been given to putting the building into excellent condition.

Prescriptions will be filled by Dr. Touchton, a registered pharmacist. The prescription department is compact and convenient with glossy white shelving denoting cleanliness and with every facility for careful attention to all prescriptions.

The white tile floor, the spotless white cabinets, and the fluorescent lights, make the store bright and attractive and in effective combination is the rich green color used on the fountain booths and merchandise tables.

The Service Drug Store bids fair to keeping this corner well known as a center for drug store supplies. Since Dade City first had a railroad through its business center, a drug store has always occupied this corner.

Navy Enlistments Credited Against County Draft Quota

"Secretary Knox of the Navy Department has announced that local communities are given credit for each Naval recruit and that local Selective Service quotas are reduced accordingly," said M. V. Pilcher of the local draft board, yesterday.

"Every young man who joins the Navy or Naval Reserve thus helps to fill our local Selective Service quota. Young men within Selective Service age limits who have not been referred would do well to consider the opportunities the U. S. Navy offers for specialized training and advancement while serving their country in its emergency.

"The age limits for the regular Navy are 17 to 31, and for the Naval Reserve the limits are 17 to 50. All applicants under 21 must have the written consent of their parents or guardians."

In addition to explaining that Navy enlistments are credited against the local Selective Service quota, Mr. Pilcher also stated that a high school education is not necessary for acceptance by the Navy. "Any ambitious and patriotic young man of average mentality and good character who meets physical and other requirements may be acceptable to help man Uncle Sam's new 'Two-Ocean' Navy."
