SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Ceylon, Africa and tropical countries are expected to provide the U. S. with 54,000 long tons of crude rubber during 1943, to 1600, it is estimated, 499,473 long tons of crude were imported by this country.

Para, Brazil, was the first great rubber center. Founded in 1615, it became an important port for foreign trade about 1775. A boom period years later it was the rubber capital of the world.

Rubber obtained from a native wild vine in the Belgian Congo made Leopold II of Belgium wealthy during the 1890-1910 period. Plantation rubber development killed the Congo vine industry.

ALL ESSENTIAL WINTER DRIVERS:

Check Anti-Skid Chains, Wipers and Defrosters Before First Snowfall.

STATE COLLEGE, PA. — Prof. Amos E. Neyhart, administrative head of the Institute of Public Safety, the Pennsylvania State college and consultant on road training, American Automobile association, warns essential drivers in 36 winter affected states they must prepare in advance with practical precautions to "get through safely and on time this crucial, wartime winter."

Having just completed the fifth annual short course for truck fleet supervisors, Professor Neyhart points out that over half of the nation's passenger cars are owned by workers in industries essential to prosecution of the war.

"While the vast majority of trucks are essential, a larger than normal percentage of passenger cars will likewise be in the absolutely essential transportation class this winter and should therefore be equipped and able to get through, and get through safely and on time, when severe snow and ice conditions arrive," he declared.

"The primary hazards of winter driving are inadequate traction and reduced visibility," Neyhart said, "and this means those who must get through regardless of severe winter road conditions should repair anti-skid chains now, since new ones are scarce, and check condition of windshield wipers and defrosters."

More Deaths in Snow Belt.

He pointed out that the National Safety Council's committee on winter driving hazards studies revealed that traffic accidents in snow-belt states last winter ran the mileage death rate up 36 per cent higher than the summer toll. The milder southern winter caused a 8 per cent increase in states below the Mason-Dixon line.

Street and highway departments, he said, have already been advised to repair snow plows because new machines are hard to get, and to attempt to forestall a labor shortage for such work as snow removal. Labor shortage for winter road maintenance will undoubtedly be serious, an.l Neyhart advised essential car owners in the vital northern states to take immediate steps to secure new, or repair old, seasonal winter equipment needed for their own protection in driving to work.

"Let winter help defeat the Axis, not America," he warned. "Even minor skid-wrecks, with mechanics so busy, may lay up cars for the duration, and everyone must co-operate to minimize traffic tieups due to snow and ice on the essential civilian front. Avoidable accidents and delays on the home front spell too little and too late on the battle front.

"Many newly essential workers-drivers, who formerly stayed home when roads were bad, may not be prepared for the role of war workers who must 'get there.'" Neyhart said, and advised them to "beg, borrow, or repair a pair of tire chains and otherwise check your car for winter."

AMERICA IN ACTION

ARMY VICTORY GARDENS OVERSEAS

In geometrically perfect garden plots behind barracks in the United States, in tenderly nurtured artificial cases on desert islands which exist only as army post office numbers and in the British Isles where a large but undisclosed number of American soldiers are stationed, the army has cultivated its own Victory gardens with the serious purpose of supplying the soldiers with food that they might not otherwise get.

In the first comprehensive report on army gardening activities in England, Maj. Gen. E. B. Gregory, the quartermaster general, discloses that under the Joint British-American Agricultural program, all suitable land in posts, camps and stations, British as well as American, in the British Isles, has been taken under cultivation for the production of fresh vegetables for consumption by British and American troops. The garden produce is used by which ever needs it most and neither is fussy about it. Because for every pound of food which can be produced in England, it means one less pound of food that must be shipped there, and whether it is eaten by British or American soldiers is not of great importance. What is important is saving space on ships for the men and guns and tanks necessary to win the war.

Brig. Gen. Robert A. Littlejohn, chief quartermaster for the European theater of operations, reports that upwards of 14,000 acres are now under cultivation and that another 1,000 acres probably will be put to gardens by the end of the year.

What do they raise in these gardens? Pretty much the same things that private American Victory gardeners raise except for hay and grain crops which will be utilized by dairymen to effect the grassland the dairymen have been deprived of, a sort of indirect contribution to the soldiers' diet. Altogether, the return from the gardening is expected to be about 25,000 tons of potatoes and 134,000 tons of vegetables and root crops, together with about 7,000 tons of hay and grain.

In the precise language of an official military letter, General Littlejohn says:

"Your particular attention is directed to the fact that there are frequent changes between British and American occupancy of camps, posts and stations, including air fields. For this reason it is impossible to predict exactly what proportion of the work will be done by British or American troops, or what proportion of the produce will be consumed by either. However, it is felt our mission is being accomplished for the reason that the joint program is producing foodstuffs that would otherwise have to be shipped to this country for the consumption of one army or the other. In addition, it should be borne in mind that the more self-supporting our armies are, the more food will be left for civilian consumption, both in the United States and in this country."

Trixie Teen Says—

"Don't wait until the last minute to get ready for a date. No boy likes to make conversation with the family while you're deciding what dress to wear. And, for that matter, the family doesn't enjoy it much, either. Instead of getting your hair just so, you have to be satisfied with a few hasty dabs with brush and comb. You're as much a tizzy that your hand slips when you put on your lipstick and you look like a fugitive from a circus. You don't notice, until it's too late, that your slip is dripping below your skirt. You haven't time now to sew on that loose button. Instead of smiling downstairs serenely, looking like a Cover Girl, you come tumbling down with a red face, a crumpled dress and a general feeling of not being put together. It was the early bird that got the worm—and it's the early girl that gets the boy."

Will You Join the Dance?

Gone are the days when your swain would bow politely in front of you and beseech you for the pleasure of the next govotte. Now he asks you to dance something like this:

"Like chicken? Grab a wing."
"Greetings, Gate, let's circulate."
"Come on Chubbin', start muggin'."
"Hi, hoe, let's cut a rug."
"Get hep, you cat."

Rooms for Improvement

Every girl wants a pretty room of her own. While you might not be able to afford one that looks like a set in an M. G. M. movie, you can certainly improve the one you have. Some tricky teens thought up these ideas and they're keen.

PATCHWORK PRETTIES — Everybody's making patchwork skirts and blouses. Why don't YOU be different and make curtains or drapes out of patches, sewn together? For a bureau scarf or bed spread, get your friends to give you small squares of any left-over materials with their names written on them. Embroider over their autographs and sew the squares together into bureau scarfs or bed spreads.

WRITE IDEA—Make drapes out of unbleached muslin. Hang a heavy pencil or crayon on the tieback and invite your friends to sign your drapes.

CRATE STUFF — Two orange crates, stood on end and connected by a board over the top make a grand dressing table. Just dress it up with a skirt of chintz. A butter tub, turned upside down, makes a perfect bench if you make a cushion for the top and gather a skirt around it.

PINCUSHION MIRROR—Make a padded fabric frame for your mirror so you can use it as a parking space for your gadget pins.

COKE BAR BARGAIN—An old bookcase makes a wonderful coke bar for your room; cut it down if it's too high. Paint it and cover with Jabberwocky or autographs. Use the shelves for glasses, bottles and pretzels.

What to Do

Ten prospective customers called. He sold the house.

New Army Field Ration Called 10-in-1; It's Canned Dehydrated Corned Beef Hash

CHICAGO.—Part of a large, wooded estate north of this city was turned into a typical Italian "battle area" recently when a large group of mothers and wives of soldiers now overseas found out at first hand just what their sons and husbands are eating when supplied with army field and combat rations, and how the food is prepared.

The occasion was the introduction on the home front of the newest army ration—the 10-in-1—by the Chicago depot of the U. S. quartermaster corps. This ration has been in production for two months, but its announcement has been withheld until overseas reports disclosed its enthusiastic reception by fighting men in all parts of the world.

