Naomi Hagerty and S-Sgt. Riley Married May 4

Miss Naomi Hagerty and S-Sgt. John E. Riley, both of Salem, Ohio were united in marriage in an impressive ceremony at three o'clock Thursday afternoon, May 4, at the First Methodist Church in Sebring. The Rev. Perry B. James, pastor of the church, officiated in the presence of a small gathering of friends.

Mrs. Ralph Stout of Muskogee, Oklahoma, matron of honor, was the bride's only attendant, and S-Sgt. Riley served the groom as best man.

Mrs. Daisy James, organist, played "I Love You Truly" softly preceding the ceremony, and Miss Ruth Feglow of Miami, vocalist, sang "Because." The traditional wedding march was used as the processional and recessional. The bride wore an attractive pink crepe dress, fashioned on modish lines, with which she wore wood's brown accessories, and a corsage of gardenias and sweet-heart roses.

The matron of honor chose a two-piece spring ensemble in shades of blue, and her flowers were a shoulder corsage of gardenias.

Again let me express my appreciation and thanks to those whose work and vote made me high man in Highlands county, and to my many friends in the other three counties of the district who helped me poll over a 500 vote lead in the entire district.

To those of you whose first choice candidate was eliminated in the First Primary, I earnestly solicit your vote and support. Together we can all work to get our district's just share of highway construction and plan for the post-war future of the district.

The race is not over yet and I will appreciate your redoubled efforts in my behalf between now and the Second Primary on May 23rd.

Sun and Suds-Proof Fabrics Put Stress on Checks, Plaids and Dots

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TO SAY glibly that checks and plaids are in fashion does not do justice to the situation as it is this spring, and as it will continue the whole summer through. Fact is, there is a regular epidemic of checks, little, medium, and big, sweeping across the fashion horizon this season. In the cotton realm the vogue for checks, plaids and polka dots rages on and on.

It gives a new importance and meaning to tub fabrics that nowadays they are absolutely relied on. If they carry the proper guarantee label, to be both sun and suds-proof, due to their everlasting processing. It is also noteworthy of the new cottons and other washable weaves that they are receiving the same meticulous styling that in years gone by was reserved for fine wools and silks and such. Which all leads to the present new order of events, that cotton and rayon weaves tub to perfection and go everywhere with high style acclaim these days.

It is washable such as herewith pictured that are riding the crest of the wave in point of high-fashion importance. The attractive dress shown to the right is made of poplin plaid in pink and black, which has been ever-fast processed, so that no matter how many times it is laundered it will come out bright and lovely as ever. Its absolutely fast colors will refuse to give way no matter if an inexperienced little bride tries it or if it has had to pass the test of a boom-town laundry. This stunning dress in pink and black, a color combination especially outstanding this spring, will be equally chic going about town, or stopping to linger at the club or to play a game of bridge. The self-plaiting that trims the bodice front and the pockets is a favored fashion gesture. Self-plaiting and pleatings adorn most of the simple daytime frocks, imparting a youthful air that is most pleasing.

The designer of the smart ever-fast gingham, shown to the left, carries out the new and popular idea of trimming with self-plaiting. The handling of the plaid so as to form delightful points down the center front of the skirt is also an interesting feature. Dresses of this type will prove smart suburban and town mainstays this summer. They wash prettily, run quickly and go perfectly with either colored or white accessories.

Polka dots are as popular as ever. They share style prestige equally with checks, plaids and stripes. The winsome frock centered in the picture makes appeal because of its exquisite simplicity and because of the attractiveness of the polka dot material of which it is fashioned. This charming model was one of many lovely wash frocks shown at a style revue recently staged by the Chicago National Wash Apparel association. The sun rayon weave is in powder blue with large white polka dots. The row on row of white machine stitching which trims this gown is handled most effectively. This is the sort of dress you will treasure for it has a ladylike charm which every woman covets.

