

Election Tuesday To Decide On School Bonds

(BY J. PAUL GARNER)

County School Board Member Electors of School District No. 1 will vote Tuesday for or against the issuance of $80,000 of bonds to pay for erecting and equipping a six-room school building, a physical education building, purchasing of lands adjacent to the present school grounds and preparing such lands now owned or to be acquired for physical educational purposes.

Tentative plans call for the six room school building to be added to the present elementary school building and in this way the present auditorium in the elementary building could be used by the students who will occupy the new class rooms as well as students in present elementary school building. This arrangement would enable the school to have all students from grades 1 to 6 inclusive in one building, present building with six room addition, and all junior high and senior high school students would occupy the large building.

The Physical Education Building would be built in the block occupied by the Manual Training Building and Lunch Room. It is planned to provide in the basement of Physical Education Building a modern school lunch room. Our present lunch room is not large enough, since they are now feeding on some days over 400 children. There is a definite need for a larger, modern lunch room.

Shower rooms for boys and girls will be provided in basement of Physical Education Building. A basketball court and seats for spectators will also be provided in this building. It has been suggested that a room be provided in this building for a meeting place for school organizations for their after school activities. Rooms will also be provided to store athletic equipment and offices for Boys and Girls Physical Education Teachers.

Erecting the two buildings and equipping them will be the first consideration. After the cost has been determined on the buildings, we will then consider the other project of purchasing lands adjacent to the present school grounds and preparing lands now owned or to be acquired for physical educational purposes. Additional lands will only be purchased if they can be bought at a reasonable price.

If the bond issue carries, we will wait a reasonable length of time in awarding contracts to see if any Government financial help is possible for school buildings. At present no financial help can be secured from the Government for school buildings. We will also see that building materials are available for completing the building before awarding contracts. It is believed that building materials for this type building will be available within the next few months.

Mr. W. J. Heim, architect, has prepared tentative plans and made estimates of cost of buildings. He feels that we can complete the projects for amount of Bond Issue.

Citizens Meeting A meeting of citizens has been called for next Monday night, 8 P. M., in the High School Auditorium, to hear discussed the projects for which the bond election is being held. The High School Band will play several numbers before the meeting starts. Mrs. Chas. Kenney will speak for Women's Club. Mr. Earl Ward for Parent Teacher's Association; Col. D. M. Ellis for American Legion; Dr. R. H. Jordan for Rotary Club. Other speakers will include County Supl. Fred Wild, Principal A. B. Wilkie, Physical Education Director, P. R. Carter, Glen Whitcomb, and Barbara Bridges. Reports will be given by the student body. J. Paul Garner, School Board Member will be master of ceremonies. After the talks by those named, opportunity will be given to those present to speak for or against the Bond Issue and Supl. Fred Wild will answer any questions that may be asked by any one present.

It is hoped that all interested in our schools will attend the meeting next Monday night, and that all qualified electors of Avon Park School District No. 1 will vote on Tuesday, October 30th, at the City Hall, Avon Park. The form of ballot will read "FOR BONDS" "AGAINST BONDS."

Jonathan I. Thigpen, signman 2/c, USNR, who has spent the past 22 months in the south Pacific, is spending a thirty day leave here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Thigpen.

School Students Sign Petition For Bond Election

We, the following students of Avon Park High School respectfully urge the voters of the Avon Park School District No. 1 to vote and vote "FOR BONDS" in the School Bond election to be held TUESDAY, OCTOBER 30th. Few more than we here at school realize the need for this improvement in our schools. We believe that we understand the entire program and that it successfully passed will place school on an equal basis with other schools surrounding our community.

Winter Guest Club

There seems to be prospects for a larger membership at the Winter Guest Club during the coming winter. Rumor has it that some of the club members, who have not been here since before the war are to be back this year. All will be welcome.

Among the members who have already returned are: Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Armstrong, Mrs. Keen, Mrs. Pangel, Mrs. and Mrs. Mayagash, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Kewler, and D. A. Brodie. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rensinger are expected soon. We hear that Mrs. Rensinger is much improved in health.