At this field mess, a rough clearing, flanked by dense woods, was the setting. Army trucks with cartons of the ration drove in. Field ranges were set up exactly as they are in a front line war theater. The women were equipped with regulation army mess kits. At the call, "come and get it," they lined up at the kitchens and received their food in regulation army style.

The "entree" at the meal was the army's newest dehydrated food product—corned beef hash—developed after months of research by food scientists of the quartermaster corps and Wilson and Co., Chicago meat packers.

The speed with which the dehydrated hash can be prepared—a highly important asset when a soldier's under fire—astonished the women at the army meal. Within ten minutes after the addition of hot or cold water, the hash is ready to eat. When there is a good cook around, the women learned, the hash can be fried or baked into loaves for slicing or for sandwiches.

Two cans of the dehydrated hash are included in each Menu No. 5 of the army 10-in-1 field ration. The women got this at the army demonstration meal learned that this ration contains three full meals for ten soldiers, or ten days' food for one soldier.

Capt. Joseph A. Burkhart of the Chicago depot of the U. S. quartermaster corps explains the advantages of the new dehydrated corned beef hash, recently accepted for army overseas rations, to Mrs. Geoffrey S. Gough, whose husband overseas will soon be eating the new food product.

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Can You Picture FLORIDA without Highways?

A strange place it would be—this State of ours—if our splendid 29,745 mile network of improved highways suddenly ceased to exist.

A great many communities would be isolated. Others would find it infinitely more difficult to carry on even the most ordinary daily activities—with no trucks on the move, no cars or buses taking workers to war plants and farms, soldiers to camp and home on furlough, business travelers to nearby communities, children to school.

We Floridians are apt to take for granted the convenience of our excellent roads — but these highways didn't just grow. Building and maintaining them is a tremendous job and for achieving this successfully we can thank past and present administrations and particularly the Florida State Road Department.

That isn't the whole story, however. Transforming these lifeless ribbons of concrete and macadam into live, active arteries of public transportation has been the accomplishment of the Florida Railroad Commission. They've labored hard and long to give our State a transportation system that compares favorably with any other in the country.

All of us who live and work and pay taxes in Florida can take pride in our share in this highway system.

As fellow citizens, the Florida Motor Lines have made a very large contribution in the form of license, fuel and operating taxes—but we feel that our greatest service is in putting the highways to work for the benefit of all who must travel, making near neighbors and good neighbors of all the communities we serve throughout the State.

"TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY"

(By RUSSELL HAY)

One of the evils for which we condemn the dictators and against which the flower of American youth spills its precious blood on foreign fighting fronts, is the practice of CONVICTION without trial or hearing.

We shudder at pictures of hapless victims, accused of thinking or acting contrary to the will of a Hitler or Hirohito, forced to dig their own graves and then stand to be shot into them.

Our political leaders thump their manly chests and prate of the "Four Freedoms" — of "Liberty" and "Justice" for all.

Yet right here in America, in our own State of Florida if you please, we find the evil we condemn in others and against which we profess to fight, flourishing as a green Bay tree.

While no one here, as yet, has been DIRECTED to dig his own grave and no one ordered shot into it, the same evil and deadly philosophy that brought them tragic events in Europe has enmeshed its slimy tentacles firmly around our daily lives, intent on crushing and destroying all that we hold dear, to leave us but an empty shell of what we once pridefully termed "The American Way of Life."

While the Congress of the United States, the Legislature of the State of Florida, the Commissioners of the County of Dade or the Council of the City of Miami have created no law that abridges the right of a citizen to a fair trial and hearing for an offense with which he may be charged, and while our basic principle of "Justice" is that a person is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty, it now appears that there are those among us who possess power above and beyond the law and in whose name and by whose authority you or I or our neighbor may be ACCUSED, and although neither heard nor tried, CONVICTED and SENTENCED.

A recent Associated Press dispatch read as follows:

"Miami, — Suspension of gasoline rations for more than 100 Miami motorists charged with misuse of gas coupons was authorized yesterday by OPA Commissioner Daniel L. Bell.

Bell said the group included all the accused whose cases were not reached during a series of hearing this week.

Pending renewal of the hearings in three weeks, he ordered the temporary suspension of gas supplies until the motorists cleared themselves of the charges."

Here we have a petty official, operating under a rule of arbitrary bureaucracy, sentencing and condemning citizens of this Republic in his own right and, admittedly untried and unheard, denying them the use of property on which they have paid taxes for the privilege of use to the Nation and the State.

Note, gentle reader, that Mr. Daniel L. (for "Liberty") Bell, "authorizes" and "suspends" and further demands that these "accused" CLEAR THEMSELVES OF THE CHARGES.

Understand, I am not attempting to defend these motorists in the "misuse" of gas. Whether they did or whether they didn't is beside the point. What I'm screaming about is their RIGHTS as citizens of the United States of America.

All we know is that these people have been accused. By WHOM and of WHAT? On what evidence does Mr. Bell presume to condemn them as guilty and proceed to invoke penalty? On the word of paid snoopers, or the mere statement of some busy-body?

For far less reason than this our forefathers blanched their faces and dumped tea in Boston Harbor. In the name of a just and merciful God, for what do we fight? Surely not even the most ardent New Dealer can condone and practice.

We can, for a time, stand incompetence, inability, confusion, waste, ignorance, politics cemented and stupidity in government, but when Bureaucracy in its arrogance, with its 2700 lawyers and impractical theorists, begins to impede simple JUSTICE, it's time to call a halt!

"MORTALS AND IMMORTALS" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world on Sunday, November 14.

The Golden Text is: "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live" (Romans 8:13).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: Which were born, not of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John 1:12, 13).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "God and man are not the same, but in the order of divine Science, God and man coexist and are eternal. God is the parent Mind, and man is God's spiritual offspring" (p. 336:30-31).

Keeping On the Go With the USO

(By Tom W. Stetson, Reporter)

Last Tuesday night's regular Range Dance was called off due to the lack of transportation to bring the girls from the outlying districts, and announcement is here given of the present plan to let that two events are planned primarily at the ranges, and that plenty on a short time they will be resumed once again to transport our junior hostesses for the dances. Until then time we shall have a private movie on Tuesday night. The first Tuesday we showed "Midnight" starring Don Ameche and Claudette Colbert.

Once again I am asking property owners to let their rooms, apartments, or houses with the USO. Recently we have enlisted on our list and can now report to those desiring living quarters that they can even homes to house. Therefore, if any vacancies are available please notify the office immediately.

This week is known as National Book Week. During this week the largest issue of new books is released by the publishers. The idea behind the sponsors of this particular week being that the cooler weather has arrived and a book and fireplace is to be anticipated and enjoyed. Our own library here in the club needs many old or new books which you would like to donate, to do so by calling us or bringing the books to the club.

Last Thursday evening, November 4, the regular monthly meeting of the USO Senior Hostess Group was held. A small but enthusiastic group were present and they were quite elated with the exposition of a new USO Senior Hostess note book. This Senior Hostess Notebook has information and instructions which inform the Senior Hostess on duty what is expected of her and also answers to questions being asked by the service personnel. Senior Hostesses who were not in attendance at this meeting may secure their Notebooks when they appear for duty or on their assigned evening.

On Sunday evening we are to show the Pantomo Movie, "Little Tokyo, U. S. A." starring Preston Foster and Brenda Joyce. As we have several short subjects to show we are planning on starting our Movies at 7:15. Those of you who are free that evening are welcome to see this story of Japanese activities before Pearl Harbor, as taken from the Dies Committee Report.

The [illegible] Tuesday we attended "Midnight" starring Don Ameche and Claudette Colbert.