If you are going in for smart cottons this summer, and of course you are, for "everybody's doing it," mix a little joy of owning a little bolero two-piece, either skirts and bolero or sun-back one-piece dress and bolero made of brightly colored, full plaid gingham. If you choose the skirt-and-bolero type, you will find it very practical as it looks so positively smart and pretty worn with frilly white sheer blouses or with dark monotone types that have a lot of snowy sheer fro-fro at neckline and sleeves.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Hat Matches Blouse

Red and white rayon crepe are used in this striking blouse and hat ensemble. It is a stunning two-piece suitable for town or country. Worn with odd skirts or with a suit, it carries style distinction wherever it goes.

Mode Swings Back to 1920s In Long Scarfs and Cloches

The shoulder scarf, the long scarf that we wear about the throat and swinging in the breeze, the stole is far, there are further additions in the "back to the '20s" vogue. Can bice a sweater dress or one with the long train effect with a cloche, a scarf that hangs in long coils, and simple slouch gloves to keep the arms slender and unchilled. You'll find that the effect looks cheaply back to that time, though the details and colors are different.

Wearing Flowers Is 'The Style' This Year

The custom of wearing artificial flowers has been revived with utmost enthusiasm. So make your heart feel young and joyous and your appearance subtler years by wearing flowers on everything, your lapel, your bag, on the cuffs of your gloves, at your waistline and most of all, indulge in several of the provocative little flower-laden chapheats that everybody loves. Your simple little black dinner gown will vamp all eyes if you place a single or a couple of giant roses at your waistline. Flowers worn as-must fashion never so flattering. Your smooths and your scarfs should be perfumed with single blossoms or petals strewn all over them. Collar and cuff sets are made of pastel flower petals. Some of these sets have little flower pockets to match.

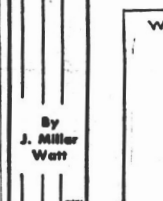

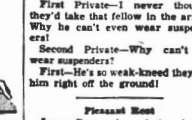

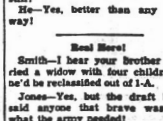

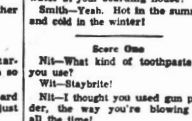

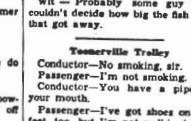

Simpler Hairdos Lead a Look of Suave Elegance

A look of suave elegance is what best dressed women are coveting these days in hairdress. The general request is for hair styles in front so that it can be brushed from the temples and brought up into neatly arranged curls at the top and sides with no suggestion of a pompadour. The new idea is apparently to keep hair fairly long at the back so that it can be arranged in versatile ways.

Exciting New Silhouette

Dress, modern and ever so slenderizing is the velvet rendered in regard to the new long-line dress and slouch, the same being fashion's move to create a new silhouette. The long-line dress and the slouch blouse which is bringing about a vogue for smooth waistlines.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

Collarless Two-Piece
IT HAS the new striped neckline look — the clean, comfortable lines of the collarless cardigan. Do it in soft rayon crepe or in fresh-as-paint summer cottons. Make the tailored collar waste of blouse — interchange it with a frilled jabot for dressy wear.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1930 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 34 jacket, short skirt, requires 2 yards of 36-inch material; skirt, 1 yard.

Sailor-Princess
THE best features of both — a princess frock and the trim, clever lines of a sailor collar and tie — are combined in this spirited frock. Make it of laundable cotton in a light shade. Do the trim in bright blue linen or in a pastel.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1936 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Short skirt, requires 2 1/2 yards of 36-inch material; 3/4 yard contrast for collar, bow and cuffs.

ON THE HOME FRONT
RUTH WORTH APPEARS

NO MATTER how often you have to move or whether you change from a spacious house to a single room there are certain treasures that will mean home to you. A few books, a piece of china and some perfectly useful but cheering bits of bric-a-brac.

SCRUB SHOES AND TIGHTS WITH RUTH WORTH APPEARS

By all means take them with you and make an attractive setting for them.