Mr. and Mrs. Rulison are expected most any time. They have already engaged quarters for the winter. This is good news, as it will be remembered that they could not be with us last winter on account of the serious illness of Mr. Rulison.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Forbes are expected this week. J. C. Starrett is back with us after a year's sojourn at Bradenton.

The Avon Park players attest to the fact that the officials interfered with play by taking position in the wrong place on the playing field and that they were displeased to the team captain, Mustadock, when acting as team captain he would call for information regarding play and decisions, or mostly, the lack of decisions following alleged violations.

Most of the players who were wanted the referee in the first quarter that the game was getting out of control. Only one 15 yard penalty was called during the game and no players were disqualified.

LABOR CRISIS TESTS TRUMAN

The fast-growing labor crisis presents Harry S. Truman with the first big problem he has faced on a hillside well-charted Roosevelt sea. Up until now, most policies, especially those dealing with war and peace, had been pretty well established by Truman's predecessor. In settling the current labor turmoil, however, Harry is completely on his own. For some time, labor advice from White House insiders has differed. Truman's labor department has argued that labor troubles after wars were inevitable, that both Wilson and Harding had to call out U. S. troops after the last war, that labor has been in a strait jacket since Pearl Harbor, is bound to feel its wild oats now, finally that big business was equally willing to row with labor especially if it could get labor in wrong with the public. Don't stick your nose out; let both sides battle it out for a while.

Opposite advice came from another wing of the White House . . . while admitting that the shore is real, other advisers urged that both labor and industry needed guidance. For four years both labor and Steel Formula as their guide. They were supposed not to go above this. . . Now labor finds itself losing its overtime wages with take-home pay dropping way below last war days, yet with the cost of living still high. Therefore, Truman was urged to step forward and set a national policy, suggest a wage increase which would partly offset the drop in take-home pay. . . It is this group of advisers which Truman finally has decided to follow.

FARMERS VS. LABOR UNIONS

Last week Florida citrus growers came to Washington, worried sick over the future market for grapefruit and oranges. They feared a return of the old days when their fruit was dumped into Florida rivers. . . The army has just cancelled orders for several million cases of orange juice. Simultaneously it has turned back the civilian market several million more surplus cases. This backlog is bound to have a depressing effect on citrus fruit. . . Citrus growers know that with wages dropping, the civilian demand for oranges and grapefruit will also nose-dive. When workmen get paid less, first thing they quit buying is fruit. . . Citrusmen also figure a drop in prices. Not only will the army buy less, but workmen eat less meat when wages are cut. . . Same is true of many other farm commodities, including dairy products. . . Never before has the average American eaten so well despite rationing as during the war years, largely because wages were high. . . Scarcely before also have farmers been so prosperous. Farmers before, however, have been so sore at labor unions they were looking forward to buying new autos, new farm machinery. Now all this is delayed by strikes. Also they are looking forward to the return of cheap labor from cities to farms. So far this hasn't materialized.

UNIONS LOSE MONEY

Big industrial unions actually don't want any truck back to the farm. It means loss of dues. The United Auto Workers' 1,000,000 dues-paying membership is now dropping to about half of that. The drop was so severe that the cost of running the union went to the red. . . UAW chiefs are going about the wage protests in an orderly, fair-minded manner. They do their best to stop the Kellogg-Hayes wildcat strike. . . But some union leaders prefer strikes. It helps increase their power in the union. . . In Schenectady, General Electric's Charles E. Wilson has been ready to make upward wage adjustments voluntarily, just as with Standard Oil of N. J. increased its pay immediately and automatically at the end of the war.

However, certain CIO Electrical Workers seem more interested in a strike than in a voluntary or negotiated wage boost. . . some labor leaders, unfortunately, seem deliberately looking for strikes—among them John L. Lewis. They bring big crowds on the heads of other labor leaders, have given the entire labor movement a bad name with public opinion. Public opinion in some areas is now so anti-labor that Truman would get thunderous applause if he called out U. S. troops as strike-breakers.