Once again I am asking property owners to let their rooms, apartments, or houses with the USO. Recently we have enlisted on our list and can now report to those desiring living quarters that they can even homes to house. Therefore, if any vacancies are available please notify the office immediately.

This week is known as National Book Week. During this week the largest issue of new books is released by the publishers. The idea behind the sponsors of this particular week being that the cooler weather has arrived and a book and fireplace is to be anticipated and enjoyed. Our own library here in the club needs many old or new books which you would like to donate, to do so by calling us or bringing the books to the club.

Last Thursday evening, November 4, the regular monthly meeting of the USO Senior Hostess Group was held. A small but enthusiastic group were present and they were quite elated with the exposition of a new USO Senior Hostess note book. This Senior Hostess Notebook has information and instructions which inform the Senior Hostess on duty what is expected of her and also answers to questions being asked by the service personnel. Senior Hostesses who were not in attendance at this meeting may secure their Notebooks when they appear for duty or on their assigned evening.

On Sunday evening we are to show the Pantomo Movie, "Little Tokyo, U. S. A." starring Preston Foster and Brenda Joyce. As we have several short subjects to show we are planning on starting our Movies at 7:15. Those of you who are free that evening are welcome to see this story of Japanese activities before Pearl Harbor, as taken from the Dies Committee Report.

Miss Iva Phillips Honoree at Faculty Party Tuesday

Miss Iva Phillips, charming bride elect, and a popular member of the school faculty, was the honoree at a most enjoyable party given by the group in the lounge of the F. P. S. Co., on Tuesday evening. In keeping with the seasonable motif, the spacious room was profusely decorated with bouquets of Golden Shower, intermingled with greenery.

A delightful series of games formed the diversion for the evening. Miss Vera Ray won the prize in a contest, in which the last word of each line of a poem was to be changed to form a rhyme. In another similar contest, in which the guests were given the last word in sentences, to form the lines to make a poem that rhymed, Miss Anne Felton was the fortunate winner of the award. In several games of Cootie, Miss Lucille Sheenan was awarded the prize. Miss Phillips was presented several pieces of china in her chosen pattern, A. B. Wilhite, supervising principal of the school, making the presentation. Miss Lynn Adams read a clever original poem to the bride, written as a parody on "Twas the Night Before Christmas."

Late in the evening, dainty refreshments of sandwiches, individual cakes, and iced drinks were served.

Faculty members sharing this lovely affair with Miss Phillips were Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Wilhite, Miss Marie Anderson, Miss Lucille Sheenan, Miss Fred Peden, Miss Millie Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Owners of Foreign Property Must File Report by Dec 1

Citizens of Avon Park, Fla. who own any property in foreign countries were notified by Postmaster D. G. Perry today that they must file reports of their foreign holdings with the Treasury Department before December 1. The notice was given by means of a poster played on display in the post offices.

Postmaster Perry points out that it is necessary for the Government to have as complete information as possible on the American stake abroad to assist the military authorities and the civilian governments on the fighting fronts and to bring about sound solutions of the post-war problems.

Report forms, known as TFR-500 may be obtained through commercial banks, or from the nearest Federal Reserve Bank, the postmaster states. Penalties are provided for those who wilfully fail to file reports.

Loosens Up Thick Choking Phlegm of BRONCHIAL ASTHMA!

Spend 25c today at Touchton Drug Co., or any drug store for a bottle of Buckley's CANADIOL Mixture (triple action). Pour yourself a teaspoonful, let it lie on your tongue a moment, then swallow slowly. Feel its instant powerful effective action spread through throat, head and bronchial tubes. Starts at once to loosen thick choking phlegm making breathing easier.

No claim is made that Buckley's is a cure for Chronic Bronchitis or Asthma but sufferers often find Buckley's CANADIOL Mixture (the largest selling cough medicine in all Canada) eases coughing spasms and loosens up that choking phlegm which seems to clog the tubes and makes breathing difficult. Many get better night's rest. Try Buckley's Canadiol on our guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY NOTES

The following FICTION books have been ordered for the high school library and should arrive by December 1. The 2 before a book means it is suitable reading for the JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL, grades 7, 8, and 9; the 3 before a book means it is suitable reading for SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL, grades 10, 11, and 12. Next week in this column the remainder of the FICTION books will be briefly reviewed. The FICTION books will be put into circulation first.

(J) Red Caps and Lilies by Adams:

The experiences of a group of young aristocrats, children of 12 to 15, during the early days of the French Revolution. The differing characters of the children, the excitement and the startling social contrasts of the period, are well portrayed.

(J) Little Men by Alcott:

It tells of the remarkable school that Jo and Father Bhaer founded at Plumfield, a happy rollicking home for boys and girls.

(J) Little Women by Alcott:

This is one of the most popular girls' stories ever written. It pictures the home life of four sisters two generations ago.

(J) House of Her Own by Allee:

Judith taught school under very primitive conditions in a small Indiana settlement just before the Civil War. The story, motivated by the girl's independent spirit and longing to make her own way, ends in a happy romance.

(8) Junior Miss by Benson:

A deft, subtle, and amusing book about the Graves family, a youngish mother and father and two daughters, one a superior 16 and the other just 14.

(8) Other People's Houses by Bianco.

Dale Forrest, obliged to earn her own living, accepts a series of jobs as companion, governess, housekeeper, and helper in a tea room. These experiences bring her into contact with human nature and train her for building her own home which is in prospect at the end of the story.

(J) Lad With a Whistle by Brink:

A young piper in Scotland, by a series of surprising circumstances, finds himself the guardian of two children of gentle birth.

(8) My Antonia by Cather:

A New York lawyer reviews his Nebraska boyhood days and his friendship with a young Bohemian girl, Antonia. It is a convincing picture of pioneering conditions and of America's assimilation of the immigrant, and a fine portrayal of character.

(8) Windswept by Chase:

John Marston took his bride to a home he had built on the gusty coast of Maine. Here the joys and sorrows common to the normal life of normal people seasoned the years for the Marston family.

(8) Lord Jim by Conrad:

It is the story of a young Englishman's loss of honor in a panic, his settlement in a Malay village, and the final triumph of his sense of courage.

(8) Rebecca by Du Maurier:

Against the setting of a great English estate unfolds the story of Rebecca, its glamorous mistress who had been dead for eight months. The young and frightened second wife realises there is some mystery surrounding her death, but it is not until the night of the big costume ball that her suspicions are confirmed.

(8) Treasure Below by Elsberg:

Against great odds, including mutiny, intrigue, and shipwreck, Lieut. Phillip Ramsay, captain of S-53, aided by three trusty men, succeeds in salvaging a fortune in gold which had, for centuries, lain at the bottom of the Pacific about a hundred miles off the coast of Peru.

(8) So Big by Ferber:

This is a story of a woman whose fineness and vision, whose sense of beauty, and of the beauty of toil, could not be quenched by a hard life of truck-farming in a stolid Dutch settlement near Chicago.

(8) All This and Heaven, Too, by Field:

A French governess becomes involved in a famous murder trial. Although acquitted, life becomes so difficult for her in France that she came to America, where she married an American and presided over a salon frequented by many famous Americans.

WAVES Receive Good Army Pay

Many WAVES enjoy better incomes than they earned in civilian life, said Mrs. Vivian P. Hartt, Volunteer Recruiter for Avon Park, yesterday.

According to Mrs. Hartt, a WAVE starts off at $50 per month base pay. In addition to this she receives all her living expenses — good food, comfortable lodging, medical and dental care and $200 worth of clothing free. In cases where government food and lodging are not provided, WAVES get the equivalent in cash allowances of $63.42 per month, which brings their pay up to $133.42 while they are apprentice seaman. This figure increases through the various grades to $221.42 for a chief petty officer, plus the same dependents allowance benefits received by men in the service. Because of special exemptions granted to members of the armed services, no enlisted WAVE is required to pay income tax on her Navy income.