A shadow-box cupboard will do the trick. The one shown here is light and substantial; will lend glamour even to dime store odds and ends, and may be placed on top of a table, a chest of drawers or a desk.

If you do not have a saw to cut the scalloped frame, mark it on plywood and take it to the nearest woodworking shop to have it cut. You may have the straight boards cut where you buy them. Then all you will have to do is to screw them together; tack on the front frame and paint or stain to suit your room color scheme.

NOTE—An actual size pattern for this shadow box cupboard; list and sizes of all materials; and illustrated directions for making and finishing will be sent for 15 cents. Write for Pattern 284 and write direct to:

under subscribed our names."

The actual signing of this document will take place as a part of the regular worship service with the members of the congregation signing their names in the presence of the remainder of the congregation. The document will be signed upon the Communion table.

Signed compacts from all the Congregational Christian Churches will be presented for dedication at the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches at Grand Rapids, Michigan in June. They will be taken to that meeting by the Florida delegates.

It is hoped that this dramatic movement will influence political party conventions to put foreign policy above partisanship and to work for a common policy on World Order. Members are urged to follow the signing with letters to their senators in Washington and to their delegates to party conventions.

The Moderator of the General Council, Ferdinand Q. Blanchard, and his committee are sponsoring this program. The details and publicity are being carried on by the Congregational Christian Council for Social Action.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazi Rail Lines Hammered by Allies In Pre-Invasion Softening Process; Lend-Lease Grants Total 30 Billion; Stilwell Advances in Northern Burma

EDITOR'S NOTE: When updates are prepared in these columns, they are those of Western Newspapers. Later news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

CHINA: Japs Tighten Hold
With no less than 80,000 troops backed by large forces of reserves, the Japanese pressed their drive to clear the embattled Chinese from the Hankow-Peking railway in northern China.

Japanese success would clear a considerable belt of the road for north-south traffic, strengthening the enemy's stranglehold on eastern China, which includes all of that stream country's principal ports.

Since overrunning eastern China, the Japs have worked hard to establish new industries in the occupied territories to capitalize on the country's material and manpower resources, and there have been reports that the Jap war machine has considered transfer of government and economic administrative offices to the Chinese mainland in the event of sustained U. S. bombardment of the home islands.

MEXICO: Ends Snooze
As one means of saving time by cutting down travel between business and home, and of conserving electricity by avoiding the necessity of working late at night, President Manuel Avila Camacho ordered an end of Mexico's famed midday siesta for government and industry.

Beginning June 1, government offices will open at 8 a. m. and run throughout the day; stores will operate from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., and factories will work from 8 a. m. to 2 p. m.

In putting an end to Mexico's midday snooze, President Camacho said that because of the time consumed in traveling for people got in to real nap, anyway, Chief of State in the new order is expected to come from conductors and drivers, who are tired of late hours.

WHISKY: No Prospects
Unless there is a sudden reduction in requirements for alcohol for synthetic rubber and other war needs, there is no immediate prospect for a resumption of whisky.

Production of whisky for medicinal purposes is being continued by the War Production Administration.

Donald Nelson, chief of production, said that it is not feasible and might interfere with necessary war production.

PROFITS: Going Up
With some industries like petroleum showing a 60 per cent profit in net incomes, and others like the wholesale and retail goods reports showing a 15.5 per cent profit of 250 leading big businesses for the first quarter of 1944 amounted to $1,000,000,000, 4 per cent higher than last year, but 19 per cent over 1941.

At the same time, an analysis of operations of 50 manufacturing companies for 1943 showed that costs helped to counterbalance income, and profit was held to 3.1 per cent of sales.

AIR TRAVEL: Monopoly Debated
Burning question in aviation circles today is whether various U. S. lines shall form a single company for international service or whether they shall compete for business as separate entities.

Although only two of 19 U. S. lines favor a single company, there is strong pressure for a setup on the grounds that its operation on a volume basis could allow it to compete against foreign air lines which undoubtedly will be financially supported by their governments.