Water Winche

Things I Never Knew

Till Now About Atoms

This gives you an idea of the atom's size: If a drop of water were magnified to the size of the earth, the atoms in it would hardly be the size of oranges. . . Most of the atom is composed empty space. It is made of an orbit of electrons revolving around the nucleus much as planets revolve about the sun. An electron is merely a particle of electricity. . . The atom's nucleus contains all its colossal energy. It took scientists more than 50 years of research to unlock the nucleus so it could give up that power. . . Uranium has made the atomic bomb the most devastating explosive. Yet the bomb uses only one-tenth of one per cent of uranium's potential strength. . . Another reason why the atomic Nations should stick together: They possess three-quarters of the world's uranium supply.

Few motorists realize that their cars are driven by atomic power. Atomic is rich in hydrogen atoms, and they provide most of the power that drives the car. . . Atomic is one of the few of the few that covers that was the goal of the longest and most difficult series of researches in history. Most modern discoveries were accidental. The invention of fire, the discovery of America, the discovery of oxygen and the X-ray were all the result of accident.

In 1905, a young patent office clerk in Switzerland developed a theory which involved the idea that under certain conditions matter could be changed into energy and energy into matter. According to that theory, a very small amount of matter could produce tremendous quantities of energy. This has become the basic principle for atomic power. Yet science ignored this theory for 15 years. The young patent office clerk's name: Albert Einstein.

You've probably read that the atomic power in a breath of air could operate a powerful plane for a year continuously; that the atom in a handful of snow could heat a large apartment house for a year, etc. However, Prof. Einstein believed it would probably take many years to channel uranium's energy into peaceful pursuits. Einstein also points out that other substances might be found "and probably will be found" to accelerate its commercial use.

On Dec. 16, 1941 (a day before we declared war against Germany), Princeton University scientists issued a report which was buried in gaudy "inside" pages. Today the significance of this report cannot be over-estimated: It revealed that the scientists made much headway in planning means to defend America against any type of atomic attack. Similar research is now continuing. . . Some day the result of this work might be a handful of snow could heat a large apartment house for a year, etc. . . The peacetime role of atomic energy will depend upon one consideration—relative cost. Until a method of producing the energy has been revolutionized and brought down to a low figure, it is likely to provide a source of energy in extremely concentrated form only for highly specialized industrial purposes. . . One scientist has observed: "Splitting the atom is like discovering the other half of the world—the biggest half."

Uranium is used for atomic bombs because it has the largest atom of any of the known elements, and would be easier to split. . . When the atom is cracked, the fragments of its nucleus are hurled off with an energy of 100,000,000 electron volts. The machinery which produced the fragments has the power to destroy its greatest destructive force. Very little attention has been given to the fact that such machinery is being used to save life, not only destroy it. The atom-splitting cyclotron is a potent medical tool and is an invaluable aid in the fight to lick cancer. . . We have pointed out that the nucleus is the source of the atom's power. It suggests the imagination to realize the nucleus is only one-millionth of a billionth of the size of the atom!

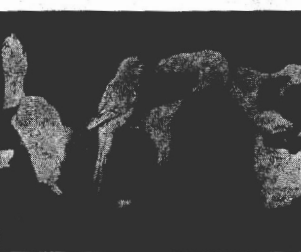

The energy in just one gram of uranium is strong enough to lift the Empire State Building 50 miles in the air. . . More than five years ago, Dr. R. M. Langer (physics research associate at the California Institute of Technology) wrote in a magazine that uranium could create a civilization in the light of the atom. . . Where national boundaries would be obsolete because of the gold standard would be lost because of decreased living costs.

ATOMIC BOMB CREATES SUPER-SPY SYSTEM NEEDED

WASHINGTON—Major General Wild Bill Donovan bowed out of the first real American intelligence service (OSS) with a somewhat cool-sounding response from President Truman to his idea of developing his line of effort further for peace. Mr. Truman cut out OSS, sending part to the War Department, but most to State.