Women, 20 to 36, who are interested in the WAVES may see Mrs. Hartt or write the Navy Recruiting Station, City Hall Building, Tampa.

"Try Waiting On Yourself For Better Service"

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former newspaper feature editor, has been inducted into the army and is nearing his completion of basic training at Fort Bragg, N. C. He has been classified as cook and in addition his failure to master some of the fundamentals of army training have resulted in considerable extra KP duty for him. He has also learned the finer points of "potbellying" and "shooting the breeze." Hargrove has become editor of a section of the camp paper and these duties have kept him away from a lecture series. As we pick up the story, his sergeant is assigning him once more to KP for this infraction. Hargrove is trying to explain. He speaks:

CHAPTER XIV

"Sergeant, for days I round up news from battery reporters. There is always too much or too little. When there is too little, I have to write what is needed. When there is too much, I have to choose which battery reporter is going to horsewhip me for leaving his copy out."

"The chaplain is right up the street," the sergeant said.

"Then I have to edit all the copy, delete all classified military intelligence and take out all nasty cracks at first sergeants. Then I have to write headlines for all the stories and place them in whatever space I can find for them. Then I must draw every week up into pretty little pages. This is tedious and nerve-racking work."

"The chaplain will give you a sympathetic ear," the sergeant said. "I will give you only KP. Does anything you are saying relate to what we're talking about—why you weren't in the mess hall yesterday afternoon?"

"I was getting around to that, sergeant. On the day before the paper is issued, I have to go into Fayetteville to keep a careful watch over the printers, to see that they don't put Third Regiment news on the Fourth Regiment page. If I am not there, they may even mix headlines and put church notices under 'Service Club Activities.' It is necessary that I be there."

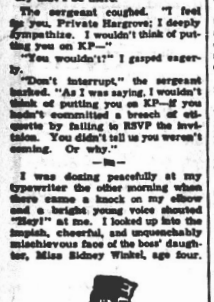
The sergeant coughed. "I feel for you, Private Hargrove; I deeply sympathize. I wouldn't think of putting you on KP—"

"You wouldn't?" I gasped eagerly.

"Don't interrupt," the sergeant hushed. "As I was saying, I wouldn't think of putting you on KP—if you hadn't committed a breach of etiquette by failing to RSVP the invitations. You didn't tell us you weren't coming. Or why."

—Ba—

I was dozing peacefully at my typewriter the other morning when there came a knock on my elbow and a bright young voice shouted "Hey!" at me. I looked up into the limpid, cheerful, and unquenchably mischievous face of the boss' daughter, Miss Sidney Winkel, age four.



"Let's be reasonable, Pvt. Mulvehill," I said; "As you know, I am working on Capt. Winkle's sympathies to get a furlough."

Miss Winkel was dressed like the Navy and looked entirely too energetic for such a drizzly morning.

"I'm to be the Valentine," she said, "and Johnny's going to take my picture and you're to take me up to the Service Club and carry Johnny's things for him and wait for him to get there so you'd better put on your jacket and cap and let's go.

"I'm going to have my picture taken with Spud Parker," she added. Spud Parker is the general's son and is considered quite an eligible bachelor by the younger set.

"There's Tom in the cafeteria," she said. "Let's go see Tom."

Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill, Pfc., was apparently making his morning rounds in search of news. He was, at the moment, engaged in his daily research in the Service Club's toast and coffee.

"Hello, sis," he said. "Hello, McGee. Pull up a chair. McGee, get the lady a drink. Something tall and cool. Such as a chocolate milk. What's the deal, sis?"

"I'm to be the Valentine," she said, "and Johnny's going to take my picture and old Hargrove has to take care of Johnny's stuff until Johnny comes and I don't like him anyway because he makes faces and sticks out his tongue and says sticks and smells and puppy-dog tails that's what little girls are made of and he's not my boy friend anyway."

"No punctuation," I said. I wagged my ears and stuck out my tongue at her.

"The next time I come," she said, "I'm going to bring some soap and every time he sticks out his tongue I'm going to put soap on it because it isn't nice to stick out your tongue." She emphasized her statement by paralyzing my wrist with her fist and sticking her tongue out at me.

"Let's have no unnecessary vibrations, McGee," said the Lieutenant, looking up reproachfully over his glasses. "Coffee is five cents the cup." He beamed at her. She beamed back at him.

"I have seven boy friends," she said, raising one forefinger delicately and rubbing the other against it in a highly jeering gesture. "I have seven boy friends and you're not one of them and you're not anybody's boy friend." She bit me this time on the elbow and I made a horrible face at her.

"Myaaah." I said. "Who wants to be your boy friend anyway?"

"I wish you wouldn't blow smoke," she said. "It makes me cough and it's not nice to smoke anyway. Old cigarettes!"

I wearily crushed my last cigarette in the ash tray. "Women, the eternal nurturer," I sighed. "It wasn't like this in the Old Army."

Miss Sidney Winkel took off her sailor cap and arranged her big red hair ribbon. "You're a nasty old thing and you're not nice like Johnny and Tom and Lieutenant Mast and Captain Winkel and all my other boy friends," she said. After a pause she added, airily, "And Major Long and Captain Quillen, too."

"Myaah," I sighed, wrinkling my nose more violently.

"Oh there's Johnny," she suddenly cried, "and he's going to take my picture and—" She tripped off with a bewitching smile for Bushemi and a running line of babble.

"No punctuation," I said to Mulvehill.

"It's a woman's world, McGee," he said, reaching for another slice of toast.

—Ba—

"Get him away from me, Bushemi!" roared Private Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill. "He's got that gleam in his eye. Get him away!"

"You're just being difficult, Lieutenant," I told him. "Just sit down and relax." The Lieuthomas laid his enormous frame on the bunk and started slapping his knees in utter despair.

"What kind of deal are you trying to swindle this time?" he asked.

"Let's be reasonable, Private Mulvehill," I said, patting him reassuringly on the shoulder. "As you know, I am now working on Captain Winkel's sympathies to get a furlough sometime in February . . . the first half of February."

"I know what's coming," he screamed. "And I won't do it! I won't do it!"

"Now, as you know, furloughs are laden with little expenses—necessary little expenses. To help me along with the load, Sergeant Sher and Private Bushemi have already made philanthropic little loans. I have your name on my honor roll here, Lieuthomas. What's the donation?"

The Mulvehill cringed and edged away. "What do you need—from me?"

"Well," I estimated, "I should say that ten dollars."

"Great gods and refugee children," he gasped. "Ten dollars he says yet! Why don't you ask me for my life's blood? Six dollars he owes me already and now he's asking—oh, I can't stand it! I can't stand it! Take him away!"

"My life's blood," he moaned. "Where's the six I lent you two months ago?"

"That was only five weeks ago," I reminded him gently, "and I've already paid two of that back. Three weeks ago I paid it back."

"Yeah," he protested, "but you borrowed it back the next day." He turned and raged the door. "What are they doing to me? My life's blood they would draw from my veins? Thirty-six measly little dollars a month I make—and he wants ten dollars! Maybe I'm Wilthrop Rockefeller I should lend out ten dollars a clip! Thirty-six dollars, and he wants half!"

"You see, Lieuthomas, a sad and work-worn creature—an Alice sit-by-the-fire whose only hope for the future is in the faint glimmering hope of a furlough. Day after day, week in and week out, I have worked my frail fingers to the shoulder blade to make things pleasant for you and Bushemi and Bishop. I have patched your quarrels with the mess sergeant. I have saved you from the terrible wrath of provoked Rebels. I have sat here at night, sewing buttons on my blouse so that you wouldn't have to wear it hanging open on your merry jaunts to town. Money could not pay for the things I have done for you, Mulvehill. And now this. Ten dollars between me and spiritual starvation—and no ten dollars. How sharper than a serpent's tooth."