In opposing the single company idea, no less than 17 U. S. lines feel that competition could be expected to result in improved service and promotion of air travel, without fostering tier enterprise.

CASUALTIES: Total 197,841
Latest figures put U. S. casualties in World War II at 197,841, the army suffering 153,200 and navy 44,640.

Of the army casualties, 35,575 were reported killed or missing, 33,814 missing and 30,901 prisoners. Navy losses included 18,992 killed or missing, 5,192 missing and 4,436 prisoners.

With 43,687 deaths already reported, the death toll already neared 50,000 in the war.

WOOL CHEAPER
To move a part of the large stockpile of wool on hand, the Commodity Credit Corporation has decided to fix the price of domestic wool at a figure equal to or slightly below imported wool. At present, the imported article is 15 cents a pound cheaper than the domestic.

This procedure will mean a loss to the CCC but another federal agency, which owns the foreign wool ultimately will make a profit which will more than offset the loss on the domestic sale.

DESIGNER: Paul Poiret, 64, once among the world's most famous fashion designers, died in Paris victim of cancer.

RAYON ROSE: More thin rayon hosiery will be produced and less of the heavier grades, by permission of the War Production Board. The duty has been complaining that small sums but would be wearing heavier lines.

POSTAL NOTES: A plan to provide "postal notes" for transmission of money by mail in sums under ten dollars for a flat fee of one cent is being considered by the senate postal committee. The house has already approved the proposal.

These notes would not supplant the use of the regular money order for small sums but would be convenient additions to the postal services.

EUROPE: Nazi Preparations
As it was reported that the Germans were preparing to sacrifice 300,000 men along the "Atlantic Wall" to slow up the Allies' landing operations and allow the German high command opportunity to shift large reserves to the most critical battle areas, U. S. and British bombers continued their non-stop bombardment of enemy defense installations and communication lines to blast a forward path for the invasion forces.

As the zero hour approached, the Nazis sought to assure against Allied landings in Holland by preparing to flood the lowlands, part of which already have been inundated following the removal of the inhabitants.

Heavy U. S. and British aerial bombardments reportedly rased Nazi rail lines 100 miles inland from the channel coast, putting a severe crimp into the transport system over which the Nazis hoped to rush seasoned troops to encounter early Allied landings, possibly made in conjunction with a great Russian offensive in the east.

U. S. SEIZURE: Congress Acts
Blurred by U. S. troop seizure of the Chicago plant of Montgomery Ward and company after the latter's refusal to extend a CIO union contract under order of the War Labor Board, both the senate and the house moved to review the whole field of wartime executive authority.

In introducing a resolution for studying the Ward case which was quickly adopted, Sen. Harry Byrd (Va.) said:

"The measure should lead to correction of legislation under which this seizure of a private business was made."

Previously, Rep. Charles Dewey (Ill.) called upon the house to authorize an investigation of the government's occupation of the Ward plant, a seizure nation's No. 2 mail order company contested in federal court on the grounds that it was no war industry, and that action the U. S. defended on the strength of its claim that the business sells production machinery to farmers in advancement of the war effort.

MEAT: Plenty on Hand
Reduction of government purchases of meat in the face of crowded warehouses and heavy hog receipts at market has quickly offset OPA's removal of meat rationing except on beef ticks and roasts.

On April 1, a flat 60-cent receipt of 1,246,813,000 pounds of meat compared with 780,800,000 pounds a year ago. Pacing facilities were being stretched to the utmost as farmers continued heavy hog shipments, partly because of the tight feed supply recently devastated by the government's embargo on all private corn sales in 125 mid-west counties to drive stocks to industrial processors.

As a result of the government's program, virtually all corn millers were operating, with corn grain pledged for four months.

Australians Much Like Folks Back Home, Americans Discover

Servicemen Mingle With Aussies in Fun, Sports and Worship

By ELLIOTT PINE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

About the time the Jamestown settlers were setting sail for Virginia, a Spanish navigator was exploring the strait bearing his name that separates New Guinea from Australia. The sea captain was Torres, and the year 1606.