The Donovan notion of hiring someone like Sumner Welles, the ex-ambassador, to keep intimate and independent watch on the inner international world, was left hanging in air—somewhat foggy air. General Donovan has never been a glamour boy. He is a rather crusty soldier-lawyer. Those who know what he did in the confidential special agent part of the war say his work in the Balkans particularly was excellent and could have been done by no one else as well. Into his organization, however, except a number of persons who did not fit the best nature of the endeavor and gave it distance with Congress. I think this fairly sums up OSS. It did great work, but was not popular. (I can never learn what accomplishes popularity in this era when a bank robber can possibly obtain it by merely being for the 30-hour week or some such social innovation.)

In the wake of this peculiar condition, congressmen are arising to shout "there will be no American Gestapo," and I assume also they mean no OGPU or NKVD. Indeed there will not. But there is a grave danger that the first vital necessity for a secure postwar world will be ignored and shunted aside by muddled-headed political thinking about it.

If you thought Pearl Harbor a surprise and bitter war-time sudden as lightning, you are already old-fashioned and obsolete in your thinking. The next war will start like a flash—the brilliant blinding flash of atomic bomb. If our defenses were archaic last time, they will be pitiful next time unless our officials know everything going on in this world. Advanced knowledge is more essential to defense in a future world than a superior air force, an army or fleet.

Not the fascists or the Communist nations, but the British, a democratic nation, have the best world intelligence. It was built up through generations. Their survival depended upon it, because their little islands had absolutely nothing to rely upon their superior position in the world, except an awareness of the facts of national existence and a superior shrewdness in using them. That is what we need to better our lot.

It cannot be an army enterprise because the army covers only one phase of world facts influencing peace and security. It cannot be navy, marine corps, or merely all three together, because diplomacy must be founded upon accurate information. (The British even more commercially from such realistic ground news.) It cannot be spies or you will have each department performing again the coordination they showed about Pearl Harbor—namely none.

INDEPENDENT BUREAU NEEDED

Consequently it must be an independent bureau covering at least these government elements and probably more (Justice Department and FBI). Furthermore the head must be a man whose character and personality guarantee full pursuit of the business to be done, and a complete disavowal of any political implications in the work. He must not be a leftist or right or even a professional Democrat or Republican.

That service need lean over backwards to keep itself politically inviolable, and beyond the faintest suggestion of political use. (The British know how to do it.)

The only limit on the appropriations should be our need of information. If we need the information—get it. If the spender wants to let Treasury money loose here is one place where they could get something out of it. Some interested parties would like to limit the scope of activity to foreign information. It should be limited only by need. If it is feared congressmen are in this country it requires action no political outbalancing can be allowed to prevent the necessary "stand in the way" getting it.

Hard Metal Carbonyl metal, near in hardness to the diamond, is a product of the relatively new science of powder metallurgy. It is made by mixing powdered tungsten, carbide and cobalt, finer than flour, pressing this together under tremendous pressure, and then sintering in furnaces at temperatures up in the thousands of degrees. This fuses the powders together to form a metal that is not only the hardest metal known to science but is also extremely dense and weighs roughly one-half again as much as lead.

Smooth-Riding Freight Cars Foodstuffs and other perishable merchandise in freight cars now get a "first class ride." Just like passengers in the new streamliners. As a result, in-transit losses from breakage and other causes, are being reduced materially. These advantages are made possible by the adaptation to freight cars of the same type of direct action, two-way hydraulic shock absorbers now used on streamliners and other modern passenger equipment.

Right Side Wrong Side The right side for ironing may be the wrong side of the dress. This is true when clothing is made of dark-colored cotton, linen, rayon or crepe. Wool also is ironed on the wrong side and is protected by a pressing cloth. A new wrinkle may have to be smoothed out when the garment is turned to the right side. White and light-colored cottons are ironed on the right side. Heavy fabrics, such as damask, are ironed on both sides.