"Don't talk like that, Hargrove," he said, his voice cracking. "Put me down for ten."

—Ba—

There was a little note stuck in my typewriter when I came back from prowling for news. It looked like Private ("One-Shot") Bushemi's typing. "The stockholders of the Union of Hargrove's Creditors," it read, "will hold a business meeting this evening about seven o'clock in the latrine of Barracks No. 2. Headquarters Battery. Please be present or we will beat your head in."

It was the day before my furlough, so I got the general drift. The vultures who were contributors to the furlough would probably stand around frowning and figure out some sort of budget for my vacation. I could picture the blue-nosed demons slashing away at my enjoyment.

The meeting had an unexpectedly small attendance: Maury Sher, mess sergeant of Battery D of the Third and chairman of the ways and means committee of the Union; Private Bushemi, principal stockholder and president; and Private First Class Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill, chaplain.

Private Mulvehill beamed. "Sergeant Hart sends his regrets. He has a heavy heavy in Lillington. He is with us in spirit, though."

"Come in, drip," said Bushemi.

Sergeant Sher got down to business. "I've got to hand it to you, son," he said. "Gone through this much of the month and still haven't tried to get any of your furlough money back from the chaplain! We're all proud of you."

"Bucks." I blushed. "Yours's nothin'. I was able to loan a cigarette here and there."

"McGee," said Mulvehill, clearing his throat, "you leave tomorrow for New York, where there are many scarves to trap the unwary. Don't buy any gold watches in the park or any stolen furs anywhere. You know, I presume, about buying the Brooklyn Bridge."

"Now, we don't have any restrictions about the way you use your money," said Bushemi. "Only last time you spent too much money on

"Little man," she said, "will you please ask the waiter for more water?"

taxicabs. You'll have to use the buses and subway more this trip. Put the throws your money in, all the books you can buy—but taxicabs only for very special dates."

"Somebody has been exaggerating this taxicab—" I began.

"Taxicabs," Sher broke in, "only for very special dates. You may go to the opera once if you sit down stairs and twice if you sit in the Famile Circle. You are not to buy more than six theater tickets. In uniform, you can see all the movies you want for two bits each."

"And if you receive the tipping the waiters," said Mulvehill, tapping his glasses on the window sill, "very conservative. Short-change them, if necessary."

"Tell him about the budget," said Bushemi, with unnecessary impatience.

"As the matter stands on the furlough deal," said Sher, "you owe Bushemi 22 dollars, me 36, Mulvehill 25, Hart 10. That's 93 dollars. Counting the ten you'll wire Bushemi for before the week's over, it's 63. With what money we have taken from you and given to the chaplain during the past few weeks, you should make out all right."

"Must I be treated as a child?" I asked.

"When you get back broke, McGee," said Mulvehill, "you are not to eat breakfast at the Service Club. You are not to take out any post exchange books. You will get your cigarettes from Sergeant Sher, who will ration them out to you as per budget."

—Ba—

Sergeant Sher, Private Bushemi, and the other members of the Union of Hargrove's Creditors would have been quite pleased at the sight. Instead of spending their money lavishly on taxicab sightseeing trips and expensive shows, I was dining quietly in a conservative grillroom with the Redhead. We weren't even discussing ways to spend their hard-earned money.

"Little man," she said, "will you please ask the waiter for more water?"

"I beg your pardon," he said, rather unctuously. "There is a fifteen million gallon shortage in water at this restaurant. On the other hand, madame, all supply ships to Great Britain use Scotch whisky as ballast for the return trip. Perhaps madame would like a glass of Scotch whisky?"

The Redhead lifted an eyebrow.

"I wonder," she said, "what they use in the finger bowls here—rubbing alcohol? I do not want Scotch whisky. I want water."

"It is as madame wishes," the waiter said, bowing from the knees. He walked away and returned again to lean against a post. The Red head drummed her fingers on the tablecloth.

"Don't be afraid of him," said the Redhead. "Call his bluff."

THYROID EXTRACT

When an individual is nervous, jumpy, overactive mentally and physically, heart rapid, the physician usually advises a metabolism test which shows the rate at which the body processes are working. In a case such as the above, the test will usually show that the body processes of this individual are working 15 per cent or more faster than normal. And the cause of this speeding up process is an overactive thyroid gland. The treatment is rest of the gland, and if necessary removal of the thyroid gland by surgery or X-rays.

Dr. Barton

On the other hand, where the individual is sluggish mentally and physically, is overweight, and oddly shiny, the metabolism test will usually show that the body processes are working at a rate of 15 per cent or more below normal. The cause is an underactive thyroid gland and these patients are given thyroid extract daily to bring the rate at which the body processes work up to normal.

The above symptoms of the overactive and underactive thyroid gland describe what should be called advanced cases. What about cases where the symptoms are not so pronounced?

In the slightly overactive cases, rest of body and mind is needed, and in the slightly underactive cases some stimulation of mind and body is needed.

Physicians have been finding many children in whom nose and throat infections, and also intestine disturbances and infections occur so often that they suspect some underlying condition of the body as being the cause. Dr. M. H. Stiles in "Archives of Pediatrics" (children's diseases) states that because some children were having distension of the abdomen and other symptoms pointing to a lack of thyroid juice in the body, studies of the basal metabolism were made in a group of 30 children and teen-age boys and girls, in whom there were persistent colds, bronchitis and inflammation of ears and of stomach and intestine. Of the 30 children studied, 20 per cent had basal rates below zero or less, and 60 per cent had rates of minus 10 or less, and for the whole group, the average rate was minus 11.

Of the 30 patients studied, 18 were given thyroid extract. Of these 18, there were 15 who showed great improvement, and only three were not improved. Where, then, these symptoms keep occurring, the metabolism test might well be given.

Excess Fluid in Body Puts Strain on Heart

When the heart is beginning to fail, the first symptom noted is shortness of breath after exertion, and especially after eating. Palpitation—hard beating of the heart—is another early symptom of a failing heart. Even lying down does not ease the shortness of breath or quiet down the palpitation for some minutes.

Another symptom to appear in early heart failure is swelling of the ankles or of the other parts, especially the liver.

The first thought in the treatment of early heart failure is to reduce the amount of work done by the heart by resting more, strengthening the power of the heart muscle yet quieting it if necessary. The drug used to strengthen the power of the heart is digitalis which not only slows, steadies and strengthens the heart action, but helps to drive the water from the tissues. The work of the heart is greatly reduced by reducing the amount of water in the tissues.

In Southern Medicine and Surgery, Dr. J. B. McLester, Birmingham, the noted food and nutrition authority, makes the following suggestions in the treatment of heart patients.

"Weigh the patient every day; increase in weight is the first sign of excess fluid in the tissues. The increase in weight occurs several days before the appearance of liquid—swelling—in the ankles and other tissues. If the swelling (edema) is present or if the weight increases, have the patient step using salt in his food and rest as much as possible." Excess water in the tissues must be removed by use of ammonium chloride, in 15 gram doses, three times daily for three days, if the low salt diet fails to remove it.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What is the meaning of re-infection type of tuberculosis? Is there a cure for it?

A.—Reinfection type of tuberculosis means that tuberculosis has healed, but lung has become infected again. Treatment is rest of the lung.

Q.—Is the yolk of egg "butter fat?"

A.—Yolk of egg is unusually rich in fat but it may not be classed as "butter" fat.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

BACK in 1892, when Amos Alonzo Stagg was entering his 50th year of coaching, a widely read sports writer had this to say:

"When his record-breaking coaching service at the University of Chicago was ended by compulsory retirement in 1932, Stagg characteristically refused to quit the game and is rounding out his career in the comparative obscurity of a small campus at the College of the Pacific at Stockton, Calif., a city of 47,000, where he is regarded as the first citizen.