This was the beginning of the great island known as Australia. In 1942 this strange land was "rediscovered" by men stepping from the ships of the United States Army.

Until the war with Japan broke out, the back home men cared less about Australia. As one writer put it, "A vast bond of ignorance united Americans and Australians."

But war has changed all that. Now many thousands of soldiers from "the States" have met thousands of Australians at their tables, drunk in their public houses, danced and played in their "canteens" (clubs) and worshipped in their churches. The "Aussies" turned out to be very much like the back home men.

This is not remarkable, after all. For Australians are largely of British stock—English, Scotch, Irish, Americans, folk. For and people represented. They are generally tall, sturdy, independent.

Unlike the men of the Western states, with much of the same forthrightness and friendliness characteristic of a people close to the heart of the matter, 7,000,000 Australians live in a rugged, isolated country.

as we have had here. Besides that, the soil and climate are harder to the United States.

Most of the big island is desert and poor scrubby grazing land. Of 3,860,000 square miles (about exactly the size of continental United States), over a million miles is real desert—stone and sand and salt flat that is entirely out of the question for any purpose at present. Another million miles grows scanty vegetation sufficient to support the hardy sheep for which the nation is famous. The really good farm land is scattered about the coast in the three states of the Pacific coast, Oregon, Washington and California.

Only one region in the south is tropical enough to grow bananas, pineapples and such exotic plants.

Early settlers found that their wheat dried out and died in the heavy red soil, but a new hardy "Federation" is resistant to drought and rust, and yielding well. The acreage of wheat

There is of course some hostility among the Aussies about the Yanks snatching away their girls. The famous American "line" goes down pretty well too, and the girls are that most foreigners feel toward Americans have to make an impression. Then the higher pay scale of the U. S. army gives our men more spending money, and they probably have the money more than the native boys do. Australian girls say that Americans treat them as equals and are more courteous than their own men, who are following traditional behavior that is "out of date" in America.

In New Zealand, where the situation parallels that in Australia pretty closely, a member of the parliament introduced a resolution asking the U. S. army to reduce the pay of its soldiers, because the local chaplains came to free spending. Nothing came of it, but it shows how some of the Aussies feel.

Love Comes to U. S. Soldiers
Many Americans have found romance in the big island. Some 500 Australian women, brides and fiancées of American soldiers, landed in San Francisco, and began to adjust themselves to their new home. Many other brides are staying over there until the war ends. Some plan to return to their own country. Prime Minister Churchill recently said that he wished that as many as 500,000 Americans would settle in his country. It is not reported how the average Australian fellow feels about this proposition. Until lately Australia, like all frontier countries, had a large preponderance of males. How kindly the Aussies take to addition of great numbers of their women and their jobs is not revealed.

Australian girls are rather bigger than American girls, our soldiers say. They are athletic and healthy and interested in sports such as swimming and tennis. This endorsement on the dance floor is a marvel to husky Americans, who are often hard put to keep up. They want to know how the girls manage to keep up.

On the other hand, there is considerable British conservatism in social life throughout Australia. Many forms of amusements are closed on Sunday. The churches exert more influence there than in America. Only a few months ago, for instance, clergy refused to perform marriages for men protesting against hasty marriage between Americans and Australian girls. The remonstrance carried considerable weight.

While Australians play their brand of baseball, they do so only to keep in the mood for football in the off-season. And football to them is a special game of their own, unlike American football or English rugby. It is fast game with much leaping, kicking and running. Eighteen men play on each side.

Crick is the national game as in other British countries. Americans found it is not as slow as they had been led to believe. Tennis and golf are popular. Horse racing used to be a national passion, but wartime stringencies have closed most tracks.

The future.
How much greater Australia can become depends on many factors. The great areas of desert and semi-arid land is unfavorable to extension of agriculture without great irrigation projects. Forest resources are inadequate for much lumbering or paper-making. The mineral resources have not been explored very much yet, and offer considerable promise. There is a good deal of coal, but the heavy industries need further development.