Clean Water When water contains so much iron that it colors the clothes, as much as possible should be removed. Dissolve one-fourth teaspoon of powdered alum in one quart of warm water. Stir this thoroughly into 30 gallons of water from the tap. Let it stand for 24 hours. Then filter it through a cloth to be removed. Let stand overnight. The iron will settle to the bottom and in the morning the clear water can be poured or siphoned off. Barrels are convenient to use.

Mexico Growing The population of Mexico has risen to more than 21,000,000, according to the Mexican statistical office. This means that Mexico is the second most populous country in Latin America. Brazil stands first with 46,000,000 inhabitants. Since the last national census in 1950, Mexico's population has increased nearly 2,000,000.

Veterans' Administration Has Capable Leader

General Bradley Has Fatherly Interest in Veterans; Actions Show His Ability to Administer This Big Job

By BAUKHAGE
Commentator and News Analyst

WNU Service, 1616 Eye St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

I have just come back from a visit with the father of 15 million. That isn't such a far-fetched figure to use in describing the tall, rangy Missourian, who is in charge of "the biggest business in the world," which is how they describe the Veterans' Administration in Washington.

To call Omar Nelson Bradley "father" of the service men and women isn't stretching it. Ernie Pyle once said: "If I could pick any two men in the world to be my father except my own Dad, I would pick General Omar Bradley or General Ike Eisenhower. If I had a son, I would like him to go to Bradley or Ike for advice." Ernie was a pretty keen judge of human nature on the hoof. I thought of that when one of Bradley's co-workers in the Veterans' Administration, who is almost a decade older than the general, said "fatherly" was the way to describe the manner in which he was treated the first time they had a problem to straighten out with the boss.

And then I met the General. I found a weather-beaten, wiry, long-legged soldier, whose eyes twinkled brighter than the four stars on his collar. Fatherly, yes—and I'll have a word about that a little later. But I found out something else. I found out why he ought to be able to run one of the hardest jobs in the government. And I'll admit, right off, it sounds almost too good to be true.

We had been talking about the details of the reorganization of the agency which is now going on and with which General Bradley is intimately familiar. Then I asked him what it was, if anything, in his military training and experience that he could use in his present position.

He said that he thought it was the same with the job as with this. And here is the theory on which he works:

"First, build your organization on functional lines. Second, get the right man to head up each function. Third, give him full responsibility to act on his own authority."

Now, I inquired, does this fit in with your military experience, having had some of that branch of adventure myself—although running a platoon isn't running an army.

"It's a good deal like the army," he answered. "You have your staff. You have say 50 sections, each with a special function, working under your chief of staff. Sometimes, of course, you group some of the functions, but the organization is along functional lines."

And how, I asked, do you choose the men to head up these various activities? His answer came back without the slightest hesitation.

"I choose a man, first for his ability, second for his loyalty—and I count heavily on the loyalty. Get loyal men of ability and you've gone a long way toward solving your problems in any organization."

That sounded pretty good to me, but what about the present situation where, after all, there is always a Congress on Capitol Hill, a Congress with constituents who have votes and some of whom want jobs. I asked the General, what about politics? He didn't seem worried. He said that he hadn't had any trouble.

"I'm not a politician," he said. "I never intend to run for office. That was all he would say, but here is a story I picked up later at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue."

A certain Congressman got a hot letter from a constituent who had been fired from the Veterans' Administration. No doubt with due cause. He hot-footed it up to the General and spoke, as legislators often do to officials, with considerable vigor.

"I want the man re-hired at once," the Congressman demanded. The General was polite but sorry.

BARBS... by Baukhage

Mahomet went to the mountains. The Mikado went to MacArthur. This, it seems only fair to say, merely demonstrates the excellent judgment of all parties concerned.

As I look back over a few decades I have enjoyed in this strange sphere the only things I regret seem to be the things I missed.

He stood by his decision.