At 81, Stagg unquestionably is the first citizen of Stockton. But if he is to conserve, so to the eye on a standard-bearer of duty, his "obscurity" is on a medium-sadly basis.

Life Begins at 71

Ten years ago Stagg decided that life for him as a football coach would begin at 71. This means the oldest gridiron warrior of them all is confusing the opposition with one of his best teams. His College of the Pacific squad won its first four games, losing the fifth, a heartbreaker, to unbeaten Southern California by a close 6-0 margin.

AIMEE ALONZO STAGG

Colleges of the Pacific, until now little known athletically outside its own Far Western conference, in 1938 offered Stagg a lifetime coaching berth. Stagg put Pacific on the gridiron map in only his 11th season and his fifth year of coaching he directed a team that beat St. Mary's Navy Pre-Flight, the University of Detroit at Los Angeles, the University of California, and the Alameda Coast Guard before losing to Southern California.

What accounts for Stagg's amazing success this year? Good material is part of the answer. The navy has drained off many outstanding basketball talent, including forward St. Mary's College players headed by Pass Thrower John Pedroia.

But a large share of the credit goes to the "Stagg system." He changed his offensive tactics. He received the finger at Chicago in 1913 and it is a vital part of today's system. He is using some of his oldest stuff, with a few new twists, to trick his opponents.

The Development

Stagg's "oldest stuff" is really well seasoned. The Grand Old Man of the game watched football develop from the kicking stage to the carrying stage to the passing stage.

He recalls the 15-man teams and the era when the center—then called the "snapperback"—had to pass the ball with his feet. There was the "ooh-aah" period in which wide-open rumour and tackler might wrestle for 30 or 15 minutes over getting the ball grounded for a touchdown.

He saw the origin of the term "gridiron." The term was first used when the field was marked off in parallel stripes. He witnessed the introduction of interference, once strictly forbidden, and of the revolutionary forward pass.

Stagg was playing with Yale when adequate rules abolished. He was on day of unsportsmanlike. His 1894 squad played 23 games. He coached during the period when indoor football was popular.

Inventions

In 1888 Stagg invented the tackling dummy. He was a member of the first team to use numerical signals. He was the first man to have the quarterback receive the ball. His fake kicks always have been a headache to opponents. The tackles-back and turtle-back plays, famous in their day, were his own inventions. His applications of the forward pass contributed much to present gridiron strategy. He was the first coach to number players for the spectators' convenience.

Stagg first coached at YMCA college at Springfield, Mass., during the time he was a student there.

That was 54 years ago.

Today Stagg is still out on the field in Stockton, turning out a great football team. Sports followers who had heard little of Pacific until this year took his recent defeat to heart. They wanted the Old Man to win. More than any other coach he symbolizes football at its best.

An undefeated season would have meant a great deal to Stagg, but defeat doesn't lessen his overwhelming pride in his boys.

WACS Sail for England

By Doris Fleeson

(NEW Features Service, special correspondent to the Sun—Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

There were 239 American girls in the First WAC Separate Battalion with whom I sailed to Europe. As we headed to the mess hall, each girl drew a tin helmet, dress uniform, utility coat, plated belt with first-aid packet and canteen, shoulder bag, musette bag, barrack bag and field jacket. Then we sat under the dripping mountain-head boats of the big lend lease and carried the gifts to the barracks.

Each WAC carried over her own a heavy topcoat, hiking within its folds heaven knows what of last-minute treasures.

"Forward march!" Capt. Mary A. Halloran, commanding the battalion, barked from the desk at the east end of the island of the saloon. Everything but full packs on each of us began in the rooms. WACs are on the average huskier than American girls used to be, but for a leader they have gone back to the Hapsburg type.

Once I asked Captain Halloran her height. Her demure answer was: "You must be five feet to be a WAC." Her troops call her Captain Peewee or Captain Five-by-Five. It had been suggested that Captain Halloran's small size disarms men, helps her to get along with them so well. Though small myself, I've never noticed it makes any difference.

Private Helen Bellanca never doubted that her troops would stand the test of the ocean voyage with its close quarters and possible hazard. Simon Pure, she had been commissioned for hostilities, preparing it for its task. The troops gave her a challenge to celebrate her appointment.

Her five companies were formed in obedience to a request for stories, monographers, telephone operators and typists. By age groups the average age of the auxiliaries is about 28. They are pretty, homely, fat, slim, blonde, brunette, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish—a cross section of America. Nearly all are high school graduates, a few are college graduates. The officers are drawn chiefly from colleges and the over-age age is 32.

Captain Halloran is 36, comes from Lowell, Mass., and is a graduate of Massachusetts State Teachers college. She also studied at Harvard university. The fact that she had traveled far in commerce in Europe, Latin America and the Near East—often with a pack on her back—was a help, she thinks, in preparing her for the job with the WACs.

Sunday service aboard ship were well attended by the WACs. Officers who censored their mail reported that the girls wrote their families that the services seemed like a link with home.

It was strange to realize that this transport of good-tempered friendly people was actually a task force and as much a rich prize inviting to the enemy, that the sea was the home of officers who would destroy us by submarine as wolves tear dogs in the forest.

The transport was crowded to a point that no self-respecting sardine would tolerate. Each voyage is such a tremendous enterprise, so expensive to arrange, that it must pay off in manpower. Eighteen WACs slept in one cabin.

The approach of debarkation time was easy to recognize. An attractive young American, Captain Sherman, came aboard ship to welcome us with good news from Sicily, and gave us the first of the security lectures that began to bombard our ears with increasing frequency.

Step on British Soil.

The sun was in their faces when the WACs first stepped on British soil. The honor of being the very first was to Sergeant Rosekrans, in the train shed the Royal Scots Fusiliers' band struck up Sousa's "King Cotton" march. Then once again we were on a troop train.

The train moved and the WACs sped through a pleasant green countryside that may long be their home. After the train journey of several hours was over, the WACs shouldered their musettes and marched two miles to a replacement depot.

A cheerful Baptist chaplain, C. G. Strippy of Wellesley, Mass., gave the girls their favorite hands-across-the-sea story. He told them about the recently arrived private, dizzy with orientation, who was asked by an officer how he liked the British. The private replied: "Sir, we like the British and the British like us, and down's orders."

The chaplain joked that yesterday was the first cheerful baggage detail he ever saw. He said he was entrusted to look after their spiritual welfare and he was going to do it, "no matter what the odds."

ON THE HOME FRONT

THIS bag was planned as a gift for someone who went feeding days in bed difficult enough without having books, magazines and writing materials scattered about. If you like to take an enjoyment of reading matter to bed, sick or well, you will enjoy a bag like this. Its hanger hook may be sewed to bon springs and there you are with everything handy.

The bag shown here was made of a remnant of heavy cotton upholstery materials in tones of green with a touch of red in the pattern. The red was repeated in the scallop lining. The scallop gives all the dimensions needed for the lining and the outside part were made. A coat hanger was cut down to measure 12 inches from end to end and was placed between the lining of the outside; then being stitched together around the top, as illustrated.

Politics Seen as Key in Farm Subsidy Problem

Acceptable Compromise Lacking; Presidential Veto Forecast for Any Bill Banning Use of 'Economic Stimulant.'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The administration is in the midst of one of the fiercest contests to "hold the line" against stabilization. It is the old question of subsidies for farm products and it looks like a fight to the death. The house agriculture committee, with Representative Hoeglall and others reading over to the Republican side, is backing the bill which would renew the appropriations for the Commodity Credit corporation and the subsidies paid to processors, distributors and some direct cash aid to farmers. The present legislation expires in January. A presidential veto is taken for granted for any bill banning the use of subsidies. Administration supporters believe that such a veto can be sustained, but they see a tough, bitter fight ahead.