Unless the population increases considerably, the commercial possibilities are not likely to become a great nation. Pottery years may see considerable migration to this country, but it is not likely to become a great nation.

Blood Donors in 1492

The current interest in blood donors recalls the earliest attempts to save lives through blood transfusions. First recorded blood transfusion was made in 1628 when a vein attempt was made to save Pope Innocent VIII.

All those giving blood, plus the blood transfusion was made in 1628 when a vein attempt was made to save Pope Innocent VIII.

At that time many recommended that husbands and wives make transfusions their blood to equalize their temper.

Justice Is Sole Principle Guiding Steps of UNRRA

Relief and Rehabilitation Program Claims Support of Congressmen Noted for Internationalist Viewpoint.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WFO Service, United Trust Building Washington, D. C.

While the bums are burning over Europe, it is pretty hard to think of postwar activities. America just doesn't like to do it. Furthermore, it is perfectly natural that after our experience in the last war, when we talk about "relief" for Europe, we feel we won't want to play the role of "Uncle Sam" again.

The one organization which has gone ahead with very definite, open, official, and public plans for international activity, is the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. Forty-four nations have combined to set up this organization and finance its work.

The United States' part in this organization has been the subject of much criticism in Congress. But it never could have had this backing if it hadn't been for the widespread cooperation of certain men in Congress whose imagination by the greatest stretch of imagination is the largest stretch of imagination. One of them, largely responsible for the UNRRA, is Senator Charles McNary, who has been the UNRRA's champion in the Senate.

After a long and careful consultation with the State department, McNary has been able to get the UNRRA to accept if it joined this body of 44 nations. Vandenberg was supported by representatives of the delegation from Ohio, among others, a middle western state not noted for international tendencies.

I asked a member of the UNRRA staff why he thought these people were convinced that the United States ought to take part in this humanitarian movement which although it proclaimed ultra-practical aims, naturally be doubted by the cynical.

"Nobody who has read the limitations which this organization has placed upon itself could be the least bit doubtful," was his answer.

Selling Point
At that moment, I took this rather categorical statement with a grain of salt. Later, after talking with Morris Salisbury, who is well known over the air to many of the readers of this column and also the listeners to the "Farm and Home Hour," I must admit I was sold.

Morris Salisbury gave up an important position in the department of agriculture which he had held through various administrations. He came to the public relations for UNRRA under former governor of New York Herbert Lehman, its administrator. I broke to him when he was puzzling over the question of an emblem or flag or a designation for the UNRRA—something which ought to have a distinguishing insignia but he was unconvinced and he paid someone to see what was important to remember.

"Here is one governmental institution—governmental in the sense that 44 nations are backing it—which, instead of wishing to perpetuate itself, as most bureaucratic organizations are said to do, has for its chief aim—self liquidation. Like the boys in the front lines, it wants to get the job done and then quit."

The object of UNRRA is to do what it can to produce to normalcy the chaos produced by the war and then quit.

For that reason, former Governor Lehman has set as one of his objectives the keeping of the number of administrative employees down to the absolute minimum. I'll have more in my next column about first just a very brief summary of what UNRRA has set as its objectives, how it hopes to obtain its objective, as set forth in its so-called "bills," containing the official statement of the results of the organization. This is the document which I was told if anyone read he would not have the crust to oppose the UNRRA program.

On November 8, 1943, the representatives of these 44 nations met in the White House and signed an agreement to cooperate in bringing up the wounds of war. Later, they met in Atlantic City and drew Army Fliers Take 25,000 Pictures to Chart Vast Territory.

Northern Alaska, last American frontier and possible postwar source of untold mineral resources, is beginning to yield up some of its enigmatic secrets to the modern flying map makers of the army air forces and the geological survey.