"If you don't, I'll attack you on the floor."

"Go ahead," said Bradley, faintly recalling, I imagine, some of the attacks in Normandy.

"I'll block your bills," said the irate Congressman.

That was a horse of a different color.

"You will?" said the General.

"All right, and if you do that, I'll go to the President with my resignation. He'll get that or find a means to stop you." (Period.)

We all know about the General's war record—in Tunisia, on the Normandy beachhead, among the hedgerows, where he smashed a gateway at St. Lo which made Patton's lightning drive for the Rhine possible. Most of us didn't know he was from Missouri and later some of us might have suspected that that was the reason why he was picked, although the President said it was because he wanted a World War II soldier to take care of the wants of World War II veterans. Now we have some other reason for believing that the choice was predicated on wise advice and is going to prove itself a fortunate one.

On the horse-sense side, it is because Bradley has established a record as an administrator. He proved that in the army and had the acumen to see the chief fault in the veterans' organization and has set out to remedy it.

On the emotional side—well, Ernie Pyle was right.

The trouble with the Veterans' Administration was that it grew so rapidly that it didn't have time to delegate authority. And there was another reason for this. It was built on what seemed a very sound theory. Let's take its services to the veterans. For instance, small hospitals were scattered all over the country, many in little communities where the veterans could get work out. It was hard to get expert medical men, good service and the latest equipment in the smaller communities and because the regional organization was spread so thin, it was necessary to have a strong hand in Washington. The result was that the grip of that hand was so tight that the whole system was cramped.

Bradley put his finger on the situation (with the help of well-chosen counsel) and reversed the former policy. Now he's "bringing the veterans to the hospital." Bring them by rail or plane in an emergency, but bring him to a well-manned, well-equipped center where size and importance will attract the best there is in medical skill, when he needs specialized care.

Hand in hand with this regional centralization of the medical facilities, the new organization has decentralized the authority. As soon as Bradley looked over the set-up he said:

"This is like having a 150 regimental under one man. In the army that would be unthinkable. We'd break it down into corps and divisions at least."

And so that is what was done.

But first he made a sharp cleavage between the medical organization and the rest of the activities. He created a new office, "Acting Surgeon General of the Veterans' Administration." And he appointed the best man he knew, Major General Paul Ramsey Hawley, who had been chief surgeon for the European theater and did an outstanding job.

And here I wonder if there wasn't one of those important unconscious childhood impressions which helped. Bradley's middle name, Nelson, is for a well-loved family physician. And Bradley's fatherhood is attested to in his interest in the physical welfare of his men. Again and again war correspondents mentioned the fact that he planned engagements so that his troops would suffer the fewest casualties possible. He has an instinctive understanding of the afflicted.

Production of rubber heels is still behind demand. But there are still more of the other kind of heels than we need.

Two-Headed Stream

The Rhine river rises as a two-headed stream in southern Switzerland, enters the Boden Sea (Lake Constance), and emerges to continue its winding 60-mile course to its multi-mouthed outlet in the North sea. In its oceanward journey it picks up several important tributaries, such as the Lake, the Neckar, the Main, and the Ruhr from the east, and the Rhodan from the west. In some stretches the river is an international boundary. It is a frontier between Switzerland and the Liechtenstein, between Switzerland and the old Austria, between Switzerland and Germany, and between France and Germany. Through Germany the river flows in a general northwesterly direction, turning sharply west at the Netherlands line to enter the North sea.

Freshen Grass With Fertilizer in Fall

Late August or September is the best season to give lawn grass a "lift." After the hard summer season, some refreshment in the way of fertilizer, and possibly lime, is called for. This stands of grass are particularly in need of help. If your lawn has not been limed in the last few years, it is suggested that you apply 50 to 75 pounds of ground limestone per 1,000 square feet. This will sweeten the soil and make it possible for the grasses to respond better to fertilizer treatment.