The key to the whole difficulty in wartime partisanship. Successful politics is like successful living—in the family, in the community, in the world—it depends on the ability to compromise. In the fight, there seems to be no one able to work out an "acceptable compromise. Already the feeling is bitter.

Cost of Living

Complicating the problem is, as usual, labor's insistence that the cost of living has gone up higher than statistics show, that the Little Steel formula is no longer a fair yardstick, that wage increases since decisions of the War Labor board, plus insistence of the director of stabilization, held down wages while the administration has not carried out its promises to roll back the living costs.

The farm organizations and the processors and the distributors oppose the roll-back. They don't put it that way. They say they oppose subsidies for rolling back consumer prices. They argue that subsidies to increase production and support prices in a free market are all right —and are borne of another color. The President sees no difference. Subsidies which permit the government to buy up commodities or make loans at a minimum price when the market price dips below that figure are all right, say the farm bloc, but, they claim, the "new" subsidies go further than that in that they mean payments direct to the processor and distributor and also buying and selling by the government. This, they claim, is in itself inflationary because it means payments out of the treasury. They say they don't believe that the money will get back to the farmer, that it means "grocery bills paid by the government," with very little real saving to the consumer, and finally, which is the real rub, it means too much government control.

Subsidies and Votes

Of course, there is the point that the politician doesn't like to mention —nobody who depends on votes wants to be in a position later on of having to remove those benefits. Another point, not stressed, is that subsidies to processors mean that the governmental has a right to look into the books of private industry.

But to the President, it is subsidies or inflation. At a recent press and radio conference, the President said that he got the head of the Farm Bureau federation, Edward O'Neil, to admit that letting prices go up in a free market, which the government says would have to be the alternative of the subsidy if the farmers are to get the incentive for increased production, would mean a little inflation. The President then told the story about the man who took just a "little" cocaine. He soon became an addict.

It was then that a woman reporter, known for her spicy questions, asked if the President didn't think that if his measure was carried up might become subsidy addicts. The President didn't seem to think so. He pointed out that agriculture has been getting subsidies since 1933.

Whether or not there is danger in any of this mild economic stimulant which the administration feels is a wartime necessity, everybody admits that runaway inflation must be avoided if possible. The whole complicated machinery of stabilization was created to prevent it.

The proponents of the subsidy plan say that the fight against them is purely political. They say the Republicans naturally take the side opposite to the administration because they can win some farm votes as champions of higher prices to farmers if they take this stand. On the other hand, they believe that the anti-subsidy bill will be vetoed eventually and the Democrats say the veto will be sustained. If so, the Republicans will not be criticized for supporting a measure which is defeated. And the Democratic support in the house agriculture committee, subsidy supporters say, was "bought" by allowing the present subsidies for the products grown in districts of the congressmen who supported the bill, to stand.

The administration followers say that it seems strange for the Republicans to raise a cry against subsidies when tariffs are subsidies. They mention the sugar "subsidy."

As for complaint that the subsidy on agricultural products would not reach the farmer, they call attention to the milk subsidies at present in operation where the man who milks the cow gets the subsidy direct.

Meanwhile, we know that the cost of living has already gone up. We know that we need full production of foodstuffs. We know that unless farmers can't get the feed required to raise the stock or to fatten it to its most efficient weight for slaughter.

Payment of any money out by the treasury does mean more money in circulation but the subsidy proponents point to the kind of inflation we get when prices aren't controlled. The administration says it is limited to control a few processors and distributors, even if Uncle Sam has to snoop into their books to see he isn't cheated, than to let that vicious spiral of prices and living costs start to mount.

In the next weeks you will hear a lot more of these arguments.

Food Contribution

The other day when I stopped into the broadcasting studio just as the "Farm and Home Hour had ended, I found some cookies, some Brown Betty and a meat loaf sandwich waiting. These samples had been saved from a more elaborate layout of good things made with soy flour which had been the subject of the F & H broadcast.

I ate them with pleasure. Although the meat loaf was 25 per cent soy grits, it tasted exactly like meat to me. The cookies and the Brown Betty were excellent.

Soy flour and soy grits—the bread had some soy flour in it—are both on the market ready to contribute vitamins, mineral, protein, vim and vigor to our food, reducing the consumption of scarcer and more expensive products. A saving of from 20 to 25 per cent in meat and still having almost identical food values is nothing to be sneezed at.

Soy, it is pointed out, is not a substitute but a supplement to other foods and you would be surprised how many tasty dishes can be produced with it. The Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics has a handy little pamphlet containing recipes, and you can get one by writing to the bureau, care of the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

There are recipes for mint loaf, chile con carne, suggestions for use of soy with vegetables when they are served as a main dish; soy in sauces and mixed with cereals to give a richer protein diet—many suggestions for making what you have go further and accomplish more.

A Letter

Frankly, when I get a letter that makes me real mad, I sometimes mention it on the air. I shouldn't ever do it, I suppose, because I usually get a flood of sympathy which perhaps I don't deserve but one of the best replies I ever had was from a man in Spearfish, S. D., who wrote to me as follows:

"Each morning at 11 a. m. MWT, I tune you in. Now, I may be mistaken, but it seems to me that at times you think some of the letters you receive are 'hitting below the belt' which has always been considered cowardly and unjustified. But in a great many cases, if we don't hit below the belt, we just make a total miss as it seems that most of the stuff that is put out for us to follow shows that there is NOTHING above the belt to hit at."

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Nazi occupation authorities in Holland have even cut the Dutch horsemeat ration one-third. The weekly meat ration coupons, which used to be good for 125 grams of horseflesh, now are good for only 100 grams, or about two ounces, according to a report published in a German language daily in Holland. The cut means a great deal to the Dutch, whose living standards have lowered.

Because corn fields are excellent hide-outs for partisans, the Croat minister for the interior has ordered all farmers to cut their fields by the end of this month. If they are not cut by then, they will be burned.

ALL FOR NOTHING

A man came home in the small hours of the morning and, having a wholesome fear of his wife, decided to proceed with caution.

Taking off his shoes, he crept noiselessly upstairs, stealthily opened the bedroom door, and, with the greatest care, crawled into bed. With a sigh of relief, he went off to sleep.

In the morning he looked round for his wife, and suddenly remembered she had been staying with an aunt for the past two weeks.

Right?

Billy—Which apple do you want, Tom?

Tom—The biggest one.

Billy—You ought to be polite and take the little one.

Tom—Why should I be just to be polite?

SELLING POINT

He'd been standing in the town square for some time, trying to sell his wares without much success. But now he'd managed to collect a crowd, and started again with renewed hope.

"Now here's a comb for you!" he said hoarsely. "And what a comb! You can twist it, bend it, hit it with a hammer, and it won't break. You can—"

Then a tired voice came from the crowd:

"But can you comb your hair with it?"

PILOTS OF FIGHTER PLANES ARE TRAINED BY THESE MEN

JAS. H. SHAUGHNESSY

With a background of 1600 flying hours in all types of aircraft, James H. Shaughnessy, civilian flying instructor at the Lodwick Aviation Military Academy, has what it takes to transform Aviation Cadets of the 61st Flying Training Detachment, AAF Contract Pilot School (Primary), from novices with a few hours in the air to pilots able to do elementary flying and acrobatics.

Turning out twenty to twenty-five Aviation Cadets a year, Instructor Shaughnessy is an important cog in the Army Air Force's drive to produce thousands of pilots a year. A person, seeing Mr. Shaughnessy or his fellow instructors in their distinctve uniform with the spread eagle and V-shaped wings on their caps and the Lodwick shoulder patch, knows that here is a man who is doing more for the war effort by turning out a score or more fliers a year than in making an individual sortie against the enemy.