Vast stretches of Arctic Alaskan territory, areas of it hitherto unobserved by the human eye since the beginning of time, soon will be revealed on maps showing topographic data similar to those published for Virginia or Texas, but in smaller scale. It will show names of rivers that have been meandering toward the Arctic ocean for untold centuries. It will reveal possible sites for airports, when that part of the world becomes the logical air route between the United States and Moscow or Asiatic cities. It will disclose apparent tundra—covered wastes that may provide a tip-off to tomorrow's prospectors.

The northern Alaska mapping job, now nearing completion, constitutes the largest ever mapped and is being done in a very simple manner. It is a part of the joint military-geological survey of the northern Alaska which was initiated in 1941. Since then, the geological survey of the Lewis and Clark expedition has mapped over 5,000,000 square miles of the world's surface in various parts of the world for war purposes. But instead of trudging laboriously through the snows of the Arctic, the Lewis and Clark expedition has mapped over 5,000,000 square miles of the world's surface in various parts of the world for war purposes.

These drachmas would be spent within the country and will help carry out the principle which Morris Salisbury has laid down: that UNRRA itself will not develop a big payroll. It will help the people of the world, but not the government. Let me give you an example:

The Greeks haven't enough food. The United States public utilities are smashed to pieces, they have no shoes to walk on, their hospitals and other public institutions have been destroyed or disintegrated. All right, UNRRA will set down a certain amount of money to be used to help them. It will set down a certain amount of food, a certain amount of clothing, a certain amount of machinery and other supplies—that will be paid for in drachmas which are nothing more than pieces of paper as far as the Greeks are concerned. But which have a cash value in Greece.

They will take these drachmas and hire personnel, people who will arrange to load the supplies into the part of the ports where UNRRA sets them down and handle the distribution of food and clothing and other supplies to the people of the country; they will do the dirty work of rebuilding the waterworks and electric light plants, the public buildings for an ordered life. This employment will be furnished out of the nation's own wealth.

This is a very brief attempt to show how UNRRA works but as I said in the Du Pont building on Connecticut avenue and heard Mr. Salisbury, who is one of the most practical-minded government officials with whom I have dealt in my 30 years experience in Washington, detail UNRRA's activities, I began to feel quite an emotional surge. Salisbury may have left it too hot, but of course, he wouldn't say it any more than I would since both of us are laconic mid-westerners.

I said: "Isn't this whole idea a historical innovation?" He replied: "Well, yes. But don't think the 44 member nations are laying any claim to it. It is a purely American idea. UNRRA. They have created this organization of a purely transitional nature. It's merely an attempt on the part of the nation which has something to offer to provide it. If the others can pay for the food and clothing and other things they get, they are willing to pay for it. If they can't, the contributing nations are going to get it to them."

ALICE IN WONDERLAND—Buy enough velvet ribbon, about 2 or 2½ inches wide, to go around your head. Wear it curved high across the front and slipped under your hair in back just like the pictures of Alice in Wonderland. For a smooth effect make your hands by fitting them to your head and fastening them in back with a small section of elastic.

CURVETTE CRAZE—Curvettes are curved bands of felt that tie under the hair in back and fit smoothly over your head. Make your own out of the brims of discarded hats. Embroider them in yarn or with beads or sequins. Wear them with or without a matching beanie underneath. Make the beanie out of the crown of the same discarded hat. Make curvettes out of velveteen, too, lined with ermine, to go with your party dresses.

TRIPLE THREAT—Wear three bows in a row up the back of your head. Especially apocryphal with an updo. Remember it on Jean Arthur in "The More the Merrier." And—who wouldn't like to look like Jean?

BUDDING BUNN—If your hair is long enough to braid, part it in the center and make a pigtail on each side. Then wind each pigtail into a tight bun over each ear. Pin flowers in the center of each bun. Quaint and becoming.

CENTER PART—The coming trend in hair-do is the simple and easy part with hair parted down the middle and only slightly curled up at the ends. Pin it back at your forehead at each side with bows underneath. Make the bows look like Patty Boyd, famous Cover girl, who has popularized this hair-do.