The addition of 10 to 20 pounds of fertilizer per 1,000 square feet of lawn will do wonders. Fertilizers such as 5-10-5, 4-12-8 or those of similar ratios are well adapted for thickening lawn grasses. Uniform distribution can be obtained by spreading the material in two directions. Measure out half of the fertilizer needed for the lawn and spread it in a north-south direction. Then spread the other half in an east-west direction, and there should be little difficulty in getting even coverage.

Lawns given a tonic in the manner described soon will assume a good healthy color and develop a dense stand of grass. Lawns composed of dense turf will retain invigour by undesirable weeds such as crabgrass, barnyard and dandelion.

Woman's Club

Woman's club in Sebring was elected secretary. Mrs. J. W. Shirley of Lake Wales, chairman of the nominating committee presented the names of Mrs. Shirley, Mrs. W. M. Hendrickson of Sebring and Mrs. Kuntze, Avon Park.

State President Spinks Mrs. Gray stressed the newest program of the General Federation, which is Youth Conservation, in her address. Governor and Mrs. Millard Caldwell head the sponsoring committee, she said. She urged each community to select a sponsoring committee to contact all groups and churches to ascertain what is being done for the youth of the community. Every department dovetails into youth conservation and the program for the American home, she stressed.

She emphasized the necessity for making club meetings more interesting, so that the membership may be increased and far-reaching. She included a plea for clubs to send holiday gifts and gifts suitable for bingo prizes to the Veterans hospitals at St. Petersburg and Lake City, urging that the boxes be sent through the proper channels so they might gain recognition for their source.

Cleanings from the state board meeting stressed youth conservation, she said, and it pertained to the many activities of the clubs throughout the state during the recent autumn period of work. International relations; post-war planning when one must be alert to all opportunities and American Citizenship. In connection with the latter project, Mrs. Gray said that the home was the theme of the General Federation for the past three years. She urged the need of a family altar in every home, and the additional need of decent housing for every American family. She said "We must have permanent peace or have permanent war. We must have permanent peace in the world. Individual responsibility and alertness are both necessary."

She urged more study groups in each community, and suggested that retired college professors and other prominent citizens in the various club towns, be called upon to address the groups throughout the year.

In closing her most interesting address, Mrs. Gray said "Let us remember the motto of this club administration, which is applicable to all departments and divisions of work, all programs and plans. 'We must take care for the time to come, that our kingdom may be at peace and peaceful for all men.'"

In the Round Table of Presidents, conducted by Mrs. Stetzer, representatives of clubs in the district were introduced: Mrs. Payne Sebring, representing the Sebring club; Mrs. E. J. Wenner, Lake Wales; Mrs. C. F. Kenney, Avon Park; Mrs. P. J. Langford, Frostproof; Mrs. Frank Wood, Belle Glade; Mrs. Audie Rice, Winter Haven; Mrs. Ludd M. Spivey, Lakeland and Mrs. F. M. Shumaker, representing Junior Woman's Club of Sebring.

These club representatives each enumerated activities of her club in the way of adding funds to the club treasury, by holding, Halloween carnivals, etc. and the active part the club in community civic affairs. Mrs. Stetzer expressed her appreciation for the cooperation of the clubs throughout the district in extending to her, during her tenure of office, which will extend until the spring.

Appreciation was shown to the next district meeting, which will be held following the board meeting of the state federation next year.

Mrs. Payne Sebring delighted the guests with two vocal selections, "A Bowl of Roses" (Clarke) and "Travis" (Joyce Kilmer). Mrs. Ralph Eymann was her accompanist.

J. C. Rogers, chairman of the resolutions committee presented the resolutions, which included appreciation to the hostess, club for the gracious hospitality.

The registrar announced that four state officers, three state chairmen, 25 delegates and 40 visitors were in attendance.