Shaughnessy, a native of Connecticutt, attended school at New Haven, Conn. He is a Floridian by adoption having worked as a teletype repairman for the Southern Bell Telephone Company from 1934 until he became an instructor in Avon Park five months ago.

The number of flying hours a flier has logged is the mark by which veteran fliers judge a comrade. With 1600 hours in the air — averaging more than an hour a day for the past four years — Shaughnessy's flying time makes him a veteran. He earned his time flying as a hobby, then flying for the Coastal Air Patrol and finally in instructing cadets.

He is married to Isabel Mason Shaughnessy, a native of Porto Rico, and has two daughters.

Men and Missions Sunday to Be Held Sunday, Nov. 14

Rev. Linwood G. Gebb, Resident Chairman of the Laymen's Missionary Movement for Highlands County in discussing Men and Missions Sunday said, "Many uninformed persons believe that missions have become another casualty of the war.

"But this is not the case," he continued. "Actually hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent for the relief of "orphaned" missions in all parts of the world. Men and Missions Sunday, first observed in 1931, now offers a tremendous opportunity for stressing missions as the inescapable task of every Christian man and as the hope for enduring future peace."

The local observance of Men and Missions Sunday, November 14, is being promoted by Rev. Gebb, assisted by the following ministers and laymen:

Highlands County Council of Churches.

The second year that Men and Missions Sunday was observed, 640 cities participated. This year the cities of this county will be one of more than 3000 cooperating cities.

In addition to observances in most local churches, there will be special services at military and naval units of the United States and Canada in all parts of the world.

"The impact of war news has made Americans more conscious of their millions of suffering brothers in all parts of the world," Rev. Gebb said. "The Christian church has been world minded for many years. As a result American sailors who have been crushed or been shipwrecked in the Pacific have sometimes found 'fuzzy-haired natives' who have fed and nursed them back to health instead of cooking and eating them as might have been the case fifty years earlier."

War Brings More Children For Home Society to Care for

The war has brought a very serious situation to "Florida's Greatest Charity," The Children's Home Society of Florida, a situation which every reader of this article can help to make better immediately. Hasty and unwise marriages of young people entirely unequipped for marriage are providing more broken homes, from which children are coming under the care of the Society, and of course, war always bring a large increase in the number of children born out of wedlock who must be provided for.

Fewer families are willing to take children for adoption, particularly older boys and girls, because of the uncertainties of war, which means that the Home Society needs to keep children under its care for much longer periods before adoptive homes are offered for them.

Taxes and unusual war demands make it much more difficult for the Society to secure funds, and apparently all the children's used clothing in Florida is being given to Greek and China relief agencies, the result being that the Children's Home Society is facing a deficit of several thousands of dollars, is tremendously in need of foodstuffs of every kind, and is in dire need of children's wearables of every type, kind and size, for children from babies up to boys and girls of sixteen years of age.

Layettes and garments for babies are particularly needed, as well as sweaters, coats, shoes and winter clothing.

The Home Society and its State Superintendent, Marcus C. "Daddy" Fagg, will gladly welcome funds in any amount, large or small, or War Bonds which should be sent to R. V. Covington, Treasurer, 408 Consolidated Building, and all articles of food and clothing should be sent by parcel post or express to the Children's Receiving Home, 2890 Riverside Avenue, Jacksonville. Turkeys, ducks and chickens will make the children very happy.

The Society operates Receiving Homes at Pensacola, Lakeland and Miami, where contributions will also be gladly received.

This is a special Thanksgiving appeal — a war appeal for Florida's very own utterly homeless and needy children, which the Children's Home Society earnestly hopes will bring a fine response in money, food and wearables.

List Vacancies at Chamber of Commerce

If you have any rooms, apartments or houses for rent, you are requested to register them with Mrs. M. G. Whitcomb, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Whitcomb is having madly calls every day, and it will greatly facilitate matters if persons will list their vacancies with her.

The upward trend of hog prices, which began in July 1940 after the average monthly price at Chicago had dropped to $4.80 per hundredweight in the preceding month, reached a peak of $15.50 in March of the present year, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Since that time, prices have been declining and in mid-July the price was down to $13.40. The government plans to support the market with a price level of $13.75.

Farmers who are having to pay more for farm batteries than they did in March 1942, have been asked by OPA to report sellers to their nearest War Price and Rationing Boards.

OLD COKS GOES INTO NEW — Millions of old phonograph records are being collected by American Legion posts, the nation over, to be converted into new records to bring the latest American music to Yanks at home and abroad. Typical of what many American Legion Posts are doing in providing this recreation for members of the armed forces is this mountain of 15,671 old discs recently gathered in a house to house canvass by the Hearst Square Post 478, Chicago.

Many Confused About Social Security Benefits

Many people still confuse the 2 insurance programs under the Social Security Act. One is the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance system which provides monthly payments to an insured worker and his family when he is 65 years or older and stops work; and payments to his family after he dies, regardless of his age at death. The other is State Unemployment Compensation, also known as job insurance, which provides weekly payments to an insured worker who loses his job through no fault of his own and cannot find another one immediately.

Workers covered by one program are not necessarily covered by the other. Both programs, however, identify the worker's account by the same Social Security number.

Unemployment Compensation in Florida is operated by the Florida Industrial Commission. Florida has it own Unemployment Compensation law and it differs in some respects from the laws of other States. Inquiries about Unemployment Compensation should be directed to the nearest office of the U. S. Employment Service of the War Manpower Commission.

Information on Old-Age and Survivors Insurance may be obtained at the Social Security Board, 215 North Flagler Drive, West Palm Beach, Florida.

HURRY-UP JOB!

The Third War Loan is a hurry-up job for the home front. The government must rush billions of dollars to the fighting fronts in the form of extra munitions.

3rd WAR LOAN

Buy an Extra $100 Bond

It's actually a matter of life or death for Americans in uniform. Once the invasion got under way we committed ourselves to the use of large numbers of troops and great stores of supplies. Any let down or crack-up in the supply trains could prove fatal.

Your job is to see to it that there is no shortage of anything needed to make the invasion swift and sure. We do not want another Bataan or Corregidor.

Get that extra War Bond today. Show that you are with our boys in this critical hour of invasion. THE EDITOR men will be drawn from gunnery and technical schools at other Florida cities.

The proximity of these schools was one reason for the decision to concentrate the Flying Fortress training in the Tampa area. A steady flow of personnel to the training units can be maintained with a minimum of travel time and expense.

Since assuming part of the heavy bombing program, the Third Air Force now directs combat training for nearly all types of army planes. In addition to the heavies, it has medium and light bombers, reconnaissance planes, and single-engine fighters.

aid in the war effort," he added.

Mr Bissett who has been assistant to the county agent in Polk county at Bartow the past 18 months, said that he is particularly interested in soil problems in relation to the management of groves, in pasture improvement and in seeing that new and modern nutritional methods for groves and pasture are known and utilized.

Mr. Bissett, who is 32 years old, was born in Hillsborough county and reared in Polk county where his family owned groves. He was graduated from Winter Haven high school in 1930 and from the University of Florida. He worked for the U. S. department of agriculture and was Polk and Hillsborough counties loan representative for the Farm Security administration. He later operated a truck farm near Melbourne for a year.

During his stay in Bartow as assistant to the county agent, he inaugurated a cattlemen's round table for discussion of mutual problems. The round table doubled in size within six months. Mr. Bissett is in hopes of establishing a similar projects here if sufficient interest is shown.

Mr. and Mrs. Bissett and their four months' old son, Glenn, expect to establish their home here in the near future.