BEADED BRAIDS—Use your necklaces to dress up your pigtails. Just braid them and wear the Pearls are super-dreamy for parties.

Change Partners! How times have changed! Time was when "May I have the pleasure of the next dance" was the approved way to ask a girl for the next number. Here's how the 1944 girls approach the same situation.

"Greetings, girl. Let's circulate." "It's my drizzle, drip." "Hi, Bug. Let's cut a rug."

And instead of asking, "May I call on you?" the girls now say, "Sailor. I'm conveying this ship on the dance floor, with no help in sight from the stag line, he's been 'left holding the bag.' When a girl is out in the middle of the dance floor, she says she is 'Pranced to a pooh.'"

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"The public doesn't seem to see anything funny in having been fed when it was hungry; others may think it is laughable, but it is (the public) just doesn't get the joke." — Grafton's Column, Jax Journal.

Politicians who run around making fun of people and things make a mistake when they step over the line into the serious side of life. You can't laugh off conscientious efforts to improve the welfare of a nation or a large part of it.

That is one lesson the bluebirds should learn from the Pepper victory.

And then we come to Pepper — should he learn any lessons from the victory? Certainly.

But they are lessons of forbearance, lessons of a broader vision that might include an understanding of the problems that confront those on the other side of the railroad tracks.

Claude Pepper is a statesman of no mean mind or standing. His standing has been enhanced by his victory. The mind, already brilliant, can be greatly expanded by his careful consideration of the reasons from both extremes. And we really mean BOTH extremes.

His mental and political integrity are above doubt. He has just given us fresh evidence in his return to Washington to vote for the bill to abolish the poll tax — which has nothing to do with the race question. It is an economic question affecting the whites. We, frankly like his "guts." And expect others likewise do so.

We do hope, however, he takes time out from time to time to keep Floridians posted on the whys and wherefores as he sees 'em.

VOTE, THAT'S IMPORTANT.

Frankly folks it isn't near as important how you vote as it is that you vote. Floridians have little relief for "instructions" and that's the reason we don't try to tell you, again, who seems best to us. We'd rather point the way to obstacles and pitfalls and let you use that good old common sense which God gave you and the constitution requires.

We're all going to make mistakes along the highway of life but they'll average up better's average — so if all of us will just do our "darnedest" and vote the country will take care of itself; but VOTING IS important.

Of course everyone knows that when candidates get desperate and the going looks bad and the chances look slim. They grasp at straws — and candidates who disdain mauling and "below-the-belt" politics when they are in front turn to "any port in a storm" and start swinging wildly.

That is the thing to watch for in the closing days of a campaign; watch for the dying gasps of the fellow who's licked and trying to "grasp at straws" in the hope that something may work.

There is a safe way charted by many, many years of experience. That is following the chap who goes into the last stages of a campaign calmly, dispassionately and with a firm conviction that what is to be will be right. He's the kind of chap to cling to. He knows that right will prevail and is willing to trust his fate to righteousness. He goes right ahead, deliberately and calmly, telling folks what he stands for without fear or doubt. He means what he says and hasn't mortgaged the office and the state. Find this guy in every race — and cling to him. Forget the wild fame rumors, the dying gasps of the unreliable, the "mystery" "food hopes" of the dying politicians. Cling to the steady.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Garber and family have been enjoying week end visits from Mrs. Garber's nephew, Cpl. James Lindeman, who is stationed at MacDill Field, Tampa.

Mrs. Margaretta Vogt spent Sunday in Tampa with Miss Marthe Jeather, who is a patient at the Municipal hospital. The many friends of Miss Jeather, who recently underwent an operation for the amputation of her left leg, will be pleased to know that her condition is improving.

Pvt. and Mrs. Allen Rodgers of Hobe Sound, Florida, were visiting here this week, going on to St. Petersburg to be the guests of other relatives there.

Mrs. J. B. Hart and Mrs. Jean Richetta of Orlando were visiting friends here on Wednesday.