The Golden Rain Tree

(By C. S. Donaldson)

One of the most beautiful blooming trees of the world is the Golden Rain Tree. Of the several I planted in the Mall the remaining one living is now in its full glory just opposite the Standard Oil station, west of the Seaboard railroad tracks. Its yellow bloom is dainty, while some earlier bloom has matured red seed pods that will turn golden and hang down, thus creating the impression of Golden Rain. Its botanical name is Koelreuteria formosana, the latter name indicating its origin in the island of Formosa which the Chinese are now taking back from Japan. Its genetic name was given in honor of Joseph Koelreuter, professor of natural history at Karlsruhe, Germany, over a hundred years ago.

The Golden Rain Tree is just about the most beautiful one in Washington, D. C. a group of them being in little Franklin Park north of Le. Fayette Park. There right now it can be seen these fifty feet high, fifty years old, means silvery because its foliage is bearing thousands of clusters of flowers identical with our little tree in the Mall. The botanist, however, call it the Koelreuteria formosana, giving its origin as Korea, Japan and Manchuria. From a study of its flower and seedpod I am satisfied that the two trees are one and the same variety, and that conditions through many centuries has created simply two types, one of which will grow only in the temperate North and the other in the semi-tropics as far as Taiwan. This is true of so many plants and trees. Fortunately for us in Florida the Golden Rain tree is beautiful all winter, while in Washington, the bloom, the Golden Rain and its foliage all quickly disappear with November frosts.

Singularly enough the Golden Rain Tree belongs to the Soapberry Family, which includes the wild Soapberry tree of our Florida hammocks, another similar Japanese tree that grows in the yard of the late Mayor King, the yellow seedpods of which they are used for washing purposes. Another unique tree the Akoe (Bignonia Sapida) which I found on the old Spanish place east of town and of which I have grown a fine specimen in my yard. It is now with rich red pendulous pods two inches long. The next-door neighbor families I found on the old Spanish place east of town and of which I have grown a fine specimen in my yard. It is now with rich red pendulous pods two inches long. The next-door neighbor families I found on the old Spanish place east of town and of which I have grown a fine specimen in my yard. So many persons have asked me about the term flowers as applied to other tree flowers that this seems a good opportunity to do.

USO Volunteers Entertained at Luncheon Tuesday

W. L. Schmidt, director of the USO in Avon Park since August 1944, and Mrs. Schmidt, were hosts to volunteers of the club at a luncheon at the Jetantra, at 12:30 on Tuesday. The U shaped table was attractively appointed with arrangements of coral vine and a trophy of ferns.

Following the luncheon, Mr. Schmidt spoke, paying tribute to the volunteers, who have assisted at the club since its activation. He also included those women who have given their services by taking in and cookies and sending them to the club each week, and the dance hostesses from nearby towns. He estimated conservatively that, since the club opened, the number of hours put in by volunteers was 92,000. He estimated the number of cakes donated was 350, and the number of hamburgers made by Mrs. S. C. Padden, every Tuesday night and almost every Sunday night, was 1,000.

His estimate of service men, their wives, and young ladies coming into the building since its opening was about 600,000. It is hard to realize, he said, that six months ago there was a monthly attendance of 25,000 and during the whole of October only about 250 entered the building. In closing, Mr. Schmidt again expressed his appreciation for the splendid cooperation and admirable spirit shown by the people of the community in connection with the USO and its activities.

Rev. Father Harry F. Furnier, Rev. E. S. Hedgeble and R. Brown each spoke briefly, their remarks also expressing appreciation for the good work of the USO and the cooperation in making it a "Home away from Home" for the service men who have been stationed in the community. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt were hosts commended for their interest and untiring efforts at the club.

Those attending this lovely affair were Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt, Rev. Father Harry F. Furnier, Rev. E. S. Hedgeble, R. E. Brown, Mrs. Mary Holcomb, Mrs. Jack Head, Mrs. S. C. Padden, Mrs. Margery Church, Mrs. C. Parke Anderson, Mrs. C. F. Kennedy, Mrs. Betty Quinn, Mrs. G. S. McKnight, Mrs. George Voorhees, Mrs. Earl H. Ware, Mrs. Ruby Bass, Mrs. L. L. Lettison, Mrs. H.
